Are you in the know?

What about a gift for your weekend hostess?

☐ Bring it with you ☐ Send it later ☐ Either is correct

When guesting, remember your friend's mother with some wee giftie. You can bring it, or send it later. Either's correct. But you needn't flourish the present the moment your foot is in the hall! What's more, you needn't postpone your visit—just because "that" day is nigh. For the new Kotex keeps you comfortable. Gives you softness that holds its shape . . . (this napkin's made to stay soft while you wear it.) And your new all-elastic Kotex Sanitary Belt is adjustable; doesn't bind!

How to choose the right perfume?

☐ By trial and error
☐ By its glamorous name
☐ Buy Mam's brand

Keep cool and sweet with a delicate cologne; or some light-hearted perfume suited to you. How to tell? By trial and error. Try a few different fragrances in small sizes, to find your kind. You know, when smart gals choose sanitary protection, they try the 3 absorbencies of Kotex—Regular, Junior, Super. Do likewise! Discover which one's right for your needs. Each absorbency has a special safety center that gives you extra protection.

To style-wise gals, does "Empire" suggest—

☐ World's tallest building
☐ Great Britain
☐ Good Camouflage

Plan to go places? Or a stay-at-home vacation? Either way, you can find new glamour—by giving careful thought to your wardrobe. If you've figure faults, select styles that conceal them. For instance—the high-waisted "Empire" line does wonders for a flat-chested femme. And don't forget, on certain days, there's no telltale line with Kotex. For that, thank the flat pressed ends of Kotex. They prevent revealing outlines . . . do wonders for your confidence!

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

"I dress for a dinner dance... at 8 o'clock in the morning!"

1. "For a busy day, I love my chic ensemble in contrasting woolens with its matching bonnet. And, of course, I rely on gentler, even more effective Odorono Cream . . . because I know it protects me from perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!"

New Odorono Cream brings you an improved new formula in a bright new package. Stays creamy smooth too . . . even if you leave the cap off for weeks!

2. "For a brilliant evening, I remove the jacket and hat, and presto! My dress turns into a new off-the-shoulder formal! I'm confident of my charm all evening, too, thanks to new Odorono Cream . . . because I find it gives me the most effective protection I've ever known!"

It never harms fine fabrics, and is so gentle you can use it right after shaving! You'll find it the perfect deodorant.

New Odorono Cream safely stops perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!

The Bribe: Federal Agent Robert Taylor succeeds in capturing a gang of smugglers. Ava Gardner, for her part, succeeds in winning Bob.

bum, and they let it go at that. Robert still isn't sure she doesn't know Hodiak's a crook. Anyhow, she positively doesn't know Robert's a Fed (that's the casual way to refer to 'em). Vincent Price, who suspects Robert's a Fed, offers him a bribe (through Laughton) and when he won't bite, attempts to drown him. Unfortunately, Taylor's native guide gets drowned instead. After this, the heat's really on. Price turns meaner still, and murders his aide, Hodiak. Ava, who finds out the truth about Robert and her husband simultaneously, drugs Robert so he won't be able to make a raid and send her husband to jail. She doesn't think jail's good for people with heart trouble, and she doesn't know her husband's already dead. Now—is Bob going to wake up in time to make the raid? Or will Vincent escape? Or will Ava kill herself because of the mess she's made of things? There's a really spectacular finish to this picture—a chase through streets which are a blaze of fireworks—and the acting's very nice. Lots of excitement, too.

MY DREAM IS YOURS

Cast: Jack Carson, Doris Day, Lee Bowman, Adolphe Menjou, Eve Arden.
Warners

Lee Bowman is a rat. Take my word for it. Jack Carson discovered him when he was nobody, and made him into a world-famous crooner, star of the Hour of Enchantment. Now Lee Bowman's walking out on Jack. Which means Jack's boss, Adolphe Menjou, who owns an advertising agency, may lose his biggest account—the afore-mentioned Hour of Enchantment. Because the Hour's sponsor, S. Z. Sakall, is a funny little man who likes Lee Bowman better than anything. Well, Jack borrows money from Eve Arden (Menjou's secretary) and goes to New York to get a different singer for Sakall to love, so Menjou won't lose Sakall. In New York, he finds a singer (Doris Day) who's also a war widow with a four-year-old child (Duncan Richardson). He totes Doris back to Hollywood, where she auditions for Sakall, who wants schmaltz. Doris is too jazzy to suit him. Now what? Doris auditions everywhere. No job. Jack feels responsible. He moves Doris and her kid into Eve's apartment. Eve feels terrible. Lee Bowman (the rat, remember?)

My Dream Is Yours: Jack Carsan goes ta greot and laughoble lengths ta see that prategée Doris Day finally gets her big break in radia.

falls in love with Doris. So does Jack. Doris falls in love with Lee Bowman. Unfortunately, she gets her big chance one night when Bowman's so drunk he can't do his show, and she goes on. Bowman leaves town in a huff, Doris becomes a big star, etc. She's carrying a torch. Bowman comes back to town. He's still the same conceited jerk he used to be. On the skids, but doesn't know it. Doris tries to help him. No soap. So Jack gets the girl. It happens to him every 30 or 40 pictures. This one's fun. It's like the old Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler-Joan Blondell musicals. Fairy-tale plot, happy ending, pretty music, very enjoyable.

EL PASO

Cast: John Payne, Gail Russell, Sterling Hayden, George "Gabby" Hayes, Dick Foran, Henry Hull, Mary Beth Hughes.
Paramount

Lawyer John Payne, fresh from the Civil War, gets sent by his old grand-daddy, Judge Fletcher (H. B. Warner) to investigate the whereabouts of a certain Judge Jeffers (Henry Hull) and his daughter Susan (Gail Russell). Rumor has it the Jeffers are out West in some new development called El Paso. John's

(Continued on page 108)

PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6 T., Schuyler Crail, Bot., Bert Parry—7 T., Bert Parry, Bot., Schuyler Crail—8 Wide World—11 Bert Parry—12 International News Photo—15 Wide World—22 T., M. S. staff, Bot., Wide World—24 Paramount—29 Acme Photo—30, 31 Bob Beerman—32 Bob Beerman—33 Paramount Exc. Rt., National Broadcasting Studios—34, 35 Bob Beerman—36, 37 Bob Beerman—38 Jean Howard—39 T., Jean Howard Exc. Lt., 20th Century-Fox—40, 41, 42 Bob Beerman—43 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—44 Bert Parry Exc. Bot Lt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—45 T., Bert Parry, Bot., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—46 Nelson Morris—47 Bob Beerman—48 T., Gus Gale, Bot., Bert Parry—49 Bert Parry—50, 51 Bob Beerman—52, Bert Parry Exc. Cen., Chic Farmer—53 T., News Service, Bot., Wide World—54 Bert Parry Exc. Cen., Gus Gale—55 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—56 T., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Bot. Lt., Julius Buck, Bot. Cen., Rt., Modern Screen staff—57 Press Association—62 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—63 T., Eddie Hubbell of MGM, Bot. Lt., M. S. staff, Bot. Rt., Julius Buck—73 Virgil Apger—74, 75, 78, 79, 80 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top

New Improved Pepsodent Removes FILM Amazingly!

In just 7 days—you'll have brighter teeth and fresher breath—or

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Why FILM must be removed

1. FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull
2. FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath
3. FILM glues acid to your teeth
4. FILM never lets up—it forms continually on everyone's teeth

Now Faster Foaming! New Pepsodent Sweeps FILM Away!

New improved Pepsodent will bring a thrilling brightness to your teeth, a new freshness to your breath—or we'll return twice what you paid!

No other tooth paste can duplicate new Pepsodent's film-removing formula! It foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film: (1) Pepsodent routs discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It checks film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent helps protect you from acid produced by germs in film. This acid, many dentists agree, is the cause of tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly and quickly with Pepsodent. No other tooth paste contains Irium—or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent!

Try new fast-foaming Pepsodent with Irium for 7 days. If you're not convinced it gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth—mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent, Division Lever Brothers Company, Dept. G, Chicago, Ill.—and you'll receive double your money back, plus postage! Offer expires August 31, 1949. Remember, for the safety of your smile, use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year!

Another fine product of Lever Brothers Company

Just one of those things

How can Kirk Douglas explain one of those inexplainable things? It happened to him and Diana—they were so much in love and now are only strangers again.

BY FRED MORGAN

Break-up of Diono ond Kirk Douglas shocked friends.

Mike, four, hos Pop play records before bedtime. Another son, Joel, is two.

■"A year ago I'd have punched anyone on the nose who dared to suggest that my wife and I were splitting up," Kirk Douglas said, the line of his jaw tightening grimly. "But—here we are."

There indeed he was, all six feet and 180 solid pounds of troubled actor, moved out of his neat Swiss Chalet home in Laurel Canyon and moved into the Hollywood Athletic Club.

"You may as well say it: There goes another Hollywood marriage. But when you rack this up as just another domestic failure, the verdict is wrong. . . . Yeah, I know what you're thinking. Why can't Diana and I get back together again? Friends have said to me. 'Kirk—swallow your pride, go back. This will smooth itself out, somehow.' I wish it were as easy as that.

"Of course people are giving the usual pat explanation that two careers in the family just won't work. That we had to call it quits because the girl I married, who gave up her career and brought me two wonderful sons, was now making life intolerable by going back into pictures. This explanation simply isn't true. That's not the root of the trouble. I just don't have any excuse that makes sense when you put it in print, any more than do (Continued on page 84)

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

EASTER PARADE—album featuring Judy Garland, Fred Astaire, Ann Miller, Peter Lawford (MGM).
Here's an album that couldn't be released during the recording ban but has since been sliced from the sound track of the picture. Eight Irving Berlin hits, the best of which is still the title song. (You'll miss the visual touches in "A Fella with an Umbrella" and "A Couple of Swells".) Album makes a nice Easter gift, even if it's from you to yourself.

MY DREAM IS YOURS—title song by Patti Poge* (Mercury). "Someone Like You" by Ella Fitzgerald* (Decca), Eddy Howard (Mercury). "I'll String Along With You" by Doris Day & Buddy Clark* (Columbia). This is the picture listed last month as "Forever ond Always." The "String" song is a revival of a 1934 hit.

PORTRAIT OF JENNIE—title song by King Cole* (Capitol)
Actually you can no more hear this in the picture than you heard "Gone With the Wind" in that film. "Inspired by the David O. Selznick Production," says the label on this King Cole release, and a pretty inspiration it was. String orchestra joins the trio to set a mood similar to Nat's "Lost April."

STREETS OF LAREDO—title song by Ray Noble* (Columbia), Patti Page (Mercury).
A little off the beaten Noble path, but Ken Carson sings the vocal, as he does in the picture, and Robert Maxwell supplies some interesting harp work.

ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON—"Girls Were Made to Take Care of Boys" by Rose Murphy (Victor), Herbie Jeffries (Columbia).

WORDS AND MUSIC—"Blue Room" by Perry Como* (Victor).

POPULAR

SAMMY DAVIS, JR.—"The Way You Look Tonight" (Capitol).
Billed as the "man of many voices," this new star gives impressions of the voices of Billy Eckstine, Al Jolson, Nat Cole, Frankie Laine and others in o manner thot would fool the imitatees! Unique.

BETTY GARRETT—"Humphrey Bogart Rhumba"* (MGM).
They say Bogie hung around the recording studio all day so he could throw in five words at the end of this amusing satirical lyric. Cute.

JANE HARVEY—"Always True to You In My Fashion"* (MGM).
The former Benny Goodman chanteuse does the neatest job of all the records on this song and the companion ballad "So In Love," both from Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate" score.

PEGGY LEE—"If You Could See Me Now"* (Capitol).
Peggy's prettiest record in a year is this lovely Todd Dameron tune.

For lips men love —and love to kiss— Tangee

"KISS ME" as interpreted by
MEG RANDALL
AND RICHARD LONG in a scene from
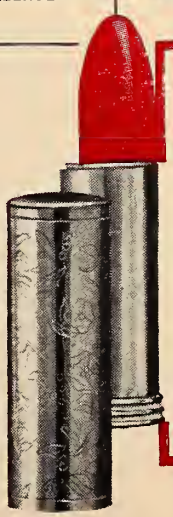
THE LIFE OF RILEY
A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL RELEASE



Tangee
KISS COLORS

TANGEE PINK QUEEN—A new pink... to give extra "kiss appeal" to your lips.

TANGEE RED-RED—Best bet for brunettes. This rich, intriguing red is a sure magnet for kisses.

TANGEE THEATRICAL RED—This dramatic color makes red-heads look doubly warm and tempting.

TANGEE GAY-RED—Terrific for blondes...gives lips that gay, reckless, "I-dare-you" look.

Tangee
KISSABLE TEXTURE

1. Keeps lips soft...invitingly moist.
2. Feels just right...gives you confidence.
3. Does not smear or run at the edges.
4. Goes on so easily...so smoothly...so quickly.
5. And it lasts—and LASTS—and L-A-S-T-S!

traveling man

by k. roby eunson

Montgomery Clift, individualist.

The sensational Mr. Clift won't be tied down. The wide world is bigger than Hollywood, and Monty's going places by his own route and speed.

■ When Montgomery Clift landed in London last November, nobody noticed. He found himself a modest hotel room and settled down to two or three days of intensive theater-going, sightseeing and visiting picturesque pubs with a couple of London pals.

This happy existence as an ordinary tourist was easy for Monty to achieve last November. Nobody in London knew who he was. The lady behind him in the theater queue was dreaming of the New Look dress that required so many coupons to buy, and the little man sitting next to him on the bus was thinking more about that one egg he was going to get for breakfast a week from next Tuesday. The business of living is still pretty grim in London. Consequently, it takes more than just an ordinary Hollywood "cinema actor" to cause the slightest stir. . . .

Then Monty departed for the places he'd gone abroad primarily to visit: Italy and Israel. There were great stirrings and ferment in both places.

"It's a fine feeling, being able to go wherever you like when you're not working," says Monty. "Hollywood's a very pleasant place to be—almost too pleasant—somehow it's very far removed from the rest of the world. I should think living there continuously would make it fairly difficult to keep a sense of perspective—it would be for me, anyway. So, I finish a picture and wham! I'm 6,000 miles away."

So to Rome and Tel Aviv he went, talking to people to whom he was just an ordinary, friendly guy, observing (Continued on page 83)

DIAMOND JEWELRY BY CARTIER

Heavenly new spring shade

"Star Bright" NAIL BRILLIANCE BY CUTEX only 25¢ *

Pink just blushing into flame . . . that's "Star Bright," dream-come-true color for nails and lips. Very right with the new fashion colors. Very exciting in the most flattering, best-behaved nail polish and lipstick you ever wore.

Nail Brilliance is more than a luxurious glamour polish. Fantastically long-wearing! So immaculately pure and harmless even women whose skins are allergic to other polishes tell us they can safely use it.

Cutex Lipstick is new make-up magic at its most alluring. Like clinging satin! Dare Cutex Lipstick today! In "Star Bright," and other shades to echo Nail Brilliance colors. Only 49¢.*

*PLUS TAX.

Beauty is my business—

SAYS JUNE THOMPSON
Adorable Cover Girl

and My Delicate Skin Looks Softer... Smoother... Younger Since I Changed to Gentle SWEETHEART Beauty Care

• "I never knew how fresh and clear my complexion could look when I was coasting along on casual skin care. Then I started to use only SweetHeart Soap Beauty Care. The difference it made was wonderful to see. For in just one week my skin felt silken-soft. It looked rose-petal fresh and young!"

Like June, change to SweetHeart Care. Massage your face, each night and morning, with gentle SweetHeart's rich lather. Rinse with warm—then cold water. In one week see the difference!

For SweetHeart's creamy lather has an amazing beauty action. Countless bubbles bathe the outer pore openings. Lift off—float away—dirt and rough skin flakes. In seven short days your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . younger!

Beauty is our business, too!

• Kathleen and Maureen McGurk, 10 months old, are pretty twin models who enjoy their SweetHeart baths!

For baby's bath—for your family's tubs and showers—you can now also get pure, mild SweetHeart Soap in the new, large bath size.

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

Your letters...

DISGUSTED READER

Dear Editor: I just finished reading "The Strange Loves of Hedy Lamarr" in your March issue.

If you ask me, Miss Lamarr is just plain spoiled. As you say, she's "wealthy, famous, intelligent, and admired all over the world," if she still can't find someone to make her happy—I don't think she deserves to be.

MARY SIBLEY, PORT HENRY, N. Y.

MIND OVER MARRIAGE

Dear Editor: Why can't these Hollywood couples make up their minds?

I was happy to hear that Glo De Haven and John Payne have reconciled, but I wonder how long this "State of the Reunion" will last.

J. D. GLUECK, MANHATTAN, N. Y.

SOLID CITIZENS

Dear Editor: Just a line to tell you how much I enjoyed your editorial, "The Hard Way," which appeared in the March issue.

It's about time we heard more about the people who live sanely and happily in Hollywood.

Glenn Ford and Dorothy Lamour, the two you mentioned, can certainly set an example for the youth of America to follow.

DOROTHY EVANS, EVANSTON, ILL.

GOOD SKATES

Dear Editor: I wonder if you know how helpful to parents are articles like "Good Skates" by Viola Moore.

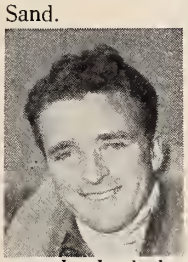
I'm the mother of two daughters and have been active in Girl Scout work and in Parent-Teacher Associations for many years. Recently, the latter group helped launch a campaign against poor juvenile literature.

Not only is "Good Skates" entertaining and wholesome, but it helps us in our fight against unfit reading material.

MRS. S. D. DALE, SANTA ANITA, CALIF.

UNFAIR TO TOM

Dear Editor: I don't think Hollywood is treating Tom Drake fairly. He's not as flashy as some, but he's a fine actor. After the impression of his excellent performance in The Green Years faded, everyone just started forgetting about him. Hollywood ought to wake up and give some attention to one of its most attractive and good actors.



BILLIE O'NEILL, MEXICO, D. F.

(Have you seen Words and Music, Billie? You couldn't have missed Tom Drake.—Ed.)

new faces

CORINNE CALVET gave up a brilliant career as a sculptress to become an actress. Against her parents' wishes she enrolled in the French Government School of the Cinema. She did quite a few ingenue roles in French movies before coming to this country. Corinne was born in Paris 20 years ago, is 5′ 5″ tall and weighs 110 pounds, and recently married John Bromfield, another rising young star. She makes her debut in Hal Wallis' Rope of Sand.

JOHN RODNEY was born in Brooklyn, March 7, 1916, and at the age of 14 enlisted in the Canadian Army. They found out about it, however, and shipped him back to Brooklyn. After a short career as a bank clerk, he joined Michael Chekhov's theater group and he appeared in several Broadway productions. John served in the Navy for four years and there met John Ford. Back in the United States, John was tested for and received the role of Adam in Pursued. He's 6′ 2″ tall and has brown hair and blue eyes and is married. His latest movie is Fighter Squadron.

VALENTINA CORTESA may be a new face to Hollywood, but she's already an outstanding actress in Italy. She was born in Milan, Italy, January 1, 1925, and spent most of her childhood in a small fishing village on Lake Maggiore. During a village feast, she took part in the dramatic offering and was promptly discovered by two critics. She was advised to go to the Academy in Rome, but on arriving there was immediately snapped up by the movies. Valentina became the toast of Italy and was re-discovered by Zanuck. She's made Cagliostro in Rome with Orson Welles and you will see her soon in Hard Bargain with Dick Conte.

JIM BROWN, or "Lefty" as he is known to his friends, was vocalist with Garwood Van's Orchestra prior to his entry into filmland. Henry Willson spied him and signed his name to a long term contract. Jim was born in Desdemona, Texas on March 22, 1920. He attended Schreiner Institute, military school in Kerrville, Texas, and later entered Baylor University where he majored in journalism. He will soon be seen in the Universal-Int. production of Baby Makes Three with Donald O'Connor and Gloria DeHaven.

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

So effective . . . Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle . . . Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

Now! There's Something Thrillingly NEW in Palmolive's Famous "Beauty Lather"!

New Fragrance!

New Charm!

New Allure!

So Forget all other Beauty Care and use Palmolive Soap as Doctors advised for a Lovelier Complexion!

Get Bath Size Palmolive, too!

Use it in tub or shower. The alluring new fragrance of Palmolive's "Beauty Lather" leaves you even lovelier all over!

Millions of women will prefer this "Beauty Lather" Palmolive over all other leading toilet soaps . . . the minute they try it!

And small wonder! For Palmolive's famous "Beauty Lather" has a new, clean, flower-fresh fragrance for new allure, new charm.

And using Palmolive Soap, the way doctors advised, is so effective that all types of skin—young, older, oily—respond to it quickly. Dull, drab skin appears brighter, coarse-looking skin finer. Even tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads—disappear or improve remarkably.

So do as Doctors advised. Stop improper cleansing! Instead, wash your face with Palmolive Soap three times each day, massaging Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather" onto your skin, for sixty seconds each time, to get its full beautifying effect. Then rinse! That's all.

But 36 doctors—leading skin specialists—advised this way for 1285 women, and proved Palmolive can bring lovelier complexions to 2 out of 3 in just 14 days. Get Palmolive Soap and start today!

are parents human?

an open letter to margaret o'brien

Dear Margaret:

The papers have been full of accounts of your heartbreak over the marriage of your mother to orchestra-leader Don Sylvio. It's said you wept throughout the ceremony, refused to kiss your stepfather when it was over, and afterwards seemed sadly doubtful when you were assured that you would "grow to like him."

We realize what a tragic thing it must seem to you to have another person apparently come between you and your mother—a mother who, since your father died before your birth, has been the only parent you've ever known.

And yet, Margaret, we feel certain that her affection toward you will remain as strong and constant as ever. Her love for your stepfather is on another plane—and this new and different love, far from weakening that which she bears toward you, should strengthen and deepen it. This marriage means great happiness to her, and when a person is happy, all affections flow the more easily.

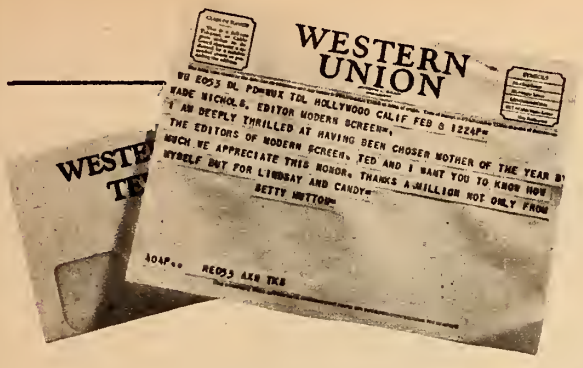
As a daughter who owes a great debt to her mother for a fine, devoted upbringing, you have a responsibility to her not to cast any shadow on that happiness by persisting in showing disapproval of her marriage.

In this you also have a broader responsibility, Margaret. Very young people always have a tendency to feel that their parents are such powerful and self-sufficient beings that they're above human emotions. It does seem that you're making this mistake about your mother. You've said that, for your sake, she should have waited for at least two years before marrying—as if she had no right to her own life. Such an attitude might well encourage misunderstandings in millions of families whose youngsters consider you a model and guide.

You're obviously an intelligent girl, Margaret. We're confident that your intelligence will soon assert itself—and that you'll then behave as if you realized that after all, parents, too, are human.

Quentin Reynolds

EDITOR



Margaret flicks back a tear as she pases after the wedding ceremony with her mather, bridegroam Dan Sylvio and Judge Robbins.

After work (Betty's in Red, Hot and Blue) the Briskins get right down to living—with Candy, one (on Pop's lap), and Lindsay, two.

they'll remember mama

by Ida Zeitlin

MODERN SCREEN SELECTS BETTY HUTTON AS MOTHER OF THE YEAR

Because she is raising her children with common sense, understanding, and a simplicity rare in Hollywood; because she has provided a sane, wholesome family atmosphere, unmarred by the intrusions of her busy career and made happy and secure by a whole-hearted observance of her marriage vows; because, beyond the devotion to her own, she shows a constant awareness of what the future should hold for children everywhere; because, in brief, she so well exemplifies the ideals of motherhood, MODERN SCREEN has chosen Betty Hutton as Hollywood Mother of the Year. We're sure that after you've read the following inspiring story you'll agree we couldn't have made a better choice.—THE EDITORS.

■ One is fair-haired and dainty, and looks at you with the eyes of a forest doe. She was two last November. The other's a character, all zip and bounce like her mother, busy every waking minute exploring the world. She'll be one in April. They're Lindsay and Candy, otherwise known as the Briskin treasures.

Betty wants still another treasure, but she's willing to wait. Two years of solid work first, to roll up a backlog of pictures. Then a baby . . .

"Maybe we'll even get around to two more," says Betty. "We really ought to have four. Most of the happy families are big ones. Besides, these two are so close in age, they'll have lots in common —but Number Three would stand a chance of feeling left out, which I couldn't bear. And of course if I don't have a boy, I'll die. That's the comedy angle. It used to be Ted who was crazy for a son. Now he doesn't give a hoot if we wind up with four dames. As we probably will!"

Meantime, they're hoping to build a new house, once the market settles. A house with an upstairs. This goes back to Detroit, and a kid who lived with her mother and sister in whatever ramshackle tenement they could afford. Other kids at school would sometimes invite her home, and soon a conviction settled in her childish bones: All the real families lived in two-story houses, with the bedrooms upstairs. Those were the (Continued on page 67)

Betty wants Candy (on the floor) and Lindsay to grow up with the feeling of security she herself locked as a child. The Briskins may have two more babies; they believe most happy families are large.

One of Betty's daily habits is going over menus with Kirchey, the children's beloved nurse. Here, Candy joins the session. Maybe she can't read—but she's obviously interested in what's cookin'.

LIES

THAT HURT ALAN LADD

When you're a Hollywood star, words can often harm you—even if they're all wrong. Now, a famous reporter separates the facts from the fiction about Alan Ladd.

secretive is what some have termed Ladd, referring to the lack of publicity about his kids. But Ladd has always spoken proudly and openly of them.

under sue's thumb is a phrase used by Alan's detractors. But Sue gave up being Alan's manager as soon as they married.

by erskine johnson

■ When a kid from Arkansas moves to Hollywood, goes to North Hollywood High School, then suddenly gets a break in motion pictures and becomes a star overnight as the screen's Number One tough guy, a lot of things are said about him. Rumors lambaste his reputation from all sides, legends spring up around him—in other words, people talk. Most of their talk is bunk—and debunking is my business. That's why I decided to dig into some of the myths that have accumulated about Alan Ladd. And from now on—take it from me—you can say "nonsense!" about a number of absurdly bum steers you continually get on the guy.

Take the impression that he's a tough guy off the screen as well as on: That just isn't so—for actually, Alan is a soft-spoken, mild-mannered man, likeable and pleasant at work, at home, and at play. He's almost too pleasant for his own good, and lets people impose on him and on his time far beyond what's reasonable.

As to his being soft-spoken, sitting only a few feet away from him in his Paramount dressing room I actually had difficulty in hearing what he had to say. There are those, of course, who point to his being a quiet type with whispered alarm: "Beware of the quiet guy. He's got a hot temper."

I mentioned that to Alan: "Just how hot is your temper?" I asked.

He thought it over. "No hotter than average," he said. He told me he could remember being hot-tempered as an athlete in North Hollywood High School, and getting into a number of fights—but almost all of those were in the heat of games. Any other fights he had were with a pal named Bob Nestell—they went through Grammar School and High School together and fought all the time and, it seems, took turns losing.

But I don't think you'll find anyone who really knows Alan Ladd today who'll say he's easily riled. That fiery stuff is for the screen—that's acting, and acting is his business. He learned to control his real-life temper long before he left high school. The nearest thing you can call temper in Alan today is his quiet habit of beating his fists on the side of any wall that's handy when something goes very wrong.

About the time Frank Sinatra was reaching his peak of popularity, Alan was just as sought-after by the autograph hunters. That's when a Paramount publicity writer released a story saying that when Alan parked his Buick station wagon (the first car he ever owned) anywhere in Hollywood, he'd remove the registration card so the kids wouldn't know it was his.

That story raised a welt on Alan's reputation. It rated an editorial in a Hollywood trade paper which said that Alan was double-crossing the kids who made him a star.

Well, that was preposterous. (Continued on page 93)

just lucky, mony called him when Lodd reached fome "overnight" in This Gun For Hire. But yeors of hard work got him there.

no athlete, his he-man feats ore just publicity, "insiders" soy. Actuolly, Ladd's o brilliont swimmer, ond once won the West Coost Diving Championship.

hates fans, they even say of him—but Ladd goes out of the woy to pleose fons, admits it's they who poy his salory.

IS SEX NECESSARY?

Jane Russell's still a pin-up girl, as anyone can see. But she's much more besides—this girl of great spirit and amazing contrasts.

BY JOHN REYNOLDS

■ Everybody is more or less a split personality, with contrasting characteristics. Human beings wouldn't be human if they weren't made that way. But it's difficult to name a person as contradictory as Jane Russell.

Most people still think of her as the girl whose slumberously inviting face and spectacular figure became known to millions through the enormous advance publicity given The Outlaw a few years back. Because of The Outlaw, Jane Russell became synonymous with female lure on its most seductive level. Many impressionable citizens leapt to the titillating conclusion that here was a gal slated to stir up all kinds of gaudy doings as a riotous femme fatale in her private life.

Yet Jane Russell has conclusively proved herself to be one of the quietest, most wholesome, most happily domestic girls in all moviedom. And she's clearly demonstrated she's going to remain celebrated without it being necessary for press agents to stress her sex appeal. She has qualities that could keep her on top if she had no more than average physical allure—spiritual qualities that constantly surprise those who expect to find her nothing but an animated pin-up.

This notable contrast between what she actually is and the heated expectations of the public is but one of the many contradictions you'll find concerning Jane Russell. Such as:

She's fundamentally very earnest indeed in her outlook on life—yet she easily holds her own in any company of wisecrackers. She's married to a professional football player whose interests are so divergent from hers that few gave (Continued on page 87)

Jane Russell and her football star husband Bab Waterfield. Cynics said the marriage couldn't last. It's going into its eighth year.

Jane has taken up painting—and unlike most Hallywaad amateurs, she's said ta be really goad! Here she works on a friend's partrait.

While wife Eleanor Powell was away an o 14-week dancing tour, Glenn Ford taak care af san Peter. Here they tockle a shae-lace problem.

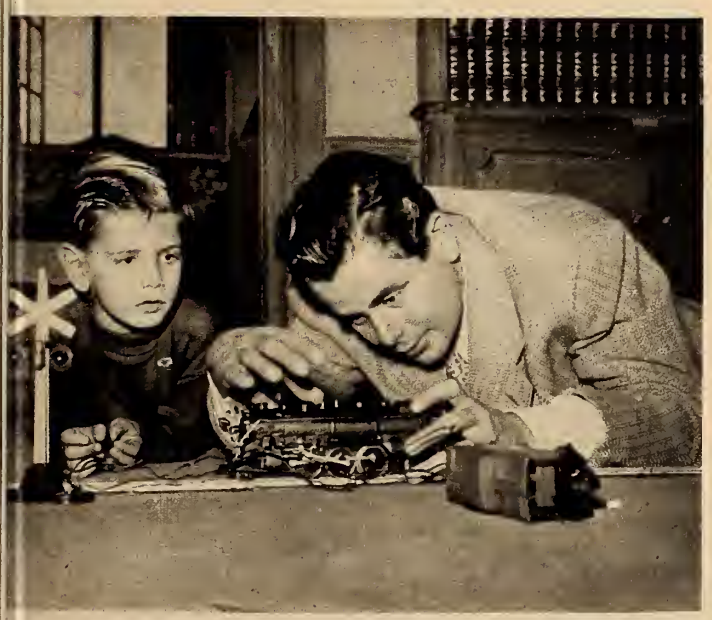
Glenn and Pete usually dined in the den odjoining the kitchen—but Glenn, wha likes his faad hat and spicy, sametimes taak Pete alang ta an exatic restourant. (Eleanor wauldn't have approved!)

The men did their necessary marketing on Saturdoy marnings, although Glenn let Pete believe he hunted for all their meat. Sundoys they devated ta such masculine interests as good fast gomes af cotch.

Glenn Ford knew exactly how to handle Peter. All you needed was a firm hand. But Pete didn't follow the rule book . . .

by BEN MADDOX

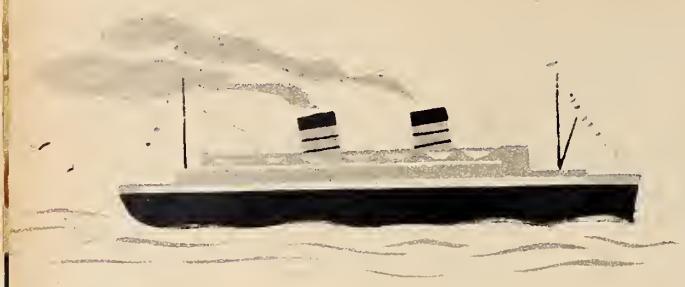
CONFESSIONS OF A BACHELOR FATHER



■ One day not long ago, Eleanor Powell packed her dancing shoes and dropped her share of the parental load into Glenn Ford's confident arms.

"Now, are you sure you'll be able to manage?" she said for the umteenth time. "Remember—Peter needs a firm hand."

"Don't worry!" said Glenn. "Firm, yet kindly discipline—that's what Peter'll get from me. When you get back, you'll find him a regular little man."



So she slipped her arm in Glenn's and they went down the driveway to the family Cadillac. Three-and-a-half-year-old Peter Newton Ford skimmed past them to open the door himself. His parents followed him into the car and settled themselves amid the luggage.

Glenn cleared his throat. The (Continued on page 90)

Peter's very good about sharing his toys with other children—and with Daddy, who always fixes what he breaks. Right: The little man, following a busy day and a bed-time story, delivers a good-night kiss.

In their dreams,
this trip had started 11 years ago — but now it was real for the Cornel Wildes, and Italy was beautiful . . .

By JACK WADE

SLOW BOAT TO ROMANCE

■ The way the scene turned out was just a pain in the neck to Richard Widmark—but it sent Cornel and Pat Wilde on the heavenly honeymoon tour they'd been dreaming about for not quite 11 years. Which only shows what beautifully screwy things can happen sometimes in Hollywood.

Dick was trying to murder Cornel in a roughhouse brawl, the very last scene in Road House, and the director said, "Now, boys, go to it as if you meant it." So Cornel grabbed Dick's neck and yanked it back just short of snapping his Adam's apple. That's when he felt his old bad back go "Crunch!"—the back that's been acting-up on and off ever since the time he went out for football at Columbia University and had his 142 pounds tied into a pretzel by the Varsity beef trust.

That night his doc said, "After Shockproof, no more pictures for a while, my lad. You've got an inflamed nerve, besides five or six wrenched vertebrae —and if you have half the sense I think you have, you'll just take it easy for three or four months."

"You mean I can't work for that long?" He got a gloomy headshake.

Cornel looked at Pat and Pat looked at him and they hugged and almost did a dance right there in the X-Ray room. "Time on our hands at last—call my boss, Darryl Zanuck," Cornel begged the physician, "and tell him it's doctor's orders—official! Pat, what are we waiting for?" And he kissed her, which for Cornel Wilde is very easy, and they hurried home to plan.

That's how Pat and Cornel Wilde's Dream Trip started . . . Or did it? No, (Continued on page 69)

A couple of tourists visit Siena, Italy. Cornel readies his camera as Pat gazes at an ancient cathedral tower. While there, the Wildes visited Tyrane Power, who was on location for Prince of Foxes.

Even in Italy, Cornel's face is fomiliar an magazine covers. Wherever the Wildes went they met Hollywood friends—and hundreds af fans.

En route ta Eurape, the Wildes dine with pianist Artur Rubenstein (left) ond Norma Shearer, obaord the Queen Elizabeth. Pat and Carnel went an their vocatian as a long-deloyed honeymoan.

Cornel's an omoteur phatagropher, but picture pastcards olways turn out better. Here, the Wildes select a few for remembronce. Doughter Wendy wos swamped with gifts on her porents' return.

HOLIDAY IN THE

Miniature boating is popular at the Shadow Mountain Club. Here, Rory and wife Lita prepare for a lazy cruise around Henderson Lake—which Once it was a desert full of cactus plants, but now it's a desert full of gaiety and striped umbrellas for vacationers like the Rory Calhouns.

■ "So this is Shangri-La," said Rory, as a bellhop parked the Calhouns' sporty convertible.

"No, darling," said Lita, "this is the Shadow Mountain Club, and I'm your wife. Remember?"

"Oh, I remember you," he said.

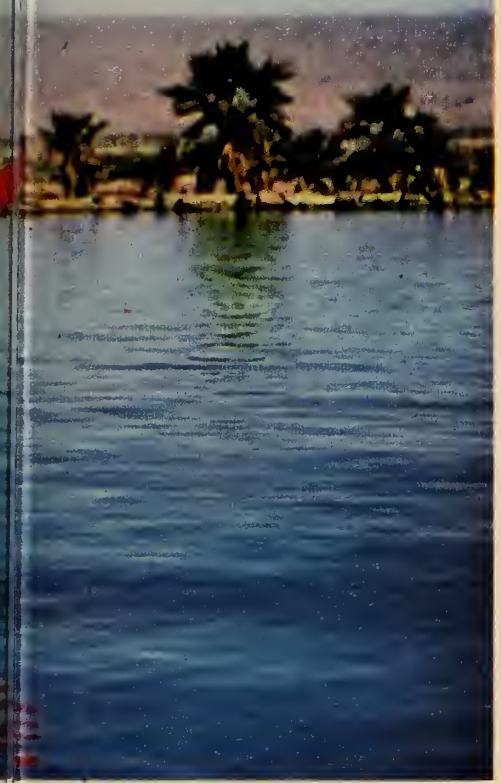
"That's nice," grinned Lita. "And in the promised 'blissful, sun-filled days' that follow, I trust you won't forget."



Thus began the Calhouns' second honeymoon beneath the pine-capped peaks of the Santa Rosa Mountains in Palm Desert.

Originally, Palm Desert had been just that—without the palms. The nearest people lived 12 miles away in Palm Springs and were too refined even to mention the place. Then a man named Cliff Henderson came back from the war with a big idea and two million dollars. He bought these 1,600 acres of sand lots overrun with cactus, and he and a few engineers sat on them for a while with only occasional twinges of doubt.

Before long, a well 612 feet deep was tapping water, and an architect was set to work drawing up plans for the Shadow Mountain Club—one of the swankiest, one of the most beautiful, one of the most luxurious resorts in California. (Complete with 800 transplanted, date-bearing palms.)

Rory and Lita had heard about the place —as who hadn't? Every night when he was ance a sandy area covered with sagebrush.

SUN

staggered home from Massacre River, his latest role and a really rugged one, Rory would dream about the things Shadow Mountain had to offer. Lita would help him.

"You know," Rory would sigh, "I hear they have a pool shaped like Jane Russell . . ."

"You know," Lita would sigh, "I hear they have a lifeguard shaped like Tarzan . . ."

Turned out Shadow Mountain had both.

It also has a huge, artificial lake where you can row your own boat; it has championship tennis courts, a playground with wading pool for children, a pony golf course for the adults and a magnificent view of the surrounding mountains.

It was the view that inspired Cliff Hen-

Lita and Rary muscle in an the children's playgraund ta try aut the see-saw.

In a 1907 model International autamobile, they taur the resart's 1,600 acres.

Rary (currently in Massacre River) and Lita relax an ane af the velvety lawns.

Rory and Lita an the potio with radia's famaus "Archie" Gordner.

Mrs. Vernon Peck, Jr., entertains Rory and Lita in the kitchen af her Palm Desert hame.

The Calhouns admire the Pecks' extensive callectian af firearms.

One of the staff at Fire Cliff Lodge chots with the Calhouns os they hove luncheon.

Rary and Lito weor formols to the grand apening af the Club.

Dancing in the dining roam concludes the apening-night festivities at Shadaw Mauntain.

HOLIDAY IN THE SUN

derson. In fact, the continuous shifting shadows cast by the sun on the mountains gave the place its name. In order not to obstruct the view, Henderson put up sheets of plate glass wherever there should have been an outside wall. And not a piece of drapery was hung.

Even the interior decorations were made to blend in with the colors of the mountains and the remodeled desert.

So it hadn't taken much persuading when Henderson decided to invite the Calhouns over for the official opening of the Shadow Mountain Club . . .

And this same afternoon they were being ushered into the Palm Desert Adobe, one of the prettiest of five sprawling bungalows that surround the modern-design clubhouse. Shortly thereafter they were sliding down a ramp into the figure-eight pool, having a snack on the terrace beside it, lolling on the incredibly green grass. Later, they ate the first dinner that was ever served in the Club, and danced to the strains of Todd's Rhythm Orchestra along with Dick Powell, June Allyson, the George Murphys and assorted athletic millionaires.

It was lovely, and even though the Calhouns have been married for more than half a year they felt like honeymooners . . .

All next day the sun was very warm and the sky was very blue. You could see snow on top of the San Gorgonio Mountains. If you wanted you could go skiing up there and then come down for a dip in the pool, but Rory and Lita didn't, though they thought about it for a while. What they needed was a quieter sport—like sitting. So they sat, and when that had exhausted them they decided to borrow a flashy 1907 vintage automobile with a fringe on top (the management keeps it around for the amusement of the guests), and all afternoon they clattered about, kicking up the dust 'neath Shadow Mountain . . .

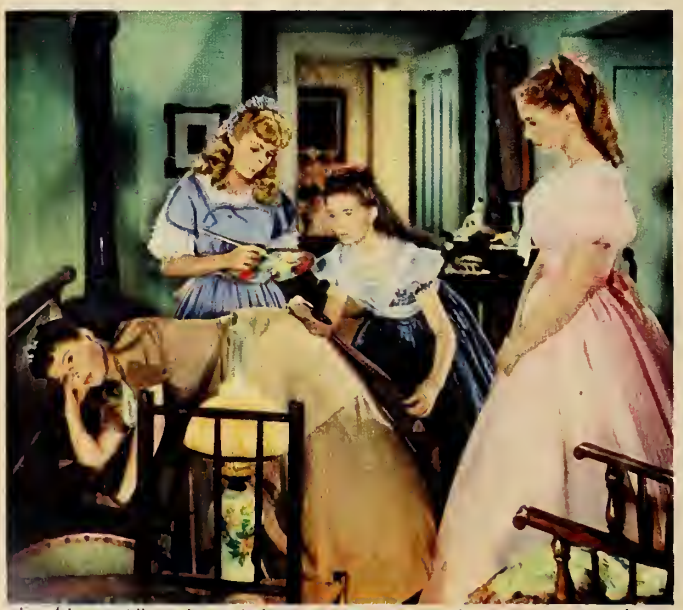
They visited the Vernon Pecks, friends of theirs who live in Palm Desert, and they talked about buying a house themselves, but it was mostly just pleasant talk, just passing the day. Then, at sunset, they watched the purple shadows fall while they ate their baked Alaskas.

And there really was nothing more they could have wanted—except perhaps a second helping, or a weekend ten days long . . .

LITTLE WOMEN

Liz Taylor, June Allyson, Morgoret O'Brien and Janet Leigh in MGM's superb Technicolor version of the old novel.

Picture of the Month



■ Since it was first published in 1869, countless millions of readers all over the world have found Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women" a beautiful, moving and delightful treasure. The years have added the charm of quaintness—yet today, unlike most popular classics of yesteryear, it seems by no means merely an endearing museum piece. For despite its unabashed sentimentality, it deals truthfully with warm human beings moved by emotions and situations universally shared in timeless human experience.

And this is true of the eminently satisfactory movie that Mervyn LeRoy has made of it for MGM. Sparked by June Allyson and Margaret O'Brien in performances that seem certain to win Academy Award nominations, and lovingly produced in the best Technicolor yet seen in an American film, it has caught the spirit and content of the book to a remarkable degree. Even the artificiality of some of the groupings and studio exteriors are perfectly in keeping: there's a constant effect of beautifully rendered illustrations.

The story of the four teen-age daughters of the March family of Concord, Massachusetts, in Civil War days is too familiar to recount in detail. The central character is Jo (June Allyson), a tomboy with literary ambitions who vows she'll never wed and who desperately wants nothing to change the happy family circle. Her sisters are Meg (Janet Leigh), Amy (Elizabeth Taylor) and Beth (Margaret O'Brien). To Jo's sorrow, but eventually triumph, time insists on marching on.

The acting honors of Little Women definitely belong to June Allyson, who makes no perceptible slip from sensitive magnificence in the taxing major role; and to Margaret O'Brien. Miss O'Brien, in the scene in which she tells Jo not to feel badly about her (Beth's) (Continued on page 45)

In the dark days of the Civil War, Mrs. Morch ond her faur girls give up their first gaod breakfost in manths ta toke it to o poor fomily.

Ja (June Allyson) and her sisters try ta disguise the patch on her party dress. Amy (Liz Toylor) wants to paint it. Beth (M. O'Brien) offers a bow. Meg (Janet Leigh) affers sympathy.

Ja decides it's hapeless—she just wan't donce ot the party. But when Laurie (Peter Lawford) keeps insisting, she gives in and they dance in the holl—where nobody will notice the potch.

MEMORABLE SCENES FROM "LITTLE WOMEN" HAVE HUMOR AND POIGNANT PATHOS

(Continued from page 43) approaching death, will dissolve in tears anyone not beneath contempt. But all the other members of the cast do everything one could ask with their parts.

Elizabeth Taylor, in a blonde wig, performs with fine humor as the elegantly malaprop Amy; Janet Leigh is deft and radiant as Meg; Peter Lawford as Laurie, the rich boy next door, proves again he doesn't have to rely on charm alone; Lucile Watson is properly insufferable as the acidulously generous Aunt March; Rossano Brazzi, making his American debut after an outstanding career in Italian films, is just right as Professor Bhaer; and Mary Astor makes clear why mothers are held in general esteem. Then there's—but everyone involved is excellent.

Little Women does have its flaws. Here and there the pace might have been brisker, and sometimes the sweetness and Technicolored light flows a bit too continuously. But as a generally faithful transcription of the novel, packed with incidents gay and sad, it's a vast and enchanting delight—certainly a refreshing antidote to all the gunfire and gore currently showing.

Jo dreads to think that she and her sisters must grow up and that their happy companionship must be disrupted. When Meg is married, Jo stays aloof from the festivities.

With Meg married, Beth in her grave and Amy the bride of Laurie, Jo sadly looks back on the happy old days with her sisters.

BY FLORABEL
MUIR

Ring on her finger

He was teaching her how to skate—and it was lovely the way Jane Powell fell—so easily,
so beautifully—
for him . . .

■ There's nothing like the magical beauty that illuminates and idealizes a lovely young girl in the heyday of her first real romance.

If I sound lyrical, it's because I feel lyrical. I've just come from Jane Powell's house where Jane's been telling me about her engagement to Geary Steffan.

Geary was on the other side of the room as Jane chattered away—and she glanced often at him with frank adoration in her eyes. She was wearing the blue-white diamond ring Geary gave her the night of January 5th.

I asked them about that beautiful ring.

"I had it last December," Geary said, "but I didn't want to give it to her for a Christmas present. She was getting so many other presents—and I sort of wanted the ring to stand out by itself as an important event."

The jewel shone on Janie's finger like a headlight. I noticed that she kept brushing it against her lips in an unconscious gesture as she talked.

"He gave it to me early in the evening," said Janie. "Then we went to a party together. Honestly, I was frightened to death to tell my family about it! On our way home, Geary and I talked over how we'd do it—and we decided just to kid it through. We went to my mother's and father's bedroom at one o'clock in the morning—thinking we'd wake them up and let them in on our secret. But they hadn't gone to sleep.

"I said, 'I've got something very important to tell you.' And Mother answered, 'Yes, we know. Let me look at the ring.' She wasn't one bit surprised! I guess she'd known about Geary and me all the time."

They haven't yet set a date for the wedding. "It may be a year or longer before we can be married," Janie said.

"Don't be too sure about that," Geary interposed with a grin. (Continued on page 89)

In March, Modern Screen ran this phata af Jane—a lanely girl an tour in New Yark. Naw, the whole path of her life has changed excitingly.

Geary Steffan, his fiancée Jane Powell, and their bank. →

by hedda hopper

SAY IT ISN'T SO!

He has only one love besides acting and the kids—that's his wife. So don't say Greg Peck's having trouble at home—it just isn't true.

■ He stood on an RKO sound stage for his first test for his very first picture. He was practically unknown to everyone in Hollywood except Casey Robinson, who'd brought him out from Broadway. I took one look and busted right out with,

"Golly! How I wish I owned a piece of you!"

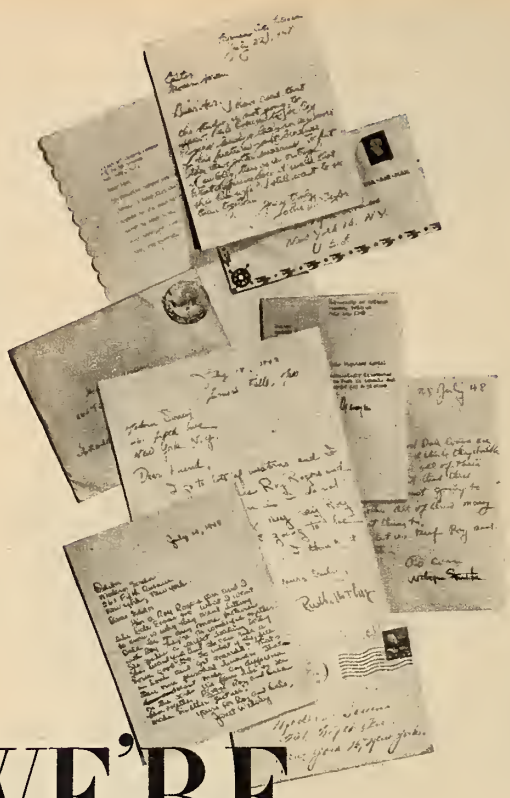
I'm afraid I'm used to coming out with what I'm thinking. He blushed to the roots of his black hair, looked for a place big enough to drop through the floor and couldn't find one. "Why—uh—thanks, Miss Hopper," he said, because he had to say something. "You're very nice."



Now I'll shoot that polite compliment right back at him—and I'm not just being polite. Gregory Peck is indeed very nice—in about every department I can think of. Seven years have passed since we were introduced and not for one minute have I changed my mind: I'd still like—above almost everything else in Hollywood—a stake in Greg Peck's career, his future greatness. I haven't the stake, but I still have the interest. Which is why I'm writing this piece. I've got my dukes up for Greg. Nobody's going to pick on Peck while I'm around—and that's what seems to be happening.

It may seem sort of silly for a slightly antique and beat-up blonde like myself to stick out her chin for a husky six-foot-two-er like Greg, whose (Continued on page 103)

"Heddo," said Greg, "sometimes when two people see too much of each other, some trifle occurs and they take it out on each other, blow their tops and have a spat."

WE'RE TOGETHER AGAIN

by Roy Rogers

That cowboy and his lady figgered they could work things out just like they'd planned, now they'd been hitched. Then it appeared their dream was busted proper—but not for long!

After Roy Rogers and Dale Evans were married on New Year's Eve in 1947, Republic Studios, believing that the public would no longer like to see Roy and Dale on the screen as a romantic team, announced that Dale would no longer be Roy's leading lady. The fans at once deluged MODERN SCREEN with letters of protest. The studio has recently reconsidered. So Roy and Dale, from now on, will again be thwarting them varmints where the sagebrush grows—together. Here, interrupted now and then by Dale, Roy tells how he feels about it. —THE EDITORS

■ I am writing this in my portable dressing room at Republic Studios where we are shooting Susanna Pass. Right next door is the dressing room of the girl who is playing opposite me in the picture, and—what do you know?—once more she's Dale Evans!

It's just like old times. All I have to do to find out if she's ready to go on the set is to raise my voice and holler, "Dale? They're waiting for us. Are you ready?" And all she has to do is yell back, "No! Not yet!" Yes, sir, just like old times.

(Well, if that's the way Roy's going to talk, I'm going to say something too. It isn't true that I'm generally late on the set. Roy just likes to wander out early so he can talk fishing with the boys on the crew. And furthermore, let's take it right from the moment our day begins. Have you ever noticed that when two people are sleeping in the same room only one ever hears the alarm clock in the morning—and has to get up and shut it off and wake the other? Well, Roy always manages to come in second in that competition!—Dale.)

But, all kidding aside, I'm really tickled that Dale and I are together again. It fits right into the plan of life we'd talked about when we were married—the plan the studio busted all to bits when it decided that a married couple made a poor romantic team on the screen. And, in addition to Dale and myself, there are three other members of our family who are plumb delighted: Cheryl, our oldest, who's eight, Linda Lou, who's five; and Roy Jr., who's 27 months old and whom we call "Dusty" on account of he generally is. And all five of us are deeply grateful to the thousands of fans who wrote us at Republic (and the thousands who wrote MODERN SCREEN*—Dale)* and convinced the studio that it was wrong about separating us.

That plan Dale and I made when we were married a year (Continued on page 81)

THESE LONG-TERM MARRIAGES SUPPORT HOLLYWOOD'S BELIEF THAT STARDOM DOESN'T HAVE TO RESULT IN DIVORCE.

26 YEARS: CAGNEYS

25 YEARS: TRACYS

22 YEARS: ROBINSONS

20 YEARS: MONTGOMERYS

Divorces, separations, scandals make front page news. But happiness can come to those Hollywood couples who follow five simple rules.

BY MORGAN MacNEIL

5 great lessons in love

■ Two weeks ago, a young writer-turned-actor on the Paramount lot, name of John Lund, ambled up to Bob Hope and asked ski-nose to reveal the secret of good publicity.

Hope, as usual, snapped out a quick answer. "The only way an actor can make the headlines nowadays," he cracked, "is to divorce his wife and marry a five-year-old Eskimo."

What Hope meant by that gag was simply this: it's the separations and scandals that make the headlines—and of them you read plenty. But of Hollywood's lasting love affairs, the tried and true marriages so rich and ripe with heart and romance, so replete with tenderness and passion, so bountiful with memories—of these you read next to nothing.

And this is a great and crying shame, for in these matings lie Hollywood's foremost lessons in love, lessons learned the hard way through experience—lessons whose principles, applied to your own life, can enrich it just as they've enriched the lives of so many prominent cinema people.

Do you know that the James Cagneys have been married 26 years, the Spencer Tracys 25, the Edward G. Robinsons 22, the Robert Montgomerys 20, the Pat O'Briens 19, the Bing Crosbys 18, the Bob Hopes 13, the Gary Coopers 14, the Robert Youngs 18?

Do you know that Ingrid Bergman has been wedded to her doctor-husband 10 years, Irene Dunne to her dentist-husband 19, Claudette Colbert to her doctor 12?

And do you know the great love stories behind these marriages? The chances are you don't—for recently, good publicity concerning the movie colony has been as rare as a quiet month in the life of Errol Flynn. (As Groucho Marx once quipped, "Ever since they found out that Lassie was really a boy, the public has believed the worst about Hollywood.") But the time has come to call attention to the fact that Hollywood boasts some of the LESSON ONE: The wife must give up acting aspirations. Dana and Mary Andrews illustrate this lesson well. Friends were stunned when she retired to marry the struggling young actor from the Pasadena Playhouse. "My career? Poof!" said Mary. "He's going places and I'm going with him." And she has.

LESSON TWO: If an actress wants both career and happy marriage she must wed someone outside the picture business. The ideal marriage of the Peter Lindstroms proves this point. They were wed ten years ago in Sweden. As a brain surgeon, he's as eminently successful in his profession as Ingrid is in hers.

5 great lessons in love

most happy and inspiring marriages in existence—and that from these marriages there can be derived five great lessons or rules.

The first one may be stated this way: When a husband and wife seek a career in the motion picture business, the wife must give up her acting aspirations if she wants her marriage to be a lasting success.

There are exceptions to this rule just as there are to any rule, but the exceptions are far and few between. Think of any actress who was married to an actor and declined to give up her career—Greer Garson to Richard Ney, Joan Crawford to Franchot Tone, Jennifer Jones to Robert Walker, Betty Grable to Jackie Coogan, Annabella to Tyrone Power, Jane Wyman to Ronald Reagan—the list is endless. And the result in the great majority of these cases has always been the same: divorce.

On the other hand, take the Bing Crosbys. Eighteen years ago when Bing first proposed marriage to Dixie Lee, he was a happy-go-lucky crooner with as much sense of responsibility as a beachcomber.

On those nights when he could be found, he would warble at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles while his best friends would advise Dixie, then an up-and-coming star, to drop the Spokane boy gently, but to drop him nevertheless.

"For a while," Dixie now recalls, "they had me worried. They'd come up and say, 'Dixie, we love the guy, but we're giving it to you straight. If you marry Bing you're going to have to support him the rest of your life.'

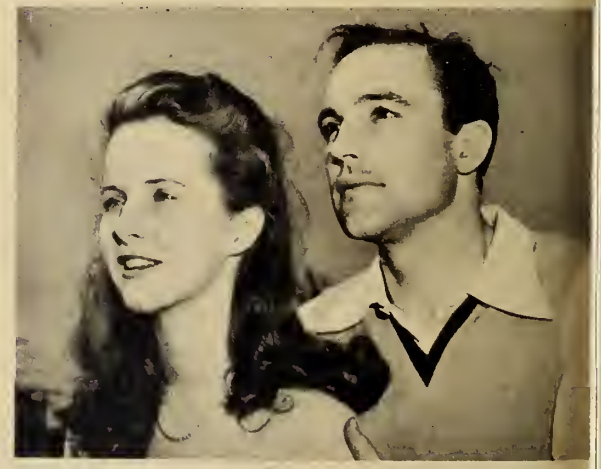
"I wasn't going to support any man," Dixie says, "and I told that to Bing. 'Dixie,' he said, 'if you marry me, you can quit show business, and I give you my word, you won't have to worry.' When we got married I did quit, and Bing's been the breadwinner ever since."

And what a breadwinner! In 18 years Bing has earned more than ten-million dollars. And the inspiration behind his fabulously successful career has always been Dixie. Bing is the first to acknowledge that.

"By sending me out into the world to make an honest living," he says, "Dixie made me what I am today, and she'll have to take the responsibility."

This is also true of Louise Treadwell and her 25-year-old marriage to Spencer Tracy—a mating which is one of the really top melodramatic love stories of the movie colony, a love story so replete with drama and self-sacrifice that it might easily be transferred to the screen as a great motion picture.

Spence first met Louise Treadwell on a train bound for White Plains, N. Y. He was an actor at the time, or at least claimed to be. "I was making $15 a week," he says, "and I had a part in a Broadway play entitled The Man Who Came Back. The part consisted of my saying one line, 'To Hell with him,' and usually I was drowned out by the falling of the first-act curtain.



"Louise, on the other hand, was the leading lady in our stock company. Why she married me, I'll never know. She says it was because I had a (Continued on page 97)

LESSON THREE: Morrioge must be seoled by the relatively ropid orrivol of children. Betty Groble ond Jockie Coogon were o moritol foilure. But she and Horry James hove kids ond contentment.

LESSON FOUR: Shore your portner's interest as much os possible. Betty Garrett goes overboord for this lesson. Lorry Porks loves motorcycles. She hates 'em, but she rides, too—"it mokes him happy."

LESSON FIVE: Hove foith in the fundomentol goodness ond loyalty of the mon you marry. You con't find o more loyol husbond thon Gene Kelly. And Betsy knows it. She just disregords oll gossip.

Bob Taylor might have wondered, as he dragged out the kerosene stove— what he was doing in England . . . with steak and Stanwyck at home?

BY CHRISTOPHER KANE

Home was never like this

■ Bob Taylor and his ex-Navy pal Ralph Couser were exchanging recipes for boiled eggs in their suite in London's Savoy Hotel when the phone rang. Ralph answered it.

"For you, Bob," he said. "A woman. She sounds like Harry Lauder."

"It's Mrs. Stotts," Taylor said. "Wait and see."

He was right. It was Mrs. Stotts, more Scotch than ever, though he could follow her closely enough to get her drift. She said the staff at the palace sent their kindest regards. Furthermore, she said if he'd like to go through the palace (Buckingham), the royal family would shortly be leaving for the other palace (Sandringham) so the palace (Buckingham) would be entirely at his disposal.

He thanked her cordially, and they talked for a while longer. When he hung up, he was grinning. "Now I really feel I'm in England again."

The relationship between himself and Mrs. Stotts dated back to 1937. That was the year he'd been making A Yank at Oxford, and he'd had a house out in Westminster-on-the-Bias, or something, and he needed a cook. Somebody'd come up with Mrs. Stotts. "I cooked for Queen Mary," Mrs. Stotts told him, and Bob said that was good enough for him.

As it turned out, Mrs. Stotts' cooking wasn't anything to worry Oscar of the Waldorf, but Mrs. Stotts' character was sensational. She was so tremendously eager to please, she was so positively certain she couldn't do enough for him, that Taylor found himself falling in love. When A Yank at Oxford wound up, and it was time for him to head home, the handclasp between him and Mrs. Stotts was fervent, the gaze they exchanged was brave, and moist.

Years passed. Each one brought a Christmas card from Mrs. Stotts. Finally, in 1947, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor traveled to England for a visit. Mrs. Stotts got in touch at once. "I'll take you through Buckingham Palace," she said, almost literally producing the keys to the castle. "Of course, Their Majesties are in residence, so we won't be able to see it all. . . ."

She came to meet them at Claridge's, dressed in her best black, and Bob and Barbara had a chauffeured Rolls Royce ready for the trip.

Along the way, Mrs. Stotts busied herself with dispensing information. She spoke her pieces like a radio announcer, each statement sounding rather formal and complete, allowing of no possible question. "King Zog, the former ruler of Albania, has been living in (Continued on page 106)

Liz Taylor peeks at one of Bob's letters to his wife. They're on the set of Conspirator, in England.

Bob shared his suite at the Savoy Hotel with Ralph Couser, an ex-Navy pal who cooks.

Lana Turner's BITTER TRIUMPHS

Lano Turner wos only 19 when, after one dote, she wos morried in Los Vegos to bondleader Artie Shaw. And her youthfully ramantic impulse praved a mistake.

She's been hurt by life many times . . . and fate was never too kind with her heart . . . but Lana's always come back again with new courage.

BY KAAREN PIECK

Before morrying Shaw, Lona had plonned to wed lawyer Greg Boutzer. It's soid she wept wildly when the break come.

Lona's morrioge to Steve Crone wos onnulled when they learned his divarce wosn't finol. They rewed, soon parted. Cheryl wos born in 1944.

The Ty Power-Lana Turner romance was the mast publicized af 1947. Suddenly, Ty fell in love with Linda Christian ond Lano turned ta Bab Topping.

Bob Topping, who'd sent her roses as early as 1946, married Lana in April, 1948. The press was critical in reporting the wedding.

■ Last January, Lana Turner lay in Doctors' Hospital in Manhattan and learned that she'd lost her baby.

Only 48 hours earlier, she'd been radiant, waiting for her son. "I know it'll be a boy," she kept saying from the first. "And we'll call him Timothy." Now she lay white and quiet, and her thoughts must have turned to another day when she fought a desperate battle for the life of her firstborn. That time she'd won. This time—well, there wouldn't be any Timothy. . . .

An anxious friend called Bob Topping at the hospital. Bob's voice sounded tired.

"The poor kid's had a rough time of it. But you know Lana—she'll come through it all right—she's got all the courage in the world."

I agree with him. I don't propose to go sentimental over Lana Turner. She needs no sob-stuff from me or anyone else. But truth's truth, and it's never one-sided. For my money, they've taken one side of the girl and roasted it to a crisp, ignoring the others. All the holier-than-thous, all the envious, all the wiseacres have set her up as a target for sniping. The reasons are obvious. She's in the limelight, she's beautiful, she has an allure that most women would give their right arms for, and her romantic adventures sell lots of newspapers.

They pick on her for the very qualities that make her exciting. "Why can't they leave her alone?" Mervyn LeRoy once snapped. "From her first appearance, they started yelling 'Be quiet,' and they've never stopped since. It's like telling a bird of paradise to be a little gray hen. I've yet to see a gray hen roll up boxoffice records."

All I know about birds of paradise is that they're gorgeous. Lana's that, all right—but the record shows that she's also impulsive, warm-hearted, generous to a fault, full of zest for life, and the one (Continued on page 100)

HOLLYWOOD'S AMAZING LOVE SQUABBLE!

nora eddington

errol flynn

joanne dru

dick haymes

■ Errol Flynn once said, "The trouble is, when you're in love with a girl and she's not sure of it, you do fine. But when she knows you're really gone—look out!"

Not long ago Errol made the headlines again—as one of the key figures in perhaps the most complex four-cornered drama ever recorded in Hollywood. But this time not as Don Juan, but as low man on the domestic totem pole—the lad who'd made the mistake, if such it were, of letting the girl know he really loved her.

When, after several false rumors of separations, Nora Eddington Flynn announced in February that she was definitely leaving Errol, events moved swiftly—to the accompaniment of sardonic chuckles around town. Dick Haymes' wife, Joanne Dru, went to see attorneys and the story of her now-impending divorce broke in the news. Shortly thereafter, Nora admitted to the press that she was devoted to Dick Haymes and hoped to marry him when both were free. This statement she later declared was a misquote, but the cat was out of the bag and rumor began to add spectacular touches to the affair as Joanne's dates with John Ireland, also in the throes of getting a divorce, became known.

Who fell in love with whom first, and what will be the outcome of this not-too-attractive exhibit of life as it is lived on Hollywood's sometimes florid and high emotional seas? And who is to blame?

The inside story goes back to 1943, when Flynn was then, as now, a troubled man. A girl had brought him into court on paternity charges. Of these, Errol was promptly and properly cleared. But as he walked the corridors of the Hall of Justice, being photographed and interviewed by his friends in the press, something new came into his life.

He stopped to buy cigarettes at the cigar stand, and the girl who waited on him was 19-year-old Nora Eddington. There was sympathy and understanding in her eyes. Right there, in full view of alert newspapermen, a romance was born. But her secret marriage a short time later to Errol in Mexico was not discovered until she returned to Hollywood in February 1945. Then it was that Errol said, "I'm married, I like it, and it's nobody else's business."

He was mistaken about that last part. What goes on in a movie star's life is seldom his business only. Before long, there were periodic reports that all was not well between Nora and Errol. Occasionally, he was seen in public alone at various restaurants and night clubs. Flynn, declared the experts in such matters, was still Flynn.

Actually, the reverse was taking place. In 1946, Errol took off for Acapulco, on a vacation and scientific cruise, accompanied by Nora and his father. There were numerous stories bandied about by the crew that the real reason for the near-mutinous situations which arose stemmed from Nora's apparent desire to make Errol jealous. True or not, on his return Errol was seldom seen in public until the October of 1948, when he and Nora separated briefly and Nora told reporters, "This is the worst break yet." That statement left much unsaid and heightened the assumption that Flynn was again being Flynn. Errol admitted to friends that he was deeply in love with Nora and willing to do almost anything to keep their marriage intact. Then, privately, he and Nora agreed on a six-months separation and Nora took off for New York.

Now occurred the thing that brings the story to the proportions of a Hollywood has had more than its share of broken marriages. This is a divorce story that reaches new depths of tragedy, as two homes are caught in a confused web of romance.

By CARL SCHROEDER

HOLLYWOOD'S AMAZING LOVE SQUABBLE

Dick Haymes and Joanne Dru met in New York's Paramount Theater while doing separate acts. They married in 1941. Recently, Joanne resumed her screen career.

Errol Flynn and Nora Eddington met at a courthouse cigar stand during his famous paternity suit. They wed in Mexico in 1943 and now have two children.

love squabble. In New York, Nora met Dick Haymes. Sometime previously, Dick had stood on the brink of separation from Joanne Dru, ostensibly because of "career trouble." Nora and Dick liked each other instantly, and on their separate returns to Hollywood renewed their interest when they met again in Palm Springs.

There was no secret about it. Errol was furious. (Reports that he threatened to punch Dick on the nose are not inconsistent with his man-of-action temperament, but it is dubious that Errol ever went so far as to install microphones, or threaten to, in the hillside home into which Dick moved.)

Nevertheless, the idea of a six-months trial separation was abruptly dropped and the true situation exposed when dynamic newspaperwoman Florabel Muir broke a story in the Los Angeles Mirror. She quoted Nora as saying she was seriously in love with Dick Haymes and that, when their marital ties were over, they might consider marriage.

This was tantamount to Hollywood's recently established practice, in the cases of advanced young ladies, of announcing an engagement before going through the legal process of becoming unmarried. Nora later is said to have denied making the provocative statements, but Miss Muir's accuracy as a reporter is generally conceded to be slightly better than that of a wire recorder accompanied by a sworn oath.

The fire of excitement over the alleged love parlay became the hottest gossip since Rita flew away with her prince. And, as in the latter case, the moment the news broke a shattering silence fell, with everyone assuming a "Who, me?" attitude.

At the risk of being accused of presenting a prejudiced story, it must be admitted that the behavior of Errol Flynn and Dick Haymes's wife, Joanne Dru, added at least a small touch of dignity to this otherwise un-hilarious travesty on marriage. Through spokesmen at MGM where he is now appearing in The Forsyte Saga with Greer Garson, Flynn commented that he would make no comment whatsoever. After he gave a huge party in his Mulholland Drive home—perhaps secretly hoping that, with 99% of Hollywood there, Nora might consider this a propitious moment to return home—Errol let it be known through his attorney, Bob Ford, that he'd appreciate it if reporters refrained from saying anything in any way derogatory about his wife.

Meantime, Nora and Dick Haymes spent a portion of the evening on which Errol gave his party, holding hands with each other at Mocambo—Nora being unaware, or at least unimpressed, by her husband's obviously sincere gallantry.

Concerning her break with Dick Haymes, Joanne Dru says: "The decision to part was abrupt and final. We were separated once before three years ago for a period of two days. The reason given then was that I wanted a career. It wasn't true. At that time I didn't want a career. Now I am going to devote myself solely to my work and my children."

Joanne Dru met Dick Haymes in 1941, two full years before Nora Eddington's first encounter with Errol Flynn. Joanne already was a career girl, "a Samba siren," dancing at the Paramount theater in New York. When Dick came into the Paramount with his band, they worked together, and in private life they became more or less a brother and sister act, with no idea of a romance.

Then Joanne moved on to Boston. There she met and became interested in a Harvard boy, a fact duly reported by Walter Winchell. Next day after the Winchell item appeared, Dick called Joanne by long distance and began his proposal (Continued on page 108)

John PAYNE · Gail RUSSELL · Sterling HAYDEN · George "Gabby" HAYES · Dick FORAN

How the law was brought to a gun-riddled...feud-ridden border-town of lawlessness. This is the story of the "Coffin Corner of Texas" in the lusty era when ambush in the night made the Rio Grande run red!

in Paramount's

EL PASO

Color by CINECOLOR

with

Eduardo Noriega · Henry Hull · Mary Beth Hughes
H. B. Warner · Bobby Ellis · Directed by Lewis R. Foster

Based on a story by J. Robert Bren and Gladys Atwater Screenplay by Lewis R. Foster · A Pine-Thomas Production

LET'S GET IT STRAIGHT!

There have been many wild tales about Judy Garland's illness, about her "pathetic" childhood. The writers have overlooked one thing—the truth.

by ethel garland

Judy wosn't forced inta show business as reports say. Her oct with Sue ond Jimmie was strictly their awn idea.

Despite tales to the controry, Judy ottended public schoal just like any normal girl. She graduated with her high-schaal class in 1940.

Ethel Garland (shown at left) has been getting more and more indignant at the wild tales she's been reading about her daughter Judy. Recently a national magazine ran a story on Judy's childhood and upbringing that Mrs. Garland considered "peculiarly vicious." This was the last straw. To set the record straight, she has turned to MODERN SCREEN to bring the facts about Judy to the public.
—THE EDITORS.

■ On the whole, I'm a patient woman, but I've just about reached the end of my patience. I've heard that movie stars live in goldfish bowls. If so, lots of people can't see through glass. I've read so much dreamed-up drivel about my daughter Judy that the time has come for a good big explosion. This is it!

I've read that she led "the tough life of a vaudeville kid." The weeks she played vaudeville you could count on one hand.

I've read that she dressed out of trunks, and had her oatmeal cooked over a gas jet. We never owned a trunk, just some very nice suitcases, and her oatmeal was cooked on a stove exactly like yours.

I've read that she knew little of normal youth. If Judy's youth wasn't normal, Mr. Webster had better write himself a new dictionary. No circuses, they say? She went to every circus in town and sat right down front! No children coming over? The place was full of them! No penny candy? Well, there they've got me. Judy didn't have penny candy—it was nickel candy.

I've read that she was never strong as a child. Doesn't anyone remember her early pictures? Did she look fragile? As a youngster, her only trouble was hay fever. That's why we moved from Lancaster to Los Angeles, and that was the end of her childhood ills.

I've read fables that sounded as though my husband and I had stuck all three children under a railroad car and ridden the rods. I've read them until I thought either the writers must be talking about five other people, or else I was losing my mind. I kept wondering why these imaginative writers didn't invent their characters from scratch, and come up with the great American novel.

Luckily, Judy keeps the humor she was born with. "What about that time you put me through the meat-grinder, Mother?" she'll say to me, deadpan. Or: "Liza was working at two-and-a-half. How come I never did a lick till I was three?"

Jimmie, who used to be a script girl, tries to explain. "It's more interesting, Mother. They think folks won't care unless you've been 'pore' and struggled and risen from the depths."

That's ridiculous! Who lived a nicer, plainer, more everyday life than Shirley Temple? I notice the public's still interested in her. I think most Americans like to read about homey, happy people—because most Americans are homey, happy people themselves. And I think a very good thing to come up with is the truth. The truth about my family is that none of us rose from the depths, and that Judy's young life was as simple and normal and happy as the kid's next door.

I can't remember ever having trouble with Judy. Susie was the one with the temper. Jimmie was the placid, quiet child and Judy was a breeze, forever laughing and joking. Even then, the other girls thought she was the prize comedian and she was in her glory when she could make them laugh. Sometimes she went too far and had to go stand in the corner with her back to the rest of us until she counted 10. By the time she got to 8½, she was out. That's as far as we ever pushed punishment with Judy. And that was almost more than her Daddy could stand.

My husband and I didn't come out to California to shove our little brood into show business. We were very happy in Grand Rapids, Minnesota. We'd lived there 12 years. Frank had a picture theater and everything was going beautifully. We came to California to get away from the coal bills, if you must know, and the storm windows. The whole thing started with Frank saying: "Let's go to California for a week." For a week it didn't seem worth uprooting the children. They were supposed to stay home with their grandmother. Well, I was packing the day before we left, and there they stood watching, and all of a sudden I looked up at them and knew I couldn't leave them. So I chased downtown, picked up three pairs of overalls and some middies, and we took them along and had a wonderful time. Walked our fool heads off. Camped on the lawn of the old Warner studio on Sunset and watched the movie stars come out. Of course, we wanted to see them, just as any tourist wants to see them today.

But what Frank and I really loved was the climate. Roses and balmy skies in the middle of winter. This was the place, we decided; this was it. Back we went, sold the theater, and packed up our goods and our youngsters. Then we found on returning that most of the L. A. theaters were owned by the big chains—and so we finally bought a theater in the little desert town of Lancaster, and settled down to living.

Poor little Judy, I've read, yanked from town to town in the middle of the night through drifts of snow. That's absolutely absurd—would Judy have been yanked anywhere in the middle of the night? She slept in her own bed, except when she found excuses to crawl into mine: "Mother, my feet are cold. . . ." She stayed in Lancaster, where there wasn't any snow. Once in a while, on weekends, all three girls would do a show at the Biltmore in Los Angeles put on by the Meglin School —where they went once a week for dancing lessons. They'd each receive 50 cents. Or when school was out, they'd play the Pike Theater in Long Beach for a couple of days. Because they wanted to, because they thought it was fun. Nobody made them. If Judy was unhappy or felt abused, I never knew it, and I would have known it, because there was precious little she didn't tell me.

Even that much-touted vaudeville tour against "fatherly opposition" started out as a joke. The girls and I were headed for the World's Fair in Chicago—Frank couldn't get away. In an idle moment one of us said: "Let's see if we can get some bookings and pay expenses."

"Don't be silly," said Frank. "Just go and enjoy the Fair." We started kidding about it and decided we'd show him what we could do on our own. "Okay," he said, "but take a checkbook along." That was the extent of his opposition. (When we ran out of money, we used the checkbook.) And the only reason we ever got on at the Oriental Theater in Chicago was that Jack Cathcart, who was in the band and who's now Susie's husband, gave us a hurry call at the last minute: "Maybe you can fill in for an act that's just quit." And when I say last minute, I mean last minute. Jack caught us right spang in the middle of packing.

opportunity knocks . . .

Well, the girls were a great success and doors started opening. We did a week in Detroit, another in Milwaukee, and boom! Our trip was over. By this time the agents were after us, but we'd had enough. We'd proved our point, we were terribly homesick for Frank, so we piled into the car and went back where we belonged.

None of this interfered with the girls' normal living. They never missed school. They went to church and they went to Sunday school and they sang in the choir and made their first communion. . . . I ran across Judy's Bible the other day, with the lock of hair I cut off when she made her communion. She was so pleased that I'd carried it around all these years. I've carried them all around—all three Bibles and all three locks of hair—and mooned over them the way any mother does. . . .

Even after she'd gone to Metro—where she didn't do much at first—Judy said she'd like to attend public school instead of the one they ran at the studio. So I got her into public school, though they made it as difficult as they could. I had to tackle the whole Board of Education and bear down on the fact that I was a taxpayer, and my child had as much right in public school as any other. But go she did in the end, and had a wonderful time running errands for the teacher and graduating with all the other children.

It was Frank who took her to Metro. Of course I'd have taken her, if I'd been able to, but I happened to be in Pasadena, playing for a community affair. And let's get this straight now, how Frank and I felt about Judy. We were always in perfect accord. Being human parents, we were proud of her and her voice, and thought she sang like a bird. But we never talked career—there was nothing to talk about. Neither did Judy, till after she was signed at Metro. She was a child, remember. As long as she could sing—at home, at school, in the choir—it didn't matter where. And the only reason Frank took her to Metro was because of an agent who kept calling. He'd heard Judy sing when we'd been up to Tahoe that summer. Later he called, asking us to bring her to the office. We said we would, but never got around to it. This particular day he was insistent, said he'd made an appointment for her at MGM. Judy was playing in the backyard. Her slacks were none too clean, and she wasn't in a mood to be bothered. Neither was her daddy. Still . . .

"What about my slacks? Do I have to change?"

"No," said Frank, "you're all right as you are."

coming! another exciting "first"

modern screen's salute to youth

A special issue packed with exciting stories and pictures of your favorites.
- Guy Madison
- Janet Leigh
- Montgomery Clift
- Bob Arthur
- Jean Peters
- Elizabeth Taylor
- Shirley Temple
- Lois Butler

Complete Who's Who of Hollywood's younger generation. Plus many other outstanding features!

june modern screen on sale may 10

READY FOR THE NATIONS' SCREENS and it's ENTIRELY IN CINECOLOR

Remember — "THE TEN COMMANDMENTS"
Remember — "KING OF KINGS"
This Is It!

A Picture for 2 Kinds of People..

1st Those who believe in God
2nd and those who don't!

PEOPLE PAID $1,000-A-SEAT AT THIS PICTURE'S WORLD PREMIERE!

KROGER BABB and J. S. JOSSEY present

The Lawton Story

Including The Wichita Mountain Pageant: "THE PRINCE OF PEACE"

INTRODUCING AND STARRING
Ginger Prince
42 INCHES .. . AND 42 LBS. OF SOUTHERN CHARM

Directed by WILLIAM BEAUDINE and HAROLD DANIELS
Cinecolor Photography HENRY SHARP, A.S.C.

A HALLMARK PRODUCTION
Entirely in Cinecolor
CAST OF MORE THAN 3,000

WITH
FORREST TAYLOR • MILLARD COODY • GWYN SHIPMAN
DARLENE BRIDGES • FERRIS TAYLOR • MAUDE EBURNE
LASSES WHITE • DEL FISHER • HAZEL LEE BECKER
WILLA PEARL CURTIS • BEELZEBUB

Musical Director EDWARD J. KAY • THE HALLELUJAH CHOIR
Songs by EDDIE MAXWELL and LASSES WHITE Film Editor DICK CURRIER

"Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard me." Christ at Lazarus' tomb.

"Holy, Holy, Holy." Ginger sings a solo in her Uncle Mark's church.

Christ carrying cross on road to Calvary. "Woman, behold thy Son."

Millard Coody, who portrays Christ is bank teller in real life.

Ginger Sings 4 Songs

Hear
"DOWN IN OKLAHOMA"
"RIGHT UNDER MY NOSE"
"HOLY, HOLY, HOLY"
"THE TURTLE"

"There Are People in Hell Whom This Picture Could Have Saved."
—Rev. A. H. Wilson

THIS LITTLE GIRL BRINGS HEAVEN DOWN TO EARTH!

HP Inc.
J. J. JOSSEY and KROGER BABB
A HALLMARK PRODUCTION
1914 S. VERMONT LOS ANGELES
PRODUCERS AND WORLD-WIDE DISTRIBUTORS

IT POSITIVELY DOES SOMETHING TO YOUR SOUL

"Rapture Pink"
by Westmore
HOLLYWOOD'S VIBRANT SPRING COLOR

Also Available in 29¢ Size*

Westmore again creates the beauty color-sensation of the season. It's "Rapture Pink," vibrant with beauty—fresh and radiant as Spring! In lipstick and rouge, with foundation cream and face powder to complement.

"Regardless of Price You Cannot Buy Better"

Westmore Cosmetics

At cosmetic counters everywhere
In U. S. A. and Canada

When I got back from Pasadena and they came home and told me where they'd been, I took one scandalized look at my child. "Like that?"

"Oh, what's the difference?" said Frank. "Nobody was impressed, anyway."

Believe me, we didn't care. Expecting nothing, how can you be disappointed? All that bothered me were the dirty slacks. When the unexpected happened and they called us about a contract, our reaction was: "Judy? You mean they want her?"

Once she signed a contract, we went on the same as before. We'd just bought a new theater. Our home-life was more important than Judy's career, which everyone knows didn't start in any blaze of glory. I remember one day we were all around the piano, Frank and the kids singing Among My Souvenirs. It's a sad song and though I'm not given to brooding, its sadness affected me. I looked up at them—every human's gone through the same experience—and thought: "Here we are together. If only this moment could last . . ." It wasn't six months before my husband, who'd never known a day's illness, went within 24 hours of meningitis. He died on my birthday—which is why I've hated the day ever since. . . .

I was glad Judy had the studio, then. At least it wasn't tied up with a million memories of her daddy. Besides, she'd made up her mind now that this was what she wanted. It was Judy herself who had show business in her blood, like her daddy before her. Nobody can explain these things. Frank came of a perfectly conventional family in Tennessee, who all but disowned him when he left to sing in the theater. After we married and the children started coming, he gave up his dream for the more practical end of the business. But somehow it must have been handed on to Judy.

"Mother," she'd say, "if I can be a success as a singer and actress, that's all I'll ever ask of life."

I encouraged her, of course. "All right, if that's what you want, we'll work for it." But I'd have encouraged her in anything she wanted to do. It's one of my beliefs. "Typist or clerk or deep-sea diver," I've told the girls, "as long as you're happy, it makes no difference to me."

I've read that their "ambitious" mother persisted in making celebrities of her daughters. That floored me. When Susie and Jimmie wanted to stop their careers and get married, they stopped and got married. Judy didn't want to stop. All I ever wanted for them was to be happy. I don't set myself up as any model mother. I don't hold with the saying that mother knows best, I've been wrong too often. But there's one attitude I've stuck to all my days: don't force your children to anything. Whatever you force them to isn't worth a dime.

And this I can tell you. Suppose I'd said to Judy, "No, I don't want you to sing, I don't want you to go into films"—she'd still be exactly where she is today. One gentleman asked a question I'll be glad to answer. "Would Judy Garland be happy if she'd married some farmer in Fresno?" Judy Garland wouldn't. First of all, she'd never have married some farmer in Fresno, it's too far from the studios. And if she'd married an Eskimo at the North Pole, she'd have found some way of dragging him and his igloo down to Hollywood. No matter what the barriers, there's a will in Judy that would have conquered them. Not the will, may I add, for money and fame. But that of the born entertainer to express herself . . .

Another thing I would like to make clear. Judy over-dieted, they say, during adolescence, injuring her health. Judy didn't diet at all during adolescence—though there were times when she should have. However, she stayed tubby till she had her tonsils out. Then the fat fell off and didn't come on again—though right now she weighs more than she has in years. That's because she recently had a good rest.

But when she took that rest—what wild stories started appearing! The simple truth of the matter is that Judy had made The Pirate and Easter Parade—two long, hard pictures—and had followed them up with sequences for Words and Music.

Musicals, with their hours of song-and-dance rehearsals, are naturally very tiring. The studio had a string of pictures lined up for her. Mr. Mayer said: "Judy, why don't you take a rest? Then you'll be fresh for the next one." So she did! This was only common sense.

There's just one thing Judy doesn't like about movies, and that's getting up with the chickens. All my children are the same. (If you think Judy's bad, you ought to see Jimmie, and Susie's not much better. Of all the problems I ever had with my daughters, the toughest was dragging them out of bed in the morning.)

miniature duse . . .

Alarm clock and all, however, Judy loves her life and wouldn't change it for any girl's in the world. The proof is, she hopes little Liza'll follow in her trail. "We're not going to push her," she says, "but nothing would make Vincent and me happier than to have her decide to be an actress."

From all observations, Liza won't need any pushing. She's already pushed herself into two pictures. The studio fascinates her. Judy and Vincent used to take her over now and then just for the fun of it, but now and then didn't suit Miss Liza. "Mommy and Daddy go all the time, why can't I go?"

"Look," said Arthur Freed. "Mary Martin's daughter played one of the little sisters in Annie Get Your Gun. How's about using Liza for the part?" So they're using Liza, and she's already fixed up the title: Annie-Get-My-Gun, she calls it.

Meanwhile, there's a scene in The Good Old Summertime where Judy and Van Johnson are walking along, with their daughter between them. Liza's the daughter. She's a ham to her fingertips if I ever saw one! They photographed her pointing to her name on the Costume Bulletin Board—LIZA MINNELLI, right under JAMES MASON and AVA GARDNER—and she ate it up. After the fittings with Irene, they shot her again in this adorable costume with a little straw hat perched on top of her head. As long as the cameras were clicking, she stood like a dreamboat. The minute they stopped, she announced to the world: "Look, I've got all new underwear on, too"—and pulled up her dress.

Later they took her over to the set where Judy was just breaking for lunch.

Vincent joined them, and you've never seen a prouder couple. I couldn't help thinking how life repeats itself—Judy and Vincent beaming over the baby, just as Frank and I had beamed over Judy. I couldn't help wishing, either, that some of these fictioneers had been around to see Judy laughing, and as blooming and radiant as I've ever known her. In two days she'd recorded seven songs. That was a record, according to Joe Pasternak. He sent her a tiny gold Oscar on a gold chain.

"As far as I'm concerned," he wrote, "you've won your Oscar."

As far as I'm concerned, that's all there is. Having gotten this off my chest, I can now forget it. I know that Judy is completely happy. THE END

YOU WON'T WANT TO MISS THE JUNE ISSUE OF MODERN SCREEN—OUR SALUTE TO YOUTH!

THEY'LL REMEMBER MAMA

(Continued from page 31)

houses where you felt snug and warm. Where you could raid the icebox, and nobody cared. Where they always had a big round dining room table, loaded with food at mealtime, and everyone sat around it, liking everyone else.

Upstairs became to Betty a symbol of family and home—a deep-seated feeling that had nothing to do with logic. Before Lindsay arrived, she wanted the nursery upstairs. That proved impractical. So they'll build the new house with all the bedrooms upstairs. There'll be a big round table in the dining room, and an outsize refrigerator in the kitchen.

"I want everything solid," she says, "like Boulder Dam. I want a place where kids can romp without being shushed. I want them to have their little friends in for dinner and to spend the night. I want a gay house that children'll love to come to. I want them to say, 'Let's go over to the Briskins, it's fun there.'"

Boiled down, she wants for her children the security her own childhood lacked. She wants it with all the warmth and force of her nature—but intelligently, too. Just money isn't enough.

the littlest rebel . . .

The Huttons were poor, the Briskins aren't. Yet it wasn't poverty alone that scarred Betty's childhood. Marion was pretty and easy to handle; Betty was a scrawny, stringy-haired little rebel. Relatives, more well-to-do than themselves, made a fuss over Marion, bought her clothes, hadn't much use for the difficult younger one who could get along on Marion's hand-me-downs. To their mother, the girls were equally dear. But Mabel Hutton worked all day on an assembly line, trying to earn enough for food and shelter. She wasn't around to referee their battles. So Betty grew up with a rankling sense of injustice—at odds with her sister, her relatives and most of the world. "I wouldn't like anybody, even when I wanted to, for fear of getting hurt."

That's why, above everything else, she's determined that nothing shall go wrong between Lindsay and Candy. That's why the one line you'll never hear in the Briskin household is, "Look at your sister, see how she does it." That's why Betty searched desperately, long before Candy was born, for a nurse who shared her own ideas about bringing up children. She found her in the person of beloved Kirchey, who's now installed with the Briskins. Whether the kids or Betty love her most would be hard to figure, and doesn't matter anyway. The point is, she sees eye-to-eye with Betty. She knows it's the older child, still a baby herself, who needs plenty of coddling, now that another baby's arrived on the scene. If she's pushing Candy in the kiddie-coop, she'll sometimes pick Lindsay up and drop her in too. "Want to ride?" Certainly Lindsay wants to ride. Only yesterday she was doing all the riding. . . .

All the books tell of the danger of jealousy between children. Betty didn't have to be told, she knew from bitter experience. "You can't leave it to chance that they'll love each other, you've got to be sharp." One day she came home with look-alike dresses for the kids. This enchanted Lindsay, and gave her a sense of one-ness with her sister. Whatever might make for ill feeling between them is out. For instance, they no longer have meals together.

"Why?" Lindsay asked.

For the skin that doesn't like heavy foundation

New flattery for the skin that doesn't like a "made-up" look—a lighter, greaseless foundation that takes powder smoothly and naturally!

A sheerer powder base—soft, natural! No oily, "coated" feel—it's greaseless!

Now—for delicate skin that looks most charming when it looks most natural—this greaseless powder base! Before powder, smooth on the Cream lightly. It disappears immediately, leaving only a transparent, protective film. No oily shine. No "cake-y" feeling. Your powder goes on flawlessly—and stays!

A Glamour Mask before make-up "Re-styles" your face in 1 Minute!

Always when you want to look your most attractive self, have a quick beauty pick-up with a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Spread the Cream lavishly over face, except eyes. After one minute, tissue off. The Cream's "keratolytic" action loosens stubborn dirt and dead skin flakes. Dissolves them off! Right away, your face looks wonderfully freshened—clearer, brighter! And thrillingly soft to touch—perfect for make-up!

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, III says...

"My favorite complexion 'refresher' is a 1-Minute Mask—and I'm extremely fond of just a sheer film of Pond's Vanishing Cream for powder base."

"Because you're a big girl, darling, and can stay up later. Candy's too little."

The real reason is that Candy eats like a horse, downs her grub in ten minutes. But Lindsay and food have always been a problem. When they ate together, Candy showed Lindsay up. There'll be no showing up in the Briskin family. It's Lindsay's self-confidence that needs bolstering now, so they bounce things off Candy, who's too little to know or care. Lindsay has excellent table manners. "Now, Candy, watch Lindsay eat." Candy's off somewhere in a fascinating world of her own, but Lindsay figures she's watching her, and makes a better meal for benefit of her sister.

The result is, she adores the baby, she wheels her round in a doll-buggy, telling people, "'At's my Candy!" So far, so good. Betty sets no pattern. She's aware that other days will bring other routines. As a child, Marion's beauty gave her a big fat complex. Well, Lindsay's a beauty too. Hair like a halo, delicate features, lamps that are out of this world. Right now it looks as if Candy won't be as pretty.

"I'm her mother and I worship her," says her mother, "but I'm not blind. It's blindness in parents, and not facing facts, that makes for misery in kids. Candy's a happy-go-luckier baby than Lindsay. She's got so much personality, maybe it'll never bother her if Lindsay's prettier. But I'm not waiting around to see if it does. I learned the hard way that looks have nothing to do with happy living. If I can't pass that on to my children, what good is my learning? Every kid has its own points. Develop those points without making darn-fool comparisons, and the kid'll be on its way."

Betty's not the all-knowing mother. Some of her boners she caught herself. Others were pointed out by Kirchey or Ted. In her anxiety to give Lindsay all the things she'd never had, she went overboard. Toys that were too expensive, dolls that were too big. After a while she noticed that what Lindsay enjoyed most were the beat-up toys, and dolls to her own scale. At Christmas she asked Gail Patrick, who runs a children's shop, to get her a doll-buggy. Gail turned up with the plushiest thing on wheels.

"Uh-uh!" said Betty. "I know why you brought this, but I've changed my tack. Can't you find me a $2.95 number that squeaks?"

On the other hand, there was the record machine. Lindsay loves music; her sense of rhythm is perfect. Betty got so worked up over this that, without using her head, she dashed out and bought a blue-ribbon model. Ted took one look—and back it went. Now Lindsay has a little machine that's her pride and joy, because she can work it herself.

There was a time when, before everything else, Betty's house had to be pretty. Now it has to be a place where you're not forever telling the kids to quit climbing the furniture. Normal kids climb furniture, period. So you get the kind of furniture they can climb. But this doesn't mean you let them run wild over grownups.

"Normal's one thing," says Betty, "and a brat's something else again. I've been places where you couldn't hear yourself think for the kids screeching. Because their folks didn't want 'em frustrated. Nuts! I don't call ordinary good manners frustration. The easiest way to bring children up is to spoil them. Take the easy way, and before you know it, the kids can't endure themselves and other kids hate 'em. Is that doing your child any favor? For security, they need discipline as much as anything, but discipline with love behind it. And common sense. We've got low tables all over the place. Lindsay's learned there are certain things she can touch, and others she can't. If we'd put all the touch-me-nots on a high shelf, it would have been easier, but not so good for Lindsay. When I have guests, my two are allowed to come in, but not to take over. If they start yelling, out they go."

The first thing that ever struck me about Betty Hutton was her honesty with herself. That remains unchanged. She still loves her career. She doesn't kid herself that you can have career and motherhood both, without losing out somewhere. She loses out by not being with her babies when she's working. Instead of denying a self-evident fact, she makes the best of it.

Most important to her is that the children are happy with Kirchey—that she can go to the studio without worrying about them. If any major matter comes up, Kirchey will call—because Betty and nobody else is the boss. So long as there's no call, the kids are okay and Betty's mind is at peace. Sometimes Kirchey brings them down to the studio. But you can't break up their routine too often. By their mother's standards, that's being selfish. She skips the evening rushes, to get home before Lindsay's bedtime, and even manages to catch Candy awake now and then. Nightly huddles with Kirchey bring her up-to-date on all that her daughters have said and done that day. And, of course, Sundays are devoted to them.

non-stop courtship . . .

Security for children presupposes security between parents. Take your marriage for granted, and that's when it starts down the drain. Betty's idea is that courtship should never stop. She's as careful to look pretty for Ted now as she was on their honeymoon. For no reason except the best in the world—"Because I love you"—she'll send flowers to his office. She likes the same kind of attention from him.

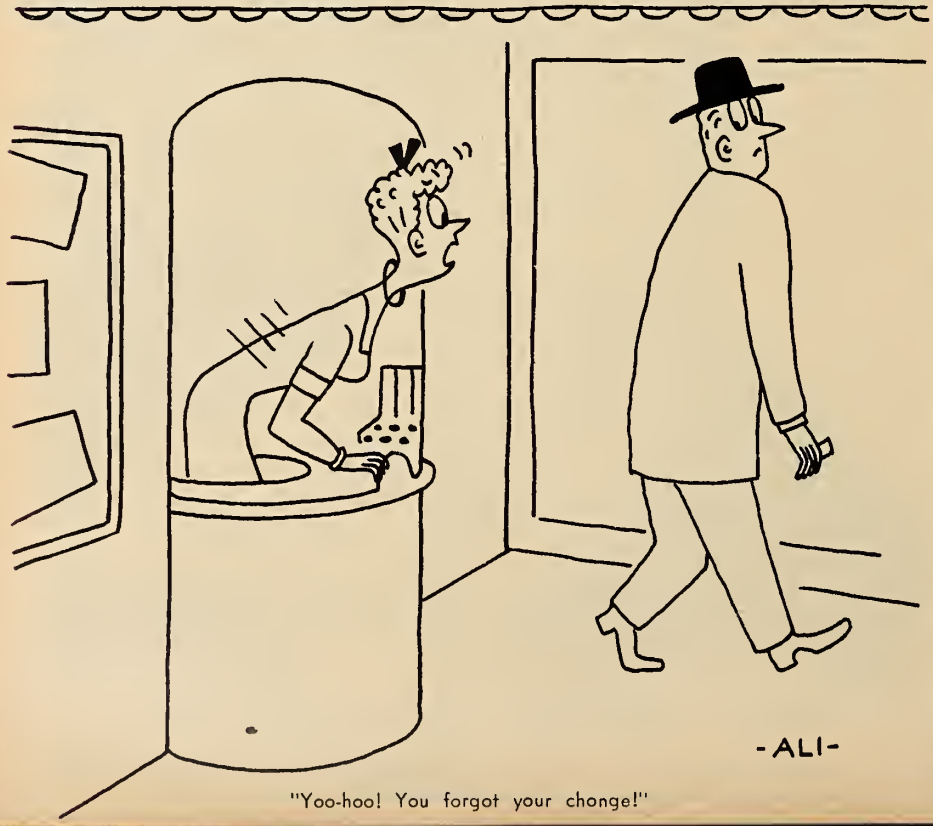
"Every woman does, but some men are funny. They think wives aren't women."

Recently Betty had a call from Abe Lastfogel of the William Morris agency, who is also president of Veterans' Hospital Camp Shows. "We need someone for a hospital tour—Salt Lake City, Denver, Cheyenne. Will you go?"

Betty went—with Hal Belfer, guitarist, and Martin Weisner, pianist. "You can't do it alone," she explains. "For one thing, you've got to keep your emotions bottled up. A lot of good it would do those kids to see you break down! At the same time, you can't always control them. So with a team, you help each other out. Hal and Martin were both terrific. As performers and as humans. They'd sense when I was getting a lump in my throat and couldn't go on, and right away they'd take over."

Once Martin caught her after a show, sobbing her heart out. "Don't, Betty," he said gently. "You've got to be objective about it."

Next day she was leaning over the bed of a boy, singing to him. He could move only his eyes. As she finished and looked up, there stood Martin at the window, objectively wiping his tears away.



"It's the hardest job in the world," says Betty soberly. "And the most worthwhile. There's selfishness in it too, because it makes you feel marvelous that you can help. But then what? The most you can bring is a little fun for a while, a little change, a little something else to talk about. Then you turn back to the life they're cut off from, thinking 'There, but for the grace of God, go I.'

"Look, I've got two daughters. My sister has two sons. I don't want my girls to be war widows. Or Marion's boys to wind up in a hospital. But that guy with the bandaged head—did his mother want it?

"It comes down to this: You can't get security for your own, without working at it for every kid that's born. Oh sure, you can start them off right—protect their early years, give them love, and confidence in themselves. You can even build them a house with an upstairs.

"But it's not enough." Her eyes darkened in remembered pain. "What we need," she said, "is a world with an upstairs."

THE END

"Yoo-hoo! You forgot your change!"

SLOW BOAT TO ROMANCE

(Continued from page 38)

it really began one night some 11 years ago at a little café on Sixth Avenue near 50th Street in New York City. That afternoon, Pat Knight and Cornel had vowed themselves Mr. and Mrs. Wilde for keeps. They owned barely a bean between them and at that point they were blowing it on two incredibly extravagant filets mignon at $1.35 a copy and a bottle of wine to celebrate. And that was the works. A honeymoon trip? Out of the question. That took money, and there they were with no visible means of support. Fame? It was even more remote, although they both packed solid dreams about acting careers, fame and fortune—and those came true. But the price was hard work and no time for what Cornel dreamed about out loud that unforgettable evening.

"We'll go there someday on our honeymoon."

see the alps . . .

He pointed to the sign on the little café's window. "The Alps," he read backwards. "We'll see Switzerland," he promised, "and travel all over Europe and I'll show you all the things I've seen and—"

"I wonder," puzzled Pat, with a new wife's practical responsibility, "if we'll ever be able to afford it?"

"Of course not," grinned Cornell, "but we'll go anyway."

So now when the doc said what he said and his studio bowed to the inevitable and Cornel called up his business manager, who doles out the dough, and told him, "Pat and I want to go right away on a trip to Europe. Can we afford it?"

"No!" screamed the moneybags. "Absolutely not!"

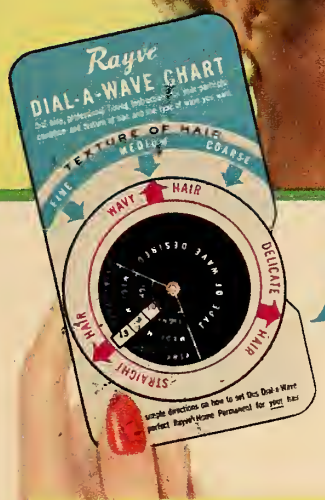
"Okay," nodded Cornell. "That's what I thought. We'll go anyway."

So, exactly 48 hours from the time they first latched on to the idea, the Wildes were piling aboard the plane at Los Angeles Airport. Studio pals had pitched in to help them get short order visas and those awful passport pictures they take to prove you're no spy. (Luckily, their daughter, Wendy, was snug in school, with a trusty couple at the Wilde house to tuck her into bed nights; and the French poodles, Punch, Pogo and Domino, were plenty well stocked with dog biscuits.)

It took a night in New York to visit Pat's and Cornel's families and then the Queen Elizabeth glided them through the Narrows and out to sea. . . .

Cornel and Pat had a week in Paris—a glorious week of wonders and wide-eyed draughts of beauty, fresh and intoxicating to them both. Pat had never been across the pond, and Cory's only other trips to Europe before had been when he was a baby and again at the age of 14, when his dad took him to visit his native Hungary—and he'd gone right there and back with hardly a boyhood peek at Paris . . . Paris, France! Hollywood seemed so far away—and they were just starting, with weeks and weeks of fun, adventure and romance ahead and not one touch of Hollywood anywhere around.

Then they walked back to the Hotel George V and into the bar for a martini before dinner.



"Well—perish forbid!" rasped a Brooklyn voice. "If it ain't Cornel and Pat. Leave us face it—it's a small woild."

"I give up," grinned Cornel. "Travel

BE SURE TO READ THE JUNE MODERN SCREEN—IT'S OUR SPECIAL SALUTE-TO-YOUTH ISSUE!

Dial your "Rayve Number"... and wave your hair at home without guesswork Rayve - the new personalized HOME PERMANENT with exclusive Dial-a-Wave is faster, yet gentler... easier, too!

Find your "Rayve Number" and get the one right wave for your kind of hair

You set the Dial-a-Wave that's in every Rayve kit for the texture and condition of your hair and the amount of wave you prefer . . . and up comes your "Rayve Number". This number is your personal guide to the special timing procedure that's best for your hair.

THERE'S NOTHING HIT OR MISS about a Rayve creme cold wave. It's personalized . . . for your hair. You can be confident of the most perfect permanent you ever had . . . for the unique Dial-a-Wave is an easy-to-use guide to the professionally correct timing procedure that's best for every type of hair.

RAYVE WAVING TIMES ARE UP TO TWICE AS FAST as ordinary home permanents. Yet Rayve's modern, improved formula makes the waving action noticeably gentler. And it's so easy. You don't even wear a turban . . . and the picture-booklet directions make it all as simple as putting your hair up in curlers.

LONG-LASTING—YET SOFTER, MORE NATURAL—No frizz, no fuzzy ends with Rayve. From the very first day, your hair feels satin-soft. And it looks so natural . . . behaves so beautifully . . . that once you've tried a Rayve Home Permanent you'll never be satisfied with any other wave.

At all leading drug and cosmetic counters

COMPLETE RAYVE KIT has everything for a perfect permanent, including 60 "easy-wind" plastic curlers, 80 extra-strong end papers, step-by-step directions, and the "Dial-a-Wave". $2

REFILL KIT with "Dial-a-Wave"—complete except for curlers and bands. $1

FROM THE FAMOUS RESEARCH LABORATORIES

6,000 miles to get away from Hollywood and the first guy I see is Ed Gardner—and, as usual, in a bar! Why aren't you back in Duffy's Tavern where you belong?"

So they had a drink with Ed and talked about—guess what—Hollywood! Then the phone rang and it was Bob Hutton with Cleatus Caldwell breaking in on the receiver. Seasoned Parisians of at least six weeks, they were in Paris making The Man on the Eiffel Tower. Then, next morning, they popped into the American Express for their mail, and who was getting his too, but Cary Grant. "Honey," wailed Pat, with mock gravity, "let's get out of here! If we don't watch out, we'll all be getting together and making a picture or something!" She didn't mean it, of course—there's no face more welcome than a face from home, in Paris or anywhere else. But their week was up, and they had plans—plans for two.

They remembered the advice of pianist Artur Rubenstein, who'd been at their table on the boat over. "Hire a car and driver and ramble south through France, Switzerland and Italy. You'll never know Europe until you do. You'll never forget what you see." That's how they happened to find themselves next day in the back seat of an ancient Packard with Albin, the Swiss chauffeur, grinning from ear to ear up front and constantly looking back to grin, "C'est jolie—n'est ce pas?" ("It's pretty—isn't it?") followed their noses . . .

Oui! It was. At least to Pat and Cornel's second-honeymoon eyes it was—all of it, every inch of the way.

First there was the trip south toward Switzerland. They started out with everything carefully mapped by the American Express—but set programs never have worked for Cornel. Their trail wound up looking like a mosquito's flight, because wherever and whenever they saw something they liked, and that was almost every minute, they pointed Albin that way and investigated. They slept in narrow little cubbyholes, up under eaves of the provincial taverns, strolled before breakfasts of croissants and black coffee through the angled streets and trim gardens—forgot who they were or where they were from or what a shooting schedule meant. . . .

They saw all they could of Switzerland. Interlaken sticks in their memories, particularly, with the towering Jungfrau mountain seemingly just outside their window. And Vevey and Montreux, where Cornel reaped another deep-seated thrill going through the castle of Chillon, the poet, Lord Byron's fantastic dream-spot beside its blue-green lake. Cory has long been absolutely fascinated by the life of Byron. He wrote Byron's story for the screen, longs above all to play the tragic young poet himself. Every niche and corner of Chillon was alive to him. Pat had to pry him away at last or he'd have tried to buy the place.

They left Switzerland, the sight-drunk Wildes, by the Gothard pass into Italy. That's the one where shaggy St. Bernard dogs used to tote brandy flasks, to help snowbound travelers keep alive. Pat and Cory didn't run into any portable bowser bars in the Gothard, but they wondered a few times if really they'd ever see the Italian slopes, alive. It wasn't the snow—it was Albin and his Packard. He careened them around curves built for a snake, and just when they'd be skirting, on one wailing tire, a wriggly ridge with nothing on either side except ozone, this Albin joker would bend his moustaches their way and beam "Magnifique?"

"Y-yes, wuh-oui, très magnifique!" Pat would squeak, holding on to Cornel for dear life.

But they made it—just like Bonaparte and Hannibal and all those other Alps crossers. Albin left them to fend for themselves in Lugano and Pat and Cornel hopped a train to Como for a look at the azure lake, then took another to Venice. They got the wrong one and instead of arriving in Venice that afternoon they dragged in with the milk past midnight.

The moon was silvering the waters of the lagoon lapping right under the balcony of their suite at the Royal Danieli. Late as it was, gondoliers still sang on the grand canal, accordions still played, and the paddles splashed. As far as they could see, until the moonlight faded, marble-like buildings, old and beautiful, stretched beside the gleaming water.

"We can't go to bed now," sighed Cornel. "This is what we set out to find. Magic."

HOW TIME FLIES!

Captain Blood introduces that handsome new star Errol Flynn, in the role of a buccaneer. He resists the temptation to overact, justifying the producer's faith in him with this first important role. He appeals to men, and the feminine fans will rave about him.
March 1936, Modern Screen

This engaged pair, Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable, are touring the country together in vaudeville.
March 1936, Modern Screen

And Barbara Stanwyck recently stepped out on her first unchaperoned date since the split-up with Frank Fay. We saw her at the Trocadero with that handsome young man about town, Bob Taylor.
May 1936, Modern Screen

"Magic," repeated Pat, and they drank it in until the silver turned to gold and the mother-of-pearl city woke up. Only then did the Wildes go to bed.

But there didn't seem to be any need for sleep in Venice; some tonic in the air kept them awake and doing things—and there were so many things to do. They cruised endlessly up and down the Grand Canal, the side canals, under the famous Bridge of Sighs. They visited the Venitian glass factories, sailed across to the Lido's famous strand for a day of bathing in the blue Adriatic and lazing on the white sands.

They'd planned five days in Venice—they were there three weeks. They never again quite matched the magic mood that stayed with them in Venice. Cornel celebrated his birthday there. For his present, Pat found some wonderful knights on horseback, swashbuckling little ceramic figurines in action poses. They had dinner for two that night in a restaurant overlooking St. Mark's Square, in a room alive with mosaics and frescoes, as the big gong in the clock tower outside signalled time which didn't exist, not even on birthdays. . . .

Throughout Italy, Cornel and Pat lived in a world of never-ending beauty and romance. Next to the beauty of Venice, the artistic wonders of Florence thrilled them most. The hotel there perched right over the Arno river, violet in the moonlight below their balcony, with the hills of Florence rolling rich and lovely before their eyes every time they stepped out.

And then they drove to Siena—and that's where the spell broke.

Cornel and Pat rented a car for the trip to Siena. They rolled at dusk into the medieval market-square, centuries old, and from the square trooped a familiar sight—a movie company breaking up—lights being trundled off, trucks coughing, extras streaming away. They knew they'd see that in Siena; that, of course, was why they'd made the trip up. Prince of Foxes was being made there, and even when you're lost in a dream trip—well, there's nobody like somebody from home.

friendly faces . . .

Ty Power was in Leo Shamroy's room when Cornel knocked on the door.

"Who is it?" asked Ty.

"Signor Corneli Weeldo."

"Who?" He got it again. Ty, frowning, flung open the door. Then— "Well, I'll be hanged!" he yelled when he saw Cornel. "I never heard anything so hokey in all my life as that Italian accent. You're fired!" So they grabbed each other—and soon Linda Christian was there and they had themselves an evening. Next day there was lunch and dinner in Tyrone's home located down near Rome. But in between, Cornel and Pat drove to the little town of San Gimignano, and lost themselves again in centuries gone by, for that tiny city of towers is exactly as it was in the Middle Ages.

Then they headed for Rome—and Rome might just as well have been Romanoff's, with all the Hollywood pictures shooting and about to be shot in the Eternal City, Ty and Linda and the Foxes crew came down from Siena at once and Henry King, Binnie Barnes, Mike Frankovich, Alan Curtis, Mikail Rasumny and a dozen more hometown faces met them wherever they went.

Still, there really is no place like Rome—and they had five weeks there. Weeks spent exploring the Catacombs, the Baths of Caracola, the Coliseum, visiting St. Paul's and the Vatican. Days dolling Pat up at last with the dresses she'd thriftily by-passed in Paris. For while she could resist Paris' Dior and Mainbocher, when it came to Rome's Fontana, Pat surrendered.

Then came wonderful news—a bulletin from Darryl Zanuck, that told Cornel he could stay on a few more weeks. Wonderful! So after they'd had their fill of Rome, they checked out of the Excelsior, rented another car and headed south for Naples, Pompeii, Amalfi. They flew on over to Sicily to visit Palermo, Taormina and Capri, riding the local trains and sharing their Swiss chocolates with the passengers.

As far as Cornel's mood was concerned, he could have dallied forever in Amalfi, surfing in the cobalt coves. That type of never-never existence is strictly his dish once he pulls himself off the hook of his ambition. Only, about the time Pat and Cory got to talking about sending for Wendy and the poodles and beachcombing in luxurious poverty the rest of their lives—well, they got a sample of what it would be like. They ran out of money. And that, Cory discovered, isn't so good—not even in Italy.

It took a full week's sleuthing to locate the Hollywood bank draft that had mysteriously disappeared in Rome (it wound up at the wrong bank) and by the time Cornel located the missing moolah, there was that fatal cable from the boss saying, "How about that back? Aren't you well yet? When can you get to work?"

And Pat and Cory Wilde found themselves winging their way back across the Alps, not quite as scenic or convivial a trip as with Albin and his Packard, but lots easier on the blood pressure. And lovely old Paris still looked wonderful to Pat and Cornel.

Luckily, they had a full week before their plane took off for home to sample its civilized delights again. They saw all the sights they'd missed the first time, by day and by night, with Bob Hutton, Cleatus Caldwell, Franchot Tone, Burgess Meredith and some other fun-loving Hollywood expatriates, the Wildes did their best to see what Paris After Dark was like. In fact, Pat and Cory wound up their holiday in a blaze of fun, frolic and champagne.

home at last . . .

Then, after 14 hours straight snoozing in the airborne hay, they landed at La-Guardia Airport in New York—and if Cornel had any doubts about being back home they vanished when the cab driver tossed him a belligerent look. They'd been so formal and courteous all through Europe.

"Okay, Mac," barked the cabbie. "I ain't got all day. Where to?"

And they knew for sure they were home next morning, when they rolled up the eucalyptus-shaded drive of their Benedict Canyon home and the door popped open and a boiling mass of three dogs—Pogo, Punch and Domino—with Wendy all mixed up in the middle, swarmed over them with frenzied yelps and little girl screams of delight, wanting to know—

"What did you bring me?"

Well—there were two lovely Leuchi dolls that roll their eyes and talk, and some blue porcelain poodle dogs from Paris, and little dresses and coats tailored by the finest dressmakers, and boxes and boxes of yummy Swiss chocolat, and a necklace of beautiful seashells from Capri.

As Cornel and Pat Wilde watched Wendy unwrap the presents, they sank happy but tired, into the heavy armchairs of their own familiar front room and looked at each other. What they said was what they'd been saying all those lovely, wonderful gateway months.

"C'est jolie, n'est ce pas?"

Only this time they had a special way of saying it and a special way of meaning it—which, translated into plain Hollywood American meant simply, "There's no place like home." Or so Pat and Cornel truly thought.

But now, of course, Cory's back at work—but in Hollywood? Not exactly. He's in Zermatt, Switzerland, making The Skiing Story which only shows again what beautifully crazy things can happen to a Hollywood star. Cornel had just two months at home sweet home and then the starring job he came back for turned out to be right back where he had been having the time of his life!

Sure, Pat went right along with him—and this time Wendy, too. This trip's supposed to be strictly business. But the way Pat and Cory feel, any business in Switzerland comes under the heading of high romance. And if a second honeymoon for the Wildes could pack such a load of thrills—what's wrong with a Third? THE END

THE JUNE MODERN SCREEN IS THE BIG, LONG-AWAITED SALUTE-TO-YOUTH ISSUE!

Spring Garden

THE GLORIOUS NEW DESIGN IN SILVERPLATE BY HOLMES & EDWARDS

Sweet Spring Garden!
So gay, so adorable!

At last, all the bright glory of springtime has been captured in silverplate by master designers.

First, you see tiny flowerets deeply carved upon a gleaming surface...and at the very tip, a gay surprise! Bursting forth in all its fresh beauty, is a delicate budding flower. A brilliant touch, that forever will give distinction to Spring Garden.

And terribly important: Spring Garden is Sterling Inlaid silverplate with two blocks of sterling silver inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks to keep it lovelier longer. The 52 piece service for 8 is only $68.50 with chest.

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

HERE AND HERE
It's Sterling Inlaid

MADE BY THE INTERNATIONAL SILVER CO.

★ Special Introductory Offer!

4 FIVE O'CLOCK TEASPOONS FOR ONLY $1.89

These lovely spoons in the new Spring Gorden Design are ideal for desserts, ice cream ond sherbet. At oll jewelry and department stores for a limited time only.

Copyright 1949, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Plan your Summer around

Dan River's Background Stripes

This smart cotton basic suggests dozens of new plots with accessories. It's Dan River's new chambray stripe, woven of combed cotton, tubbable as a hanky. Fast color, Sanforized.*

Dan River Mills, Inc.

Dress by Betty Hartford. Green, fuchsia or yellow with gray. Sizes 10 to 18. About $9 at Stern Bros., New York; G. Fox & Co., Hartford; Woodward & Lothrop, Washington D. C.; Famous & Barr Co., St. Louis; Carson, Pirie Scott & Co., Chicago; The Denver Dry Goods Co., Denver.

*Fabric shrinkage no more than 1%

crisp cottons steal the show

connie bartel, fashion editor

■ The crisp look is the high-fashion look, and what could be crisper than stiff-starched, crackling-fresh cottons?

Cottons, natch, have always been everybody's love for hot weather fashions, but they've never been such a smash hit as this season. Cottons are all over the place—in playclothes, street clothes, date clothes.

In this issue we concentrate on crisp cottons both bare and covered—and we especially dote on peel-as-you-go jacket jobs; you wear the jacket for a chic town look on the street—you peel it off to show a sunback whenever you get the chance!

And while we were pursuing the best sunbacks for the easiest prices, we were especially proud to snag a honey for half sizes (page 80). You know that Modern Screen has always had a special interest in you girls who wear half sizes—and we think the nifty on page 80 has all the oomph you ask for—especially proportioned for you.

janet leigh wears demure checks from "little women"

■ We'd like to meet the girl who can come away from MGM's "Little Women" without a burning yen to wear the costumes therein . . . they're that irresistible.

To keep you from hankering hopelessly, here's a dress adapted straight from one which Janet Leigh wears as "Meg." Its tucked yoke, dropped sleeves, and faintly hoop-like deep hem are as appealing now as they were when the March girls wore them in Old Concord. (P.S. It has the kind of look men have always loved.)

It's made in Ameritex's pink and green checked chambray, with pink sash, collar and piping. Also in chamois and brown or lilac and gold. Sizes 9-15.

By Saba of California—about $18.

For where to buy, see page 76.

modern screen fashions

COTTONS

Covered

We've got you covered for that first warm day—when you crave something summery, but not too nude. Here's super-sophistication with V-shaped stripes to make the most of your figure—semi-plunging V neckline to tuck a rose in. Crisp woven satin stripe chambray in brown, navy or green. 12-20. By Sorority Frocks, about $8.98. Wanamaker's, N. Y., Madigan's Chicago, other stores, page 76.

COTTONS

uncovered

We've got you uncovered when you want to show as much bare skin as possible—as boldly as possible. Who could fail to see you coming in those big crisp checks? Who could over-look the huge pique eyelet-embroidered daisy blossoming on your skirt—and repeated on your stole? And—what pretty shoulders you have! It's Dan River gingham in red, blue, green or lilac. 9-15. By Vicky Vaughn Jrs. Dress with stole, about $8. Stores, page 76

Gold-edged sandals by Parkhill Casuals, $3

WORN BY BEATRICE (BEBE) SHOPP
MISS AMERICA—1948

A Catalina Convertible* of Celanese and Lastex knit boucle, $12.00

*can be worn with or without straps
*Registered

The suit always worn by America's most glamorous beauties—who compete for the title of Miss America at Atlantic City! A sleek Catalina in Celanese and Lastex knit boucle, $12.00

THE Catalina SELECTED

"Official Swim Suit of the Miss America Pageant"

LOOK FOR THE FLYING FISH

For illustrated booklet of other Catalina styles, write Catalina, Inc. Dept. 623 • 443 S. San Pedro St., Los Angeles 13, Calif.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY

(Prices on merchandise may vary throughout country)

Pink and green checked dress inspired by "Little Women," and worn by Janet Leigh in full color photograph (page 73)

Austin, Tex.—Yaring's, Junior Shop, 2nd Floor

Long Beach, Calif.—Walker's, 4th & Pine Sts., Hi-Teen Shop, 2nd Floor

Striped dress with semi-plunging neckline (page 74)

Chicago, Ill.—Madigan's, 4030 Madison St., Cotton Shop, 2nd Floor

New York, N. Y.—Wanamaker's, Broadway & 9th St., Moderate Priced Dresses, 3rd Floor

San Antonio, Texas—Frost Brothers, 217 E. Houston St., 4th Floor

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Addis Co., 449 S. Salina St., 2nd Floor

Checked sunback dress with stole, pique daisies (page 75)

Chicago, Ill.—Marshall Field & Co., 121 N. State St., Budget Floor

New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Junior Dresses, Basement

Rochester, N. Y.—Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 250 E. Main St., Better Dress Dep't., Downstairs

St. Louis, Mo.—Stix, Baer & Fuller, Washington Ave. & 6th St., Jr. Dept., Downstairs Store

Paisley print sunback dress, matching jacket (page 78)

Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co., State, Madison & Monroe Sts., Tub-em Shop, 2nd Floor

Dallas, Texas—A. Harris & Co., Main & Elm Sts., Budget Dress Shop, 2nd Floor

Los Angeles, Calif.—Broadway Dept. Store, Broadway & 4th Sts., House & Town Shop, 3rd Floor

New York, N. Y.—McCreery's, 34th St. & 5th Ave., Cotton Dresses, 2nd Floor

St. Louis, Mo.—See next page

MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

St. Louis, Mo.—Stix, Baer & Fuller, Washington Ave. & 6th St., Daytime Dresses, 2nd Floor

Eyelet trimmed sunback dress, matching peplum jacket (page 79)

Akron, Ohio—The M. O'Neil Co., 226 S. Main St., Jr. Dresses, Downstairs Store

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St., Downstairs

Columbus, Ohio—F. & R. Lazarus & Co., High & Town Sts., Junior Misses Dresses, Downstairs

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Boston Store, W. Wisconsin Ave. & 4th St., Junior Fashions, Downstairs Store

Half-size sunback dress, matching jacket with dark lapels and collar (page 80)

Akron, Ohio—The M. O'Neil Co., 226 S. Main St., Daytime Dresses, 3rd Floor

New York, N. Y.—McCreery's, 34th St. & 5th Ave., Women's Dresses, 5th Floor

how to buy
modern screen fashions

buy in person

Go to the store in your city listed in the Where to Buy Directory, and be sure to go directly to the proper department and floor, which are also listed.

To save even more time, take along the Modern Screen photo of the fashion you want. If you haven't the page from the magazine, be sure to tell the sales girl you saw it in Modern Screen.

If no store in your city is listed, write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.

buy by mail

Order by Check from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Order by Money Order from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Order by C. O. D. from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Artcarved
diamond and wedding rings
NEW YORK · LONDON · AMSTERDAM · ANTWERP

Choose your ring by name—by trusted name—Artcarved.
Artcarved diamond rings are made by America's oldest and largest ringmaker. He brings you fine diamonds never before worn . . . performs and controls every step in the making of an Artcarved ring, from the rough diamond and molten gold to the finished product. This complete control and protection, by Artcarved expert craftsmen, results in savings which are passed on to you in better values—better prices. Genuine Artcarved diamond rings are registered and guaranteed. At your jeweler's, look for the name Artcarved in the ring, on the tag.
Diamond rings $75 to $5000 Wedding rings from $8

GOWN BY CASTILLO OF ELIZABETH ARDEN

MILFORD SET, an outstanding value in yellow gold. Engagement ring, $275. Wedding ring, $92.50. Groom's ring, $125.
Prices include Fed. tax.

FREE! "How to Select Your Diamond Ring," a new, illustrated booklet. Write to J. R. Wood & Sons, Inc., Dept. S-4, 216 E. 45th St., New York 17, N. Y.
Rings enlarged to show detail *Trade Mark Reg.

Artcarved · Beloved by brides for 99 years (1850-1949)

The smart costumes on these pages and pages 74-75 were recently featured by the National Association of House Dress Manufacturers at a glittering fashion show at the Waldorf Astoria—to celebrate the Association's 50th Anniversary. Half century ago these low prices bought only house dresses—today they buy high fashion!

■ That fashion model look again —to make masculine necks crane. And when you take off the jacket—behold, a breathtaking sunback to wear all summer. Sophisticated cotton paisley print in red, green or black. Sizes 12-20. By Wildman—$10.98.
For where to buy, see page 76

jackets to cover

sunbacks to bare

Magazine cover come-hither—frosted eyelet embroidery on a perky peplum and button-back sleeves. Underneath, a smart sunback. Jr. butcher rayon.
Green, blue, lilac, navy, grey melon, chartreuse, aqua, brown pink, beige, yellow. Sizes 9-15
By Vicky Vaughn Jrs. $8.
For where to buy, see page 77

jacket to cover, sunback to bare

and it's a half-size!

Know how hard it is to find a sunback (good and bare) . . .
with jacket (really smart) . . .
in a half-size? Yes?
Then you'll know what a scoop this knockout scroll print is.
The jacket has veddy high-fashion dark lapels and collar—the sundress is beautifully moulded. In Bates printed cotton, in rose, powder blue or olive green.
Half-sizes 12½-20½.
By Mynette—$8.95.
At McCreery's, New York City.
Other stores, page 77

WE'RE TOGETHER AGAIN

(Continued from page 50)

ago New Year's Eve in Oklahoma, was centered around our home. We decided we'd guide our careers so we could spend as much time as possible together—as a family. Dale made one rule we haven't broken yet—that there must always be one of us present at home every night to have dinner with the children, to tell them their bedtime story, to hear their prayers and, of course, to fetch them that last-minute glass of water they never fail to ask for after they're all tucked in neatly.

Having dinner with the children every night is very important to us. It's more than just a chance to enjoy them—it's the process of finding out what's really going on with them, what they're thinking about and which way they're headed.

Little Dusty sits in his high chair (around which Roy has fastened a belt with holsters and toy guns.—Dale) and, small as he is, gets a sense of the whole family of which he is a member. He already knows he's an individual—but, bit by bit, he has to learn that he's also a member of a group and must fit into it pleasantly and cooperatively.

Things come up daily with Cheryl and Linda Lou that I want to know about. Let's say, for instance, that Linda has lost her watch and wants another. But I learn that she carelessly left the watch over night in her open school locker. That's hardly the sort of deed for which she should receive the reward of a new watch. She agrees, after it is pointed out to her—and promises to earn the new watch by good deed and deportment.

her two front teeth . . .

Cheryl is losing her first teeth—especially in front—and she's always asking, "What shall I do about my snaggy mouth?" What bothers her most is that she's a fan of Rocky Lane, the Western star, and would have me invite him to dinner—if it weren't for her teeth. "Of course, you could keep your mouth shut," is Linda's suggestion to her. (I can see that these two girls are going to help each other in life, even if it'll be a mite painful at times!)

All this is the best part of living for me, because I know how fast youngsters can grow up and out of your life. I remember how it was with my sisters at home. One day I had three sisters. The next, it seems, they were gone—married and in their own homes.

This is how Dale and I figured we would live—close to home— when we thought we were to go on acting together in the same pictures. It was a good program on that basis. Then came the studio ruling splitting us up into separate films. It was a kind of staggerer. We talked it over but I left the decision to Dale. She made it—she voted to stay home.

(But not to rest! We had just bought the old Noah Beery house in the Hollywood Hills and my first little job was to sew up 15 sets of white marquisette curtains for 15 big, fat windows plus necessary draperies that I wanted to hang just so. I thanked my stars that my mother introduced me to a sewing machine early and often when I was a little girl down in Uvalde, Texas.—Dale)

Dale's reasoning was simple. She figured she could have gone on in other pictures but the shooting schedules would never be the same, one of us would be working

THE JUNE MODERN SCREEN IS THE SUPER SALUTE-TO-YOUTH ISSUE—DON'T MISS IT!

Two... on the aisle

2.98

ORDER BY MAIL

Send for FREE 1949 Catalog

Surefire Sellouts everywhere . . . In Black, Green, Red, Blue, Grey, Yellow, White suede finish.

3½ to 9, Mediums.

Vicki OF BOSTON

VICKI OF BOSTON D-5
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS. B

Please send me_____Prs. Sellouts @ 2.98

STYLE	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
BEST BEAU
LACEY

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State_____
Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐
Send check or money order and we will pay postage. Customer agrees to pay postal charges on C. O. D.'s.

HELP WIN THE GREATEST FIGHT OF ALL—
GIVE TO THE DAMON RUNYON
MEMORIAL FUND FOR CANCER RESEARCH
Send contributions to
Dan Parker, The Mirror, 235 E. 45th St., N. Y. 17, N. Y.

New! The California Sun Goddess!

ALL LEATHER!
Filmland's favorite for playtime, date-time, anytime wear!

NEW SPRING SHADES
Leman
White
Black
Green
Brown
Sky Blue
Red

Sizes 3½ to 9
MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE!

Save $$$—Order direct from Hollywood! SEND NO MONEY!

HAROLD'S OF HOLLYWOOD
Dept.55-D West Branch, Hollywood 46, Calif.

Style	Pairs	Size	1st Color Choice	2nd Color Choice Arrowhead
Malibu
Palm Springs

I will pay postmon plus postage and C.O.D. charges.
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ZONE___STATE_____
Save money! Enclose payment, Harold's will pay postage alone...

because she doesn't know

LOVE can be lost... romance ruined if you offend with perspiration odor. So stop it before it starts!

DRYAD—Jergens new kind of deodorant actually stops the decaying action of bacteria...the chief cause of embarrassing perspiration odor...before it starts!

Its complete deodorizing action keeps you sweet to love and adore.

APPROVED by leading skin specialists. Harmless to clothes.

SMOOTH as face cream as long as it lasts. 10¢, 29¢, 59¢.

Dryad stops it before it starts

JERGENS NEW KIND OF DEODORANT

when the other wasn't, and instead of pictures taking up four or five months of our time during the year it would run up to eight or ten months. Since you have to leave the house before the children are even up when you're working, and you come home plenty tired in the evening, there would have been precious little home life together for us. We still worked together on our Sunday radio show with Gabby Hayes, and of course, Dale went along on my ten-weeks rodeo tour, and on the other personal appearance trips I made.

(So did the children, on our last trip, which was to Kansas City. When we told them they could go, Cheryl and Linda had their bags packed two weeks before it was time to leave and kept asking every five minutes whether it wasn't time to start yet.—Dale)

But as far as her picture career was concerned—well, as Dale put it, "I guess if the master of ceremonies on a quiz show asks me what I do my reply will just be, 'Housewife'."

(But once I acted! That was when I brought Dusty to the studio barber for his first haircut and I had to whoop and dance and emote in front of him to keep him from howling.—Dale)

We had a chance to pitch in together at fixing up the house. Even the children got in on it, too. That was when we all took part in what they called a "treasure hunt," but what was really a fireplace hunt. You see, our playroom had no fireplace, but it's right under the living room which did have one—and I wondered if the flue didn't extend downward in the wall to the playroom. I talked about it for weeks and Cheryl Arlene and Linda were all for investigating and finding out. One day I gave in, took a heavy hammer, and we all went down to the playroom. There was a plaster wall where the fireplace should be. I cracked at it a couple of times, the plaster fell away, and there, under it, was the brick of a swell fireplace! Cheryl and Linda cheered. Dale, who'd been set against ruining what she called a perfectly good wall, just said, "Hmmm!"

(What would you say if you saw your husband take a sledge hammer and start knocking your home off its foundation? Especially if you lived on top of a hill and could just imagine everything coming tumbling down to land in a heap in the middle of Vine street?—Dale) i know what i'm doing . . .

It was nice having Dale home, because whenever I was between pictures she was right there ready to come along if I wanted to go hunting or make some other trip. I introduced her to coon and bobcat hunting down at Lake Henshaw where we went with ten coon dogs.

(All in the same car with us!—Dale)

And Dale got a bobcat, too.

(Was that what that was?—Dale)

And I took Dale on a visit to the place where I was born and raised—Duck Run, Ohio—and showed her the two-story house that my dad and I built. There was a purpose to this—I plan to do a lot more fixing around our new home and I wanted her to feel that I know what I'm doing when I get a chisel and a saw in my hand.

(I'm not worried about the chisel and saw. It's the sledge hammer that bothers me.—Dale)

We could have gone on nicely like that, with just one of us working in pictures, but whenever we made personal appearances people kept asking Dale why she'd retired. On top of that—well, an unusual thing happened as far as her popularity was concerned. Usually when a player in Hollywood stops being active, her fan mail starts dropping off and pretty soon she's well on the way to being forgotten by her former audience. But this didn't happen with Dale. The folks kept writing and asking about her. So many wrote and so often that her fan mail began to increase steadily and was soon more than double what it had ever been before!

That fact, plus the letters that were coming by the thousands addressed to the studio, finally got the production heads thinking and they insisted that Dale come back. But that's where Dale had her say.

"As long as I'm on the radio with Roy, and I'm making personal appearances with him, there should be no further objection to my being in the same picture with him," she told them. There was no argument—well, not much of an argument, as Hollywood arguments go—and Susanna Pass in which Dale is once more my heart interest, was the answer.

super-chef roy . . .

If the shooting schedule calls for a lot of dialogue shots, Dale and I can go over them and rehearse at home after the children are asleep. That means I, for one, sleep better, knowing that I'm up on my lines. And towards the end of the week, we don't have to start worrying about going over our Sunday radio program. We can look it over on a Thursday or Friday, in between picture shots. All our work dovetails nicely. And, of course, our home life. I can even do some of the shopping for home, and some of the cooking.

(The only shopping Roy does is for scrap bones for his dogs and for chickens for our table. He likes to buy chicken fryers whole and cut them up himself instead of letting the butcher do it. He claims the butchers don't take the time and trouble to hunt for the joints and just cut or chop through "approximately." This makes for splintered joints, which Roy thinks are dangerous for the children. But the best fun he has is getting into his red pickup truck and going hunting for bones. He'll drive up an alley to the back of a restaurant and disappear into the kitchen where he has probably made friends with the cook. Pretty soon he's back, lugging a carton full of greasy bones. As soon as the dogs at home catch sight of the truck and smell his cargo they start howling the hills down. As for the cooking, the only cooking he does is when he prepares a "late snack" if we're having a party. But this, the way he does it, becomes a project. His object seems to be to find something that won't mix in an omelette. So far he hasn't come across this, even though he's used everything he could find in the kitchen including chili, pickles, left-over hamburger, biscuits, any kind of cooked vegetable, cheeses, jams, and the children's cookies. But his own favorite dish is not an omelette. It's beans. They can be boiled, fried, roasted, cold or burnt—he loves 'em. That, all his friends agree, is the real cowboy in him.—Dale)

Yes, sir, it's just like old times—and I'm sure thankful to the fans, to MODERN SCREEN, and to everyone who brought my Dale back to me. Just think—in three-and-a-half years, up to the time of our marriage, we made 24 pictures together! I don't have to tell you that we got so we could sail through a scene, no matter how tough it was, because we were comfortable with each other, knew just how the other worked. And then, just because we moved even closer together in our personal lives, we had to split up professionally!

But that's all over now. I'm a happy man again. Dale is right next to me—and all I have to do is look through the window to see old Trigger tied to a post.

(I knew it! I knew he'd have to get his old Trigger into this somewhere!—Dale)

THE END

TRAVELING MAN

(Continued from page 24)

first-hand the tremendous developments of a seething era.

He'd planned to return home for Christmas. But in Paris, he encountered his friend, the Pulitzer Prize playwright and novelist, Thornton Wilder. And first thing you know, Monty, Wilder, Wilder's sister and another friend had decided to go to Switzerland and ski.

We asked Monty about his skiing talents. "Oh, I'm a great skier!" he said. "The fact that I can't ski doesn't faze me a bit."

When the skiing was concluded—with Monty unfractured—Paramount scouts tracked him down and flew him back to Hollywood for one day's retakes on Paramount's The Heiress. A few days later, Monty turned up in London again.

he conquers london . . .

And now he found there'd been a considerable change in the climate. Red River had opened in London. And in Red River, Monty had knocked London for a loop.

C. A. LeJeune, the critic Britons read when they want it straight, said:

"Mr. Clift is not at all the sort of person you would normally expect to find in a cow opera. Although he has a way with a horse that suggests he might have been born to the saddle, his way with a part makes it clear that he has been trained, and very thoroughly trained, too, in the theater. . . .

"There are actors who give the screen a kind of electric quality. When, as in Mr. Clift's case, obviously trained intelligence is added to this gift of nature, the result is really something to shout about."

Other critics had more to say, along the same line—and stodgy, hungry, weary old London sat up and took notice of this young upstart from America who had blazed across the skies.

Thus, when Monty wanted to go to the same little hotel where he'd stayed before, the Paramount people said, "This cannot be!" They set him up in a swank hotel suite in the center of town. And then the telephone started to ring. It didn't seem ever to stop ringing .

The British wanted to get acquainted personally with the 28-year-old American fellow who, they decided, was the most intriguing movie personality in years. They wanted to lionize him, dine him, wine him, photograph him, grab his autograph and drag him to first nights.

Three days and three nights of this sort of business and the Clift boy, the one who usually picks his own friends, hotel rooms, crooners, and motion pictures, moved out. A Paramount man who had an extra room-and-bath in his apartment offered it to Monty, who gratefully accepted.

"It's just a little bit confusing," Montgomery Clift admitted as we sat sipping sherry with him. He leaned back on a comfortable old fireside couch and clasped his hands behind his head. "I certainly don't think my job in Red River was anything startling. But then—well, I guess it's hard to judge yourself in a movie. It just doesn't seem anything like what you'd hoped for. What you finally see up there on the screen so often seems far removed from what you were trying to do."

We observed that the public, besides admiring his screen work, seemed very curious to know about his private life.

"My private life?" sighed Monty. "Ah, the inevitable questions: What girl have I been chasing? What girl am I chasing? What girl am I going to chase tomorrow? The dull truth, I suppose, is that I don't pursue my private life in public. Otherwise—well, you know what happens. You're seeing a girl—the press gets hold of it—blows it into a big romance—and from then on everybody starts playing games. . . . Incidentally, some people seem to think it's mysterious that I don't shuttle from one expensive night club to another. There's no mystery about that." He grinned. "I'm just too darned cheap."

What about the London bobby-soxers? Had he had any mob-scenes with them?

"If you mean any fights for life," smiled Monty, "no. The English kids seem very sincere. It's as if they looked on you as a friend—not as an inanimate object. At home in the States—boy, they sure do get intense."

He turned the discussion to Sir Laurence Olivier, with whom he had recently dined. ("Imagine me having supper with the Oliviers!" said Monty.) Olivier is currently occupied with his usual combination actor-director employment at the famous Old Vic theater.

"I've been an admirer of his for some time," he said. "What I most admire is the kind of man Olivier must be to be the kind of actor he is. He's a man with all the endowments of nature—his face is actually noble, something you can say about almost no one—and to him, all the easy avenues of success are open. If he'd taken these roads, by now he'd be a very different man—certainly not the arresting actor he is today."

There's a prevalent idea that Clift would far rather act on the stage than on the screen. This Monty firmly denies. "As a matter of fact, film work to me is fascinating—it can be tremendously so. The camera makes it possible to be far more subtle than you can be on the stage. I should imagine that a director—tackling, say, a certain theme both in a play and a picture—would get greater satisfaction from a well-done movie. He has an infinite variety of things at his command which enable him to create a mood—sustain it—and once it's done to his satisfaction, it's printed—and there it is for good."

he knows where he's going . . .

But he does like the theater?

"Yes, I do. Actually, the challenge of acting on the stage is greater than in the movies. There's no coasting along on personality alone. If you have a long part, you have to sustain it all evening until the curtain comes down, eight performances a week. And if the play's a hit, it may run a year or two. The trick is to try and find an interesting flop—something that won't run forever . . . I guess you can see how naturally lazy I am!"

And what did he plan to do next?

"I really have no idea. When I go back to America in a few days, I'll start reading scripts—and just pray that one comes along that'll be interesting enough to warrant giving up this lovely lazy life I'm leading."

And until an interesting part comes along, he's going to "sit around, read, travel and study a little."

Clift is fond of traveling, and, in addition to the European tour he is just completing, he has been to Cuba and Mexico. One day he hopes to go to Rio de Janeiro.

Yes, Montgomery Clift is going places. But one thing is certain: He's going where he wants. THE END

Sea Nymph

swim suits by jordan

fashion for splashin'

a richly shirred suit in Satin Lastex, with eye-catching Candy Stripes of alternating Jet and Color. (The boned strapless bra insures molded firm fit.)

Sea Nymph has created it to accent your youth, in combinations of Jet, Aqua, Gold and Coral.

Sizes 32 to 38. About $8.95

at smart stores. Write and we'll tell you where!

JORDAN MANUFACTURING CORP.
1410 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

JUST ONE OF THOSE THINGS

(Continued from page 22)

the hundreds and thousands of couples to whom this is happening every week."

Well, that's something. Just try to delve into the facts behind any Hollywood divorce and the immediate excuse is "not guilty and not guilty by reason of career trouble." Then, after this monotonous alibi is dutifully recorded by a bored press, the next breath brings the announcement that one or both parties already has selected a prospect for future mating.

This is a different story. One in which the disillusionment is frankly exposed, with no pussyfooting. Both Diana and Kirk Douglas are well aware that the news of their separation came as a shock to Hollywood friends.

From the beginning, Diana and Kirk were sensible. They chose to live in unfashionable Laurel Canyon; to avoid night life; to make a point of conservative living, free of debt and fancy Hollywood ideas.

As Kirk puts it, "We'd heard fantastic stories about marriage in Hollywood and were determined that it wouldn't happen to us. When we faced our own failure it was a tough chore for Diana to call her family by long distance, and for me to call mine and break the news. I know that to them and to anyone else our determination not to file for divorce now, but to stay apart for at least two months until we know what must be done, may seem an old story. Ancient theme or not, we at least aren't carrying on the sham of pretending to live happily together—and all we ask is a chance to work out our problem just as young couples in cities all over the country are trying to do. Personally, I am frankly ashamed to admit that I can't quite understand what has made our life so complex."

This wasn't always so with Doug, who came out of the small town of Amsterdam, New York, the son of Russian-born parents. There was no confusion in him then. He was poor. His parents were proud and thrifty, but there were six sisters. Kirk thought nothing of working his way, going through St. Lawrence University, from which he secured his degree, partially financed by the money he earned as a wrestler.

boy meets girl . . .

Then he took off for the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. So too, did Diana Dill, whose father was a government official in Bermuda. Diana had never faced poverty, but in the pursuit of acting she placed herself on an equal footing with all comers and refused to trade on the family background. There was nothing of the snob in this girl who met and began to date Kirk, who by now had become proficient at bell-hopping in order to pay rent on his hall bedroom. Diana then might have become his steady girl except that Warners signed her to a contract and sent her to Hollywood. That put an end to their "if-you-have-a-dime-I'll-treat-you-to-a-soda" relationship.

For Kirk, the going was tougher, for a while. He played two small Broadway bits, one as a singing messenger boy in the Grace George play, Spring Again; the other as a disembodied echo in Three Sisters. Then he caught on as the juvenile lead in the smash hit, Kiss and Tell. Meantime, Diana and Kirk lost track of each other. She didn't even know that he'd gone into the Navy, and he wasn't aware that Diana's Warners job had folded up and she had returned to New York—until one evening when he returned to his room at Notre Dame where he was in training for anti-submarine warfare.

Kirk's roommate flipped him a copy of Life magazine. "Get a load of that girl on the cover. How'd you like a date with that?"

"Well, well!" Kirk retorted. "I'd like it! I'd like to date her again the way I used to."

"Haw!" said the roommate.

So Kirk sat down and wrote the girl on the cover a letter. In a few days he waved a reply at his unbelieving roommate.

"Haw!" Kirk said. "And me loaded for the first time in my life. A leave coming up and me fat with pay."

Kirk had $189 when he hit New York. He looked up Diana. They went dancing on the Starlight Roof. They had a front row table at the Copacabana. They saw plays, had night caps at the Penthouse Club, rode the length of Fifth Avenue on bus tops, held hands, fell in love and said goodbye.

Kirk was ordered to New Orleans. Diana went back to modeling. She was in Phoenix when Ensign Douglas called her.

"Guess what?" she exclaimed. "I'm heading for New York. I may do a play."

"Great!" said Kirk. "Why not go by way of New Orleans?"

Diana thought about it. She took off for New Orleans. They were married by a chaplain in the Naval chapel on the station with Kirk's fellow officers in attendance. Their honeymoon in the romantic Southern city was a breathless affair because Kirk knew that every day would be his last before they shipped him out.

But they actually had a month together before they parted, Diana to return to New York, Kirk to climax his career in the Navy when wounded by a depth bomb which slammed him against the deck, causing injuries serious enough to bring him a discharge.

After his recovery, Kirk climbed back into civvies and headed for New York, where he and Diana settled down to life in Greenwich Village with baby Michael, who is now four. They lived on 11th Street, right next door to St. John's Church. Life had flavor and excitement. Kirk picked up some good money in radio, some short change in plays that opened and folded with startling rapidity.

Then came The Wind Is Ninety and an offer from Hal Wallis.

Kirk discussed it with Diana. "I want no part of movies. They tell me you fall apart in Hollywood, lose your vision."

"Right," Diana agreed. "That's what you do. I certainly had enough of it."

Ten days later, with the play closed, Kirk came to the realization that he was stony broke. No work in sight. He thought about that offer from the Coast and next day he was on the train. In Chicago he sent Diana a wire: GET ME. I'M ON MY WAY TO THAT AWFUL PLACE CALLED HOLLYWOOD. WILL EXPLAIN LATER.

He did, in a long letter. Diana and Michael followed him West and in later family sessions it was agreed that Hollywood wasn't so bad, particularly the way the critics greeted Kirk in The Strange Love of Martha Ivers.

fond parents . . .

Now everything was fine. Really fine. Joel, who is now two, arrived. Eight pictures and one play went by. Kirk scored heavily in A Letter to Three Wives and Champion. (He's sensational in Champion.)

Diana, whose career hadn't progressed beyond modeling, did well in The Sign of the Ram and Let's Live Again. Live again? They were living now—but—

"But Diana's career had nothing to do with it," Kirk says. "Last year we were able to adjust our working schedules for a second honeymoon in Bermuda. When Diana has been working, I frequently haven't been—so that between us I think we've had more time with our children than the average couple not in the movies."

The kids?

When Kirk says, "How about a ride?" Michael invariably protests. "Naw, Dad, who wants an automobile? Let's go hiking up in the hills." So they do. "You have no idea how many Indian outbreaks have been taking place recently up in Laurel Canyon," Kirk grins.

Then, quietly, he says, "The youngsters couldn't have a more wonderful mother. I'm not trying to be noble about anything. Diana and I have simply found that we disagree seriously on many things that would seem ridiculous if we paraded them.

"We used to laugh at the dozens of articles in magazines by matrimonial experts and psychiatrists, trying to explain and remedy the divorce fever that seems to be sweeping across the country with increasing fury. We agreed that perhaps if there weren't so many people explaining people to each other, couples might have a better chance to stay happy.

"Now it's no longer a joke. If the solution of our problem involved someone else, perhaps the break might be easier in one respect. We could at least have a healthy hate for each other. But it's a case of the two of us standing at the crossroads and not knowing which way to go, for the sake of our children first and ourselves secondarily. We've tried to say to ourselves, 'Oh stop it, kids, and get back together—remember all you once meant to each other.' That hasn't worked.

"So we've reached the decision without any self sympathy. We hate to invoke such a trite term as 'trial separation.' That's not it. We've simply stopped being married to each other for a period of time until we make up our minds. Fortunately, our children are so young and our work of such a nature that they are used to our being away from them often and don't mind it. Anyhow, I still see those two boys of mine almost as much as before.

"Above all, Diana and I haven't lost our respect for each other. We hope that our ultimate decision—whatever it may be—will be right."

THE END

memo

date: elizabeth taylor time: may 10
place: june cover of modern screen

Tonight!..Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP!
NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S
RICH LATHERING
CREAM SHAMPOO
WITH LANOLIN

for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; smaller jars and tubes, 49¢ and 25¢—Kay Daumit, Inc. 919 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight...if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today! It's Kay Daumit's exclusive blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin.

This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

Which Twin has the Toni?

(and which has the $15 beauty shop wave? Answer below.)

More than 2 million women a month use Toni ... the wave that gives that natural look!

See how flattering a Toni is . . . how soft and beautifully natural it looks. Because there's no frizzy stage with a Toni. Even on the first day your Toni wave looks naturally curly with lovely deep waves and soft curls! But before trying Toni you'd like to know:

Will TONI work on my hair?
Of course. Toni waves any kind of hair that will take a permanent, including gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair.

Will my TONI wave be loose or tight?
The exclusive directions in your Toni Kit give you exactly the wave you want — from loose, casual curls to a halo of adorable ringlets. You're sure of success with easy-to-follow Toni directions because they've given millions of perfect permanents. Actually, more women use Toni than all other cold waves combined.

Why do most women prefer to use TONI?
Because the Toni Waving Lotion isn't harsh like hurry-up salon type solutions. Toni is a creme cold wave made especially for home use. That's why Toni leaves your hair in such wonderful condition — so shiny soft and natural-looking!

How long will my TONI last?
Your Toni is long-lasting and is guaranteed to look as lovely as a $15 beauty shop wave . . . or your money back.

How much will I save with TONI?
The Toni Kit with re-usable plastic curlers cost $2. For a second Toni get the Toni Refill Kit. It costs just $1 . . . yet there's no finer wave at any price!

Which twin has the TONI?
Talented, teen-age Kathlene and Helene Crescente won the Beauty Contest for Twins in New York City. Kathlene, the twin on the right, has the Toni. She says: "I never knew a permanent could look so natural." And Helene says: "Next time it will be Toni for two!"

The wave that gives that natural look . . . Toni

IS SEX NECESSARY?

(Continued from page 35)

the union a chance to last—but they've been getting along beautifully for seven years now. She's relaxed and sociable among friends—but markedly aloof with strangers. She's considered quite shy—yet she doesn't shrink on occasion from forthrightly dominating her friends. Almost everyone in Hollywood nowadays has taken up painting, with generally sad results—but Jane, unlike most screen figures, paints seriously and even well. She's practical and full of common sense—but she's serenely careless about money.

Let's examine these contradictions:

"Earthy" was obviously the word for Russell as she followed her celebrated chest around the screen in The Outlaw. Yet, though the real-life lady is certainly down-to-earth, it's in an absolutely nice way, and the term "spiritual" is actually no misapplication in describing her.

the spiritual side . . .

Jane is extremely reserved in discussing her spiritual activities, since they involve her deepest convictions about her life and the lives of those for whom she has lasting affection. But it's known that the Bibles most of her friends possess were given to them by Jane. And it's also known that for a long time Jane, who has no special religious affiliation, has been setting aside one-tenth of her salary for the support of religious institutions. The money goes to the small San Fernando Valley church she attends, or to a mission recommended by her mother, or to some needy charity.

Her project to build an entire community for paraplegics—persons paralyzed from the waist down—has been postponed because of legal red tape and the many other problems involved. "I believe, though," Jane says, "that when something you want very much to do simply can't be done, you'll discover that sooner or later the way will be shown." Faith is a concrete reality in her life.

Don't, though, get the mistaken notion that Jane is all solemn seriousness. When she wants to, which is often, she has a very deft way with a brisk comeback. She surprised Bob Hope. On the set of The Paleface, Jane and Bob eyed each other warily the first two days. ("Gosh," Bob recalls, "if she'd been any more remote, she'd have disappeared completely.") Then Bob tossed a fast quip her way. Without batting an eyelash, she topped him—and from there on in, the picture was a frolic. "Don't let her fool you," says Bob. "Tangle with her and she'll shingle your attic."

Now let's look at her marriage with Bob Waterfield—the marriage that wasn't supposed to last.

Bob is nationally famous in professional football circles as a mainstay of the Los Angeles Rams. Jane has been in love with him since she was a blue-jeaned sophomore in Van Nuys High School and he, the campus gridiron hero. He tolerated her in a cheerful, gentlemanly fashion, encountering her in the school halls as regularly as you'd see a drinking fountain. She was always there and unimportant—until suddenly he fell for her like an oak chopped down in a forest. They announced their engagement while Bob was a backfield star in his senior year at UCLA.

When the news broke on Easter, 1942, that the two had eloped to Las Vegas, the cynical press gave their union a couple of years at the outside. What could a professional football player and a movie actress have in common?

"We have almost nothing in common," Jane blandly admits seven years later—and you know she doesn't mean it at all.

If you're sitting around the Waterfield home of an evening, you'll never encounter any "big name" movie stars. But you will encounter some of the most famous athletes who ever broke each other's noses on a football field.

"That athletic conversation is really educational," Jane explains. "If you happen to mention that you'd like to go to some place like Bemidji, Minnesota, where I was born, for a real North Woods vacation, you've launched a conversation that'll last the rest of the evening. One of Bob's giant friends will exclaim, 'Minnesota? Wonderful place. Gosh, will you ever forget that Minnesota-Illinois game when Minnesota stopped Red Grange? He made a touchdown in the first three minutes—but before the half they'd carried Red off, him shaking his fist at the Gophers and half of those Illinois guys cryin' like babies!'

"No kidding," Jane says, "I've listened to so much football tales I can personally replay any big game of the last ten years."

Matter of fact, Jane, who grew up with four big brothers, actually can handle a pigskin with startling proficiency. (No one has ever made a point in describing her to mention her broad shoulders and the easy coordination of her body movements—which give her the cat-like grace that further heightens the dark, somber beauty of her face.) She can whip a bullet pass with a force and accuracy far beyond the skill of the average man. One of her neatest demonstrations of this talent was performed one Sunday afternoon when she and Bob were tossing each other passes. Every time Jane threw the pigskin it went higher, with her husband jumping high up in the air and catching it with consummate ease. Finally Bob had to go way back to snare a sizzler. There was a splash that half emptied the pool, and Bob came up spluttering.

"Why, you fiend!" he yelled. "You did that on purpose!"

"Ha!" Jane laughed. "If you could do that in every game you'd pack the stadium!"

"Save your money, Mrs. Merkle, I have lots of news."

The undercurrent of affection is always bubbling just below the surface of Jane's and Bob's cheerful insult-trading. Bob likes to walk into the room and squeeze in beside Jane in one of their over-sized chairs.

"Find a chair of your own, you big lug," Jane says, throwing him a playfully murderous look.

So he doesn't. But the moment Jane suggests that it's time to start preparing dinner, he leaves for the kitchen and she goes on sitting. Let no one declare in Bob's presence that cooking is not man's business. What he can do with roast beef is enough to send a Waldorf chef into raptures. After dinner, though, he moves out and Jane takes over the dish-washing.

"Woman's work," Jane sighs.

She and Bob drew the rough plans for their hilltop home themselves. Then the architect moved in to finish the job.

"It's not Chinese modern," she insists. "It's modern, decorated with emphasis on old Chinese. . . . The miles of windows? Oh, that's no washing job at all. They've been washed carefully only once since we moved into the house over a year ago. The rest of the time we just turn the garden hose loose on 'em. Don't they look fine?"

There's a reason why they chose to build so high on a hill that a car seems to stand on its hind legs coming up the driveway. Both Jane and Bob see enough of crowds in their work. . . .

social but shy . . .

And this brings us to the point about Jane and her aloofness toward people she doesn't know. With her "gang" of close pals, she's as friendly and sociable as any popular small-town matron. But with strangers—well, it's reached the point where, on a couple of occasions when she and Bob have gone dancing at some out-of-the-way ballroom, she's worn an auburn wig. (The people have stared curiously, thinking for a moment they've seen her somewhere before, then have given up and left them alone.)

"If I can manage to be unimpressed with who I am," Jane reasons, "why shouldn't they?" This explains her standoffish attitude to a degree. She's not suspicious or distrustful of people. She simply realizes that solid friendships form slowly.

This withdrawn attitude has led to a wide belief that Jane's a shy, retiring type. In contradiction to this, there's the fact that Jane frequently demonstrates a breathtaking directness in getting her friends and associates to do things she thinks they should.

This will be vouched for by one of Jane's newer friends—her stand-in, Carmen Nisbitt, who looks like a tall version of Jennifer Jones. "All through the shooting of The Paleface," Carmen will tell you, "Jane kept at me to get my hair cut short. I told her I liked it long. Then, while we were making It's Only Money, she started the campaign all over again. I wouldn't give in. But finally, while they were setting up the last shot, Jane grabbed me, merrily pinned me down, and with her own little scissors trimmed my hair on one side of my head! After she'd finished her fiendish work, they called me to stand in for Jane's lighting. Well, I couldn't do it in that condition, with my hair half off and half on. So Jane had to stand in for her stand-in, while a hairdresser finished the haircutting job and I sat around like a star having my new hair-do set and dried. . . . But I'm not mad. Jane was right—I guess I do look better this way."

At one time or another you've heard that some Hollywood star has taken up painting and will shortly exhibit his or her work. To serious artists, this sudden fad in which movie stars abruptly reach the point where they feel no qualms about publicly displaying their "art" is a joke. But this professional contempt is not to be directed against Jane Russell's canvases.

Two other close friends of Jane's are Margaret and Dave Martinez. She's a writer (her novel, "The Way of an Eagle," which Jane bullied her into finishing, will soon be published) and he's a rising young artist. On an easel in their living room is an arresting painting, not quite finished. It's a head study of Margaret and Dave—by Jane Russell. Artist Martinez is conservative in his critique. "Jane's painting shows definite promise," he says. "The heads are unfinished—but I think that almost anyone with a knowledge of painting would agree with me in saying that they're quite good."

it's only money . . .

Then there's another major contradiction about Jane: In practically all her daily activities, she shows herself to be a reasonable, logical, eminently sensible young lady. But when it comes to money matters, she's blithely indifferent. She usually has about 20 cents in her bag and takes care of everyday expenses by leaving a trail of small checks from an account which her husband keeps meticulously balanced for her. The amount in the account had to be drastically reduced not long ago—Jane's such a soft touch that on some occasions she'd written checks for as much as $100 simply because some stranger had sent her a sad letter. As one of her agents explained to her, "You have to understand that even if you might help one worthy person, nine out of ten will be playing you for a sucker—and there's not enough money in the world to indulge yourself in that kind of charity."

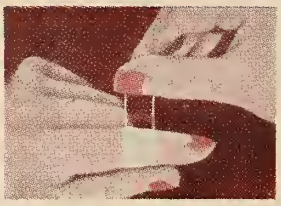
Finally, there's one more contrast in Jane's personality that, in a minor way, belongs in the same category as the difference between that flaming creature of The Outlaw and the fine girl of reality. Jane doesn't smoke or drink off screen. Yet in It's Only Money you'll see her play a drunk scene so expertly you'll possibly think she must have had extensive first-hand experience to call upon. Let stand-in Carmen Nisbitt describe it:

"I do hope they leave all this scene in, because Jane plays it to the hilt—including a priceless moment in which she's literally cross-eyed. Don McGuire is the bank president's son who takes Jane out and gets her looped with cocktails. Then he takes her back to her rooming house and is making romantic passes when he discovers that Frank Sinatra, in the role of a lowly bank clerk, can hear everything that's going on through the paper-thin walls. Don leaves, highly frustrated.

"Then Jane and Frank sing a number called 'Kisses and Tears,' alternating choruses on opposite side of the walls. I've seen the rushes and think that this scene alone, to mention one of many, indicates the great talent reserve Jane has—which is only just now being fully realized."

And maybe one of these days something else will be generally realized about Jane Russell: She's not a movie actress who can be placed in any of the usual easy, simple, definite classifications. She is, instead, an extremely individual, highly complicated, and wonderfully contradictory young woman.

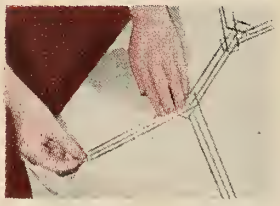
Classify Jane Russell? You'd need an entire filing cabinet—and the folder labeled SEX would be merely one in an infinite variety. THE END



"I sure wish they'd hurry up and invent 'Scotch' Cellophane Tape."

Tape it easy
with "SCOTCH" Cellophane Tape

DRIVING a nail to hang a picture? Crossed strips of Cellophane Tape will keep plaster from chipping.



KEEP bandages fresh and clean by covering them with clear, smooth, tight-sticking "Scotch" Cellophane Tape.

COVER rough curtain rod ends with Cellophane Tape and they'll slip into the curtains with nary a snag.

BIND frayed end of shoelace with transparent "Scotch" Cellophane Tape when metal tip comes off.

SEAL mothproof bundles, boxes and bags with "Scotch" Cellophane Tape for added security.

IMPORTANT
Be protected—for quality, look for the trademark "SCOTCH" and plaid dispenser that identify "SCOTCH" Brand Tape.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
SCOTCH BRAND Cellophane Tape

Made by MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO., St. Paul 6, Minn., also makers of "3M" Abrasives, Adhesives, and a wide variety of other products for home and industry.

General Export: DUREX ABRASIVES CORP., New Rochelle, N. Y.
In Canada: CANADIAN DUREX ABRASIVES LTD., Brantford, Ontario

3M COMPANY

© 1949 3M CO.

RING ON HER FINGER

(Continued from page 46)

"I'm a fast worker, you know. I'll be set to pay our household bills quicker than you think."

Jane thereupon expressed her complete faith in Geary.

"He's a terrific salesman," she told me. "I know he'll be doing wonderfully very soon. He can sell anything! Geary and Dad went into a business deal selling Christmas trees just before the holidays. They bought about 1800 trees and sold just about every last one of them—and at good prices, too.

"They set out their trees over on Ventura Boulevard not far from right here where we're living, and evenings I took cookies and hot coffee over to them."

Geary's face lit up like a neon sign. "Say, you ought to taste Janie's brownies," he put in. "Out of this world. And her pancakes—I could eat 'em all day. So light and fluffy. I'm telling you, she's a marvelous cook."

She took Geary's extravagant praise with the equanimity of a girl who is good and knows it. "Cooking is my favorite hobby," she said. "I love to putter around a kitchen. Would you like one of the cream puffs that I whipped up this morning?"

"Sorry," piped up Geary. "I ate the last one a few minutes ago."

reducing course . . .

"What an appetite! Always hungry!" Janie tried to appear disappointed that I wasn't to sample one of her confections—but you could tell how pleased she was. Her grin was a dead giveaway. "Well," she remarked resignedly, "I can see we'll both get too fat. . . . But we can take off the extra weight when we go to see your sister and get in a lot of skiing."

Then Janie started telling me about what a wonderful skier Geary is. "He was a ski trooper in the war."

"I'm really not such a hot skier," Geary protested. "Don't let her kid you. She's as good as I am. Why, after only 12 hours' coaching she could go down the long run at Sun Valley without ever a fluff. She went at it the right way. Three hours coaching in the morning and three in the afternoon. Janie really concentrates when she wants to learn anything.

"You see, little Janie here isn't the athletic type—but when she makes up her mind she wants to do something, she sets out and does it. She's a perfectionist."

A pretty cute couple. I listened to some of their plans for married life.

"There's one very important thing," Janie said seriously. "I think a couple should live separately from both his parents and hers. That's because there are so many adjustments that young people have to make all alone and on their own. There are things that you have to figure out for yourself without outside advice from anybody, no matter how close. Who can know all the little circumstances that go to make up a problem? And those are matters a couple can't share with others."

"Have you definite ideas about children?" I asked.

"You bet!" Janie cried. "I want three. I don't care whether they're boys or girls—just babies. I love 'em! And I'll tell you another thing—I'm going to have a big church wedding with all the fixings and lots of people. This girl is getting married only once—and that one time will be just right."

Jane, who celebrated her twentieth birthday on April Fool's Day this year, met Geary—who'll be 25 in October—two

THE LOVABLE GIRL-OF-THE-MONTH

loves her Lovable Strapless BRA

MISS LOUISE HYDE, Chattanooga Belle, winner of "Miss Tennessee" title

Dress, MARTINI Designe.

You'll be lovely, too, in a

Lovable® BRA

Back again...better than ever ...the Lovable strapless bra that all girls adore! Gives perfect control; fits like the paper on the wall. Lightly boned for complete support, plush-edged for complete comfort.

Lace and satin, all colors, A and B cups.
#829... only $2.

LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO.
358 Fifth Avenue
New York 1, N. Y.

Bra sketched an another Lovable model

Unmarried girls can use tampons

RIGHT! Any normal woman can use tampons as soon as she is fully grown. And why not? Meds, the Modess tampons, were designed by a doctor, and are worn by thousands of nurses who are in a position to know.

No swimming on "those days."

WRONG! It's safe to swim, shower, bathe any day of the month if you wear Meds. Meds are worn internally . . . no need for pads, pins, belts.

Tampons are so comfortable you'll forget you are wearing them.

RIGHT! Meds put an end to chafing, odor . . . to bulging, uncomfortable external protection.

There's a book that tells more.

RIGHT! Send for your free copy of "It's so Much Easier When You Know." It will be mailed to you in a plain wrapper. Read it. Then . . .

Go Meds... Go Merrier

Personal Products Corp.
Dept. MS-5, Milltown, N. J.

Please send me a FREE copy of your new Meds booklet, "It's So Much Easier When You Know." (U.S.A. only)

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

years ago when she went to take ice skating lessons at Sonja Henie's rink in Westwood Village. Geary, despite his growing up in Beverly Hills where ice forms only in refrigerators, became an exhibition skater and traveled with Sonja as her skating partner for two years.

Geary taught Jane how to keep her physical balance on ice—but threw her heart definitely off balance almost from the start. Gradually, in the contest for her love, the other boys flocking around were eliminated. When I talked with the cute little singing actress a few months ago, there were still several boys in the running. David Holt, the good-looking young actor, was the principal contender with Geary.

At that time young Steffan, son of Willie Ritchie, one-time lightweight boxing champion of the world, was working in Chicago selling trucking insurance for the Witmer Rumsey Agency. When Jane arrived in Chicago for a three weeks' singing engagement at the Oriental Theater last fall, he had a clear field—with young Holt and the other boys out in California 2,000 miles away.

Jane's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Burce, were invited with Geary's parents to a house party at the home of Geary's boss in the suburbs of Chicago. During those few days, Geary devoted all his time and attention to winning his sweetheart's promise to wed. She told him she'd give him her answer when her singing engagements were over and she was back in California at Christmas time.

When she left Chicago, Geary made up his mind that despite the old saying to the contrary, distance did not lend enchantment. He was afraid that with him in Chicago and her in California, anything could happen. So he quit his job and came back home to look for work.

One thing is certain, he told me. He"l have nothing whatsoever to do with the motion picture industry. Never, never will he try to be an actor.

Jane is in complete agreement with him on this. "One thespian in the family," she says, "is quite enough."

She laughed when I told her about the talk that her bosses at MGM were trying to discourage her plans to wed. "That's silly," she said. "I talked with them about it and all they want for me is happiness. They know I won't let anything interfere with my work. It's too much a part of me to give up. And if other girls can make a go of their careers and marriage too, why can't I? Look how happy Shirley Temple is."

The day I visited them, Geary had just brought Jane a big, fat, ceramic piggy bank into which they'll pop their loose pennies, nickels and dimes. "When we get it filled we can have a splurge," she said brightly.

"Splurge nothing!" said Geary. "With this bank we're starting a nest egg for our home."

The fat, gaily-colored pig, sitting contentedly in front of the fireplace, seemed to be grinning, too, at the prospects of love's young dream fulfilled. THE END time had come—Peter would have to be told.

CONFESSIONS OF A BACHELOR FATHER

(Continued from page 37)

"Now Peter," he said, "you've got to be brave. Mommy's going away for a few weeks to dance for some nice people, and you and I are going to take her to the train. You must be brave. Do you promise not to cry?"

Peter did. He promises lots of things with complete abandon when he's in the mood.

Glenn gave Ellie his widest smile and off they went. He reeked assurance. Their child wasn't going to shriek his head off. Ellie had already dutifully promised she wouldn't set the wrong example by wearing a sad face.

And the life of a bachelor father wasn't going to be such a production after all. Women really always ham everything up. When a man takes over, a household falls into a simple, serene, positively stagnant-with-peace condition.

He felt so smug he nearly let another Los Angeles driver mangle the Ford family. That jolted him back to Ellie and her lengthy, last-minute instructions. Like his son, Glenn nodded expertly. "Yep. Yep. Sure. Will do. Now, honey, relax!"

When they reached the Los Angeles Union Depot, Glenn swiftly engineered an inconspicuous path to Eleanor's train. They all kissed goodbye, successfully blending the operation with everyone else. Glenn held Peter fondly in his arms to watch Ellie climb on the train. All was well.

Cleverly, father Ford and Peter spotted Ellie waving from inside her window. Then—horrors! Suddenly her eyes started to fill with tears. "Oh, no!" Glenn mumbled at sight of Ellie's tremendous, silent misery.

Those tears, of course, did it. Instantly Peter began bellowing at the very top of his husky lungs. Glenn, having avoided a riot of movie fans by his skillful modesty, became the explosive center of all eyes. Hundreds of goggle-eyed tourists recognized him running the entire length of the station with a kicking, screaming little boy over his right shoulder. Glenn Ford, in person, behaving like that! What was he doing to the poor child?

All the way home Peter kept it up. He'd evidently misunderstood and had thought he and Daddy were going on the train, too, and Daddy had betrayed him by pulling a fast one. Daddy was no darling, but a monster, not to be liked at all.

As soon as they reached Beverly Hills, Glenn stopped briefly at a stationer's and bought a large calendar. Arrived home, they went directly to Peter's room. Here the calendar was hung on the wall. Each day Peter was to blacken one square with a crayon. When it was all black, Glenn told his still-sniffling son, Mommy would be home.

That got Daddy out of the doghouse.

When bedtime came that night, Glenn learned his son was a lot smarter than Ellie had ever suspected. He said, kindly but firmly, "Now. Peter, go on up to your room, get undressed, brush your teeth, and when you're in bed I'll come on up." Without the slightest hesitation or protest, Peter, for the first time in his history, calmly followed through.

Glenn virtuously restrained himself from too much gloating. Just gave himself a wink as he passed a mirror on the way downstairs from tucking Pete in. Ellie always had had to encourage Peter. She'd had to forsake Glenn to lead Peter upstairs. Then she'd had to undress the boy, compliment him endlessly on his knack with a tooth brush, and lift him into bed. Glenn saw that Peter had been blithely putting across a fine act.

So next morning he pitched smack into a heart-to-heart, male-to-male talk. A Judge Hardy to Junior tack. "Peter," he declared briskly, "you're a big man now. We men have to work out running the house together. You see—" But he didn't have to go further into the neat speech he'd prepared. For, with complete, man-to-man understanding, Peter interrupted: "Awright, Dad! We run the house."

At mealtime, it had often been a tough proposition for Ellie and Glenn to coax Peter into eating what he should—made no easier by Ellie's frequent, "Glenn, please don't make him eat if he isn't hungry!" Now Glenn had a wonderful inspiration. He'd solve the feeding problem by dramatizing the source of all food. If, in the course of the dramatization, Glenn wandered a mite from literal truth, we may forgive this on the score of dramatic license.

that's my pop! . . .

Overnight, in the eyes of Peter, Daddy became the best fisherman, farmer, and hunter in the whole world. This was accomplished simply: Glenn told him so. (Dramatic license, remember!) There were enough tomatoes growing in the Ford yard to allow Glenn to get away with the claim that he personally grew all vegetables cooked up for Peter's plate. The next time Glenn went fishing, he not only returned with the limit catch, but slyly asked for help in stowing away the fishing-pole so Peter would appreciate the feat. When Glenn, with his wide-eyed son at his side, reached into the deep freeze for meat, he frightened Aggie, the cook, by simultaneously brandishing one of his rifles. "I know you'll want to eat all your hamburger, son!" Glenn said enthusiastically. "Daddy shot the cow."

Peter's appetite surged happily.

Ellie, away on her tour, felt relaxed in the thought that they were eating only the ideal food she had left mapped-out with Aggie in detailed menus. If she'd only known!

For Glenn decided that, obviously, the child deserved more of his dad's companionship after studio hours. Now Glenn has an insatiable hankering for every variety of fancy cooking, the spicier the better. So one evening he took Peter to a favorite Italian restaurant in Hollywood. Then, as special treats, he began carting him along to barbecue kitchens and tamale joints that Ellie has never approved of for anyone. To Glenn's delight Peter went mad about the hottest chili bowls. The climax of each of these food toots was a solemn request: "Now, Peter—be sure you never mention this to your mother!" (Glenn has broken down and confessed to Ellie by this time. And why not? Peter

I SAW IT HAPPEN

A group of kids were eagerly waiting for Ingrid Bergman outside the Hampshire House in New York. In a few minutes a dream in dark glasses and mink made her way through the crowd. Everyone suddenly realized it was Linda Darnell. One boy, a little too anxious, walked up to her and said, "Gosh, Miss Darnell, I came all the way from New Hampshire." "Well," quipped the beautiful actress, "I came all the way from California."

Janet Benders
Irvington, New Jersey

IF YOUR HAIR LOOKS LIKE THIS —

WHEN IT SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS

don't use greasy pomades, brittle lacquer or sticky hair oil...

"Suave" your hair

"The cosmetic for hair"

Your beautician will tell you there's nothing else like Suave to make hair miraculously obedient... whisper-soft, kissable... starry-bright... Keeps every tress perfectly in place, and safe from parching sunlight. Rinses out instantly. It's the amazing, new cosmetic for hair that outsells ALL women's hairdressings! Greaseless—not a hair oil. No alcohol! For the whole family. At beauty shops, drug and department stores. 50c and $1

Helene Curtis Suave

why you'll love this Countess slip

the fit's a dream—
new patented 4-GORE construction assures a new experience in sleek fit the comfort's supreme—straight and bias cut panels prevent twisting, bunching and riding up a real style honey—smooth flowing lines are topped by luxurious front and back lace bodice trim

it watches your money—imagine! illustrated style retails for only $1.98 fine rayon crepe or satin in pink, blue or white, sizes 32-44 . . . additional styles, $2.98 look for the label

a Countess Slip PRODUCT - RED M. PATENT
REG. PAT. # 2,404,451
36

at chain and specialty stores or write

Monterey undergarment co., inc.
118 madison ave., n.y. 16 wasn't sick a single day she was gone.)

Yet gradually, like any father turned loose with a house and boy to be responsible for, Glenn began to suspect he'd been merely taking for granted a huge amount of patience in his absent mate. Peter would ask the same question in a dozen different ways before subsiding for a minute's blessed lull. "Now can I have some candy?" would shade into "Mommy always lets me have candy"—and then into all the other switches on an identical track.

He'd taken for granted Ellie's constant straightening up of his own room. He'd thought her preoccupation with neatness almost funny. He'd called her quaint. But he lived with Peter, and learned! His own room promptly became a junk room. Peter had his own bedroom, but he was used to bringing his playthings into Ellie's room. In her absence, he began moving all his possessions into Glenn's. Soon Glenn was convinced the whole house was centered under his bed.

And he'd taken for granted Ellie's household-management efficiency in general. A brand-new appreciation rose in him as he waded through the ledger that Ellie had filled with lists of things for him to do. Routine details had never been able to dent him. Now he couldn't duck out—not with Peter counting on him. So Glenn groaned and recalled, for the first time, which day Frank, the gardener, came; when the laundry and cleaning men reported; the servants' days off; when the narcissus bulbs were to be ordered; when to pay the bills. (He forgot to pay the gas bill, until Aggie came in with a pleading stare. The gas company was about to turn off the gas!)

a model gentleman . . .

Being a Perfect Model of etiquette and behavior had never been too much of a concern to this parent. Now, under the undivided attention of Peter, he didn't dare even lean an elbow on the table when they were dining together. Anything Peter couldn't do, Glenn couldn't do either. And a meticulous regard for the weather was inflicted on Glenn. Whenever Peter goes out into the cold, he's bundled into an overcoat and a cap. That's one of Ellie's basic rules. Glenn never wears a hat, except in a film, and pulls on an overcoat not more than twice in an entire year in California. But, as a bachelor father, when he'd go out in temperature that called for a coat and hat for Peter, Glenn too had to wrap up. When they'd go out together, Glenn would swelter. When he'd sally forth alone, he'd wave goodbye and then drive around the corner and peel. Once he made the awful mistake of coming home without sneaking his hat and overcoat on first. Did he catch it from Pete!

As a direct result of having had Peter's eagle eyes so steadily upon him, Glenn is now one of the most careful auto drivers in Hollywood. For Peter's use when he'd take him along on relaxing drives, Glenn bought one of those fake steering wheels that can be set up in the front seat beside the real one. Earnestly gripping it, Peter would faithfully copy Glenn's every steering move. When Daddy would travel a bit too fast, Peter, although naturally he isn't old enough to read the speed warnings, would sense the excess of speed and insist on slowing down. When Glenn occasionally was tempted to make one of those easier, gear-shift pauses instead of a full halt at a boulevard stop, Peter would yelp an emphatic complaint. And the kid was fanatical about preciseness wherever there was a red, green, or yellow traffic light.

On several Sundays, Glenn and Pete and Bill, the huge Shepherd dog, drove far up the Malibu highway where the long

A LITTLE MORE Color— MEANS A LOT MORE Glamour!

A touch of color in your hair . . . if it is thrilling, natural-looking Marchand color . . . helps make you irresistible! There are flattering Marchand Rinse shades for you, whether you are blonde, brunette, brunette or redhead.

He'll love the sparkling highlights Marchand's rinses into your hair, too! Use "Make-Up" Rinse after every shampoo to add bewitching color and lustre, to remove dulling soap film, and to blend in gray hairs. Safe, easy to use, washes out in shampooing.

Marchand's
"MAKE-UP"
HAIR RINSE
2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢
plus tax
★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

NYLON
White parachute nylon for blouses, slips.
Whole parachutes (48 sq. yds.).....$15.95
Five parachute panels (10 sq. yds.).....$ 4.95
CLARKS, 1211 B St., San Mateo, Calif.

BE FREE FROM FEAR OF ASTHMA ATTACKS!
The rich, aromatic fumes of Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR relieve the choking spasms of bronchial asthma . . . make breathing easier. Live more normally—without fear of suffocating! Rely on ASTHMADOR—so convenient and easy to use! In powder, cigarette or pipe mixture form—at all drug stores in U.S. and Canada.
DR. R. SCHIFFMANN'S
ASTHMADOR

stretches of bare beach are. Here Bill crazily chased the seagulls, Peter pantingly pursued Bill, and Glenn got completely winded shadowing his super-energetic son. . . .

As the months crept by, Glenn sent Ellie a constant stream of graphic evidence to prove he was doing a brilliant job as a combined parent: he sent her daily snapshots of their offspring. He adorned Peter with horn-rimmed spectacles and sat him in a studious reading pose with a volume of the deepest philosophy. The caption had Peter saying, "My reading is a bit more advanced now that Dad is at the helm!" One showing Peter presumably twirling was labeled, "Look, Ma, I'm dancin'!" Another day Glenn dragged a sack of potatoes out of storage, posed Peter beside it paring a spud, and captioned the resulting picture, "Here's how Dad makes me work!" He made Peter up with a terrible black eye for a view captioned, "Charlie was bigger than you said!"

But the nicest pose of all was strictly sentimental, for her birthday greeting. Glenn made a large sign reading "HAPPY BIRTHDAY MOM!" Then he placed Peter on the ladder leaned against it, with a brush in his hand as though he'd just finished painting it.

And then came the grand and gala occasion: Ellie's return. Glenn dressed Peter in a brand new, mature little suit for the trip to the Los Angeles depot. As they walked into the station, Peter blew what almost sounded like a tune on his harmonica. Glenn smiled down proudly. After all, how many fellows not quite four can play an harmonica?

Ellie whirled off her train, arms loaded with bundles. Books flowed from her left arm all over Glenn's feet as she bent to kiss Peter, and the next moment Glenn was making a lunging catch of the tool chest she'd been toting under her right arm for him. The third moment she got around to embracing her adoring and flustered husband. . . .

Then Ellie stood back. She looked from one to the other. "Well, darlings," she said. "How—how did you really get along? Confess!"

Glenn grinned. "Just ask Pete," he said.

"Was Daddy a good daddy, Peter?" she asked.

"He was a good daddy!" said Peter firmly. "He wore his coat!"

"Absolutely right," said Glenn. "In fact—I was just about the best-disciplined daddy there ever was." THE END

LIES THAT HURT ALAN LADD

(Continued from page 33)

To this day Alan has never removed any identification from his car to foil autograph hunters—nor has he tried to foil them in any other way.

"I know darned well that if it wasn't for those kids, I wouldn't be able to own a car. I'm one guy in Hollywood who realizes those kids pay my salary." That's what Alan had to say on the subject.

But I have a good deal more to say.

I've seen Alan make himself late for important appointments just to sign autographs for mobs of kids outside the studio gates, or at a theater, or at a radio studio. He's patience itself. He jokes and laughs with them; listens to what they say, good or bad, about his pictures; and sends them away as even better friends than before.

Alan has never ducked an obligation to his fans in all the years he has been in the "Autograph Bracket." Other stars may

From Hollywood to New York

MILLIONS OF WOMEN PREFER

insta-curl®

THE ORIGINAL "CURLS IN A CAPSULE"

THE QUICKEST, EASIEST, SAFEST WAY TO BEAUTIFUL, LONG LASTING CURLS

Imagine a tiny Capsule that gives you in just an instant, lustrous glamorous waves and full-bodied curls that last and last. Picture your curls staying lovely day after day and your waves growing deeper and more radiant every time you use INSTA-CURL. SAFE to use, too—laboratory tests prove that INSTA-CURL is absolutely harmless and non-toxic.

INSTA-CURL brings new magic beauty to all types of hair, all textures—dyed, bleached, gray or platinum, even the soft hair of children.

THE MOST EXCITING DISCOVERY IN HAIR WAVING IN YEARS

- You will be amazed at how easy it is to have beautiful "INSTA" Curls.
- You will be delighted with the enthusiastic admiration of your friends.
- You will be happy to eliminate costly, disappointing permanents.
- You will be thankful, no matter what hair-waving process you have used before, that you have discovered the new hair beauty of INSTA-CURL.
- You will be smart if you don't wait another INSTANT to try this new, revolutionary short cut to wonder waves.

Only 3 Simple Steps FROM START TO FINISH

TIME 1 Minute	TIME 2 Minutes	THEN . . .

Dissolve capsule in hot water	Comb solution through hair	Set and allow to dry

NOTHING LIKE INSTA-CURL!

Regardless of what brand of capsule-type product you have used in the past—UNLESS YOU HAVE USED INSTA-CURL—you have not achieved the hair beauty that ONLY INSTA-CURL can give you.

INSTA-CURL was created by a famous Hollywood Beauty Specialist and developed after more than 10 years of scientific laboratory research. INSTA-CURL contains basic ingredients not found in any other hair waving product.

Beauty Guild, Inc.
9344 Wilshire Boulevard
Beverly Hills, California

Please send me postpaid_____packages of INSTA-CURL at $1.50 each, Federal Tax included.

Or, please send me C.O.D._____packages of INSTA-CURL at $1.50 each, Federal Tax included, plus postage and C.O.D. charges.

Name_____

Street_____

City_____State_____

Listen to "MEET THE STARS" Radio from Hollywood Coast-to-Coast ABC—Thurs. 9:55 P.M.—E.S.T.

Wear on approval

one piece dress that looks like two

Sizes:
JUNIOR
9-11-13.
15-17
REGULAR
10-12-14
16-18-20
LARGE
38-40-42
44-46-48

10 DAY TRIAL

Wear this new styled gabardine dress at our risk–if in ten days you are not completely satisfied return dress for full refund.

You'll have the buttons and the beaus when you wear this lush, exquisitely fashioned rayon gabardine—loads of exciting back styling, as well as loveliness in the soft, draped front. Only $10.98

• SEND NO MONEY—MAIL COUPON TODAY FOR PROMPT DELIVERY •

BONNIE GAYE, Inc. Dept. 125
1051 S. LaBrea Ave., Los Angeles 35, Calif.

Rush Buttons 'n Beaus. I'll pay postman $10.98 each plus C.O.D. postage. I may return dress in 10 days for refund if not satisfied. Colors: Black, Winter White, Kelly, Aqua, Gray, Beige.

QUANTITY	SIZE	1st COLOR CHOICE	2nd COLOR CHOICE

Name_____
PLEASE PRINT
Address_____
City_____
Zone_____ State_____

Now ANDIUM
IN THIS FAMOUS SHAMPOO MADE SPECIALLY FOR Blondes!

GIVES YOU
Shinier
Lovelier
Lighter
Hair

To help keep blonde hair from darkening and brighten faded hair use BLONDEX—the home shampoo made specially for blondes—containing ANDIUM, for extra lightness and SHINE. Washes hair shades lighter, gives it lovely lustrous highlights. Takes only 11 minutes at home. Safe for children. Get BLONDEX today at 10¢, drug and department stores.

take side doors and side roads, or, like Rita Hayworth, scurry up a cargo gangplank to sidestep the trouble of signing their names—but not Alan Ladd.

In Battle Creek, Michigan, not long ago, Alan was trying to catch a train. Some 500 members of the younger generation had come down to see him off. Before he could get his luggage aboard the train, they were after him for autographs. He kept signing their books until the train started pulling out.

When he made his run for the train, those kids grabbed his luggage and pushed it on the platform behind him. It was a credit to Alan that they put it on the train instead of scattering to the four winds with souvenirs from this suitcases.

Yes, anytime anybody says to you that Alan Ladd ignores or avoids even the least of his fans, you'll be getting a very bum steer!

Then there are those who say that Paramount tried to soft-pedal his marriage to Sue Carol. Nonsense!

Though they were married at the time when Hollywood thought it was better business to let the public cherish the impression that any leading man was a bachelor, Alan was firm: He demanded that Paramount's publicity department include Sue in all his interviews, in all his "at home" picture releases, and in all stories written about him.

Later, it was said that the studio tried to hide the fact that each of them had a child by another marriage. This, too, was all wrong.

rumors run wild . . .

Sue has a daughter, now 16 and cute as a bug's ear; and Alan Ladd, Jr., now 11, is Alan's son by a former marriage. If some people didn't report the existence of the youngsters it wasn't Alan's fault—he always pushed them into the foreground whenever possible. He and Sue are naturally proud of them, and have never kept them secret. No secret, either, is the fact that they now have two more of their own—a daughter, Alana, now almost six, and a son, David Alan, who was two on February 5.

And speaking of wild rumors: There are some who insist that Sue Carol, who discovered Alan and was once his agent, is still running his career as his wife.

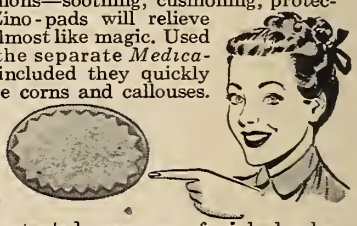
If you want to see Mr. Ladd scorch, mention that one.

"That positively is not so!" says Alan. "That notion is completely cock-eyed! And yet, Sue is still sometimes blamed for things that happened in my career that actually were all my doing."

The reason some people come up with these ideas concerning Sue lies in the fact that she was once his agent. She's still an agent, but the name Alan Ladd does not appear on her list of clients.

Sue discovered Alan at the time he was a radio actor in Hollywood when she heard him do a 60-year-old character part on a dramatic show. She helped him fight his way to stardom and was his agent up through their first week of married life. Then they decided that a wife couldn't represent her husband around the studios, so they gave the right of that representation to Bert Allenberg of the Berg-Allenberg Agency.

Another preposterous Alan Ladd myth concerns the way he gets along with his co-workers. You hear things like this: "Did you know that Alan Ladd has no consideration for the men who work with him in pictures? Why, I was told that in the course of shooting fight scenes in pictures, instead of faking punches the way he's supposed to, he's knocked out eight different guys."



I've had the pleasure of telling a number of people that such a statement is a Stop Corns!

INSTANT RELIEF

Do as millions now do and you'll never have corns! Protect sore toes from new or tight shoes with Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads today and you'll stop corns from developing tomorrow! But—if you have corns, callouses or bunions—soothing, cushioning, protective Zino-pads will relieve pain almost like magic. Used with the separate Medications included they quickly remove corns and callouses.

No Other Pad Like It!

New patented creep-proof pinked edge molds pad to toe and foot. Prevents slipping; does away with clumsy taping. Downy-soft. Flesh color. Won't come off in bath. As easy to apply as a postage stamp. 4 special sizes and shapes.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

Do You Want to Make Men OBEY YOU?

Do you want to make him love you wildly, fiercely? Do you want to make him say, "Darling, I adore you. I worship you. I'll do ANYTHING for YOU!" Do you want to make him OBEY your every command? Then use CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume) to help you CONTROL Men. One woman told me that CHEZ-ELLE is the STRONGEST perfume she ever used. Another woman told us that she blesses the day she first used CHEZ-ELLE, because now her husband comes home at night to help her.

Just send me your name and address and I will rush a Trial Bottle of CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume) to you. When the postman delivers CHEZ-ELLE in a plain package, deposit only $2 plus postage (3 for $5) with him on this GUARANTEE. Use CHEZ-ELLE for 10 days. If you don't agree that CHEZ-ELLE is the most POWERFUL perfume you ever used, return it and I'll send your $2 right back. Write NOW to

TRULOVE, 58 Walker St., Dept. 102-AC, New York 13

BEAUTIFUL NAILS

Qticare Removes cuticle without cutting! Safe, gentle, convenient, and in its own handy applicator vial.

TUFFENAIL Not a polish or sealer—an active solution that aids in correcting breaking, splitting, peeling. In applicator.

Each 25c at your 5 & 10 Cent Store

VOGUE PRODUCTS, LOS ANGELES 31, CALIFORNIA

lot of hogwash, and now I'm saying again that it just isn't so.

When I mentioned the rumor to Alan, he said, "Eight guys, eh? Boy! Do they actually believe that? . . . It's true, I did hurt one stunt man once—and, incidentally, I was sick over it for days after it happened."

I knew that incident. It was during the filming of a scene for Wild Harvest. You may remember the scene: ten men rushed Bob Preston and Alan in a free-for-all fracas staged in a wheatfield.

Now actors, you understand, learn to miss with their blows in a fight. It looks as if they hit their opponents, but actually their fists graze by the other guys' chins by a hair. In this scene, Alan misjudged his distance and the blow landed on the cheek of the stunt man who was attacking him. Because Alan had a belt wrapped around his knuckles, he made a gash in the man's cheek.

"The stunt man's name was Vic Machetti," said Alan. "I still apologize to him every time I see him."

That's the only time Alan ever hurt anybody in any picture sequence, and it was purely an accident. Ask anybody on the lot at Paramount and you'll find that Alan Ladd is tops with the whole crew, right down to the messenger boys.

Now let's examine the notion that the publicity about Alan's athletic prowess is mere hot air. Alan's biography sent out from Paramount says that he was a brilliant swimmer in high school and held the West Coast diving championship in 1932. This is the sort of thing people like to say isn't so. But it happens that this particular item is completely true.

On one occasion, Alan had to prove it—and did so. He was in New York to attend the preview of one of his pictures. The newspapers had received his biography as background material for anything they wished to write about him. The morning after his arrival in the big city, an editor with an overdose of skepticism phoned Alan's hotel room.

"Your biog says you were West Coast Diving Champion," the skeptic growled. "I don't believe it. If you want me to print anything like that, you'll have to prove to me you can dive."

Alan listened to the man's challenge, then said, "How do you want me to prove it?"

"Meet me at the New York Athletic Club this afternoon at two. I'll have my photographer with me. We'll go down to the pool and give you a chance to dive."

That afternoon, Alan showed up at the New York Athletic Club pool ready for the test. The editor was there, the photographer was there with his camera loaded. But they weren't alone. The word had spread around town and the pool was lined six deep all around with fans waiting for their hero to prove his publicity.

The editor grunted a greeting as Alan came up to shake hands, then watched the star climb the ladder to the high board, walk out, try the spring, poise a moment for balance and then float out on space in a perfect swan dive which brought an "Ahhhhh" from the breathless fans around the pool.

The flashbulbs on the photog's camera worked overtime for the next half-hour as Alan, without a word, climbed the ladder again and again to launch into a series of plain and fancy dives.

When it was over the photog said, "What a bunch of pictures I got! Alan, you were terrific."

The editor apologized—and has been an ardent Ladd fan ever since.

So if anybody whispers, "those things about Alan Ladd's being a big athlete are just publicity"—you can say, "Nuts!"

By the time you read this story, the Ladds will be moving into their Holmby Hills Dream House, just outside of Hollywood. They have been living in Sue's Los Feliz home—and this has led wagging tongues to say, "he's never bought her a home."

room to grow . . .

As fact shows it, Alan bought the lot in Holmby Hills about five years ago. Alan paid $12,000 for the spacious private knoll in one of the most exclusive residential areas. He's been offered a handsome profit on it many times.

But he hasn't sold. Instead, he has built Sue a dream house of modern French Provincial design, with a swimming pool and lots of bedrooms.

They need the bedrooms. Sue's daughter is growing up, and, as I mentioned before, is cute as the dickens. She's dating the field, and the field is standing in line. That means she has to have a room of her own to keep her things out of five-year-old Alana's curious reach. And Alan, Jr. is 11. His footballs and hockey sticks would raise hob with David's two-year-old noggin if the contact came too close, so he needs a room of his own.

About three years ago, Sue and Alan bought a 25-acre ranch at the western end of San Fernando valley. Out there they raise Palominos and thoroughbred horses to sell. There's a converted garage on the property which they've made into a week-end hideaway. It's plenty of fun and a good investment.

Alan says, "I don't know anything about stocks and bonds, so I bought a ranch. I can put my two feet on it and know what I've got."

Finally, let's look at the idea that Alan reached the top of his profession overnight through one fortunate break—getting a sensational role in This Gun for Hire. Well, Alan had an ulcer which recently kept him on milk and eggs. And the reason he had it was because he starved for six years around Hollywood before he got any kind of a break. (However, he seems to have it under control—if the healthy lunch he put away when I saw him the other day is any indication.)

So if anyone comes to you and says, "Alan Ladd is just another one of those lucky so-and-so's who got to be a star without working hard and going hungry to get there," you can do Alan, and me, a great favor if you'll just say, "Nonsense!"

THE END

critic's corner

WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

But somehow, this Warner cut-up does not have the natural spontaneity nor the artificial smoothness of the play. Something has been subtracted in the transmission to the screen, and this time John Loves Mary carries neither conviction nor charm.

Bosley Crowther
N. Y. Times

John Loves Mary is more hilarious than the play, a cinema knockout. The difficulty in transplanting a one-set comedy to the screen is enormous, yet the bridge is spanned so expertly here, the laughs are uproarious and sustained without much action.

Justin Gilbert
N. Y. Mirror

the Tampax Girl is easy in her mind!

Ask her—and she'll probably freely admit that her attitude towards "those days" underwent a decided improvement the first month she used Tampax for sanitary protection.

NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS
NO ODOR

AS AN AID TO RELAXATION at such times Tampax has a great deal to offer. It is worn internally, discarding belts, pins and external pads. Therefore no awareness of restraining bulk. No self-consciousness about outlines that might show under dresses. No fear that odor would form.

HOW TAMPAX WAS INVENTED is a simple story. A doctor applied the medical principle of internal absorption to this special need of women. Tampax is made of pure, highly absorbent cotton compressed into easy-to-use applicators. When in place it is unseen and unfelt.

SOME PRACTICAL MATTERS: Tampax comes in 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior) to suit varying needs. Not necessary to remove for tub or shower. Changing quick and disposal no trouble. An average month's supply slips into your purse. Or an economy box will provide 4 months' average supply. Sold at drug stores and notion counters everywhere. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

And no wonder! KARE, the new "wonder" deodorant, keeps you bath-sweet. So nice to use ... a satin-smooth lotion! Say goodbye to old-fashioned creams and liquids. Discover KARE. First major improvement in deodorants in 14 years . . . the only one that . . .

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration harmlessly
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢*, at drug and department stores.

plus tax*

one second's Kare LOTION DEODORANT and you're carefree!

The Grove Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW! ORDER BY MAIL · 15 · EXOTIC COLORS

SIZES: 1 to 12 narrow, med. wide

Pat. Pend. Actual Photo

Velvety Red, Green, Black, Navy, White, Grey, Purple, Beige, Taupe, Yellow, Gold, Silver, Bronze, Balenciaga, Copper.

GRECIAN THONGS with PLATFORM

- Built In Air Lift Arch
- Wedge Heel. Removable Straps
- Crepe Sole

Never before offered at a price so low! Fit Guaranteed! Money-back guarantee!

ONLY 2.95

COLLEEN ENTERPRISES, Haverhill, Mass.

Rush me prs. Grecian Thongs @ 2.95 ea.
SIZE..... WIDTH..... COLOR.....
2nd Color Choice .....
NAME .....
STREET .....
CITY ..... ZONE..... STATE.....
☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D.

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

News: Lois Carnahan, president of the June Allyson club, asked us to announce that her club is in no way connected with the former club for June. This is an absolutely new club and we'd like to add that it is a fine one with excellent journals. Another little known but well-liked club is the one in honor of John Garfield. Dues are 50 cents a year. The New Stars club has been re-organized, and if you're one of those interested in all stars, that's the club for you.

Crooner Darwin Dane sang at a Heart Association Fund dance and collected over $100, prexy Bette Dunihue writes . . . We think the Roy Rogers club has the right idea. They recently donated $50 to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund, and their Indiana branch collected a large sum for the Red Cross. How about you other clubs taking a lesson? . . . The Agnes Moorehead club is disbanded and Roy Buchanan would like all former members to write to him at 1219 N. 15 Ave., Pensacola, Florida, so that he may refund their dues.

9TH SEMI-ANNUAL TROPHY CUP CONTEST
3rd Lap

When you think of compacts, you just naturally think of ELGIN-AMERICAN. And we're giving them away as prizes in our monthly Best Correspondents contest. Handsomely finished in jeweler's bronze, they're lightweight and durable. We've noticed some wonderful work among you editors, ever since we announced that your particular prizes were to be REVLON'S KING'S RANSOM set—and we can't really blame you. Those seven lipsticks plus a gold holder in a black velvet box would tempt anyone. For THIS IS MY BEST winners, the ENGER-KRESS COMPANY has provided a winner in billfolds. You writers will love the Candlelight model which comes in pink, yellow, green, blue and red. And there's room for your wealth of folding money and coins as well as snaps and passes. TANGEE TRIP KITS are real incentives for bringing out the drawing pencils. The set, packed with cosmetics, is handy at home and you'll find it indispensable when you take that well-deserved vacation!

This Is My Best: (100 points) "The Great Day," Gene Barnath, Joan Goldsamt, Robert Q. Lewis journal. "Are You Really a Good American?" Ann Dubria, Art Lund journal (Dunn). "Madness at Gilmore Field," Bev Shoemaker, Frank Sinatra journal (Bachman). "Death Comes to Aunt Marion," Shirley Grosbier, Harry Babbitt journal. "Open Letter to Christina," Doris Pyle, Sinatra journal (Pacillo). "Terry Takes a Tour," Robert Waste, Terry Moore journal. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. Alan Ladd journal (Kee). League 3. Macdonald Carey journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. Peggy Pearl, Alan Ladd journal. League 3. Tied. Barbara Parkes, Michael Kirby journal. Evelyn Fish. Peggy Lee journal. Best Artist: (150 points) Gerry Robertson, Dick Contino journal (Rosenthal). Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. Alan Ladd journal (Pearl). League 3. Peggy Lee journal. Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Margaret Grant, Dan Duryea club. League 3. Marge Lacko, Dorothy Shay Club. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Tied. Ginger Rogers Club (parcels to England and Holland). James Stewart Club ($60.00 to Runyon Cancer Fund). League 3. Tied. Bobby Breen Club (Contribution to Chicago Heart Association). Martin and Lewis Club (March of Dimes Contribution). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Nelson Eddy Club (Mottola). League 2. Dick Contino Club (Diefenbach). League 3. Penny Edwards Club. Candid Camera Winners: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others) Margie Clay, June Allyson Club. LaHamer Branlett, Larry Parks Club, Nelda Clough, Charles Korvin Club, Alyce Gogos, Darryl Hickman Club (Campbell). Barbara Troeger, The Bingites. Lee Garber, Mel Torme Club.

Leading Clubs: League 1. Gene Autry Club (850), Jane Wyman Club (700), Roy Rogers Club (600). League 2. Joan Crawford Club (850), Contino, Peck, Melari Club (700), Bob Crosby Club (600). League 3. Charles Korvin Club (750), Peggy Lee Club (650), Macdonald Carey Club (600).

Relieve Constipation Pleasantly!

GENTLY EFFECTIVELY THOROUGHLY DEPENDABLY

MAKE up your mind right now. No more harsh, bad-tasting laxatives for you! Be wise, relieve constipation pleasantly with Ex-Lax!

You'll enjoy its delicious chocolate taste. Ex-Lax is convenient to take. No bottles! No spoons! No mess! What's more, Ex-Lax brings easy, comfortable relief. It is effective in a gentle way.

Take Ex-Lax, the dependable laxative many doctors use in their practice. Ex-Lax is still only 10¢. No better laxative at any price.

When Nature 'forgets'... remember

EX-LAX

THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

MAKE $$$$ EASILY

Selling greeting cards, napkins, coasters, stationery and a complete line with name on. Costs nothing to try. Send for samples and Selling Plan on approval.

MERIT
370 PLANE ST. DEPT. J NEWARK, N. J.

Ex Ugly-Duckling Now Loves To Show Off Her Beautiful Profile

She used to be miserable about her ill-shaped nose —no wonder she hated mirrors. Today, thanks to Plastic Surgery, she loves to show off her "re-modeled" profile. For the facts about Plastic Surgery send for fascinating book, YOUR NEW FACE IS YOUR FORTUNE which tells and shows (with 88 before-and-after photos) how nasal and other featural corrections are made. Book is sent in plain sealed envelope for only..... 25c

FRANKLIN HOUSE, Books
1102 Fox Bldg., Phila. 3, Pa., Dept. 3-R

FIVE GREAT LESSONS

(Continued from page 54)

little neck and a lot of freckles and she felt sorry for me."

Whatever the reason—and of course it was love—Louise married Spencer Tracy. After a year together on the road, she decided to abandon the stage because she realized that two theatrical careers in one family usually make for a good deal of discord.

It took a lot of courage for her to do that, because Tracy was then unknown and making very little money. In fact, when their first-born, John, arrived, the Tracys were flat broke. A few weeks later they learned that their little son had been born deaf.

"Spence kept looking for stage parts," Mrs. Tracy says now, "and he kept getting them, but they never lasted very long and in order to increase his income he began selling pianos.

"I was urged to go back on the stage and to keep Spence in the piano business. I think it was Pat O'Brien who put that bee in my bonnet. He and Spence had lived together at Mrs. Brown's boarding house on West End Avenue—on credit, of course, but I didn't think that my going back to the stage or his going into the piano business would do much for Spence's pride, and I said so. I stayed in our little apartment in New York taking care of John and knowing in my heart that one day Spence would get a break."

self-made man . . .

That day wasn't too far off. John Ford, the director, spotted Tracy in the New York production of The Last Mile and brought him to Hollywood. After seeing his first screen test, MGM turned him down, but a few months later the big shots had a change of heart, and Spence was signed. He's been at Metro ever since.

Mrs. Tracy says, "Whatever Spence has today he's earned himself through hard work." A modest little woman, she steadfastly refuses to take any credit for her husband's success, adamantly declines to say how tempting it was to her back in the lean 1920's to tell her husband to give up acting and get a steady job.

Instead, she likes to talk modestly about the John Tracy Clinic for the Deaf which she founded in Los Angeles. It's an organization which teaches deaf children how to read lips and understand the language. "It claims most of my spare time," she says, "and most of Spence's spare money."

"If it weren't for Louise," says Pat O'Brien, "Spencer Tracy might today be a house-to-house salesman, ringing your front door bell and saying, 'Lady, would you like to buy a piano?'"

Like Mrs. Tracy and Mrs. Crosby, there are a dozen other Hollywood wives who've realized the basic incompatibility involved in having two entertainment careers in one family. Readily, they've all been willing to sacrifice their own.

Dana Andrews' wife was a promising young actress at the Pasadena Playhouse when she met the former filling-station attendant from Van Nuys. As soon as the wedding bells sounded for her, however, she renounced her acting career.

Jimmy Cagney's wife, the former Frances Vernon, dropped her histrionics when she married Jimmy.

Dolores Hope, Bob's wife, was considered a potential singing star, but when she caught Les Townes in her net (that's Bob's real name) she realized that taking care of him was career enough for her.

4 SIMPLE STEPS TO A LOVELIER COMPLEXION

Try this new 4-step aid to lovelier-looking skin

● Do you want an aid to more alluring complexion—one that's lovelier to look at, smoother to touch? Then take a beauty hint from thousands of attractive women who have stopped fussing with elaborate treatments, countless jars and bottles. Turn to one cream—Noxzema Skin Cream.

Thrilling Improvement

Recently, 181 women from all walks of life took part in a skin improvement test supervised by 3 skin specialists. Each woman had some little skin fault. Each woman followed faithfully Noxzema's new 4-Step Beauty Routine.

Here are the astonishing results: Of all these women tested, 4 out of 5 showed softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin in two weeks time!

New 4-Step Routine

1. In the morning, bathe face with warm water, apply Noxzema with a wet cloth and "cream-wash" your face.
2. Apply Noxzema as a powder base.
3. Before retiring, repeat morning cleansing.
4. Massage Noxzema lightly into your face. Pat on extra Noxzema over any blemishes you may have.

That's all you have to do. No greasy creams to tissue off. No more expensive foundations. Noxzema, unlike most beauty creams, is a greaseless, medicated formula. Designed to aid in healing externally-caused blemishes, and to help soothe and soften rough, dry skin.

Read how 2 women helped solve their skin problems:

A roommate suggested Noxzema to charming Mavis McAvoy for her dry skin. "It left my face feeling so soft and smooth," she says, "now it's my all-purpose beauty cream. I use it for my complexion and hands, too."

Bette George says, "My skin used to be dry and dead-looking. But Noxzema helped improve it so quickly. I use it every day to help keep my skin looking so smooth and soft. Many say my skin looks lustrous . . . my secret's Noxzema."

Over 25,000,000 jars sold yearly. Try Noxzema! See if you aren't thrilled at the way it can help your skin . . . as it has helped so many thousands of other women. See for yourself why over 25,000,000 jars are sold every year! Available at all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax.

SHAMPOO
without water

NEW DRY WAY TAKES ONLY 10 minutes

WAVE STAYS IN! You'll thrill to the glorious way Minipoo restores beautiful sheen—without disturbing your wave.

QUICK AND EASY! No water, no soap, no drying. With its simple mitt applicator, fragrant Minipoo removes excess oil, dirt and hair odors in just 10 minutes. Leaves your hair shining clean and fresh!

IDEAL DURING COLDS!

When Ann catches cold, safe, dry, Minipoo keeps her hair clean.

Sis' sudden date finds her ready with shining hair, thanks to handy Minipoo!

Minipoo

THE QUICK DRY SHAMPOO

30 Shampoos and handy Mitt in each package

Stars', Directors', Producers', Agents' Home Addresses!

Contact your favorite movie stars at their home addresses. If interested in a movie career, write famous directors, producers and agents, assured they'll read your letters and see your pictures. All inclusive directory only $1.00.

ENCLOSE SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE

PLA-TYME

1376 Ridgewood Ave. Hollywood 28, Calif.

REAL PHOTOS of HOLLYWOOD STARS

Free!

Beautiful Hollywood Photos Album sent free with every order if you act now!

Real glossy photos, size 3¼ x 4¼, of HOLLYWOOD STARS. List your favorites and rush your order now. Orders filled same day.

12 for 50c — 25 for $1.00

SPECIAL: Valuable money-saving coupons sent with each $1 order.

HOLLYWOOD PHOTOS

Dept. M-5 230 Grand St., N. Y. 13, N. Y.

Macdonald Carey's wife gave up her career as soon as Mac slipped a ring on her finger, and the latest convert to the one-career-in-a-family fold is Brenda Marshall. "I've decided," she says, "to let Bill (Holden) do most of the acting while I do most of the child-caring. Marriages out here last longer that way."

Bette Davis is still another actress who has long felt that if a girl has a choice between husband and career, she should always choose husband. Years ago, there was a young actress under contract to Warner Brothers named Jane Bryan. Everyone agreed that Jane not only had a sensational figure but also a sensational future. She was pretty, intelligent, talented, and all primed for the big star buildup.

It so happened that Jane fell in love with a man named Justin Dart who is today president of the Rexall Drug Company. "What shall I do?" Jane asked Bette who was then her best friend. "Justin wants to marry me but that means I can't have an acting career."

"Don't think twice," Bette advised. "Marry him before he changes his mind and get out of the business."

Now a mother, albeit belatedly, Miss Davis may pursue her old counsel. She may quit the movies and retire to Laguna Beach and run a dramatic school. It would be difficult to find a better teacher anywhere.

respected mates . . .

It frequently occurs that there are many actresses who aren't willing to renounce their careers for marriage. These actresses—like Irene Dunne, Ingrid Bergman, Loretta Young and Claudette Colbert—came up the hard way and feel that the abandonment of all they've worked for is far too great a price to pay.

They believe, moreover, that it's possible for a successful actress to combine marriage with a career—but in doing this, all of them have explicitly followed rule number two: If an actress wants both career and a happy marriage, she must wed someone outside the motion picture business, preferably a professional man who is as respected and well-known in his profession as she is in hers.

A classic example is Irene Dunne's marriage to Dr. Frank Griffin, who for many years has been recognized as one of the foremost dentists in the country.

"I honestly believe," Irene says, "that I've been able to combine a successful career with a happy marriage because my husband and I have different vocations."

The Griffins live in Holmby Hills in a nine-room French Provincial home, and when the sight-seeing buses roll by, the guides always point it out as, "The Griffin home where Irene Dunne lives," and not as "the Irene Dunne residence."

Claudette Colbert, who is married to Dr. Joel Pressman, one of the great otolaryngologists (nose-ear-and-throat doctor) in America, has a wonderful marriage, because she too enjoys a similar set-up.

She realizes that, in the worldly scheme of things, a doctor is more important to humanity than an actress, and she gladly makes her career subsidiary to her husband's. She is called Mrs. Pressman by all her friends and, unlike that of other actresses whose husbands do nothing but manage their wives' careers, Claudette's circle of acquaintanceship is not bounded by Warner Brothers on the north and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on the south.

Ingrid Bergman whose dentist-husband only recently was graduated to the ranks of brain surgeon, is as proud as all get-out to be the wife of Dr. Peter Lindstrom. When tradesmen address her as "Miss Bergman," she's always quick to correct them firmly with, "I'm Mrs. Lindstrom."

When she was in England last year, the switchboard operators at her hotel kept referring to the actress as Miss Bergman. One day, Ingrid was standing in the lobby when her husband strode through. As he did, she reached over and tapped the chief operator on the back. The girl turned around. "There," Ingrid said, pointing to the tall, blond man, "is Dr. Lindstrom." The operator cocked an eyebrow quizzically. "Dr. Lindstrom is my husband," the actress said.

After that, whenever Ingrid was phoned, the operator was sure to say, "Mrs. Lindstrom, there's a call for you."

One of the reasons actresses divorce husbands who have no high professional or occupational status is that they cannot respect them either for their earnings or accomplishment.

Rita Hayworth, for example, was once married to a man 22 years older than she, named Edward Judson. "The trouble with our marriage," she told her lawyer, "was that Ed didn't do anything. He had an allowance of $400 a month from his oil properties, and he spent all his time managing me. If only he'd had something to do, it could have worked out. But he hadn't worked for eight or nine years and it left him too much time to watch over me. He was my husband, nursemaid, and everything."

Joan Crawford, who's been married to three actors in the past 20 years, recently made the statement: "In all the years I was married, I always supported myself."

No prominent actress ever stays married very long to a husband whose position in the eyes of society is inconsequential.

The third lesson in love to be derived from happy Hollywood marriages is this: In order to surmount the competitive sex perils of Hollywood, the inevitable husband-stealing and flirtations, marriages must be sealed by the relatively rapid arrival of children.

It is basic sociology that more marriages have been cemented by children than by any other one factor. The recent reconciliation between Gloria DeHaven and John Payne was prompted by the fact that the persons most hurt by the divorce would have been two innocent children. Now, because of the kids, the Payne marriage may yet prove lasting.

Greer Garson in her two marriages had

MODERN SCREEN

"Your mother and I are canning a bushel of apples, dear."

no children. As a result, it was relatively easy for her to obtain a divorce. Ditto Ginger Rogers, Ava Gardner, Doris Day, Paulette Goddard.

There used to be a Hollywood-held theory, fallacious as most, that the public did not like its great actresses to bear children. It was felt that such natural behavior might detract from an actress' glamor and cost the star her following at the all-important box-office.

Betty Grable, Jeanne Crain, Loretta Young, and a host of others have knocked this theory into the cocked hat where it belongs.

"It's really the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard," Loretta says of it. "The primary purpose of a wife is to bear children, and I believe that every woman who can, should."

Bing Crosby says that if you've got four boys, your marriage can't possibly go on the rocks. "What woman in her right mind," he asks, "wants to steal a guy who has four wildcats?"

Bob Hope, who has four of his own, says that for once in his life Bing is absolutely right. "Young girls look up to me," Bob says jokingly, "until they find out I'm the father of four. Then they ship me back to Dolores."

Dana Andrews' wife, Mary, says: "Dana not only has a flock of kids to support but also two boats. I can see a woman trying to take a man with four kids, particularly if she's strongly maternal—but no woman is going to try it with an actor who's also in love with two boats."

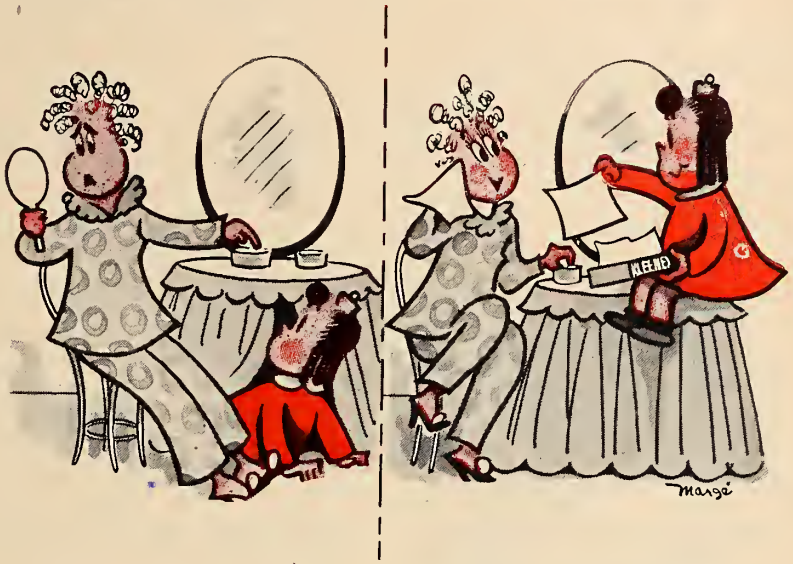
share-holders . . .

Scan every Hollywood marriage that has lasted ten years or more and, with rare exceptions, you'll discover they've been blessed by the binding presence of children.

You will also discover, particularly if you're perceptive, that all these marriages are exemplifications of love-lesson number four: Share your partner's interests as much as possible.

Claudette Colbert's husband was a Naval flight surgeon during the war. He loves flying and finds deep relaxation in it. Claudette, however, can't see flying under any circumstances. She hates it. This hasn't stopped her from taking flying lessons in order to understand her husband's off-hours talk. "No greater love," says her instructor, "hath any woman for her husband. Every time Claudette gets out of a plane she looks white as a sheet."

As a little girl, Betty Garrett, who's married to Larry Parks, was never particularly fond of motorcycles. She was a dancing student, and she was always taught to take care of her feet. Having a motorcycle fall on top of your knee, she realized, was no way in which to broach a successful career.



When she married Larry Parks, she learned that she was wedded to a man who would rather ride motorcycles than play Al Jolson. Parks is the premier motorcycle fanatic in Hollywood. As a result, Betty now escorts him on his wild cycle rodeos through the Hollywood hills—even though she has a deep and abiding fear of the darn machines. Her explanation is simple: "It makes him happy," she says, "to have me along."

Eleanor Powell Ford was raised in conservative New England where nice girls were never taught the fine art of playing pool. When she married Glenn Ford, however, Glenn insisted that he needed a partner who could handle a cue stick in a pinch.

He bought a nifty billiard table and began instructing Eleanor in the art. Today, Ellie can put the eight ball in the side pocket as neatly as any sharpy on Broad-

LITTLE LULU

Tired make-up- Quick take-up!

LITTLE LULU SAYS: WHEN YOU UNGILD THE LILY, SOFT KLEENEX★ TISSUES EASE OFF MAKE-UP, GENTLY, ... SAVE FACE! JUST ONE OF THE MANY GOOD REASONS WHY KLEENEX IS YOUR BEST BUY IN TISSUES.

© International Cellucotton Products Co. ★ T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Wonderful, Wonderful Welsbro says ANNE JEFFREYS popular Hollywood and Broadway Star

From $19.75

Like the loveliest of stars, WELSBRO Watches always rate big applause. Appealing in beauty—outstanding in performance, WELSBRO unites elegance with precision timekeeping.

You will be very happy to own a WELSBRO.

At better jewelers everywhere.

Weissman Watch Corp. 20 W. 47 St. N.Y. 19, N.Y.

Every Tampon user should know

fibs*

is the Tampon with Rounded Ends... the only Tampon "Quilted" for Comfort.. "Quilted" for Safety...

Next time try Fibs

(internal sanitary protection)

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

STRICTLY PERSONAL to YOUNG WIVES!

learn about this HIGHER type

INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Easier, Daintier . . . Yet one of the MOST EFFECTIVE METHODS!

Greaseless Suppository Assures

Continuous Medication for Hours

Young wives can be truly grateful for Zonitors—a higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness which gives you extra advantages. Zonitors are one of the MOST EFFECTIVE methods ever discovered. They are far more convenient, daintier, less embarrassing to use —SO POWERFULLY GERMICIDAL yet ABSOLUTELY SAFE to delicate tissues. Positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-smarting.

Easy To Carry If Away From Home

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. They are not the type that quickly melt away. Instead, they instantly begin to release powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours. They never leave any sticky residue.

Leave No Tell-Tale Odor

Zonitors do not 'mask' offending odor. They actually destroy it. Help guard against infection. Zonitors kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE Zonitors immediately kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-59, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

way. "Some women," she cracks, "wash for their husbands, others cook, clean, and slave. I play pool."

Motion picture work being what it is, there are long periods of time when actors and their wives are separated. Actors go on location or promotion trips, and their wives stay behind. While Mrs. Gary Cooper is taking care of their daughter, her husband is working, making love to Ingrid Bergman. While Ronald Colman is in a clinch before the cameras with say, Shelley Winters, Mrs. Colman is cleaning house. Under such an occupational set-up, there is a fifth love-lesson which all Hollywood wives have learned: You must have faith in the fundamental goodness and loyalty of the man you marry.

If Mrs. Sinatra, Mrs. Tracy, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Crosby, et al, believed one-tenth of the items they read or the rumors that are circulated about their partners, their marriages wouldn't last a week.

Publicity, it so happens, is a necessary adjunct to the motion picture business, and publicity agents are a highly imaginative lot who will stop at nothing to get their charges in the columns. As a result, columnists have paired Dan Dailey with Betty Grable, Bing Crosby with Joan Caulfield, Frank Sinatra with Lana Turner, Robert Montgomery with Joan Crawford, Robert Young with Jane Greer.

Hollywood wives have learned to accept such gossip with the proverbial grain of salt. Those who haven't, find that they live hours of torture, torment, and suspicion.

For the most part, however, Hollywood wives have learned to dismiss anything they read in the gossip columns with a collective shrug of their shoulders.

Some of them learn more easily than others. When Mr. and Mrs. Gene Kelly first came to Hollywood, a local gossip columnist carried the following item: "Gene Kelly, the dancer who made such a hit as Pal Joey on Broadway, is carrying the torch for that very cute Tina Boswell."

"Well," says Mrs. Kelly, "I tried to find out who that girl, Tina Boswell, was. After three days I discovered that Tina Boswell was the name of a horse running at Santa Anita."

THE END

LANA TURNER'S BITTER TRIUMPHS

(Continued from page 57)

woman in a million who attracts men as naturally as she breathes. The record also shows that her loves have been stormy. Okay, they've been stormy. Let's drop it there for a while.

Now look at the other side, and you'll see a girl of 15, plunged into a strange and glittering sea, trying at first just to keep her head above water. Look at the pattern of her search for love, and you'll see that Lana's been the one to get hurt. That she's never whined, never borne a grudge, never spared herself by blasting the other fellow. Given the same experience, most girls would have turned cynical and cagey. "Next time I'll watch out!" Not Lana. There's no room in her make-up for bitterness or caution. If there were, she might have been saved a number of heartaches. When love appears, she believes in love, no matter how many times it's crashed round her head. Call her gullible, shortsighted, or pick your own adjective—her way is to give without counting the cost, and if she loses, to lose like a good sport.

"I've skinned my nose a few times," she told a friend, "yet I'm glad I've lived as I have. I can't believe anything very awful happens to you, as long as you know your feelings were true when you felt them."

Going all the way back to Greg Bautzer, no one will dispute the truth of her feeling for him. It was Lana who waited at the phone for him to call, and Lana who wept wild tears when the break came. Some people think she married Artie Shaw out of pain for Bautzer. Yes, that was a crazy marriage. One date, and they were off to Las Vegas. But Lana was 19. Older and wiser women have married Artie Shaw, who seems to be a gentleman of persuasive charm.

A year after her final divorce from Shaw, she married Steve Crane. For once she was cagey, for once she took Hollywood by surprise. She'd kept Steve under wraps for months, which was quite a feat. Nobody knew about him but her mother and Louis B. Mayer. Even Linda Darnell, who went along as bridesmaid, didn't meet him till Thursday night. And Lana didn't know till then that Friday was to be her wedding day. Originally they'd planned it for Sunday. But that evening, while they were double-dating with Linda and Alan Gordon, they phoned Steve's mother in Indiana—and Lana came back all blushes and laughter because Steve's mother had called her the most beautiful girl in the world. Suddenly it seemed silly to wait till Sunday.

"Why do we have to wait?" asked Steve.

"I don't know," said Lana. "Linda, if we go tomorrow, will you be my bridesmaid?"

That's how it happened, and of course Lana was head-over-heels in love. Why else would Lana have married Steve? Her best false friends have never called her calculating. Steve had only himself to offer and, as things turned out, he was somewhat premature in offering so much.

In December came the news that Lana was expecting a baby. On January 8th she filed suit for annulment of her marriage. Two blank factual statements, behind which a girl's heart was being torn apart.

Most women want babies. With Lana, it was more than wanting—it was an ever-present hunger, a passion for children. She told me how she'd gone to the doctor's office, not daring to believe. "Don't let me hope," she prayed. "Don't let me hope, and then be disappointed. I couldn't stand it."

The doctor came back.

"It's—not true?" quavered Lana. "I'm—not going to have a baby?"

"It is true. You are going to have a baby."

Her head went down on her arms. "I can't help it," she sobbed. "I just never thought I'd be that lucky."

But then came a crushing blow: she discovered that her marriage wasn't legal. I'm not rehashing the details of that mess. The story goes that Crane had signed separate maintenance papers early in '41, and taken it for granted that these constituted his interlocutory decree. Well, they didn't. After the first shock, Lana's one thought was for the baby. By a quirk of the law, only an annulment could give her child the right to the name of Crane. So she lifted her head and faced the music. . . .

That took one kind of courage. Soon she was called on for another kind. All along she'd known that, because of the Rh factor in her blood, child-bearing wouldn't come easy to her. Her grandmother had died at her mother's birth. Her mother had all but died when she was born. The emotional upheavals Lana had gone through had done their part in lowering her resistance. Late in January she was taken to the hospital.

"Lana," said the doctor, "I'm afraid we can't save the baby."

For a moment she couldn't grasp it. She lay very still, as if stillness might drive the sound of the words away. Slowly she lifted her eyes to the kind face above her. "Let's wait," she pleaded. But the doctor didn't think they should wait, that waiting might endanger her own life.

From hidden reserves flowed strength, as Lana's spirit rose to the challenge. When she lifted her eyes again, they were no longer pleading. "I'm going—to have this baby—if it kills me!"

She had her baby, though not without more anguish. Cheryl was born anemic and was removed, at the age of five hours, to the Children's Hospital, to be given one blood transfusion after another. They told Lana—they had to. "Nothing to worry about," the doctor assured her. "Just a little transfusion to pick her up." But not till she was a month old did Cheryl come home, cured of her ailment.

Meantime, Lana and Steve had remarried in March. This also brought barbs from people who like to throw barbs. How could the girl take him back after what he'd done to her? Well, for one thing, the girl was still in love with him. For another, he was her baby's father. For a third, she's got what some of us could use more of—charity for human lapses.

acting is for women . . .

As to what finally broke them up, it's anyone's guess. They called it career trouble, said Steve was eager to be an actor and thought Lana would help him. On that subject she made herself good and clear. "Acting just isn't right for most men. When a man has to put on a mask and assume poses, I think it's bad for him. With a woman, it's practically second nature. With a man, it often becomes an affectation, and neither Steve nor I want that."

Apparently Steve did. He got himself a contract at Columbia, which led exactly nowhere in the end. But at the time they were all steamed up about him. I remember offering Lana my congratulations. Her face shut down. She wasn't having any.

It was a month earlier that I'd heard her talking to Steve on the phone. "Goodbye, darling. I love you." A month later she brought suit for divorce. You figure it out. . . .

In Mervyn LeRoy's words, Lana's no little gray hen. Light and laughter are her natural element. She loves to go dancing, and you'd hardly expect her to go dancing with girls. If she danced with the same man twice in a row, out popped the knives. She paid them no mind—until she fell hard again for Turhan Bey.

Again she made no bones about how she felt. But the gentleman bowed out. You can take her word for it. A girl doesn't say she's been jilted just for the fun of it.

"He said, 'I'll call you tomorrow night,' and he never called and I never heard from him again," said Lana. "I don't know what happened—whether I did something or whether someone told him something about me."

She was painfully honest, and very unhappy. She steadfastly refused to place any blame on Turhan, beyond the bare fact that he'd broken it off. Even that was unlike her. As a rule, she clams up about a busted romance. But she'd been lambasted so often, and she'd had enough. Not for her own sake—for Cheryl's.

"It's so bad for me, with Cheryl growing up, to have everyone think I don't know my own mind. I knew my mind for a long time about Turhan. Because of my little girl, I don't want it said that I turn

WE WILL SEND YOU ANY ITEM YOU CHOOSE FOR APPROVAL UNDER OUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Simply indicate your selection on the coupon below and forward it with $1 and a brief note giving your age, occupation, and a few other facts about yourself. We will open an account for you and send your selection to you subject to your examination. If completely satisfied, pay the Expressman the required Down Payment and the balance in easy monthly payments. Otherwise, return your selection and your $1 will be refunded.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG

A217/C106 $75 for both

5 Diamond Engagement Ring, matching 5 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay 6.50 after examination, 6.75 a month.

A376/C334 $150 for both

11 Diamond Engagement Ring, matching 16 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or white Gold. Send $1, pay $14 after examination, 13.50 a month.

D418 $75

Man's Ring with 2 Diamonds, center simulated Ruby. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay 6.50 after examination, 6.75 a month.

F168 15.95

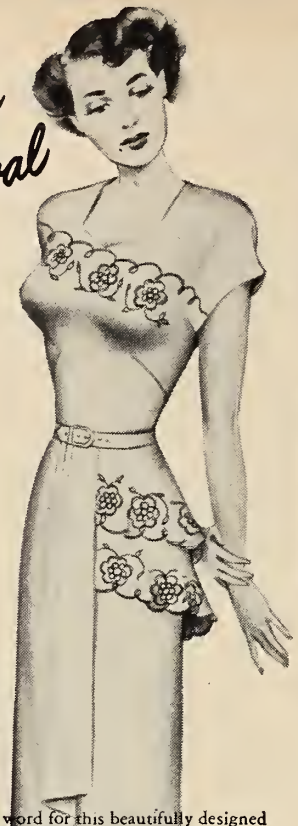
1 Carat genuine Zircon, 2 side Zircons set in 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay $1 after examination, 1.50 a month.

SEND $1 WITH COUPON — PAY BALANCE OF DOWN PAYMENT AFTER EXAMINATION

L. W. Sweet, 25 West 14th St. (Dept. D5)
New York 11, N. Y.
Enclosed find $1 deposit. Send me No._____
Price $_____. After examination, I agree to pay $_____ and required balance monthly thereafter until full price is paid, otherwise I'll return selection and you will refund my dollar.

NAME_____



ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

New York's Largest Mail Order Jewelers
Established 1878

L. W. Sweet

MAIL ORDER DIVISION FINLAY STRAUS, INC.
25 W. 14th St., NEW YORK 11, N. Y. Dept. D5

Sizes:
JUNIOR
9-11-13
15-17
REGULAR
10-12-14
16-18-20
LARGE
38-40-42
44-46-48

10 DAY TRIAL
Wear this new styled crepe dress at our risk—if in ten days you are not completely satisfied return dress for full refund.

Enticing is the word for this beautifully designed Romaine Crepe. Soft, draped skirt and contrasting color embroidery makes this an extremely flattering, easy-to-wear dress. Only $10.98

• SEND NO MONEY—MAIL COUPON TODAY FOR PROMPT DELIVERY •
BONNIE GAYE, Inc. Dept. EC-6
1051 S. LaBrea Ave., Los Angeles 35, Calif.
Rush "Enticing Crepe." I'll pay postman $10.98 each plus C.O.D. postage. I may return dress in 10 days for refund if not satisfied. Colors: Black, Gray, Toasted Almond, Navy, Parisian Green, White.

QUANTITY	SIZE	1st COLOR CHOICE	2nd COLOR CHOICE

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
Zone_____ State_____

NEVER-TEL
LIQUID Perfumed DEODORANT

Dancing, walking, working, playing . . . there's no better way to fresh, sweet underarm daintiness than NEVER-TEL.
NEVER-TEL, Dept. 7 A, Kansas City 6, Mo.

AMAZING CREAM REMOVES UNSIGHTLY HAIR QUICKLY, SAFELY

Acts Below "Razor Line" Without Cutting or Scraping Legs

The modern way to remove ugly hair from your legs is with Neet® Cream Depilatory. It works deeper than a razor, below the surface of the skin. Safer too from razor cuts and scratches. Neet leaves tender skin soft and smooth, free from razor stubble. Just apply Neet like any cream, then rinse off and hair disappears like magic.

lightly and frivolously from one man to another."

I've said it, and I say it again—there's no falsehood in Turner. She's on an eternal quest for happiness in love, and when she thinks she's found it, she thinks it'll be forever.

Everyone was convinced that Lana's love for Ty Power was the real thing. There was no question of Lana's utter devotion to Ty. She wouldn't so much as look at another man. And certainly he seemed just as devoted to her. They were constantly together. They held hands like a couple of moonstruck kids. He gave her diamond earrings, and a diamond ring which she wore on her engagement finger.

"Is it love?" Ty was asked.

"If it isn't," he said, "it's the nearest I've ever come to it."

Lana didn't hedge. "I'm deeply in love with him." But she wouldn't answer any marriage questions. "Please don't ask me. That can't be discussed till after Ty's divorce."

What they discussed between them remains between them. But from the bystander's viewpoint, if ever a girl had reason to hope for marriage, that girl was Lana. Their love was out in the open. Ty heaped her with every attention a man can offer the woman of his choice. In return, his wishes were her law.

But again, a love which she'd tried to build solid, crumbled to nothing. In my considered opinion, the blow from Ty was the worst she'd taken yet. . . .

tower of strength . . .

But she's easily comforted, you'll say. A few months later, and she's married to Bob Topping. Understand that, and you'll understand Lana. When a thing's washed up, it's washed up, and she doesn't look backward. Nor does she go crawling into holes when she's hurt. Holes are for weaklings. She gets dolled up and goes out and laughs—because nobody's going to poor-Lana her!

So she met Bob Topping, multi-millionaire, and knocked him for a loop—which was balm to her wounds, as it would be to any woman's in the same position. Bob was different from all the others who came a-wooing. He had everything to offer—wealth, position, security—and he offered them promptly. No reservations, no temporizing, no wait-till-I-get-my-divorce-and-then-we'll-see.

"I'll have my divorce by such-and-such a date," said Bob, "and we'll marry the next day." And in spite of thunder-and-lightning from Arline Judge, he had it.

Is it any wonder that she turned to Bob Topping, who was both a haven of kindness and a tower of strength? But he couldn't save the wedding. Take it from me, none of it was Lana's fault. She had one simple, reasonable wish. Her ill-starred marital bonds to Shaw and Crane had both been tied on hasty trips to Las Vegas. She wanted this marriage launched with dignity. She wanted flowers and music and the fixings a bride loves. And she wanted it quiet. So only 12 guests were asked to the ceremony.

But Lana had to be nice to the press too—knowing darn well, if she weren't, that they'd have her scalp. She invited them all to the post-wedding reception, and they took her scalp anyway.

Newspaper people are notorious cynics. It's their business not to believe in anything less obvious than the multiplication table. It's also their business to make hot copy, and poking fun makes hotter copy than sentiment. This was Bob's fourth marriage, and Lana's third. You could hardly expect the boys to take it seriously, or give a thought to the fact that it might be serious to the principals. The simplest account was edged with irony and embroidered in wisecracks. Lana'd posed patiently for 45 minutes after the wedding, then gone upstairs. "To swoon," chuckled the boys. None of them had been present at the ceremony, which didn't keep them from quoting verbatim. "The whole circle of guests distinctly heard Bob Topping say, 'This is forever.' Lana said, 'Yes, darling.' " Manufactured or not, that seemed to be the biggest joke of all.

When it comes to publicity, Lana can't win. Talk, and they mock you. Shut up, and you're uncooperative, so they're free to spin yarns out of the blue. It's the price she pays for being top glamor queen. She paid it in England and all over Europe. But when she came home last September, she didn't care. The world was rose-colored. She and Bob were going to have a baby in April.

Do you think the death of that hope stopped the gossips' mouths? They went right on chattering. They said she ran around too much, she wasn't careful. That's one for the books! She followed every order the doctor gave her. She knew the danger, as she'd known it with her firstborn. "I'm going to have this baby if it kills me," she said that day six years ago. Does such a woman take chances on the new life within her? Honestly, sometimes people make me sick. Lana lost her child for one reason and one reason only—for the same reason that almost cost her Cheryl—because of the Rh factor in her blood.

She's returning to MGM to make The Reformer and the Redhead. Instead of bending over a crib, she'll be facing a camera. Her career's important to her, but I'm sure she'd have given up ten careers for Timothy. . . .

You movie-goers have proven yourselves her friends. Go on proving it. Don't believe everything you hear. When you read the stories, knock off 90% for malice. In what's left, you won't find any plaster saint. She's got her flaws, even as you and I. But she's honest and kind and brave, and she's held her bright head high under a barrage that would have flattened most of us. In this imperfect world, I think that's enough. THE END that's hollywood!

When Ben Hecht was making Crime Without Passion, he offered Oscar Levant a job for $15 a week. As Levant tells it: "I knew it was a gag—all he wanted me around the studio for was to play duets with him. But after I'd been there a week or two, I found I was actually working. I went to Hecht and said 'Hey, do you want me to WORK here for $15 a week?'

"I'll raise your salary," Hecht said, "From now on, you're getting $300 a week!"

"Pay day came, but there was no check for me." I complained to Hecht.

"From now on, you're getting $750 a week."

When my salary was finally increased to $2,000, I went to Hecht and pleaded: "For God's sake, cut me back to $15 a week—I'm starving to death!"

Irving Hoffman
Hollywood Reporter

SAY IT ISN'T SO

(Continued from page 48)

square-cut jaw signals the fact that he doesn't need Old Aunt Hedda or anyone else to look after his interests. But there are times when a manly star, and especially a very amiable star like Greg Peck, is fairly defenseless. That's where I come in, and it's a pleasure.

A lot of fuss was recently made over a dinky domestic dilemma that Greg faced—faced and solved, I might add, very reasonably and normally. Yet because this minor incident was blown up and ballyhooed, the very mistaken impression may still exist that Gregory and his pretty wife, Greta, are having home trouble, that Greg Peck has let his success get him at last, that his balance is teetering. We used to call it "going Hollywood." Well, that doesn't fit Gregory Peck. And it never will. I'll bet on that.

"Sure," said Greg, easily and frankly, when I called. "Come on up, Hedda, I'll tell you just what happened." And pretty soon he was telling me, like this:

"We're a close family here," began Greg. "I'm home a lot and Greta and I are around each other all the time. I don't play golf or tennis, I don't shoot ducks, don't race horses or fly planes. When I'm not working I'm right here with Greta and the kids 24 hours a day. When I'm working out of town on location, she's with me if it's halfway possible. That's the way we like it. That's the way our home life ticks." down to the sea . . .

"You're very lucky," I told him, but I didn't have to. "Darned right," he agreed. "Only sometimes when two people see too much of each other, some trifle occurs and they take it out on each other, blow their tops, have a spat. That's what happened with us and so I decided to get away for the good of us both for a few days. I packed my bag, hopped in the Lincoln and headed South. Stopped at Del Mar, stayed overnight and got an idea: How about some fishing to relax? I'd been tied up pretty tight making Yellow Sky and then The Great Sinner—bang, bang—like that. If I have a hobby it's deep sea fishing and I have a friend who feels the same way. I gave him a ring, he met me in Tiajuana, we hopped a plane to Mazatlan, and—well, I caught me a 145-pound marlin swordfish! Then I came back home and things have been fine ever since."

Now, that's a plain and honest statement of fact—the only kind of an answer I've ever received from Gregory Peck to any question at any time. And I can't think of a more commonplace happenstance in any home since marriages began than the one he explained. Yet—because he's a Hollywood star and because, when a reporter called Greta and she answered, "Greg? I don't know where he is right now," there arose a windstorm of harsh and hard-to-forget phrases like "separation" and "broken home."

I admire Gregory Peck tremendously. I think Hollywood should be proud of him—for the type of acting he does, for the kind of life he leads. Believe me, our town would not be the target for a lot of brickbats if there were more like him and his sweet little blonde wife, and his two darling kids.

Those kids tumbled over him as we talked in the homey setting of his den, on a deep leather sofa beside a fireplace that crackled and sparked. They teetered up on his big knees and across his broad but first make sure your own knowledge is SCIENTIFIC and SOUND!

Don't let your daughter marry still in doubt about these Intimate Physical Facts

The practice of vaginal douching has become so widely accepted and used today, it's no longer a question of douching but rather what a woman should put in her douche. And certainly every woman should be made to realize:

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for the douche is so POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS as ZONITE! Scientists tested every generally known antiseptic they could find on sale for this purpose. And no other type was so powerful yet so safe to tissues as ZONITE.

Warns Against Weak or Dangerous Products

It's a pity how many women, through ignorant advice of friends, still use salt, soda or vinegar for the douche. These 'kitchen makeshifts' are NOT germicides in the douche. They never can assure you the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

Women should learn the importance of using only a germicide intended for vaginal douching—one powerfully germicidal with deodorizing and dissolving qualities yet one absolutely safe to tissues. So why not enjoy ZONITE's great benefits now?

Positively Non-Irritating

ZONITE positively contains no phenol, no mercury—no harsh acids—overstrong solutions of which may damage tissues and in time even impair functional activity of the mucous glands. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without the slightest risk of injury. Non-poisonous, non-irritating.

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances; helps guard against infection. It immediately kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE ZONITE DOES kill every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-59, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Can't sleep?
Don't count sheep—count on
TUMS
Acid indigestion at bedtime may rob you of hours of sleep. Don't let it! Take Tums! No mixing or stirring—slip Tums in your mouth just like candy mints. Almost instantly, Tums relieve heartburn and gas—let you get to sleep faster, sleep better. No baking soda in Tums. No danger of overalkalizing—no acid rebound. Get Tums — get your sleep!
EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS 10¢ STOMACH DISTRESS
To feel better, try one or two TUMS after breakfast.
FOR THE TUMMY
NEED A LAXATIVE TOO?
Try Nature's Remedy
NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT AMAZING!! NEW!!
"DEW"
SPRAY DEODORANT
IN THE MAGICAL "SELF-ATOMIZING" BOTTLE
STOPS PERSPIRATION AND ODOR TROUBLES! Keeps you daintily pure, socially secure.
DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! "Dew" never touches hands. Not messy. Squeeze flexible bottle, spray on gentle mist.
ONLY DEODORANT CONTAINING "RETSELANE" to stop perspiration trouble, avoid perspiration stains on clothes. Removes odor.
WON'T ROT CLOTHES! Can't irritate normal skin.
SAVES MONEY! Full year's supply only 98¢ Plus tax
Less than 2¢ a week
SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE!
"DEW" ®
SPRAYS ITSELF ON!
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

shoulders, pulled his lank black hair, popped him in the jaw with their fists, made horrifying noises, threatened to rip the joint to pieces, and Dad Peck along with it. Greg grinned happily, never shot them one black look, cross word, or even a "don't." Jonathan, four-and-a-half, is dark and thin and the spit-and-image of Greg; and Stephen, two-and-a-half, is chubby and blond, a little-boy copy of his Finnish mother.

Jonny disappeared down the hall and in a second there were stealthy pads. "We're being stalked and in dire danger of our lives," explained Greg softly. "He's an Indian—but I can break that up."

"Hey!" he said loudly. "I know where there are some strawberry tarts—right here on the table. Wonder if Jonny wants some?" That Indian bit the dust immediately and Jonny was with us again.

Greg manages to spend a lot of time with Steve and Jonny. You can tell the minute you get him on the subject how much they mean to him, what fun he collects in their company. Last summer, Jonny had a surprise birthday party and Greta hired a troupe of entertainers. With dozens of moppets looking on, they staged a small-time aquacade in the Peck pool, complete with a hula dancer on a surfboard. "I couldn't tell you who had the best time—the kids or me," Greg admitted. He was on hand, of course, to see that nobody got lost, strayed or stolen, and when the magician's rabbit scurried down into the canyon, poor Greg had to chase it through the cactus on his hands and knees to hush up the kiddie wails. "I never had such a workout," he grinned. "I was scratched and bruised as if I'd been in a fight—but I had that rabbit." who's big man? . . .

Jonny and Stephen were banging away on the piano now making enough noisy discords to waken the dead. "Hey, Jonny," Greg called, "Who's the greatest man alive?"

If I thought Greg was bidding for a tribute to bask in, I was certainly mistaken. "Hopalong Cassidy!" Jonny came back.

Greg chuckled. "We're Hopalong's hottest fans every time he comes over KTLA (a Hollywood TV station), and if you think I can compete as a Big Man, you're crazy!"

"I don't believe that," I told him. "One look at that kid's face when you talk and I see different." Greg Peck blushed slightly—that alway's a sign he's touched, and pleased.

Now, I'm not trying to build up Gregory Peck as the All-American Father and Husband. But of all the men I know in Hollywood—with the possible exception of Wild Bill Wellman—he's just about the most kid-happy home boy in town. In fact, Gregory Peck is interested really in just one other thing besides his family—acting.

"I don't need any other outlet for my self-expression, Hedda," he told me. "I happen to like my work, and frankly, everything else that's fun to most guys leaves me cold. When I'm not mixed up in some kind of acting—on a stage or at a studio—I'm here. They're the only two places I want to be—one or the other."

Well, I've seen him often in both settings and I can't tell you which Peck I like and respect most. But let's keep on for a while with a picture of Greg Peck at home. The day I was there, it was just Greg, me and the kids. Greta was downtown shopping, and if Greg had eyes that could see that far he could probably have watched her, even though he lives clear out in Pacific Palisades by the sea. From the Peck's hilltop house you can look 20 miles in all directions.

Their home's a beautiful place, built on a four-acre spur sticking out into the canyon, so that a new neighbor couldn't spoil the Pecks' view if he tried, unless he was a cliff dweller or a goat. It's designed for comfort, with great glass windows opening to the breathtaking picture views. It's furnished comfortably in blond modern pieces with splashes of bold color in draperies, rugs and paintings that Greta and Greg have picked up here and there. It's an open and frank house, a sensible and honest house.

There's a big swimming pool, rimmed by high glass walls to keep out the sharp winds, kids and puppy dogs, sitting right where the land drops away, and that one touch of Hollywood luxury is the only jarring note to the establishment's simplicity. But, I quickly found out, the pool is practically a necessity. Swimming's the only sport Greg can enjoy anymore.

He's got a bad sacroiliac that kicks up on him all the time, banning pretty permanently any athletic sport, although for several years it let him ride horseback—and Greg did so constantly to keep in trim. While making Duel in the Sun, in Arizona, he mounted a show horse who got the idea that a giant saguaro cactus was a monster of some kind, bolted into a barbed wire fence and shot Greg over the handlebars. He got off that time with cuts and bruises. But last year he was out in the San Fernando Valley where a rancher friend has a saddle string and as he was riding meekly around a riding ring his horse slipped and pinned down one of Greg's long legs. The bone was broken in three places—and now he can't even climb aboard a hay burner. "Which wipes all lingering athletic responsibilities right off my conscience," Greg laughed. "I'm not the hero type anyway."

Greg and Greta Peck have practically no social life. They go to parties—always come to mine—but they leave soon as they've stayed long enough to be polite. They were the first couple to arrive at the big shindig David Selznick tossed for his all-star cast after Duel in the Sun—the first, too, to leave. Greta's a wife and mother above all; she has no career ambitions other than being Mrs. Gregory Peck. Their romance was born of the theater and she understands acting people. Greg met and fell in love with her on tour with

MODERN SCREEN

"You'll get a lot further, young man, if you stop telling women they're typical!"

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. S-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

Help Relieve Distress Of MONTHLY

FEMALE WEAKNESS

Are you troubled by distress of female functional periodic disturbances? Does this make you suffer from pain, feel so nervous, tired—at such times? Then do try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. Pinkham's is famous to help girls and women doubled this way also Calluses. Quick, easy, and economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢, 50¢. At your druggist. Money refunded if not satisfied. Moss Co., Rochester, N. Y.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

CORNS

removed by MOSCO

MAKE QUICK CASH!

BIG PROFITS — EASY SALES — Top value hosiery, lingerie, sportswear, blouses. FREE Sample Displays. Complete line greeting cards. All-Occasion samples on approval. FREE Stationery samples. Special outfit offers. Write today.

FREE SAMPLE DISPLAYS

SELL FRIENDS NYLON HOSIERY LINGERIE GREETING CARDS

WEAR WRIGHT CO., 1709 Arch St., Dept. C, Phila., Pa.

Simulated Diamond

IMPORTED 35c

Nothing more to pay

To introduce our Beautiful Gleaming Rainbow Flash Stones, we will send a 1 Kt. Imported Simulated Diamond, Mounted in Lovely Tiffany Style Pronged Ring, as Illustrated, for the return of this ad and 35c expense in coin. SEND NOW.

FREE Mention your Birth Date, and we will include FREE a White "Luck" Elephant — imported from the ORIENT.

Liebe Jewelry Co., Dept. 859, Wheeling, W. Va.

is a Pimple-Free Face worth $2.00 to You?

At last! You can do something to really help rid your face of pimples and regain your natural, lovely complexion. Pleasant-to-use JOT is the same new compound used by leading skin specialists for treating acne. What a thrill to see ugly pimples disappear! Send $2.00 for 2-oz. jar and free diet and cleansing instructions.

Must please you or your money back!

ACT NOW! WRITE TODAY!

GALEN LABORATORIES

Dept. 7 P.O. Box 1 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Katharine Cornell when Greta was Kit's hairdresser. She works at Birmingham Veterans hospital one day a week for the Red Cross, but the rest of the time she's just Mrs. Peck. And right now she's engaged on a very special project in that capacity. Along about July there'll be another member of the family—this time, both Greg and Greta hope, a baby sister for the boys.

Neither Greg or Greta care a whoop about dancing and dining at Hollywood night spots, and they've never yet entertained in a Hollywood way that I know of. They have just occasional dinner guests, a few penny-ante poker games, evenings of conversation (usually about kids or acting, Gregory confessed), and if they feel like singing—well—they call in Jessie, their cook, who's been with them five years. Jessie's the best piano player in the place. Greg took one of those "play in ten easy lessons" courses once, but he couldn't work up enough interest away from his acting to get results.

One clue to Gregory Peck's constant love hung about me on the walls of the little library-bar where we sat—a row of old playbills featuring the immortal Edmund Keane on the London stage, and dated 1817. Another was the record he played for me of John Barrymore's famous Hamlet. Still another, the rows and rows of bound plays in his bookshelves.

measure of the man . . .

Right now, Greg's the determined spark-plug in a big league project to give Hollywood first class legitimate drama, all the year round. Like dozens of other stars who love the theater, it dismays Greg that only tired New York road companies come now and then to supply Los Angeles, a city of almost four million souls, and Hollywood the drama capital of the world, with the theater. What concerns him even more is that there's no place in Hollywood for young actors and actresses to get stage training, without which, he holds, they'll never develop into great performers. He's seen too much promising young talent killed off by screen roles they're not ready for. Currently, I'd say, Greg's as worked up and excited about that civic baby of his as he is about the new Peck due next summer! I can't give away any details right now because I promised Greg I wouldn't.

So that's the kind of 18-carat actor and sterling man Gregory Peck is—and that's why my hackles hop right up straight when anyone starts picking at Greg in picayune pecks. Frankly, I think Gregory Peck is perfectly happy in his home life. I know he's planning on taking Greta and the boys with him when he goes to Florida soon for eight weeks to shoot The Virgin Bar, a sponge fishing yarn he'll make with Elia Kazan. He wants them with him every minute. As he says, "We like it that way."

"I'll fix you a drink," Greg offered before I left his hospitable house, but I said, "No—I'll take just one more swig of that marvelous view of yours." We strolled over to the superb vista spreading out in panorama beneath his windows.

Far below, the green Pacific stretched out, calm and placid, to misty Catalina. To the left and as far as we could see, the stucco structures of workaday Beverly Hills, Los Angeles and Hollywood gleamed white on the sunny flatlands.

"Come around here," Greg said, "and I'll show you another." He led me to the other side of the house, swept his arm out, circling the view. A canyon climbed steep and fast up the mountains, to the blue sky, the clouds and the hidden stars.

"This is the view I like," said Gregory Peck. THE END

HAIR FADED? Make it beautifully Gold again!

• It's so easy to be gloriously blonde again! Use Marchand's Golden Hair Wash to add those dazzling golden highlights.

Even if your hair is dull or streaked, Marchand's can give it that smooth, even blondeness that spells romance.

Whether you are blonde, brunette, or redhead you can lighten your hair . . . or add a golden gleam. The new, improved Marchand's gives you the degree of lightness you want.

Perfected by experts in hair care, Marchand's Golden Hair Wash is not a dye, not an expensive "treatment". Complete in one package, it's more convenient than ever to use at home. Wonderful for lightening arm and leg hair, too!

In 60¢ and 90¢ sizes

CALLING FOR PRACTICAL NURSES!

EASY TO LEARN AT HOME

Help fill the need for Trained Practical Nurses in your community or travel. Wayne Training Plan, welcomed by doctors, prepares you for experience—at home in spare time. Many earn while learning. NO HIGH SCHOOL NEEDED. Ages 18 to 55 accepted. Nurses Outfit included. Easy payments. Information & sample of lessons Free. Write today.

Excellent Earning Opportunity for Full or Spare Time

Wayne School of Practical Nursing, Inc., 2301 N. Wayne Av. Desk K-40, Chicago 14, Ill.

AMAZING OFFER—$50 IS YOURS

FOR SELLING ONLY 100 BOXES

ofent reiss.. ere.nt new Dr Luxe tu- ecas o cards. Patented feature television card included. Each box sells for $1.00, your profit 50c. Surprise items. Tests nothing to try. Write today.

WRITE FOR SAMPLES

CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-20, White Plains, N. Y.

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M120, Hollywood 38, Cal.

NU-MAID beautiful
NYLONS

NU-MAID HOSIERY MILLS, INC.
Empire State Building, New York 1, N. Y.

WRITERS

Conscientious sales service for your short stories, articles, books and plays. Send today for FREE circular "Your Road To Writing Success."

DANIEL S. MEAD LITERARY AGENCY
Dept. D-5, 264 Fifth Ave., New York 1, N. Y.

Easy as A-B-C

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you are playing popular music. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1445 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y. 51st year.

FREE BOOKLET

U.S. School of Music, 1445 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.
Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have you Instrument?.....

Name.....
(Please Print)

Address.....

HOME WAS NEVER LIKE THIS

(Continued from page 55)

our house," she said at one point. (They found out later she didn't mean her own home, she meant Bob's Yank at Oxford house.)

As the limousine drove through the back gate to Buckingham Palace, Mrs. Stotts sat up straighter. "This is the gate," she said solemnly, "through which the Duke of Windsor left, when he abdicated as King of England, December 11, 1936."

After that, the Taylors got out of the car, visited the palace carriage room and the harness room, were introduced to the staff, and considered themselves to have been educated.

That was in '47. And here it was '49. and a Barbara-less Taylor in England again to make a picture, and Mrs. Stotts on the phone again, and it was just as he'd said to Ralph, it was just like old times.

fuel for the machine . . .

Now, Ralph proceeded to drop a can of kerosene on the floor, and then grab it up nervously. "In the old days," he inquired, "were you never thrown out of your hotel for breaking the fire laws?"

"Stop worrying," Taylor said. "You'll get wrinkles."

The reason for the kerosene was simple. They'd been starving to death. According to Taylor and Couser, the English can't cook. Salt of the earth, you understand, but they'll murder any food that doesn't stand right up and bite 'em back.

To begin with, when the boys had first known they were coming abroad, they'd made arrangements to have eggs, bacon, etc., shipped to them. The British are still on painfully short rations, and you don't want to take food out of anybody's mouth.

First couple of days in the hotel, they'd been sending their own breakfast provisions down to the kitchen for preparation. The bacon came up floating in grease; the eggs were bullets.

Ralph, a man of action, went marching out of the hotel the third morning. He came back loaded with a kerosene stove, several jars of wood alcohol, and a primer. It was obviously nothing the Savoy management would have condoned, but he'd neglected to tell the Savoy management about it.

There were three hall waiters on their floor. Bob and Ralph christened them Baldy, Slim and Shorty, which was inconsistent with their dignity, since they (the waiters) sported long tail coats even at six A.M., but it was chalked up to, "oh, you know Americans," and passed over charitably.

Ralph appraised the waiters of his alcohol stove routine, and from there on, low farce set in. Every night, Slim would greet Bob. "What time do you wish breakfast tomorrow, sir?"

"Seven."

"The usual, sir?"

"Yes, please."

The next morning, at seven on the dot, Slim would wheel in a table. On the table, there'd be two plates, two napkins and two glasses of water.

Ralph would snatch the cooked eggs from underneath the electric core in the fireplace where he'd put them to keep warm, and they'd eat.

One hideous dawn, they thought the jig was up. Ralph was cooking in his room, when they heard the knock on the door. Bob went to answer it. There was a London bobby standing at attention.

He's been sent by the fire department, Taylor said to himself. For sure. From the other room came the noises of Ralph's domesticity. (If you've ever primed a kerosene stove, you know it sounds like you're welding.)

"How do you do?" Taylor said meekly.

The constable pulled out an autograph book. "I have a niece," he began.

Taylor'd never signed an autograph more cheerfully, or quicker.

The very next morning, the Savoy's "Head of Security" (that's British for house dick) came barging in.

It was seven-ish. Ralph's stove-priming symphony was in full swing. Bob looked resigned. Another escape was more than a man could expect. But the Head of Security just smiled, checked their identity cards, got an autograph for some relative of his, and beat it.

The whole thing was too hard on Taylor and Couser, though. They gave it up. Got themselves a nice little electric plate. That blew all the bulbs in the place, but at least it was quiet.

Speaking of food problems, Barbara sent Bob six steaks from the Stork Club, which precipitated another tragedy.

The steaks were as thick as your fist. Taylor and Couser ordered a couple of them broiled for dinner, and sat back.

But not for long. What that cook had done to those steaks wasn't nice. Taylor tucked his tongue, which had been hanging out, back into his mouth, and sat down to write an indignant letter.

"You don't even know the chef's name," Ralph said.

"I'll call him 'Dear Sir,'" said Taylor.

Another time, Jack and Mary Benny sent six steaks via a friend. The friend, who'd flown across, delivered the meat with his own two pink hands.

Bob called Slim in for a conference. "Has the hotel a deep freeze?"

Slim said yep.

"Okay," Bob said. He wrapped the steaks carefully, first in waxed paper, and then in newspaper, and sent them down.

frozen food . . .

About a month later, the boys decided they wanted steak for dinner, and ordered one of their cold-storage jobs cooked. When it came, they had to open the windows, and leave the room.

"You know," Bob said, "I don't think that steak is as fresh as it might be."

"What gave you such an idea?" Ralph asked, and they went off to investigate the kitchen. Turned out that Slim thought a deep freeze was the same as a refrigerator, and if some jerks wanted to eat meat that was 12 years old and crawling, it was none of his business.

For the most part, Bob's stay in England was reasonably uneventful. He was there from mid-October until mid-February, and he traveled from the Savoy to the studio, from the studio to the Savoy, with very little time for anything else but writing letters. (He's a fiend at the typewriter: Barbara got a volume every day, and a neat volume at that. He never x-ed out anything, or made a typographical error. Ralph once mentioned some woman's astonishment at the perfection of Taylor's manuscripts. "Yeah," Bob said. "But what she doesn't know is, I've got a little dickens of an eraser.")

The picture they were shooting is called Conspirator. Bob and Elizabeth Taylor were the only Americans in the cast.

"I play an Englishman," Bob says. "That makes it a comedy."

Elizabeth came in for some intensive

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
Use DERMOIL
MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c. (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 2509, Detroit 27, Michigan.
Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.
SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE
©1935 LAKE LAB

Be an ARTIST
HERE'S HOW YOU CAN LEARN AT HOME!
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 or more a week. By our practical method we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOOK—"Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training and opportunities in art. STATE AGE.
Course G.I. Approved
STUDIO 805-R, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

Does GARLIC Relieve Gas?
ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the largest selling garlic tablet in the world. For sale at drug stores everywhere. Ask for
ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

High School Course at Home
Many Finish in 2 Years
Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American School, H-S14, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER
TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH
ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS.
SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET
NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU
MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-F, Providence 15, R.I.

BROKEN JEWELRY WANTED
All kinds. Highest cash prices paid for rings, jewelry, spectacles, gold teeth, diamonds, broken and usable watches, etc. Cash mailed promptly. Write for FREE shipping container.
LOWE'S, Dept. MS
Holland Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

MATERNITY DRESSES
WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG
ADVANCE STYLES
Smart, youthful styles for morning street, afternoon, sports, or formal wear. Also maternity corsets and Lingerie.
Crawford's, Dept. 61, 729 Baltimore Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

BE A Nurse
LEARN AT HOME
Practical nurses are needed in every community... doctors rely on them.. patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 50th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 235, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

teasing on the set because she had to go to school. She'd spend hours kissing Bob passionately (she plays his wife), and then, once the scene was over, she'd be shipped off to classes.

It made her feel like a cross between Dietrich and Margaret O'Brien.

In London—at the Savoy, in fact—at the same time Bob and Elizabeth were there, were Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Patricia Neal, Joe Cotten, Gene Kelly, Montgomery Clift, Joan Caulfield, Michael O'Shea, and Virginia Mayo. Not all at once, but a few of them popped in now and again.

"Only time we had any trouble," Taylor says grinning, "was the day Alan Ladd arrived. The fans love him."

Taylor's convinced that he himself doesn't draw a crowd any more. "I've had 15 years of this racket," he says. "I've had my tie torn off, and my pockets ripped loose. I've been through it all. But I can go out and walk down the street today, and nobody'll bother me."

What he means is he's no longer a Van Johnson-Guy Madison bobby-sox hero, having graduated from that school some time back. Still, Ralph swears the police had to control the crowd of admirers in front of the Savoy the day that Bob checked in.

Bob and Ralph got to Paris a couple of times, once over Christmas. The first time, they flew across in the same plane with Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, and Bob went to Olivier and bowed his head and whispered with reverence, "Sir Laurence."

"Kneel," Vivien suggested.

"No room," said Olivier. "But I accept his apology."

on the town . . .

They did the tourist things in Paris, even walked part way up the Eiffel Tower, only it was snowing that day, and you couldn't see the ground from the first level, when you got there, so they turned to each other and shrugged. "No point walking to the third level," Bob said. "Lazy dog," Ralph said. "You're right."

They went to Maxim's, where the decor hasn't been changed in a hundred years, and the little orchestra in the alcove played Auld Lang Syne when Bob walked in, because Auld Lang Syne was featured in his picture, Waterloo Bridge, and Waterloo Bridge had been playing in Paris a few months before.

He was so touched he could hardly see straight. but he played it casual. "Typically Paris," he said to Ralph. "They'd do it for anybody."

Paris was nice, all right, but London was still the place to break your heart. Things just as tough as they'd been a couple of years before, and the people still not admitting it. The people still standing in queues for cigarettes, to catch busses. . .

"There's a sound man on my picture," Bob said one night. "He stood for three hours to get a seat for Manon. And I wouldn't go around the corner to see all the grand opera in the world."

"You're spoiled and uncouth," Ralph said. "I think I'll write a letter to the New York Times."

In the end, he never got a chance to use the typewriter. Bob didn't leave it alone for long enough. Even during their rough trip home, aboard the Queen Mary, Bob pounded away, setting down his impressions for Barbara and posterity.

"When they took that machine off the boat," Ralph says, "it was still hot."

"When they took Couser off the boat," Bob says, "he was still shot."

But they had a wonderful time. They really did.

THE END

PORAD presents "Bre-zee"

Only $3.30
Sprite, light foot whimsies to keep you walking (and dancing) on air! Air foam platforms, wonderfully flexible!
Black suede, or Smooth Leather in white, green, red, yellow Sizes 6 to 9, AA width.
4 to 10, medium width.
ORDER DIRECT AND SAVE
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED
PORAD'S
*Vague-Craft SHOES, 212 Virginia St., Seattle 1, Wash., Dept. DS
Send prs. "Bre-zee" at $3.30 pr.
COLOR—First choice
COLOR—Second choice
Size Width
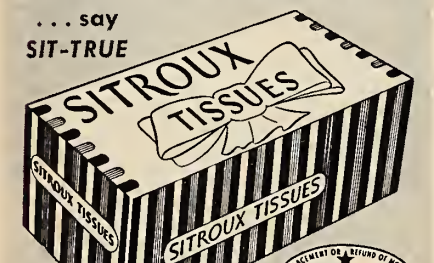
Name
Address
City Zone State
( ) Check ( ) Money Order ( ) C. O. D.
Send check or money order and we pay postage. When sent C. O. D. customer to pay $3.30 plus charges.
*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

PAIN
of headache, neuritis and neuralgia
RELIEVED
incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—
ANACIN®

Here's why
Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients. Get Anacin Tablets today.

so absorbent!



SITROUX TISSUES

soft . . . strong . . .

NOW FINER THAN EVER

. . . say SIT-TRUE

HOLLYWOOD SEEKS NEW TALENT

Film writers say 1949 will be "new star year." NEW faces have greater chance than ever. If you are 16 years of age or over NEW TALENT GUIDE is a publication that might be of help in your career. NEW TALENT GUIDE will be sent to producers, casting directors, agencies. For full details of how you can be included in NEW TALENT GUIDE plus complete application blank, plus revealing booklet—"YOU AND HOLLYWOOD"—which tells about picture casting, how stars get started, television increasing your chances, and other important details, send 25c in coin (to cover mailing) at once to

NEW TALENT GUIDE, DEPT. A
Box 1208, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Peace At Last From PERSISTENT ITCH!

No wonder thousands teased by itchy torment bless the day they changed to Resinol. Here's quick action from first moment—a blissful sense of peace that lasts and lasts, thanks to 6 active soothing agents in a lanolin base that stays on. Don't be content with anything less effective than Resinol Ointment.

FREE PHOTO
LARGE GLOSSY PICTURE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
INTRODUCTORY OFFER
direct from HOLLYWOOD, home of the STARS. Send name of your FAVORITE STAR with ten cents to cover handling and mailing and receive also our beautiful catalog with names and pictures of hundreds of STARS.
★ Hollywood Stars ★
Van Johnson 4633 HOLLYWOOD BLVD., BOX 9747 HOLLYWOOD 27, CALIFORNIA

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"
Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

HOLLYWOOD'S AMAZING LOVE SQUABBLE

(Continued from page 60)

by declaring, "Joanne, I can't let you go over to the Harvards." A few days later they were married.

Dick, who had studied earlier to become a Jesuit priest, married outside his church. He was still a struggling young singer and they lived in comparative poverty until Hollywood beckoned. Almost at once, Joanne wanted to and did become a mother. Their first child, Richard Ralph—or "Skipper" — is now six-and-a-half. Their second, Helen Joanna—"Pidgeon"—is four-and-a-half, and the baby, Nugent, is just 18 months old.

The children, naturally, as in the case of Nora and Errol's two offspring, are not aware of what has happened in their lives. In the Haymes household, "Skipper" is aware, and Joanne suspects that he knows more than he indicates, for he had been told that Dick was looking for a house at the beach. When he later asked, "Does that mean that Daddy isn't going to live here any more?" and was told "We'll see," he declared, "Well, that means you don't have a husband any more." Then he went back to his toys. But later in the evening he came to Joanne, threw his arms around her and said, soberly, "Mummy, I love you more than anything in the world."

Make no mistake: Joanne and Dick are not unfriendly. Of those involved in this unusual story of divorce in the making, Joanne is perhaps the most adult. She faces the issue squarely and talks frankly. "Dick is a good person. He has had a very difficult time, but to me he will always be a very great entertainer and star."

Just as squarely, Joanne faces and answers the rumors about John Ireland, with whom she worked in two pictures. "He's a very fine person," she declared. "No, it's not a question of a romance leading to marriage. He's simply a friend."

Before this story is printed, Errol's policy may have already paid off in a reconciliation. But at this writing, it appears to be a dubious possibility. Indeed, it looks as if the marital merry-go-round which began to move the lives of Nora, Errol, Joanne and Dick will shortly speed up to more tragic whirlings.

Tragic? That's the only word for it. For beyond the desires of four adults, the futures of five innocent children are involved—children who, even though they are offspring of famous movie stars, still remain subject to the undeserved penalties all children must suffer from the bitterness and insecurity of broken homes.

And so it goes—another pair of Hollywood divorces for the record, unless there are some startling, unsuspected changes of the sort that intimate friends pray for. The cost—an approximate $25,000 in attorney's fees for Dick Haymes, and probably a like amount for Flynn is a tidy sum. The many thousands for alimony over the years is too astronomical for the average citizen to think about.

Cost? It can never be reckoned in terms of money. What these people may eventually pay in heartache and later suffering to be paid for by the children is something neither they nor all the couples everywhere now planning divorces, feverishly or complacently, can now reckon.

THE END

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 21)

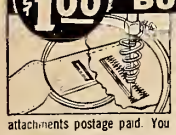
glad to do the errand, because Gail's an old flame, and he could never figure why she disappeared so fast. Well, you should see what's going on in El Paso. Judge Jeffers is a drunk, a pawn in the hands of Sterling Hayden and Dick Foran. These two are rats, engaged in the remunerative pursuits of gypping Civil War veterans out of their land. (Veterans were off fighting for their country, so neglected to keep up with taxes.) Foran's the sheriff; he forecloses on the hapless citizens when Hayden, the boss crook, gives the word. Gail's trying to put a brave face on things—makes like her daddy's still an upright soul—but the old sot insists upon appearing in public loaded, so John sees what's what. He manages to sober the judge up just once, long enough to sit on the bench and render an honest verdict, and for this brave effort, the judge is wiped out. This makes John mad. When the veteran in whose favor the judge returned the verdict is also wiped out, along with his wife (if Hayden can't get your land one way, he'll get it another) John gets even madder. He starts his own retaliatory reign of terror. His grand-daddy comes west to counsel him, begs him to fight in a legal way, with words, and first thing you know, Hayden's gang has killed grand-daddy. Before John and Gail are reunited, almost everybody else in the cast has got his. You never saw so many smoking pistols.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

Cast: Richard Widmark, Lionel Barrymore, Dean Stockwell, Cecil Kellaway, Gene Lockhart, Berry Kroeger.

20th Century-Fox

Bering Joy (Lionel Barrymore) who's older than almost anybody, is captain of a whaling vessel called the Pride of Bedford. He wants his orphaned grandson, Dean Stockwell, brought up in the Joy tradition. Only thing is, Lionel's self-made. He knows about character-building, but books are out of his line. When the shipping firm for whom Joy sails signs Richard Widmark up as Pride of Bedford's first mate, their reasoning is obvious. Widmark already has his master's papers, Joy's ancient, and getting more so, the Pride of Bedford's going to need a new skipper. Barrymore's one jump ahead of them. He doesn't intend to let any young whippersnapper usurp his place; on the other hand, this particular whippersnapper has been to college, and in his spare time, he can teach Dean all he knows. Still, when Dean develops a great respect and admiration for Widmark, Barrymore gets jealous. Widmark tries to brush the boy off, because he doesn't want to make any trouble. One



HEMSTITCHER

Hemstitch on any sewing machine with this handy attachment. Does two piece, criss-cross, inlaid, circular and hemstitching for pleats; also tucking, smocking and picoting. Makes rugs, comforters, slippers, etc. out of any material. Easy directions included

Both for $1.00

BUTTON HOLER

Makes button holes on your sewing machine instead of by hand. Also darns stockings, sews buttons, zippers; and can be used for quilting. Sews in any direction—front, back or sideways. SEND NO MONEY—Merely send your name, address and pay postman $1.00 plus postage on arrival. Or, send $1.00 with order, and we mail attachments postage paid. You risk nothing. Satisfaction guaranteed or $1.00 back

LELANE CO. Dept. DM59 Box 571 Kansas City 10, Mo.

Imitation DIAMOND BRIDAL SET

$1.95 Each → BOTH PERFECT MATCHED $2.95

Gorgeous TRUE LOVE Pattern

Exquisite Engagement and Wedding Rings set with Gleaming Brilliant imitation Diamonds. Extra Large White Center Brilliant. Genuine STERLING SILVER Mounting. SEND NO MONEY. Send size or string. Pay postman C. O. D. on delivery plus 20% tax and postage.

WORLD WIDE DIAMOND CO., Dept. A-962
2451 S. MICHIGAN AVENUE • CHICAGO 16, ILLINOIS

HOT OIL FACIAL LOOK YOUNGER

TEEN-AGERS—WOMEN—16 to 60 YEARS
BEAUTIFY YOUR SKIN AT HOME

Acne, Blackheads, Large Pores disappear; Wrinkles, Loose Face and Neck Muscles Tighten to a Firm, Youthful Complexion in a short time. Just 10-minute treatment without heating oil.
Send $1 and pay $1 plus C.O.D.; money back guaranteed.
STATE IF SKIN IS DRY OR OILY
CLARE COSMETIQUES, G.P.O. Box 528MS, Brooklyn 1, N.Y.

RUPTURE-EASER

A strong, form fitting, washable support. Back lacing adjustable. Snaps up in front. Adjustable leg strap. Soft, flat groin pad. No steel or leather bands. Unexcelled for comfort. Also used as after operation support. For men or women. Mail orders give measure around the lowest part of the abdomen. Specify right or left side or double. Save postage—send money with order—or sent C.O.D.

Pat. Pend.

Right or left Side $3.95
Double 4.95

PIPER BRACE CO.
308 East 12th, Dept. DG-5, Kansas City 6, Mo.

BUY and HOLD
U. S.
SAVINGS BONDS

STAMMER?

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 48 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 4910, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

GET THIS FREE BOOK!

A REAL MIDGET RADIO!

CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET

Works on new diode—Needs No Tubes, Batteries or Electric "Plug-Ins." Plays years for nothing! In Beautiful Red Plastic.

Guaranteed to Work on local stations

SEND ONLY $1.00

(bill, ck, mo) and pay postman $2.99 C.O.D. plus postage or send $3.99 and we pay postage. SENT COMPLETE, READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. LISTEN AT HOME, IN BED, ON FARMS, SCHOOL, MOST ANYWHERE ANYTIME! Wonderful gifts for anyone! Amazingly low-priced! Order Now!

MIDWAY CO. Dept. TMM-S KEARNEY, NEBR.

Down To The Sea In Ships: Dean Stockwell, carrying on his family's seo-going tradition, vastly admires First Mate Richard Widmark.

day, however, Dean, along with several crewmen, leaves the ship in a small boat, to go after whales. When the boat doesn't come back, Barrymore sends out a crew of searchers. He refuses to lower a second searching boat, though his heart is broken. He abides by his rules. He wouldn't risk the safety of the ship for any other man; he won't do it for his grandson. Widmark takes matters into his own hands, lowers another boat, finds and rescues the boy. The captain's grateful, but he still abides by the rules. He relieves Widmark of duty, only to become ill himself, to have his grandson turn against him, and to have the ship tangle with an iceberg. So there are emotional problems and physical problems to be worked out. The acting's fine, the atmosphere authentic, the scenes at sea exciting.

BRIDE OF VENGEANCE

Cast: John Lund, Paulette Goddard, Macdonald Carey, Raymond Burr, Donald Randolph.
Paramount.

Purporting to be about the infamous Borgias, this picture's an unfortunate blend of melodrama and slapstick comedy. Caesar Borgia (Macdonald Carey) has his sister's young husband (John Sutton) killed. He lays the blame for this dastardly deed on the Duke of Ferrara (John Lund). You see, Caesar's been gradually taking over the various independent states of which Italy is composed. He wants Venice, next. To march on Venice, he has to go through Ferrara. Now, if sister Lucretia (Paulette Goddard) gets mad enough at the Duke of Ferrara for murdering her husband, maybe she'll marry the Duke of Ferrara, and poison him, and then she'll be Duchess of Ferrara, and brother Caesar can march his army right through her front yard. Ferrara agrees to marry Lucretia, but he's no dope. When he isn't mooning around at her side, he's down in his foundry, making a giant cannon. He doesn't trust the Borgias worth a nickel. Lucretia, however, succeeds in poisoning him (he doesn't die, because he's got a heap good witch doctor) only to discover what a rat her brother is. He killed her second husband! She turns against Caesar, and the tide turns with her. The Ferrara cannon minces up a goodly portion of Caesar's army, Caesar goes home, and Lucretia lives with Ferrara happily ever after. Yeah, that's what I said. Anyhow, Paulette's costumes are nice.

KOPAL PAINTS ON! DINGY TEETH LOOK RADIANT WHITE

Be proud and happy to smile

Before KOPAL... 3 minutes later... After KOPAL

This is a wonderful fact! Now, no matter how blemished your teeth may be—no matter how dull or dingy—in just 3 minutes you can be proud and happy to smile! Yes, Kopal magically covers tooth surfaces—even gold fillings—with the pearl-like luster of movie star smiles. Yes, Kopal is the amazing new cosmetic enamel for the teeth that beauty editors rave about and grateful users call a miracle of natural-appearing beauty. Try Kopal for the thrill of your life!

Paints on like nail polish—harmless

A dentist's formula—Kopal is absolutely harmless, tasteless. Goes on easier, quicker than nail polish. Easily wiped off with Kopal Remover. Unaffected by eating, mouth acids, cocktails. SEND NO MONEY. Radiant results guaranteed! Just send name and address on postcard. When Kopal Kit arrives, pay postman $3 plus C.O.D. postage. Or send $3 with order and save postage. Price includes Fed. tax. Money back if not thrilled. Winters & Company, Dept. 31, 1 E. 42 St., New York 17.

KOPAL KIT contains Saf-Enamel Art brush Applicator Remover Directions plus Free Consultation

KOPAL Cosmetic Enamel for teeth paints on like nail polish

NOW! ANYONE CAN HAVE PLENTY of HOT WATER QUICK

Summer or Winter—Day or Night

New Pocket-size Portable Electric Water Heater. Regular Price $2.95

SPECIAL OFFER NOW . . . ONLY $1.98

Merely place a BOIL-QWIK Portable Electric Water Heater in a receptacle containing water. Plug in the nearest socket . . . Eureka! In a few minutes Hot Water. Thousands use for bath, washing clothes and dishes, shaving, cleaning cream separators, pails, etc. No fires to build, hot water to carry or running to basement to light fires. Read and follow directions before using. The regular price of BOIL-QWIK is $2.95; but if you'll tell friends about it, to advertise BOIL-QWIK, we will let you have one for only $1.98 plus tax. SEND NO MONEY! Just your name and address. We'll mail heater at once together with FREE information telling how you can get a Second heater WITHOUT ONE CENT COST. On arrival pay postman $1.98 plus Federal Tax, C. O. D. postal charges. Satisfaction guaranteed or return within 10 days for full refund of purchase price. This special price offer is subject to withdrawal without notice so write today. SEND NO MONEY!

BOIL-QWIK, 333 N. Michigan, Dept. E-67, Chicago 1, Ill.

LIKE to DRAW?

Use spare time at home preparing for profitable art career. A complete home study course with money back agreement. For details and talent test give age and occupation.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF COMMERCIAL ART
DIVISION D, BOX 8066 • DALLAS 5, TEXAS

EASY TO LEARN MILLINERY AT HOME

Design and make exclusive hats under personal direction of one of America's noted designers. Complete materials, blocks, etc., furnished. Every step illustrated. You make exclusive salable hats right from the start. Begin a profitable business in spare time. Low cost, easy terms.

LOUIE MILLER SCHOOL OF MILLINERY
225 North Wabash Avenue, Dept. 185, Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me your FREE catalog describing your training course in professional millinery.
Print
Name
Address

Used by the Loveliest Blondes

Nestle Lite
with Conditioning Oil

AT LAST! — a hair lightener that leaves your hair soft, silky, natural-looking — while making it beautifully blonde. Nestle LITE is made from a special patented formula containing beneficial conditioning oils. It's easy to use — delicately scented — complete in one package!

Lightens unsightly dark hairs on arms and legs, too—quickly, safely!

At drug & dept. stores $1.00 . . or

MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY

The Nestle-LeMur Co., Meriden, Conn.

Please send me (tax and postage paid) full size Nestle Lite with instructions. $1.00 enclosed.

Name.....

Address.....

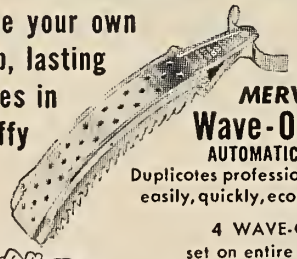
City.....Stote..... MS-5-49

Nestle LITE — made by Nestle, originators of permanent waving and the famous Nestle COLORINSE.

FREE PHOTO

DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR



INTRODUCTORY OFFER! You will also receive FREE handsome catalogue containing names of all the stars, including various pictures and poses. Send name of your FAVORITE STAR and 15¢ to cover handling and mailing.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box No. 2309, Dept. M-59, Hollywood 28, Calif.

HAIRWAVING made easy!

make your own deep, lasting waves in a jiffy

MERVIN
Wave-O-Matic
AUTOMATIC WAVER

Duplicotes professionol waves easily, quickly, economically.

4 WAVE-O-MATICS set on entire head . . . make hairsetting a pleasure instead af o task. Try them todoy . . . you'll wonder haw yau ever manoged withaut WAVE-O-MATICS. At chain, drug and department stores. Or send $1.00 direct far package of 4

MERVIN WAVE CLIP CO., INC. 39 Chambers St., N Y 7, N Y

also showing . . .

capsule criticisms of films previously reviewed

THE ACCUSED (Para.)—Loretta Young, a prim school teacher, loses some of her inhibitions after she kills Douglas Dick when he gets over-ardent. Wendell Corey is the detective who tracks her down, Robert Cummings the lawyer who defends her. Well-acted, moderately suspenseful and entertaining.

AN ACT OF MURDER (Univ.)—A film dealing with mercy killing that misses being dramatic by failing to come to honest grips with the painful subject. Fredric March, Florence Eldridge and Geraldine Brooks are excellent. (This has been released in some localities under the title, Live Today for Tomorrow.)

ALIAS NICK BEAL (Para.)—Some first-rate performers—among them Ray Milland, Thomas Mitchell, George Macready and Audrey Totter—are rather wasted on an old-fashioned story in which a well-meaning politician sells his soul to the devil.

BAD BOY (Allied Artists)—Audie Murphy, most decorated U. S. infantryman of World War II, is very good in his first major role as a young criminal who is reformed at the Boys' Ranch in Texas. With Lloyd Nolan, Jane Wyatt and Jimmy Gleason. Solid entertainment.

CHICKEN EVERY SUNDAY (20th-Fox)—Dan Dailey accomplishes a lot for the good of his community but not for his home, which Celeste Holm keeps going by taking in boarders. A nice little movie with Colleen Townsend, Alan Young and Bill Callahan.

COMMAND DECISION (MGM)—Clark Gable, as an Air Force general, has the terrible duty of sending bombers over Germany on high-casualty missions. One of the best studies of men at war ever made. The cast, which is all male, includes Walter Pidgeon, Van Johnson, John Hodiak, Brian Donlevy, Charles Bickford and Edward Arnold.

A CONNECTICUT YANKEE (Para)—This has Bing Crosby, Technicolor, some fair songs, and a fine supporting cast including William Bendix, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Rhonda Fleming—but it's something of a disappointment. You keep waiting for more to happen than ever does. Still, don't expect too much and you'll find it pleasant.

CRISS CROSS (Univ.)—When Burt Lancaster finds he still has that old feeling about his ex-wife, Yvonne de Carlo, he goes into business with her new husband, Dan Duryea. The business, for shame, is crime. Not bad of its kind.

FAMILY HONEYMOON (Univ.)—College professor Fred MacMurray marries widow Claudette Colbert—then things happen which mean they have to pack her three kids, Gigi Perreau, Peter Miles and Jimmy Hunt, along on their honeymoon. There are some weak stretches, but some pretty funny ones, too.

THE FAN (20th-Fox)—This is a version of Oscar Wilde's old play, Lady Windermere's Fan. Nice sets and costumes and knowing performances by Jeanne Crain, George Sanders, Madeleine Carroll and Richard Greene make it something to delight the ladies.

FORCE OF EVIL (MGM)—Life and love among the numbers racketeers, with John Garfield, Beatrice Pearson and Marie Windsor. A fairish crime opus.

HIGH FURY (U.A.)—A suspenseful drama laid in the Alps, with a climactic mountain-climbing sequence that'll stand your hair straight up. With Madeleine Carroll, Ian Keith, Michael McKeag and Michael Rennie. Better see this one.

JOAN OF ARC (RKO)—Maybe it's irreverent to say so, but Ingrid Bergman, despite some moving moments, is a disappointment. That goes for this entire mammoth epic, except for José Ferrer's first-rate performance. Still, it's something you should see.

JOHN LOVES MARY (Warners)—This shows, and very amusingly, what happens when a guy marries his buddy's girl just to get her into the U. S. for him and then discovers the buddy already has a wife. With Ronald Reagan, Jack Carson, Pat Neal and Virginia Field. Good comedy.

KISS IN THE DARK (Warners)—Jane Wyman teaches longhair pianist David Niven a out humanity and hot jazz while Victor Moore, Wayne Morris and Broderick Crawford weave in and out of the fairly bright and original plot.

KNOCK ON ANY DOOR (Col.)—This delivers a message that can't he repeated too often: Poverty breeds crime. John Derek, as a young criminal, and Humphrey Bogart, as his socially-conscious lawyer, are remarkably good in an outstanding film.

A LETTER TO THREE WIVES (20th-Fox)—A lady up to no good succeeds in disturbing Jeanne Crain, Linda Darnell and Ann Sothern no end when she writes them she's leaving town with one of their husbands, neglecting to state which one. The husbands are Jeffrey Lynn, Paul Douglas and Kirk Douglas. One of the best comedies in years.

THE LUCKY STIFF (U.A.)—A complicated and nonsensical comedy-murder mystery that stirs up only mild amusement. With Dorothy Lamour, Brian Donlevy and Claire Trevor.

THE MAN FROM COLORADO (Col.)—Glenn Ford as a kill-crazy federal judge and William Holden as his disapproving marshal in a wild and gory Western with terrific pace. Ellen Drew is the girl.

PORTRAIT OF JENNIE (Selznick)—Struggling artist Joseph Cotten meets a strange girl, Jennifer Jones, who comes to him from another dimension to give him his great inspiration. A beautiful and distinguished film, one of the best of the year. With Ethel Barrymore, Lillian Gish, Cecil Kellaway and David Wayne.

THE PRIDE OF THE YANKEES (RKO)—First released in 1942, this moving film biography of Lou Gehrig is being reissued, and a very good thing. Gary Cooper is Lou and Babe Ruth appears as himself. Teresa Wright and Walter Brennan are also prominent.

SHOCKPROOF (Col.)—Patricia Knight is a murderess paroled in the custody of parole officer Cornel Wilde, and she gets involved with a shady gambler, John Baragrey. Not so good.

STREETS OF LAREDO (Para.)—Still another good Western, this one with William Bendix, William Holden, Macdonald Carey and Mona Freeman.

THE SNAKE PIT (20th-Fox)—The ups and downs of Olivia de Havilland as an inmate of a typical state mental hospital. All the performances, including that of Leo Genn as a sympathetic psychiatrist and Mark Stevens as her long-suffering husband, are excellent. But the show belongs to Miss de Havilland, in a magnificently wide-ranged performance that's one of the best of all time. A great motion picture.

WAKE OF THE RED WITCH (Republic)—John Wayne as a self-reliant skipper in an action-filled drammer of pearl, octopi, and passionate villainy in the South Seas. With Gail Russell, Adele Mara and Henry Daniell.

WHISPERING SMITH (Para.)—Alan Ladd, a railroad detective, hates to think the worst of his old pal Robert Preston, but Robert won't stop wrecking trains. Lots of noise and action.

WORDS AND MUSIC (MGM) — A Technicolor "biography" of the famous song-writing team of Rogers and Hart. Mickey Rooney and Tom Drake have the leading roles, and in there singing and dancing are Judy Garland, June Allyson, Gene Kelly, Vera-Ellen, Perry Como, Lena Horne, Cyd Charisse, Betty Garrett and dozens of other highly talented persons. A wonderful musical.

See what a difference MAYBELLINE☆ makes!

Why not discover how much lovelier YOUR eyes can be?

It's so easy to give your eyes THEIR full share of beauty-magic — with MAYBELLINE! A few simple brush strokes of this famous Mascara will make your lashes appear naturally darker, longer and more luxuriant. And it's so easy to form graceful, expressive eyebrows with the soft, smooth Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. Then behold the difference! Your eyes are so much lovelier! Your entire face is more attractive, for your make-up is perfectly balanced — completely flattering.

To look your very best always, be sure you use MAYBELLINE — the eye make-up in good taste — preferred by smart women everywhere.

☆ MAYBELLINE CAKE MASCARA in beautiful, gold-tone metal vanity, $1. Refills, 50c. Velvet Black, Sable Brown, Midnight Blue. (Also in 25c and 10c sizes.)

☆ MAYBELLINE CREAM MASCARA (applied without water) comes in handy leatherette case, $1. (Also in 25c and 10c sizes.) Velvet Black, Sable Brown, Midnight Blue.

☆ MAYBELLINE EYEBROW PENCIL, soft, smooth quality — so easy to use! Purse size, 10c. Professional size, 25c. Velvet Black, Dark Brown and Light Brown.

☆ MAYBELLINE EYE SHADOW smooth, creamy, in shades: Blue, Brown, Blue-Gray, Green, Violet and Gray.

Maybelline

WORLD'S FAVORITE EYE

Chesterfield is MY cigarette, I smoke them because they're MILDER

Bob Hope

STARRING IN

SORROWFUL JONES

HIS LATEST PARAMOUNT PICTURE

WHY... I smoke Chesterfield

(FROM A SERIES OF STATEMENTS BY PROMINENT TOBACCO FARMERS)

Liggett & Myers buy top quality cigarette tobacco and pay top prices for it . . . nobody will average paying more than they do, year in and year out.

I've been smoking Chesterfields ever since I've been smoking. I just like them . . . they have real tobacco flavor.

William P. Wiseman

FARMER—DANVILLE, VA.

ALWAYS BUY 'EM BY THE CARTON SAVE TIME SAVE TROUBLE SAVE MONEY

CHESTERFIELD

MAKE YOURS THE MILDER CIGARETTE ... They Satisfy

Copyright 1949, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

AY 11 1949

june 15c

modern screen

A DELL MAGAZINE
DELL
A DELL MAGAZINE

SPECIAL ISSUE

Salute to Youth

Elizabeth Taylor

Love Life

Quietly, at the water's edge, she thrills to the expectation of love: Love Life more beautiful than her sweetest dreams. Lilacs, roses and gardenias surround her—for she knows that flower scents are a lure no man can resist. For you, Lander's Flower-Fresh Talcs cast a spell of romance with a cluster of garden fragrances. Tantalizing... delicious... truly the talc that tempts...

Lilac and Roses
Spicy Apple Blossom
Sweet Pea
Gardenia and Sweet Pea

10¢ each higher in the west

feel summer sweet all year 'round with

LANDER'S
Lilac and Roses Talc

1 lb. family size Lilac and Roses 25¢ (plus tax)
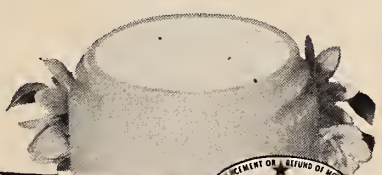
higher in the west

AVAILABLE AT YOUR FAVORITE FIVE AND DIME AND VARIETY STORE



THE LANDER COMPANY • FIFTH AVENUE, N. Y.

Mum's the Word for Summer Charm!

Don't take chances— start with Mum today!

Safer for charm . . .
Safer for skin . . .
Safer for clothes . . .

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Product of Bristol-Myers

You'll love its delightful new floral odor— its creamy texture!

Make today YOUR Mumday and you'll use soft, dreamy-smooth Mum forever after. Millions trust their charm only to this dependable cream deodorant that contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Get large size Mum now!

Send for sample today!

Mum stays smooth, effective— doesn't dry out!

See for yourself how surely today's Mum stops underarm perspiration odor. Mail coupon for generous sample. Enclose 3¢ stamp to cover postage.

Bristol-Myers Co., Dept. D-69
630 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. 22, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone___ State_____

Advertisement

M-G-M Star on the Cover

★ Though still in her teens, Elizabeth Taylor possesses in striking degree those three attributes necessary for stardom—talent, beauty and personality.

★ Born in London, England, the daughter of Francis Taylor, art dealer, and the former Sara Sothern, American actress, Elizabeth attended school at Byron House in London. At a very early age, she began taking ballet and riding lessons.

★ When war clouds gathered over Europe, Elizabeth's father sent his family to stay with Mrs. Taylor's father in Pasadena. Later, he joined them and since then they have made their home in Beverly Hills.

★ When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was having difficulty finding a little English girl to team with Roddy McDowall in "Lassie Come Home," a family friend who had seen Elizabeth when visiting the Taylor home, suggested she try for the role. Her screen test won her a long-term contract. Her second role was in "The White Cliffs of Dover" in which she also appeared with Roddy. Another studio then borrowed her for a role in "Jane Eyre." Then came "National Velvet" at M-G-M which rocketed her into the Hollywood and public spotlight.

★ Elizabeth followed this triumph with "Courage of Lassie," "Life With Father," "Cynthia," and then in "A Date With Judy," and "Julia Misbehaves." Her remarkable portrayal of Amy, the blonde sister, in "Little Women" won her a coveted co-starring part with Robert Taylor in "The Conspirator." In this picture she reveals a new, startling and lovely maturity. You'll see her in a romantic and dramatic role that takes real trouping. And you'll admire her more than ever as she meets the greatest challenge of her career with colors flying!

Watch for her next M·G·M film hits

"LITTLE WOMEN" in Technicolor

and

☆ "THE CONSPIRATOR" ☆

JUNE, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

ROCK-A-BYE BOGEY (Humphrey Bogart) ..... by John Harkins 22
WINNER TAKE ALL? (Jane Wyman) ..... by Janet Franklin 24
MEET THE '49ERS (Doris Day, Montgomery Clift, Gigi Perreau, etc.) by Louis Pollock 30
SHE NEVER LEFT HOME (Jean Peters) ..... by Mrs. Mary E. Peters as told to Robert Peer 34
THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOLLYWOOD (Janet Leigh) 36
BABY FACE (Robert Arthur) ..... by Carl Schroeder 39
NOT BY BREAKS ALONE (Guy Madison) ..... by Helen Ainsworth 40
MY LONELY YEARS ..... by Vera-Ellen 42
HAPPY HUNTING (Mona Freeman, Terry Moore, Jerome Courtland, etc.) 44
PETER AND THE WOLF (Peter Lawford) ..... by Sheilah Graham 48
TIME OF THEIR LIVES (Shirley Temple, John Agar) 50
THIS LOVE OF OURS ..... by Wanda Hendrix 52
MAKE WAY FOR YOUTH (Jeanne Crain, Kirk Douglas, Pat Neal, etc.) by Hedda Hopper 54
STAIRWAY TO THE STARS (Lois Butler) ..... by Jack Wade 56 PAST PERFECT (Elizabeth Taylor) ..... by Beverly Ott 58

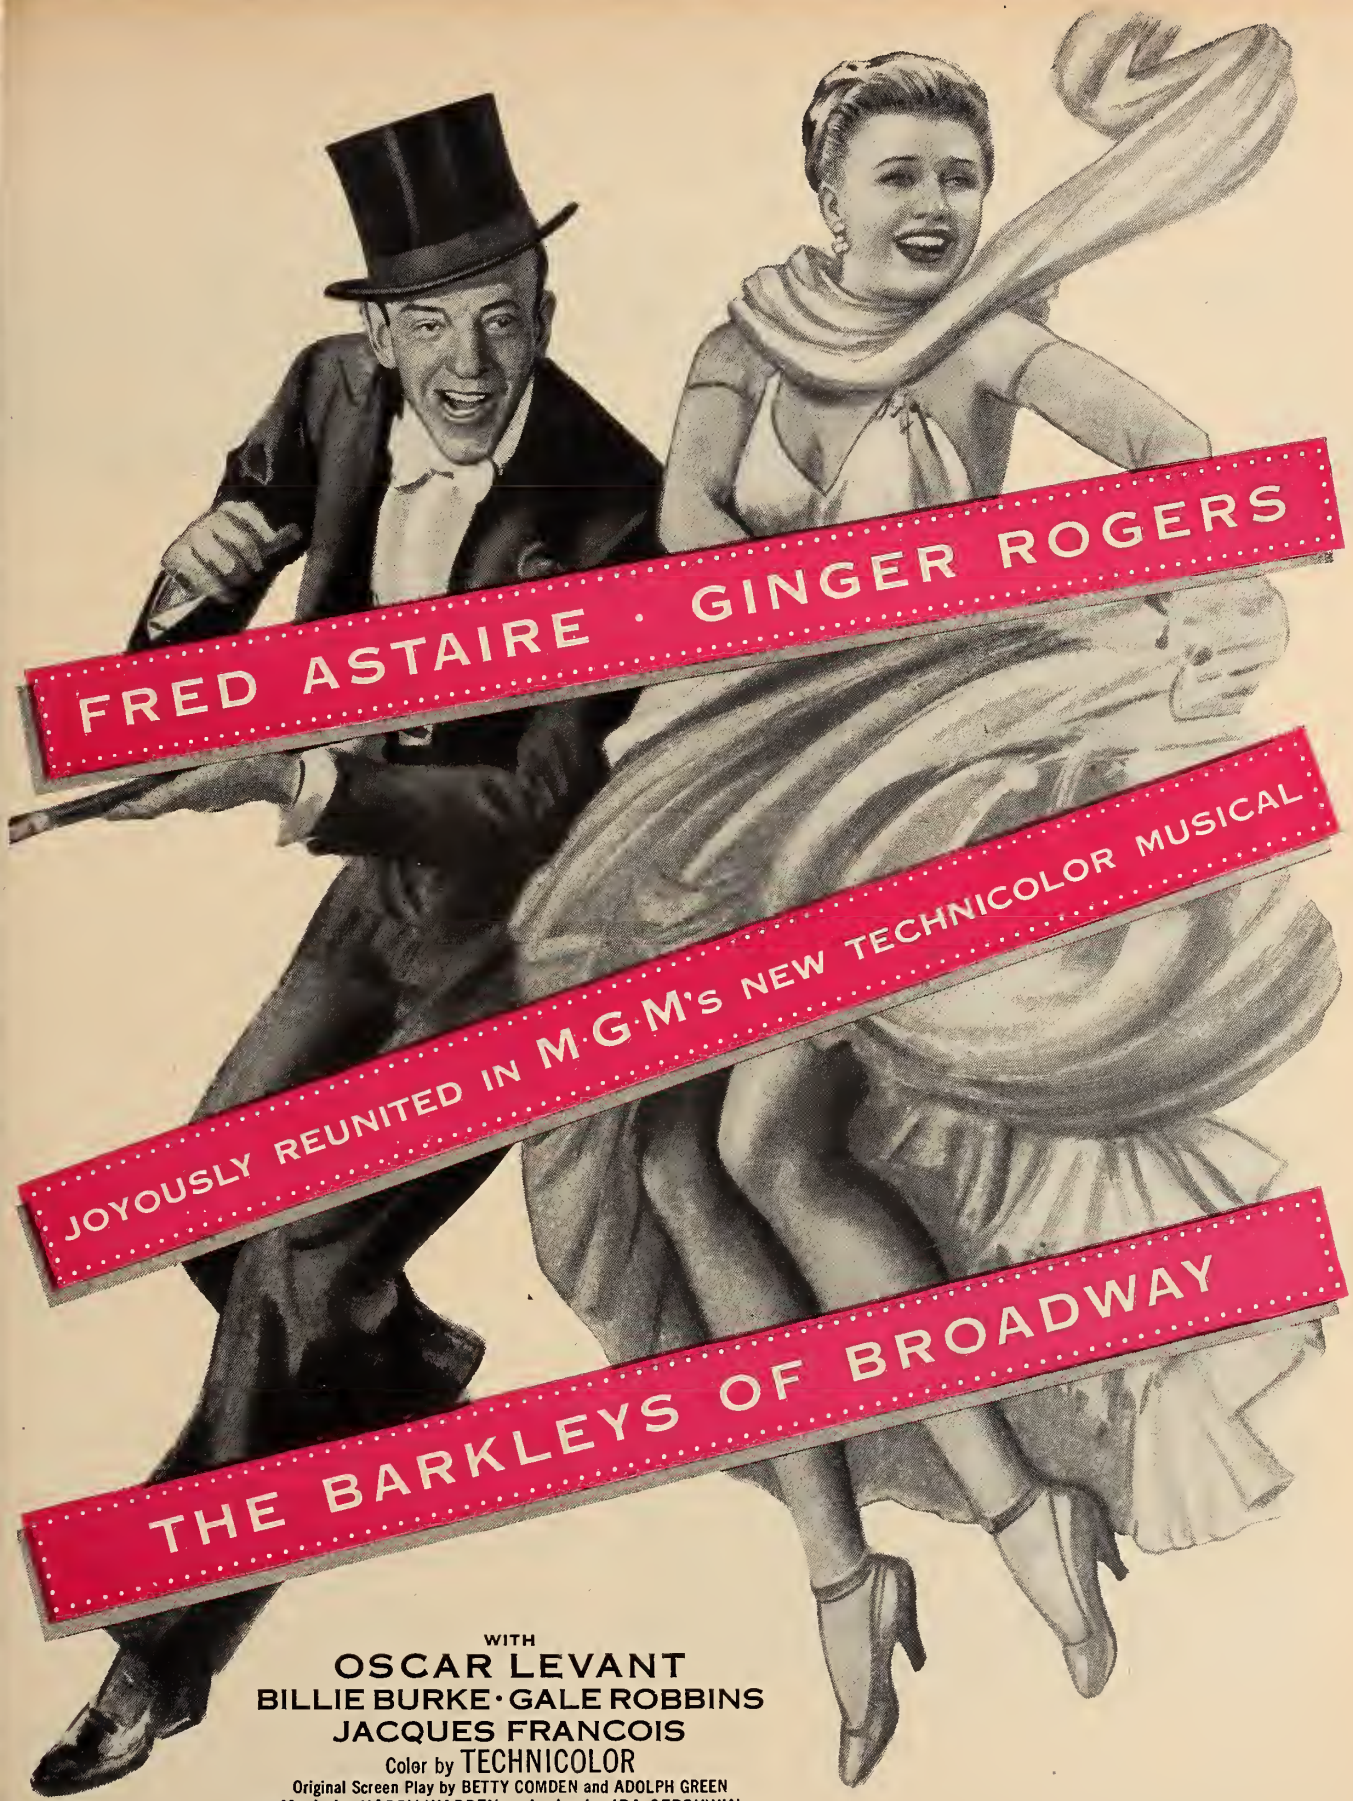
features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: Salute To Youth 29
WHO'S NEW 62

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 16
YOUR LETTERS 26
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 27
FASHION 64
BEAUTY: Clean as a Kitten ..... by Carol Carter 80
FAN FARE 86
THE FANS ..... by Gloria Lampert 92
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed) 108

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Elizabeth Taylor by Nickolas Muray



Other picture credits, page 21

WADE H. NICHOLS, editor

WILLIAM HARTLEY, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
FLORENCE EPSTEIN, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
MAXINE FIRESTONE, assistant fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor
TOM CARLILE, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
VIOLA MOORE, associate editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
NANCY WOOD, food editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 39, No. 1, June, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc. 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U.S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U.S.A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

WITH

OSCAR LEVANT

BILLIE BURKE · GALE ROBBINS

JACQUES FRANCOIS

Color by TECHNICOLOR

Original Screen Play by BETTY COMDEN and ADOLPH GREEN

Music by HARRY WARREN • Lyrics by IRA GERSHWIN

Musical Numbers Directed by ROBERT ALTON

Directed by CHARLES WALTERS • Produced by ARTHUR FREED

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

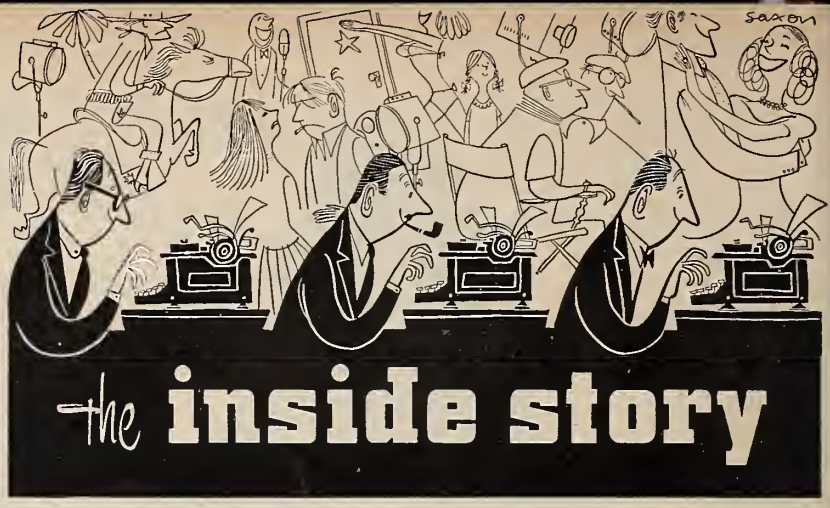
★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Don't be Half-safe!

by
VALDA SHERMAN

At the first blush of womanhood many mysterious changes take place in your body. For instance, the apocrine glands under your arms begin to secrete daily a type of perspiration you have never known before. This is closely related to physical development and causes an unpleasant odor on both your person and your clothes.

There is nothing "wrong" with you. It's just another sign you are now a woman, not a girl . . . so now you must keep yourself safe with a truly effective underarm deodorant.



Two dangers—Underarm odor is a real handicap at this romantic age, and the new cream deodorant Arrid is made especially to overcome this very difficulty. It kills this odor on contact in 2 seconds, then by antiseptic action prevents the formation of all odor for 48 hours and keeps you shower-bath fresh. It also stops perspiration and so protects against a second danger—perspiration stains. Since physical exertion, embarrassment and emotion can now cause apocrine glands to fairly gush perspiration, a dance, a date, an embarrassing remark may easily make you perspire and offend, or ruin a dress.

All deodorants are not alike—so remember—no other deodorant tested stops perspiration and odor so completely yet so safely as new Arrid. Its safety has been proved by doctors. That's why girls your age buy more Arrid than any other age group. More men and women use Arrid than any other deodorant. Antiseptic, used by 117,000 nurses.

Intimate protection is needed—so protect yourself with this snowy, stainless cream. Awarded American Laundering Institute Approval Seal—harmless to fabrics. Safe for skin—can be used right after shaving. Arrid, with the amazing new ingredient Creamogen, will not dry out.

Your satisfaction guaranteed, or your money back! If you are not completely convinced that Arrid is in every way the finest cream deodorant you've ever used, return the jar with unused portion to Carter Products, Inc., 53 Park Pl., N.Y.C., for refund of full purchase price.

Don't be half-safe. Be Arrid-safe! Use Arrid to be sure. Get Arrid now at your favorite drug counter—only 39¢ plus tax.

A MEDIUM-SIZED AND strongly opinionated young lady broke into our premises during working hours a few weeks ago and snarled demurely, "Lissen, knucklehead, why don't you ever give us kids a break in the magazine?" We smiled, reaching over to pat the cherub on her head, as she continued: "You think from George Arliss it gives a swoon or somethin'?" Thoroughly charmed, we said, "But—" Our little darling interrupted with a forefinger prodding our left clavicle. "No buts!" she said, and then flung over her shoulder a parting gibe: "Editors, you claim to be! Ha!" Well, we called off our usual mid-morning snack of aspirins and bicarb right away. We hadn't published anything on George Arliss in years, late great actor though he was, but our finger-jabbing friend had set us thinking. We went into a kind of introspective seance with ourself. Seventy-two hours later—feverish, hungry and haggard—we staggered out of the editorial sanctum overflowing with nothing less than an Inspiration. "Lissen," we said brightly, unable to confine our own delight, "why don't we ever give the kids a break in the magazine?" And that's the way it all began. It all got finished some time later and became MODERN SCREEN'S great, big, wonderful Salute to Youth, which begins on page 29. Deucedly clever of us, if we do say so, too!

PEOPLE USED TO feel that if you were young the only other thing you needed in Hollywood was blonde hair or free access to a jug of peroxide. Now it takes more: talent, personality, perseverance. Lou Pollock describes some youngsters with plenty of same in "Meet the '49ers" (page 30). Have you seen your agent lately?

BUT YOUTH, IT SEEMS, really is taking over. Hedda Hopper's on their side. "You'd better make way," Hedda warns the older stars (on page 54), "because if you don't these kids'll just walk right over you."

A GUY WHO never waited for anyone to make way is Peter Lawford. Spot an ermine cape in Ciro's, and who's standing next to it? Try to shake the hand of a movie queen, and who's holding it? Peter Lawford (both times). Call him a wolf if you want, but for every 393 times his name appears in a gossip column, his boss seems to add another year to his contract. You want to know why? Turn to "Peter and the Wolf," page 48.

HUMPHREY BOGART USED to be afraid of children. Then he started talking to a few—and he was terrified. Everything's okay now, though. The fuller explanation appears on page 22.

NEXT MONTH WE expect to shatter a few dream worlds with Hedda Hopper's article, "Myths the Stars Believe About Themselves." We also expect to have stories about Ingrid Bergman, Barbara Stanwyck, Ty Power, Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner and a few more of your favorites. We're telling you all this so you won't think you have to come in and corner us to get the stories you want.

Not since the ever famous "Kitty" has Paramount brought you Paulette Goddard in a picture as spectacular as this adventure-filled story of the strangest bridal night in history.

"Bride of Vengeance"

A Paramount Picture Starring

Paulette Goddard · John Lund · Macdonald Carey

A Mitchell Leisen produc

with Albert Dekker · Jo[illegible]

Produced by Richard Ma

Screenplay by Cyril Hume and Michael Hog

LOUELLA PARSONS'

Good news

■ Only his wife and those with official business were allowed to visit Robert Mitchum at Castiac, the Los Angeles County prison farm —from which, as you know, he was released after serving 50 days of his 60-day sentence, getting 10 days off for good behavior.

But a friend of mine, who was on the "approved" list, drove down to see Bob on a Sunday afternoon, and—but let me repeat what he said in his own words:

"Visitors are permitted on Sundays and holidays for two hours—and there are no private huddles. I mean, I met Bob in the Army-camp-like mess hall with about 700 other prisoners milling around among lawyers and relatives.

"Gee, he looked wonderful—sun-tanned the color of a hickory nut and 10 pounds thinner. He was wearing the regulation blue jeans and he was so glad to see me ing me on the back and What's new?' down to see him right back. of our life down here,' he laughed. But he wasn't knocking it. He told me he'd never been in better physical or mental shape in his life. And I believed him. I know that guy well—and I can swear that he was taking this as the best disciplinary thing that has ever happened to him. All the kinks he used to suffer from are ironed out—and you can take that straight.

"Don't let anybody kid you that he hasn't been scared! He's so grateful to get another chance with his wife and his career that he'll never get off the straight and narrow again.

" 'I'm working in the toy shop now,' he said almost sheepishly after we'd found ourselves a more or less quiet spot.

"I guess I must have looked my surprise at that reference to a toy shop, because Bob explained: 'Toys are sent down here from orphanages and various children's charity homes for repair. Some of them are so shot we almost have to make them over. Wait until I get out and my kids find out I can repair their toys and make them as good as new. That'll set me up with them; won't it?' He was almost pitiful in his eagerness.

"I found out that he was very proud and happy that the director of his picture, The Big Steal, had been down to visit him and had posted him on what was going on with the picture that Bob had had to abandon when his jail sentence came up. 'That was mighty nice of him,' he kept saying.

"Before I left, I handed him a laugh by telling him that the press agent of the Cement Bloc Industry had asked if they could use a picture of him in their advertisements as 'Mr. Cement Bloc.'

" 'Oh, no!' Bob laughed. 'Oh, no!' And as I drove away, I could still hear that big lug laughing as though he couldn't stand it. . . . Don't worry about Mitchum. That guy'll be all right!"

* * *

When Ladies Meet: It was the week before the Academy Awards and Loretta Young, Rosalind Russell, Jane Wyman and Joan Fontaine, in their loveliest evening gowns, were in my bedroom discussing the Oscar situation.

It was that time, during a party evening, th Toylor, escorted by Lieut. Glenn Dovis, wos on eorly orrivol. ore on off-the-shoulder gown of white crinoline ond between ds chotted with onother well-known odmirer, Ronold Colmon.

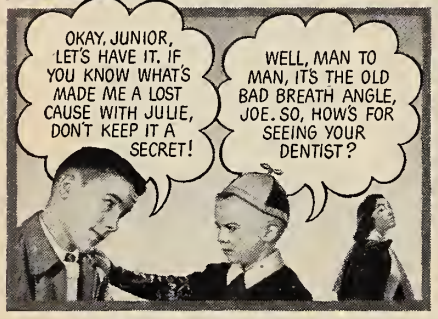
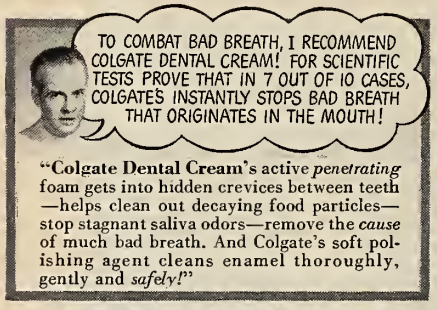
Doug Fairbanks emceed Academy Award ceremonies, held before 900 industry members, and accepted an Oscar for Laurence Olivier. Claire Trevor, Jerry Wald, Jane Wyman and Walter Huston were among winners.

ACADEMY AWARD NIGHT IS STILL THE MOST ANTICIPATED PROFESSIONAL EVENT OF THE GLITTERING HOLLYWOOD SCENE.



Howard Duff and Ava Gardner arrived at the theater together and seemed very affectionate. The 3,000 fans outside the theater greeted Ava's new hair-da (short-crapped and blonde) with surprised, pleased shrieks.



Jeanne Crain, who came—naturally—with husband Paul Brinkman needed that fur jacket—there were chilly gusts of wind and a few snow flurries. Underneath, she wore a black lace gown.

He Needs a Man-to-Man Talk!

"Colgate Dental Cream's active penetrating foam gets into hidden crevices between teeth—helps clean out decaying food particles—stop stagnant saliva odors—remove the cause of much bad breath. And Colgate's soft polishing agent cleans enamel thoroughly, gently and safely!"

LATER-Thanks to Colgate Dental Cream

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Gregory Peck, who gives his all to any role, goes overboard on the "Suspense" air show. He's in Italy now for the filming of Quo Vadis.

Lana and Bob Topping proudly show the 52-pound sailfish (Bob's catch) that didn't get away, during their recent cruise to the Bahamas.

when the gals retire to powder their noses, repair the lipstick and let down their hair.

I really picked up my ears when Joan, Roz and Loretta all started giving Jane advice on what to do if she won—or did not win—the coveted statuette.

"Don't get your heart set on it—look at me," sniffed Roz, "I practically had it in my hand when they handed it to my pal here."

Loretta laughed.

"And if you win," put in Joan Fontaine, Oscar alumna, "don't cry with happiness. It makes your mascara run and you'll look like you've got a black eye in the pictures."

Poor Janie—so nervous and still trying to be so calm and collected. I wonder how much of that fine advice she remembered on the big night.

* * *

Close Up of Montgomery Clift: He eats radishes like peanuts and he's an ice-box raider. . . . The Gene Kellys swear he likes kitchens so much he enters their home through the back door so he can get there sooner. . . . The only girl in Hollywood he has really wanted to date is Jane Wyman and he called her number once. Then he lost his nerve and hung up. . . . The Stork Club is his favorite night club in the world, providing no one recognizes him. . . . He wakes up cross. Doesn't want to talk before he's had a couple of cups of coffee. . . . The quickest way to bore him is to analyze his character or give him advice. . . . He's a moderately good dresser and has a secret liking for loud Hawaiian shirts but he's scared to wear them. . . . He hates people who arrive after the curtain has gone up in a theater. In fact, the theater is kind of a church with him. He respects all its traditions. . . . He likes to travel with married couples, which is discouraging to belles who have their caps set for him. . . . He is truly modest. Not long ago, I forgot an interview appointment with him which had been made long in advance, and I was an hour late. Monty said, "I can understand anyone forgetting an interview with me. I don't say anything." . . . His work is the only thing in his life (so far) that really holds him and he would accept a "bit" he loved, for nothing, rather than play a star role he hated. . . . When he turned down the male lead in Sunset Boulevard for Brackett and Wilder, he told those two gentlemen, apologetically, "It's too good for me"—which is the height of tact if you ask me. . . . He's a guy nobody knows—but everybody likes.

* * *

It's going to be a great blow if that Great Lady star gets herself involved in a messy international romance. Rumors are already beginning to leak out that she and her husband are practically at the breaking point.

I believe this divorce would be Hollywood's worst black eye since the Mitchum affair. So many people have this actress on a high, high pedestal.

* * *

Betty Hutton says there's not a word of truth in the gossip that she's feudin' with Joan Caulfield.

"We have never been up for the same role, we have never been interested in the same man, we have never bought the same dress—so what the heck is there to feud about?" asks the dynamic Betty.

* * *

The way Errol Flynn raves about Greer Garson must keep her ears burning all the time!

It's no secret that Clark Gable and Greer didn't particularly jibe when they were co-starred. But I've never heard Errol carry on about any actress he has worked with, the way he does over Miss G.

The Redhead and the Hothead, both Irish, moody, but with a wonderful sense of humor, understand each other perfectly.

Greer was at his home for dinner one evening recently and the only other guests were Flynn's little girls, Rory and Diedre. And Greer and Errol dined together the night before he left for England.

But don't get the idea it's a romance. In spite of rumors to the contrary, I believe Buddy Fogelson is still head man in Greer's life and that Errol is torching for Nora Eddington.

JOIN US IN OUR SPECIAL SALUTE TO YOUTH—BEGINNING ON PAGE 29.

'MILDRED PIERCE' DOES IT AGAIN... and everybody tells!

JOAN CRAWFORD

FLAMINGO ROAD

ALSO STARRING
ZACHARY SCOTT · SYDNEY GREENSTREET
DAVID BRIAN

SCREEN PLAY BY ROBERT WILDER
ADDITIONAL DIALOGUE BY EDMUND H. NORTH
BASED ON A PLAY BY ROBERT AND SALLY WILDER

DIRECTED BY MICHAEL CURTIZ PRODUCED BY JERRY WALD

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Speaking of Nora, she told me, "I'm going to marry Dick Haymes as soon as it is possible."

But this may not be as soon as they'd hoped. Joanne Dru had been reported as being willing to give Dick the quick divorce he had requested and had announced plans to go to Las Vegas, where a divorce can be granted in six weeks.

But now, it is said, Joanne has gone back to her original plan of filing for divorce in California—and that takes a year.

(When I asked Joanne if she were going to marry John Ireland, who has been very attentive to her, Joanne replied, "I'm not going to marry anybody—at least, not yet.")

Nora told me tearfully that Errol had refused to let her take Rory, who is legally in his custody, to Las Vegas with her when she and Diedre go there while Errol is off on his European trip.

I suggested that Errol's refusal was based on the fact that Dick Haymes had accompanied Nora to Las Vegas when she went there the first time.

"But I won't see Dick this time until my six-weeks residence there is over," Nora said. She was still hoping Errol would change his mind—but he didn't.

Rory is being taken care of at the Flynn home by Mrs. Eddington, Nora's stepmother, and Errol's sister, Mrs. Rosemary Warner. And, later on, Errol's parents will arrive from Jamaica. So certainly little Rory is being well looked after.

Nora and Dick Haymes have been very "touchy" about their romance, apparently believing everyone has been watching them and talking about them everywhere.

The other night at Jay's café, a very small place at the beach, Nora and Dick were seated next to a group of four people. One of the men was named Earl and his name came up frequently in the conversation.

Nora must have thought they were saying her ex-husband's name, because she turned to the surprised group and snapped, "Errol! Errol! Errol! All right, we hear you!"

The poor innocent foursome almost swooned with surprise.

* * *

The telephone rang in the middle of the night. Alan Ladd sleepily answered it.

"This is the Sheriff's office in Reno," boomed a voice from the other end. "Did you write a letter to a girl telling her to come to Hollywood for a job in the movies?"

"What?" yelled Alan, now wide awake.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Come one! Come all! But come fast, because we have only 500 free subscriptions to give away and they're going to the first 500 people to send back this questionnaire. We liked all the stories in this issue, but we're really interested in the ones you liked (as well as the ones you didn't). Don't forget! The July, August and September issues are yours for free if you're among the first 500.

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our JUNE issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT of your 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

Rock-a-bye Bogey (Humphrey Bogart) ☐
Winner Take All? (Jane Wyman) ☐
Meet the '49ers (Clift, Day, Greer, Perreau, etc.) ☐
She Never Left Home (Jean Peters) ☐
There's No Place Like Hollywood (Janet Leigh) ☐
Baby Face (Bob Arthur) ☐
Not By Breaks Alone (Guy Madison) ☐
My Lonely Years by Vera-Ellen ☐
Happy Hunting (Freeman, Lindsay, Courtland, Williams) ☐
Peter and the Wolf (Peter Lawford) ☐
Time of Their Lives (Shirley Temple-John Agar) ☐
This Love of Ours (Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy) ☐
Make Way for Youth (Jeanne Crain, Kirk Douglas, Pat Neal, etc.) by Hedda Hopper ☐
Stairway to the Stars (Lois Butler) ☐
Past Perfect (Elizabeth Taylor) ☐
Who's New (48 new stars) ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is .....

My address is .....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

"...whenever I hear people singing, I'll hear your voice. Whenever I see joy in their faces, I'll see you."

COLUMBIA PICTURES presents

JENNIFER JONES · JOHN GARFIELD
PEDRO ARMENDARIZ in JOHN HUSTON'S

WE WERE STRANGERS

with

Gilbert Roland · Ramon Novarro · Wally Cassell · David Bond · Screen Play by PETER VIERTEL and JOHN HUSTON

from Robert Sylvester's novel, 'ROUGH SKETCH' · AN HORIZON PRODUCTION · Directed by JOHN HUSTON · Produced by S. P. EAGLE

New!
THE Beauty Discovery you've waited for...

Nestle
COLORINSE
with LURIUM

GIVES YOUR HAIR
MORE COLOR

- Absolutely harmless
- Washes out easily

Now, from the famous Nestle Hair Laboratories comes LURIUM—an amazing new ingredient added to Nestle Colorinse to give your hair more glorious COLOR-BEAUTY, sparkling highlights and silken lustre than ever before.

And — Nestle Colorinse with Lurium eliminates tangles — makes hair easier to comb, easier to manage—comes in 10 flattering shades.

FREE! Full size package of Nestle Colorinse. Just write the color of your hair on a postcard and mail it to The Nestle Co., 50 Baker Ave., South Meriden, Conn.

So Economical to Use!
2 rinses 10¢
6 rinses 25¢

NESTLE - originators of permanent waving — Meriden, Conn.

A smiling Margaret O'Brien left far Eurape abaard the Queen Elizabeth with her mather and new stepfather, bandleader Don Sylvio.

Bab Mitchum is home again with wife Darathy after serving a 50-day prisan sentence. Says he'll build a "woll af privacy" around his life.

The startling question was repeated. "This girl has planked herself down at the airport gate and won't budge until she gets on a plane 'cause she says you wrote her to come on for your next picture."

And that's the way poor Alan got his name in headlines the next day! What had happened was that Alan had written a regular, routine letter, a nice habit of his, thanking the gal—Linda Carlson was her name—for her interest in his pictures. He didn't know her from Adam until she started waving the letter at everyone who came near her.

She certainly got a lot of publicity for herself—but a lot of good it did her. If she expected an offer from a studio on the strength of her antics, she had a sad awakening.

Since then, no one has heard a peep out of her. Probably went back home when she saw her publicity stunt wouldn't work. But it seems a shame to have dragged one of the nicer guys in our town in on her scheme that backfired.

* * *

Norman Rockwell, who does those wonderful covers on the Saturday Evening Post, says Elizabeth Taylor will be the greatest beauty af her day when she reaches 30!

I met the interesting Mr. Rockwell at a square dance. As you know, he goes in for folksy, everyday people and not glamor girls. So I was surprised at how hep he was to Hollywood.

"The little Taylor girl, with her brown hair, blue-green eyes and full brows, is a beauty naw," he said. "But when she adds the maturity of expression to her almost-perfect features, I believe she'll be our greatest national beauty since Maxine Elliott."

(In case you're too young to know—Maxine was Lillion Russell's greatest rival, and mony people thought her brunette beauty more striking than Lillian's blonde lushness.)

I was interested to learn that Mr. Rockwell believes there aren't many real beauties in Hollywood! "Interesting personalities and faces—yes," he said. "But few reol beauties."

"You mean there aren't any you would care to paint?" I asked. Being a nice, tactful man, he didn't answer.

* * *

Joan Evans has made me change my mind about her. I had her wrong.

My first impression dated from a cocktail party given in honor of the 14-year-old who was rating plenty of publicity as the novice being given the star treatment in her first picture, Roseanna McCoy. (Why a cocktail party should be given for any 14-year-old, I couldn't see.)

The enormous-eyed child with the poise of a woman three times her age was milling among the guests with a soft drink in her hand when an old friend of her mother's went up to her and said: "I knew you before you were born. Fact is, I took booties to your baby shower."

To which Joan replied, "If anyone else says that to me, I think I shall just dieeeee! Just about everybody tells me they knew me when Katherine was pregnant!"

That did it. I put her down as a precocious youngster who was too sophisticoted for her britches.

But the way she has taken the woes and ails that have beset the filming of the anything-but-rosy Roseanna, makes me realize this little girl has the stuff it takes.

It was a rough blaw when Som Goldwyn called her into his office and told her a whole month's shooting would have to be done over—not because he was not satisfied with her, but because of script trouble. This would have been a blow to an experienced actress.

Farley Granger told me, "The kid was wonderful. She'd played some tough emotional scenes in which she had given her all. Now she would have to do it all over with a new script and new actors. But she didn't go to pieces. Instead, she pitched in and worked with even more enthusiasm. I take

OUR SPECIAL SALUTE-TO-YOUTH SECTION BEGINS ON PAGE 29.

BLOW BY BLOW...KISS BY KISS...HE WAS THE CHAMPION Screen Plays Corp. presents
KIRK DOUGLAS in Ring Lardner's
"CHAMPION"
Co-starring
MARILYN MAXWELL • ARTHUR KENNEDY with PAUL STEWART • RUTH ROMAN • LOLA ALBRIGHT Produced by STANLEY KRAMER
Associate Producer Robert Stillman • Directed by Mark Robson
Screenplay by Carl Foreman • Released thru United Artists

Choose the creme shampoo beauticians use most... For glowing hair, mist-soft... dazzling clean, obedient ...dandruff-free, film-free

Helene Curtis

creme shampoo

rich in emulsified lanolin

Why pay a dollar for 4 ounces?

Get this giant 8 ounce jar!

twice as much for... $1

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

(Large Reg. Size, 60c)

AT BEAUTY SALONS, DRUG, DEPT. STORES

Portlond Moson (nomed for Mrs. Fred Allen) mokes her comero debut with porents Pom Kellino ond Jomes Moson. She's their first child.

Strolling in the spring sunshine in Victorio Gordens, London, Ty Power ond his bride, Lindo, ore unnoticed by o mon interested only in his newspaper.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

my hat off to her. She's a real trouper."

I certainly agree.

* * *

Joan Bennett, four times a mother, was as nervous as a jitterbug on a Pogo-stick pacing the hospital corridor awaiting the birth of her first grandchild, Amanda Anderson.

Hours went by and by and by—and still beautiful Diana had not had her baby. Joan's teeth were chattering and she couldn't sit down. Walter Wanger says he bets she paced 10 miles.

Finally, she turned and said, "I w-wouldn't be a f-f-father for anything!"

* * *

Betsy Drake called up in tears over the story that broke out of Chicago in which she was quoted as saying she would marry Cary Grant in two months.

"When I passed through Chicago on my way back to Hollywood, I met this reporter briefly and admitted that Cary and I were just as good friends as ever," Betsy sniffled. "But I never said we would be married soon or gave any definite date.

"Cary is so sick now, and on a boat coming home via the Panama Canal. I wouldn't do anything in the world to upset him or have him think I had taken advantage of his being such a gentleman, by announcing our 'engagement.' What will he think of me?"

I told her Cary probably wouldn't be in the least upset. He's more used to the fortunes and misfortunes of being in the public prints than is Betsy.

* * *

Personal to Jack Beutel: Come on, boy—pull yourself together and don't do it the hard way, as Robert Walker has had to do.

When you were arrested for drunken driving recently, I was told that you'd been brooding for a long time over your career—that you felt you had not kept pace with Jane Russell, your co-star in The Outlaw.

Well, I can tell you that the cure you took for your sorrows never helped anything. It is the surest way I know to the bottom.

Careers are not made in a day or in one picture. You are young and a good actor.

Look at Dan Dailey. He knocked around in minor roles for several years before he clicked big. I firmly believe that if you keep pitching, you will get your chance, too.

* * *

It's cute that Edmond O'Brien and Olga San Juan want to preserve the Irish-Spanish ancestry angle in picking out a name for their expected baby. BUT—

If it's a boy, they'll name him Sean Juan O'Brien, which sounds so much like Don Juan O'Brien that it plumb fractures me!

* * *

Hollywood in Shorts: Peter Lawford is enrolling in the night class in English "lit" at UCLA and cahn't see any reason at all why it should cause any commotion! Oh, now rehlly, Pete. . . . There are fewer requests for interviews with Linda Darnell than any other top-flight star in the business. "I just never do anything," Linda explains. . . . Anne Baxter chews gum constantly. Keeps her from smoking too much and it also strengthens the chin muscles. . . . Just as Spencer Tracy and Valentina Cortesa went into their first love scene for Malaya, she doubled up with pain and collapsed. She's been lying down with an ice pack on her side, between scenes, in a gallant effort to ward off an appendectomy until after the picture is finished. . . . Gloria De Haven has been dating Howard Duff since she separated from John Payne and he hit a snag with Ava Gardner. . . . How come Dan Dailey never asks anyone to dance at a night club or a private party? It's discouraging to the belles who would like to take a flip around the floor with an expert. . . .

That's all for now—see you next month!

THE END

WOODBURY PRESENTS NEW MIRACLE DISCOVERY FOR LOVELIER SKIN

Penaten in Woodbury De Luxe Cold Cream Cleanses Skin Cleaner

In Penaten, Woodbury introduces a modern-miracle... a penetrating ingredient newly developed.

Almost unbelievable! Penaten means Woodbury De Luxe Cold Cream penetrates deeper into pore openings! Cleanses deeper and cleaner. Seeks out grime and make-up. Amazingly thorough—thoroughly gentle. Your skin looks clearer because it's cleaner!

Twin miracle! Penaten helps Woodbury's rich skin softeners penetrate deeper. Seep deeper into pore openings. Skin is smoother, softer—glorious as never before!

Today, get this new, new magic—Woodbury De Luxe Cold Cream with Penaten. See the difference—the lovely, lovely difference—in your skin!

Jars with pink-and-gold labels. Trial size, 20¢ to largest luxury sizes, $1.39. Plus tax.

Your cleansing tissue proves it!

If your skin's dry... New, Deeper Softening with PENATEN in Woodbury De Luxe Dry Skin Cream

A marvel, too!... the velvet beauty that comes to dry skin... through deeper, richer softening! Penaten, in Woodbury De Luxe Dry Skin Cream, helps rich, smoothing emollients penetrate into pore openings. Lanolin's softening benefits go deeper, softening tiny lines... smoothing flaky roughness to fresher, younger-looking beauty.

In Champion, a brilliantly realistic drama of the fight racket, Kirk Douglas makes love to Ruth Roman, daughter of the owner of the lunchroom where he works, and is forced to marry her. He deserts her, hits the road and becomes a prizefighter.

His savage natural skill and the handling of a clever, cynical manager—plus ruthless double-crossing—make him champion. He's hailed by the public as a splendid, clean-cut athlete.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

Yet all the time, we know him for a conscienceless rat. After messing up a number of lives, he climaxes things by slugging his crippled brother (Arthur Kennedy). Then he gets his.

CHAMPION

Cast: Kirk Douglas, Marilyn Maxwell, Arthur Kennedy, Paul Stewart, Ruth Roman, Lola Albright.
United Artists.

In Ring Lardner's original story, Midge Kelly was an unmitigated rat. He beat his crippled brother, he beat his old mother, he spent his money on women, and he lived a happy, prosperous life. Our movie Midge (Kirk Douglas) is a trifle less ruthless—he supports his old mother, and has a certain affection for his crippled brother (Arthur Kennedy). He comes to a much more hideous end, and it's easier to feel some sympathy for him, since you're shown that social forces, and not inborn cussedness alone, have played their part in shaping him. We see Midge as a poor boy, knocked around, looked down on, cheated, until in rebellion at the world, he resolves to be rich and do a little looking down, himself. Trouble is, he takes too kindly to it. First he deserts the girl (Ruth Roman) he's been pressured into marrying, and goes off to become a prizefighter. Right away, he goes back on an agreement he makes to take a dive in one fight, and instead beats the blazes out of a fighter (John Day) who's befriended him. This nets him the fighter's girl friend (Marilyn Maxwell). She's an expensive lady to keep, and she has no time for has-beens. Neither has Midge. He fires his loyal manager (Paul Stewart) in order to cinch a deal with a big promoter, finds he likes the promoter's wife (Lola Albright), and is all ready to make off with her when the promoter gives him a mess of money to forget the affair. Midge's memory is obligingly short. He becomes world champion, idol of the crowds and touted by the press as a clean-living American boy. His mother dies. He gets home too late to see her, but not too late to mess up crippled brother Connie's life. Connie's always loved Midge's deserted wife. He's found her, has her on the point of marrying him, when Midge appears and makes a couple of passes. Midge gets his, of course, in a scene so horrible you'll never forget it, but by then he's already crucified everybody who's ever come near him. There are fight scenes in this picture to sicken strong men. There are pieces of acting without flaw. (Notably Douglas', Stewart's, and the girl, Ruth Roman's.) While it's not lighthearted, it's quite a perfect production.

TULSA

Cast: Susan Hayward, Robert Preston, Pedro Armendariz, Lloyd Gough.
Eagle-Lion.

Bock in the early days when Tulsa was a boom town, Susan Hayward's pappy, a cattle man, gets annoyed because the oil from a well on the next ranch is polluting his stream and killing his herd. He goes over to tell the oil people about it, and is promptly blown up. (Nitroglycerin explosion. Accidental.) Susan complains to oil bigshot Bruce Tanner (Lloyd Gough), and then she meets up with an old soak who insists on giving her some oil leases. (That means you can drill on the property.) The old soak is killed, and there she is, an heiress. Tanner now comes forward. He'll buy the leases. Drilling for oil's a gamble. Play safe, little girl. Sneering widely, Susan turns Tanner down. Then, with the aid of Jim Redbird (Pedro Armendariz), an Indian who's in love with her, and Brad Brady (Robert Preston), the old soak's son, she starts operations. Suffice it to say her oil well comes in. Soon she's the richest girl in Oklahoma, with lots and lots of wells. Gets greedy, too. Joins forces with Tanner. Up till here, she's gone along with Jim Redbird's plea that she leave some green space for cattle—at least on his property. The land will be there long after the oil is gone, but it will be ruined forever if oil-crazy operators don't stop sinking derricks every two feet or so. Still, Susan's so set on being Tanner's partner that if Jim Redbird didn't go almost mad, do you hear, mad, and start a raging fire, why she'd most likely never have come to her senses. But that's all she needs. To quote a studio release: "Now . . . she is exactly the girl he (Brad) has dreamed she could be. Together they face the future, ready to build another oil empire. . . ." Anyhow, the picture has exciting Technicolored moments. (The fire, especially, is a tensely spectacular sight to see.) And the background of oilfield operations is not only interesting but moderately educational—at least, it shows you that life in the oilfields can be awful messy. . . . Another interesting feature is Chill Wills carrying on like a carbon copy of Hoagy Carmichael.

Tulsa: Susan Hayward gets richer and richer in the oil business, invalving Pedra Armendoriz and Bab Prestan in considerable excitement.

Will he see you at your BEST tonight?

Don't just miss because of

TOBACCO MOUTH

[OFF-COLOR BREATH
OFF-COLOR TEETH]

The yellow film of "tobacco mouth" is a little thing—but it can disfigure your smile like a missing tooth!

And the odor of "tobacco mouth" . . . oh—oh! Lady, it's just not like you. Why offend a friend? Why annoy a neighbor—even in all innocence? It's so easy to be completely sure of yourself if you use Listerine Tooth Paste. Here's why—

It contains Lusterfoam—a special ingredient that actually foams cleaning and polishing agents over your teeth . . . into the crevices—removes fresh stain before it gets a chance to "set" . . . whisks away that odor-making tobacco debris!

See for yourself how Listerine Tooth Paste with Lusterfoam freshens your mouth and your breath! Get a tube and make sure wherever you go—you won't take "tobacco mouth" with you!

TOBACCO MOUTH

...give it the "brush-off" with

"Feel that Lusterfoam work!"

Take Me Out To The Ball Game: Esther Williams, Gene Kelly, Fronk Sinatra, Betty Garrett, ond Edword Arnold fralic through o tole af baseball. Need we soy there's much dancing and singing?

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME

Cast: Frank Sinatra, Esther Williams, Gene Kelly, Betty Garrett, Edward Arnold, Jules Munshin.

MGM.

Here we have Frank Sinatra and Gene Kelly as baseball stars (Teddy Roosevelt era) in a movie that's fun. (The boys do a vaudeville act during baseball's off-seasons, which gives you some idea. Lots of song and dance numbers.) When Frank isn't singing, dancing or playing ball, he's attempting to beat up some brawny character or other. (Thinks he has muscles.) Once Kelly says desperately, "Why don't you ever pick on somebody your own size?" to which Frankie can only answer, "There ain't nobody my size." Both Gene and Frank fall for Esther Williams (she owns their ball-club) but Frank is being diligently pursued by Betty Garrett. (Betty gets her first real movie break here, and makes the most of it. She's funny, and a little bit sad, and quite wonderful.) There's a scene in which Betty tries to separate Frank from Esther, and Gene says, "But she owns him. She owns me, too." Betty looks at Esther in sheer wonder. "Gosh, can you do that?" she says. If you get a kick out of sprightly carryings-on. and breezy dialogue, here they are. Kelly's never danced better, there's never been brighter Technicolor, Frankie's more appealing than he's been in ages, and there's even a pool scene for Esther. There's a kind of a plot, too, but it doesn't interfere much with anything.

IMPACT

Cast: Brian Donlevy, Ella Raines, Charles Coburn, Helen Walker, Anna May Wong.

United Artists.

This is a rambling affair, lousy with anti-climaxes. Millionaire Brian Donlevy loves his wife, Helen Walker. She, the fool, has been carrying on with an unpleasant young man (Tony Barrett) to whom she gives monogrammed shirts. She even permits this young man to attempt murder on her spouse. Spouse, whose head is harder than the jack it gets bashed with, wakes up in a ditch one night. Young man, in spouse's car, rushing to meet Helen Walker, comes to worse end. Crashes car into gasoline truck. Burns. When the car is found with unidentifiable body, wife thinks Donlevy's dead, as per schedule. It worries her that boy-friend hasn't shown up, but she's got time. Donlevy, to whom the whole dreadful plot has become apparent, takes his aching head off to the country to sulk. A smart policeman (Charles Coburn) eventually brings wife to trial for Donlevy's murder, while Donlevy sits tight in the country, and falls in love with a girl (Ella Raines) who owns a garage. But once honest Ella hears his story, she insists that he go back, tell all. He goes back. The minute his wife sees him alive and kicking, she knows her true love is dead, and she accuses Brian of the murder. Now Ella feels bad. See what she's brought Brian to? What to do! Everything turns out swell for Brian and Ella, but the only person I worried about in the whole picture was the poor slob driving that gasoline truck. Nobody gave him a thought.

SCOTT OF THE ANTARCTIC

Cast: John Mills, Harold Warrender, Derek Bond, Reginald Beckwith, James Robertson Justice, Kenneth More.

Eagle-Lion.

This is the story, based on documented facts, of the British Captain Robert Scott who attempted to conquer the South Pole, in the year 1910. His was to be a different kind of expedition from any which had gone before.

YOU'LL FIND OUR SALUTE-TO-YOUTH SECTION BEGINNING ON PAGE 29.

"We'll take dogs," he said. "But we'll also take horses and machines." A Norwegian, who'd been adviser to the noted explorer, Amundsen, told Scott he was wrong. "Take dogs," he said. "And dogs, and dogs." Scott, however, stuck to his own ideas. If you've ever read the history of his last expedition, you know it was tragic. Brave men fighting a thousand miles of barren ice and hostile wind, being beaten to the Pole (Amundsen got there first, after all), having their animals die, their food supply diminish, and, in the end, themselves perishing. Scott's diary contained these last words: "Had we lived, I should have had a tale to tell of the hardihood and courage of my companions . . ." That the picture is engrossing is due largely to the excellent cast, headed by John Mills, as Scott. That the picture is not quite as moving as you'd expect may have something to do with the fact that we live in an age when many men have died gallantly, though the ways of their death were not ways of their own choosing. This soon after a world war, the idea that once men who could have stayed peacefully at home, preferred to risk death by chasing adventure, is still a trifle surprising. You're desperately sorry for the Scott expedition, but you know that the Antarctic is just a great icy waste. And you wonder why these men threw their lives away when there wasn't any need to.

FLAMINGO ROAD

Cast: Joan Crawford, Zachary Scott, Sydney Greenstreet, David Brian, Gladys George. Warners.

A complicated, absorbing drama about ambition and politics. Joan Crawford's a carnival dancer adrift in the small town of Boldon. She meets Deputy Sheriff Zachary Scott. He's nice to her, but Sheriff Sydney Greenstreet, who has big plans for Zach, breaks up the attachment. Sydney succeeds in marrying weakling Zach to a rich, influential lady, but he doesn't succeed in driving Joan out of Boldon, even though he has her arrested and sent to jail, on a trumped-up charge. When she gets out of the clink she hot-foots it for a roadhouse run by Gladys George, who's in solid with the state political machine bigshots. Sydney won't dare touch her there. At the roadhouse, Joan meets David Brian, head of the machine. He marries her, buys her minks and a new house. Sydney dislikes David Brian, and he dislikes this turn of events. (Brian's not as Flamingo Road: Sydney Greenstreet, sheriff with politicol ombitions, brews a storm in teocups for Joon Crowford ond David Brian.

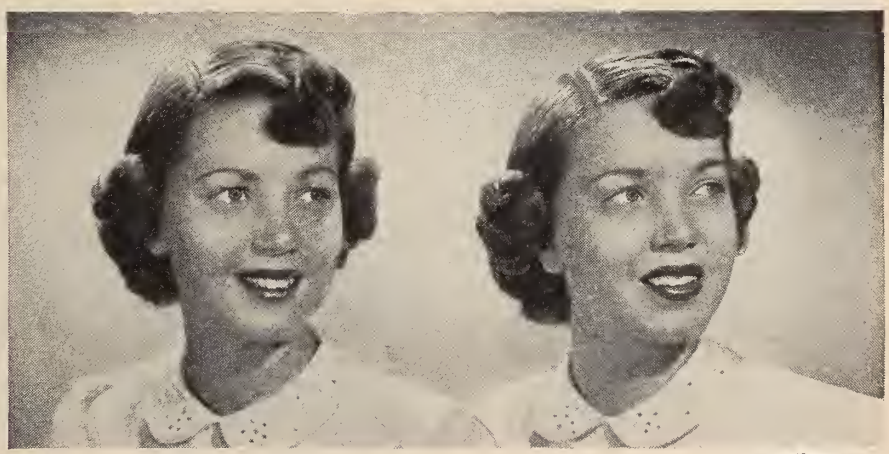
TONI TWINS prove magic of SOFT-WATER Shampooing



LATHER . . . WAS KATHERINE'S PROBLEM.

"My shampoo simply would not lather right", complained Katherine Ring. "I'd rub and rub but still my hair never had much glint to it!" And no wonder! Katherine was using a soap shampoo, and soaps not only fail to lather as well in hard water—they actually leave a film on hair that dulls natural lustre! So your hair lacks highlights, looks drab and lifeless!

BUT KATHLEENE GOT HEAPS OF IT!

"Look at all this lather", smiled her twin, Kathleene. "I discovered that Toni Creme Shampoo gives Soft-Water Shampooing even in hard water! I never saw such suds! Never saw my hair so shining clean before, either!" That's what Toni's Soft-Water Shampooing means. Even in hard water it means billows of rich, whipped-cream suds that leave your hair shimmering clean!

NOW IT'S TONI CREME SHAMPOO FOR TWO!

Yes, it's Toni and only Toni for both the Ring twins from now on. Because Toni Creme Shampoo gives Soft-Water Shampooing in hard water! That creamy-thick lather rinses away dirt and dandruff instantly. Leaves your hair fragrantly clean, gloriously soft! And Toni Creme Shampoo helps your permanent to "take" better—look lovelier longer. Get a jar or tube of Toni Creme Shampoo today. See it work the magic of Soft-Water Shampooing on your hair!

Enriched with Lanolin

crooked as Sydney, and he won't let Sydney have his own way about putting hand-picked men into choice state jobs. For a while, Sydney wants to make Zach governor, only he finally decides he'd rather be governor himself, and when this doesn't appeal to Brian, Sydney frames Brian neatly. Before he's done, Zach's killed himself, Sydney's connected the suicide with Joan to get her run out of town, Brian's on his way to jail, and Sidney's set to be governor. Sydney doesn't make it, though, and he doesn't make it in a spectacular way. This picture moves so fast it leaves you breathless, and newcomer David Brian is sensational. He's a big blond guy (in looks, kind of a cross between Sonny Tufts and Dan Duryea). No kid (late 30's, probably), he's got charm, a warm presence, great ability. He's got, in fact, more than one man deserves. Joan's hard to take as a carnival dancer (she sounds too cultured) but the minute she slings a mink across her shoulder, you're right back with the Crawford you know and understand.

ADVENTURE IN BALTIMORE

Cast: Robert Young, Shirley Temple, John Agar, Albert Sharpe, Josephine Hutchinson. RKO.

Cute's the word for Adventure in Baltimore. It's young, gay and good-natured. Shirley Temple, minister Robert Young's older daughter, is expelled from school in the year 1905. She thinks three petticoats are enough, and she wants to paint pictures from life, so the school authorities consider her a fallen woman. At home, Shirley turns her eyes on John Agar, the boy next door. Alas, he loves another. Shirley is heartbroken, but she manages to keep busy. Gets into scrapes like the one after which John has to come to jail and bail her out with his last $50. As a peace offering, she writes John a speech. He's supposed to address a group of townspeople (at school) and he hasn't had time to prepare for the event. Big night arrives. Speech is handed to John by Shirley two seconds before he's due to read it. It turns out to be an impassioned plea for woman suffrage, to the hysterical amusement of his audience. Before he's lived that down, Shirley's involved him in still a worse scandal. She enters a painting (of a more or less unclothed blacksmith) in a "Spirit of Labor" contest, and the painted figure is topped off by John's head. Elsewhere along the line, Shirley's father is elected Bishop of Maryland, Shirley's little brother clutches a guppy till it gasps its last, and then hastily returns it to the fishbowl, and Shirley's mother (Josephine Hutchinson), a very dignified lady, has her eye blacked in a suffragette parade. Most amazing highlight of the film, however, is John Agar's performance. He may be inexperienced, but he's good. To see him making that women's rights speech, with the sweat standing forth on his brow, and his nervous voice-breaking, is worth the whole picture. (Shirley gets him in the end. Didn't want you to worry.)

TOO LATE FOR TEARS

Cast: Lizabeth Scott, Don De Fore, Dan Duryea, Arthur Kennedy, Kristine Miller. United Artists.

Lizabeth Scott is a female who's already driven one husband to suicide, and who murders second husband Arthur Kennedy when he and she get their mitts on a satchel of money intended for blackmailer Dan Duryea. You see, Arthur wants to turn it over to the police. He's checked it at the Union Station, and hidden the claim check. So goodbye, Arthur. Duryea, who wants his money back, becomes Liz's partner in crime and they try to find the claim check. But their efforts are thwarted by Kristine Miller, the dead man's sister, and Don De Fore, who claims to have been overseas with the dead man, but who's really a brother of Liz's first husband. Kristine and Don find the claim check before Liz and Duryea do, but Liz has a gun, so she ends up with the claim check. She gets the money, kills Duryea, and she comes to no good end. Arthur Kennedy's talent is wasted here, while the beautiful Miss Scott's acting is—well—inadequate. Duryea's very good. As for Kristine Miller and Don De Fore, they're both so big and healthy-looking, everybody else in the picture seems dwarfed.

Adventure in Baltimore: Suffragette Shirley Temple's advanced ideas (far 1905) give the boy next door (John Agar) some hard times.

Too Late For Tears: As a beautiful murderess, Lizabeth Scott craftily outdoes her partner-in-crime, Dan Duryea, in the villainy department.

The Younger Brothers: Geroldine Brooks, Wayne Morris and Bob Hutton take time out for smiles in this exciting epic of the big, bad West.

THE YOUNGER BROTHERS

Cast: Wayne Morris, Janis Paige, Bruce Bennett, Geraldine Brooks, Robert Hutton, Alan Hale.

Warners.

The Younger brothers, Wayne Morris, James Brown and Bruce Bennett, are outlaws waiting for a Minnesota parole. They want to go home to Missouri and farm life. (Circumstances forced them to be outlaws in the first place. Their hearts are pure.) A man named Ryckman (Fred Clark) doesn't want the boys paroled. He's a crippled ex-detective, and he hates the Youngers because he got his bad leg by falling off a horse one time when he was chasing them. Janis Paige doesn't hate the Youngers (she goes for Wayne, in fact) but she doesn't want Wayne and his brothers to turn straight, either. She, herself, is an outlaw chief, and honest folk bore her silly. Fortunately for Ryckman and Janis, a fourth Younger brother shows up in town. He's Bob Hutton and he's come from Missouri to see his brothers paroled. Ryckman frames it so Hutton kills a man, and as if that weren't enough, Janis has Hutton kidnapped, and then Wayne goes to rescue him, and Janis has the men tie him up, too. She's planning to rob a bank, and leave the Youngers there as security, so to speak. With no horses, and no guns, they'll simply have to sit and wait for the cops to

(Continued on page 106)

PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6 Modern Screen staff—8 Lt., Wide World, Rt., Floyd J. Hopkins—12 Lt., Acme Photo, Rt., Wide World—14 Wide World—30 T., Bert Parry, Bot. Lt., RKO, Bot. Rt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—31 Harry Warnecke—32 RKO—33 T. Lt., RKO., T. Rt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Cen. Lt., Gus Gale, Cen. Rt., Floyd McCarty, Bot. Lt., Goldwyn, Bot. Rt., Eagle-Lion—34 Bob Beerman—35 20th Century-Fox Exc. Rt., Bert Parry—36-39 Bert Parry—40 T., Bert Parry, Bot., Walt Davis—41 Bob Beerman—42-47 Bob Beerman—50-53 Bert Parry—54 T., Paramount, Cen., Bob Beerman; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Bot., Columbia; Warners—55 T., Fox; Frank Powolny, Cen., United Artists; Warners, Bot., Jack Woods; Bob Beerman—56 Bert Parry—57 T., Bert Parry, Bot., Eagle-Lion—58-59 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer — 60 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exc. T. Rt., Bert Parry, Bot., Wide World—61 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—65-70 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Rigbt; T., Top

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use...Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the free jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Write to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for your free jar.

"WHY THIS FUSS ABOUT HAVING BABIES?" GROWLED BOGART. THEN HE BECAME A DADDY HIMSELF . . .

ROCK-A-BYE BOGEY

By JOHN HARKINS

■ One day a few months ago, a friend dropped by for a quiet drink with the Humphrey Bogarts. It was that peaceful, easy last hour of the afternoon. Lauren—or, as she's known to intimates, Betty—had gone to her room to change before going out to dinner. Fred, the Negro houseman with the Oxford accent, had lighted the logs in the fireplace, inquired, "Will there be anything more, M'lord?" (a form of address that is an endless jest between him and Bogey) and vanished noiselessly.

For a while, Bogey and his guest talked aimlessly while they watched the shadows from the kindling fire dance over the deep chairs, the grand piano in the corner and the copper pieces around the room. Then, "What do you think of approaching fatherhood?" the caller asked.

"What do I think of it?" Bogey replied. He paused for a few seconds—and then (Continued on page 104)

SCOOP: Born on Jonuory 6, Stephen poses here with mo Lauren Bacoll and po Humphrey Bogort for his very first picture.

He'll say "Kiss me... Kiss me!" when you use Tangee

A Kiss Coming Up in a Tender Love Scene Starring

LON McCALLISTER

AND

PEGGY ANN GARNER

IN

"THE BIG CAT"

AN EAGLE LIONS FILM RELEASE
IN TECHNICOLOR

Tangee KISSABLE TEXTURE

1. Keeps lips soft...invitingly moist.
2. Feels just right...gives you confidence.
3. Does not smear or run at the edges.
4. Goes on so easily...so smoothly...so quickly.
5. And it lasts—and LASTS—and L-A-S-T-S!

Tangee KISS COLORS

TANGEE PINK QUEEN—The pink of perfection ...makes lips exciting—inviting—irresistible to men.

TANGEE RED-RED—The reddest red of them all. Just what you need "to get your man."

TANGEE RED MAJESTY—No. 1 shade for brunettes! Sure to make your lips his "target for tonight."

TANGEE MEDIUM RED—Not too dark...not too light...but just right to tempt—and tease.

WINNER TAKE ALL?

Jane Wyman was at adds with Ranald Reagan when she and Lew Ayres (abave) were attracted making Johnny Belinda.

Jane's Academy Award came ta her after a year af great ematianal strains in her private life. During this period, Lew Ayres repartedly gave her much understanding counsel. She and Reagan, naw divarced, are still friendly and keep in clase tauch.

Jane Wyman has gained an actress' highest triumph. But what of the personal happiness she so deserves?

By JANET FRANKLIN

■ As Jane Wyman stood on the Academy Theater stage amid the tumult of applause and flashing camera bulbs, her tear-starred face was one of the most dramatic ever photographed. A slender figure in a round-necked, white crepe gown, her dark hair brushed back simply, her enormous brown eyes glowing, she was silent for a moment, clutching her gold Oscar tightly in both hands. Then she bent forward and said shakily, "I accept this award very gratefully—for keeping my mouth shut once. I think I'll do it again."

And with this, probably the shortest Academy Award speech on record, she walked off the platform and into the arms of the friends who'd crowded backstage. Walter Huston, Jerry Wald, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Jean Hersholt hugged her joyfully. And a little to one side, smiling quietly, Lew Ayres waited for her patiently. . . .

Still holding her Oscar as though she could never put it down, Jane gave breathless answers to the barrage of questions. "I've never been so frightened in my life," she said. "When Ronald Colman called my name and I walked up to that stage, I was scared to death." She posed (Continued on page 76)

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

So effective . . . Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

Always creamy and smooth . . . lovely to use!

So gentle . . . Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

Rayve Creme Shampoo makes hair behave so beautifully!

Yet Rayve costs no more than ordinary Shampoos

See the miracle in your own mirror! Even on shampoo day, your hair behaves . . . when you use wonderful Rayve Creme Shampoo! Rayve leaves your hair silky soft, clean, and shimmering with highlights . . . yet so easy to manage!

Here's the secret! Your hair has a natural body that helps keep it in place. The pure lanolin in Rayve is specially blended with other important ingredients to help preserve the natural body of your hair. That's why Rayve makes hair behave beautifully—even right after it's shampooed!

Rayve is not a soap so it can't leave dulling soap film! Rayve billows into rich, active lather that cleans—rinses quickly. No flaky dandruff remains. Always use Rayve—the perfect shampoo before and after home permanents.

Your Hair Needs Special Summer Care! Look for the display of summer hair care needs featured now at drug and cosmetic counters.

ANOTHER FINE PRODUCT OF PEPSODENT

Rayve Bargain!

2 TUBES for 33¢

REGULAR 50¢ VALUE!

Limited time only-hurry!

Your letters . . .

ABOUT COLLEEN TOWNSEND

Dear Editor: I was very much impressed with your article concerning Colleen Townsend. I think that any star with such devotion and determination could not help but find success and happiness in the happiness she brings to others.

BILL GREGORY, U. S. M. C., GUAM

(The article entitled "Soldier of God" appeared in the March Modern Screen, and traced Miss Townsend's religious awakening.—Ed.)

Dear Editor: As far as I know, the article about Colleen Townsend in your March issue is a lie. Her story reveals nothing more than the time-honored attempt of selfish people to rise to the top at the expense of minority groups, in this case, the Mormons. Colleen was probably never ostracized for being from Hollywood. Other students will attest that Colleen was well-liked on the campus and no one "shied away" from her. I'm afraid Miss Townsend has made it hard for future Brigham Young University students from Hollywood, however, who will be required to live down your little story.

CLIFFORD M. MCALL, PROVO, UTAH

(Mr. McAll's letter, referring to the article's statement that Miss Townsend started at Brigham Young University "with two strikes on her," was forwarded to the actress and brought the following reply.—Ed.)

Dear Editor: I'm terribly sorry that Mr. Clifford McAll was offended by certain references to my life at Brigham Young University as reported in Modern Screen. It is true that I told Mr. Louis Pollock that it took me a long while to feel I belonged there. However, I attribute this to the fact that not only was I from Hollywood, but that my picture was on the covers of several national magazines just at the time I entered B. Y. U. I know that I was being over-sensitive in my attempt to be just an average new girl at school, and would not feel the same today. I was probably wrong in sensing a slight skepticism about my earnestness in attending B. Y. U., but I couldn't help noticing that while many of my freshman friends were receiving invitations to join social units, I was not, and did not. At the time this hurt a little. Later, I realized that happiness at B. Y. U. did not depend on one's membership in a unit, because the school as a whole was a warm and friendly place. Anything in Mr. Pollock's article suggesting that B. Y. U. is not a friendly school was certainly not meant to sound that way. After all, I spent tremendously happy times there. I made some of my best friends there whom I still see often. I have a fat scrap book of my college days. I would like Clifford McAll and his friends to know that I am still a fan of my "Alma Mammy," and I never meant to imply anything different.

COLLEEN TOWNSEND, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

PROOF POSITIVE

Dear Editor: I want to say to Joan Furst and any other readers who may have the same idea that the Questionnaire Box is not a "put-up job," as she charged. Just the other day I received my first free copy of Modern Screen—and that was because I was among the first 500 to mail back the questionnaire.

SADIE E. PRINTZ, LURAY, VIRGINIA

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

BARKLEYS OF BROADWAY—album featuring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers* (MGM). Some brand new hits by Harry Warren and Ira Gershwin, plus a revival of They Can't Take That Away From Me, the same George Gershwin ballad they introduced in Shall We Dance? twelve years ago. One of his new novelties here, Shoes With Wings On, fits Fred's style as perfectly as the wings fit his shoes.

CONNECTICUT YANKEE—album featuring Bing Crosby with Rhonda Fleming, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, William Bendix, Murvin Vye (Decca).
For a reluctant budget—single releases: Once and For Always by Tony Martin* (Victor); Dinah Shore (Columbia); Jo Stafford (Capitol); Art Mooney (MGM); Vic Damone (Mercury).
If You Stub Your Toe on the Moon by Frank Sinatra* (Columbia); King Cole* (Capitol); Tony Martin (Victor); John Laurenz (Mercury).
When is Sometime by Perry Camo* (Victor); Jack Fina (MGM); Vic Damane (Mercury).
Busy Doing Nothing by Jack Smith (Capitol); Vaughn Monroe (Victor); Modernaires (Columbia); Jack Edwards (MGM).

ROADHOUSE—"Again" by Mel Torme* (Capitol); Gordon Jenkins* (Decca)

SORROWFUL JONES—"Having a Wonderful Wish (Time You Were Here)" by Dinah Shore* (Columbia).

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME—title song, and "Yes Indeedy!" bath by Gene Kelly and Betty Garrett* (MGM).

WORDS AND MUSIC—"Blue Moon" by Mel Torme (Capitol).
A fine record, with credit due to the accompaniment by Pete Rugolo's orchestra.

"BOPULAR"

GEORGIE AULD—"They Didn't Believe Me"* (Discovery).

MILES DAVIS—"Move"* (Capitol).
Strange and interesting new bop band including a tuba and a French harn.

DIZZY GILLESPIE—"Laver Come Back To Me"* (Victor).

BENNY GOODMAN—"Undercurrent Blues"* (Capital).
Yes, Benny's band has switched to bop, and successfully! Thanks mainly to arranger Chico O'Farrill, a bop expert from Havana.

METRONOME ALL STARS—"Overtime" (Victor).
Terrific all-star cast in a great record.

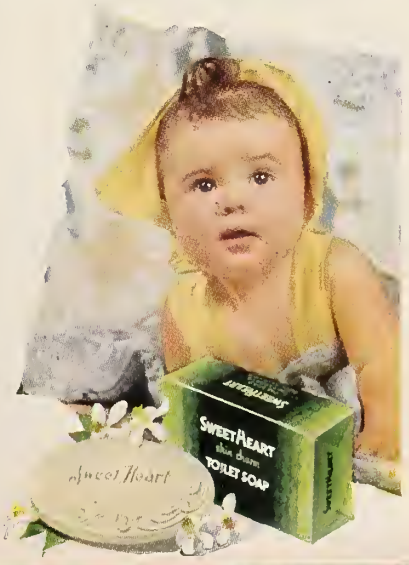
GEORGE SHEARING—"So Rare"* (Savoy); "I Only Have Eyes For You"* (London); "Moon Over Miami" (Discovery).
The sensational blind bop pianist from Britain has a trio on the first two discs; the last record, more recent, features his present quintet, with Margie Hyams' vibes.

Beauty is my business—

SAYS
LEONA FREDERICKS,
ALLURING COVER GIRL:

AND SWEETHEART BEAUTY CARE MAKES MY SKIN LOOK SPRINGTIME FRESH AND YOUNG! IT FEELS SOFTER AND SMOOTHER, TOO!

• "It's true that my face is my fortune! So I can't afford to take chances. I put aside casual skin care and decided to use only SweetHeart Soap for daily complexion care. In just one week my skin felt far softer and smoother. It looked radiantly young and fresh as spring flowers."



Take a tip from pretty Leona! Change to SweetHeart Beauty Care. Each night and morning, massage your face with SweetHeart lather. Rinse with warm—then cold water. In seven days see the difference!

For the gentle Floating Lift of SweetHeart's soft, billowing lather is a remarkable beauty action. Countless bubbles bathe the outer pore openings. Lift off—float away—dirt and rough skin flakes. In one week your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

• Posing in a sun suit and a SweetHeart complexion all over, Karen is already a model at 7 months. Her mother, a smart New York housewife, has always bathed her with pure, mild, fragrant SweetHeart Soap.

For baby's bath—for your family's tubs and showers—you can now also get the new, large bath size SweetHeart Soap.

SWEETHEART
The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

Now! There's Something Thrillingly New! in Palmolive's Famous "Beauty Lather"

New Fragrance!
New Charm!
New Allure!

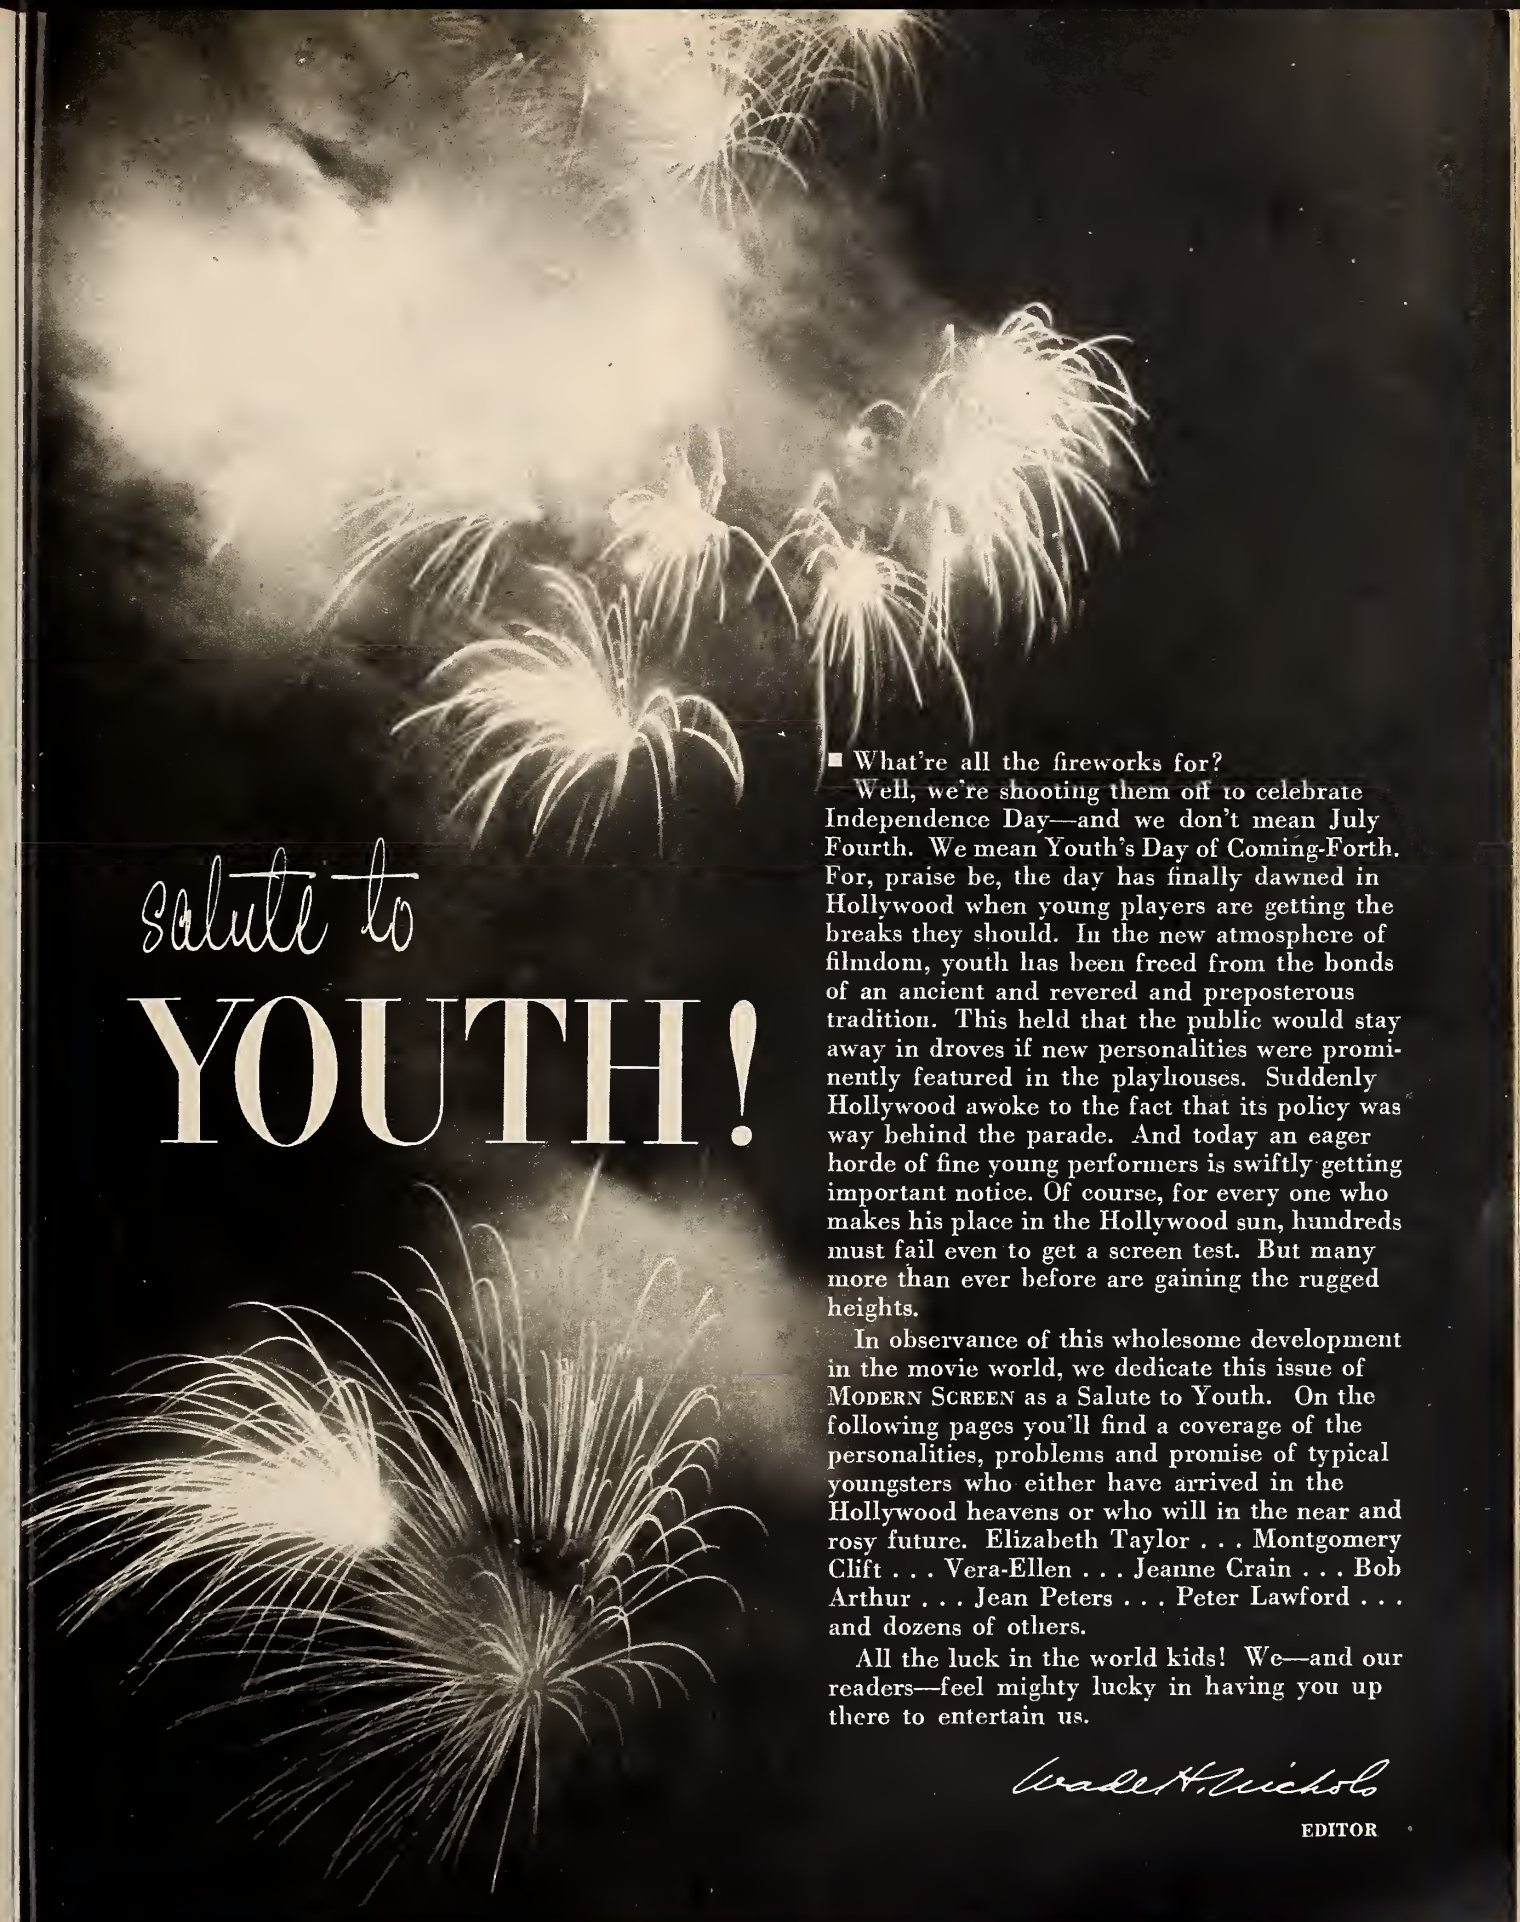
And Doctors Prove Palmolive Can Bring You A Lovelier Complexion— Regardless of Age, Skin Type, or Previous Beauty Care!

Millions of women will prefer this "Beauty Lather" Palmolive over all other leading toilet soaps . . . the minute they try it!

And small wonder! For Palmolive's famous "Beauty Lather" has a new, clean, flower-fresh fragrance for new allure, new charm.

And using Palmolive Soap, the way doctors advised, is so effective that all types of skin —young, older, oily—respond to it quickly.

Dull, drab skin appears fresher and brighter . . . coarse-looking skin finer. Even tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads—disappear or improve.



So do as Doctors advised. Stop improper cleansing! Instead, wash your face with Palmolive Soap three times each day, massaging Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather" onto your skin, for sixty seconds each time, to get its full beautifying effect. Then rinse! That's all

But 36 doctors—leading skin specialists—advised this way for 1285 women, and proved Palmolive can bring lovelier complexions to 2 out of 3 in just 14 days. Get Palmolive Soap and start today!

Get Bath Size Palmolive, too!

Use it regularly in tub or shower. It's big! Long-lasting! Economical! Gives you Palmolive's proved complexion care all over!

salute to YOUTH!

■ What're all the fireworks for?

Well, we're shooting them off to celebrate Independence Day—and we don't mean July Fourth. We mean Youth's Day of Coming-Forth. For, praise be, the day has finally dawned in Hollywood when young players are getting the breaks they should. In the new atmosphere of filmdom, youth has been freed from the bonds of an ancient and revered and preposterous tradition. This held that the public would stay away in droves if new personalities were prominently featured in the playhouses. Suddenly Hollywood awoke to the fact that its policy was way behind the parade. And today an eager horde of fine young performers is swiftly getting important notice. Of course, for every one who makes his place in the Hollywood sun, hundreds must fail even to get a screen test. But many more than ever before are gaining the rugged heights.

In observance of this wholesome development in the movie world, we dedicate this issue of MODERN SCREEN as a Salute to Youth. On the following pages you'll find a coverage of the personalities, problems and promise of typical youngsters who either have arrived in the Hollywood heavens or who will in the near and rosy future. Elizabeth Taylor . . . Montgomery Clift . . . Vera-Ellen . . . Jeanne Crain . . . Bob Arthur . . . Jean Peters . . . Peter Lawford . . . and dozens of others.

All the luck in the world kids! We—and our readers—feel mighty lucky in having you up there to entertain us.

Wallace Nichols

EDITOR

The next 34 pages tell the dramatic story of Hollywood youth today.

MEET THE '49ERS

by Louis Pollock

DORIS DAY was a solid juke-box favarite before she finally signed up with Warners—ta became a musical film stor almast overnight.

JANE GREER, whase facial mability resulted from exercises ta cure paralysis, got her contract after appearing an a magozine caver.

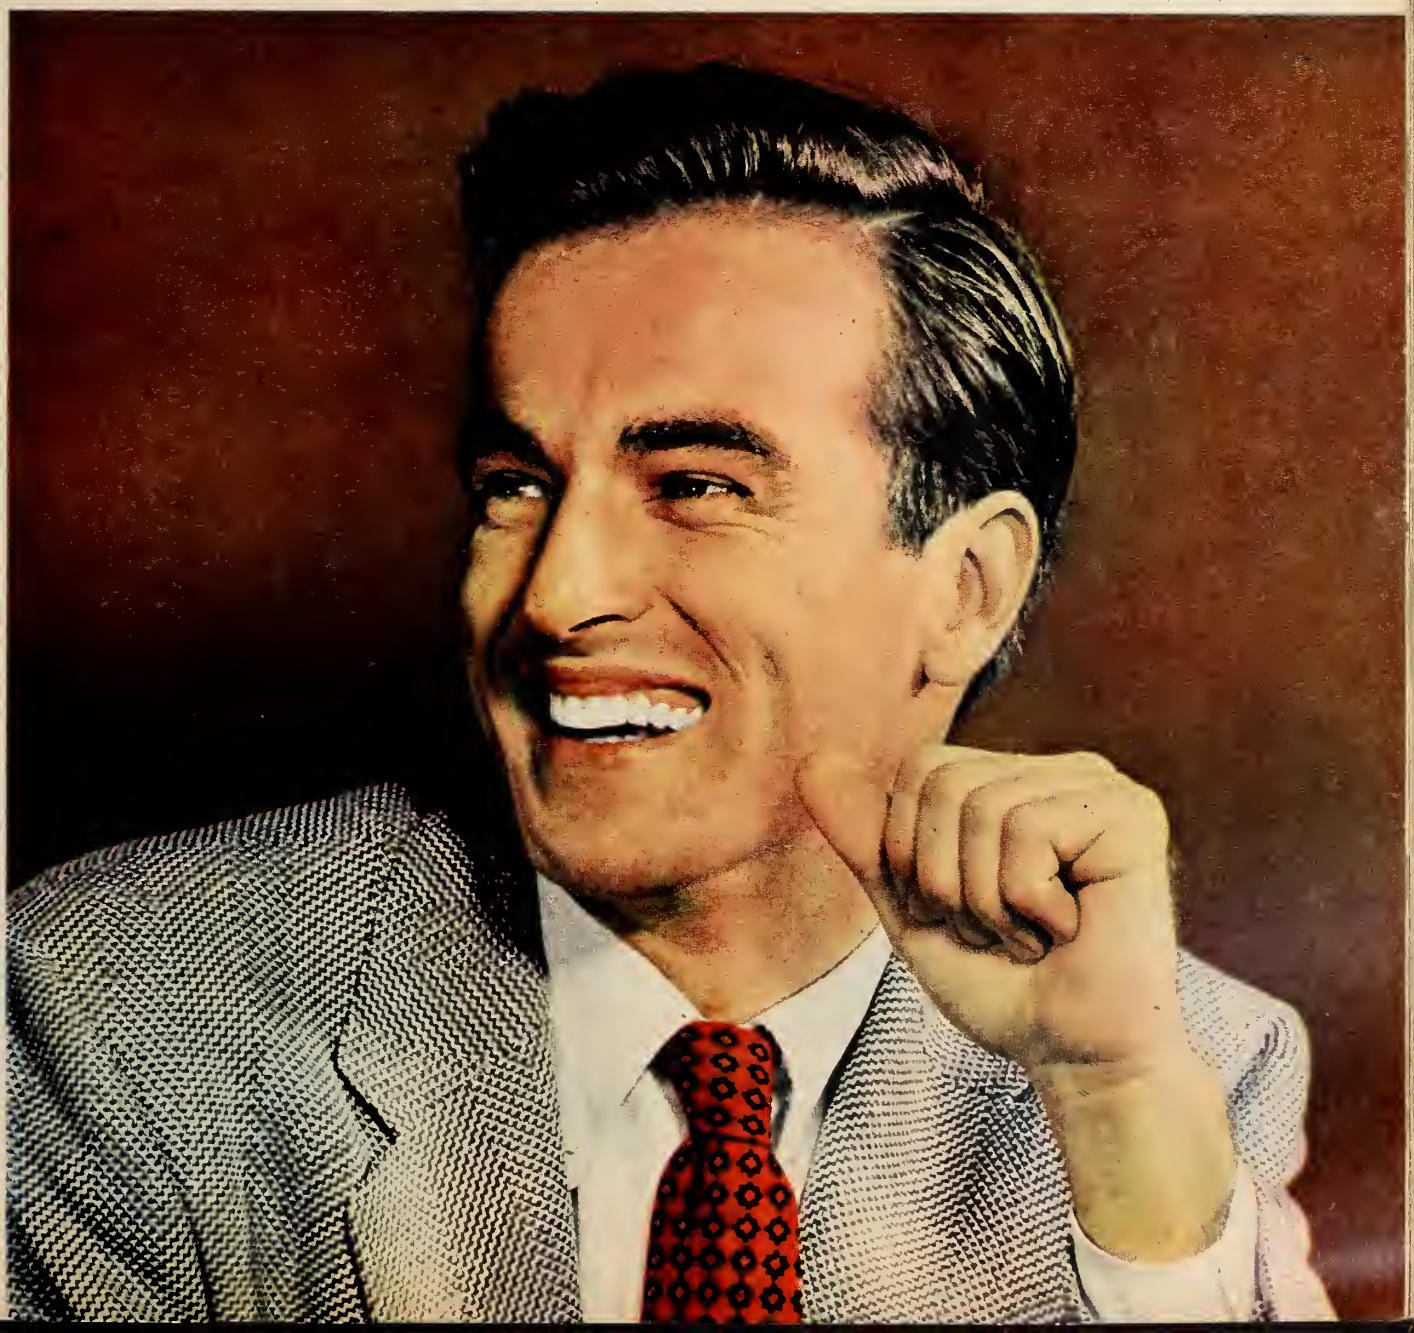
ARLENE DAHL, like Jane Greer, gets storlet treatment by being photographed against a background emphosizing her lush beauty.

These bright young stars are finding there's gold in them thar skills.

■ One afternoon a few weeks ago, a slim, blonde girl and a portly, grey-haired man chanced to meet at the entrance of the commissary at the MGM studios. The girl smiled but the man did not. Instead, he seemed to be studying her. Then he said something that stopped her dead in her tracks. Her faced flushed and her eyes filled with tears.

The man was Louis B. Mayer. What he said was, "Arlene, you've made it."

Arlene Dahl doesn't remember how she got to her table, or that she sat there, alone, her eyes unashamedly wet. She only remembers that that was how she found out she was entering stardom.



She'd been notified—and, obviously, very officially notified.

Hollywood is pretty sure that, besides the 24-year-old Arlene, 16 young men and women and one child will be notified in 1949 that they've achieved solid cinematic importance.

Elsewhere in this issue of MODERN SCREEN, you'll find feature stories on five of these '49ers—Lois Butler, Wanda Hendrix, Janet Leigh, Jean Peters and Robert Arthur. The others, whose backgrounds and possibilities we propose to examine briefly here, are Betsy Drake, Doris Day, Joanne Dru, Joan Evans, Jane Greer, Pat Neal, Scott Brady, Montgomery Clift, Gordon MacRae, Kirk Douglas, Ricardo Montalban and eight-year-old Gigi Perreau.

While each member of this glittering group is plainly an

MONTGOMERY CLIFT, after making two hit movies, became a star important enough to write his own ticket at any major studio

MEET THE '49ERS

GIGI PERREAU is the youngest of the group of talented '49ers. She first appeared in Madame Curie and now, at the age of eight, is a veteran of 18 movies, including Enchantment and Family Honeymoon. She writes and distributes her own little "newspaper."

This Year's Crop of Stars Is Young and Versatile individual personality, all have four things in common: Youth, ambition, good looks and magnetism. And then there's a fifth thing they share—something that, in past years, seems to have been considered scarcely essential in Hollywood if the performer were blessed with those other four attributes. The fifth element is hard, reliable, professional competence. In brief, these kids can act.

The brightest new name in pictures today is that of a 28-year-old, dark-haired gentleman who, at this writing, is living in Manhattan in a tiny, sixth floor, walk-up apartment, busily reading—and rejecting—proffered scripts. Since he is reported to own only one business suit, he most likely will be wearing slacks and a sports jacket. No studio head has ever said to this young man with the brilliant technique, "You've made it." The reason is that he's not interested in studios—only in good roles. Here's what he said to the last production topper who practically offered him a half-interest in Los Angeles if he would sign a contract:

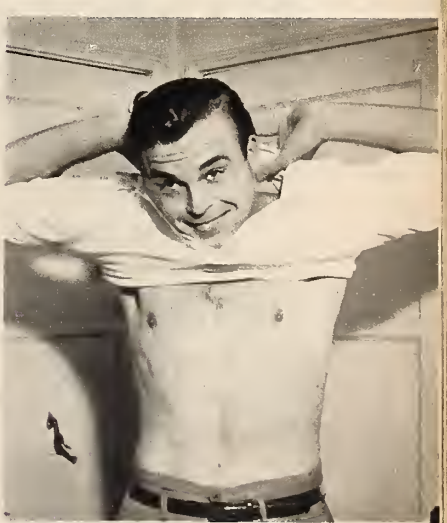
"Sorry—I can think only in terms of story and part. I couldn't do justice to a part if I didn't feel it, and if I were on steady salary I'd be obligated to take it anyway."

The name he refused to put down on the dotted line was Montgomery Clift, of course. It happened after he'd made Red River and The Search, and had accepted a co-starring role with Olivia De Havilland in The Heiress. After making that statement, he drove his second-hand 1940 Chrysler to his one-room apartment with a pull-down bed. (There he started in again to try to finish Norman Mailer's novel, "The Naked and the Dead," before he was due back on the Paramount set for rehearsals.)

Next to acting, says Monty, his greatest love is living a normal life. That, to him, does not include blooming out in an Adolphe Menjou wardrobe, nor buying a Bel Air manor-house with water reservoir attached to swim in, although he could easily afford to do so. (Continued on page 81)

BETSY DRAKE, the Cary Grant discovery, had training in the theater to equip her for the top roles in which she's begun her film career.

RICARDO MONTALBAN came to Hollywood as a dancer but is eager to turn his talents to dramatic roles.



JOANNE DRU came out of housewifely retirement to appear in Red River. Public responded so well, she's starring in All the King's Men.

GORDON MACRAE, already a radio singing star seems certain of even greater success as a movie luminary.

JOAN EVANS had had no dramatic experience when discovered by producer Sam Goldwyn and signed to a role in Roseanna McCoy.

SCOTT BRADY, Lawrence Tierney's brother, was a champion amateur boxer before Hollywood welcomed him.

Do girls go wrong in Hollywood? Listen to Jean Peters' mother . . .

She never left home

by Mary E. Peters

As told to Robert Peer

Back in 1945, Jean Peters was 19 and a junior at Ohio State University when a friend entered Jean's picture in the Miss Ohio State contest. Jean won, and received as a prize a trip to Hollywood and a 20th Century-Fox screen test. In this frank story, her mother tells how her home-town friends and neighbors were convinced no good would come to Jean in "wild" Hollywood—and how false this notion turned out to be—THE EDITORS.

■ I didn't cry that cold morning in January 1946 when my daughter Jean got into the car and we started to pull out of the wide farm yard, heading for the railroad station. I had promised myself I wouldn't shed any tears when I watched her go away from East Canton, away from home to start a career of her own in far-off Hollywood.

I remember how slowly I walked back into the house afterward, put on my apron, and busied myself with the breakfast dishes. "Everything's going to work out all right," I tried to reassure myself. "You don't have to worry. You know your daughter Jean. . . ."

But the shocked expressions of so many of my friends and neighbors, when they'd first heard about Jean's Hollywood contract, kept creeping into my mind. Whenever I'd pick up the telephone receiver—we still have a 12-party line on our farm—I could hear people expressing their opinion that it would be just a matter of time, a very short time, until I'd be sorry I had let my Jean go out to that legendary place.

East Canton, Ohio, is a small town. And its distance from Hollywood can be measured in more than just miles. Really, they're two different worlds. But all East Canton now suddenly became Hollywood-conscious. Gossip about neighbors and neighborly affairs was suddenly supplanted by the latest Hollywood gossip.

According to popular conception, my Jean would have little choice but to get involved shortly after her arrival in the film capital in some sort of love triangle, or wild party, or some other unfortunate happening that would make sensational headlines. Yet my belief in my daughter and her (Continued on page 100)

At 14, Jean Peters was an imaginative, self-reliant youngster who'd already decided on a career—she'd become a doctor.

Jean's low-cut blouse in Captain From Castile shocked some of her hometown neighbors. They felt she must have changed.

On a visit to Hollywood, Jean's mother found her daughter had remained the wholesome, unaffected girl she had always been.

there's no place like HOLLYWOOD

Young players find Hollywood life strange.

■ While Janet Leigh was attending the College of the Pacific in Stockton, California, a close friend and sorority sister was Marge Hiers. Janet, as everybody knows, left the school in her second year for the more broadly educational field of MGM stardom. Marge stayed on and will be graduated this June.

Thus it was that, while Janet was studying hard in the new, strange wonderland of Hollywood to master two accents at once (she's been working in two films at the same time, in one as a Russian ballet dancer, in the other as an English socialite), Marge was wrinkling her pretty brows over mid-term exams. While Janet had fun with her screen sisters on the set of Little Women, Marge and her sorority sisters at the Alpha Theta Tau house merrily stuck a classmate under a shower to stop her giggling during a pledge party. Janet wrote Marge that she'd had a wonderful time in a Santa Claus outfit at the Press Photographers' ball—"which you might call Hollywood's answer to the COP Mardi Gras ball." Marge wrote back to report she was stumped about what she'd wear to that school shindig. Janet, at 22 working in her seventh movie in two years, was still amazed about it all. "It's been said before—but there's simply no place like Hollywood. At least, there's no place I can think of where such miracles can happen overnight!" Marge was still undecided about what she'd do after graduation. Maybe she'd teach . . . maybe she'd marry. "I'm too busy to think about it much."

On these pages, MODERN SCREEN presents a photographic comparison of the activities of the two friends.

The huge sound stages at MGM still fill Janet Leigh with awe when she comes on the lot each morning. Yet everyone she meets is friendly and likes to chat.

anet Leigh's activities contrast sharply with those of a college chum.

Lately, Janet (left) has been posing, in clothes based on the costumes of Little Women, for fashion photographs taken by MGM's famous Clarence Bull. Had she remained at the College of the Pacific, she might have worked with her sorority sister, Marge Hiers, and Bob McMahon (above) when they organized the winter formal and the spring Mardi Gras, two of the biggest annual events on the campus.

Acting in her seventh picture in two years, Janet has a heavy load. For the past few weeks, she's been studying ballet every morning for her role as a Russian dancer in The Red Danube. The exercises, she says, get steadily harder. Meanwhile, at college, Marge is happy over the fact that she went to summer school and thus has less cramming to do for mid-term exams than her friends.

Janet and Marge both enjoy themselves in widely different situations.

Janet pays a noontime visit to Greg Peck in his dressing room on the set of Great Sinner. "He's even nicer than you've heard," she wrote to Marge. Later in the afternoon, Janet reported for costume fittings and attended a special rehearsal class with other young studio players. During her free time at college, Marge (left, above) is often found chatting and sipping cokes with one of her friends in a cozy booth at the Student Union Building.

Friday night means dating for Janet and Marge, who can sleep late the next day. Janet and her escort, Arthur Lowe, Jr. (left), dine in the Beverly Wilshire's Mayfair Room to the strains of a rhumba orchestra. Bob Delaney, the head waiter, stops by their ringside table to make sure they're enjoying the filet mignon. For Marge, Friday night often brings a seat at the College's basketball game. She's usually squired by Mike Monnick, a student.

Bob Arthur once sported a mustache to add years to his face. The beard he raised for Yellow Sky helped him into older roles.

Baby Face

YOUTH, BOB ARTHUR FOUND, CAN BE ITS OWN HANDICAP. • By CARL SCHROEDER

■ Robert Arthur was disgusted. His best girl had just stood him up for the second time in favor of that tall basketball player, a muscle-man with a leathery face like Gary Cooper's.

He slammed the receiver down on its hook, slid out of the phone booth in the Aberdeen, Washington, drugstore and lounged over to the tobacco counter.

"Gimme a package of cigarettes." Bob tossed down a quarter.

"Give you a package of cigarettes?" The clerk with the lean, sardonic face and voice to match grinned in derision. "I'll tell you what I'll do, sonny. You come back in about five years and I'll sell you a whole carton. How'd you like that?"

This was murder. It happened all the time. Though Bob Arthur—or, as he was named then, Bob Arthaud—was old (Continued on page 93)

Bob, bearded for Yellow Sky role.

Can young actors rise in Hollywood by dumb luck? Ask Madison's agent—who knows her Guy. by Helen Ainsworth

Not by breaks alone...

Guy Modison ond ogent Helen Ainsworth hove frequent tolks obout his coreer problems. For most young octors, experienced odvice is essentiol.

Helen Ainsworth first sow Guy on the cover of o novol troining stotion mogozine ond brought him to the ottontion of Selznick's Henry Willson.

■ I dunno, maybe my client, Guy Madison, is a hard one to figure. People are always coming up to me and demanding the real low-down on him. I look at them in some amazement.

"Why," I begin, he's a great big wonderful American boy who—"

But they never let me finish. "We've heard all that stuff," they interrupt impatiently. "That's the outside story. But you're his agent. You found him. You're really close to him. So give with the straight goods. Of course we know the poor boy is absolutely naïve and hasn't the slightest idea what's happening to him."

This is typical of the sort of problem Guy Madison faces. He looks naïve. Sometimes his actions seem naïve. But I'm more than just a wee bit tired of that line. Guy isn't an up-country galoot lost in the fast company of Hollywood. Take it from his agent and oldest Hollywood friend, he's actually a darned bright lad!

I'll admit to Guy's critics that he's absent-minded. Not long ago, for example, he had to go to Dallas for the opening of Texas, Brooklyn and Heaven.

After racing for the train, he discovered he'd left his wallet, with all his identification papers and money, at home.

Was he fazed? Was he troubled? Did this keep him from grabbing that train to Dallas? Not Guy.

He simply called my office—I'd preceded him to Texas for the opening—and my secretary told him to go ahead and get on the train. She'd call Edward Golden, the producer of the picture, who'd wire the money to Guy. (It's an agent's job to make arrangements of this sort.)

So Guy boarded the train without money or papers. At the first stop, Guy strolled to the telegraph booth to pick up the money which was supposed to be wired. But it hadn't come. The lad was not so much miffed as hungry. He hadn't eaten since he'd boarded the train.

So, money or no money, he decided to go into the diner and get himself some victuals. He had a pleasant meal. And when the check—something like two-bucks-fifty—was delivered—

"Thanks so much," Guy said, returning it to the waiter. "I'll take care of this later." (Continued on page 73)

Glamor is the final reward, but for some newcomers loneliness begins it all . . . by Vera Ellen

The other girls in the stage revival of A Connecticut Yankee gathered round to bid me farewell. The Technicolored lightning had struck—I'd just signed a movie contract with Sam Goldwyn.

"Hollywood—where every convertible comes equipped with boy!" That, with variations, was what Imogene kept saying.

"Coming up! Another pair of bare shoulders for Ciro's—with stars in her eyes and a great, big, live star to hold her hand!" That was Mimi talking.

"Don't forget to write how it feels to stall off Van Johnson so you can go out with Ty Power, and stall Ty the next night so you can go out with Cary Grant!" That from Lydia.

"Can you forget you know how to swim, Vera? Or aren't you going to let those hunks of men at the big beach and swimming pool parties teach you all over again?" This from Roberta—wistfully . . .

So, that night four years ago, we all kissed and cried and I ran for my train. The girls who'd painted such a gay prospect knew I was married to Bob Hightower—but they knew, too, that the marriage had hit the rocks and that he and I were separated. As they blithely interpreted the prevailing Hollywood code, it would be quite all right for a divorce-bound gal to take full advantage of movieland's attractions and go stepping—and they figured I would.

Well, I hadn't given it much thought, myself, but now it was time to decide. And when I got off the Chief at Pasadena, I'd made up my mind—not too willingly. Whatever the practice in Hollywood, in my family (Lutherans, and strict Cincinnati Lutherans at that) a married woman was a married woman no matter what the technicalities might be. So, I'd decided, I'd behave like one.

This was my high resolve when I reported into the studio the first morning—and I was determined that nothing should break it. (Continued on page 78)

Dancing at Ciro's with Rocky Hudson, a Selznick discovery. Vera-Ellen catches up on some of the stardust she missed as a newcomer to Hollywood.

Vera and her dad, Martin Rowe. Both parents came West with her—they still live happily together in a modest house.

MY LONELY YEARS

All work and no play makes jack—but young players need fun, too!

HAPPY HUNTING

by Viola Moore

Scavenger hunters chaase teams at Mona Freeman's.

At Earl Carrall's, Bill Williams diverts charines while teammates A. C. Lyles, Marilyn Maxwell and Barbara Hale swipe plumes.

■ Mona Freeman says she doesn't remember just who thought up the great idea. It was either her husband, Pat Nerney, or her best friend, Diana Lynn. Anyway, they were having dinner at Lucey's one night and brooding over ideas for their next party, when somebody got brilliant and suggested a scavenger hunt. The other three agreed it was a fine notion, and before they'd finished their coffee, they had drawn up a guest list and decided on an evening the following week.

Just a simple scavenger hunt. Just a few people. Sounded like fun. But that particular party turned out to be a major upheaval in Hollywood, with surprised citizens from Beverly Hills to San Fernando doing double-takes as they observed some of Hollywood's most promising talent fiercely intent on fey doings. Here's what went on:

When Terry Moore and Jerome Courtland climbed the stone steps to Mona's apartment on the appointed night, they found the rest of the gang already in a huddle on the living-room floor, studying the list of "props" to be brought in before the stroke of midnight.

It was, to say the least, a brightly varied list: "One of Hedda Hopper's hats. A trout from the Sportsman's Lodge trout stream. A feather from an Earl Carroll Girl's costume. A doghouse. Raindrops from the rain-on-the-roof at the Seven Seas night club. A movie star's portrait from the Brown Derby. A beach concession prize (must be won). A turkey egg autographed by three orchestra leaders. A live lobster. A potted palm. A hobby horse. A live kid—a baby goat, that is! A plaster animal from someone's lawn."

Now, by drawing matches, they chose three teams of four scavengers. Terry and Jerome found themselves teamed with Mary Hatcher and Tony Curtis; Marilyn Maxwell and A. C. Lyles with Barbara and Bill Williams; Mona and Pat Nerney with Diana Lynn and her husband John Lindsay.

Then Pat dramatically gave the signal to be off—and everyone dashed downstairs to the cars. They all had one idea in mind. To get out to Oleson's egg ranch in Universal City where turkey eggs are sold.

Equipped with their eggs, the three teams headed in different directions, intent on scavenging up orchestra leaders to sign them—all, that is, except the bright little redhead on Team 3. "Listen," said Mary Hatcher solemnly. "Let me take the egg home and boil it first. That way we'll be sure not to get it broken when it's signed. It won't take more than a few minutes—and there's nothing worse than a drippy egg." So while Mary and Tony Curtis sped off to boil the egg, Terry and Jerome headed for Hedda Hopper's house to get one of her bonnets—having agreed they'd all meet afterward at the Seven Seas night club on Hollywood Boulevard and catch some raindrops from the artificial hurricane which brews up nightly on that palm-thatched roof.

Meanwhile, Team 2, headed by Marilyn Maxwell, was already buzzing back to town, egg in hand. They decided that next on the agenda would be borrowing a portrait off the wall of the Brown Derby. So while Bill and Barbara Williams engaged headwaiter Bill Scavenger hunt list included a Hedda Hopper hat. Hedda (above) having obligingly dragged all her miracles out, John Lindsay, Diana Lynn, Pat Nerney and Mona Freeman look over the assortment.

Mary Hatcher dangles a trout; teammate Tony Curtis carries a stone duck, Terry Moore and Jerry Courtland wrestle with a doghouse. Below: The Lindsays and Nerneys clutch their varied loot.

Scavenger hunting in the dark isn't made easier if your object is a black kid. The Williams' are catching one only because he sticks close to his white mother.

Mary Hatcher and Tony Curtis have a moist time getting raindrops at the Seven Seas restaurant, where there are artificial rainstorms on the roof every night.

Chelios in talk over a menu, Marilyn and A. C. sneaked the caricature off the wall. Then Barbara spotted Phil Harris and his writers at a table, digging into their roast beef. She hurried over with her turkey egg and asked him to autograph it.

"Do what?" asked Phil.

"Please—I'm in an awful hurry." Barbara begged. "I've just got to have your signature. And please don't press down too hard. It hasn't been boiled, and it might break."

"Look," said Phil. "What do you want my name on an egg for? Do you feel all right?"

"He's stalling," said one of Mr. Harris' literary men. "Mr. Harris never learned to write."

Barbara sighed patiently. "Mr. Harris, it's for a scavenger hunt."

Marilyn and A. C. and Bill were waving impatiently. They had the picture and they wanted to be off. Phil Harris's pen poised. He signed the egg. He marred it only a little bit—made just one small hole on its side. Barbara wrapped it gently in her handkerchief, gave effusive thanks, and fled from the restaurant. As they left, a be-diamonded dowager, peering over the flames of her crêpes suzette, said in ringing tones. "Well, I never! What happened?" Nobody answered her. After all, this was Hollywood—anything could happen here.

Next stop for team 2 was the Palladium, where Dick Jurgens was leading his orchestra. Marilyn took the by-now dripping egg from Barbara and she and A. C. Lyles danced over to the bandstand to get Dick's signature.That was easy. Dick and Marilyn were old friends, and he signed the egg without batting an eye.

Then disaster struck. When they got out to the sidewalk again, Marilyn sneezed. The egg flew out of her handkerchief and splattered on the sidewalk.

There it lay in all its juicy splendor. The only egg they had. Should they go back to Oleson's and try to get another? There wasn't time.

Then A. C. rose to the occasion. "Don't worry, kids. We'll get something better than the egg. Let's see—what's on the list that's hard to get." His eyes lighted up. "Here—a feather from an Earl Carroll girl's costume! Let's do that. They won't be able to spare many feathers, and if we get there first, no one else'll have a chance. Now, listen closely —here's how we'll map out our (Continued on page 96)

HAPPY HUNTING

Bill and Barbara Williams engage Brawn Derby-headwaiter Bill Chelias in earnest canversation, while behind his back scavenger hunters Marilyn Maxwell and A. C. Lyles barraw an autographed picture of Clark Gable.

The turkey egg that bandleader Dick Jurgens is autagraphing far Marilyn and A. C. at the Palladium came to a sad end an the sidewalk. (Anather team wisely bailed its egg befare starting.)

Back at Mana's, tired scavenger hunters campare nates. They sent the black kid hame after the team that caught him was chasen winner.

PETER AND

Young actors need publicity and smart ones put on a good show. Take Peter Lawford—the fox in wolf's clothing by sheilah graham

■ When a strikingly handsome young actor is seen repeatedly in the company of Hollywood's most glamorous women, he can expect to attract attention. He can predict that he'll be photographed as often as the Washington monument. He can know with certainty that his name will appear in Hollywood news columns on almost a daily basis.

When the same young actor changes companions about as often as he changes his tie, he can also be certain he'll be called a wolf. Perhaps the expression won't be quite so blunt; perhaps he'll merely be called a playboy. But the thought will be there, however it's phrased.

Young bachelor Peter Lawford is the sort of guy who, by superficial standards, has earned the "wolf" title. A large auditorium could be filled with beautiful women Peter has dated. Magazine editors, looking through Hollywood news pictures, are sometimes astonished by the frequency with which young Lawford's face appears. (And he's always in the best of glamorous company!)

Is Peter really a wolf?

There are two Peter Lawfords. There's Peter. And there's the wolf. The wolf is Peter's own creation, product of young Mr. Lawford's keen sense of publicity values. Peter the person is an intelligent, skilled self-publicist. Peter the "wolf" is the result of that publicity.

Personally, I think we've all been underestimating Mr. Lawford. In the columns, in magazine interviews we have made him appear immature and irresponsible, a playboy with a heart of gold, and nothing more in his noggin than the desire to have a good time. Brother, the joke is on us! This suave, handsome young Britisher is completely adult and completely practical. Everything seems to happen to him according to plan, and nearly everything he does is calculated to corral publicity and advance his career.

Turning social activity into a tool for publicity is a routine operation practiced by almost all young actors and actresses in Hollywood. Of all such operators who've ever struck moviedom, Peter Lawford, for tireless industry, uncanny judgment and spectacular results, belongs at the head of the class.

Just think a little. Who was the first to date Jane Wyman after her divorce from Ronald Reagan? Mr. Lawford. Who escorted Nora Flynn to her first party after she separated from Errol? Mr. Lawford. (To make a double killing in the columns, Pete and Nora were in the same party with Clark Gable and Iris Bynum.) I don't believe that Pete had more than one date with either girl. He didn't need it. The important thing for a smart boy with a yen for publicity is to be the Fustest with the Mostest public interest.

Remember when the rumors about the June Allyson-Dick Powell marriage were flying from coast to coast? Right away the gossipers linked Mrs. Powell with Lawford the Wolf in a supposedly torrid romance. It wasn't true, of course. Pete merely (accidentally-on-purpose) happened to get himself invited to the party given for June by Mervyn LeRoy. The shindig took place at the photographer-flooded Mocambo and Pete danced with June. When the denials had all subsided, it added up to another hefty chunk of limelight for the imperturbable Pete.

When Gloria de Haven separated from John Payne the time before last, Pete—nor any other man—had nothing to do with the case. But whenever Gloria appeared in New York and Philadelphia's better-known bistros at that time, Pete was sure to be among those present. So, natch, there were rumors —and another publicity haul for Pete.

THE WOLF

Pete who is now 25 years old, gets better-looking —and hence better cast as a "wolf"—as he gets older. "He just can't miss getting to the top," a pert starlet said to me recently. "Has he ever taken you out?" I asked her. "I'm not important enough," she replied briefly—and somewhat bitterly. But I think she was doing Pete an injustice.

Pete's dating isn't, naturally, all done for career-building publicity. I believe, for instance, that he had a couple of dates with a messenger girl at Metro. And recently there have been some rendezvous with one of the faculty at UCLA and I doubt if their course of discussion concerned publicity! Yes, Pete has been known on some few occasions to spend an evening quietly with a girl who couldn't possibly get her picture in the papers—unless he married her, and there's no fear of that. Pete, as of now, doesn't want to marry anyone.

Don't get me or Pete wrong. There's nothing wrong or shameful about a young actor wanting all the publicity he can get. It's a big part of his job. In these days of Hollywood (Continued on page 89)

"Lawford the Wolf" always manages to be seen with glamorous women just at the time when they are most newsworthy.

Some young couples, like Shirley

TIME of their LIVES

When John Agor ond Tom Gallary boosted they could cook, their wives laughed ond soid, "Prove it!" In defense, the boys offered to prepore o dinner—ond did. John tosses salod os Joyce Reynolds looks on.

Restouront owner Bob Dolton shows Shirley, Joyce ond John how to seoson steaks. John ond Tom hadn't reolized the ort involved. Bob served as odviser to the omateur chefs ond held the porty ot his home.

■ Hollywood is a town of night clubs—glamorous, romantic establishments where stars gather to amuse themselves. Obviously, business enters into Hollywood night-clubbing: it's "smart to be seen." But many famous young players vastly prefer sitting across from one another at their own dining room table, or dropping by a friend's home for a casual dinner—as in Anytown, U.S.A. Among them are Shirley and John Agar, who prefer a quiet evening like the one pictured here.

This particular party resulted from a battle of the sexes in the Agar household several nights before. Shirley, John, Joyce and Tom Gallary had settled down for an after-supper corn-popping session. When the conversation turned to food, John made a statement destined for posterity. "I guess anyone can cook if he puts his mind to it," the brave man said. Somehow the girls couldn't stop laughing. With their masculine dignity in danger, Tom and John offered to prove their culinary abilities. The girls immediately took them up on it.

Playing safe, John called pal Bob Dalton, who owns "The Elbow Room," a local eatery where gourmets gather. Bob not only agreed to help, but invited the couples to his home for the test.

Dinner proved a major victory for the boys.

After it was finished, John sat beaming. "Now what do you have to say about our cooking?"

"Darling," Shirley said meekly, "what are you serving for dinner tomorrow night?"

and John Agar, find their excitement in the simple delights of home life.

Above, steaks are brailed after being morinoted in o speciol mixture. For recipe see poge 86.

Bab coaks the meat over o fire of glowing coals while Shirley wotches the seoring process.

With Bob Dolton's aid, Tom ond John praved their skill. Below, Bob serves up the evidence.

"Before I met Audie, I was smug in the conviction that the most magnetic male in the universe couldn't distract me from my work."

THIS LOVE OF OURS

by Wanda Hendrix

second in a series

Of all the choices the young heart makes, the first is happiness.

■ Volumes have been written about happy brides, but practically nothing about sad brides. Someday, as an authority, I'm going to write a book on sad brides. For I was certainly one.

My honeymoon with Audie turned out to be a personal appearance tour through Texas and Oklahoma in connection with openings of Audie's film, Bad Boy. It had to be that way—the schedule had been worked out months ahead. This was quite all right with me, for by now Bad Boy had a special place in my affections and I wanted it to go well.

But literally, the honeymoon was over in two weeks. With more than half the tour still ahead, I had to leave for Hollywood to start work on After Midnight. Kissing Audie goodbye at the airport, I wondered what some of the Hollywood gossips would have imagined if they could have seen the new Mrs. Murphy, slightly weepy, heading home from her honeymoon alone.

For the next three weeks, back in our lovely new apartment by myself, I was probably the world's unhappiest new wife. When I wasn't at the studio, I'd wander mournfully through the place, alternately admiring every beautiful thing that Audie had chosen and feeling utterly desolate because he wasn't home.

Sometimes, the fact that Audie and I had actually been married would seem like a dream. . . .

It had been characteristic of Audie that he'd gone about Operation Love with the same directness that helped win him the distinction of being America's most-decorated hero of World War II. He simply explained to his studio (he had come to Hollywood to make screen tests) that he'd seen a girl's picture on a magazine cover and that he had to meet her. Would they please find her for him?

Taking Audie's cue for directness, the studio representative, undoubtedly on her strangest assignment, phoned me, told me all about Audie, his magnificent war record and his current mission—to meet me. Would Miss Hendrix accept an invitation to a small dinner party the following Thursday evening?

My reactions to the prospect of meeting this hero were as detached as only a 17-year-old's can be—a 17-year-old who had had but one dream since she was 14, the dream of a career. I was smug in the conviction that the most engaging, magnetic male in the universe couldn't distract my attention from my work. Patriotic, that's what I was being, just patriotic and friendly, when I accepted that dinner invitation. How Fate must have giggled when she saw that thought cross my mind.

Driving to the dinner with the young woman who had invited me, I asked a few polite questions. "What's he like?" "What does he look like?"

Her answers were vague, so I found myself drawing my own mental picture, which turned out to be a cross between Victor McLaglen and General Eisenhower. Certainly I was unprepared for the quiet, slender young soldier with a shy grin, nice auburn hair and eyes greener than mine, who opened the door for us as we stood there on the porch of his friend's house. I still couldn't believe that this boy, just about my own age, was the fabulous Audie Murphy. I kept looking over his shoulder for "the hero."

There were six of us at dinner, a nice cosy number for intimate talk and easy congeniality. Audie was very quiet, said little and almost died of embarrassment when his friends insisted on bringing out his medals. He was like a small boy who wishes that the family wouldn't keep bragging about the gold stars on his report card.

Audie took me home that night. Then and there he became a man of distinction in my book, because he escorted me to my door, asked if he might phone some time, and didn't even suggest kissing me goodnight!

After that, I didn't see him again for weeks. He called several times and asked for dates, but I was always busy. Finally he became angry and stopped phoning. "I decided you were just being high-hat," he told me later, "and no actress was going to push me around." But one day, inexplicably, Audie found himself driving out toward my house. I remember looking out the living room window and there he was, coming up the walk. . . .

True to the first wonderful impression of Audie, it was two months before he even tried to kiss me. Incidentally, that was the night I decided that loving a very nice guy and being loved in return was a much sounder basis for happiness than the most glamorous career in the world. That night that Audie put his arms around me, kissed me, and said, "Good night, Skipper." "Skipper" has been Audie's nickname for me ever since.

Any place but in Hollywood, the way to the altar from this point would have been smooth and blissfully marked with happy, small events like bridal showers and perhaps a raise in the prospective bridegroom's pay envelope. But in this city dedicated to make-believe romances, a real-life love story often takes a terrific beating.

First of all, Audie is proud, with the double-barrelled pride of an Irish Texan. As much as we loved each other, we both knew that of the two, (Continued on page 72)

MAKE WAY FOR YOUTH!

As new stars rise, old ones tremble, for

by hedda hopper

In Hollywood you can be young in heart,
But looks are the important part.
For every wrinkle around your neck
You get a cut in your salary check.
—M. F. E.

■I had a letter the other day from a young girl, an ardent movie-goer, who put her finger on something important that's been wrong with Hollywood.

"Dear Hedda," she wrote, "How can I be expected to get hot and bothered over movie heroes who are old enough to be my father? Why do most of the big pictures star graying actors whom I like all right and respect—but who don't thrill me for a minute? Golly, I've grown up knowing Gary Cooper and Clark Gable, Ronald Colman and Walter Pidgeon—and I've also grown up knowing my dad."

She has something there. Hollywood was born, raised and nourished on one thing: Romance—boy meets girl. But when the "boy" is pushing 50 and the "girl" is only a few steps behind, where's the kick and the illusion for the new, the young, the 1949 world? A lot of people I know are crying, "Done with the old—up with the new."

The studios know it—and youth is on the march in Hollywood.

In the face of the growing accent on youth, it's baffling to Baby why certain mature stars, who should be smarter by now, blind their eyes to the talented youngsters on their tails and, in fogs of self-importance, turn temperamental and practically ask the youngsters to take over.

For example, take Ray Milland. Since The Lost Weekend, he's fussed and fretted with Paramount over every picture job. He even went on suspension when he balked at doing (Continued on page 98)

John Lund, rising fast in films such as Night Has A Thousand Eyes (above), is young, eager, cooperative. Ray Milland has been balking at recent assignments. When Ray turned down Bride of Vengeance, he was replaced by Lund, who may soon be tops at Paramount.

Jeanne Crain (right) has replaced Gene Tierney as ace actress at 20th-Fox. Gene, Darryl Zanuck's favorite young star for years, temporarily left the screen. Now Jeanne, solidly established by a series of hits, will star in Zanuck's 1949 prestige picture, Pinky.

this is the rule of Hollywood — where careers can go out like neon signs.

Deborah Kerr (above with author Hedda Hopper) was brought from England by MGM when studio queen Greer Garson began telling execs what she would and wouldn't do. Deborah's presence is a potent factor in Greer's current acceptance of the studio's ideas.

John Derek owes his success to Humphrey Bogart. Bogie starred his talented protege in Knock On Any Door and John received the critics' raves. After a few more hard-guy roles, young Derek should provide considerable competition for his discoverer.

Kirk Douglas has made sensational strides in the past year. He recently signed a long-term contract with Warners, where filmland's top tough guys gather. James Cagney, back at that studio for rugged roles, will find Kirk pushing him mighty hard for honors.

Patricia Neal at 23 is sharing prize roles with Jane Wyman on the Warners lot. She recently completed The Fountainhead, opposite Gary Cooper. Barbara Stanwyck, who'd recommended the novel to the studio, was set on playing the 22-year-old heroine.

STAIRWAY TO THE STARS

What's the secret of stardom?

by Jack Wade

Dancer and singer Lois Butler found the magic key in hard work, luck.

■ Lois Butler, star of her first picture at 15, showed utterly no talent until she was a year-and-a-half. Then she swallowed a large Indiana grasshopper and immediately took to dancing and singing.

At three-and-a-half, she gave an exhibition of acrobatic dancing at the Agricultural State Fair in Indianapolis that convinced the judges—a famous pair of fellers named Lum and Abner—that she rated the first prize of $50 over some 350 other contestants.

It should be added that Lois did her dance handicapped by a badly swollen cartilage in one instep. Playmates, it seemed, had dropped either a heavy box or an electric iron on her foot (they were all too young, including Lois, to report accurately). Lois insisted that her mother slit open her dancing shoe to permit wearing it over the swelling—and went on. . . . She still has those shoes. They are exactly three-and-seven-eighths inches in length and a fat man would have a great deal of trouble getting his thumb into one of them. She also still has the scar of the injury. . . .

There are, obviously, many paths that youngsters have followed to break into the movies. However, the one most frequently trodden is the one that led Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Geraldine Brooks, Scotty Beckett, Jimmy Lydon and innumerable others into Hollywood's golden confines. That, of course, is the earnest pursuit of a career in one or more of the many branches of show business starting almost in infancy.

For a recent shining example of how successfully this tried-and-true route may be traveled, let's continue to consider young Miss Lois Butler. Lois was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, on February 13, 1931. Her family had moved out to Los Angeles when, at seven, she made her professional dramatic debut at the Pasadena Playhouse—not as a dancer, not as a singer, but this time as an actress. She was given an important part in The Great American Family and subsequently toured in this and other Playhouse plays, including Shakespeare's The Tempest. When the company played the Curran theatre in San Francisco, a critic took note of her "complete lack of nervousness." It was the first time that Lois had ever heard you were supposed to be nervous on the stage. She immediately started cultivating a splendid shakiness of limb and tremor of voice—until the harassed play director discovered what was going wrong with her scenes and threatened to beat her over the head with her favorite dolly if she didn't cut it out.

At 10, Lois was a "one-man show," doing Hansel and Gretel at school musicals and similar gatherings and playing all the characters herself. She was 11, going on 12, when her voice (Continued on page 87)

Lois Butler in a recent work-out in the Hallywood Bowl—where, at 12, she sang. Her first triumph was when, three-and-a-half, she won a dance contest in shaes shown an apposite page.

Cadet Allen Packer (above) had Lais far his date at West Point one week-end last year. Her current flame is Levere Montgomery af New Orleans, wham she met on a persanal appearance tour.

Many grow up in movies—but few as perfectly as Elizabeth.

PAST PERFECT

by Beverly Ott

■ Elizabeth Taylor was puzzled. The script called for one of its characters to "return, looking like a cinema star."

"How does a cinema star look?" the little girl asked her mother.

Mrs. Taylor explained. Cinema stars were movie stars, the kind she saw at the studio every day.

"But how can a person look like one? Actresses are just people like everybody else."

Elizabeth grew up believing just that, while Mother gave thanks for her child's good sense.

Among the young stars of Hollywood, there are some who, with little or no previous show-world training, came straight from Hometown in their teens to win their spurs overnight. There are other youngsters who also achieved movie marquee billing while teen-agers after becoming youthful veterans of the stage. Then there are those who have grown up on the screen.

The latter are a species apart. They cut their teeth on movie sets, learned the alphabet from a scenario, aged gracefully while millions of fans watched adoringly. Shirley Temple, Margaret O'Brien, Peggy Ann Garner (to name a few) have spent the greater part of their lives on sound stages. With only slight variation, Elizabeth Taylor followed this pattern.

Moviegoers first noticed her as a nine-year-old in Lassie Come Home. They acclaimed her a star in National Velvet, saw her receive her first screen kiss in Cynthia. People could fondly detect in these films and others in between that Elizabeth was growing up. But it wasn't until A Date With Judy that the full impact of her mature beauty struck the fans like sudden lightning. They didn't give her the usual sentimental smile. They were too stunned. The reaction, when it finally came, was "Hubba-Hubba!" MGM execs rubbed their eyes. Their little girl had become a grown-up star. Elizabeth was swiftly graduated from teen-age parts and sent to England to play an adult (Continued on page 61)

These pictures graphically show the growth of Elizabeth Taylor from a beautiful child of three to a lovely girl of 17.

At nine, Elizabeth held her awn with such veterans as Nigel Bruce in Lassie Come Home, her first impartant mavie—and audiences were charmed.

On the strength af Lassie, Elizabeth won a lang-term cantract at MGM—and attended school at the studia with ather young hopefuls such as Dorryl Hickman (right).

Because it made use of her riding skill, 10-year-old Liz was eager ta da National Velvet. It mode her a star.

Grawing gracefully, Elizabeth never suffered fram "the awkward age." Starring in Cynthia at 15, she received her first screen kiss fram Jimmy Lydan.

Animals have always been important in Liz Taylor's life. Besides the long-suffering Twinkle (above), there've been horses, turtles and ducks.

It was suddenly realized that the adolescent Elizabeth was on the verge of extraordinary beauty. Mild "cheesecake" shots were taken now.

Elizabeth's always had a full social life. Here she is at the '47 Press Photographers' Ball with Janet Leigh, Stanley Reams and Tommy Breen.

Today, Elizabeth and Lt. Glenn Davis are a romantic duo. It's reported he'll return from Korea this fall as assistant football coach at West Point.

Having left England as a child, Liz, now a celebrity, returned recently for Conspirator. Here she's with a Tower of London guard.

PAST PERFECT

role—that of Robert Taylor's wife in The Conspirator.

Her private life is more wonderful than ever, too. She's in love. She wants to marry Army football hero Glenn Davis. It's like something in the movies—only better.

Aside from being a star, Elizabeth has grown up in a distinctly normal way. She went to dancing class and took singing lessons—to overcome her shyness. At 13, she spent her weekly 50-cent allowance on comic books. Elizabeth had her first real date when she was 14. A boy named Freddy took her to the Starlight Roof at the Waldorf. They sat at a table for two trying hard for the sophistication they thought the event required. And she had the little battles any 15-year-old has with parental authority. She fought valiantly and sometimes vainly for lipstick, black formals and off-the-shoulder blouses. As actress and adolescent, she often gave her all to that universal line, "But Mother, you don't under*stand*!"

These are some of this movie star's memories—completely lacking Hollywood's magic touch. Of course, there are other recollections—that only a girl brought up in movies would have: Studio hours of make-believe that would enchant any child . . . wardrobe fittings . . . lessons on the set . . . sessions with the still photographer . . . radio shows . .. interviews . . . the ever-present fans. . . . Lots of it may have been trying at times but, like any other screen child, she never really wanted to give up any of it.

THE END

Cherry delight IN SUMMER
Cherry surprise IN WINTER

TEMPTING, isn't it? This gem of a cherry tart owes its luscious gloss, its ruby richness, its just-sweet-enough taste to KARO* Syrup.

KARO blends delightfully with all fruits . . . never masking the full-ripe flavor of cherries, strawberries, peaches and other fruits . . . whether you use them in delicious fresh-fruit tarts or pies at their peak in summer . . . or use them canned or frozen in mid-winter.

Karo Ruby Cherry Tart

½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons corn starch
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup KARO Syrup, Red Label
3 cups fresh, canned or frozen, sour cherries, pitted
¼ teaspoon almond extract

6 baked tart shells (3½ inches)

Combine sugar, corn starch and salt in top of double boiler. Add KARO Syrup and mix well. Add cherries. Place over boiling water and cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens (about 10 minutes). Cover and continue cooking about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Add almond extract. Cool. Pour into baked tart shells. Chill. Just before serving, top with whipped cream sweetened to taste if desired.

*KARO is a registered trade-mark of Corn Products Refining Co., N. Y.

Treat your family to cherries all year round. It's easy to preserve or freeze summer-ripe cherries with Karo Syrup and sugar. Cherries canned and frozen with Karo Syrup have better flavor, firmer texture, brighter color. Get the simple directions for canning and freezing all of summer's lush fruits. Just send for the Karo booklet, "Finer Canned and Frozen Fruits". It will be sent to you absolutely FREE. Send a post card with your name and address to Karo, Dept. K, Box 647, St. Louis, Mo.

There are three kinds of KARO—1. Red Label (crystal white), 2. Blue Label (golden dark), 3. Green Label (maple-y flavor).

Scotty Beckett

John Bromfield

Geraldine Brooks

Vanessa Brown

Rory Calhoun

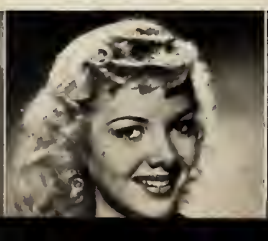
Corinne Calvet

You'd need a crystal ball to name all of tomorrow's stars. But here are

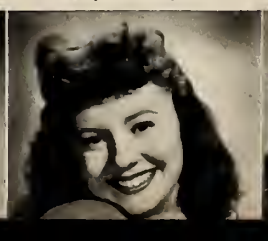
WHO'S NEW

■ Here are 48 players not otherwise mentioned in MODERN SCREEN's "Salute To Youth." But they, together with those already featured in this issue, seem most likely to be the stars of tomorrow. When they came to Hollywood, not long ago, they decided to stay, and nothing could change their minds.

NAME AND STUDIO	BORN	APPEARANCE		SPOUSE	USED TO BE	LATEST PICTURE
BATES, BARBARA—WB	Denver, Col. Aug. 6, 1925	Brown hair Green eyes	5'5" 115 lbs.	Cecil Coan	Model	Happy Times
BECKETT, SCOTTY—20th-Fox	Oakland, Calif. Oct. 4, 1929	Brown hair Brown eyes	6' 165 lbs.		Kid star	A Date With Judy
BROMFIELD, JOHN—Para.	South Bend, Ind. June 11, 1922	Brown hair Hazel eyes	6'1" 190 lbs.	Corinne Calvet	Tuna fisherman	Bitter Victory
BROOKS, GERALDINE—MGM	New York City Oct. 29, 1925	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'2" 98 lbs.		Kid star	Highland Lassie
BROWN, VANESSA—20th-Fox	Vienna, Austria March 24, 1928	Chestnut hair Blue eyes	5'5" 120 lbs.		Quiz kid	The Fan
BUKA, DONALD—U.A.	Cleveland, O. Aug. 17, 1921	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'10" 145 lbs.		Kid star	Vendetta
CALHOUN, RORY—Selz.	Los Angeles, Calif. Aug. 2, 1922	Black hair Blue eyes	6'3" 185 lbs.	Lita Baron	Fireman	Fighting Mike McCall
CALLAHAN, BILL—20th-Fox	New York Aug. 23, 1926	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'11" 160 lbs.		On stage	Chicken Every Sunday
CALVET, CORINNE—Para.	Paris, France April 30, 1921	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'4" 110 lbs.	John Bromfield	Sculptress	Rope of Sand
CAREY, JR., HARRY	Saugus, Calif. May 16, 192(?)	Reddish hair Blue eyes	6' 150 lbs.	Marilyn Fix	Summer stock	Three Godfathers
CHANDLER, JOAN—WB	Butler, Pa. Aug. 24, 1923	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'4½" 115 lbs.	David McKay 1 son, 1 daughter	On stage	Rope
DOWNS, CATHY	Port Jefferson March 3, 1926	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'2" 122 lbs.		Model	Massacre River
EDWARDS, PENNY—WB	New York Aug. 24, 1928	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'6" 120 lbs.		Dancer	Two Guys From Texas
FLEMING, RHONDA—Para.	Los Angeles, Calif. Aug. 10, 1923	Red hair Green eyes	5'6" 118 lbs.		Dancer	Great Lover
FOCH, NINA—Col.	Leyden, Holland April 20, 1924	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'7" 115 lbs.		Student	Hounded
FORD, ROSS—Col.	Sterling, Col. Feb. 24, 1923	Brown hair Blue eyes	6' 160 lbs.		On stage	Sign of the Ram
GRANGER, FARLEY—Gold.	San Jose, Calif. July 1, 1925	Brown hair Brown eyes	6' 165 lbs.		Student	Roseanna McCoy
GRAY, COLEEN—20th-Fox	Staplehurst, Nebr. Oct. 23, 1922	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'3½" 115 lbs.	d. Rodney Amateau	Student	Sand
JAECKEL, RICHARD	New York Oct. 10, 1926	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'8½" 155 lbs.	Toni Jaeckel 1 son	Messenger	City Across The River
JANIS, CONRAD—20th-Fox	New York Feb. 18, 1928	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'10½" 145 lbs.		Student	Beyond Glory
LAWRENCE, BARBARA—20th	Carnegie, Okla. Feb. 24, 1930	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'8" 124 lbs.	d. John Fontaine	Model	Mother Is a Freshman
LONG, DICK—U.I.	Chicago, Ill. Dec. 17, 1927	Brown hair Blue eyes	6' 160 lbs.		Student	Tap Roots



Coleen Gray



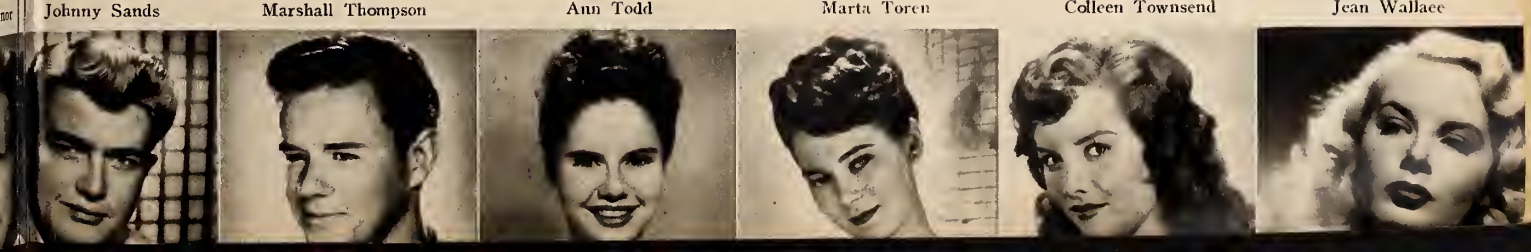
Conrad Janis

Barbara Lawrence

Betty Ann Lynn

Patricia Marshall

Donald O'Connor



Joan Chandler | Cathy Downs | Rhonda Fleming | Nina Foch | Ross Ford | Farley Granger

48 more newcomers whose futures look as bright as their shining dreams . . .

So far they haven't been sorry. In the future, some of these youngsters may pack up and leave; others may start building mansions in Bel Air. It's hard to tell. You can't count the young hopefuls who come to Hollywood every year, and it's useless to try counting the ones who go home. But you can be certain that too many people want to act, and too many casting offices say no. Today, however, the outlook is bright for the young, the talented and the beautiful. If they're willing to pull hard, if they're willing to wait their turn, many of them may someday reach the topmost levels of Hollywood.

NAME AND STUDIO	BORN	APPEARANCE		SPOUSE	USED TO BE	LATEST PICTURE
LYDON, JIMMY	Harrington Park, N. J. May 30, 1923	Brown hair Blue eyes	6' 150 lbs.	d. Patsy Clifford	Child actor	Bad Boy
LYNN, BETTY ANN—20th-Fox	Kansas City, Mo. August 29, 1928	Red hair Blue eyes	5'3" 105 lbs.		B'way chorus	Mother Is a Freshman
MALONE, DOROTHY—WB	Chicago, Ill. Jan. 30, 1925	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'7" 124 lbs.		College student	South of St. Louis
MARSHALL, PAT	Minneapolis, Minn. Jan. 13, 192(?)	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'3½" 107 lbs.	Danny Markowitz	Singer	Good News
McDOWALL, RODDY	London, England Sept. 17, 1928	Brown hair Brown eyes	6' 160 lbs.		Child star	Macbeth
MEADOWS, JAYNE	Wu Chang, China Sept. 27, 1922	Red hair Brown eyes	5'6" 125 lbs.	Milton Krims	Stage actress	Enchantment
MITCHELL, CAMERON	Dallastown, Pa. Nov. 4, 192(?)	Brown hair Brown eyes	6' 173 lbs.	Johanna Mendel 1 son	Baseball player	Command Decision
O'CONNOR, DONALD—U.I.	Chicago, Ill. Aug. 30, 1923	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'8" 135 lbs.	Gwen Carter 1 daughter	Vaudeville	And Baby Makes Three
O'DONNELL, CATHY—Selz.	Oklahoma City, Okla. July 6, 1923	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'4" 110 lbs.	Robert Wyler	Stenographer	They Live By Night
PERRY, SUSAN	Vienna, Mo. Nov. 12, 1925	Brown hair Green eyes	5'5½" 120 lbs.	Mel Torme	Model	Knock On Any Door
ROBERTS, ALLENE	Birmingham, Ala. Sept. 3, 1928	Brown hair Brown eyes	5'1" 95 lbs.		Model	Knock On Any Door
SANDS, JOHNNY—Selz.	Lorenzo, Texas April 29, 1927	Brown hair Blue eyes	6' 180 lbs.	d. Sue Allen	Sheepherder	Massacre River
SARGENT, ANN—U.I.	West Pittston, Pa. Nov. 18, 1923	Brown hair Hazel eyes	5'4½" 110 lbs.		Stage actress	Naked City
STERLING, JAN	New York, N. Y. April 3, 1923	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'2" 110 lbs.	d. Jack Merivale	Drama student	Johnny Belinda
THOMPSON, MARSHALL	Peoria, Ill. Nov. 27, 1926	Blonde hair Blue eyes	6'1" 155 lbs.	Barbara Long	Student	Roseanna McCoy
TODD, ANN	Denver, Colo. Aug. 26, 1932	Brown hair Brown eyes	Growing		Student	Three Daring Daughters
TOREN, MARTA—U.I.	Stockholm, Sweden May 21, 1927	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'7" 115 lbs.		Drama student	Illegal Entry
TORME, MEL—MGM	Chicago, Ill. Sept. 13, 1925	Blonde hair Grey eyes	5'7" 118 lbs.	Susan Perry	Child performer	Words and Music
TOWNSEND, COLLEEN—20th-Fox	Glendale, Calif. Dec. 21, 1928	Brown hair Blue eyes	5'4½" 116 lbs.		Student	Chicken Every Sunday
TURNELL, DEE—MGM	Downes Grove, Ill. Nov. 27, 1930	Blonde hair Green eyes	5'6" 115 lbs.		B'way chorus	Words and Music
WALLACE, JEAN	Chicago, Ill. Oct. 12, 1923	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'5½" 120 lbs.	d. Franchot Tone	Night club dancer	Man On The Eiffel Tower
WELLES, VIRGINIA—Para.	Wausaw, Wis. June 25, 1925	Blonde hair Blue eyes	5'2" 105 lbs.		Student	Dynamite fashion accents crisp!

Johnny Sands | Marshall Thompson | Ann Todd | Marta Toren | Colleen Townsend | Jean Wallace

AGREES DESIGNER

frances sider

Frances Sider interprets the important new "crisp look" with this striking sarong skirt (starched with LINIT!) worn over an elasticized swim suit of the same Ever-fast cotton print.*

The Crisp Look is the smart look for 1949..."Starch with LINIT!" say the leading dress designers ...this superior laundry starch makes a thin mixture that penetrates the fabric, restores its original finish . . . keeps it crisp, fresh, cool-feeling between washings...LINIT is easy to use, safe, perfect.

..adds the "finishing touch" to dresses, blouses, children's clothes, housecoats, men's shirts, curtains, bed and table linens. Directions on every LINIT package. All grocers sell LINIT.

*LINIT is a registered trade-mark of Corn Products Refining Co., N. Y.

young fashions at young prices

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ This is MODERN SCREEN'S Salute to Youth issue, so naturally this month's vacation fashions are aimed especially at you young fans of young stars.

It seems to us that the younger you are, the harder you fall—for cute, gay clothes. Look-at-me clothes. Here-I-come clothes. Clothes that say you're alive and alert and that you love fun. But (and what we've got to do is get rid of that "but")—the younger you are, the harder it is for you to afford all the clothes you want. Naturally, anyone can look a million—on a million. But keep fashionable on a budget? An allowance? A young career girl's pay envelope? Ouch! That takes doing.

So, we're doing it for you. As we hope you know, Modern Screen Fashions have always worked (love that work) to bring you the dreamiest fashions at bite-sized prices. We know you want to knock your audience dead—now, while you're young and still have bubbles in your heart. And we think you can make a definite dent in your public with the clothes in this issue—all of which have very young prices. Start on the opposite page, to see what we mean.

Ava Gardner wears a young playdress

■ Ava, the luscious, whom you're currently drooling over in MGM's "The Great Sinner," wears a sundress that rates prolonged whistles . . . and will do the same for you any weekend at all.

The shirred waist makes yours look tiny, the halter bodice does things for your bosom—and when you turn your back, it isn't there.

It's striped corded cotton chambray, gay as a beach umbrella. White with grey, green or tan stripes. Sizes 10-18.
By Loomtogs. $10.95.
At Oppenheim Collins, New York and Brooklyn. Other stores, page 71.

Bag by Simon Bros.

modern screen fashions

Young cottons go places

■ Take a toast shawl-collared blouse; add a terra-cotta hip-pocket skirt—and you're ready to go anywhere! Sanforized broadcloth with a silky taffeta finish in dreamy mix or match colors. Blouse $2.98. Skirt $3.98. By Art-Mor. Saks-34th, N. Y. Other stores page 71.

■ The winged collar—fashion passion straight from Paris. Bright red flocked lawn scored with white pique—attention getter for any girl's weekend. Red, navy, copen blue. Sizes 10-18. By Claire Tiffany. About $9. Lord & Taylor, N. Y. Other stores, page 71.

Luggage by Samsonite. Straw bag by Simon Brothers

■ Crisp waffle pique with blocks and squares, spiked with jet buttons and patent belt. The high fashion shawl collar slants to a semi-plunge; the skirt has unpressed center pleats. Sizes 10-20. By Sacson. About $8.98. Gimbels, N. Y. Other stores, page 71.

■ Pique dress-plus-jacket—a prize at the price. Cool but covered portrait dress is right for travel, street, dates—jacket gives coverage when wanted. Green, burgundy, brown, black. 10-18. By Tommie Austin. $10.95. Joseph Horne, Pittsburgh. Other stores page 71.

MOTHER, PIN A ROSE ON ME!

Red carnation on navy faille ribbon, complete with "gold" scarf loop. By Flower Modes, $1.98.

White carnations on a chartreuse ascot—to make any sweater sophisticated. By Flower Modes, $2.50.

Violets on a white mesh hatlet—begging to be worn for a summer romance. By Heineman Flowers, $3.98.

Garland of roses on a velvet ribbon, to tie around a portrait neckline. By Glamour Fashions, $10.95.

Green carnation to point a plunge. By Heineman, $1. Plunge blouse in jersey, many colors, by Coral, $1.98.

Cabbage rose on the pocket of a black tulle stole—midnight around your shoulders. By Glamour Fashions, $10.95.

■ Mother, pin a rose on me—or a carnation, a gardenia, a violet! Just as long as it's a beautiful phony flower—fake but fascinating. This summer fashion has a serious crush on pseudo flowers—they're the biggest accessory news since scatter pins. You'll want to wear one at your throat, tuck one in your belt, pin one on your pocket. You can buy single flowers, like the rose stickpin next to our title—glamour for 50c!—or you can pick your flowers already mounted on scarves, hats, stoles. Whatever you do, whatever you wear, wherever you go—wear a fake flower—and be the most fashionable girl in sight!

For where to buy flowers shown please turn to page 71.

Young sophisticate

..and it's a half-size!

■ Satin stripe shantung —with that certain something you young half sizes insist on. Smart rounded shoulders; flip-up collar to pin a rose on; pouch pockets; pearl buttons to hem. Adds up merely to wow. Yellow with grey stripes; powder blue with royal; pink with black; aqua with grey. Sizes 16½-22½. By Rite Fit $7.95. At Stern's, N. Y. The Fair, Chicago. Other stores, page 71.

12-strand necklace by Karu

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

Striped halter neck playdress worn by Ava Gardner in color photo (page 65)
Boston, Mass.—Filene's, Washington St., Surf Shop, 5th fl.
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 485 Fulton St., Gallivant Shop, 2nd fl.
Evanston, Ill.—Lord's, Fountain Square
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 33 W. 34th St., Gallivant Shop, 3rd fl.

Taffeta broadcloth skirt and blouse (page 66)
Chicago, Ill.—Madigan's, 4030 Madison St.
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th, 34th St. & Broadway, Sportswear, 3rd fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Wanamaker's, Market & 13th Sts., Little Sportswear Shop, Main fl.
Springfield, Ohio—Carmen's, 25 S. Limestone St., Sportswear Dept., 1st fl.
Washington, D. C.—Philipsborn Co., 610 11th St., NW, Sportswear, 1st fl.

Dotted flocked lawn dress with pique (page 66)
Baton Rouge, La.—The Dalton Co., 3rd & Florida Sts., Fashion Salon, Main fl.
Columbus, Ohio—F. & R. Lazarus & Co., High & Town Sts., Daytime Dresses, 2nd fl.
Des Moines, Ia.—Younkers, 701 Walnut St., Daytime Dresses, 3rd fl. West
New York, N. Y.—Lord & Taylor, 5th Ave. & 38th St., Budget Dresses, 2nd fl.
St. Louis, Mo.—Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, 10th & Olive Sts., Pin Money Shop, 2nd fl.

'ique dress with blocks and squares (page 67)
Akron, Ohio—Yeager's, Daytime Shop, 2nd fl.
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros., State & Madison Sts., Daytime Dresses, 3rd fl.
New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St. & Ave. of Americas, Daytime Dresses, 2nd fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Gimbels, Market & 9th Sts.
Sacramento, Calif.—Hale Bros., 9th & K Sts., Cotton Shop, 2nd fl.

Pique dress-plus-jacket with straw belt (page 67)
Dallas, Texas—Sanger Bros., Main & Elm Sts., Thrift Dept., 4th fl.
New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St. & Ave. of Americas, Tommie Austin Shop, 3rd fl.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co., Penn Ave., Tommie Austin Shop, 2nd fl.
Washington, D. C.—S. Kann & Sons Co., 8th St. & Penn Ave., Sportswear, 2nd fl.

Rose stickpin (page 68) and cabbage rose on tulle stole (page 69)
Write: Glamour Fashions
12 West 37th St.
New York 18, N. Y.

Red carnation on navy faille ribbon (page 68)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Flowers, Main fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Wanamaker's, Market & 13th Sts., Neckwear, Main fl.

White carnations on chartreuse ascot (page 68)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Flowers, Main fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Wanamaker's, Market & 13th Sts., Neckwear, Main fl.

Violets on white mesh hatlet (page 68)
New York, N. Y.—Wanamaker's, Broadway & 9th St., Main fl.

Garland of roses on velvet ribbon (page 68)
Bridgeport, Conn.—D. M. Read Co., 1050 Broad St., Main fl.

Green carnation to point a plunge (page 69)
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co., Gratiot Ave., 1st fl.
New York, N. Y.—Wanamaker's, Broadway & 9th St., Main fl.

Satin striped half-size dress (page 70)
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair, State & Adams Sts., Dresses, Downstairs
Los Angeles, Calif.—Broadway Dept. Store, Broadway & 4th Sts., Dress Dept., Downstairs
Milwaukee, Wis.—Gimbels, 101 W. Wisconsin Ave., 2nd fl.
New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 West 42nd St., Downstairs
San Antonio, Texas—Joske's, Alamo Plaza

How to Order Modern Screen Fashions

(1) Buy in person from stores listed.
(2) Order by mail from stores listed.
(3) Write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.—for store in your vicinity.

Your face is your fortune...but your figure's fortuna make light of your figure with an airy Lace pantie girdle by FORTUNA*

Lovely lace . . . all but tear-proof in nylon-reinforced-cotton and elastic. Fortuna exclusive . . . contour-fitted crotch of so-soft Elasta-Q cloth, won't ride up, cut, or bind. Detachable garters. Matching girdle. Small, medium, large. Nude, white, ice blue, black.
$5.00

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

* Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Creators of Fortuna girdles, pantie girdles, garter belts, bras
WOLFE & LANG, Inc. 35 West 32 Street, New York 1, N. Y

SAY "Hi" TO Hi-Heel WEDGIES FOR ONLY 2.98

Hi-heel fashion with lo-heel freedom.
White or Black suede finish.
4 to 9, Mediums only in whole and half sizes.

MERLE
JULENE

ORDER BY MAIL

VICKI OF BOSTON
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS.
D-6 A

Please send me_____Prs. Wedgies @ 2.98

STYLE	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
MERLE
JULENE

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State_____
Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐
Send check or money order and we will pay postage. Customer agrees to pay postal charges on C. O. D.'s.

vicki of Boston
Send For FREE 1949 Catalog

Sea Nymph
swim suits by jordan

like a duck takes to water you'll take to this eye-catching, sigh-catching shirred front suit with its gay new cuffed-top bra and the perky half-belt-and-bow-topped trunks.

Sea Nymph has fashioned it for you in a smart new Lastex Faille, in new jewel tones of Jet, Scarab Green, Coral and Topaz. Sizes 32-38. About $8.95 at smart stores. Write and we'll tell you where!

JORDAN MANUFACTURING CORP.
1410 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 53)

his career was the important one if our marriage was to last. Then he was offered the lead in Bad Boy, and we knew that on it, more than on any one factor, hinged our future together. In those months of great happiness and great fear, I would have given up Hollywood gladly at one word from Audie that he would rather settle down at some other job in Timbuctoo or any place. But that wouldn't have been like Murphy. He'd never run away from a fight before. And he was going to lick Hollywood or die trying.

When I finished work on The Sin of Abby Hunt last summer and went to Italy to make Prince of Foxes, Audie gave me my engagement ring. It was all settled. When I returned, we'd have a pretty fair idea of his future. Bad Boy would be finished, and it would be a good yardstick.

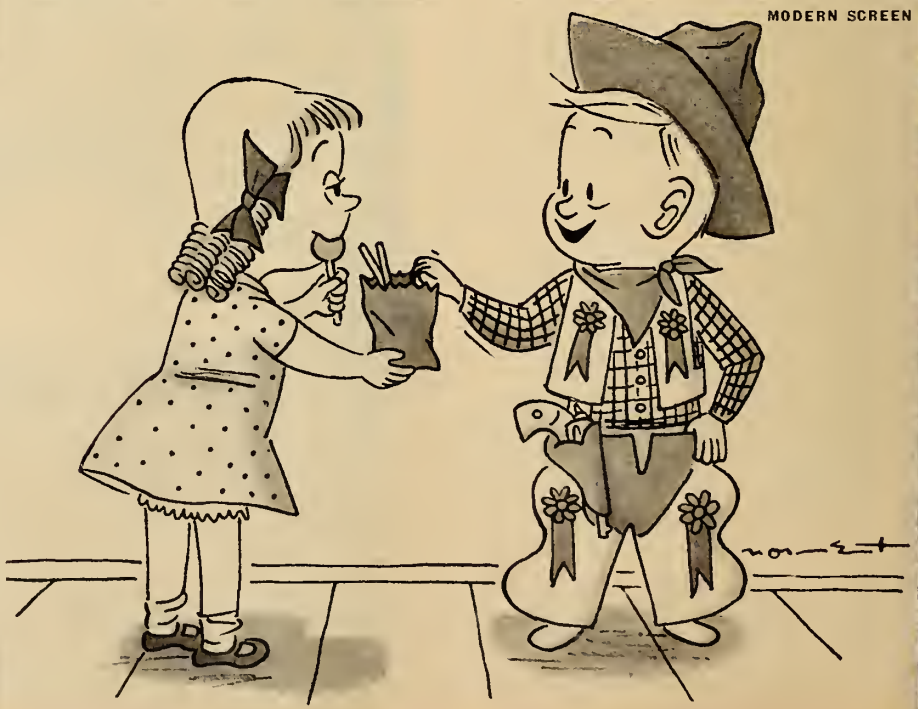
As hard as I worked in Italy on my own role, I prayed even harder for the success of Audie's back in Hollywood. And when the first rushes were reviewed with enthusiasm by his studio bosses, we were in seventh heaven—although, with an ocean and a continent between us, it was a little difficult to celebrate.

I'll never forget the last endless moments of those five lonely months I was away. Fog was so dense as we neared Los Angeles airport that we couldn't land and had to go on to Burbank. When they made the announcement at the Los Angeles field, everyone waiting there for friends or relatives on our plane, started on a mad dash for Burbank, to be there in time. The only one who made it before our plane hit the runway was Murphy!

With the date set, the church decorated and my wedding dress pressed and waiting, I came down with an attack of the "flu" I had picked up in Italy. But I was determined not to postpone the ceremony. On the long-awaited day, I walked down the aisle—a little wobbly, but all brides are shaky and no bride was ever happier.

Then came that brief, combination honeymoon-personal appearance tour—which I had to leave to return to Hollywood after two weeks. . . .

Alone in our beautiful apartment, the only time I wasn't blue was when I was fixing up his dresser, arranging socks and ties and shirts in the new chest in our bedroom, and hanging his suits and jackets in their new closet. I folded and re-folded everything so many times, I nearly wore holes through the material. (And this is one of the things Audie seems to get the biggest kick out of—this wifely fussing. He likes to have his things laid out for him. He's never said so, but if I forget or leave it for him to do, he hints broadly, "Where are my pajamas, honey?" or "What shirt should I wear?")



Then, at last, after a separation of three weeks that seemed an eternity, Audie returned from his tour. Heaven! But we'd barely had time to decide which towel rack was whose when once again we were parted—this time for five weeks while Audie made another tour in the East.

Now, with no more separations in the offing, this is our real honeymoon and our homecoming. We've had so many goodbyes, but now, finally, this is the dream we've dreamed so long. . .

It's certainly not spectacular as Hollywood dreams go. Evenings, we sit by the fire in robes and slippers. It's a make-believe fire with make-believe logs, but it looks real enough to poke and occasionally we do. Audie likes to watch the fights on televison and we both think the wrestling matches are fun, with their fascinatingly horrible character. Sometimes we play records or friends drop in—but more often we just sit and talk and plan.

"Who but the Murphys would start on a honeymoon and housekeeping simultaneously?" I laughed, as I fixed dinner that first night he was home from Texas.

"Well, after all," he pointed out, thoughtfully, as he made a lid-lifting tour of our gleaming new stove, "This one is a very special kind of honeymoon, Mrs. Murphy. It's going to last forever." THE END

"Thanks, Maribelle! If you were a horse I'd kiss you."

NOT BY BREAKS ALONE

(Continued from page 40)

He went back to his compartment. In a few minutes he had some visitors who seemed anxious to collect for the dinner. They said they could not understand how someone occupying a compartment couldn't pay for dinner. "Who are you, anyway?" they asked.

He told them. They nodded their heads, the same expression on their faces as if he'd just told them he was Napoleon. "Guy Madison, the movie actor? And you haven't got three dollars to pay for dinner?"

So Guy tried to explain. If ever there was a less plausible story, the train officials hadn't heard it. So they said, "May we see your driver's license or something to back up your story?"

And when he pulled that old chestnut about having left his license at home, the conductor, the trainman and the others started muttering about deadbeats. "Enjoy yourself, pal," they said. "Our next stop is Albuquerque where you will be met by the Police Division of your fan club. . . . You have a fan club, of course?"

"Oh, yes," Guy said modestly.

At Albuquerque, Guy nonchalantly went to the telegraph station. No money. Then he was greeted by several minions of the law. "Here," the train people said to the station police, almost as one man, "this is the fellow who says he's Guy Madison."

take it easy . . .

"Well, by gosh, he is," said one of the local policemen. "Guess I ought to know. My wife runs his fan club down here."

Yes, Guy is absent-minded; it's one of his problems. Sometimes I have to serve as his memory. He's so relaxed, he takes things so easy, that people get the impression he's just a bewildered country boy. Nonsense! He tells me, "The way I figure it, things always turn out okay in the end—so why get steamed-up in the process?"

There's another Guy Madison story around town that I, as his agent, would like to blast. This one contends that Guy has no mind of his own, that anyone can talk him into doing anything.

Now look, I know this boy. I'll bet the story causes some astonishment to his girl, Gail Russell. We know, Gail and I, that Guy very definitely has a mind of his own. Once he makes up that mind about something, he sticks to it. He won't argue or fight. He just sits there, convinced he's right.

Guy has a determined streak a yard wide—but when he realizes he's been wrong, he'll admit it at once. That's because Guy has no highfalutin' illusions about himself. Certainly, one of the prime problems of young actors is retaining their original hat size in the face of inevitable adulation. And I don't know anybody else who'd have as much justification as Guy in getting a swelled head. But he steers clear of this occupational disease by deliberately and intelligently keeping to a common-sense viewpoint of himself.

When I first saw him, he was on the cover of a naval training station magazine that a friend of mine was editing down in San Diego. The cover showed a blond young giant of a sailor expertly going up a mast. I liked his face and I noticed he had the kind of physique that men push up bar-bells to achieve.

"Who," I asked in a letter I sent to San Diego, special delivery, "is that magnificent thing? If he ever gets up this way on leave, tell him to look me up."

That started a sequence of events which

"Sugar 'n Spice!"

WHITE ELK LEATHER

YOUR CHOICE $3.30

ORDER BY MAIL AND SAVE

You'll want 'em both... and at $3.30 you'll have no quarrel with your allowance in ordering both! Frosting white only, to "sweeten" sport outfits, daytime wardrobes and formal frills. White elk 'n' washable. Sizes 4 to 9 medium width—6 to 9, AA width.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

PORAD'S *Vogue-Craft SHOES Dept. D6
1712 Yale Ave., Seattle 1, Wash.

* Send ____prs. ☐ SUGAR; ____prs. ☐ SPICE at $3.30 pr.

Size ____ Width ____

Name ____

Address ____

City ____ Zone ____ State ____

☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C. O. D.

Send check or money order and we pay postage. When sent C. O. D. customer to pay $3.30 pair plus charges.

*Reg U. S. Pat Off.

They're NEW and they're NEWS!

T-V PANTIES

39¢ and 49¢

FLARE SLIGHTLY HIGHER

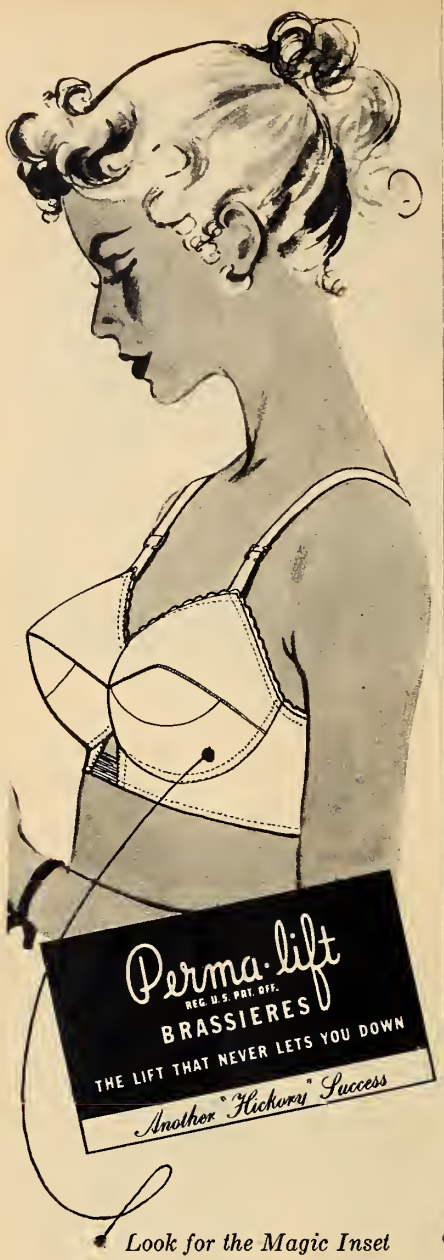
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

. . . for a Touch of Venus

3 popular styles in 2 quick drying Tricot rayon fabrics—and just look at the unbelievably low prices.

Pink, white, blue, black, maize, nile and orchid. Small, Medium and Large.

T-V "Gold Ribbon" (Run Proof) Briefs . . 49c



T-V "Silver Ribbon" (Run Resist) Briefs . . 39c

Flare in each fabric 10c higher

Individually cellophane packaged

McKAY PRODUCTS CORP. • 350 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Look for the Magic Inset

THE LIFT THAT NEVER LETS YOU DOWN

Your "Perma·lift"* Bra is specially constructed to add allure to your lovely, youthful figure. The exclusive cushion insets at the base of the bra cups gently support your bust from below—never lose that support through ever so many washings and wearings. Make your selection today at your favorite Corset Department—$1.50 to $3.50.

● Also enjoy the healthful comfort of a "Perma·lift" Girdle—No Bones About It—Stays Up Without Stays.

*"Perma·lift" and "Hickory" are trade marks of A. Stein & Company (Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)

wound up with Henry Willson and David O. Selznick sensing something unusual in the lad, giving him his break. He used to come up from San Diego on every liberty. He'd hitch rides like any other young serviceman. Most of his buddies didn't even know he'd made Since You Went Away until the picture played the base.

The point is, Guy didn't go Hollywood then, and he hasn't gone Hollywood since. He likes to move alone when he's not dating his best girl, Gail Russell. Maybe that's why some people think he's cold and remote.

One day I was sitting at a friend's beach home, down in Santa Monica. I looked out the big window and saw a well-built fellow walk down the sand with a towel wrapped around his neck. He removed the dungarees he was wearing over his trunks, threw off the towel and ran down to the water. From where I sat, it looked like Guy Madison, and I said as much to my hostess.

"Heavens," she said, "if that was Guy, he wouldn't have to carry his own towel and come to the beach with his trunks on."

"I know," I added. "He'd have a million invitations from people with beach houses. But also, if it were Guy—he'd turn them all down and come to the beach this way."

I went out on the beach and sure enough, it was Guy.

It isn't that he's snooty, or "vants to be ahlone." It's just that he probably got that swimming idea on the spur of the moment and didn't want to be beholden to anyone.

They say Guy has "no business sense." This may be true of most young actors. One of the greatest problems faced by newcomers to Hollywood is how to cope properly with business matters concerning their careers. Many an actor has found himself stymied for years thereafter by making decisions on affairs whose merits he has insufficient experience to judge.

But Guy Madison's an exception. In business matters he's shown himself to be, in his own quiet way, as smart as a whip. I like the story of the time a high-powered agent thought he'd do a little talent-grabbing. He got a friend to ear-bang Guy about all he could do for Guy if Guy would only switch agents.

Guy didn't want to change, bless him. But the agent's friend was persistent. "What can you lose?" he said. "Just go and talk to this fellow. That's all he wants to do, just talk to you."

So they arranged a meeting. They gave Guy their super de luxe pitch. Told him what they'd done for all their other people and how much more they could do for him. How they'd been looking for someone exactly his type and money really didn't matter. They just liked him and wanted him for their client, even if they couldn't make a dime out of him.

"Oh, you mean you want me for a client?" Guy asked.

They had to admit that this was roughly what they were leading up to.

"But I thought," Guy said, "you just wanted to talk to me."

Oh, sure, they said. They wanted to talk to him all right. But it would ever be peachier if they could talk and be agent-client at the same time.

Guy never looked duller. He said: "But I already have an agent, thank you. Miss Ainsworth is my agent. Thanks for the nice talk."

And he left, leaving them confused—and, I'm sure, convinced that the lad was not so bright. I'm asking, who was smart and who was stupid in that little tête-à-tête? Seems to me, Guy met the problem intelligently.

Another Guy Madison story I'd like to scotch is that he's the original Timid Soul. The truth is, Guy is quiet, long-suffering and patient. Maybe that's why some people think he's got a little of Casper Milquetoast in him. But provoke him, and he's anything but timid.

That's the way he is about being an actor, for example. Guy knew with what handicaps he had to start. Most actors have the problem of working their way up from the bottom. They're lost to view while they learn. They carry spears in the background while the experienced stars makes with the heavy emoting in the foreground. They don't get much recognition but they learn about acting.

It wasn't that way with Guy. He attained fame in his first bit. He got ou of the Navy to find he was a movie star and, yet, as he was the very first to say, there was an awful lot about acting he had yet to learn. And he had to do all his learning right out there in front of the faithful fans who were enthusiastically boosting his stock.

"Okay, Spike, start talking. Mr. Bushkin here wants to buy the movie rights."

It would have scared a lesser man stiff. Guy was scared, sure, but he faced the situation sensibly.

He went down to La Jolla to play in Dear Ruth on the stage with Diana Lynn. I visited him some days later. He was sitting in his dressing room, morose, and a little blue.

He saw me come in. He picked up a sheaf of newspaper clippings and held them out to me. "Here, look at these," he said.

They can hardly be said to have been flattering to him.

I started to try to explain them away. He broke in. "They're right," he said, "absolutely right."

Much more experienced stars than Guy Madison are terrified of what the critics might say of them on the stage. I could name 10 stars who came to movies via the stage who admit they are scared to death to return to the footlights and an in-person audience.

Higher education . . .

So I wasn't going to blame Guy for being timid about being a stage actor. But early this summer Guy came up to me and said he wanted to go back to summer stock. "The experience would be good for me. I'd learn a lot," he said.

"What about those man-eating critics?" I suggested.

"Well, what about them?" he countered.

So, as his agent, I arranged the tour. I knew what he wanted. Good, bad or indifferent, he just didn't want to be considered a quitter. And when he returned after six weeks of playing John Loves Mary, he showed me his clippings again. You know what? They said now that he'd learned a lot as an actor and could now be considered a good performer with a distinct and pleasant personality.

Of course, the current big buzz-buzz about Guy has to do with Gail Russell. People are always giving me the inside dope about this. One version has it that she won't marry him, the other that he won't marry her. I've heard it was all publicity and that they were both "secretly" in love with two other people. Oh, the wonderful Madison-Russell stories I've heard!

But I'll tell you something. When we were down in Dallas for that Texas, Brooklyn and Heaven opening, there was an absolutely stunning gal who attached herself to us. She was a typical example of she-wolves who are always on the make for good-looking young stars like Guy. The way she kept looking at him was more eloquent than words.

She tagged Guy through a round of cocktail parties and dinner parties. Finally, about 11 o'clock, we were at a party in the hotel where we were staying. Guy turned from the girl to me the minute the beautiful creature took time out and left him unguarded.

"You know, Miss Ainsworth," he said, "I'm not having much fun. I'm going upstairs and call up Gail." And he quietly departed.

I may not know all the answers to the Madison-Russell romance. But I've seen enough to tell which way the wind is blowing.

And in the five years I've known him, I've seen enough of the nice, quiet, gentlemanly Mr. Madison and the intelligent way he meets his problems to know that any girl could well be proud to have him for her Guy.

THE END

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

✓ Not a soap, not a cream—cannot leave dulling film!

✓ Quickly, effectively removes dandruff from both hair and scalp!

✓ Gives fragrant, soft-water lather even in hardest water!

✓ Leaves hair lustrously soft, easy to manage—with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or cream shampoos hides its natural lustre with dulling soap film

✓ Halo—not a soap, not a cream—contains no sticky oils, nothing to hide your hair's natural lustre with dulling film. Made with a new patented ingredient, Halo brings out glossy, shimmering highlights the very first time you use it! Its delightfully fragrant lather rinses away quickly, completely in any kind of water—needs no lemon or vinegar rinse. For hair that's naturally colorful, lustrously soft, easy to manage—use Halo Shampoo! At any drug or cosmetic counter.

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Curve Carver by

Brilliant

It moulds and holds you to new sleek lines in laton taffeta elastic. A side fastener smooths your silhouette. Beautifully boned; wear it strapped or strapless. Raspberry, green, pearl yellow, pale blue, black or white.
Sizes 32 to 38. About $9.

BRILLIANT SPORTSWEAR, INC.
1410 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.
818 S. BROADWAY, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

WINNER TAKE ALL?

(Continued from page 24)

for photographers, standing out as the only girl present in a high-necked dress in all that array of strapless gowns. She chatted with Claire Trevor, congratulating her on her Award. Then Lew Ayres took her gently by one arm, Jack Warner by the other, and she went off to a party at the Champagne Room of the Mocambo.

Here were gathered 130 people—Jane's old friends and all the fellow-workers from Warners who had helped her make Johnny Belinda her greatest role. This night, Jane's cup of happiness was filled and running over. She was on top of the world. Her friends were gathered about her. And yet, there remained one dark question mark: What of the men in her life? . . .

A few weeks before, I'd seen Jane Wyman and Lew Ayres together at the Errol Flynn party. Jane looked happier than I'd seen her for a long time. Lew, his thin, tanned face responsive to her every remark, looked happy, too. They spent most of the evening chatting with the Ronald Colmans. Every once in a while, Jane would wander off to greet her friends, and Lew would remain where he was, waiting for her. . . .

already at odds . . .

Watching them together, I thought back to Johnny Belinda and the tender love scenes these two played in it at the time Jane was getting ready to call quits to her marriage to Ronald Reagan.

I don't believe for a minute that Lew, or any other man, was responsible for the break in what Hollywood had long considered the "perfect marriage." I'm sure that Jane had decided quite a while before she and Lew made Johnny Belinda, that she and Ronnie Reagan were heading in different directions. However, when a girl is already emotionally at odds with her husband, close association with another man, attractive and considerate, might cause her to view her mate with an even more critical eye.

And, undoubtedly, while Jane and Lew were working together in Johnny Belinda, she found Lew a very pleasant fellow to be with—he's an interesting conversationalist, with a rare and alert sense of humor. As I watched them at Errol's party, they were having lots of laughs and both seemed very intent on what the other was saying.

This scene contrasted so sharply with one I'd witnessed when I watched Jane and Ronnie Reagan dining at Le Papillon, on The Strip, just before she took off for New York where she finally admitted she was separating from her husband. They weren't laughing at all, and their few smiles were pretty wooden. Once or twice Ronnie went into long dissertations, and I gathered from Jane's expression that she was pretty uninterested in what he was saying.

I'm sure that Jane went through a terrific emotional upheaval when she finally took her first step away from Ronnie. She was exhausted physically and mentally when she finished her long, Award-winning job in Johnny Belinda.

Things had been piling up for Jane even before she began the picture. She'd lost the baby she had been expecting, and Ronnie went through a siege of illness brought on by virus X. Then the two children had heavy colds, which caused her a good deal of worry.

When she went to New York, after the picture was finished, she behaved as if she'd have liked to have found a nice cozy hole to crawl into. She wouldn't leave her hotel room for fear of meeting someone who'd ask her questions about her marriage. Then she announced that she and Ronnie were going their separate ways.

By the time she returned to Hollywood, she was in a very emotional state. Then she took off for Las Vegas, where she said she was going to file for divorce, but while moping around the Flamingo Hotel, she met so many friends who wanted to know what was up, she fled from there, too.

To all appearances, it looked as if the little girl didn't know what she wanted to do. She was almost as distraught as "Belinda" was, when she was standing trial for murder. I've often wondered if Lew Ayres didn't give her some friendly counsel in real life then, just as he had in the picture. Lew had gone through a lot of emotional upheaval himself, when he announced during the war that he intended to serve but not carry arms for his country. He was completely misunderstood at that time, because the public couldn't understand a young man who said simply that he couldn't kill another human being. (Later, of course, after he had served with distinction in an Army medical unit in Pacific battle areas, those who'd attacked his stand completely changed their minds.)

It is very likely he was able to give Jane understanding advice that helped her to get a grip on herself. At any rate, she suddenly snapped out of her indecision, came back home, and calmly went about getting a divorce in Los Angeles. She testified that Ronnie caused her mental torture because he was so interested in politics.

However, what really happened between this supposedly ideally mated pair is all guesswork, for neither of them has ever told anyone what actually happened. The California divorce law allows a wife to charge mental cruelty without going into too much detail, so what Jane told the judge can only be about half the reason she made up her mind to stop being Mrs. Reagan.

When I lunched with her recently and asked her if she cared to discuss her marriage break-up, she said she'd talk to me about anything on earth but that.

This attitude of Jane's would indicate that she's been very much on the defen-coming attractions!!

our july cover co-starring jeanne crain and baby michael beginning june 10

sive about her marital collapse. She's doubtless had many an argument with herself. Ronnie's preoccupation with matters outside the home may not seem in itself to be a strong reason for throwing in the sponge on an eight-year-old marriage which had survived many ups and downs. And yet, wives who have gone through somewhat the same experience can sympathize with her to a great degree.

Undoing a marriage is a difficult business. There are so many mutual ties. It takes a long time to begin thinking about oneself as a separate entity. Jane hasn't gotten over this hurdle yet.

I asked her recently about a jeweled locket she was wearing, made in the form of a horse's head. "Oh, Ronnie and I have a racing stable," she smilingly replied, without thinking. "This is one of the racers we have high hopes for. If it doesn't win, I'll probably throw this locket in the ashcan!" She was still thinking of herself as part of a team with Ronnie!

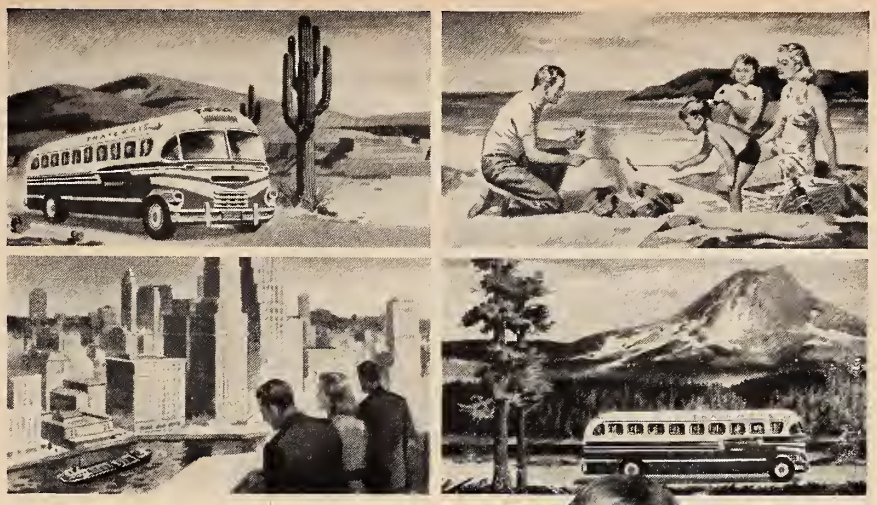
They are friendly, and saw a lot of each other before Ronnie went to England to make The Hasty Heart. While he was there, they talked frequently by trans-Atlantic telephone, when Jane would give him all the news of the children. And every week she sent him a supply of steaks. At this writing, Ronnie is expected to return in a few days, and after she completes The Octopus and Miss Smith with Dennis Morgan, Jane herself will leave for England—to make a film for Alfred Hitchcock.

Away from the studio, Jane has taken up painting. She told me that many nights when she can't sleep, she gets up to work with her oils and brushes to settle her nerves. In her living-room there is little else right now but a huge oil portrait of herself in the role of Belinda. It was painted by her teacher, Paul Clemens.

She's also taken up golf and has been going regularly to the Riviera Country Club at six o'clock in the evening, an hour when the course is usually deserted. She prefers not to have people watching her.

future uncertain . . .

Jane works as hard at being a mother as she does at being an actress. Remembering the old days when she was a dancing kiddie, she stopped little Maureen's piano lessons, because the child was getting too expert.



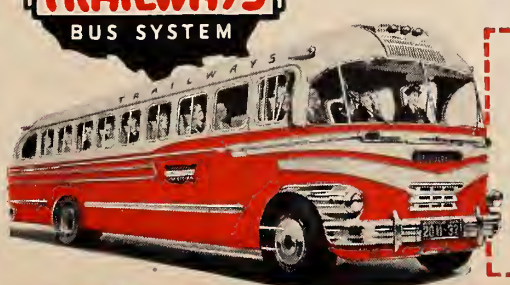
"I want them both to grow up just perfectly normal, healthy children with lots of fun and the way of life kids are entitled to," she explained.

While painting, she lets seven-year-old Maureen and three-year-old Michael (who's adopted) sit with her and, with great earnestness, try to make the same pictures as she does with their colored crayons.

It was a great blow to her when she lost her baby in 1947. She hopes sometime to marry again and have more children. But having failed to find enduring happiness in two marriages, she tells friends she's going to be very certain it will work out before she tries it again.

Lew Ayres was first married to Lola Lane, and then to Ginger Rogers. He, too, is shy about trying it again. You can be certain that should he and Jane decide it's really love between them, they'll still be in no rush to wed. . . .

And so, amid the great and well-deserved triumph of an Acadamy Award that underlines the shining promise of even greater fulfillment ahead for the extraordinary talents of Jane Wyman, the major question in her personal life still remains: Will all the heartbreak of her shattered marriage to Ronald Reagan be healed and forgotten in the deep and lasting happiness that may someday await her with Lew Ayres? THE END



Most
FOR YOUR DOLLAR EVERY TRIP
...TRAVEL TRAILWAYS

When your travel urge whispers, "Action! Romance! It's time to take a trip!" Let TRAILWAYS big, safety-colored, Comfort-Planned Buses provide the thrift-sure answer for Spring and Summer travel.

You'll save money with TRAILWAYS Bargain low fares and enjoy the extra satisfaction of TRAILWAYS deep-cushioned "scenery-level" seats as you glide along our nationwide network of famous routes. For information on all fares, Thru-Buses, schedules, Pleasure Planned Tours, or charters, consult your phone book for your friendly local TRAILWAYS agent or mail the coupon below to Department 18-D, NATIONAL TRAILWAYS BUS SYSTEM, 185 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois.

NATIONAL TRAILWAYS BUS SYSTEM

Hurry, while they last! Get your beautiful copy of TRAILWAYS famous VACATION-AND-PLAY U. S. A. map. 3 ft. x 2 ft., brilliant, colorful, perfect for framing. Sent in mailing tube. Only 25c with coupon below.

National Trailways Bus System
185 N. Wabash Ave., Dept. 18-D
Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me large (for framing) map and/or FREE information, as checked.
☐ I enclose 25c. Send Vocation-and-Play U. S. A. (map)
☐ Additional Information on TRAILWAYS
☐ TRAILWAYS Pleasure Planned TOURS
Name (Please print)_____
Address_____
City & Zone_____State_____

Trailways Serves the Nation at "Scenery Level"

De Long
Bob Pins set the smartest hair-do's stronger grip—
won't slip out

Short in front—short in back...like this new "Directoire Style" that's so flattering to your face...that's the way your hair goes this season. And the smartest hair-do's are going up with De Long Bob Pins! Smoothly rounded at the ends, De Long Bob Pins slide in easily, stay in indefinitely. For easier setting—for lovelier hair—reach for De Long Bob Pins on the famous blue cards.

how to set this
"directoire style"
created by Robert King, famous New York and Hollywood hair stylist and make-up artist. Make 6 large pin curls for the bang. Wave a ridge over each ear and make two rows of curls from high on both sides all the way around back. Always turn curls toward face. Brush out hair away from face and let fall softly.

You're always "set" with De Long Hair Pins • Curl Setting Pins • Safety Pins • Hooks and Eyes • Snaps • Pins • Hook and Eye Tapes • Sanitary Belts

MY LONELY YEARS

(Continued from page 42)

So one of the first men I met was Farley Granger. So one of the first things he did was to invite me out. So—I'll never forget how I stood there looking at him and wanting to say yes. I was heartsick. Not until that moment had I realized what I'd let myself in for with my stern resolution—which I could now feel rapidly melting away to nothing. Yet, at the same time, it hit me that if I broke down this quickly I'd never be able to respect myself.

Farley Granger will never know, until he reads this, what it cost me to say no—as I did. He just straightened up, I remember, and said, in a funny kind of way, "Okay . . . however you feel."

blues day and night . . .

Well, my feeling was far from happy, but that's the way it had to be. In self-defense I threw myself into rehearsals for my first picture—Wonder Man, with Danny Kaye. It didn't matter to me whether the studio scheduled rehearsals or not, I came down daily and danced anyway. But even this didn't keep me busy enough—or tired enough so that I wouldn't even want to go out nights—so I enrolled privately at Belcher's for additional ballet lessons. I was living with Mother and Dad, and each evening I went straight home from the studio, sometimes sighing ruefully to myself about the predictions of Imogene, Mimi and the others.

Convertible with boy? Hah! The nearest I got to this was the second-hand 1937 coupe I bought to get around in. It didn't come equipped with boy; it came equipped with 200 different squeaks and rattles, an engine that pinged and bucked, and a horn that sounded like a baby seal.

Ciro's? One night on my way home from some late shooting at the studio I stopped outside and sat in my car watching. I saw laughing couples enter, the girls with their shoulders bare and I heard the thin wisps of music that would come trailing out to me every time the door opened. I imagined being inside with all the fun, and went limp with longing. When I jammed my heel down on the starter to get away from there my eyes were so filled with tears that I could hardly see to drive.

Big beach parties? Oh, yes! I think there were a quarter of a million people at some of them—everyone who cared to drive down to the public beach at Santa Monica on a hot Sunday and join Mother and Dad and me.

But I stuck to my no-date pledge and hoped that after a while I'd fall into the rut of this sort of life and it wouldn't bother me any more. (Later, as you shall see, I became horrified at the thought that I was in a rut, and moved fast to get out of it!) All this time I faced one more decision I couldn't make. I hadn't yet applied for my divorce. I was certain the marriage was over. There was no point to waiting. And yet, the actual step was too much for me. I know it doesn't make sense, but I just can't explain it any more clearly. It sort of had to do with a dream that I didn't want to give up—even though it had given me up. . . .

One thing had finally come about—a good thing, I suppose, though I didn't feel too happy about it. Long before I got used to saying no to an invitation, people got used to not asking me out. Even so, I might have given in had I been living with a girl friend; sooner or later there would have been a chance to come on a double date that would've hit me when my will power was minus nil or something. Being home with my parents helped a bit.

I got so I could lick the temptation to go out while I was busy on a picture, but in between pictures, time hung awfully heavy. That's when I had my jalopy overhauled and took Mother and Dad on a series of trips to see California and the nearby West. My idea was to get away from Hollywood when I wasn't working.

I got away from Hollywood but not from my situation—quite. The second morning at Yosemite Valley a big, footballish kid said hello and didn't I want to hike to Glacier Point with him? At Sequoia National Park a tall, dark vacationer introduced himself to Dad, got to meet Mother, and finally worked his way down to me . . .

Can it be that a girl traveling with her parents appeals more to men than when she's alone? At least, I've been on trips by myself and received less attention than on those sightseeing jaunts with Mother and Dad to San Francisco, Carmel, Reno, Virginia City and a half dozen other scenic and historic spots. Or maybe it's just that the spirit of the West makes everyone more hospitable and friendly—especially the kind of men you would love to date but can't.

It was bad enough to be just lonesome, as I was in my first year in Hollywood. But in my second year something else developed—something a little frightening. It came over me one night when I took Mother and Dad to the preview of The Kid From Brooklyn. I wore a simple blue satin dress; simple—but form-fitting—and, to tell the truth, simple but daring. After I got it on, after we got to the theater—well, it was nice to be with Mother and Dad but the dress just shrieked for a tall, handsome escort to be beside me! I came home depressed. I told Mother to take the dress and cut it up or give it away—anything to get it out of my sight.

She picked up the dress but looked at me oddly as she did so. Then it hit me. She didn't have to say it: maybe I was losing confidence in myself.

fight against fear . . .

It was a pretty shocking thought, but there was more than my willingness to give up the blue dress to prove this might be so. Things I had been worrying about for months crowded into my mind. In addition to my stage work I had always been a good ballroom dancer—I had even won an Arthur Murray Award as the year's most versatile dancer. But I hadn't danced once with a man since coming to Hollywood. Was there a fear in me that I would do badly trying it now? I had always worked hard to cultivate an ability to converse easily. Was I afraid I'd sound dull if I went out again? And that old zip to my personality that I started developing so assiduously when I was a kid and had always fancied was mine—was I convinced now that it had died from non-use?

It was all in the look my mother gave me and it was all in my heart. It was also all I needed to take quick action.

Within two days I had filed suit for divorce, had my hearing soon afterward and knew it would be only a year before the decree would be final.

A year to go . . . but I didn't have to wait a year. Before it was up we got startling news. My husband had remarried in England. I was free.

It's funny, but after that first surge of emotion, after talking my new state over with Mother and Dad, after driving all alone to one of the hills overlooking Hollywood and thinking and thinking about what I wanted for myself now, I found a great inner desire to go along quietly for a while as if nothing special had happened. But—I did accept a date.

It was my first real date in Hollywood. It was for a small cocktail party, and I went with a man I like very much, Bob Snody, a 20th Century-Fox executive. Bob said something about going to one of the night clubs instead, but I preferred the private party. It was almost as if I didn't want to trust myself in public yet. For almost three years I had opened my own doors, paid my own checks, thought and acted for myself alone. Now I wanted time to feel natural again about having things done for me by a man.

There were other quiet dates. And then, one morning, Farley Granger phoned. "Say, remember when you first got to Hollywood," he said, "and I asked you—?"

"Oh, yes!" I interrupted. "Yes! Yes! Yes!"

"What do you mean 'yes'?" he asked. "Yes, you remember, or yes, you—?"

"Yes I'd like to go out," I cut in.

"Oh!" He came back. "That's what I was leading up to!"

"Well, you're there now!" I declared. "As a matter of fact, you were there three years ago—if only I could have accepted!"

Then one night I met Rory Calhoun (before he married Isabelita, of course).

"I'm awfully glad this has happened," Rory said. "I feel I have the right to call you up some night, now."

Just to show you how soon a girl can get back into stride, my flip reply to this was, "Oh, I've felt that way for a long time!" Rory was a little taken back—and I had to ask myself, "Did I say that?"

But just the same, he phoned me in a day or so and made a date to take me out to Ciro's. This was the date, I decided, that would see the definite end of the old Vera-Ellen and the beginning of the new.

It was a wonderful night. Not only did I dance with Rory, but I danced with Guy Madison, with Peter Lawford, with a dozen other Madisons and Lawfords. And, to top it off, just before we left for Ciro's I got word that I was to dance with Gene Kelly in MGM's Words and Music.

Yes, it was a wonderful night. So wonderful I hardly even noticed a little voice inside of me that was still speaking up guiltily every once in a while. "Why, Vera-Ellen!" it seemed to be saying. "You? You out with a MAN?"

It was a voice out of the lonesome past—and as far as I was concerned that's where it belonged.

And so, with all the spirit of my new-found confidence, "Get lost!" I said.

THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

While visiting the Warner Brothers studio I asked Dennis Morgan for his autograph. The pen I handed him suddenly started dribbling ink all over Mr. Morgan, ruining his hands as well as his costume. I was so embarrassed I could only stand there waiting for his reaction. It came with a roar of laughter ending in a weak murmur from Dennis. "It leaks a little, doesn't it?" he said.

Betty Beacham
Los Angeles, California

Is yours the Fortunate Hand?

Is your ring finger long? You take chances, gamble with life and love.

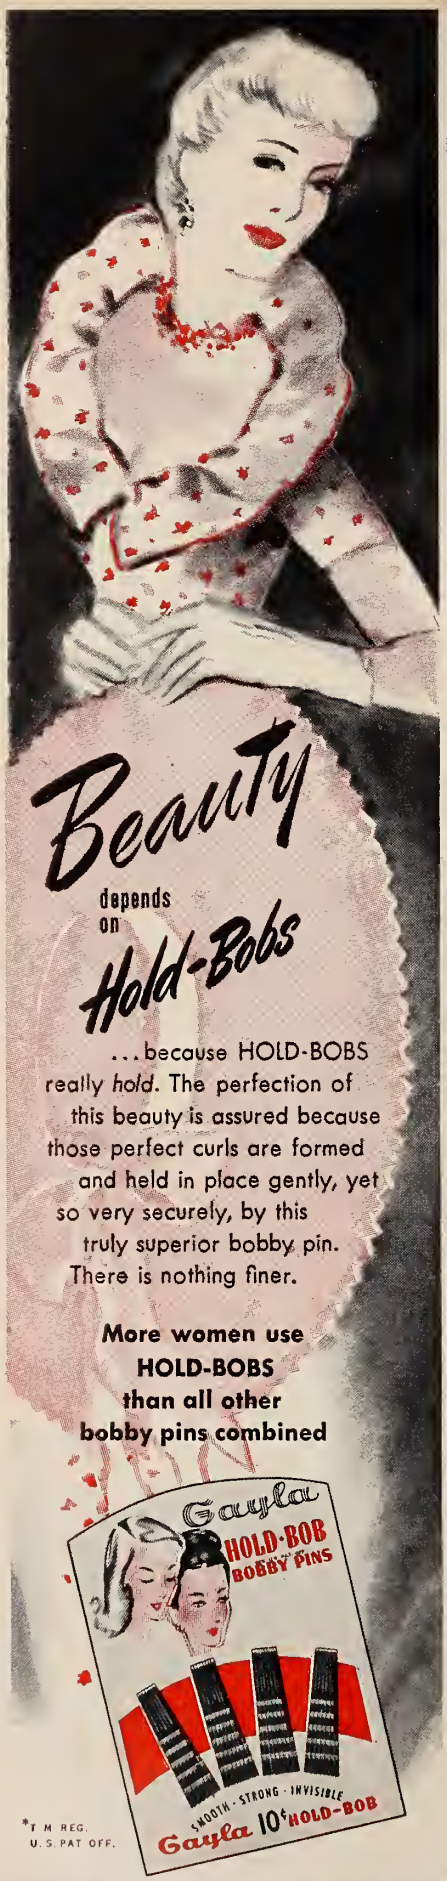
THE FORTUNATE HAND...
One of a series
Watch for your hand

Is the tip of your little finger pointed? You're quick-witted, with a wonderful gift of expression.

Does a lucky star twinkle under the third finger of your right hand? You've talents which, developed, spell success.

Believe your talents show in your hand? Whether you do or not, your well-groomed fingertips show you're fashionwise. When you use Dura-Gloss, your fingertips say you're practical, too. For Dura-Gloss means exciting shades, quick application, long-lasting beauty...all yours for only 10¢.

REPLACEMENT OR RETURN OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN



DURA-GLOSS NAIL POLISH

non-smear remover 10¢ and 25¢...lipstick 25¢

10c

©1949 Lorr Laboratories, Paterson, N. J. Founded by E. T. Reynolds

Prices plus tax

Barbora Botes, Worners storlet, knows oll the tricks of complexion care.

clean as a kitten

By Corol Corter, Beauty Editar

■ You'd really be horrified if you examined closely all the particles of dirt your pretty face can pick up in a few hours—dust, bodily wastes left by perspiration, stale powder and make-up and assorted smudges, smears and deposits, depending on how you've been spending your time. Soap, warm water and a wash cloth are among the best friends a young skin ever had.

As you will remember from physiology class, your skin isn't an enamel-smooth surface, to be whisked clean at the first try. It's full of tiny pores and ridges and oil pockets, all of which are constantly collecting dirt. Cleansing creams are excellent in helping to soften some of the grease and dirt deposits, so unless you have an acneous condition and your doctor warns against creams, get the first layer of dirt off with cream and tissue off carefully.

So, whether your skin is dry, normal or oily, don't be afraid of washing it, but use a slightly different method in the case of dry or oily. Use a soft face cloth for the dry skin; a complexion brush or rough cloth for the oily skin. Use warm water on the dry skin; hotter on the oily. Wash the dry skin once a day with water and a mild, cold-cream soap and clean it with cream any other time of day. Scrub the oily skin at least twice a day to help get rid of excess oil and also for the sake of cleanliness—because an oily skin accumulates more dirt. Use cleansing cream on either type of skin, but remove every bit of it with soapy water if your skin is oily; if your skin is dry, pat cream on just before going to bed. The girl with a perfectly "normal" skin can steer a middle course, except that she must continue careful skin care to keep her complexion clear and smooth.

Always rinse your face and neck thoroughly with clear, warm water, and then splash on plenty of cold. This is stimulating and just the thing for most complexion difficulties. In the morning, splash a dry skin with cold water and follow with cleansing cream. For the oily, more soap and water, or cleansing cream followed by a lively patting with an astringent lotion.

Let your U. S. Senator or Congressman know, by letter, that you think the 20% cosmetics tax is unfair! Every protest helps make repeal of it more certain

MEET THE '49 ERS

(Continued from page 33)

Which is something that makes Monty somewhat different from Gordon MacRae. Gordon, who is 28, married, and the father of three, is out to enjoy California life to the fullest—and now. As soon as he'd signed his Warners contract early last year, he sank every dime he had into down payments on a valley house equipped with swimming pool; a Buick for himself, and a Cadillac for his wife, Sheila. This was perhaps not quite so fearless an expression of self-confidence as it might have seemed, for Gordon was already well established as a front-rank NBC singer—and it was fairly safe to assume that his lucrative radio and recording careers would continue onward and upward. They have: he has his own radio show, "The Railroad Hour," and currently his recording of "So In Love" is a sizable hit.

And as far as his movie career is concerned, there have been no options dropped. After doing excellently in a non-singing role in The Big Punch, he followed up strongly in the soon-to-be-released Somewhere in the City. His next film was the current Look for the Silver Lining. Studio talk now is that he'll be starred in a musical version of Brother Rat, to be called Rise Above It.

Gordon is nothing if not self-assured. On the morning he was first due to begin work at the studio, he arrived bright and early and a publicity man offered to take him around so he could meet the key people of the organization.

"Thanks," said Gordon, "but I think I know them all."

"I don't get it," said the puzzled press agent. "Isn't this your first day out here?"

"Yes, officially," replied Gordon. "But I dropped in yesterday afternoon and walked around. While I was at it I thought I might as well tell people who I am. So I did."

Doris Day began rocketing last year with her first movie, Romance on the High Seas. My Dream Is Yours has just established this blonde, delightful dynamo as one of the largest attractions in musical filmdom. Born Doris Kappelhoff in Cincinnati on April 3, 1924, she had made a place for herself in the show world as a juvenile hoofer when an automobile accident broke both her legs and put a stop to that. This blessing in disguise led her to take voice lessons and, still in her teens, that's hollywood!

"I'd like you to know that for me Bette Davis can do no wrong. If she's in a good picture, I like her. If she's in a bad picture, I like her. There is something spirited and lyric about her acting that you get occasionally in French and Italian films, but rarely in American films. It's vigorous and exciting and there ought to be more Bette Davises."

(ANNE SHIRLEY)
Irving Hoffman
Hollywood Reporter

Goldilocks and the Three Spoons

ONCE upon a time Goldilocks was out buying her silverplate and she came to a store that showed her three spoons. One spoon was an ordinary spoon with no form of wear protection at all.

THE next spoon she saw was one of the extra-plated kinds. But the third spoon was something extra special. It had these

IT was a Holmes & Edwards Spoon... and like all the most used spoons and forks in this really finer silverplate—it was Inlaid with two blocks of Sterling Silver at the backs of bowls and handles to stay lovelier longer.

When she heard this, Goldilocks ran all the way home . . . with her beautiful new chest of Holmes & Edwards, of course!

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

HERE AND HERE
It's Sterling Inlaid

MADE BY THE INTERNATIONAL SILVER CO.

THE LOVELIEST SILVERPLATE IS STERLING INLAID!

Whether your choice is Youth, Danish Princess, Lovely Lady or the New Spring Garden, there is no lovelier, no finer silverplate at any price. 52 piece service for 8 is $68.50. All patterns made in the U.S.A.

★ SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER! 4 FIVE O'CLOCK TEASPOONS FOR ONLY $1.89. These lovely spoons in the new Spring Garden Design are ideal for desserts, ice cream and sherbet. At all jewelry and department stores for a limited time only.

Copyright 1949, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

"I dress for a bride's shower... at 8 o'clock in the morning!"

1. "For daytime duties I wear a versatile costume. A short, chic, cardigan jacket. A jaunty white hat with a feather to match my dress. A gay roomy basket bag. It's really a traffic stopper! And, of course, I rely on gentler, even more effective Odorono Cream . . . because I know it protects me from perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!"

New Odorono Cream brings you an improved new formula in a bright new package. Stays creamy smooth, too . . . even if you leave the cap off for weeks!

2. "For the evening surprise party, from under my jacket appears a picture-pretty party dress. Around its soft blue tie silk I put a white organdie sash which matches the dainty gathered V-neck insert, and I'm set! I'm confident of my charm all evening, too, thanks to new Odorono Cream . . . because I find it gives me the most effective protection I've ever known!"

It never harms fine fabrics, and is so gentle you can use it right after shaving! You'll find it the perfect deodorant!

New Odorono Cream safely stops perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!

(Now in new 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, plus tax)

she got a job as vocalist with Barney Kapp's orchestra. Barney decided Kappelhoff, while a nice enough name, was sort of lacking in oomph, and gave her the moniker of Day. Jobs with Bob Crosby, Fred Waring and Les Brown made her a favorite of the jukes and brought her Hollywood offers. These she turned down, being very fond of singing with bands. But finally, while doing a solo at the Little Club in Manhattan, she gave in and signed with Warners.

Doris, one of the friendliest girls in the world, finds Hollywood a charming place to live. She seems certain to be one of its best-known citizens for a long time to come.

Perhaps the most interesting of the new personalities is Joanne Dru, a mother of three before she ever appeared before a camera. For that matter, she's convinced that being a mother is going to help her with her career. The responsibility of caring for her children means, she holds, that she'll have to look at her career objectively.

It was while she and her husband, Dick Haymes, were still living together, that Nancy Hawks, wife of producer-director Howard Hawks, first put the movie bug into Joanne's head. Joanne agreed to take some dramatic coaching from Howard and spent a year at it, but with no more thought to it than perhaps accepting an occasional part in a picture. That was in her mind when she played the feminine lead in Abie's Irish Rose. But after Red River, her stock went sky-high. It's even higher now that she's starred in the John Ford picture, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon.

top two . . .

Betsy Drake's triumph with Cary Grant in Every Girl Should Be Married, and Jane Greer's consistently fine work make them the favored pair of newcomers at RKO these days.

Betsy has started right at the top with a starring role. This, of course, was done with Cary's help, but her talent is undeniable. Born in Paris but raised in America in the East and Southeast, she has good theatrical grounding on the stage. Around the studio she is a very quiet girl, wears no jewelry, no fingernail polish, and asks permission to watch the shooting on a set even if the scene is part of her own picture.

When she was making Every Girl Should Be Married, she attended a get-acquainted luncheon with eight members of RKO's press department at Lucey's. It turned out to be a most difficult time for all concerned. Betsy was terribly nervous. Her cigarette trembled in her lips and her fingers plucked busily at the tablecloth. Soon she'd gathered so much of it in, that the people on the other side almost found themselves eating on bare board. She did become more poised as the weeks passed—but she's still a bashful girl who doesn't like to talk about herself.

The big future for 24-year-old Jane Greer, as far as anyone who knows her is concerned, lies in a type of acting she's never engaged in up to now—comedy. Her ability as a comedienne is in large part an aftermath of a peculiar ailment from which she suffered when she was 16. Called Bell's disease, it temporarily paralyzed the muscles on one side of her face. To regain mobility, she exercised them for long periods daily and now has a control of facial expression that's extraordinary.

She can flutter one eyelid while the other remains motionless, or adjust her face into an amusing, human caricature of almost anyone she wants to impersonate. She had a dozen hardened studio workers howling the other day as she illustrated the way Bob Mitchum and Kirk Douglas tried to underplay each other when they were making Out Of The Past. Bob, as everyone knows, is a relaxed player, barely drawling his lines—and that technique just seems to steal scene after scene. This day Kirk decided to relax, too, and as the dialogue went on, each one slouched more and more, until they both were practically doing the sequence lying down on the floor. Jane in her mimicry even managed to look like them.

Formerly married to Rudy Vallee, Jane is now Mrs. Edward Lasker and the mother of a two-year-old son. She was born in Washington, D. C., and got her professional start singing with Enric Madriguera's orchestra. Picture offers came after Life magazine had her on the cover in a WAC uniform, and she signed with Howard Hughes. Later she got a release from him and signed with RKO. Since he now controls that studio, she says, "I'm back where I didn't want to be—and that's where I wanted to be all the time."

Coming back to Arlene Dahl at MGM—she'll probably be on a fast boat to Italy about the time you're reading this, to go into an important picture as yet not named. Her work with Robert Cummings in Reign of Terror and with Van Johnson in Scene of the Crime won her this assignment. Arlene used to think that being a model was the most wonderful thing in the world, which is why she left Minneapolis for New York. There she became one of the highest paid models in the city. One day, Joe Pasternak at MGM saw her picture in a magazine and wired her agent for information about her. But Arlene didn't know about it—for the agent, not wanting to lose her, carefully mislaid the telegram. She was singing on Broadway in Mr. Strauss Goes to Boston when she was offered a contract with Warners.

That led to her role opposite Dennis Morgan in My Wild Irish Rose and this in turn led to an MGM contract and roles with Van Johnson in The Bride Goes Wild and Red Skelton in A Southern Yankee.

Van Johnson was a Warner Brothers player, but just leaving, about the time that Arlene started there. When they first met on the MGM lot, Van remembered her. "Didn't I see you at Warners?" he asked.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Betty Grable came to Fort Bragg, N. C., during the war. As a public relations Sergeant, I went to one of the training units with a photographer to take a series of pictures of her in the kitchen with the cooks and the K. P.'s. When we finished our pictures, the officers—a Captain and four Lieutenants—grabbed off Miss Grable to sit at their table for dinner. After dinner the Captain suggested that it would be nice to have photographs of the officers and Miss Grable. I replied that we were there to photograph her with enlisted men. He insisted—so what could a Sergeant do when a Captain insisted? I whispered to the photographer, "Snap a few, but don't use any film. Then we'll tell him they turned out bad." The Captain and the Lieutenants posed smilingly for many pictures. They were completely unaware of the hoax. But I could tell by the twinkle in Miss Grable's eyes that she knew!

Don Bishop
New York City

Tonight!..Show him how much lovelier your hair can look... after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP!
NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S
RICH LATHERING
CREAM SHAMPOO
WITH LANOLIN
for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; 10-oz. economy size $2. Smaller jars and tubes 49¢ and 25¢.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight, if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today!

Only Lustre-Creme has Kay Daumit's magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin. This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

WHICH

Magic Touch

OF BEAUTY

do you prefer?

JACQUELINE DANIELS
"Ado Annie" in "Oklahoma"

Want your complexion to have the youthful, new "freshly-scrubbed" look? Simply smooth on Magic Touch. Use no powder! Magic Touch alone gives that luminous look of dewy-fresh perfection.

CANDY JONES, Director Conover Career Girls

Or do you want the sophisticated look of velvety smoothness? Smooth on Magic Touch (you apply it with your fingertips —no sponge, no water needed). Then, dust on your favorite face powder.

Whichever you choose, you'll never know how pretty you can be until you try Magic Touch—thrilling new cream make-up. Large size compact $1. Trial size 39¢. FREE Beauty Booklet of make-up secrets. Write Campana Sales Company, 1200 Lincolnway, Batavia, Ill.

"Yes. I was there a year," Arlene told him. "How long were you there?"

"Oh, they found me out in just six months," he replied.

Kirk Douglas, who has zoomed to stardom overnight in Champion, hails from Amsterdam, New York. He did everything from carnival wrestling to punch-press operating before he got started on Broadway. And what a start! His first stint was as a singing-messenger boy—and he can't sing. His next role was with the Katharine Cornell-Judith Anderson-Ruth Gordon staging of the Russian classic, The Three Sisters—in which he played an offstage echo. But after a hitch in the Navy, and more stage and radio work, he hit strongly in movies in The Strange Loves of Martha Ivers and A Letter to Three Wives. The word is out that the best work he's done is in Champion, just being issued now.

One thing Kirk can't forget is his poverty-stricken days. He dropped into a restaurant with a friend the other day and when their food was served, they both agreed it was so bad as to be unappetizing. But to his friend's surprise, Kirk cleaned his plate anyway. "I can't, I just can't waste food," he explained. "Too many times at home I opened our icebox—and I don't mean refrigerator—to see nothing but an old can of Mazola. Too many times I met the early morning train from New York at five o'clock to get an armful of newspapers to sell so I could run back home with breakfast cereal and milk for my four sisters and myself."

Ricardo Montalban, whose parents came from Spain but now live in Mexico, where Ricardo was born 28 years ago, is a dancer who never danced professionally before getting into pictures. He has deep dramatic ambitions and, even though the MGM execs think he's a great hoofer, doesn't feel he's properly a dancer at all.

the play's the thing . . .

Some weeks ago he was at Loretta Young's, attending a family party. (His wife, Georgianna—the mother of his three children—is Loretta's sister.) Ricardo, in the course of the festivities, was clowning around and fell, twisting his back. A doctor diagnosed his injury as a sacroiliac slip, and everyone's face promptly got grave. "Oh, Ricardo!" they mourned. "What about your dancing?"

He laughed. "Who cares?" he replied. "Now at last I will have to do some straight acting to make a living."

But the sacroiliac worked back into place and he can dance again. However, the latest dope is that he may get a chance to go dramatic in the picture MGM is making about the Battle of the Bulge, Battleground.

Pat Neal, who says she got her husky, Tallulah Bankhead-like voice playing (and yelling) "Run, sheep, run!" as a tomboy in Packard, Kentucky, where she was raised, is the tallest of the new stars—five-feet-eight. There are a lot of other Tallulah characteristics to her and her career. One of Tallulah's greatest successes was as Regina in The Little Foxes, on Broadway, and Pat played the same role in the play that concerned the same character, Another Part of the Forest. Tallulah came to see Pat after the first night and told her, "Darling, you were as good playing Regina as I was—and that's darned good!" And out at the studio, Pat has a habit of shocking Warner Brothers executives à la Tallulah.

One of them ran across her on a Monday morning and happened to ask, "Well, what have you been doing over the weekend?"

"Shoplifting," replied Pat.

She shocks them, but she also pleased them so much in John Loves Mary that they put her in The Fountainhead, with Gary Cooper. Right after that they sent her to attend a Command Performance in London and to stay on there with Ronald Reagan to do The Hasty Heart. (She wrote a letter from England to a studio friend, saying that when she went for a walk with Ronald one day, fans besieged them and they had to seek refuge in the Tower of London. "We were locked up for an hour," she said, "but we didn't lose our heads.")

The youngest two players among the new stars-to-be are Gigi Perreau and Joan Evans. Joan is not yet 15 but fully looks her part as Farley Granger's mountain sweetheart in Roseanna McCoy. It's a bit odd to see Joan go from a love scene with Farley to the little "schoolhouse" on the studio set to pick up her high-school lessons again. Soon after the picture started, she showed up one day with a worried look and told the director, Irving Reis, that she was worried about her "test." "Why, your screen test was perfect!" he exclaimed. "I don't mean that," she cried. "I mean my biology test."

Joan's parents are both writers who have worked close to the picture business, and her godmother is Joan Crawford. Yet she got her chance through a "cold" discovery when a Goldwyn talent director, William Selwyn, discovered her in a private school in her native New York City. She's chestnut-haired and has brown eyes. So far, she seems quite calm about her screen career.

Little Gigi Perreau, at eight, is already practically a screen veteran, having appeared in 18 pictures. Her brother, Peter Miles, who is 11, is a child star in his own right with his latest picture, Red Pony. There's another girl in the family, Janine, a year younger than Gigi. Yep, Janine has been before the camera, too. That was when she was given a bath by Katharine Hepburn in Song of Love. When the director of that picture had trouble showing Janine what to do, Gigi took over and supervised Janine in the scene.

Gigi's real first name is Ghislaine. She knows it's a classical French name, she knows that her grandfather was dean of the Paris stock exchange, and she also knows how to draw a circle with a compass and cut it up into angles. Around the studio, she issues a newspaper written in pencil, with such items in it as, "Rita Hayworth may get married," "Wallace Beery isn't feeling too good," and "Flash! Gigi Perreau went to court yesterday to have her Goldwyn contract renewed." She is proud of her work in Enchantment, but the biggest kick she ever got was at a preview of Family Honeymoon in which she appears with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray. Her role called for her to be quite a trial to her elders and as she was leaving the theater with her mother, she heard a woman remark, "Wasn't that little girl a brat!"

"Did you hear that, Mother?" Gigi asked. "I must have acted real well to be that bad!"

Scott Brady is an ex-amateur pugilist champion, now punching out a film career for himself. Hailing from Westchester, New York, the son of a police chief, he went into the Navy right after high school and won the light-heavyweight boxing crown at the Pensacola naval station. After the war he visited Hollywood to see his brother, Lawrence Tierney. A few months later he was under contract to Eagle-Lion. Then he made Canon City and He Walked by Night. His latest picture is The Western Story, with Jane Russell and George Brent.

Scott is 25, stands six-feet-two and weighs 180. That's near perfect for movie he-men, combining required ruggedness with necessary photographic slimness. He's still a bit bashful about being an actor. Late last spring, he was punching the heavy bag at the Hollywood YMCA when a man stopped to talk to him.

"I like the way you handle yourself, kid," he said. "How'd you like to fight for a living? I handle boxers."

"No, thanks," said Scott, blushing. "I've got regular work."

"Better than boxing?" said the manager.

"I like it better," said Scott.

The man went away and Scott's brother, Dick, who was standing nearby, wanted to know why Scott hadn't simply declared that he was in the movies.

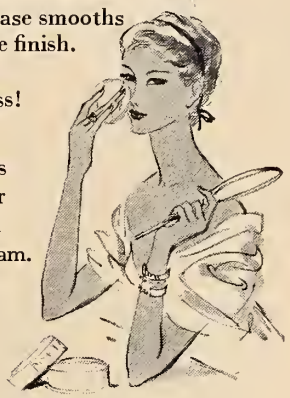
"G'wan!" said Scott. "Who'd believe it?"

Well, the modest Mr. Brady may be correct in the assumption that he'd never, off-screen, be mistaken for a thespian. But it's a cinch that no one seeing him perform in a film could think that he was anything but an actor, and a whale of a good one.

And that, as we've said, is something that goes for every one of these clearly talented young players. Their qualifications for screen eminence go much deeper than their abundant personal attractions. In Hollywood 1949, technical ability is being demanded first and foremost of newcomers who make the grade.

The '49 ers have everything needed. It's a great thing for the movies. THE END

MEET THE AUTHOR



Louis Pollock was born tongue-tied in Liverpool, England, and was headed for Montreal in the same condition, at 11 months of age. An operation, performed at sea, worked wonders, and Louis has been talking steadily ever since. Wanderings brought him to Chicago where, as a newspaperman, he was fired three times. To this distinction he adds that of being the first reporter in the journalistic history of the city who was scooped repeatedly by his own paper.

Lured into press-agentry, Pollock became advance man for everything from faith healers to Sally Rand.

He left the management of a tent show in Florida to go into motion picture advertising. While at work he wrote a book called Stork Bites Man, and left that job to write for magazines and await royalties from his book. At present, he is still waiting with a wife, two children and open arms.

For the skin that doesn't like a heavy foundation

Transparent loveliness for the complexion that doesn't like a "coated" look. This greaseless powder base smooths your skin . . . powder takes on an exquisite finish.

Sheer, satiny powder base—greaseless! Looks fresher, more natural! Protects skin!

Here's the secret of a make-up that always looks charmingly right—always in perfect taste. Never heavy and artificial. Before powder, just smooth on a feather-light base of Pond's Vanishing Cream. No streaking—no shade problem. The cream leaves only a protective, transparent film that takes powder superbly—and holds it!

Beauty pick-up before make-up—1-Minute Mask shows instant results!

For bright, clear beauty for a bright evening ahead, always give your face a refreshing pick-up with a 1-Minute Mask. Cover your face, except eyes, with lavish fingerfuls of Pond's Vanishing Cream. The Cream's "keratolytic" action loosens stubborn dirt and dead skin roughnesses. Dissolves them off! After one minute, tissue off clean. Your skin looks vibrant, alive—smoother and clearer—ready for a flawlessly lovely make-up!

MRS. H. LATROBE ROOSEVELT, JR., says —"Before an important evening, a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream brightens and freshens my skin so quickly—gives it a new smoothness that's wonderful for make-up!"

Just Whistle...

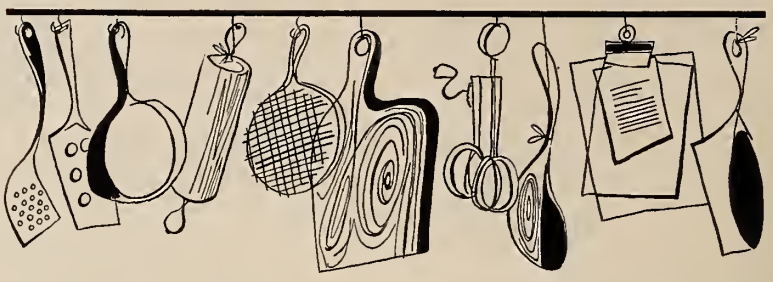
by Bissell

The house is shining-clean for the wedding . . . when excelsior from Aunt Clara's last-minute wedding gift goes all over the carpet! What to do?

Just whistle . . . and whisk out the Bissell Carpet Sweeper. That new "Bisco-matic"* Brush Action sweeps clean without any pressure on the handle . . .

Works automatically, adjusting itself to any rug, from the thickest broadloom to the smoothest Oriental! It even picks up perfectly when the handle is held low, for sweeping under tables and chairs.

Hint to brides: Use your vacuum for periodic cleaning, a "Bisco-matic" Bissell® for everyday quick pick-ups.



Exceptional values. "Bisco-matic" Bissells with "Sta-up" Handle and easy "Flip-O" Empty as low as $6.45. Other models far even less. Illustrated: the "Vanity" at $8.45.

Bissell Sweepers

The Bissell Carpet Sweeper Co.
Grand Rapids 2, Michigan

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Bissell's patented full spring controlled brush

fan fare

Bob Dalton, cook extraordinary, saved the day for amateur chefs John Agar and Tom Gallary (see "Time of Their Lives" on page 50), and he can do the same for you. Mrs. Agar and Mrs. Gallary took Bob's recipes home and we were sure you'd want them, too.

caesar salad for four

- 4 small heads romaine lettuce
- 2 chopped hard-boiled eggs
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- ½ cup garlic oil
- 12 anchovies, diced
- 4 heaping tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- ½ cup toasted diced bread
- Juice of 2 lemons

■ Chop the romaine, put into bowl and cover with crushed ice. Put in refrigerator for an hour before using. The salad should be very cold and crisp. Stir eggs, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, pepper and garlic oil into mixing bowl, then pour over the chopped lettuce. Toss about one minute. Add diced anchovies, cheese and diced bread. Salt to taste and serve.

stuffed baked potato

■ Bake large Idaho potatoes and cut in half, lengthwise. Scoop out potatoes, whip with warm milk, melted butter, salt, pepper and chopped chives. Put whipped potatoes back in shells and sprinkle with paprika and grated cheese. Put into oven and bake to golden brown just before serving. The cheese will form a crust over potatoes.

garlic toast

■ Slice a loaf of French bread lengthwise. Rub a clove of garlic into shallow pan and pour in melted butter. Dip the bread and toast it.

garlic oil croutons

■ Cut 1 clove of garlic in half and let stand overnight in ½ cup of any good salad oil. Cut croutons in ½ inch squares, rub in garlic oil before toasting.

marinade for steaks

- 1 cup salad oil
- 2 tablespoons smoke salt
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1 halved clove garlic (optional)

■ Pour the salad oil into shallow pan, add salt, pepper and garlic. This should be well-blended and let stand for about 2 hours before using. Before broiling steaks, marinate them in this mixture, turning frequently.

STAIRWAY TO THE STARS

(Continued from page 57)

already a good one, became a lot better. By the time her 12th birthday came along, she decided that everyone who told her she was too young to enter the Hollywood Bowl Auditions was silly. So she entered. She was so small that lowering the microphone was not enough—she had to stand on a trumpet case to reach it. But out of her elfin body came song and volume that electrified the audience and judges. Lois lost first place by a shade but got runner-up honors—and also a string of professional bids which included an offer from Alfred Wallenstein to sing with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra and another from Nelson Eddy to sing on his radio program. When John Charles Thomas heard her remarkable range and then took note of where it was coming from, he promptly dubbed her a "coloratura in a nutshell"—and the best he had ever heard anywhere.

"Surely your mother was a singer," said one of the Bowl musicians to her.

Lois shook her head in denial.

"Then your father?"

"Oh, no, he's in the building line," she told him.

"But such technique, such color and control!" the musician exclaimed. "You must have studied music—and how you must have studied!"

"How?" asked Lois blankly.

"Yes," he said. "Even if you are a child, you must have a profound knowledge of music."

Lois thought. Finally she replied, "All I know is that if the notes go up you sing high, and if they go down, you sing low."

The poor man stared at her. "Up . . . high?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Down . . . low?"

Lois nodded again. He nodded in be-

critic's corner

WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

Bad Boy—with this debut, young Mr. Murphy has formally leaped into the ranks of important Hollywood stars . . . he is bursting with vitality and vitriol. You go way back to the early days of Jimmy Cagney before you recall a boy radiating such vigor. By design or coincidence, this scenario was tailored exactly to his style and he has taken full advantage.

Alton Cook
N. Y. World-Telegram

The whole thing is such an apparent compilation of cliches and romance played in a strictly make-believe manner, that it is hard to stomach, much less believe . . . Precisely why Mr. Murphy should play a juvenile crook is neither apparent nor reasonable in other than exploitation terms, for he is obviously not a criminal and he is not over-able to act. His gaudy displays of insolence are like a kid's in a cops-and-robbers game.

Bosley Crowther
N. Y. Times

BOY!
but meat is a baby builder!

Swift's Strained Meats have what it takes to help baby grow his best!

Baby gets all this body-building goodness in every spoonful of Swift's Strained Meats.

Complete, high-quality proteins—needed for sound, sturdy growth.

Natural B vitamins—vital to baby's health and good appetite.

Food iron—to help baby build good, red blood—avoid anemia.

Swift's Strained Meats are extra-smooth and soft. Easy to feed earlier in life. Baby's choice of delicious beef, lamb, pork, veal, liver, heart. Each one 100% meat.

Swift's Strained Meats are ready to serve, cost less than if you prepared them at home!

YOUR DOCTOR—is best qualified to say how early your baby should start Swift's Strained Meats.

All nutritional statements made in this advertisement are accepted by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

ACCEPTED COUNCIL ON FOODS AND NUTRITION AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

P.S. (PLENTY SPECIAL) DICED MEATS for—

TEETHERS (to encourage chewing)

"PICKY" EATERS (to tempt lagging appetites)

BUSY MOTHERS (nourishing-easy to fix)

Tempting—Thrifty—Time-saving

SWIFT ...foremost name in meats

...first with 100% Meats for Babies

SWIFT & COMPANY, CHICAGO 9, ILLINOIS

"My beauty routine with Westmore Cosmetics"

says
ALEXIS SMITH
STARRING IN
"ONE LAST FLING"
A Warner Bros. Production

● Foundation—"After a thorough skin cleansing, Westmore's Foundation Cream, for daylong complexion beauty without dryness. It spreads on so smoothly and evenly, and covers tiny wrinkles and blemishes."

● Rouge – "Then blend on Westmore's Rouge. It's so natural-looking and lasting – and a perfect lipstick match."

● Powder—"Finish with Westmore's feather-light Face Powder! This soft, finely-sifted powder clings for hours—gives the flattering 'close-up' beauty every girl wants!"

● Lipstick – "And last, one of Westmore's 7 luscious lipstick colors (especially the exciting new Rapture Pink). They're extra creamy-smooth because they're lanolin enriched – and they go on to stay on!"

59¢ PLUS TAX*

Also available in 29¢ sizes

Westmore Make-up for Natural Beauty

"Regardless of Price You Cannot Buy Better"

wilderment. "That's right," he said. "And that's all. But why did I spend 50 years learning it?"

Up to this time, Lois had been doing most of the pushing herself. Now events began to lead her. She had to get an agent to comb through the theatrical offers coming in and one of these, when the right papers were signed, found her at Eagle-Lion Studios set to play the name role in Mickey—the story of a pig tailed tomboy in a Mid-Western American town. When the cameras turned on Lois for the first time she was 15.

When young artists develop so soon and rise so meteorically they almost always turn out to be intense young people who have shoved everything else in life aside in favor of their careers; romance, play, keeping up with friendships are forgotten.

If that's the way genius usually behaves, then Lois, to use a biological term, is a mutation of the species. Not only has she lived a well-rounded life up to now, but she's already decided that what she's going to push into the background is her career—and soon, and completely!

marriage comes first . . .

Blue-eyed Lois, who is under five feet and whose hair looks reddish blonde, although her studio originally declared it was chestnut-colored (of course, her studio saw her first), wants most of all in the world to be happily married. And she's not going to wait till she is thirty-ish ("Heavens, no!") and she is not going to combine career with marriage. In one of the most extraordinary statements ever made by a one-picture starlet, she has declared: "Maybe two or three more years of singing and pictures. Then I want to fade out quick and get married in a church, with all the trimmings, and to one man—I mean only one, ever!—and have a big family."

"But you'll only be about 20," it was pointed out. "A wonderful time to be starting out on a career."

"It's a more wonderful time to start out to be a mother," she came back.

After Lois attended the world premiere of Mickey in Des Moines, she made personal appearances in connection with other openings of the picture throughout the country. Among the dates on her itinerary was a three-day stay in New Orleans at the Joy theater, one of a circuit owned by Levere C. Montgomery. It seems there is also a Levere C. Montgomery, Jr., and on the first evening of her appearance there, he made himself known to Lois and her mother. After a few minutes of small talk he went into some big talk—and when that was over Lois found that they had a date for dinner together. They also had dinner the second night, and it was no different the third night—nor, they both realized, was it getting monotonous.

After Lois returned to Hollywood, young Mr. Montgomery, or "Monty," as a member of the United States Marine Corps Reserve putting in a couple of weeks of training, found himself at a Marine base in Southern California not a whoop and a holler away from Lois' home in the San Fernando Valley.

"Well!" she cried out in surprise one day when the doorbell rang and there stood Monty—as if she hadn't had six letters from him stating he was coming.

At this writing, Monty seems to be the favored boy friend. Lois is due to spend a week at his home in New Orleans next Christmas on invitation from his mother. Monty apparently has replaced another lad who dated Lois for a full year during the preparation of and shooting of Mickey. He is Skippy Homeier, who was in the picture with her.

Because she has wifehood in mind, Lois is not just sitting idly by while the studio prepares another picture for her. She is tutored at the studio now, but has been granted permission to graduate at John Marshall High, where she started and where all her friends go. In addition to this education, she is getting her hand in at things a lady of the house should know. She seems to have no talent for sewing, but shows promise at baking—at least, her mother reports that what was left of her first loaf of bread, after she got dough smeared all over the kitchen, tasted fine.

She doesn't do too good a job at taking care of her clothes. But this, her family believes, is due to a mental hazard tracing back to punishment administered for the way she removed a grease spot from a new dress when she was a child. She removed it with a pair of scissors.

But whether or not she can bake, cook or sew, her mother is certain that Lois will make a good mother, for Lois has always had a wonderful way with pets and she intends to make pets of her children.

Lois even has a way with fish—and this is on the word of her oldest brother, Russell, now chief game warden of a couple of thousand square miles of wilderness north of Fairbanks, Alaska. A few years ago he, Lois, and Mr. and Mrs. Butler went trout fishing up around Grand Mesa, Colorado. Russell made Lois go sit by herself because she insisted on singing to the fish to take her hook, and singing, he assured her, would only scare them away. So Lois sang and got three fine trout on her line. Russell, a big game man from away back, got nothing. Ditto their father and mother. Today the whole family is convinced that Lois has special powers in her voice. Russell even thinks he has it all analyzed.

"You remember when Lois swallowed that grasshopper when she was a baby?" he once asked his mother. "She gagged on it and you tried to remove it. If I remember right, you got everything but the legs—that's what grasshoppers make their music with. And boy, do trout love grasshoppers!"

Whatever the secret of Lois' attraction may be, it undoubtedly exists—and not just for trout. She's going to lure untold millions of cash customers into the theaters in the next few years—customers who'll be going home delighted by a girl whose twinkling talents, before she ever came to the screen, were developed by the soundest kind of show-world training.

THE END

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ Garlands to Judy for her swell singing in Broadway Melody of 1938. This thirteen year old is certainly going places.—Modern Screen November 1937

Love is On The Air. This little number deserves mention for just one reason and that's Ronald Reagan, one of the newest finds for Warner Brothers. He has an engagingly wide grin and a nice manner.—Modern Screen January 1938

PETER AND THE WOLF

(Continued from page 49)

confusion and competition, it isn't quite enough to give a good performance on the screen (Pete's a swell actor)—you have to get the public talking about you. And if they talk about you as a wolf—well, that just means the conversation will be more widely engaged in.

They certainly talked about Lawford the Wolf during his Rita Hayworth episode! Rita had just left Orson Welles for the second or third time. She was big news then, as always. "I think she's wonderful," Pete sighed to me in the Metro café, glancing carelessly at the Hayworth headlines. "I'd give anything to meet her." "Why don't I say so in my column?" I replied. "Then Rita will read it, and—" "Oh, no!" Peter interrupted. "It might scare her off . . . She's so beautiful, so fascinating. . . ."

Came Sunday and a movie commentator's radio show. Almost in the same language given me by Pete, I heard of his mad crush on Hayworth and how he panted to meet her. When I saw him in the studio café the next day I chided him. "I thought you didn't want anyone to know?" "I didn't, I'm furious!" Pete exploded. "Now Rita will probably never speak to me!"

happy hovering . . .

But Pete wouldn't be where he is today if he gave up easily. A week later I was at the Sam Spiegel New Year's Eve party. Pete came in alone. Rita came in ditto. Mr. Lawford hovered happily around his objective. When I looked up the next time, they were dancing together, surrounded by a phalanx of photographers. They left together. For one beautiful week of popping flash-bulbs and an evening-by-evening accounting in the columns, Rita and Pete were said to be in love, and giving a very reasonable facsimile thereof. But when the news value was exhausted, so was the romance.

During Rita's early Aly Khan shenanigans, I asked Pete what he and Rita had found to talk about—for Rita isn't famous for her conversation. "She's interested in everything," he said enthusiastically, without telling me what.

Maybe I should have asked Rita what Pete talks about on a date—because that's one of the unravelled Hollywood mysteries. The same disgruntled starlet quoted earlier told me, "Peter, like all actors, talks only about himself." More girls who've been out with him tell me, "One or two dates and no more! He makes them feel they're lucky to be with him." She was probably exaggerating—but it wouldn't surprise me if there were some truth in what she said. A rather superior attitude toward women is an old British custom, because of the odd-million more women than men in England. (It used to be two million. That's one reason I left England to live in America!)

There's also a big shortage of attractive men in Hollywood. Maybe that's why movie-star wives who shed a husband, or beautiful girls who lose a beau and find themselves suddenly in a lonely manless world, are grateful to be taken to Romanoff's, Ciro's, The Players, La Rue's, and Mocambo by the very presentable Pete. . . .

Except Elizabeth Taylor! Shortly after her success in A Date With Judy, I heard that Liz had succumbed to Pete's dating charms. So when I saw Pete deep in conversation with her on the Metro lot, I waited until he walked away to ask, "Is it true what they say about Peter being a wolf?" "Definitely not," retorted Miss

Fels-Naptha Soap

THE ONE WASHDAY 'MIRACLE' THAT CAN BE EXPLAINED!

Women who use Fels-Naptha Soap see a 'miracle' of cleaning performed every washday. And they know how it's done:

This astounding laundry soap is produced by blending the two greatest cleaning agents known to science—gentle, active naptha and mild, golden soap. The formula for this blend is preserved where it was created—in the Fels laboratories.

Thus the gentle, thorough Fels-Naptha cleaning action is unique. It cannot be duplicated by any other soap—certainly not by any chemical soap substitute.

Dainty garments come out of your Fels-Naptha wash as sweet and fresh as a daisy—safe from strong chemical action. Badly soiled work clothes, grimy towels, infant diapers are washed stainlessly clean, without a trace of odor—even in your automatic washer.

Incredible? Not to the women who have tried Fels-Naptha Soap—because they want more than promises. Get Fels-Naptha for your first washday 'miracle' now . . . because you know what it will do . . . and why.

For your machine or automatic washer, get gentle, quick-cleaning, sneezeless Fels-Naptha Soap Chips.

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

She guards her glamour!

Safe-and-sure deodorant ends perspiration troubles!

1. ETIQUET actually ends under-arm perspiration odor—safely—surely!
2. ETIQUET—made by specially patented formula—really checks under-arm perspiration!
3. FLUFFY-LIGHT AND SOOTHING—Etiquet goes on easily—disappears in a jiffy! No gritty particles!
4. NO DAMAGE TO CLOTHING when you use Etiquet—famous cloth-test proves!
5. MORE ECONOMICAL TO BUY—Etiquet won't dry out in the jar! Four sizes, 10¢ to 59¢, plus tax.

Etiquet

THE SAFE-AND-SURE DEODORANT

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

that's hollywood!

"Live your life so that you'll be proud to have Don Ameche play it someday."
—Judy Canova.

"A fool and his money—is a good fellow to have around."
—Frank Morgan.

"America's best buy for a nickel is a telephone call to the right man."
—Ilka Chase.

Irving Hoffman
Hollywood Reporter

Taylor. Then she giggled, looking after Pete's retreating figure. "Don't you think he walks like a duck?" (Forgive Liz, Peter—she was only 15 at the time!)

Janet Leigh, who is not much older than Elizabeth, doesn't agree with her. Janet was all a-flutter when Pete called her immediately after her divorce from Stanley Reames—to give her the rhumba treatment at Mocambo.

Someone once tried to explain Peter to me by saying, "He's never grown up." That could be partly true—especially his intense hero-worship for men in the spotlight. Pete's long friendship for Van Johnson dates from the period of The Human Comedy, when Van catapulted to fame overnight in his bit role of soldier. After that, everywhere that Van would go, Peter was sure to be along. It was a very cosy quartet in those days, Van, Pete, Keenan, and Keenan's wife—as she was then—Evie. (It was fun for the photographers, too.) quick pupil . . .

Pete's attachment to Keenan predates his friendship with Van. It is based on gratitude. Keenan, one of nature's noblemen, runs an unofficial school of acting at Metro. When Pete signed a contract at the studio, Keenan coached him for his roles. Pete learned so fast that Keenan invited him to do a personal appearance with him and gave him such good routines that Pete snagged most of the applause. It wasn't true, by the way, that Keenan was miffed by his pupil's success, as reported elsewhere. He was pleased and Pete, bless him, was sore as all get-out over the nonsensical story.

(After the Keenan Wynn marriage, I heard a newspaperman crack, "Now who gets custody of Pete?" They were making the same little joke when Van Johnson married Keenan's first wife, Evie.)

The perennial Lawford little boy-big man crush is Frank Sinatra. It is very cute to see the way Pete tags along after Frankie—and the popular crooner is good for Pete, who copies him. Pete is inclined to be thoughtless and to brush past people he knows without bothering to say hello. I watched him make the omission the other day. He was talking to a girl and either didn't see his friends or couldn't be bothered. Then Frankie came in, gave out with large greetings for everyone. For the first time Pete looked up, saw Sinatra, saw his friends, and switched into general friendliness.

I had heard of the Hope diamond of course—but not much about Gloria MacLean until she came to Hollywood after her divorce from Ned MacLean, whose mother owned the famous jewel. But Pete knew about both. Someone told me that Gloria is the one girl that Lawford has ever really loved. I wonder.

It's true that since Gloria came here to divide her dates between Pete, and Jimmy Stewart, Lawford has not attached himself to any other girl for longer than it takes to take a photograph. But the whole business of going out with girls seems to be such a methodical card-indexed business with Pete, that should his heart ever really get involved, no one will believe it—and that should include the girl.

For instance, he seemed to be very much smitten with Lana Turner for a while. This was just preceding her short-lived romance with Tyrone Power. After that, Pete seemed even more deeply affected by the lady. He even had a public battle over her in a night club. But there were no regrets on either side when Lana dashed off to New York and Bob Topping.

Yet Pete does not put all of his publicity eggs into one basket. He can also get his name into the papers via non-romantic projects. As when Lucille Ball started her sponsored radio show and Pete, with his then unmarried pal Keenan, threw a huge party for what I was told would comprise all Lucille's most intimate friends. They should have added "friends of the press." Every man, woman and child who writes for the newspapers was invited to the party in Ciro's Ciro-ette room. A very professional time was enjoyed by all.

Until Greer Garson went around with Texas oil man Buddy Fogelson, his name was not news in Hollywood.. Now if he goes to a party, or buys a new car, or walks down the street, you read the fascinating fact. So I wasn't too surprised to learn that Pete is now a buddy of Buddy's. And Pete not only admires successful business men, he now wants to be one—and is forming a company with Fogelson to make cartridges.

Are you beginning to realize how cock-eyed is the still-current belief that Pete is a babe in the Hollywoods? It's high time to stop under-estimating this highly intelligent, very adult young man. Far from being merely a light-minded wolf, he's a genius—at reaping publicity from whatever social situation in which he carefully places himself. THE END

"No! No! You're dying, my good man, dying! Now try it again, and put some life into it!"

Lucille Ball

showed me how to hold a Man!

It was all over between us.

Gene hadn't phoned for ages! I was heartbroken until the night I read: "Rough hands embarrass a man," warns Lucille Ball. "Men like a woman's hands to look feminine... feel soft. Keep your hands smooth and romantic with Jergens Lotion—I do!"

I started Jergens-smoothing my hands that night!

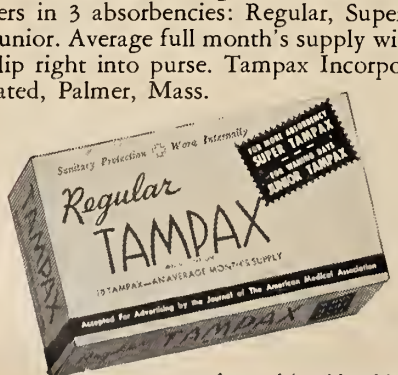
The next time I met Gene... my hands looked so soft and smooth. "So nice to hold," teased Gene (on our second dinner date in one week)! I know he meant it, too ...'cause now I'm wearing Gene's ring!

See how much softer, smoother, lovelier today's finer Jergens Lotion keeps your hands. Being a liquid, Jergens quickly furnishes the softening moisture thirsty skin needs. Leaves no stickiness! Still only 10¢ to $1.00 plus tax.

Hollywood Stars Use Jergens Lotion 7 to 1 Over Any Other Hand Care

Used by more Women than any other Hand Care in the World!

she wears Tampax



... that socially alert woman whose poise you have admired and perhaps envied

The secret of feminine poise is the knowledge that "everything is right"—seen or unseen. And on those critical days each month, Tampax can be a helpful contributor to that feeling of surety and confidence. For Tampax is "another kind" of monthly sanitary protection—neat, dainty and compact beyond the dreams of users of the older belt-and-pin type.

Invented by a doctor, Tampax is worn internally and is only one-ninth the bulk of the other. Made of pure surgical absorbent cotton, it comes in slender insertion-applicators, and the wearer does not feel it when in place. You needn't even remove it during a tub, a shower or a swim!

Be like millions of other modern girls and women—try Tampax. No pins or belts. No odor or chafing. No embarrassment at disposal time. Tampax can cause no ridge-lines under dresses, slacks or swim suits. Sold at drug and notion counters in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Average full month's supply will slip right into purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

GLORIA LAMPERT
director

BEV OTT
associate

Active members in the Glenn Vernon (Komenda) club are rewarded by a personal interview in their journal. Points are awarded to members on a basis of club activity and the clubber having the most points at the end of the year gets the write-up . . . Vera-Ellen club members have already received their membership cards, designed and donated by their star . . . The Mel Torme club and the Monty Clift club of Mt. Vernon have each found new ways to enlist new members. When Mel was making a personal appearance at the Paramount in New York, his club members gave out balloons with his name. Stunt was very eye-catching. Monty's club received permission from a local theater manager to place a poster advertising the club when Red River was shown. They received four new members each day . . .

Would you like to win a real Esther Williams swim-suit? Her club is running a raffle, proceeds to go to their adopted war orphan, and the prize is a swim-suit very much like the kind she wears in her movies . . . Lanny Rees, whom you'll soon see as Junior in The Life Of Riley, has an up-and-coming club headed by Bernard Jenkins of Washington, D. C. . . . The Ray Eberle Fan Club is starting a membership drive and the first 50 people who write to Rose Marie Stroeher will win a year's membership at 50c . . . Congratulations to the Ronald Reagan club members, soon celebrating their tenth anniversary . . . Ronald Farrington, who is president of the Washington Jack Smith fan club, received a cash award from Jack because his journal was named best in its league by the MFSCA . . . Louise Warnes is president of both the Richard Jaekel and Jim Brown fan clubs and is offering a reduced membership fee to the first 25 to write to her. The Alan Ladd fan club of Brooklyn is offering free memberships to the first 75 shut-ins who write to prexy Janet Miller.

Members in the Harlem area of New York would do well to join Chaplain Nat Harrington's group. They have literary and social get-togethers, outings to various radio programs. They have lots of fun and do good work, besides . . . Ideas, Inc. The Art Roberts-Ken Keese Club (soon to become an all-disc-jockey club) has a novel idea for its membership campaign—and credit for the plan goes to Betty Ricker. Betty has divided the members into groups of five, and each group works as a team. Naturally, team members live near each other, and work together. There's lots of competition among the groups, which makes the business of winning new fans for Art and Ken lots of fun. Nelda Clough, president of the Charles Korvin club, writes, "Another idea which many of our new members have remarked very favorably on, is my practice of sending each new member a copy of our two-page club dictionary. This is a mimeographed enclosure explaining all about the club and it's various activities; telling how our journal got its title, etc. This helps immeasurably in making the new member familiar with the club, and he feels that he can step right in and be active from the very beginning of his membership—instead of floundering around and wondering—what happens next, if anything. This dictionary stresses that our main purpose always, is to boost our star." We know it's very difficult to run a club with over 500 members, get out journals on time, and correspond with the various members. But we do think our League 1 clubs could be a bit more active. Month after month, we have no entries from League 1 clubs in various of our prize and point categories. Of course, we don't expect prexies to handle all the club work (and this applies to other clubs as well) so why not delegate jobs to active members of your clubs. Teamwork makes better clubs . . . Our Candid Camera Contest is beginning to feel neglected, so how about you camera fiends going to work and sending in some new entries? They can be snaps you took on your vacation this year, or a good picture of your neighbor's dog—just as long as it's interesting. Remember, in addition to winning valuable points for your club, you also win a personal prize for yourself.

Prizes: Ah, you lucky editors! Each of you is the winner of a lovely REVLON KING'S RANSOM SET. Each set, attractively boxed in black velvet, contains a gold lipstick holder and seven re-fills in luscious shades. THIS IS MY BEST winners receive a handsome, gaily colored ENGER-KRESS BILLFOLD. They have many compartments to take care of money, papers and snaps and are very durable. You club correspondents had better start writing us some newsy letters if you want to win a genuine ELGIN AMERICAN compact. We can tell you they're finished in jeweler's bronze and are perfectly lovely, but remember, seeing is believing. TANGEE TRIP KITS are the very special prize we're offering to club artists. They're filled with Tangee's special cosmetics and in order for art work to be eligible for a prize, it must appear in a club journal.

9th Semi-annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
4th lap

This Is My Best: (100 points) "Is It Supercolossal?", Anne Klucher, Bobby Breen Journal. "To An Actor," Margaret Woodworth, Anthony Quinn Journal. "Not Fans, but Friends," Gerrie Gruener, Joan Crawford Journal. "Hazy Holiday," Sally Hall, Al Jolson Journal. "Questioning Kerry," Elaine Homan, Gene Kelly Journal. "Friendship," Grace Fox, Nelson Eddy International Club. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. Jane Wyman Journal. League 2. tied. June Allyson Journal. New Stars Journal. League 3. Esther Williams Journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. Rita and Jo Mottola, Nelson Eddy Music Club. League 2. Elaine Homan, Gene Kelly Journal. League 3. Terry Di Francesco, Bing Crosby (Bingites) Journal. Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. Jane Wyman Journal. League 2. Burt Lancaster Journal. League 3. Gene Reynolds Journal. Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Mel Torme Club. League 3. Michael Kirby Club. Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. John Garfield Club (Donation to orphanage, books and cards to hospitals). League 2. Ronald Reagan Club ($100.00 to March of Dimes). League 3. Richard Walsh Club (3 packages to Germany). Best Artist: (150 points) Jeannette North, Vaughn Monroe Club (Yaggie). Candid Camera Contest: (100 points to first prize winner, 50 to others) Robert Breslin, Ella Raines Club. Helen Pollex, Rise Stevens Music Club. Ginger Bagnall, Jack Berch Club. Irene Ashcroft, Betty Grable Club. Frank Bellinger, Penny Edwards Club. Martha Kay, Alan Ladd Club (Kee). Best Correspondent: (50 points) League 1. Rita and Jo Mottola, Nelson Eddy Music Club. League 2. Ruth Schweitzer, Allan Jones Club. League 3. Nell Ambrose, Club Friendship. Leading Clubs So Far: League 1. Jane Wyman Club, 1550, Gene Autry Club 850. League 2. June Allyson Club, 1050. Joan Crawford Club, 1050. League 3. Charles Korvin Club 750. James Melton Club 700. Peggy Lee Club 650.

BABY FACE

(Continued from page 39)

old enough to smoke, his face still looked as if he'd yet to pass his first Boy Scout merit test. There was nothing to do about a situation like that. It doesn't pay to punch drugstore clerks in the nose. And even growing a moustache hadn't helped. He'd tried that, to the delight of all his friends, who kept telling him to go home and wash that smear off his lip.

So Bob walked out of the store without a smoke, as he'd done dozens of times before—and as he still would when, five years later, he'd wind up in Hollywood for his first movie job, playing Rosalind Russell's son in Roughly Speaking.

Now he can laugh about it. "That baby face gave me my start, and now I'm glad that I grew up a half dozen years before it did. Of course, in my first few pictures I was cast strictly from wholesome, but after Mother Wore Tights and Green Grass of Wyoming, along came my first real relief. They called me in and told me I was to be one of Gregory Peck's hard-boiled gang in Yellow Sky. Could I raise a beard?

"Could I raise a beard! I promised the healthiest beard the casting department ever saw. By gad, I'd show 'em—and I did! I startled them and myself when the darned beard came out red. But anyway, it was a genuine beard, even if it did have to be touched up a little."

as the girls go . . .

As for the romance department, Bob, at 23, no longer feels the slightest twinge of pain over the girls he lost when he was in his teens. Some of them are now married to buddies of his up around Aberdeen, Washington, and raising families.

What happens to Robert Arthur now when he gets on the telephone for a date? He gets the girl, of course. If anyone can name a couple of prettier, more exciting young ladies than Colleen Townsend or Betty Lynn, whom Bob has been dating regularly, he'd like to know about it.

That's not bragging. He just enjoys having put his inferiority complex aside for good. It isn't funny to grow up in a country where the population is 40 per cent lumberjack, where the men are thicker through the chest than the trees they chop down, and weigh an average of slightly over 200 pounds—whereas you, at 15, tip the scales for 118 pounds and are too frail to go out for football.

Anyone with a complex can look into Bob's life and take heart. One evening in his home in Aberdeen, he stared in the bathroom mirror and said to himself, "Boy—that's your face. You're stuck with it, so what are you going to do?"

He had to be tough, that's all. If he couldn't be rugged on the outside, he'd find that steel quality inside and let it shine through, in his voice and in the way he handled himself.

A couple of afternoons later, he had the big fight of his life. A buddy of his was walking home from school with him. The guy said, casually, "Looks like a good night for a toboggan party. How about it, Baby Face?"

For an answer, Bob grabbed his friend by the shoulder, swung him around and growled, "Square off!" They shed their jackets. Bob pasted a set of knuckles on his friend's chin. The boy got up and exclaimed, "What's that for?"

"For calling me something you're never going to call me again."

"Shucks, I didn't know you'd get sore. But if you want a fight, you'll get one."

To ADD fresh COLOR

and LUSTRE

to your hair after a shampoo or home permanent, use Lovalon

For you who do your hair at home, Lovalon is a must. It rinses gorgeous fresh color into your hair. Gives hair sparkling highlights, leaving it attractive, soft and manageable. Blends in yellow, grey streaks. Lovalon comes in 12 flattering shades. . . has none of the disadvantages of a dye . . . washes out with each shampoo. 10¢ and 25¢ at toilet goods counters everywhere. Try Lovalon—today.

LOVALON

—the Hair Beauty Rinse

ORDER BY MAIL

VICKI OF BOSTON MS-6
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Please send me_____Prs. Sandals @ 2.98

STYLE	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
BAREFOOT
THONG

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State_____
Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐
Send check or money order and we will pay postage. Customer agrees to pay postal charges on C. O. D.'s.

BAREFOOT VICKI of Boston

Send for FREE 1949 Catalog

Have you heard Modern Romances?

Everyone's talking about that new kind of daytime radio show—"Modern Romances". It's now being heard over American Broadcasting Company stations from coast-to-coast. The radio program "Modern Romances", like the magazine, is packed with exciting stories of real people in situations you yourself may face. "Modern Romances" is great listening—you're going to like it!

Tune in every morning Monday thru Friday on your local ABC station. Check your newspaper for scheduled time of "MODERN ROMANCES"

They fought, then, slugging it out on the icy road, slipping, falling down, getting up, knocking each other down. A half hour later they were still swinging. Neither could have killed a horsefly with a head-on punch by that time. At last, they both fell, exhausted. They had just enough strength left to reach over and shake hands.

After that, word got around among Bob's friends. No one ever again remarked about his amazingly youthful face. Among his friends, that is. And people Bob didn't know, he didn't care about.

After school, Bob worked in a supply store for lumberjacks. He had a few uncomfortable moments when these grizzled monuments would storm in, crash big fists down on the counter and yell for service.

"They'd hit town from camp with several weeks' pay and $100 to spend on new duds. It was my job to sell them as much stuff as I could. Then they'd go out and break up a few bars before going back to work.

heroic effort . . .

"While I was pulling out heavy shirts and boots I used to stand as tall as I could and say to myself, 'I'm tougher than you are, you big lug.' And in a heroic effort to give that impression—and in order to be heard over the customers—I'd roar when I talked out loud. Guess that's where I developed a deep voice."

He was deep-voiced for good now, a far cry from the boy soprano in the school choir. He had confidence in himself and he proved it by coming out on top in competition with 200 other young men in a series of auditions for a job as all-around announcer for Aberdeen's station KXRO.

Then he went to Seattle and took an exam for the Navy V-12 program. They enlisted him, and when he stood for the first time in a chow line being served by kindly lady helpers, one of them looked at him in dismay, then turned to her neighbor and exclaimed, "They have no business putting a mere child like that in a sailor suit!"

Bob laughed his deepest laugh. He's five feet nine inches tall and hard as nails. Until he was hospitalized and later discharged, he did fine with the Navy gang. Except for one little incident. He was living in a dorm on the Washington campus with a huge Navy veteran who was several inches over six feet tall. They had an argument about nothing. As a climax, Bob walked over to his buddy's locker, pulled everything out and scattered equipment all over the room.

The buddy watched this procedure in amazement. When Bob was through, Bob walked up to him, stuck up his chin and said, "What are you going to do about it?"

The guy reached out, grabbed Sailor Arthur at the collar in one huge fist. He lifted him up a foot so they could look eye to eye.

"What am I going to do about it? Why, you nervey little character—what can I do about it without killing you? Come on, kid, let's go to a show."

When the Navy days were over, Bob Senior had a long talk with Bob Junior. It was time now for son to follow in father's footsteps and go into the savings and loan business.

"I'm going to stick with radio," Bob declared. "And I'm heading for Hollywood."

"You're crazy, son," the father said. "But go ahead—and I'll stand back of you. If you don't make it, there's always room back here."

"I'll make it," Bob promised.

Oh, no, he wouldn't. Not in radio. The "baby face" was going to give him trouble again after all these years. Bob Arthaud, now Robert Arthur, arrived in Hollywood with his entire savings—$100 in travelers' checks. He registered at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel and went to dinner that night at the Brown Derby, just across the street. He saw Jack Benny, Alice Faye and Phil Harris. He also saw two dozen agents and radio announcers. He felt he could have talked with any one of them, but he kept a respectful distance. He was sure he'd know them all in a few months. He tipped the waiter a dollar, then went home to bed.

"Including the cost of my hotel room, I'd spent exactly $14 of my total stake. So I checked out the next morning and went looking for a rooming house. I found one a few blocks from CBS, across Hollywood Boulevard, right next door to Jimmie Fidler's office. My landlady, an ex-vaudevillian named Pearl Early, was very encouraging about my future in radio, so I set off with a letter of recommendation in my pocket, ready for work."

His first interview was a complete flop. An executive laughed when he applied for an announcer's job. "Why, you're much too young."

"Too young? Who's going to see me?"

"You're still too young for this town," was the reply. "But you do have excellent recommendations. . . . Say, how'd you like to start in sound effects?"

Bob knew the time had come to stand up for his reputation. "Nothing doing," he declared.

He went home to the boarding house and told Mrs. Early he was heading for Arizona. There was a station there that would give him a job.

"Why don't you try pictures?" she asked.

"Pictures? That's ridiculous. What do I have to offer?"

"Try it, anyway. Another day won't hurt. We'll check with my agent."

"This is against my better judgment," Bob insisted.

And exactly 12 days after he arrived in Hollywood to work in radio, he was on the payroll at Warners—playing one of Rosalind Russell's sons in Roughly Speaking. When the deal was signed, Bob called his father by long distance.

"Guess what, Dad!" he crowed. "I'm in pictures."

Bob Senior's reply was unbelieving in the extreme. "Look, son—if you're really ill you can come home."

What happened next was the complete reversal of all Bob's earlier experiences. He expected that on a movie sound stage

HOW TIME FLIES!

What is this thing called love? Tyrone Power kisses Janet Gaynor a fond goodbye as she sets forth for New York firmly believing she is the only girl in his life. Next day Sonja Henie arrives in Hollywood and Mr. P. is on hand to kiss her a fond hello. And Loretta Young, who gave up Director Eddie Sutherland for Tyrone, now goes with producer Joe Mankiewicz.—Modern Screen, January 1937 he'd be treated as a mere peasant in the presence of the glamorous Russell and the big-shot male star, Jack Carson. Instead, he hadn't been on the set half a day before Roz began talking to him. She found out that this was his first day in pictures and that he was nervous. In 10 minutes he was so at ease that he found himself telling her the story about failing to get a job as a radio announcer because he "looked too young."

Roz roared at that. "Why," says Bob, "she actually slapped me on the back and asked me to come and see the rushes."

Then, to top off the incredible day, she drove him home that night after work. "Shucks, I discovered that these people were just like the people back home, friendly and helpful."

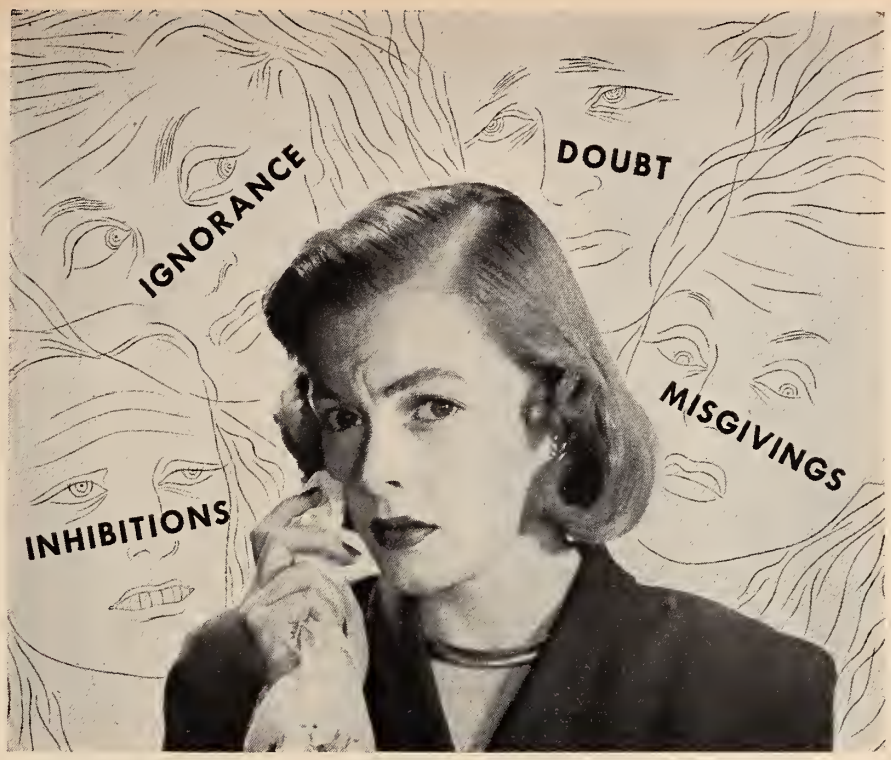
He discovered something else, too. That Hollywood can be as romantic as it looks. He began to go out with Wanda Hendrix. Nothing really serious, but they were both on the same lot and they had something in common. They wanted to play in Life With Father. They rehearsed together over sodas at a Toluca Lake drugstore. They made the test together. Everybody on the lot said it was fine. It was, but neither one of them won a part in the picture.

there to stay . . .

Then Bob's big bubble was broken. Studio production hit a slump and Bob's option wasn't picked up. "After Nora Prentiss, with Ann Sheridan, I was back on the town. I went into little theater work, then landed a part in Sweetheart of Sigma Chi at Monogram. After that came little theater work. By now I was a part of Hollywood and knew that nothing could ever make me leave."

After he signed his 20th Century contract and went to work in the Betty Grable picture, Mother Wore Tights, he went house-hunting. From experience with his dad in the savings and loan business, he knew how to negotiate a good buy.

After he finished a musical in which Colleen Townsend also worked, he had a new girl to date. "But I didn't want to jinx her," he smiles. "If Colleen and I had started to 'go steady,' she'd have been a cinch off my past record to be a bride in no time at all. I'm sort of kidding, of course. Anyway, Colleen introduced me to Betty Lynn. I'd been trying to meet her because she looked like a beautiful rag doll with red hair. She'll murder me for saying that, but I hope she'll keep on giving me dates—even though she has more admirers than any girl I ever knew."



There's the lurking suspicion that Bob rather likes his bachelor status. That's usually the case when an actor will freely admit how much he likes a girl. And this is true even though he's now sold his house in the canyon and is building his own dream house atop a high hill overlooking Brentwood.

"That's going to be some house," he declares. "It'll practically hang in space. At first there'll only be three rooms, supported by a single steel girder. Later on, when I'm ready and can afford it, I'm going to add rooms on the top and on the bottom. And, movies willing, that's where I'm going to stay until I'm an old man."

That's some time off. Bob Arthur is 15 years younger than the average big-time leading man of today—and he'll be stepping into that rank shortly. He really made a hit in Yellow Sky.

Of course, Gregory Peck is in the picture too, but is it Bob Arthur's fault that, in a new way, he has some of what Gregory has too much of?

No one has called Bob Arthur "Baby Face" for six years and three months now. And if someone should, he wouldn't mind. After all, it's the face he didn't like that put him where he is today. THE END

DO INHIBITIONS (Doubts) THREATEN MARRIED LOVE?

One small intimate physical neglect can rob a wife of her husband's love

YES, your married love is strong today. But married love can wither swiftly when a wife lets one small neglect stand in the way of full, normal romance.

And every wife invites that sadness . . . if she neglects effective feminine hygiene, like regular vaginal douches with reliable "Lysol". . . complete hygienic protection that assures dainty allure. This is perhaps the easiest way to make a wife confident of her daintiness . . . banishing the unsureness that can separate loving mates.

Germs destroyed swiftly

"Lysol" has amazing, proved power to kill germ-life on contact . . . truly cleanses the vaginal canal even in the presence of mucous matter. Thus "Lysol" acts in a way that makeshifts like soap, salt or soda never can.

Appealing daintiness is assured, because the very source of objectionable odors is eliminated.

Use whenever needed!

Yet gentle, non-caustic "Lysol" will not harm delicate tissue. Simple directions give correct douching solution. Many doctors advise their patients to douche regularly with "Lysol" brand disinfectant, just to insure daintiness alone, and to use it as often as they need it. No greasy aftereffect.

Three times as many women use "Lysol" for intimate feminine hygiene as any other liquid preparation! No other is more reliable. You, too, can rely on "Lysol" to help protect your married happiness . . . keep you desirable!

For complete Feminine Hygiene rely on . . .

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A Concentrated Germ-Killer

Product of Lehn & Fink

NEW!...FEMININE HYGIENE FACTS!

FREE! New booklet of information by leading gynecological authority. Mail coupon to Lehn & Fink, 192 Bloomfield Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

D.M.-496

alone...

because she doesn't know

LOVE can be lost... romance ruined if you offend with perspiration odor. So stop it before it starts!

DRYAD — Jergens new kind of deodorant actually stops the decaying action of bacteria... the chief cause of embarrassing perspiration odor... before it starts!

Its complete deodorizing action keeps you sweet to love and adore.

APPROVED by leading skin specialists. Harmless to clothes.

SMOOTH as face cream as long as it lasts. 10¢, 29¢, 59¢.

Dryad

stops perspiration odor

before it starts

Jergens New Kind of Deodorant

Peace At Last From PERSISTENT ITCH!

No wonder thousands teased by itchy torment bless the day they changed to Resinol. Here's quick action from first moment — a blissful sense of peace that lasts and lasts, thanks to 6 active soothing agents in a lanolin base that stays on. Don't be content with anything less effective than Resinol Ointment.

HAPPY HUNTING

(Continued from page 46)

campaign." His Napoleonic brain was working swiftly. "You kids do the talking; I'll do the grabbing. All we've got to do is get in backstage and catch one of the girls as she comes by."

"First we've got to get in," said Marilyn, practically.

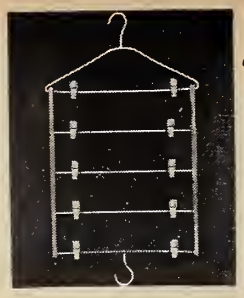
"That's going to be easy," put in Bill Williams. "Once I had a job as a dancer there, and I still know the doorman. Maybe I'd better do the talking."

So they linked arms and crossed Sunset Boulevard from the Palladium to the back door of Earl Carroll's restaurant. In a matter of minutes, Bill was patting the doorman on the back and edging his teammates in backstage.

Some of the chorines were carrying their skimpy, beaded costumes, some were already dressed. A. C.'s eyes darted hither and yon. He spotted two lighty-clad dancers hurrying past with pink and white feathers swaying temptingly from their hips. The gang moved forward simultaneously. They introduced themselves and then maneuvered the girls up against a rack of costumes at the back of the stage. Bill Williams evoked old memories of the time he was one of Stuart Morgan's dancers, and the girls were soon eagerly re-hashing the old days. Diana Mooney in the white feathers, and Winona Smith, in pink, were deep in chatter of "Remember the time when" as A. C., half hidden by the hanging costumes on the rack, reached out a hesitant hand and plucked a plume from Diana's waist. At the same time, Barbara fleeced a feather from Winona. Of course, the chorines felt their feathers jerking from them, and turned indignantly on the thieves. "Hey!" they chorused. "What's going on?"

fine feathered friends . . .



Their ruffled plumes and feelings were smoothed down as Marilyn and Barbara explained. Marilyn had broken their egg. If they didn't stand a chance to win the scavenger hunt, they could at least come back with something pretty important—like the feathers, for instance.

Winona and Diana were won over. But, they warned, the next team that came around collecting feathers would find them all out of spares. There just wasn't one single feather that could possibly be spared from their scanty costumes. This last remark delighted everyone on Team 2. It meant Teams 1 and 3 wouldn't get any ostrich plumes. Bidding farewell to their feathered friends, they dashed off to get a potted palm from the front porch of columnist Ivy Wilson, a pal of A. C.'s.

While all this was going on, Team 1, composed of Mona and Diana and their husbands, was busy piling its collected loot in the back of Pat's Ford station wagon. They'd been down to the beach, where Diana had won a huge pale blue china pig by throwing darts—three dollars' worth. They'd dropped in at the King's restaurant, where proprietor George Distel had escorted them back to the gleaming kitchen to receive a live lobster from the willing hands of his chef. And Mona's mother had dragged out a hobby horse that she'd been keeping for Mona's two-year-old infant.

Next stop was Hedda Hopper's house, to ask for one of her hats. When they rang the doorbell at 11 o'clock, Hedda had just got home, and had slipped into her red and gray hostess gown. She opened the door herself, a stately figure in her beautifully-appointed hallway.

If Hedda was surprised, she didn't raise

SHORT OF CLOSET SPACE?

Solve your Skirt-hanging problem with the new HANDI-HANG

• ALSO CAN BE USED AS A DRYING RACK IN BATH OR BEDROOM.

PLATED CROSS BARS • GENUINE DOUGLAS FIR FRAMES • DURABLE PLASTIC CLIPS — Compact, sturdy Handi-Hang keeps your skirts in perfect press, takes up only as much room as one ordinary hanger. When you wash, just turn Handi-Hang on its side, and suspend from the end hooks. Holds 5 articles of clothing. Here's a valuable household help for every girl and woman keeping house in small quarters. Only $2.50, including postage. No C. O. D. orders accepted

ETT-BARR CO. BOX 401-D PASADENA 18 CALIFORNIA

E & J Folding WHEEL CHAIRS

LIGHTEST and STRONGEST

FOLDS TO 10 INCHES

Ideal for TRAVEL, WORK, PLAY

Lightweight...Beautifully Designed Chromium Plated

EVEREST & JENNINGS Dept. 66

761 N. Highland Ave., Los Angeles 38, Calif.

PERFECT FOR HOME WAVES

And all your cosmetic uses. Dispenses clean cotton as you need it — special top holds wave lotion. New, practical, inexpensive.

COTTON PICKER ®

Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton

A CURITY Product

BAUER & BLACK

Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

MATERNITY DRESSES WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

SUMMER STYLES

Smart, youthful styles for morning, street, afternoon, sports, or formal wear. Also maternity corsets and Lingerie.

Crawford's, Dept. 61, 729 Baltimore Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. T-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

a patrician eyebrow. Instead, she stretched out a hand in welcome and ushered them into her living-room. There the gang told her what they'd come for. One of her fanciest hats, if she didn't mind. Miss Hopper swept off to her hat closet and obligingly brought forth an armful of her famous bonnets.

Hedda placed her hats on the living-room floor. They made splashes of bright color and odd shapes against her elegant gray carpet. One was a twist of purple velvet with a bird-of-paradise feather. Another was a cartwheel of black and white ospreys, another a circle of delicate gray fox fur. The kids couldn't make up their minds which to take, though the girls tried them all on, and Pat even made the blue pig model a hat.

Finally, all but Mona settled on a gigantic green felt pagoda tastefully decorated with miniature lamb chops. This gay number, Hedda explained, had been presented to her by Nancy and Frank Harmon of the famed Shangri-la restaurant in Chicago. But Mona held out for a speckled feathered pyramid. Hedda let them take both.

Hedda waved them on their way with a scented handkerchief and a tolerant smile. For Team 1, the evening's loot was as complete as they could make it. Mona was anxious to get back to check on the refreshment situation, for, as hostess, she had that little problem in addition to loot-collecting. So they called it a night.

But Team 3—composed of Mary and Terry, Jerome and Tony—was still hard at work. They were going to get raindrops, next. . . .

At the Seven Seas restaurant, the rain-on-the-roof had just started its downpour. This is a nightly feature much appreciated by the folks at the bar who, sipping tropical concoctions of rum and fruit juice, can stare at the artificial backdrop of thatched roof and waving palms, and imagine they're on some remote Somerset Maugham isle, waiting for Sadie Thompson. Tonight, as the raindrops thundered down in a satisfying deluge, an elderly gent at the bar sputtered into his drink at the sight of a lovely redhead dashing to the backdrop to start catching raindrops in what appeared to be a cream bottle. He summoned the bartender, who was deep in conversation with three other young people. They were obviously discussing what the redhead was doing.

"Well," said the elderly gent. "What is she doing?"

The bartender shrugged. "She's catchin' raindrops. For a party. That answer your question?"

"Whoever heard of taking artificial raindrops to a party?" the gent inquired indignantly. "Somebody ought to report the whole thing. This would never happen in New York. Never!"

"Maybe not, but this is Hollywood," grinned the bartender. He flapped a fat hand in salute as Mary carried her raindrops reverently from the restaurant.

"One trout from the Sportsman's Lodge trout stream," Mary muttered as she crossed raindrops off her list. That was their next project—at this Valley restaurant, guests are invited to fish for their own dinners in the establishment's renowned trout stream. Here, Terry and Mary, Jerome and Tony baited their hooks with liverwurst and cast their lines. It didn't take long to catch a satisfactory trout.

he got my goat . . .

Meanwhile, Barbara and Bill Williams were off in the country, galloping gaily in hot pursuit of a black goat. The fact that the night was inky-dark and so was the goat, didn't help matters. But the goat's mother was pure white, and acted like a beacon as they chased her progeny round a haystack in the San Fernando Valley. Egged on by the cheers of A. C. and Marilyn, Bill made a flying tackle, and came down with the bleating black kid in his arms.

All this happened on the ranch of cartoonist Dick Shaw, with the team promising to return the tiny kicking creature in the morning. As they struggled to get it into the car, Barbara glanced at her watch. "We'll have to step on it, Bill. We've just got time to get back before midnight."

They whizzed down the highway—and just as they turned onto Sunset Boulevard and Laurel Canyon, they found themselves racing neck and neck with Team 3.

Bill rolled down his window and yelled to Jerome Courtland, "Did you get everything?" Jerome yelled back, "No, but we got the fish and the raindrops—and other stuff." A. C.'s car came up next. "We got the goat!" yelled A. C. "And the Carroll Girls' feathers." He waved the plumage happily out the window.

Later that night, in Mona's living room, the props were counted and checked off. Team 2 was hailed as Winner—getting the goat being considered the most difficult feat of all.

Now the happy hunters settled down to heaps of fried chicken and hot biscuits, accompanied by gallons of coffee. Drumsticks in hand, they talked over the night's experiences.

Jerry told how she and Mary had helped the boys drag a doghouse off a neighbor's lawn. And how incredibly heavy a stone duck can be when you're racing against time to get the cement creature off your best friend's front grass. And how they'd had Carmen Cavallero sign their egg while he was dining at the Sportsman's Lodge.

Mary Hatcher, seated astride the hobby horse, had a brilliant idea. "Hey, let's do it all over again, next week, hummm? We could start at my house. And some of the things we could look for would be—let's see—hair from a hairless Chihuahua dog —key from the Roosevelt Hotel linen closet—and Alan Ladd!"

There was dead silence from the munching hunters. They just looked at her. Then Mona leaned over, and clapped Hedda's pagoda hat on Mary's head.

"That'll be enough out of you," she said.

Yep, scavenger hunts are lots of fun, but one a year is enough. And that's a sentiment heartily endorsed by this particular host and hostess, who, stuck with the props, now had to figure out graceful means of getting them back to their original owners. THE END

Those BAD DAYS CAN BE GOOD DAYS

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL PERIODIC PAIN

CRAMPS-HEADACHE-"BLUES"

MOTHERS: 24-page book, "What Women Want to Know", explains menstruation. Sent Free in plain wrapper. Write: Room 2603, Dept. C-69, 1450 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

And no wonder! KARE, the new "wonder" deodorant, keeps you bath-sweet. So nice to use—a satin-smooth lotion! So different from creams and liquids—not greasy or messy! Start now to use KARE, an amazing improvement in underarm deodorants—the one that . . .

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration harmlessly
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢*, at drug and department stores. *Plus tax one second's and you're carefree!

The Grave Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW! ORDER BY MAIL 15 EXOTIC COLORS

SIZES: 1 to 12 narrow, med. wide

Pat. Pend.

Actual Photo

Velvety Red, Green, Black, Navy, White, Grey, Purple, Beige, Taupe, Yellow, Gold, Silver, Bronze, Balenciaga, Copper.

GRECIAN THONGS with PLATFORM

- Built In Air Lift Arch
- Wedge Heel, Removable Straps
- Crepe Sole

Never before offered at a price so low! Fit Guaranteed! Money-back guarantee!

ONLY 2.95

COLLEEN ENTERPRISES, Haverhill, Mass.

Rush me prs. Grecian Thongs @ 2.95 ea.
SIZE..... WIDTH..... COLOR.....
2nd Color Choice .....
NAME .....
STREET .....
CITY..... ZONE..... STATE.....
☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D.

MAKE WAY FOR YOUTH

(Continued from page 54)

the Lucretia Borgia story with Paulette Goddard, Bride of Vengeance. When he walked out on the part, in stepped a pretty important threat to Milland's place at Paramount: John Lund.

There isn't a bright and forceful young actor anywhere around with as divine a disposition as John's. He gets along with everyone. Dietrich and even the unpredictable Jean Arthur loved making A Foreign Affair with him. He gives every part he plays everything he's got. He owns a sense of humor that twinkles like the star he's bound to be. He's modest, happily married, perfectly adjusted and sunny.

And Ray—well, he gets out of Hollywood every chance he has, and his fumings have brewed trouble with his attractive wife, Mal, several times, although they're working out their marriage right now. On the screen these days, Ray, for all his matchless charm, not only has the handicap of maturity, but a wooden indifference you simply can't miss. Ray may wind up handing over his position on the Paramount pedestal to John Lund.

It wasn't all a cozy coincidence that MGM imported young Deborah Kerr to Hollywood at the very time that the studio's "First Lady," Greer Garson, was getting hard to handle. Greer minted money with straight aces for Leo's lair, and then she started telling her bosses what she would and wouldn't do. So they brought a new hand into the poker game—red-headed, like Greer, English, like Greer—and the first job given her was with Clark Gable, the very star who figured in Greer's bumps-a-daisy, Adventure—which Greer herself insisted on doing, despite the pleadings of almost everyone at MGM, who knew the part wasn't for her.

Well, Deborah didn't do much better, I'm afraid, with Clark in The Hucksters than Greer had done with him in Adventure. If Winter Comes clinched MGM's disappointment in Deborah, who had rated on her arrival the biggest press fanfare with which I've ever seen any Redcoat march into our town. I'm happy to report that her latest, Edward, My Son, pleases everybody—so the Big Plans are back again for Deborah Kerr.

I doubt very much if she'd ever have had that grand entrance to Hollywood fame and fortune if Greer Garson hadn't bulled through her desire to co-star with Clark Gable in his first post-war picture. Gable needed a lusty, slam-bang American girl for Adventure—and he got an English lady acting too darned cute. Well, Greer got her urge for slapstick cured in that and in Julia Misbehaves. Now she's back playing what suits her, what made her famous—a "lydie," proper, mature and growing gracefully old—in The Forsyte Saga, with about two dozen changes of costume and four or five leading men. But, in my opinion, it was Deborah Kerr's entrance at MGM that said "wh-o-o-a" to Greer's high horse.

Last year, Bette Davis was way up in the top bracket of Hollywood wage-earners. Last year she came back after a year off the screen to have her baby. Yet last year, too, in stepped 23-year-old Patricia Neal, to divide honors as the fair-haired dramatic actress at Warners with Jane Wyman, whom everybody had been taking for granted for years and years—everybody except Jane, that is.

After her fine work in John Loves Mary, Pat Neal was given the part in The Fountainhead that Barbara Stanwyck had had her heart set on. And the reason for the switch was purely a matter of years: The character Barbara wanted to play was 22.

I'm a firm fan of Bette Davis and Barbara Stanwyck and I'm very, very fond of them. They're both stacked with courage and greatness and they've written Hollywood history. Barbara, an Academy Award nominee this year, is still solid at the box-office. And though Bette, after taking time off to have her baby, made a sizable mistake in her comeback picture, Winter Meeting, she rallied well enough in June Bride with Bob Montgomery. She'll have Joe Cotten with her next, in Beyond the Forest. So Bette, while she may no longer be the spotlighted romantic-dramatic studio monarch she was for years, is still a mighty luminary in the movie skies.

Patricia Neal is younger, prettier and, though she may not yet be in Bette's league, is one heck of an actress. She's a quality girl with a sound acting background. (She bagged five different awards for her Broadway work in Another Part of the Forest.) She's serious and dedicated and untempted by Hollywood's fleshpots. After making The Fountainhead with Pat, Gary Cooper told me, "Hedda, she can't miss. She's going to be a great star"—and I think Gary ought to know about such things by now. When Pat Neal returns from making The Hasty Heart in London, she'll start dividing the casting plums at Warners with Jane Wyman.

But if it hadn't been for Pat Neal or Jane, Bette would have lost out to somebody else. And she's smart enough to know it. Time, as they say, marches on.

Special offer to our readers

The 1948-49 edition of MODERN SCREEN's exclusive "Super-Star Information Chart" is something no real fan should be without. It's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of over 500 of your favorite stars—complete with birthdates, hobbies, real names, recent pictures and inside facts. To obtain your copy, send 10¢ in coin, plus a large self-addressed, stamped (3¢), envelope to Service Department, MODERN SCREEN, P. O. Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y. Send soon!

Of course, as there is in Stanwyck and Davis, there's plenty of life left in some of the other senior boys and girls. For instance, when Judy Garland's jangled nerves, which cost MGM a pretty penny throughout The Pirate, acted up again and she couldn't pull herself together to meet rehearsals for The Barkleys of Broadway, who took over? Ginger Rogers, a standard Hollywood star when Judy was playing paper dolls. And before that, who stepped in to save the day in Easter Parade, when young Gene Kelly broke his ankle? Fred Astaire, who'd previously announced his retirement. Thus, a box-office team that was Hollywood's pride a dozen years ago is again aces in pictures, and will be for quite a spell now.

Competition is the crucible that makes a Hollywood star glow hot and bright—and if young Jane Russell can crowd out Dottie Lamour to pep up Bob Hope's antics with new and diverting feminine charm, then I'm getting Russell-conscious right now—as who isn't? (In this case, Dottie doesn't much care—she's had a yen to be more dramatic than decorative for a long time.)

the old master . . .

There's only one way for a veteran to meet the recurring rookie challenge—that's to work harder and better.

I think the way Bing Crosby rolled with Frank Sinatra's young punch is the most graceful maneuver Hollywood maturity ever made when confronted by youth's cocky come-up. When the bobby-soxers screamed Frankie to hysterical fame, people shook their heads and sighed, "Poor Bing." But Crosby didn't waste one second feeling sorry for himself. Instead of bucking Frankie, he embraced him.

I saw the first air show on which Bing and Frankie shared the spotlight. Bing tossed all the gags Frank's way, smothered him with praise, boosted his stock, put out the biggest "Welcome" mat he had. Then he proceeded to prove he could still sing rings around Sinatra. In fact, Frankie's challenge to the Old Master started a good guy, who was getting soft, to fulfilling his true great promise.

When Bob Hope first heard Frank sing in New York—before Frank ever hit Hollywood—Bob leaped for a long-distance phone and got Bing out of bed, 'way past midnight.

"Say, Bright Eyes," needled Bob, "I've just heard a kid here who's going to come to Hollywood and make you go back to work." And you know what Bing, woolly-headed with sleep as he was, replied?

"Bring him along," he said. "I'm getting too fat and lazy, anyway."

You'll have a hard time convincing me that Bing Crosby's amazing bow as a distinguished actor in Going My Way and The Bells of St. Mary's didn't have its start right there.

Every time a star drops his guard in this town, there's a challenger handy to sock his way through the opening. The stakes are high and the competition fierce, as they always have been in the city that movies made.

I'm not using that prize-ring lingo idly, because there are a couple of young scrappers climbing through the ropes right now who figure to make things uncomfortably hot for the hard guys, the way they're going. I mean John Derek and Kirk Douglas.

It was Hollywood's ranking hard guy himself, Humphrey Bogart, who gave John Derek his break in Knock on Any Door. But it must have wrung a twisted smile from Bogey to see Derek collect all the critics' raves when the picture opened in New York.

Bogey first ran into John Derek during

ARE YOU, TOO, RUINING YOUR MARRIED HAPPINESS

... because you don't know

If only you'd learn these INTIMATE PHYSICAL FACTS you can trust!

Have you noticed that nice husband of yours staying out more often with the boys? Or, if he does remain at home, do you notice an indifference—almost a resentment on his part? Now 'fess up! Didn't it ever occur to you that the wife herself is often the guilty one?

If only young wives would realize how necessary vaginal douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm and married happiness—to combat offensive vaginal odor. If only wives would learn why they should always use ZONITE in their douche!

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

Scientists tested every known antiseptic-germicide they could find on sale for the douche. And NO OTHER type proved SO POWERFUL yet so safe to delicate tissues as ZONITE. So why continue to use weak or dangerous products? ZONITE is truly a miracle! The first non-poisonous antiseptic-germicide principle in the world that could kill bacteria without harming delicate tissues. ZONITE is positively non-irritating, non-burning. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without the slightest risk of injury.

Zonite's Mirocle-Action

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances, leaving you feeling so clean—so refreshed. Helps guard against infection. It immediately kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can FEEL CONFIDENT that ZONITE does kill every reachable germ. A blessing to womankind! All drugstores.

Zonite FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-69, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

GLAMOROUS GIRLS have lovely skin

You don't need perfect features to be beautiful . . . a smooth, soft, glowing skin adds charm and warmth to any personality. Let Stillman's Freckle Cream do for you what it has done for countless other girls . . . its gentle bleaching action beautifies and softens the skin, giving it a youthful appearance. Economically priced. On sale wherever toiletries are sold. Write today to The Stillman Co., Box 2, Aurora, Illinois, for "The Joy of New Personal Charm."

Stillman's FRECKLE CREAM 50¢

KOPAL PAINTS ON!
DINGY TEETH
LOOK RADIANT
WHITE
"Be proud and happy to smile"

Before KOPAL... 3 minutes later... After KOPAL

This is a wonderful fact! Now, no matter how blemished your teeth may be—no matter how dull or dingy—in just 3 minutes you can be proud and happy to smile! Yes, Kopal magically covers tooth surfaces—even gold fillings—with the pearl-like luster of movie star smiles. Yes, Kopal is the amazing new cosmetic enamel for the teeth that beauty editors rave about and grateful users call a miracle of natural-appearing beauty. Try Kopal for the thrill of your life!

Paints on like nail polish—harmless

A dentist's formula—Kopal is absolutely harmless, tasteless. Goes on easier, quicker than nail polish. Easily wiped off with Kopal Remover. Unaffected by eating, mouth acids, cocktails. SEND NO MONEY. Radiant results guaranteed! Just send name and address on postcard. When Kopal Kit arrives, pay postman $3 plus C.O.D. postage. Or send $3 with order and save postage. Price includes Fed. tax. Money back if not thrilled. Winters & Company, Dept. 32, 1 E. 42 St., New York 17.

KOPAL KIT contains Saf-Enamel
Art brush
Applicator
Remover
Directions
plus Free Consultation

MOUTH Frostie Winters COSMETICS

the war when that baby-faced husky was stationed at the Army's Desert Training Center down below Palm Springs. Bogey was on location near there, making Casablanca. He liked this young soldier who told him about his acting dreams.

"If I can ever give you a hand, let me know," Humphrey offered, and he wasn't just talking.

After John Derek fought through the war as a paratrooper, he came right back to Hollywood. He was signed and dropped by 20th Century-Fox without a look at a camera. The minute he was dropped, Bogey caught him for Knock. John's made All the King's Men since, and he'll be starred in his third picture, The Hero. Soon he'll be knocking loud on Humphrey Bogart's door.

Now look at Kirk Douglas. After Champion, Kirk could have signed a long-term starring contract at important money with any studio in town. The offer he liked came from Warners—and he's just signed on there for seven years. The Warners, who now have under their canny wings some of the best young talent in Hollywood, have something really terrific in Kirk. He's loaded with masculinity, sex appeal, menace and strength. Kirk was an intercollegiate wrestling champ at St. Lawrence University and he's all man. He can also act, as he's proved in six or seven pictures before Champion—including Out of the Past and I Walk Alone. He's dynamic, a young man who knows where he's going. His first Warner film will be Young Man with a Horn, in which he'll share billing with Doris Day and Lauren Bacall.

Stack young Kirk or John Derek up against Jimmy Cagney, back home again and comfortable in rugged roles at Warners. Jimmy's making White Heat, playing the same kind of toughie part that made him a star in Public Enemy years ago. But that was just that—years ago. Cagney's a grand gentleman and nobody wants to snatch any of his laurels away from him. Yet, if he's planning on heading the hard-guy list again, I'm afraid he's going to be surprised by the rough competition he'll get from young knuckle-dusters like Derek and Douglas.

You can't call Jeanne Crain a brand-new newcomer, but still she's young enough to have that divine discontent and the confident, "Put me in, coach" urge of youth. Jeanne has packed a few brief seasons with hay-making hits. Margie and Apartment For Peggy alone will keep the bosses of 20th Century-Fox in new Cadillacs for some time to come. And so Jeanne, doing the sweet-little-girl jobs in Zanuckland, has just gently plopped Gene Tierney down from her satin seat on top of the Fox lady-star heap.

Gene, who's a veteran at 28, was Darryl's pet young dramatic actress for seven years. Now they're hailing a new stand-out star at 20th—and she is, of course, 23-year-old Jeanne. Miss C. is set for Pinky, the red-hot controversial treatment of the color problem that Darryl Zanuck is tackling as his prestige-picture follow-up to Gentleman's Agreement and The Snake Pit.

Gordon MacRae, young and eager, with a heavenly baritone and dying to deliver, works for Warner Brothers. So does Dennis Morgan. Dennis is a big star; Gordon MacRae isn't—yet. And the contrast between their attitudes has been striking.

For a time, Dennis Morgan was sitting back on a contract he signed a couple of years ago. It gave him all the money and security he needed, time off for hunting and fishing and just lazing around his mountainside mansion. Denny, who'd formerly liked to work, began to duck and dodge it. He was getting uncooperative about the necessary annoyances of a star's existence—publicity pictures, interviews, extra-curricular appearances. No youngster, he was coasting on the reputation which began brilliantly with Kitty Foyle. And in spite of his fat weekly check and his still voluminous fan mail, Dennis, I regret to say, seemed dangerously close to a slide downhill.

But recently, Dennis seems to have seen a great light. And he's been given important co-starring assignments with Jane Wyman (The Octopus and Mrs. Smith) and Ginger Rogers (Perfect Strangers).

That young, ambitious, talented, friend-making guy I mentioned a minute ago, Gordon MacRae—who's being voice-coached by John Charles Thomas, no less—is sure of being a big hit with June Haver in Look for the Silver Lining. If Dennis Morgan hadn't snapped out of his unfortunate lethargy, who do you think would have been getting the romantic singing plums at Warners—indifferent Dennis, or this boy with the zing in his sing who's been saying, "Move over, mister," and meaning it?

The pressure in Hollywood is always from below, and when the stars totter on their pinnacles there's always somebody around poised to climb aboard in their stead. Somebody young, eager, ambitious and talented. Youth must be served. And nowadays in Hollywood, it certainly is.

THE END

SHE NEVER LEFT HOME

(Continued from page 35)

upbringing remained unshaken. She'd always managed her boy friends with complete aplomb. For that matter, she'd never been too interested in fellows anyway, because Jean was always ambitious for a career for herself. Until she was 18, she'd never "gone steady" with anyone. And when, for a short while, she finally decided to do so, she picked three friends simultaneously. Furthermore, her dates were planned in advance to the last detail, in a very businesslike manner. Like the time that Johnnie, a neighbor's boy, phoned her for a Saturday night date.

"I'd love to," Jean said, "if we'll go to a movie. . . ."

"Sounds swell," Johnnie had agreed.

"And see Tyrone Power in Crash Dive," Jean went on.

"O.K.," said Johnnie.

"And," my daughter insisted, "if I can have an ice-cream soda afterwards."

Johnnie graciously consented on all counts.

"A chocolate ice cream soda with whipped cream and a cherry on top of it," Jean added, sounding very final.

"Sure, sure," Johnnie had conceded. He knew that Peters girl. When you made a date with her, you had to agree in advance to detailed plans for the whole evening. And no deviations would ever be allowed by her.

So, as far as men were concerned I felt positive Hollywood wouldn't change Jean. But there were other fears about Hollywood. "When you're an actress," people told me, "you keep on saying lines from scripts until after a while, you act both on and off the screen, and completely lose your own personality."

Smilingly, I recalled the first time Jean

SEND ONLY $1 for Any Item

Balance in easy payments.

Your Money Back if Not Satisfied.

Immediate Delivery

J3

3-genuine-diamond engagement ring and 3-genuine-diamond wedding ring. 14Kt. Gold. Perfectly matched in attractive gift box. Both for $29.95 tax incl. 3 diamond ring only $22.95.

MEN'S WRIST WATCH

J2

Nationally advertised watch with written guarantee. Latest model in luxurious gift box. $24.95 tax incl. Ladies' Watches at same price.

J4

Bargain of the Month. 14Kt. gold engraved wedding band. White or yellow. Sale price $4.98 tax incl. while they last.

J6

Beautiful gold filled Carmen stretch bracelet to enhance her wrist and win her heart. Attractively Boxed. $7.95 tax incl.

Send for Big FREE 48 page Catalog. Full line Genuine Diamond Rings. Nationally Known Watches. Lowest Prices. Best Terms Guaranteed.
HOW TO ORDER: Send only $1. Balance in Easy Payments. State age, occupation. No extra charge. No red tape. Orders filled promptly. ORDER TODAY.

ATLAS JEWELERS, Inc.
Dept. M-3, 225 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.

is a Pimple-Free Face worth $2.00 to You?

At last! You can do something to really help rid your face of pimples and regain your natural, lovely complexion. Pleasant-to-use JOT is the same new compound used by leading skin specialists for treating acne. What a thrill to see ugly pimples disappear! Send $2.00 for 2-oz. jar and free diet and cleansing instructions.

Must please you or your money back!

ACT NOW! WRITE TODAY!

GALEN LABORATORIES
Dept. 7 P.O. Box 1 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Lovely NAILS in A FLASH... with

NU-NAILS

ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS and

QUICK-DRYING GLUE

Cover short, broken, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy with our amazing new quick-drying glue. Can be worn any length ... polished any shade. Help overcome nail-biting habit. Set of ten ... only 25c. At all dime stores.

ONLY 25¢ SET OF TEN

NU-NAILS CO., Dept. 15-G
5251 W. Harrison, Chicago 44.

AMAZING CREAM REMOVES UNSIGHTLY HAIR QUICKLY, SAFELY

Acts Below "Razor Line" Without Cutting or Scraping Legs

The modern way to remove ugly hair from your legs is with Neet® Cream Depilatory. It works deeper than a razor, below the surface of the skin. Safer too from razor cuts and scratches. Neet leaves tender skin soft and smooth, free from razor stubble. Just apply Neet like any cream, then rinse off and hair disappears like magic.

had "lost" her own personality. She'd been eight then. It was a Friday morning, and I had told her to clean up her room. But even at eight, Jean couldn't be occupied doing just mechanical work, her mind had to accomplish something too.

She always did a good job of cleaning her room, but she always found ways to get in at least a few minutes of reading while doing it. She had books hidden everywhere throughout her room, where they could easily be put back should I come in unexpectedly—under the pillow, beneath the mattress, in her bureau drawers. When she'd hear me coming, she'd pop back the book and, with an angelic expression, outdo herself giving the floor a brisk scrubbing or dusting the shelves or making her bed.

But that Friday morning, when I walked into her room, Jean was slumped on the bed, quietly weeping.

Drying her tears, I tried to imagine what was bothering her. To get her mind off whatever it was, I suggested, "Jean, why don't you go out in the garden and pick some berries for lunch?"

Her only response was a violent burst of tears.

I hoped that leaving her alone for a while might help. Half an hour later, Jean came into the kitchen, still looking very woebegone.

"How about setting the table, darling?"

The weeping started all over again. I had to get to the bottom of this. "Just what is the matter, Jean?"

"She's dying, Mother," Jean sobbed. "She's dying and there's nothing I can do about it."

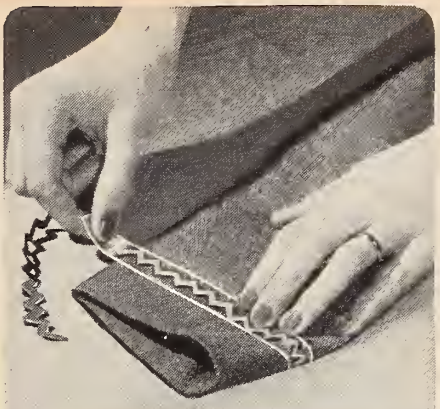
"Who's dying? I didn't know anyone was sick."

"Beth, Mother. Beth's dying . . ." The tears came in a flood.

"Beth?" Suddenly it dawned on me I'd seen Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women" on Jean's bed. So that was it! My Jean had identified herself completely with Beth. Her sympathy was so intense she couldn't control her emotions.

And a similar incident, though not so dramatic, happened after Jean had read her first Zane Grey story. Dressed in overalls and a checked shirt, with my husband's leather belt slung loosely around her waist,

critic's corner



WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

In spite of a John Steinbeck story and screen play, The Red Pony is little more than just another sick horse fiction . . . Steinbeck observes the traditions, but his human relationships are much too sketchy. It is a vague piece which comes out clothed only in a flimsy chemise of pathos.

Otis Guernsey
N. Y. Herald Tribune

John Steinbeck was in a tender mood when he rearranged the original Red Pony collection into this scenario. He has made no important changes in his material, simply arranged his events into a sequence better suited to movie purposes. His warm, salty dialogue, the eager dreams of childhood and a boy's ecstasy in animal comradeship all have been affectionately caught in the picture.

Alton Cook
N. Y. World-Telegram

Eliminates basting!

Hold rick-rack or braid in place for sewing with "Scotch" Cellophane Tape. Sew right through the tape, then peel it off. A roll of cellophane tape in every room will save you many steps every day.

GET THE TAPE HABIT...it's thrifty!

For quality, insist on —

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

SCOTCH BRAND

Cellophane Tape

SEALS WITHOUT MOISTENING
TRANSPARENT AS GLASS

ANOTHER 3M PRODUCT

MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO.
ST. PAUL 6, MINN. © 1949 3M CO.

EXCITING LOVE TALES

ALL 4 for Only $1.00

Reprints of Regular $2 Books at this special price

THE HARD BOILED BLONDE By Glen Watkins

Nine out of ten of the men who came to the "Golden Goose" to hear Patricia Brownell, the blonde torch singer, were eager to seduce her, and were foredoomed to failure. When she had been sixteen, she had been swept off her feet by a man who set her senses to singing. But never again.

STUDIO LOVERS By Lee Jacquin

After a searing experience among the so-called "nice people" who were her own class, Leila Saunders came to Greenwich Village to try a new life. Young, vibrant and with beauty like a flame, Leila quickly became part of the mad whirl of Bohemia.

WAYWARD GIRL By Carlotta Baker

Separated from the man she loved, married to a man she hated, Susan Price could be excused for being slightly wayward.

A LITTLE SIN By Ralph Carter

John Roderick, being a persistent young man, continued to love Mary Blake even when she stopped being a very proper secretary and became a very improper mistress.

These four books are so thrilling that they were "best-sellers" at $2.00 each. Each one is packed with romance, passion and thrills, each book is complete and bound separately. Not one word left out. Hours of exciting reading. Mailed postpaid if you send order with $1.00 or sent C.O.D. plus postage (as C.O.D. fees are minimum of 38c, best send payment with order). Money Back Guarantee.

KNICKERBOCKER PUBS. INC., Dept. N12A
26 East 21st St New York 10, N. Y.

AMAZING!! NEW!!
"DEW"
SPRAY DEODORANT
IN THE MAGICAL "SELF-ATOMIZING" BOTTLE
STOPS PERSPIRATION AND ODOR TROUBLES! Keeps you daintily pure, socially secure.
DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! "Dew" never touches hands. Not messy. Squeeze flexible bottle, spray on gentle mist.
ONLY DEODORANT CONTAINING "RETSELANE" to stop perspiration trouble, avoid perspiration stains on clothes. Removes odor.
WON'T ROT CLOTHES! Can't irritate normal skin.
SAVES MONEY! Full year's supply only 98¢ Plus tax
Less than 2¢ a week
SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE!
"DEW" ®
SPRAYS ITSELF ON!
REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

"CASACION"
IMPERIALS
5 matched simulated diamonds . . . gold finish . . . exquisite charm . . . challenging classic beauty . . . created by masters. CASACION Diamonds are so real only experts can tell the difference. Worn on right hand as well as engagement ring. First time for only $2.95 plus tax. $3.54 prepaid. No C.O.D.'s Please.
Return in five days for refund if not delighted.
RAY-MAR CO. DEPT. C-9
4501 OAKMONT ST. PHILADELPHIA 36, PA.

HEADACHE NEURALGIA NEURITIS Pain
RELIEVED
incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—
ANACIN ®
Here's why
Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients. Get Anacin Tablets today.

Jean strolled into the kitchen where I was baking a cake.

"Howdy, podner!" she began in a slow drawl, reaching for the gun holster that wasn't there.

"Howdy yourself," I came back to please her, not too busy to notice that she was furiously chewing away on some straw.

"How's everything on the Bar-M, podner?" she went on.

"Look, podner," I said, "how about going out to the yard and gathering some eggs? Or is that below a cowhand's dignity?"

"Shore, podner, I'll gather them eggs right gladly!"

She strode out of the kitchen—but "howdy, podner" went on until Jean was through with her Zane Grey stories.

By this time I knew I had a young actress on my hands who already was mastering the difficult art of "living the part" she was to act. . . .

So, as for Jean's losing her own personality in Hollywood—why couldn't it have happened just as easily right here in East Canton after a high-school play, or at the University of Michigan or Ohio State where she went to college? She threw herself into her roles, of course, but of course she never really "lost her own personality" any more than she really had when absorbed in "Little Women" and Zane Grey. So why on earth should such a thing happen to her in Hollywood?

new worlds . . .

But I was concerned about one situation in particular that might arise. Jean was perhaps too open and trusting. Like many friendly girls from the country, she'd be apt to accept people at face value.

So I was concerned about the people Jean was going to meet, work with, play with. Actors, producers, directors—people from all over the world, from all walks of life, with all kinds of different standards.

My daughter was used to the kindly neighbors, whose simple evening pleasures consisted of playing Monopoly, or just visiting and discussing the weather, farm prices, and livestock, or attending an occasional square dance.

"Well," I told myself, furiously wiping the last of my breakfast dishes, "she'll be all right. She's a Peters!"

But I couldn't deny that I felt relieved to know that Jean would have somebody to look after her when she first arrived in Hollywood. Two years before, Mr. and Mrs. Fink, our former neighbors and good friends, whose son had gone to school with Jean for several years, had moved to Los Angeles. They'd offered to have Jean live with them till my sister Melba could go to California to keep house for Jean.

Neverthless, I used to send Jean newspaper clippings about unhappy people who had got their names in lurid headlines—just to remind my daughter what could happen, and to caution her never to become like that.

An additional worry was the possible influence of all this hullabaloo on her 13-year-old sister, Shirley. Jean had always been Shirley's ideal. Whatever she did was right. And Shirley had always tried to copy her. If Jean should change in Hollywood, Shirley might go through the very same change in East Canton. Already, two weeks after Jean had left, Shirley felt the first reaction of her sister's new career. Whenever she did anything wrong in school, anything out of the ordinary, her classmates were quick to surmise, "She thinks she's different, just because her sister's in Hollywood." But her classmates soon got used to Jean's new status. And, when that happened, Shirley's school associations returned to normal.

So, as the months went by, East Can-

Learn here the TRUTH about
PSORIASIS
IS IT A SKIN DISEASE OR INTERNAL?
For the past several years a number of Physicians have reported amazing success in treating Psoriasis with LIPAN—a new medical wonder taken internally. LIPAN (registered U.S. Patent Office) is a combination of glandular substances that treat certain internal disorders which many medical men now agree to be the cause of Psoriasis. Clinical results show LIPAN successful in over 90% of the cases treated. Even stubborn lesions are alleviated to a degree almost beyond belief. Absolutely harmless! Ask your druggist for LIPAN, or write direct for free booklet. Or send for month's supply (180 tablets), enclosing check or money order for $8.50.
SPIRT & COMPANY, Dept. DM-6, Waterbury, Conn.

LEG SUFFERERS
Why continue to suffer without attempting to do something? Write today for New Booklet—"THE LIEPE METHODS FOR HOME USE." It tells about Varicose Ulcers and Open Leg Sores. Liepe Methods used while you walk. More than 40 years of success. Praised and endorsed by multitudes.
FREE BOOKLET
LIEPE METHODS, 3284 N. Green Bay Ave., Dept. F-39, Milwaukee, Wisconsin

High School Course at Home
Many Finish in 2 Years
Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American School, HA-14, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

BROKEN JEWELRY WANTED
All kinds. Highest cash prices paid for rings, jewelry, spectacles, gold teeth, diamonds, broken and usable watches, etc. Cash mailed promptly. Write for FREE shipping container.
LOWE'S, Dept. MS
Holland Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Marvel
$3.50
WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
Free Booklet, Marvel Co., 606 East St., New Haven, Ct.

LIKE to DRAW?
Use spare time at home preparing for profitable art career. A complete home study course with money back agreement. For details and talent test give age and occupation.
AMERICAN SCHOOL OF COMMERCIAL ART
DIVISION D, BOX 8066 . DALLAS 5, TEXAS

...Train At Home For This WELL PAID PROFESSION-
PRACTICAL NURSING

Help fill the urgent need for Trained Practical Nurses. If you are between 18 and 55, it's easy to train at home in your spare time to take your place in this respected calling. Many earn while learning. High school is not needed. Nurse's equipment included. Mail this ad today for FREE Facts.
Wayne School Of Practical Nursing, Inc., 2525 Sheffield Ave., Desk K-41, Chicago 14, Ill.
Please rush FREE FACTS and Sample Lesson Pages.
NAME_____Age_____
Full Address_____

ton got used to the idea that the Peters girl was in Hollywood."

Then came that fateful day when the movie, Captain from Castile was shown. The town was a little shocked that Jean was photographed to look so sexy, that her gowns were cut so low. "We told you so!" I heard over and over again. "She couldn't play a part like that unless she had changed."

For six more months I heard "unless"—for six more months I kept sending Jean clippings and motherly advice. Finally, I decided to go to California to find out for myself if I'd been right in letting my girl go to Hollywood—or if I should have listened to that well-meant neighborly advice.

When I arrived in Westwood, where Jean had moved when my sister Melba had joined her, I found that their home is no different from the usual home anywhere in Ohio. No swimming pool. No servants. No tennis courts. No stables or elaborate gardens. Just an ordinary, two-bedroom home in a nice, residential district of Los Angeles, out near the campus of the big University of California.

Jean still had her 1940 sedan. There was no flashy convertible, such as most people seem to expect a movie actress to have. Jean still dressed simply, and, as before, made most of her own clothes.

Also, Jean's social life is as unpretentious as it ever was. Still no wild parties or going to night clubs six times a week. Jean's idea of a binge is to have a few, intimate friends over for dinner, play charades or Monoply, just as she used to in East Canton, or go to the movies, a habit she hasn't outgrown, even in Hollywood. And Jean still attends church regularly.

There are no romantic implications in Jean's life. Even the much-publicized "romance" with Howard Hughes, about which I had read so much back in East Canton, and followed with more than a little anxiety, must have sprung from the fertile imagination of columnists and publicity men. Certainly, Jean has gone out with Mr. Hughes. But she has gone out with other famous men as well. Probably the cause for all the comment has been the fact that, while she appears so very seldom at nightclubs and almost never at Big Hollywood parties, she has been seen dining with Mr. Hughes a few times. But there's absolutely no foundation to these marriage rumors. For that matter, Jean feels she's too young to get married. Like the little girl of eight, she still wants to concentrate on her career for the next few years. And when Jean makes up her mind about something, she sticks to it. She's a Peters.

But just as I suspected, Jean is still a very open and trusting girl. Yet, surprisingly, it has proved an asset rather than a liability—it has helped her popularity at her studio immensely. Since Jean loves to meet people, she quickly makes the acquaintance of everyone on the set of her current picture. She knows their names, their problems, their likes and dislikes. "After all, Mother," Jean has told me, "a studio is really just like a small town. Sure there's gossip. There's bound to be. But what about East Canton? Didn't you used to talk about Mrs. Somebody's new dress, and why young So-and-So used to lose job after job? How Mr. and Mrs. Such-and-Such were having a struggle with five children to support? But you knew them, and you helped them when they needed you. And it's just the same way out here."

it takes teamwork . . .

As a matter of fact, Jean has a much better chance to make friends on the set than under any other circumstances she's encountered so far. When you work with people all day, when your whole acting career depends on their helpfulness and cooperation—the way your co-actors feed you lines, the way the make-up man does his job, the way the lighting and props and so forth are handled—then you really know what friendship means. A star doesn't build himself. That's done by the cooperation of the director and the grip, the make-up man and the electrician, the designer and the cameraman. And if you want cooperation, you have to be a friend.

Jean's relationship with studio workers isn't confined to work alone. She sponsors a baseball team on the lot made up of carpenters and grips, actors and clerks and other employees of 20th Century-Fox—who are very much like the crowd back home. They get together about twice a week for practice or games with other teams on the lot. And Jean's right in there, pitching madly, catching worse! She's very proud of her team. And although I'm Jean's mother, I think they're kind of proud of her, too.

I remember one game not long ago when the "Peters Team" was playing the "Rex Harrison Team." Jean was cheering furiously, but in vain. I hate defeat, so I left. But my Jean stayed till the bitter end. She came home as heartbroken as the day when East Canton High lost against Canton Township.

No—my Jean hasn't changed in Hollywood.

Sure, there are occasional scandals in Hollywood. There are temptations there, just as there are temptations anywhere in the world. But for girls like my Jean, girls with the proper upbringing, the right ideals and home training and a sufficient amount of common sense, Hollywood is no better and no worse than any other town in this whole country. And, just like my Jean, who'd been thrust into a position of prominence and attention, other girls can remain themselves no matter how much fame comes their way. Jean has changed her viewpoint only in that where previously she wanted to become a good school teacher, she now wants to become a good actress.

Wherever I hear another mother express the popular misconception that Hollywood is a good place to stay away from, or if a militant critic cries that Hollywood is a nest of sin, I can only be thankful that I didn't succumb to those false ideas and stand in the way of my daughter's going to Hollywood. For there she's remained her own natural, sweet self—my daughter, Jean. THE END

"Hello, Mammoth pictures? Boy, have I got a story for you!"

PRIVATE MESSAGE for WIVES!

enjoy this 'extra' advantage in

INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Greaseless Suppository Assures Continuous Medication For Hours

You'll bless the day you started to use Zonitors. This higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness is one of the MOST EFFECTIVE METHODS ever discovered. And Zonitors are by far more convenient and less embarrassing to use—SO POWERFULLY GERMICIDAL yet ABSOLUTELY SAFE to tissues. They are positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-smarting.

Easy To Carry If Away From Home

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. They are not the type that quickly melt away. Instead, they instantly begin to release powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties and continue to do so for hours. They never leave any sticky residue.

Leave No Tell-Tale Odor

Zonitors do not 'mask' offending odor. They destroy it! Help guard against infection. Zonitors immediately kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can FEEL CONFIDENT that Zonitors kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-69, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

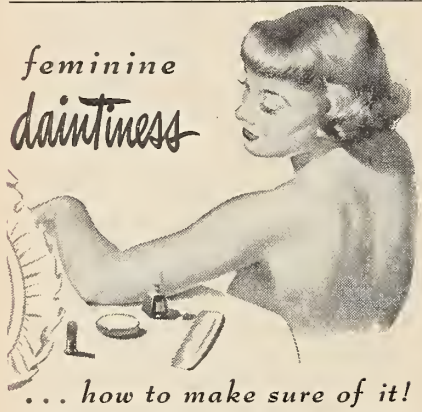
WOVEN SEERSUCKER UNIFORM

Smart Sweetheart Neckline

SENSATIONALLY LOW-PRICED! ONLY 3.98

THE WEAVE IS GUARANTEED TO STAY IN PERMANENTLY! IT WON'T WASH OUT!

A few dips in good hot suds, a quick rinse, out on the line, and soon ready to wear. Positively no shrinkage. No ironing necessary.



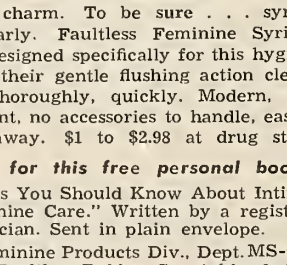
#773—Illustrated. Sizes 12 to 20.
#722—Square neckline. Side Button Coat Style. Sizes 12 to 20.
#777—V Neckline. Tailored Collar, Coat Style. Sizes 12 to 42.

- REMOVABLE SHANK BUTTONS
- SET-IN YOKE BELT
- SHORT SLEEVES ONLY
- TWO ROOMY POCKETS SET IN SKIRT

We Pay Postage Anywhere!

GALLANT'S UNIFORM CENTER Dept. S-1
438 BALDWIN AVE., JERSEY CITY 6, N. J.
Please send me.....uniforms, style No.....
..... Sizes .....
Enclosed is $.....in full payment.
NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY.....ZONE.....STATE.....

feminine daintiness



. . . how to make sure of it!

Intimate feminine daintiness is vital to your charm. To be sure . . . syringe regularly. Faultless Feminine Syringes are designed specifically for this hygienic care, their gentle flushing action cleansing thoroughly, quickly. Modern, convenient, no accessories to handle, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

send for this free personal booklet

"Facts You Should Know About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-69
The Faultless Rubber Co., Ashland, Ohio.

Faultless
feminine syringes

ROCK-A-BYE BOGEY

(Continued from page 22)

went on with sudden decision: "I'll tell you what I think of it. I think most people think too much of it. What's so remarkable about having a baby? People have them every day. Why, right now it seems like half the people Betty and I know are having babies. Why the fuss? I tell Betty that the American Indian had the right idea. When her time came, the squaw stepped a few feet off the trail, had her baby, and pretty soon got back on the trail. The quicker she got back, the shorter the distance she had to cover to catch up to her old man. Especially if he were riding the family horse."

But the rough-and-grumble exterior wouldn't have fooled anyone. It failed completely to cover up the simple fact that Bogey was frightened by the prospect of parenthood. His fear was elemental. He knew nothing about children, so he was afraid of them.

When he realized the source of his fear, and made an effort to get acquainted with the children of friends, he no longer was frightened. He was terrified. But that came later.

pleasant dream-world . . .

At the outset, he was told that life was to go on just as usual. The doctor had a large part in the creation of this pleasant dream-world in which Bogey lived for a few months.

When they are in Hollywood, which ordinarily is only when they are working, the Bogarts are home folks. Sunset Strip night clubs may be having a tough time now, but they would have been in trouble long ago if they'd had to rely on Betty and Bogey for business. The house they bought a couple of years ago was designed for family life. The former home of Hedy Lamarr, it included a nursery, a feature that must have caught Betty's eye when they were house hunting.

As the doctor said it would, life went on as usual. A couple of nights a week, they showed a movie at home. They rarely get out to a movie theater, for the first show at seven is too early for them, and the second at 10 is too late. There were evenings, not necessarily quiet, with friends like Ida Lupino and Collier Young, or Peter Lorre, or Paul Douglas, or Dutch Leonard, the veteran baseball pitcher. Or Bogey played chess with Mike Romanoff, another game in a long tournament in which Mike, at last count, was a game up.

By day, Betty continued to play tennis and to plunge from the diving board into the swimming pool that's just outside the front door. She was then under a studio suspension, not because she was going to have a baby, but because she didn't like a part the studio wanted her to play.

When they're not in Hollywood, which ordinarily is the instant they wind up work in a picture, the Bogarts head for Newport Harbor, a boating community some 50 miles down the California coast from the film city. There they have a second home in a 55-foot yawl named, like Bogey's recently-formed producing company, the Santana.

The yacht is just the place for a Shoeless Joe life. It's as complete and comfortable, in its slip, as what passes today for a three-room apartment in New York or Los Angeles. It even has an extension phone in the main cabin that can be plugged into an outlet on the slip so a Beverly Hills beachcomber can keep in touch with the world without putting on sneakers and going ashore.

It was in this salt-water Eden that Bogey felt the first pangs of approaching fatherhood, detected the first fault in his dream world.

A few days earlier, the doctor had repeated in his beguiling purr his counsel that Betty was to continue her normal, routine existence. Except, he added this time, she should not go on the boat. There was something about the motion, the rhythm of a boat, he said profoundly, that made her presence there inadvisable in the circumstances.

Then Bogey finished work in Knock on Any Door, lowered himself into his underslung convertible, and headed down the coast highway. More tired than usual at the end of a picture, he was looking for a lot of quiet in which to relax. But he wasn't looking for all the quiet, and loneliness, too, that he discovered the boat offered without Betty. A solitary figure in a fireman-red shirt and old blue trousers, he prowled and growled from bow to stern. He beat down every impulse to telephone home. He had a feeling he'd look silly, grabbing for a phone when he'd been gone only a few hours and was a mere 55 miles away. Finally he had an idea: If he put the call through by way of London, a round trip of 12,000 miles, it would not seem silly at all, but rather inspired. But the operator at the Claridge Hotel in London wouldn't cooperate. She wouldn't send back to California a call originating in California. She told Bogey he was being silly.

That was the first thing Bogey learned about being a dad, even a prospective one: He could expect some lonely moments. After that, he began to learn other things fast. Things began to happen fast.

Then, late one night, Betty woke him to say that she thought they should redecorate the butler's pantry. Friends had warned him to expect odd requests at two o'clock in the morning, had warned him that expectant mothers had midnight whimsies and yearned for things like ice cream and pickles or peanut butter-and-marshmallow sandwiches. But he wasn't prepared for a call to redecorate the butler's pantry. The pantry looked O.K. to him, and he said so, and asked why she wanted a new paint job. He was advised, with quiet finality, that the pantry was the wrong color for a home that was going to have a baby in it.

architect at night . . .

That was the first of a series of middle-of-the-night sessions that resulted in a large part of the house being done over.

"At first, maybe because I was sleepy, I didn't pay much attention," Bogey recalled afterward. "I didn't protest too much, even though it was the first I knew kids ought to wake up according to a color scheme. I still don't know which are the right colors, but I sure feel sorry for Hedy Lamarr's kid waking up to the wrong color all that time. Well, it wasn't as though she was asking me to crawl out of a warm bed to go to the ice box. I didn't feel any pain —until I saw the bills."

Once the house was redecorated, Betty moved on to gadgets. She proposed a photo-electrically operated gate in the canyon driveway. She wondered about the possibilities of having a canopy that would slide over the sunny part of the patio at the push of a button. Some of the suggestions were so fantastic Bogey was not sure whether she was awake or dreaming.

He'd noticed that for some time there

Foot Relief

Instant-Acting, Soothing, Cushioning Foot Plaster

To instantly relieve painful corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, tender spots, burning on bottom of feet—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex. You cut this soothing, cushioning, flesh color, superior moleskin to any size or shape. At Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ stores.

Dr. Scholl's KUROTEX

CAT'S PAW

Finest Rubber Heels & Soles!

A REAL MIDGET RADIO!

CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET

Works on new diode—Needs No Tubes, Batteries or Electric "Plug-Ins." Plays years for nothing! in Beautiful Red Plastic.

Guaranteed to Work on local stations

SEND ONLY $1.00

(bill, ck, mo) and pay postman $2.99 C.O.D. plus postage or send $3.99 and we pay postage. SENT COMPLETE, READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. LISTEN AT HOME, IN BED, ON FARMS, SCHOOL, MOST ANY WHERE ANYTIME! Wonderful gifts for anyone. Amazingly low-priced! Order Now!

MIDWAY CO. Dept. TMM-6 KEARNEY, NEBR.

HEMSTITCHER

Hemstitch on any sewing machine with this handy attachment. Does two piece, criss-cross, inlaid, circular and hemstitching for pleats; also tucking, smocking and picoting. Makes rugs, comforters, slippers, etc. out of any material. Easy directions included

Both for $1.00

BUTTON HOLER

Makes button holes on your sewing machine instead of by hand. Also darns stockings, sews buttons, zippers; and can be used for quilting. Sews in any direction—front, back or sideways.

SEND NO MONEY—Merely send your name, address and pay postman $1.00 plus postage on arrival. Or, send $1.00 with order, and we mail attachments postage paid. You risk nothing. Satisfaction guaranteed or $1.00 back

LELANE CO. Dept. DM-69 Box 571 Kansas City 10, Mo.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER

TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH

ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS.

SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET

NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU!

MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-G, Providence 15, R.I.

BE A Nurse

MAKE $35-$45 A WEEK

Practical nurses are needed in every community... doctors rely on them... patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 50th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

Dept. 236, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.

Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____

City_____ State_____ Age_____

had been a growing stack of strange magazines piling up in the library. For no reason at all, he had had a notion they were magazines of instruction, probably on child feeding, or how to bring babies up alive. Now he investigated, and what he learned drove him to a hurry call to Morgan Maree, his business manager.

"She's reading all the wrong kind of books," he reported. "Books about how to build bigger houses and gardens, and how to equip them like the house of the day after tomorrow. You better take over."

So Maree took over. After that, when Betty suggested some new gadget, Bogey agreed heartily, and suggested she consult the business manager about it.

"Maree was really tough," Bogey says. "A couple of times he held out for as long as a month before giving in."

Along about now, if everything has gone on schedule, Bogey and Maree should be delivering their final token of surrender: It's a model of the refinished house, including all the changes made by Betty.

mysterious moppets . . .

With Maree relieving him of the business phase of approaching fatherhood, Bogey found time for the soul-searching whereby he concluded that the reason he was afraid of children was that he knew nothing about them. His life had been wrapped up in show business. He could give a learned opinion on anything even remotely connected with movie-making. He could see Jimmy Stewart and Gabby Hayes lunching together and tell the plot of their next picture. But he could not answer a child's simplest, "Why, Daddy?" There'd been nothing in his three previous marriages, all childless, to equip him for that.

So he set out to learn something about youngsters. He began by consulting friends who had children and by spending more time in their homes.

"At first, talking with the kids of friends, I tried to bluff," he says. "And that's when they really terrified me. You can't fool a kid. There's something about his eyes. He looks you straight in the eye when you're trying to pull a fast one, discovers you're a liar and walks out on you.

"No kid of mine is going to have a chance to do that to me if I can help it. Anytime the boy comes around to me with a question, I'm going to tell him, 'Ask your mother. She's smarter than I am.'"

On January 11, when he was five days old, Stephen Humphrey Bogart moved from the hospital into the house in the canyon. Bogey was there to welcome the baby, who'd been named after him not once, but twice: Humphrey for Humphrey, Steve for the character Bogey played in To Have or Have Not, in which he met Betty on and off screen.

For a month, the baby never opened his mouth except for food, never opened his eyes at all when Bogey was in the house.

"It's a shame you ever have to open your eyes at all, the world being what it is," Bogey told his son. "But as for keeping your mouth closed, howl your head off. Don't worry about me, junior. My room's at the other end of the house."

That night, Bogey roused to a cry that came from no hillside coyote. When he shook the bewilderment out of his head, he realized it was the baby, at the far end of the house, that he was hearing—thanks to one of Betty's gadgets. She'd had his room wired for sound, adjustable so that the baby's faintest whisper could be made to carry to Bogey's room like a rising storm.

Bogey grinned. Life at the Bogarts' would be going on as usual. As usual, that is, as in millions of other homes newly equipped with a baby. Very happily, he roused himself from his warm bed and padded down the hall. THE END

BE SENSIBLE, MOTHER!

Give Your Child

This Pleasant Laxative

LAXATIVE TIME can be a happy time when you give your child pleasant-tasting Ex-Lax. Children love its delicious chocolate taste.

You can trust Ex-Lax! For over 40 years, millions of mothers have given Ex-Lax with perfect confidence to their children. And Ex-Lax is the dependable laxative many doctors use in their practice.

Ex-Lax is effective in a gentle, comfortable way. Ex-Lax is the family favorite. It is equally good for grown-ups and children. Ex-Lax is still only 10¢. There is no better laxative at any price.

When Nature 'forgets'... remember

EX-LAX

THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

PENNIES WANTED

WE Pay $10.00 EACH for certain LINCOLN Pennies

Indian Heads $50.—ALL U.S. coins Wanted. Send 10¢ for catalogue listing prices we pay.

FRANKLIN COIN CO. MISHAWAKA 58, IND.

GET HEP . . . ORDER BY MAIL TODAY

GET . . . Be-Bops

LOOK ONLY $2.75

SIZES 4 to 12

MEDIUM NARROW WIDE

Summer sandals so soft you can flex them double in one hand with springy cork platforms, built up arches and genuine leather soles. Sturdy suede finish in black, blue, red, green and white, gold colored eyelets and laces.

NORMANDY SHOES, Haverhill, Mass. D

Please send me.....pairs Be-Bops at $2.75

Size..... Width..... Color.....

2nd Color Choice .....

Name (print) .....

Address .....

City..... Zone... State.....

(charges)

Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. (extra) ☐

Send me free catalog of additional styles... ☐

A NEW FACE a new future

How Plastic Surgery easily takes years off the prematurely aged face, quickly reshapes an ugly nose and corrects other facial blemishes is told and illustrated with 88 before-and-after pictures in fascinating book, YOUR NEW FACE IS YOUR FORTUNE, written by famous Plastic Surgeon. Yours, post-paid in plain wrapper — only 25¢

FRANKLIN HOUSE Books
1102 Fox Bldg., Phila., Pa., Dept. 4-R

Never-Tel

LIQUID PERFUMED DEODORANT

Dancing, walking, working, playing . . . there's no better way to fresh, sweet underarm daintiness than NEVER-TEL. It combines a really dependable deodorant and finely-scented, delicate perfume. Gives two-way protection that lasts longer—yet is harmless—does not stop perspiration or injure clothing or skin. At drug counters, or write for generous FREE SAMPLE bottle, to

NEVER-TEL—Dept. 6A, Kansas City 6, Mo.

PREPARE FOR DANGER!

WOMEN—Learn how to repulse and overpower thugs, attackers and fiendish degenerates. Why be helpless when the strongest man can be at your mercy? Here are simple, practical, easily-mastered, lightning-quick methods to enable YOU to protect yourself and loved ones. Send for "SELF DEFENSE FOR WOMEN", by Harriet Kent, containing full instructions for numerous defenses in any situation or position. Every woman should have a copy. Only $1.00 postpaid.

SAVANT COMPANY
Dept. F6, Box 666 Los Angeles 25, Calif.

CORNS

Removed by Mosco, also Calluses. Quick, easy, economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢, 50¢. At your druggist. Money refunded if not satisfied. Moss Co., Rochester, N. Y.

MOSCO ★CORN★ REMOVER

NOW ODORLESS!

The NEW ZiP CREAM HAIR REMOVER

For satin-smooth legs and arms. Removes every trace of hair. Easy. Quick. Pleasant. Keeps skin alluring . . . 25c, 49c.

SPECIAL: Large 89c size of ZiP Creom Hair Remover sold in combination with 50c container of AB-SCENT Creom Deodorant . . . Both for 89c

Use a proven hair remover, not an ordinary cosmetic. Insist on ZiP.

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 21)

arrive and pin the robbery on them. But Janis reckons without the un-kidnapped brothers. These two foil the robbery, and then there's a slam-bang wind-up in which the Youngers are paroled, only to be chased by Ryckman and a Ryckman-incited posse taking the law into their own hands. The Youngers triumph, in a thoroughly satisfying finish. This is a fast, cheerful Western, with proper performances from everybody. I regret to add that Wayne Morris is getting powerful fat. He also has the yellowest hair that's ever been seen in Technicolor.

THE STRATTON STORY

Cast: James Stewart, June Allyson, Frank Morgan, Agnes Moorehead, Bill Williams.
MGM

The Stratton Story is less mawkish and much simpler than most film biographies of famous-people-who-have-suffered. You meet Monty Stratton (Jimmy Stewart), a farm boy who wants to play big-league baseball. He works hard, he dreams of being a pitcher. He meets a run-down old character who used to be in the game, the run-down old character (Frank Morgan) thinks he's wonderful; they hitch-hike to California, Stratton tries out for the Chicago White Sox (in training there) and in a little while he's on the team. He meets a girl named Ethel (June Allyson), they fall in love, they get married. Stratton becomes a star, they have a baby. They spend off-seasons back on the farm with Stratton's mother (Agnes Moorehead). And in one off-season, when Stratton's out hunting, he's shot in the leg; his leg has to be amputated. This picture shows his trial by fire. He's never wanted to do anything but play ball; he feels as though his life is over. How he readjusts, how he comes, ultimately, to a painful triumph, is touchingly set forth here. The real Monty Stratton cooperated with MGM so they could make his story, and MGM did right by him. Jimmy Stewart and June Allyson turn in some beautiful work (it's quiet, but it's real) and for baseball fans, there are some actual players appearing as themselves. (Gene Bearden, Bill Dickey, Jimmy Dykes and Mervyn Shea.) The Stratton Story's fine.

The Stratton Story: Jomes Stewart is baseboll hero Monty Stratton who made a comeback after losing his leg. June Allyson plays his wife.

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M137, Hollywood 38, Cal.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

ITCHY Checked in a JIFFY

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D.D.D. Prescription.

Be an ARTIST

LEARN AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME!
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 and more a week. By our practical method we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOOK—"Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training and opportunities in art. STATE AGE. Course G.I. Approved

STUDIO 806-R, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

FREE PHOTO

DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c for handling.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309 Dept. L-69 Hollywood 28, Calif.

Listen to

"Modern Romances"

exciting true-to-life stories from Modern Romances magazine

A new half-hour program every Monday thru Friday on your American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) station

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of sufferings, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c, (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 2609, Detroit 27, Michigan.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

Do You Want to Make Men OBEY YOU?

Do you want to make him love you wildly, fiercely? Do you want to make him say, "Darling, I adore you. I worship you. I'll do ANYTHING for YOU!" Do you want to make him OBEY your every command? Then use CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume) to help you CONTROL Men. One woman told me that CHEZ-ELLE is the STRONGEST perfume she ever used. Another woman told us that she blesses the day she first used CHEZ-ELLE, because now her husband comes home at night to help her.

Just send me your name and address and I will rush a Trial Bottle of CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume) to you. When the postman delivers CHEZ-ELLE in a plain package, deposit only $2 plus postage (3 for $5) with him on this GUARANTEE. Use CHEZ-ELLE for 10 days. If you don't agree that CHEZ-ELLE is the most POWERFUL perfume you ever used, return it and I'll send your $2 right back. Write NOW to

TRULOVE, 58 Walker St., Dept. 102-BC, New York 13

TRUE LOVE BRIDAL SET

$1.95 Each → PERFECT MATCHED BOTH $2.95

Gorgeous TRUE LOVE Pattern

Exquisite Engagement and Wedding Rings set with Gleaming Brilliant imitation Diamonds. Extra Large White Center Brilliant. Genuine STERLING SILVER Mounting. SEND NO MONEY. Send size or string. Pay postman C. O. D. on delivery plus 20% tax and postage.

WORLD WIDE DIAMOND CO., Dept. B-909
2451 S. MICHIGAN AVENUE - CHICAGO 16, ILLINOIS

Stunning modern Lucite purse ornament that doubles as a handy safety light. Connected by flexible cloth-covered wire to miniature long-life battery tucked away inside your handbag. Flick concealed switch for soft light to find gloves, locate keyholes, read programs, etc.

Fihe Enterprises, Dept. MR
1023 Victory Place, Burbank, Cal.
Gentlemen: Send Dream Beam lights, @ $2.00 each.

☐ Cash, check or M. O. enclosed ☐ Send C.O.D. (Charges extra)

Name

Address

City State

The Lawton Story: The sincerity of performers makes the enactment of the life of Christ (Millord Coody, above) a moving experience.

THE LAWTON STORY

Cast: Ginger Prince, Millard Coody, Forrest Taylor, Gwyn Shipman Hallmark.

This is basically a documentary about the annual Easter Pageant at Lawton, Oklahoma. As such, it has moments of majesty and beauty made even more impressive by Cinecolor. But someone decided that the yearly religious ritual in the Wichita Mountains wasn't, by itself, box-office. So for box-office, there's six-year-old Ginger Prince, a cute little Margaret O'Brien, who has two uncles. The uncles aren't so cute. They don't talk to each other (haven't passed a word in 20 years). One uncle is Mark Wallock (Forrest Taylor), a minister. He started the idea of the Pageant, but this year he's ailing and can't make it. The other uncle is the town banker who's not interested in anything but his debtors. This Ginger, though, she can sing and she can act and she can bring her uncles together—all of which she does. She leads Uncle Banker to the Pageant and it has an effect on him. Makes him forget his cash balance. Practically drives him to the bedside of his sick brother where all is forgiven. That's it. The Pageant, itself, filmed in the dawn against a natural setting of mountains, is stirring. The cast, for the most part, is composed of citizens of Lawton who know and love their Bibles better than their profiles. It's the sincerity of their non-professional acting which comes across, and turns the enactment of the life of Christ (played by Millard Coody) into a moving experience.

MR. BELVEDERE GOES TO COLLEGE

Cast: Clifton Webb, Shirley Temple, Tom Drake, Alan Young, Jessie Royce Landis.
20th Century-Fox.

Mr. "Sitting Pretty" Belvedere (Clifton Webb) is back, and this time he's going to college. Seems he can collect a certain $10,000 literary award only if he holds a university degree. (The kindergarten where once he spent two nauseating weeks didn't give degrees, and those two weeks comprised the whole of Belvedere's formal education. He

GET Coets

PERFECT FOR POWDER PUFFS

HANDY COTTON SQUARES
DOZENS OF COSMETIC USES
LARGE PACKAGE 29¢

WIN CASH CONTESTS

WIN next contest you enter. CONTEST BULLETIN has helped others win. Big winners tell secrets, teach you how to win BIG PRIZES. Magazine lists current contests.

SEND 25c FOR SAMPLE COPY.

GENERAL CONTEST BULLETIN
1609 East 5th St. Dept. 104-F Duluth 5, Minn.

Does GARLIC Relieve GAS?

ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the largest selling garlic tablet in the world. For sale at drug stores everywhere. Ask for

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

STAMMER?

GET THIS FREE BOOK!

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 48 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 4910, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

Here's The Way To A More GLAMOROUS FIGURE

A few minutes a day spent with Coil-Tension Developer pays off big—in a more glamorous-appearing bust line. Coil-Tension Developer makes this possible by developing underlying flabby chest muscles the safe—scientific way to natural bust line beauty. Ask your own physician. Coil-Tension Developer, together with Exercise Chart and Free Manual for Bust Beauty Care sent postpaid for $5.95. 30-DAY MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. If not positively delighted return for full refund.

HOUSE OF KAZ
210 FIFTH AVE. DEPT. 3 NEW YORK 10, N. Y.

intends to rectify this tragedy by completing a four-year course in 12 months, and collecting his cash.) Belvedere runs into some trouble because war-widow-with-a-baby Shirley Temple, who works on the college paper, insists on following him around, quoting his off-the-record remarks in her articles, and snapping his picture at various ridiculous moments. Also, sophomore-who-sniffles Alan Young hazes our hero roundly. Well, they can haze him, but they can't faze him. Belvedere knows how to speak 11 languages, cooks in all of them, gives lessons in manners and dancing to young ladies, holds the world's pole-vaulting record, is an accomplished musician, can stand on his head for hours, and pals around with J. Edgar Hoover. How could Shirley Temple hurt him? Before he's finished, Belvedere even straightens out Shirl's personal life. The man she loves (Tom Drake) thinks he doesn't like children, doesn't know she's a widow with a child, etc. Mr. Belvedere's willingness to turn the other cheek provides a happy ending. (Fox seems to be currently fascinated by the idea of adults in college. They sent Loretta "Mother Is a Freshman" Young to school first, and here's Clifton hot on her heels. Now how about Lionel Barrymore in Grandad at Yale?)

Look For The Silver Lining: June Haver portrays Marilyn Miller and Roy Bolger is Jock Donahue in this musical biography of the famous dancer.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING
Cast: June Haver, Ray Bolger, Gordon MacRae, Charlie Ruggles, Rosemary De Camp. Warners.

After eight years of searching for the "right girl" to play the late Marilyn Miller, Warner Brothers finally ended up with Fox's June Haver, and, incidentally, a very Fox-like Technicolor musical, complete with huge new production numbers from huge old productions. Story starts with young Marilyn joining her parents and two sisters in a mediocre vaudeville act and takes her to the heights. There are several pleasant things in this picture. Ray Bolger, to mention most of them. In the role of Jack Donahue, the famous dancer, he's not only superb in the dance department, but strong on acting, too. In the scene where he explains to the 15-year-old Marilyn (who's bursting with puppy love for him) that he's happily married, but terribly flattered by her affection, he achieves a sweetness and a tenderness few actors could match. As Frank Carter, the lad Marilyn marries, Gordon MacRae sings well, has an agreeable personality and a nice face. (His forehead's a little low for an ideal Hollywood hero, but if he sticks around out there, they'll probably fix it. They fixed Rita Hayworth's.) Whether June Haver satisfies you as Marilyn depends on how highly you value authenticity. Miss Miller was considered the greatest dancer-actress of her day, which Miss Haver is not, by any means. But she works awfully hard, and she's very pretty, so why complain?

also showing . . .

capsule criticisms of films previously reviewed

THE ACCUSED (Para.)—The accused is Loretta Young, and she's accused of killing Douglas Dick—as indeed she had when his affectionate nature got out of hand. Wendell Corey is the detective who brings her to trial. Robert Cummings is her lawyer. Well done and entertaining.

ALIAS NICK BEAL (Para.)—A heavy-handed drama about an ambitious but good-hearted politician who gets places by selling his soul to the devil. With Ray Milland, Thomas Mitchell, George Macready and Audrey Totter.

BAD BOY (Allied Artists)—The reformation of a young criminal at the Boys' Ranch in Texas. Audie Murphy, as the delinquent, is very good in his first big role. A good, interesting movie. With Lloyd Nolan, Jane Wyatt and Jimmy Gleason.

THE BRIBE (MGM)—G-Man Robert Taylor goes to Central America to look into crooked export business and finds Ava Gardner innocently involved with the villains he's after—Vincent Price, John Hodiak and Charles Laughton. Pretty implausible, but exciting and well acted.

BRIDE OF VENGEANCE (Para.)—A costume thing about the Borgias, full of sinister intrigue. It's all a bit on the silly side. With John Lund, Paulette Goddard and Macdonald Carey.

A CONNECTICUT YANKEE (Para.)—The world's greatest entertainer—Bing Crosby, of course—sings some pretty good songs, says and does some funny things, and is assisted by a fine cast including William Bendix, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Rhonda Fleming. Yet you keep expecting more to happen than ever does. Still, this is a pleasant and lavish Technicolor item.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS (20th-Fox)—Dean Stockwell is inducted into his family's maritime tradition on a whaling ship skippered by his stern grandpa, Lionel Barrymore, with Richard Widmark as the helpful first mate. An authentic sea story, with lots of excitement and drama.

EL PASO (Para.)—John Payne finishes fighting the Civil War and takes on a nest of coyotes who've been running things their own evil way in El Paso. A swell, gunsmoke-wreathed Western, in Cinecolor. With Gail Russell, Sterling Hayden, Dick Foran, Gabby Hayes and Henry Hull.

THE FAN (20th-Fox)—A fine production and excellent performances by Jeanne Crain, George Sanders, Madeleine Carroll and Richard Greene make this version of Oscar Wilde's Lady Windermere's Fan something sure to please the ladies.

FORCE OF EVIL (MGM)—A brisk study of the numbers racket, with John Garfield, Beatrice Pearson and Thomas Gomez. It's fair.

JOAN OF ARC (RKO)—You know—Ingrid Bergman, Technicolor and eight million bucks. Of course you'll see it. Who wants to be a social outcast?

KISS IN THE DARK (Warners)—Concert pianist David Niven has his eyes opened to the facts of life and hot jazz by Jane Wyman. A moderately good comedy. With Victor Moore, Wayne Morris and Broderick Crawford.

KNOCK ON ANY DOOR (Col.)—Newcomer John Derek as a youthful criminal and Humphrey Bogart as his lawyer with a social conscience, are excellent in this outstanding film which once more points the dismal truth that poverty breeds crime.

LITTLE WOMEN (MGM)—A charming version of the tear-drenched old novel, beautifully produced in Technicolor and superbly acted. June Allyson as Jo and Margaret O'Brien as Beth are remarkably good in a gilt-edged cast that includes Elizabeth Taylor, Janet Leigh, Peter Lawford, Mary Astor, Lucile Watson, Sir C. Aubrey Smith and Rossano Brazzi.

MOTHER IS A FRESHMAN (20th-Fox)—Loretta Young, to get funds for herself and spoiled daughter Betty Lynn, goes to college with her on a $3,000 scholarship. Professor Van Johnson, whom Betty adores, falls for Loretta. All in all, a bright comedy. With Rudy Vallee, Barbara Lawrence, Bob Arthur and Technicolor.

MY DREAM IS YOURS (Warners)—Jack Carson makes a radio star of Doris Day despite typical musical comedy complications. A highly enjoyable Technicolor musical, with good songs and relaxing merriment. Doris Day is wonderful and Jack Carson, Lee Bowman, Adolphe Menjou, Eve Arden and Cuddles Sakall also entertain expertly.

THE PRIDE OF THE YANKEES (RKO)—Made in 1942, this moving film biography of Lou Gehrig, the great first baseman, is now being reissued. By all means see it if you missed it the first time. Gary Cooper plays Lou and Babe Ruth appears as himself. With Teresa Wright and Walter Brennan.

RED CANYON (Univ)—Ann Blyth's romance with cowpoke Howard Duff hits a snag when her old man, George Brent, learns that Howard's a member of a family he hates like poison. A very superior Technicolor Western.

SHOCKPROOF (Col.)—Patricia Knight, a murderess paroled in the tender custody of parole officer Cornel Wilde, goes and gets mixed up with a shady gambler, John Baragrey. Nicely performed, but it's shoddy stuff.

STREETS OF LAREDO (Para.)—Outlaw chief Macdonald Carey stirs up lots of trouble for ex-lieutenants William Holden and William Bendix when they join the Texas Rangers. A good Western. It's in Technicolor, natch. With Mona Freeman.

THE UNDERCOVER MAN (Col.)—Treasury agent Glenn Ford tracks down an underworld czar who's been holding a big city in the palm of his vicious hand. An exciting, well acted, realistic thriller.

WAKE OF THE RED WITCH (Rep.)—An action-packed tale of the South Seas, with John Wayne as a rugged skipper in the thick of the battle for a fortune in pearls. Gail Russell, Adele Mara and Henry Daniell are also present.

WE WERE STRANGERS (Col.)—A story of Cuban revolutionists in the early 1930's, this great film blends nightmarish horror and poetic beauty into a tremendous cinematic experience. Jennifer Jones, John Garfield, Pedro Armendariz, Gilbert Roland and every other performer in it are magnificent. Directed by John Huston, this is a giant among motion pictures.

1881

ROGERS

SILVERPLATE

by

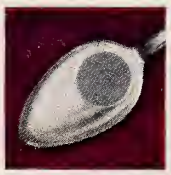
ONEIDA LTD.

SILVERSMITHS

Here's value! This quality-name Silverplate

Ever since you were a child you've heard these silver-wise old names. Here's elegant silverware that will take 3-times-a-day use, year after year, with nary a sign of wear!

Stop in at your jeweler's today and arrange to own this luxurious silverware service. Choose from the four distinguished patterns shown below: 55 pieces, with chest, for only $49.75! Also 72-piece service in chest, $69.75; 5-piece place setting, $4.50. No federal tax.



*Plantation

*Del Mar

*Capri

*Surf Club

EXTRA QUALITY 5 WAYS

Extra silver for longer life!

Exclusive contour knife design!

Perfect balance you can FEEL!

Richly handsome patterns!

Flawless finish you can SEE!

Handsome anti-tarnish chest contains: 16 Teaspoons, 8 Soup Spoons, 8 Hollow Handle Knives (mirror-stainless blades), 8 Forks, 8 Salad Forks, 3 Table Spoons, 1 Cold Meat Fork, 1 Gravy Ladle, 1 Butter Knife, 1 Sugar Spoon.

55-piece Service for eight

ONLY

$49.75

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE WHO TAKE PRIDE IN LIVING NICELY

*Trade Mark. Copyright, 1949, Oneida, Ltd., Oneida, N. Y.

Mrs. Orson Munn Jr.

One of New York's most glamorous debutantes of 1947... and now one of the most charming hostesses in the younger married set.

"I smoked Camels, and only Camels, for 30 straight days," Mrs. Munn will tell you. "They're so mild.. the very mildest cigarette I've ever smoked. And I always have cartons handy. For parties, you know."

"Pat" Munn made the Camel 30-Day Mildness Test, and then she said:

"Camels are the mildest cigarette I ever smoked"

She's a girl who likes to make up her own mind about things. The clothes she wears. The horses she rides. And... the cigarette she smokes.

And she found out about cigarette mildness for herself. Camels have always been famous for mildness. And she made the test that confirmed how deserved that fame is!

If you've never given Camel a real, day-by-day trial, make the same test she did. Smoke Camels for 30 days. Let your own "T-Zone" (T for Taste and Throat) tell you how mild a cigarette can be. And how rich in flavor! Start the 30-day test today!

According to a Nationwide survey:

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE

Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel.

In a recent test of hundreds of people who smoked only Camels for 30 days, noted throat specialists, making weekly examinations, reported NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

Camels for Mildness

R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

AN JUDY GARLAND LOVE AGAIN?

july 15c

JUN -9 1949

modern screen

LL MAGAZINE • A DELL MAGAZINE •

PER

RECEIVED
JUN 15 1949

Jeanne Crain and Michael

What a thrilling difference in your skin with your First Cake of Camay!

There's magic in a lovely skin! The magic of love and romance! And your skin can be softer and smoother with your first cake of Camay! Give up careless cleansing. Go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay care on scores of women. And almost all won lovelier complexions—each using one cake of Camay. Test Camay yourself!—the directions on the wrapper show the way to greater beauty.

READ ABOUT THIS LOVELY BRIDE!

Cathie's childhood dreaming place was High Point, on the Appalachian Trail near her home. The first day she and Carlo climbed up there, her most wonderful dream came true. He proposed!

Married a month—Carlo remembered that "first anniversary" with a red rose! And Cathie can't forget what nice things Camay has done for her. She's on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet forever!

MRS. CARLO ADAMS
a beautiful Camay Bride of Monroe, New York portrait painted by

Camay THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

©CB 194883

"Dentists say the IPANA way works!"

Junior model Lorna Lynn shows how it can work for you, too

"Wh-e-e-e-e!" Cute-as-a-button Lorna Lynn, 16-year-old New York fashion model, finds the roller-coaster at Palisades Amusement Park as thrilling as her own lightning climb to success. And her dates find Lorna's Ipana smile plenty thrilling, too!

Like so many successful junior models, Lorna knows how much a dazzling smile depends on firm, healthy gums. "I follow the Ipana way to healthier gums and brighter teeth," she says, "because dentists say it works!" Here's how this professionally approved Ipana dental care can work for you, too . . .

Lorna shows the Ipana way is easy as 1, 2:

1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all tooth surfaces with Ipana at least twice a day.
2. Then massage gums the way your dentist advises—to stimulate gum circulation. (Ipana's unique formula actually helps stimulate your gums. You can feel the invigorating tingle!)

Try this for healthier gums, brighter teeth, an Ipana smile. Ipana's extra-refreshing flavor leaves your breath cleaner, your mouth fresher, too. Remember, a good dentifrice, like a good dentist, is never a luxury!

YES, 8 OUT OF 10 DENTISTS SAY:

Products of Bristol-Myers

Ipana dental care promotes Healthier gums, brighter teeth*

P.S. For correct brushing, use the DOUBLE DUTY Tooth Brush with the twist in the handle. 1000 dentists helped design it!

*In thousands of recent reports from dentists all over the country.

(Advertisement)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Don't be Half-safe!

by

VALDA SHERMAN

At the first blush of womanhood many mysterious changes take place in your body. For instance, the apocrine glands under your arms begin to secrete daily a type of perspiration you have never known before. This is closely related to physical development and causes an unpleasant odor on both your person and your clothes.

There is nothing "wrong" with you. It's just another sign you are now a woman, not a girl . . . so now you must keep yourself safe with a truly effective underarm deodorant.

Two dangers—Underarm odor is a real handicap at this romantic age, and the new cream deodorant Arrid is made especially to overcome this very difficulty. It kills this odor on contact in 2 seconds, then by antiseptic action prevents the formation of all odor for 48 hours and keeps you shower-bath fresh. It also stops perspiration and so protects against a second danger—perspiration stains. Since physical exertion, embarrassment and emotion can now cause apocrine glands to fairly gush perspiration, a dance, a date, an embarrassing remark may easily make you perspire and offend, or ruin a dress.

All deodorants are not alike—so remember—no other deodorant tested stops perspiration and odor so completely yet so safely as new Arrid. Its safety has been proved by doctors. That's why girls your age buy more Arrid than any other age group. More men and women use Arrid than any other deodorant. Antiseptic, used by 117,000 nurses.

Intimate protection is needed—so protect yourself with this snowy, stainless cream. Awarded American Laundering Institute Approval Seal—harmless to fabrics. Safe for skin—can be used right after shaving. Arrid, with the amazing new ingredient Creamogen, will not dry out.

Your satisfaction guaranteed, or your money back! If you are not completely convinced that Arrid is in every way the finest cream deodorant you've ever used, return the jar with unused portion to Carter Products, Inc., 53 Park Pl., N.Y.C., for refund of full purchase price.

Don't be half-safe. Be Arrid-safe! Use Arrid to be sure. Get Arrid now at your favorite drug counter—only 39¢ plus tax.

JULY, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

CAN JUDY GARLAND LOVE AGAIN? ... by George Benjamin 24
AVA GARDNER'S GREATEST GAMBLE ... by James Darson 28
NOW I'LL TALK! ... by Robert Mitchum 30
SMALL WONDER (Jeanne Crain) ... by Louis Pollock 32
MYTHS STARS BELIEVE ABOUT THEMSELVES (Crawford, Flynn, Mature, Lamarr, etc.) ... by Hedda Hopper 34
MY DAZE ... by Ronald Reagan 37
LADY IN WAITING (June Haver) ... 38
THE HOME SHE LEFT FOR HIM (Rita Hayworth) ... 42
HE COULD HAVE BEEN A BUM (Burt Lancaster) ... by Howard Latane 44
THE QUEEN SAYS "NUTS!" (Barbara Stanwyck) ... by Frances Clark 46
FOOTLOOSE AND FANCY DRESS (Stack, Madison, Russell, Temple, etc.) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 48
WHICH GIRL HAS THE GABLE? (Clark Gable) by Janet Franklin and Douglas Johnson 52
THIS LOVE OF OURS ... by Louis Jourdan 54
NEVER UNDERESTIMATE THE POWER (Tyrone Power) ... by Morgan MacNeil 61 GODDESS IN SHADOW (Ingrid Bergman) ... by Sandra Sue Dresker 64

features

THE INSIDE STORY ... 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS ... 6
EDITORIAL: Don't Let Them Down (Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy) ... 27
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: The Great Sinner ... 56

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ... by Christopher Kane 16
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed) ... 22
FASHION ... 66
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ... by Leonard Feather 77
YOUR LETTERS ... 79
FAN FARE ... 82
THE FANS ... by Gloria Lampert 86
NEW FACES ... 88

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Jeanne Crain and Michael by Nickolas Muray

Other picture credits, page 23

WADE H. NICHOLS, editor

WILLIAM HARTLEY, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
FLORENCE EPSTEIN, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
MAXINE FIRESTONE, assistant fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor
TOM CARLILE, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
VIOLA MOORE, associate editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
NANCY WOOD, food editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 39, No. 2, July, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U.S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U.S.A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

Queen of TECHNICOLOR Musicals!

M-G-M's

Neptune's Daughter

STARRING

ESTHER WILLIAMS
RED SKELTON
RICARDO MONTALBAN
BETTY GARRETT
KEENAN WYNN
XAVIER CUGAT
AND HIS ORCHESTRA

COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR

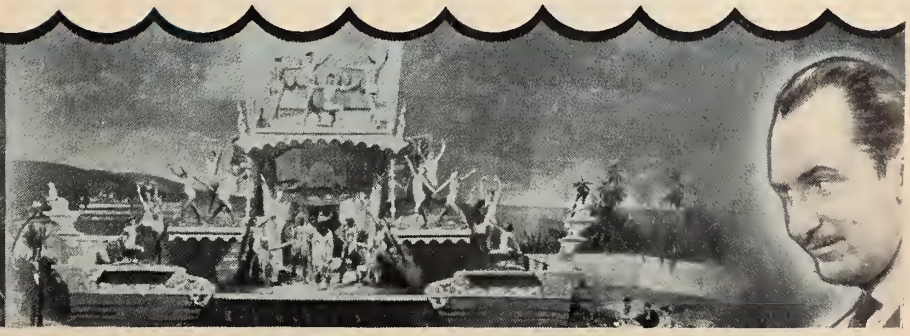
SONG HITS! including:
"Baby, It's Cold Outside"
"My Heart Beats Faster"

Available on M-G-M Records

M-G-M 25th Anniversary 1924 1949

Songs! from sweet and-hot songstress Betty Garrett!

Laughter! with the carrot-topped King of Comedy, Red Skelton!

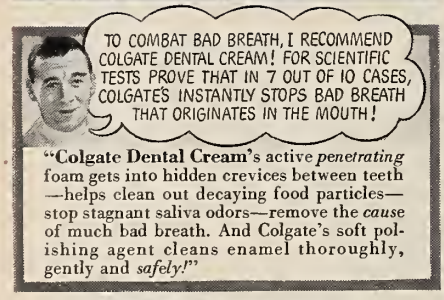


Romance! between beauteous Esther and handsome Ricardo Montalban!

Screen Play by Dorothy Kingsley
Additional Dialogue by Ray Singer and Dick Chevillat

Directed by EDWARD BUZZELL
Produced by JACK CUMMINGS
A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

Rhythm! by Xavier Cugat and his exciting orchestra!



Spectacle! M-G-Mermaids in breath-taking water-revels! All this—and Keenan Wynn's clowning, too!

Sorry, Pal! You're Dispossessed!

"Colgate Dental Cream's active penetrating foam gets into hidden crevices between teeth —helps clean out decaying food particles—stop stagnant saliva odors—remove the cause of much bad breath. And Colgate's soft polishing agent cleans enamel thoroughly, gently and safely!"

LATER–Thanks to Colgate Dental Cream

EXCEPT FOR OCCASIONAL belts across the mouth, no one ever tries to stop us when we feel like talking. Once in a while we say something good and a pal writes it down for the Reader's Digest. The Digest always looks the other way. Anyway, we're making a collection of our own bright comments and someday we hope someone will be smart enough to print them. Despite our mastery of the mot juste or the squelch, as it is familiarly known, there is one person in Hollywood who has us beat. She has only to part her lips and out slips a pearl. We humbly bow before Barbara Stanwyck—the Queen in "The Queen Says 'Nuts!' " on page 46 of this issue. . . .

WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN a little jealous of Clark Gable—and our best friend often tells us we should be. Sometimes we think that if we could only get a little more of that California sunshine things would be different . . . But even with a sunburn, would we catch a glance from Ann Sheridan or Nancy Davis? We doubt it. Would any girl chase us if we didn't snatch her pocketbook first? We doubt that, too. So we've put our mustache back on the shelf and we're not as sorry as we might have been, because C. G. has his troubles now. (We could use troubles like his!) The question on page 52 is: "Which Girl Has The Gable?" Line forms on the right. . . .

ONCE IN A while we lock up our typewriter, put our feet in a bottom drawer, and dream. We're often carried away. The day we felt like Hamlet was hard on everyone—especially Ophelia who was reading proofs in a corner of the office. We were pretty shocked when Hedda Hopper said she knew a few more like us. Seems the woods are full of split personalities. To prove it, Hedda dished up a tasty morsel called, "Myths Stars Believe About Themselves." It's on page 34. . . .

SOME MONTHS AGO, Bob Stack shot a bullet into the air and a brace of pheasants promptly dropped at his feet. Bob thought a small dinner party would be in order, and proceeded to pluck the birds. By the time his guest list was completed, though, the pheasants had gone back into a deep freeze, a caterer had opened his kit in the kitchen and the party had turned into a costume brawl. Reba and Bonnie Churchill (our own) got rigged up in style and went on along. Their report on the riotous affair, "Footloose and Fancy Dress," starts on page 48. . . .

A PERSON MIGHT think we'd run out of story ideas after a while. But, person, we never do. In fact, we are loaded. If you've ever thought of being a baby-sitter (or if you already have a degree) we're sure you'll be interested in our baby-sitting experiences at Betty Hutton's house. (No, we didn't sit with Betty.) You can read all the details in next month's issue. We also expect to surprise and delight you with hand-written tales about Doris Day, Dan Dailey, Bob Stack and many others of your favorites. Dick Powell, by the way, will have his say on the rumors concerning him and June Allyson. But hold on—the August issue's not on sale till July 8th. . . .

If you thought 'THE PALEFACE' was funny... Wait 'til you see this HONEY!

Paramount presents

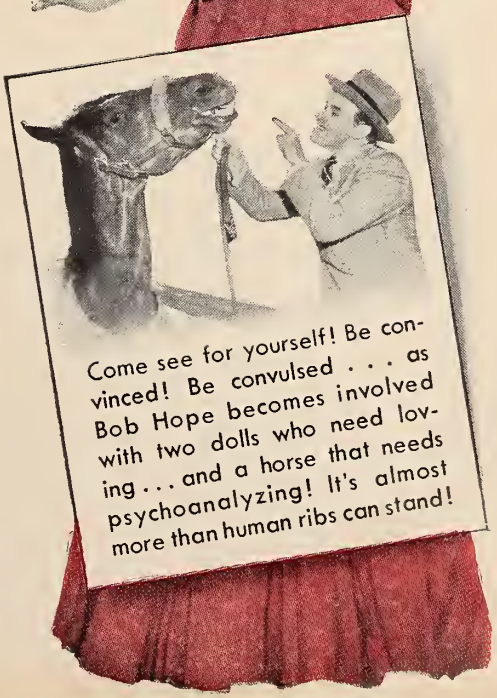
BOB HOPE
LUCILLE BALL

in Damon Runyon's

"Sorrowful JONES"

with

Wm. Demarest · Bruce Cabot · Thomas Gomez



and Introducing

MARY JANE SAUNDERS

Foreword narrated by Walter Winchell

Produced by ROBERT L. WELCH · Directed by SIDNEY LANFIELD

Screenplay by Melville Shavelson, Edmund Hartmann and Jack Rose • Adapted from a Story by Damon Runyon and a Screenplay by William R. Lipman, Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman

Come see for yourself! Be convinced! Be convulsed . . . as Bob Hope becomes involved with two dolls who need loving . . . and a horse that needs psychoanalyzing! It's almost more than human ribs can stand!

Liz Taylor and Glenn Davis on one of their last dates before they broke up.

Special: What happened to Elizabeth Taylor's romance?

■ Elizabeth Taylor's broken engagement to football hero Glenn Davis is a big surprise to everybody but—Elizabeth Taylor!

When she came over to my house and I asked her point blank, "What in the wide world happened between you two kids?" she opened her eyes wide and said, "Oh, there was never really an engagement between us—we were good friends, and we still are."

Oh, come now, Elizabeth!

Before she went to England, and later to Florida, she was the most-in-love teen-age girl I have ever seen. She swore she would wait for her West Pointer to come back from a military assignment in Korea if it took the rest of her life. In fact, things were so torrid that her parents and her studio had to get her to promise that she would not get married until she was 18.

Now Glenn is as lonely as that little gold football charm Elizabeth loved so much when he gave it to her—and which she has put "among her souvenirs."

If you ask me—and even if you don't—I have my own private idea of what might have happened to Lizzie's young heart. And I don't mean the story that she fell more deeply in love with William Pauley, Jr., whom she met in Florida.

Sure, she and the young socialite are dating. But she is also seeing Tommy Breen, whose father is Mr. Censor of the Johnston Office, and Jerome Courtland and Lawrence Sheerin are other smitten beaux.

But I hear different about who the real gent is.

If my inside tipster is right, Elizabeth has done what many young girls do: she has become very infatuated with an older, much more sophisticated man. She met him in the East. That he looks upon her as just a lovely girl, little more than a child, makes no difference to the way he makes her heart go pitty-pat.

In fact, I hear the gentleman is a little worried because of the obvious "crush" the beautiful young girl has developed for him.

It isn't serious with him—and it won't last long with her, you can be sure. When I was exactly her age, I fell madly in love with a middle-aged doctor in my home town and lived and breathed (or didn't breathe) according to the smiles he bestowed upon me.

Falling in love with a Sophisticate and a Man Of The World is part of the business of growing up. Come on, reader, confess—hasn't it ever happened to you?

■ One thing Bob Mitchum must be very careful about since his trouble is not to be too sensitive.

The other night at the Beachcombers café he was very upset because he thought his old friend, Frank Sinatra, had not spoken to him. I heard Bob mutter, "I guess I'm not worth speaking to now."

Well, I was sitting at the same table with Frankie and I know he did not see Bob nor know that Bob was trying to speak to him. Both Frankie and I were sitting with our backs to Mitchum and as Frankie left very soon after dinner, he didn't know Bob was in the place.

Mitchum is being such a good boy now and conducting himself so well, he must not make himself unhappy through purely imaginary slights.

* * *

Most conspicuous new twosome at the Friars' Frolic—at which $300,000 was raised by the biggest stars in Hollywood for Hollywood's own charity, the Motion Picture Country Home—was Audrey Totter and Brian Donlevy.

Brian has been a lone wolf, romantically speaking, ever since he and his blonde wife, Marjorie, broke up so sensationally last year. Taking Audrey to the Frolic might not have meant so much if he hadn't shown up the James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon, Fred MacMurray and Van Johnson cheerfully go through paces as chorus boys at annual Friars' Frolic.

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

very next night with her at the Seacombers, romantic café down by the sad sea waves in Santa Monica.

Audrey is a gal who gets herself engaged and disengaged more times than anyone else in Hollywood—so we will just have to wait to see what we shall see with this combination.

* * *

How far out of their way can certain writers go to pick on an actor? Several Hollywood scribes reported that Jimmy Stewart tried to "steal" the show at the Friars' Frolic when he fell to his knees during his dance routine with Fred MacMurray, Robert Taylor, Van Johnson, Ray Milland, Walter Pidgeon, George Murphy and Peter Lawford.

It was really a cute number to watch as these top-flight lovers played and danced a chorus number in top hats and tails while Gene Kelly, all dolled up like a girl, flirted with them.

What happened to Jimmy was this: He missed a step, got out of line, and started walking on his knees out of sheer exasperation with himself.

You'll never make me believe those other swell guys were miffed—as reported.

* * *

The Argentine polo team and the American, took over Hollywood, socially speaking. There were so many dinner dances and cocktail parties that most of us had to take a rest cure after Mary and Laddie Sanford left town.

Mary used to be Mary Duncan, star of the silent screen, and she has many pals in Hollywood. Marion Davies loaned the Sanfords her beautiful home for their elaborate cocktail party—and at least 300 guests must have come to meet the polo-playing gentlemen of both teams.

Cutest couple on hand were Jane Powell and her fiancé, Geary Steffen, who are so in love they don't know whether they are meeting polo players or Hottentots. They shake hands with other people but they have eyes just for each other.

Janie wore a lovely cocktail dress of gray with a modest Peter Pan collar but with a daring little slit in the skirt. With her pretty legs, why not?

Another delightful party for the Polo-ers was hosted by the Mike Romanoffs. Gloria, Mike's pretty bride, was a delightful hostess who saw to it that everyone had a good time.

Just so there would be no wallflowers, each man drew a slip of paper to find out who his partner would be for the following dance. Ronald Colman kept drawing his wife's name —which looked like a put-up job to me, they were plainly so delighted to get each other.

(Speaking of Ronnie as a dancer—he is the most ardent Square Dancer in town. Works at it as though it were an Academy Award-winning role and gets a bit miffed when someone makes a mistake!)

Still another funny angle about this name-drawing business was that not once during the evening did Jimmy Stewart get Gloria Hatrick McLean, the lady he "brung"! Instead, Jimmy had to keep watching out of the corner of his eye while his girl danced with Peter Lawford—the competition.

If Jimmy doesn't make up his mind soon about giving up his bachelorhood, there are bets around that Pete will walk off with the very attractive Gloria.

* * *

Tattle Tales: Peter Lawford is plenty burned over those stories that he is tight with his money and is a slow man with a dollar. Well, Pete, one way to beat it is to toss a little lettuce around—throw a party or something. . . . Paris stylists report that Rita Hayworth is planning the shortest of short hair cuts. If this is true, you can bet she is not planning to make a movie soon. Rita once told me that short hair is not glamorous on the screen and that she would keep her shoulder-length bob as long as she was an actress. . . . I wish someone would tell Lew Producer Horry Brown casts a slightly apprehensive eye at the dynomic blonde—who happens to be the Belle of the Frolic, Gene Kelly.

It wos a fine night for getting autographs. Here Greg ond Greto Peck give theirs. Benefit roised over $300,000 for the Country Home.

That's no mod hotter, that's Fronk Sinotro waiting to go on with Van Johnson. Stors gave time and talent to make the Frolic a success.

Brush up and light up your smile

USE THE BRUSH WITH

Real Nylon Bristles

Made by the makers of DR. WEST'S MIRACLE-TUFT 50¢

Ted, Lindsay and Betty Huttan Briskin watch little Candy's reactian ta her first birthday cake.

Clawn Abe Galdstein entertains Guy Madison and Gail Russell at the Clyde Beatty Circus.

Calleen Tawnsend, with Lau Evans, gives an autagraph autside the Fax Inglewaad Theatre.

Ayres that it is not up to the man to deny romance stories. Lew's persistent insistence, "I am not planning to marry Jane Wyman" is bad manners—and it is nice that Janie is such an understanding girl where he is concerned, for otherwise she would have the right to be angry. . . . Well, get this! George Sanders says: "A woman with a perfect disposition would bore me to death. It is much more interesting when you open a door, not to know whether you will be greeted by a kiss ar a vase." Interesting, maybe—but hard on the nerves!. . . . The girl who has been going around impersonating Arlene Dahl must be the most conceited person in the world. If she were as beautiful as Arlene, she would not have to impersonate anyone. . . . Shirley Temple refused to tell how much money she came inta on her 21st birthday, but it is estimated at close ta $9,000,000. She instructed her lawyer not ta disclose the exact amount and it did not have to be published because she is not taking over the management of her fortune. "My father is a banker and understands money," Shirley explained, "so he will continue to manage my finances."

I never thought the day would come when Franchot Tone would be the one not to make up with Jean Wallace. He has been so madly in love with her for years and took a lot of bossing around.

There was a time when she would upbraid him in public and he'd do nothing but sit there and take it. But that is all over.

When Franchot said "Goodbye" this last time, he meant it. Even after Jean followed him to Paris, hoping that he would forgive and forget just one more time, he didn't change his heart.

Somewhere in all this there is a lesson for wives and girl friends wha make a habit of leading men around by the nose, always sure that they will be forgiven.

* * *

Dick Haymes' divorce from Joanne Dru is coming high—$5,000 a month alimony. Dick has not worked in pictures far a long time and it takes a lot of radio engagements and records sold to add up to that much money. But Joanne is adamant in her demands that he pay.

Meanwhile, I don't know whether his girl friend, Nora Eddington Flynn, will be divorced

"Whatever it is, there is nothing you can't tell the woman you love!"
DAY AFTER DAY YOU'LL KEEP REMEMBERING EVERY STIRRING MOMENT OF THIS HEART-GRIPPING ROMANCE FROM WARNER BROS.
A sister shamed, and a doctor who breaks a confidence to keep from breaking a woman's heart.
"NIGHT UNTO NIGHT"
"Nothing timid about the author or producers of this one!" DOROTHY KILGALLEN Famed Columnist
STARRING RONALD REAGAN · VIVECA LINDFORS
DIRECTED BY DON SIEGEL PRODUCED BY OWEN CRUMP SCREEN PLAY BY KATHRYN SCOLA • FROM THE NOVEL BY PHILIP WYLIE • MUSIC BY FRANZ WAXMAN

Enjoy the thrill of a

GREYHOUND AMAZING AMERICA TOUR

Tailored to Please Just You!

Like a well-fitting suit, you want a vacation trip fashioned to your whim and to your summer-time purse. It's so easy, when you choose from the hundreds of Greyhound Amazing America Expense-paid tours—with reservations and entertainment included and arranged for you in advance, by Greyhound. Select your 1949 travel treat today.

6-DAY COLONIAL VIRGINIA TOUR $40.45
Hotel accommodations, sightseeing, admission to historic spots in Williamsburg, Lexington and others. ☐

7-DAY MACKINAC ISLAND TOUR $86.49
6 nights at famous Grand Hotel and all meals (17); facilities for all sports, gay dining and dancing. ☐

18-DAY ALASKA TOUR $194.92
Transportation Edmonton to Fairbanks over Alcan Highway, 17 nights accommodations; scenic side trips. ☐

4-DAY LOS ANGELES TOUR $14.00
3 nights hotel accommodations with sightseeing in Hollywood, Pasadena, Beverly Hills and Beach Area. ☐

2½-Day Yellowstone Park Tour, $44.75 ☐. 4-Day Smoky Mountains, $19.50 ☐. 8-Day New England Circle, $54.55 ☐. 7-Day Canadian Rockies, $56.60 ☐. 4-Day Wisconsin Dells, $13.95 ☐. 2-Day Roanoke Island-Lost Colony, $21.05 (includes meals ☐. 3-Day Chicago, $11.95 ☐. 4-Day Seattle-Victoria, $20.50 ☐. 3-Day Colorado Springs, $15.20 ☐. 4-Day San Francisco, $14.80 ☐. 7-Day Northern Lakes, $35.75 ☐.

(Add round-trip Greyhound fare from your city.)

Prices are for double room accommodations, and subject to change without notice.

MAIL THIS COUPON FOR TOUR FOLDER

Fill in this coupon and mail to Greyhound Highway Tours, Dept. DM 79, 105 West Madison, Chicago 2, Ill. Be sure to put check-mark opposite tour which interests you.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City & State*_____ DM79

Cory Grant, recovered from yellow joundice, returns from Englond to be met ot the boot by Betsy Droke. She still insists they're just friends.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

by the time this is in print or not. She keeps postponing her trip to Las Vegas for two reasons. (1) She does not want to leave Dick while he is having so many headaches getting his own divorce settled. (2) She hates to leave her children, and Errol won't let her take little Rory with her.

* * *

Sometimes I feel like scolding Shelley Winters, but she really has a good eye for publicity.

When she was asked if she and Farley Granger were in love, instead of pulling the old "we-are-just-good-friends" gag, she said, archly: "We're good friends in a romantic sort of way."

Incidentally, she waited to make this announcement until Patricia Neal, the chief competition for Farley, was back in town from London.

* * *

Betty Grable is the only star I know who eats her cake and keeps her figure, too. But it takes a bit of doing.

Between pictures Betty "eats like a horse" (the quotes are hers) and puts on between 10 and 12 pounds above her correct screen weight, which is 115. Then, four or five weeks before she goes back to work, she goes on a dieting and exercising spree and lives like a hermit so she won't be tempted to eat.

"It just isn't possible for me to starve myself all the time to keep my figure," Betty told me. "I keep remembering when I was a chorus girl and didn't have enough money to buy a good meal. What's the sense of having the money—and a wonderful cook—and then not being able to eat those wonderful pies and cakes and gooey things I love? No, sir, I had rather do it the hard way—eat what I want between movies and then suffer to take it off!"

Joon Crowford brings Christopher and Christine to the Copitol Records' circus porty for stors' children. Between them is Joonnie Fink.

Roy Rogers and Dole Evons help Trigger get immortolized by hoving his footprints ploced in the cement ot Groumon's Chinese Theotre.

Are you in the know?

Which should be your hairdo guide?

- ☐ Your own type
- ☐ Your favorite actress
- ☐ What your crowd's wearing

When groping for a new hairdo, maybe you'd follow the fad-mad crowd—or hitch your noggin to your favorite star. Think twice! According to a famous Paris stylist, your hairdo should suit your own type. Your kind of face . . . your kind of personality! Different girls have different needs in sanitary protection, too. That's why Kotex offers you 3 absorbencies to choose from. Which one is practically tailor-made for you? Try Regular, Junior, Super—and see!

In dining cars, what's a good plan?

- ☐ Freeze strangers
- ☐ Make new friends
- ☐ Bring a book

Traveling alone? Train etiquette doesn't say nay to exchanging polite, impersonal small talk. Don't think you must clam up . . . or form a lifelong friendship. Use good judgment. If in doubt, read while waiting for your meal. Helps ward off unwelcome chatter! On certain days, good judgment tells you to keep on the cautious side with Kotex. For Kotex gives you extra protection . . . has an exclusive safety center that guards you, at home and "abroad"!

If you didn't hear the name clearly—

- ☐ Say so
- ☐ Let it pass
- ☐ Repeat it anyway

See what happens when a friend mumbles introductions? You didn't get the name! Well, say so, rather than ignore or garble it. Even if his monicker's Schnicklefritz, he'll expect you to remember—and pronounce it right. (You'll be glad you did, next time you meet!) And to meet any situation with assurance, "that" time of the month, choose Kotex. Why? Because those special, flat pressed ends don't cause revealing outlines. Let Kotex be your poise-preserver!

When you're a house-guest, should you—

- ☐ Follow your whims
- ☐ Fit into the plans
- ☐ Forget about clock-watching

To be a really welcome guest, consider your hostess instead of your whims. If a picnic's planned—go, and have fun. Even if you'd rather dress up for dancing. And throughout your visit, keep clock-conscious, so you won't be late for meals or curfew. Whatever the plans, you can be comfortable regardless of your calendar—by choosing the new Kotex. It's the napkin made to stay soft while you wear it; gives you downy softness that holds its shape. You're always so at ease with Kotex!

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

Which deodorant would you decide on?

- ☐ A cream
- ☐ A powder
- ☐ A liquid

Granted you're in the know about napkins . . . what about deodorants for napkin use? Fact is, while creams and liquids will do for everyday daintiness—yet, for "those" days a powder deodorant's best—sprinkled freely on sanitary napkins. That's because a powder has no moisture-resistant base; doesn't slow up absorption. And soft, soothing Quest Powder is made especially for napkin use.

Being unscented, Quest Deodorant Powder doesn't just mask odors. Quest destroys them. Safely. Positively. To avoid offending, buy a can of Quest Powder today!

Quest Deodorant Powder

Ask for it by name

TONI TWINS prove magic of SOFT-WATER Shampooing

Lather . . . was Alva's problem!

"Imagine trying to shampoo your hair without enough lather," complains Alva Anderson. "And that's just about what happens every time I use a soap shampoo!" Of course, Alva won't ever get the lather she wants with a soap shampoo —especially in hard water! And she can't rinse away that dulling soap film, either. That's what leaves hair looking drab and lifeless. Makes it hard to manage, too!

But Alice got heaps of it!

"Toni Creme Shampoo is wonderful! Even in hard water, I get all the rich, creamy lather I need—and then some!" says twin Alice. And Toni does more than that! After Soft-Water Shampooing, your hair is exquisitely clean . . . shinier . . . more glamorous than you ever dreamed possible! Each strand shimmers with all, yes all its natural beauty! Curls are fresh, vibrant-looking . . . soft as a moonbeam!

Now it's Toni Creme Shampoo for Two!

The Anderson twins know there's nothing like Toni Creme Shampoo! Nothing like Soft-Water Shampooing in hard water! For Toni bursts into oceans of thick, billowy lather . . . rinses away dirt and dandruff instantly. Toni leaves your hair wonderfully fresh and radiant . . . sparkling with precious new highlights. Helps your permanent "take" better . . . look lovelier longer. Get the jar or tube of Toni Creme Shampoo today. Try Soft-Water Shampooing. It's for you!

Enriched with Lanolin

Shirley Temple and John Agar celebrate her 21st birthday on location for Always Sweethearts. The cake was from the cast and crew.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Jane Wyman is making The Octopus and Miss Smith for Michael Curtiz, the gentleman from Hungary who can tie up the Queen's English in a way that makes Sam Goldwyn look like an amateur.

The other day, Mike was telling the Warner Brothers fashion designer, Milo Anderson, just how he wanted Jane dressed for a certain scene.

"She must be very sophisticated and chic," explained Mr. Curtiz. "She should look like a Happy Carnegie model!"

* * *

Keep your eye on Ruth Roman, the girl who plays the wife in Champion. She's headed for stardom or I miss my guess. The impressive thing about her is that she is smart enough to retain her own personality and not try to imitate some other top-notcher.

In private life, Ruth lives in a professional boarding house where she pays $125 a month for a big sunny room, three home-cooked meals a day and a maid to keep her room and press her clothes. Even her new Warner Brothers contract, which runs into hundreds weekly, hasn't inspired her to move to swankier quarters. "And spend a lot of money? Phooey to that!" says Ruth.

She tries to help other girls, living in the boarding house, who have not been as lucky as she.

And she abides by all the house rules—home from dates by 12:30 at night, no borrowing clothes or cosmetics from other girls, and all radios turned off by 10 p. m. for those who have to retire early for morning calls.

* * *

When nine-year-old Nancy Sinatra is asked how she likes her new room in the house big Nancy and Frank have just bought in Bel Air, she merely shrugs her shoulders.

Aly Khon looks glum os he strolls with Rito Hoyworth ot the St. Cloud rocetrock in Poris. His horse finished next to lost in on eorly roce.

"All the rest of the stuff around here is new," sniffs Missy Sinatra, "but I still have my same old furniture."

Lest her nose get too definitely out of joint, the Sinatras are getting her new trappings as a birthday "surprise."

* * *

Close-up of June Allyson: She likes to flirt and have lunch at the studio with her good-looking leading men—all on the harmless side, of course. . . . Secretly, she likes to think of herself as a femme fatale. Once, when an overly-jealous and silly wife went to Dick Powell and complained because Junie had lunched at the studio with her husband three days running, Dick roared with laughter—which made both June and the jealous wife furious. . . . She likes Peter Pan collars even on dinner clothes and cocktail suits. . . . She doesn't think she looks well in hats. . . . She takes her shoes off the minute she gets home, and is constantly getting holes and runs in her stockings. . . . She has a nervous habit of "eating" lipstick off her mouth and is trying to cure herself of it. . . . She's a natural-born "back-seat driver" and likes to give advice on everything from running a car to running your life. . . . She eats lemons and is amused when people pucker up and almost die watching her consume one. . . . Unlike other players who pretend they can't bear to watch themselves on the screen, June gets a kick out of going to see her own movies. She's kind of a June Allyson fan—but she's always looking for ways to improve her performances. . . . She adores children but can do without child actors. . . . She loves artichokes, lamb chops, Gershwin tunes, fan magazines, new novels, shampooing her hair, freshly-made coffee and the smell of freshly-baked bread. . . . She is honest in admitting that the studio was right and she was wrong about The Stratton Story. She did not want to do it at first. Now it's her favorite picture of all she has made.

That "Left-Out Feeling" can begin at home!

It hurts when a husband seems so indifferent. Yet sometimes a wife has herself to blame. So remember—never trust your charm to anything but creamy, dependable Mum! Mum's unique modern formula contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Be a safety-first girl. Get a jar of Mum today.

Mum-Safer for Charm ... Mum checks perspiration odor all day or evening. Protects against risk of future underarm odor after your bath washes away past perspiration.

Mum-Safer for Skin .... Smooth, creamy Mum contains no harsh or irritating ingredients. Doesn't dry out in the jar to form scratchy crystals. Gentle Mum is harmless to skin.

Mum-Safer for Clothes .... No damaging ingredients to rot or discolor fabrics. Quick, pleasant to use. Economical—no shrinkage, no waste.

For sanitary napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, ideal . . . dependable for this important use, too.

Product of Bristol-Myers

keeps you nice to be near

Have You Heard?

Speaking of husbands, let's consider the matrimonial venture of the telephone pole climber who first glimpsed his wife-to-be as she leaned, lorelei-like, out of a sky-scraper. If this doesn't prove that boy can meet girl under the most incredible circumstances I'll eat Emily Post . . . and that's just one story from the fabulous archives of radio's wedding whiz — "Bride and Groom."

This is one of the most delightful boysterous and girlsterous shows I have heard. For sheer talent and ingenuity emcee Johnny Nelson gets my vote for his aptitude at deflustering brides-to-be. And the impromptu tales he evokes from the engaged couples on how they met, provide an endless variation on the boy meets girl theme. You're likely to hear anything from love among the Lily Cups to tales of unbelievable enterprise.

But spontaneity (which I have almost come to regard as a lost art in radio) is really the keynote of this matrimonial matinee. From the moment the engaged couple wafts before the mike, there's a happy, unrehearsed quality about "Bride and Groom" that makes you feel as though you were part of the wedding party (staged by Sterling Drug Inc.). Johnny Nelson has a merry theory that a wedding a day keeps the blues away. "Bride and Groom" not only banishes blues but rings in a half hour of utterly unique entertainment.

★ ★ ★

If the quickest way to a man's heart is through his stomach, the shortest way to "the quickest way" is to hear "The Betty Crocker Magazine of the Air." For this quarter hour is literally the answer to any dining dilemma. Betty Crocker (I'm constantly amazed at the way in which "Betty Crocker" portrays the company personality of General Mills) has a way of inspiring you to turn a cooking chore into a charm . . . gives recipes and hints that I haven't been able to find elsewhere. To counteract the old adage that all work and no play makes Jill a dull girl, Betty Crocker also features outstanding guest stars who add spice and sparkle to the proceedings.

Wedding bells ring on Bride and Groom at 2:30 PM EDT Monday through Friday. The Betty Crocker Magazine of the Air goes to press at 10:30 AM EDT Monday through Friday.

Other Tips on Daytime Dialing

"Breakfast Club"	9:00 AM edt
"House Party"	3:30 PM edt
"Kay Kyser's College"	4:00 PM edt

Joan Lansing

Gloria Swanson, glamor girl of the silent screen, who returns to the screen in Sunset Boulevard, told me she is amazed at the lack of real, honest-to-goodness glamor in the glamor girls of today's movies.

"They have beautiful bodies and faces—but they do nothing to make themselves exciting! Oh, perhaps they wear a daring gown now and then, but real allure should come from the imagination.

"The real trouble is that underneath all the trappings of clothes and publicity, they are, at heart, just nice little girls playing at being sirens.

"They are about as mysterious as a hamburger, constantly making a round of the night clubs with an assortment of escorts. When they are interviewed, most of them talk about what homebodies they are at heart and how they love to wear slacks and low-heeled shoes.

"That's all right for the mousy types—but it doesn't make for good copy. The trouble is, most of them are too lazy to make themselves interesting!"

Gloria, my friend, that is a mouthful—but I'm going to have to agree that there are just a handful of today's stars who have built up the thrills and excitement of such old-timers as Pola Negri, Mary Pickford, Jean Harlow, Carole Lombard—and you.

* * *

When Sam Goldwyn was forced to reshoot much of Roseanna McCoy, there were rumors that the reason for this had been 15-year-old Joan Evans' complete lack of screen experience. But at the time, Sam told me that the gossip was untrue, and said that Joan is, in fact, a good actress.

Now those rumors should be completely silenced, for Joan is back in Hollywood to make another picture for Goldwyn. It will be called Beloved All Over, and in it Joan will once more share starring honors with Farley Granger.

Incidentally, I am glad to say that, aside from a few slight scars, Joan has fully recovered from the wound she received in her arm when a gun in Farley's hand accidentally went off during a scene in Roseanna McCoy.

* * *

That's all this month. Thanks for the letters and keep writing, because your ideas are always interesting!

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

You've probably heard the old one about the best things in life being free. Well, we might be prejudiced but we think MODERN SCREEN is one of those things. To the first 500 people who fill out this questionnaire and send it back, we'll be pleased to send a three-month subscription to MODERN SCREEN. Just fill in all the information below, rush it back to us, and the August, September and October issues may be yours—and all for free!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our July issue? Write the NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

Can Judy Garland Love Again? . . . ☐
Ava Gardner's Greatest Gamble . . . ☐
Now I'll Talk! by Robert Mitchum ☐
Small Wonder (Jeanne Crain) . . . . ☐
Myths Stars Believe About Themselves (Mature, Crawford, Flynn, Sinatra) by Hedda Hopper . . . . ☐
My Daze by Ronald Reagan . . . . ☐
Lady in Waiting (June Haver) . . . ☐
The House She Left for Him (Rita Hayworth) . . . . . ☐
He Could Have Been a Bum (Burt Lancaster) . . . . . ☐
The Queen Says "Nuts!" (Barbara Stanwyck) . . . . . ☐
Footloose and Fancy Dress (Bob Stack, Guy Madison, Donald O'Connor) . . . . . ☐
Which Girl Has The Gable? . . . . . ☐
This Love of Ours (Louis Jourdan) ☐
Never Underestimate The Power (Tyrone Power) . . . . . ☐
Goddess in Shadow (Ingrid Bergman) . . . . . ☐
Picture of the Month (The Great Sinner) . . . . . ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News . . . . ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST? . . . . . .

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference . . . . . .

. . . . . .

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference . . . . . .

. . . . . .

What MALE star do you like least? . . . . . .

What FEMALE star do you like least? . . . . . .

My name is . . . . . .

My address is . . . . . .

City . . . . . Zone . . . . . State . . . . . I am . . . . . years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

SPIEGEL

SERVING AMERICAN FAMILIES SINCE 1865

NOW YOU CAN HAVE A COPY OF THIS CATALOG

A BIG DEPARTMENT STORE IN YOUR OWN HOME

●

712 PAGES packed with fine quality merchandise . . . thousands of items for home and family at thrifty mail order prices. Everything accurately pictured and described. Many items shown in actual colors.

5 BIG STORES IN ONE makes your shopping easier. There's a Fashion Store for Women . . a Boys' and Girls' Store . . a Men's Store . . a Home Store and a Hardware-Farm-Auto Store.

SHOP WITH CONFIDENCE . . every item is exactly as pictured and described. Prices are printed plainly for easy comparison. You can be sure before you buy. Every order is backed by our 84-YEAR PLEDGE OF SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or Your Money Back.

SPIEGEL INC.
CHICAGO 9, ILLINOIS

JUST PIN A DOLLAR TO THE COUPON

That's all there is to it. Pin a Dollar to the Coupon and we will send you a catalog and a Dollar Merchandise Certificate good on any SPIEGEL Mail Order of $10 or more.

PIN A DOLLAR TO THIS COUPON

Get Your Copy of this Big Catalog
And a Dollar Merchandise Certificate

SPIEGEL INC., Chicago 9, Ill.
I am enclosing a DOLLAR DEPOSIT. Please send me a copy of the new Spiegel Catalog. I understand my dollar will be returned in the form of a Merchandise Certificate good for $1 on any Spiegel Mail Order of $10 or more.

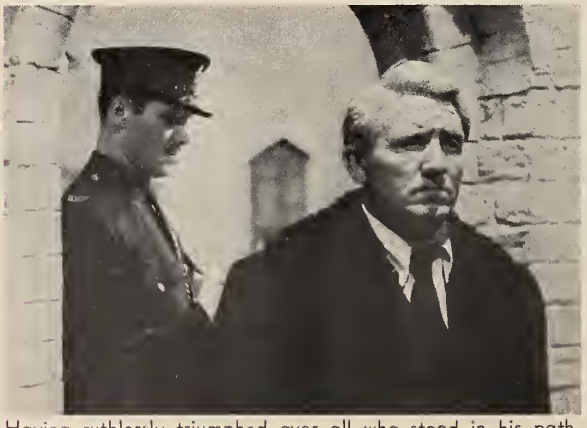
NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

TOWN.....STATE.....

R20-0

MOVIE REVIEWS



by Christopher Kane

In Edward My Son, parents Spencer Tracy and Deborah Kerr join in a birthday toast to Edward as he sleeps upstairs.

Worship for Edward drives Tracy to wealth and power. His wife has a detective watch his affair with Leueen MacGrath.

Having ruthlessly triumphed over all who stood in his path, Tracy, old and alone, eventually goes to prison for his misdeeds.

EDWARD MY SON

Cast: Spencer Tracy, Deborah Kerr, Ian Hunter, James Donald, Mervyn Johns, Leueen MacGrath

MGM

I didn't see Robert Morley on the stage in Edward My Son, though his is generally conceded to have been one of the greatest stage performances of the generation—greater than the play itself, in fact. But I think Spencer Tracy's movie portrayal of the same man lacks a little of the cruelty the character needs. Here's a fellow so unscrupulous he burns his business down for the insurance money, allows his oldest friend to go to jail for him not once but twice, drives his wife literally to drink, and rears a son who is a monster. Yet Spencer never appears to be quite that evil. (Morley has a crueler mouth, I guess.) Anyhow, Spencer's a small business man, until his son Edward is born, at which time, he, Spencer, determines the world is going to be sonny's oyster. There it begins. The burning of the business. The going on to bigger, more crooked deals (big thieves don't get caught, only little ones). A private school wants to chuck Edward out because he's a corrupt little stinker. Spencer buys the mortgages on the school. Edward gets a girl into a delicate condition. Spencer smiles indulgently, and takes care of it. Edward wants money, money, money. Spencer gives it to him. Edward's mother, Deborah Kerr, can't mold the boy's character; her husband's power and personality are so tremendous they completely overshadow her efforts. She grows old, and embittered, and alcoholic. Eventually, Edward is killed in the war. Nothing honorable about it. He'd been stunt-flying; the other young men in his plane had also died for his playfulness. His father, by then a lord (he'd wanted the title to pass on to Edward) and his mother, a bent, wispy woman, are left alone in their great house with their terrible memories. Deborah Kerr is wonderfully good: she's the sum of all lost illusions. Tracy's always fine, and Leueen MacGrath, as Tracy's mistress, is nice, too. She's rather stylized, as to postures and attitudes, but she manages to be warm and graceful at the same time. Mervyn Johns, as Tracy's rap-taking friend, has a few excellent moments. As for Edward, the central character, you never get to meet him at all.

The Lady Gambles: Barbara Stanwyck just can't pass up a gambling table, while Bob Prestan can't help looking worried—that's his money.

THE LADY GAMBLES

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Preston, Stephen McNally, Edith Barrett, John Hoyt.
Universal-International

This is about a lady who can't stay away from the gaming tables. When she hears those dice chatter, she's a gone goose. But the picture falls short of being a Lost Weekend by nine million miles. Neither the script nor the acting is real enough so you can put yourself in any of the assorted characters' places for a minute. Barbara Stanwyck's with her husband, Robert Preston, out in Las Vegas. He's a newspaperman doing an article on the Hoover Dam. She's an idiot who throws all his expense money away at craps and Russian Bank and pokerino. This worries her, and she has to go on gambling till she's won the money back. Hubby Preston is getting to be a nervous wreck. He takes her to a little house in Mexico, for the cure, and she seems to be doing fine, until he leaves on an overnight trip. Then she meets some oldtime gambling pals, they tempt her, she falls. This time she doesn't just spend Preston's expense money, she spends his life savings. He has to go back to Chicago and get a job, instead of writing his book in Mexico. (He was writing a book in Mexico. I forgot to say that.) Barbara sinks lower and lower. She goes back to Las Vegas, looks up the manager of a fancy club (this guy kissed her one time) and asks him for a job. He makes her front for a horse-racing syndicate, but she's so unpredictable she even ruins a big deal for them, and they ditch her. Well, she takes up with a crook called French, some indignant dice players beat her up in an alley, and John Hoyt (he's a doctor) tries to nurse her back to health. She has no will to live, it turns out. Her mother'd died in childbirth when Barbara was born, Barbara's sister (Edith Barrett) has always made Barbara feel guilty about it, so Barbara's been trying to atone by slowly destroying herself at chemin de fer. It's a plain pity. Robert Preston's standing by, though, sister Edith gets nixed off, and as we leave beautiful Universal-International, there's a big hot hope for the future.

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

✓ Not a soap; not a cream— cannot leave dulling film!

✓ Quickly, effectively removes dandruff from both hair and scalp!

✓ Gives fragrant, soft-water lather even in hardest water!

✓ Leaves hair lustrously soft, easy to manage—with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or cream shampoos hides its natural lustre with dulling soap film

✓ Halo—not a soap, not a cream—contains no sticky oils, nothing to hide your hair's natural lustre with dulling film. Made with a new patented ingredient, Halo brings out glossy, shimmering highlights the very first time you use it! Its delightfully fragrant lather rinses away quickly, completely in any kind of water—needs no lemon or vinegar rinse. For hair that's naturally colorful, lustrously soft, easy to manage—use Halo Shampoo! At any drug or cosmetic counter.

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

. . . because HOLD-BOBS really hold. The perfection of this beauty is assured because those perfect curls are formed and held in place gently, yet so very securely, by this truly superior bobby pin. There is nothing finer.

More women use HOLD-BOBS than all other bobby pins combined

. . . a GAYLA* hair beauty aid

©1949
GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED
*T.M. REG U S PAT. OFF. CHICAGO, ILL.

Home of the Brave: Lloyd Bridges tries to make peace between James Edwards (left) and Steve Bradie (right). Steve can't adjust to Army life and vents his bigoted feelings on James.

HOME OF THE BRAVE

Cast: Douglas Dick, Steve Brodie, Jeff Corey, Lloyd Bridges, Frank Lovejoy, James Edwards, Cliff Clark.
United Artists

A fine play about anti-semitism has become a fine movie about Negro discrimination. It's wise and fair and courageous. It tells the story of five soldiers on a mission in the Pacific. There's a young major (Douglas Dick); there's Technical Sergeant Mingo (Frank Lovejoy), thirty-ish and thoughtful; there's Corporal T. J. Everitt (Steve Brodie)—he's had a fat income and a shiny car before the war; there's Finch (Lloyd Bridges), good-tempered and easygoing; and there's a surveying expert, Peter Moss (James Edwards), who's a Negro. Moss had gone to high school with Finch; they'd been friends. Finch, the soldier, is just Finch, the boy, dressed in a uniform. He's not a complex person. He's glad to see Moss again; he's missed him; he expects Moss to reciprocate in kind. As for the Major, he's just interested in getting the job done. So is Sergeant Mingo. But big-shot T. J. Everitt, resentful of the Army, unable to take orders except as personal affronts, vents all his frustrations on Moss. He's an incurably stupid man; even when he's being friendly toward Moss, he's patronizing and disgusting. The group is on a Jap island for four days. They're attacked by heat, mosquitoes, snipers, and their own fear. As tension mounts, T. J. rises to new heights in his baiting of Moss; he's inspired. Finch is finally shot by Japs. Moss, in order to save important maps, has to leave Finch. Later, the Major won't let him go back after Finch; he says the Japs will kill Finch anyway; going back can only jeopardize the safety of the rest of the men, by leading the Japs to their position. Eventually, (the Japs having left him for dead) Finch crawls back into the clearing where Moss is standing guard. Moss, unbelieving, picks up the dying Finch, cradles him in his arms, rocks him back and forth crooning tender little broken phrases. (I never expect to live through a more affecting scene.) By the time the other men are ready to leave the island, Moss can't walk to the boat. He appears to be paralyzed. The paralysis is a result of his guilt feelings; he thinks leaving Finch constitutes a rejection of the one white man who ever offered him love and friendship. He feels Finch's death is his responsibilitiy. A good army doctor (Jeff Corey) eventually helps Moss back to himself, but the picture states very clearly that the few understanding and overworked doctors aren't able to undo even a fraction of the harm done in the field of race relations by the rest of us, even the well-meaning ones. A man's spirit is proud and delicate, and it bruises easily, and the bruises can't be treated with mercurochrome. Still, as long as there are hearts and talents capable of shaping this sort of picture, there may be hope for the world.

ILLEGAL ENTRY

Cast: Howard Duff, Marta Toren, George Brent, Gar Moore.
Universal-International

A bunch of racketeers are smuggling aliens into the U. S. (they collect vast sums from the aliens' relatives) until George Brent, Immigration Inspector, gets on the job. He has Howard Duff, ex-Air Corps pilot, to help him. Howard scrapes acquaintance with Marta Toren, who works in a restaurant suspected of being the gang's headquarters. (Howard was in the service with Marta's now-deceased husband, which is a legitimate excuse for looking the girl up.) Marta plays cold. She likes Howard, and she doesn't want him to get mixed up with the crumbs she works for. But he manages to have himself hired by the gang, and he's all set to fly aliens across the border from Mexico, before you can say dear me. (Reason Marta's involved in the mess is her brother. She's paid the gang to smuggle him from Europe—it would have been years before he could have joined her legally, under the immigration quota—and if she tells on her bosses, they tell on her brother. Not much of a life for brother, either, since he's confined to a small room in Marta's apartment, and never allowed to show his face to the world. He ultimately commits suicide, thus freeing Marta from her bondage.) Howard's narrow escapes while hob-nobbing with the mob are breath-taking. Gang knows somebody's giving away information, but other people keep walking into the traps set for Duff. This picture's semi-documentary, a style that's very popular these days, and the gangsters are played by Richard Rober, Tom Tully, Paul Stewart and Gar Moore. Moore's a dead ringer for Rory Calhoun.

THE BARKLEYS OF BROADWAY

Cast: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Oscar Levant, Billie Burke.
MGM

Glittering's the adjective. Technicolored furs and jewels, and Fred Astaire re-united with Ginger Rogers. Josh (Fred) and Dinah (Ginger) Barkley are musical-comedy stars. They live royally, they love tenderly, and they fight incessantly. Josh's favorite topic in a

The Barkleys of Broadway: Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are a musical comedy team, but she has hankerings to become a great actress.

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

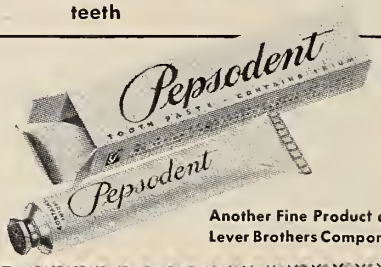
FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use... Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the free jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Write to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for your free jar.

New Pepsodent Guarantees Brighter Teeth and Cleaner Breath!

Wonderfully Improved Formula SWEEPS FILM AWAY!

1. FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull
2. FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath
3. FILM glues acid to your teeth
4. FILM never lets up—it forms continually on everyone's teeth



Now faster foaming! Make this 7-day Pepsodent Test!

Use new improved Pepsodent Tooth Paste for just one week. If your teeth aren't far brighter, your breath fresher—we'll return twice what you paid!

New Pepsodent foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film and its harmful effects: (1) Pepsodent makes short work of the discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It routs film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent's film-removing action helps protect you from acid produced by germs in film. This acid, many dentists agree, causes tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly and quickly with Pepsodent.

Try New Pepsodent now on our double-your-money-back guarantee. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula! No other tooth paste contains Irium*—or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent. For the safety of your smile use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year.

*Irium is Pepsodent's registered trade mark for purified alkyl sulfate.

Another Fine Product of Lever Brothers Company

Start your Pepsodent 7-day test today. If you're not completely convinced Pepsodent gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth, mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent Division, Lever Bros. Co., Dept. G, Chicago, Ill. Besides postage you'll receive—

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Offer expires August 31, 1949

fight is: Where would you be without me, since I taught you everything you know? Dinah's convinced she'd do splendidly on her own, and at a country house-party, she meets a playwright with a French accent, a golden head, and a surplus of boyish charm. He thinks she should play Sarah Bernhardt in his new play. So does she. The Barkleys split up. Dinah's going to show Josh. Josh, a tender soul, who doesn't want his wife to fall on her face, sneaks into the Bernhardt rehearsals, notes rough places in Dinah's performance, phones and coaches her every night. (He uses a French accent, so she'll think he's the playwright.) Bernhardt play opens, Dinah's the toast of serious drama fans. Now, having proved her point, she goes back to Josh. The finale's a big dance, just the way it should be. Ginger seems young and gay again, Astaire's graceful and witty, the script is merry, the songs and dances—particularly a song about a weekend in the country, and a dance about winged shoes—are swell, and there's a stylish comedy bit by a girl named Carol Brewster. For me, the only sizeable flaw was Ginger's big scene in the Bernhardt play. She recites the Marseillaise with so much growling in the throat and such ferocious grimaces that you laugh where you're supposed to throb. Still, like I said before, it made her the toast of the town, and I'm sure not going to argue about it.

THE FOUNTAINHEAD

Cast: Gary Cooper, Patricia Neal, Raymond Massey, Kent Smith, Robert Douglas, Henry Hull.
Warners

Ayn Rand, who wrote the novel, "The Fountainhead," also did the screen play for the movie. Her characters don't converse; they make windy speeches. Raymond Massey's a newspaper publisher. He believes money's power. Robert Douglas is one of Massey's editors (I think he's supposed to be a symbol of Communism) and he knows power is owning the minds of men. Goes around in a wing collar saying geniuses are an insult to the rest of us, so they mustn't be allowed to exist. Crucify 'em. Now the hero: Gary Cooper,

The Fountainhead: Gary Cooper, as the architect who won't compromise, and Patricio Neal, as the rich girl, finally find they're soulmates.

modern architect. Won't compromise with public taste. He's offered big jobs ("But we're the board of directors," men cry peevishly. "You have to do as we say!") only to turn them down. Clutching his integrity close, he goes to work in a stone quarry. Rich Patricia Neal ("You'll find me hard to bring into submission.") takes one look at Cooper's flexed muscles, and her nose dilates. They're in love. She wants him to stop fighting for what he believes in, because he'll get hurt. He says no, he's not afraid. So she marries Raymond Massey. Cooper becomes rich and famous, despite the evil plottings of the mob. And one day he discovers somebody's changed his plans for a housing development; they've built the thing all different. Cooper takes it like a man, he goes right out and dynamites the development. After this, he makes a speech in court. Says he's not interested in poor people. He did the housing development because it was a challenge, not because some slobs needed housing. Furthermore, any man who works without being rewarded for his work is a slave, and a man must think of himself. Then he presents the line of the century. "Our world is perishing from an orgy of self-sacrifice," he says. In an age which is literally bleeding to death for the lack of some kindness and understanding between fellow creatures, Warners allows one of its heroes to make that statement. Naturally, the court exonerates him, leaving the movie-goer breathless, and rather terrified. . . . Now, I'm not pleading for mob rule, and neither am I questioning the right of the character portrayed by Mr. Cooper to his own ideas about architecture. He may have been wholly justified in his contempt for public taste. But to claim that integrity requires a man to think only of himself! Mr. Cooper says he's not his brother's keeper. I should think he'd be ashamed.

LUST FOR GOLD

Cast: Ida Lupino, Glenn Ford, Gig Young, William Prince, Edgar Buchanan, Will Geer.
Columbia

William Prince goes hunting for a lost gold mine in the Superstition Mountains, out near Phoenix, Arizona. Another fellow, after the Lust For Gold: Ido Lupino pretends to be in love with Glenn Ford, but she's really after information leading to the missing gold-mine.

IF YOUR HAIR LOOKS LIKE THIS

WHEN IT SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS

don't use greasy pomades, brittle lacquer or sticky hair oil...

"Suave" your hair

Your beautician will tell you there's nothing else like Suave to make hair miraculously obedient . . . whisper-soft, kissable . . . starry-bright . . . Keeps every tress perfectly in place, and safe from parching sunlight. Rinses out instantly. It's the amazing, new cosmetic for hair that outsells ALL women's hair-dressings! Greaseless—not a hair oil. No alcohol! For the whole family. At beauty shops, drug and department stores. 50c and $1

"The cosmetic for hair"

Helene Curtis Suave

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless, new Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting.

No nicks . . . no bristles . . . no stubbly regrowth. No irritation to normal skin.

Nair keeps legs hair-free longer . . . because it dissolves the hair itself closer to skin.

Have "second look" legs! Get Nair today.

For free sample mail this ad before November 30, 1949, to Dept. 310. Nair, 53 Park Place, New York 8, N. Y.

COSMETIC LOTION
TO REMOVE HAIR SAFELY

79¢ plus tax

For Legs that Delight Use NAIR Tonight

same loot, is shot and killed right before Prince's eyes, and the Phoenix Sheriff explains that an unseen murderer has polished off four gold-seekers in the last two years. "But my grand-daddy owned that mine," says Prince. Which wouldn't mean anything to a murderer, but which sets the scene for a flashback. A hundred years before, two Spaniards (brothers), up from Mexico to prospect, had found the fabulous mine. One brother had organized a big expedition, dug 20 million dollars' worth of ore out of the ground, and got killed for his pains by Apaches, who considered the gold sacred to their gods. (The Apaches walled the Spaniards and the gold up tight, and went home.) Many years afterward, the second brother had decided to re-find his mine. That's where Prince's grand-daddy comes in. Grand-daddy (Glenn Ford) follows second brother to the mine, kills him and his companion, then kills his own companion. So now he's a rich murderer. In Phoenix, the townspeople take one look at the quality of the gold he's toting, and ask him where he got it. He won't tell. Men try to follow him, find out the location of the bonanza, but he's too slick. Until Ida Lupino pops up. She's ambitious. She's also married to Gig Young, only she tells Young to get lost for a while, and sets out to vamp Glenn, who vamps with alacrity. Ida discovers the location of his mine, he discovers that's all she was after, and there's a violent pay-off scene, complete with an earthquake and sudden death. End of flashback. "Now I want grand-daddy's mine," says Prince. But there's still a murderer at large, and don't you forget it. The ending's a surprise; also, Will Geer, as a Deputy Sheriff, is fascinating.

MASSACRE RIVER

Cast: Guy Madison, Rory Calhoun, Carole Mathews, Cathy Downs, Johnny Sands. Allied Artists.

Guy Madison's not from the same social stratum as Rory Calhoun (they're both cavalry officers stationed in Indian country after the Civil war) but the Colonel's daughter, Cathy Downs, loves self-made Guy. (Rory loves Cathy.) Guy and Cathy become engaged. Then Guy meets a lower-class (his class) lady (Carole Mathews) at a saloon. She makes eyes at him. Against his will, he's fascinated. He even kills a man, to defend her. This forces him to resign from the cavalry. Ah, disgrace. Oh, dishonor. But he still has Carole. They're going to make a new start, only the Colonel's son (Johnny Sands), furious on behalf of the Colonel's daughter, comes around to kill Guy. Jilt my sister, willya? Guy isn't going to fight with the kid, but Carole shoots him dead. You can't exactly blame her. Guy isn't armed, and Johnny's awfully murderous. Well, so Guy and Carole head West. But they've reckoned without Rory Calhoun, cavalry officer and gentleman. He's chasing them, to avenge Johnny's death, and Cathy's jilting. By the time he's caught up with them, deep in hostile Indian country, and he's heard the true story of Johnny's death, it's too late to apologize and turn back. Indians are blasting away at the trio. Indian Chief Yellowstone arrives after a bit, and makes his boys cut it out, but Carole's already expiring in Guy's arms as the picture ends. There seemed to be some question about this in the mind of a lady who sat behind me. She was wondering if Carole died, or if she got better. I'm here to say she was deader'n a door nail.

also showing . . .

capsule criticism of films previously reviewed

ADVENTURE IN BALTIMORE (RKO)—A gay, good-natured comedy of 1905 in which Shirley Temple, a minister's daughter with advanced ideas, causes highly amusing complications for herself, her parents (Robert Young and Josephine Hutchinson) and the boy next door (John Agar). All the performances are fine—especially John Agar's.

THE BRIBE (MGM)—G-man Robert Taylor, hot on the trail of export-business villainies in Central America, finds Ava Gardner innocently mixed up with rascals Vincent Price, John Hodiak and Charles Laughton. Not too believable, but fast, exciting and well acted.

CHAMPION (U.A.)—A tense, realistic, brilliantly acted and directed story of the rise and fall of a heel in the prizefight racket. Kirk Douglas is splendid in the title role and Paul Stewart, Ruth Roman, Arthur Kennedy, Marilyn Maxwell and Lola Albright are excellent supports. Dont' miss it.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS (20th-Fox)—An exciting, authentic version of the old whaling novel, with Dean Stockwell as the sea-going youngster, Lionel Barrymore as his crusty skipper grandpa and Richard Widmark as the sympathetic first mate.

EL PASO (Para.)—John Payne, a returned veteran of the Civil War, finds an even more dangerous activity in fighting a gang of varmints who've got El Paso in their grip. A brisk, action-packed Western, in Cinecolor. With Gail Rusell, Sterling Hayden, Dick Foran, Gabby Hayes and Henry Hull.

FLAMINGO ROAD (Warners)—Joan Crawford starts out as a carnival dancer adrift in a Southern town and then, despite all Sheriff Sydney Greenstreet, a political despot, can do to her, she rises in the world. The atmosphere of crooked politics is interesting, the drama lurid but absorbing, the action fast, the acting good. With Zachary Scott, David Brian and Gladys George.

IMPACT (U.A.)—A rambling affair about murder and domestic infidelity. With Brian Donlevy, Helen Walker, Ella Raines and Charles Coburn. Not so hot.

THE LAWTON STORY (HALLMARK)—The annual Easter Pageant at Lawton, Oklaboma, in which the life of Christ is performed by townspeople, is the main business of this Cinecolor film. That part is impressive, but the present-day story which serves as a framework, featuring six-year-old Ginger Price, is pretty feeble. Almost all the performers are non-professionals.

LITTLE WOMEN (MGM)—A beautifully produced, superbly acted and altogether charming Technicolor version of the tearful New England Classic. June Allyson as Jo and Margaret O'Brien as Beth are especially wonderful, but everyone is excellent in the cast that includes Elizabeth Taylor, Janet Leigh, Peter Lawford, Mary Astor, Lucile Watson, Rossano Brazzi and the late Sir C. Aubrey Smith.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING (Warners)—A Technicolor biography of the famous musical comedy star, Marilyn Miller, with many songs and dances. June Haver is Marilyn. With Ray Bolger, Gordon MacRae, Charlie Ruggles and Rosemary De Camp.

also showing

MR. BELVEDERE GOES TO COLLEGE (20th-Fox) —Clifton Webb, as the gifted Mr. Belvedere who started his screen life in Sitting Pretty, invades the collegiate scene as a beanie-wearing freshman and straightens out Shirley Temple's romance with Tom Drake. Obviously, a very funny film.

MOTHER IS A FRESHMAN (20th-Fox) —And in this one, Loretta Young goes to college. Her spoiled daughter, Betty Lynn, is also a student. Betty loves Professor Van Johnson, who falls for Loretta, to the distress of Loretta's lawyer, Rudy Vallee. A bright comedy, in Technicolor, with Bob Arthur and Barbara Lawrence.

MY DREAM IS YOURS (Warners) —An entertaining Technicolor musical dealing with the efforts of Jack Carson to get Doris Day to the top in radio. Good songs and lots of laughs. Carson and Day are nifty and so are Lee Bowman, Adolphe Menjou, Eve Arden and Cuddles (S.Z.) Sakall.

RED CANYON (Univ.) —Howard Duff, a wandering cowboy, wanders into Ann Blyth and gets right friendly with the little lady until her dad, George Brent, finds out Howard's family is one be plumb detests. A very sound Technicolor Western.

SCOTT OF THE ANTARCTIC (Eagle-Lion) — Done with painstaking authenticity, this is the story of British Captain Robert Scott and his heroic attempt, in 1910, to be the first man to reach the South Pole. An all-British cast, with John Mills as Captain Scott, is excellent and many of the polar scenes—some actually taken in the Antarctic—are breathtaking. In Technicolor.

THE STRATTON STORY (MGM) — A biography of Monty Stratton, the big league baseball pitcher who made a comeback after losing a leg in a hunting accident. Jimmy Stewart, as Stratton, and June Allyson, as his girl, turn in some beautiful work in this fine and inspiring film. With Frank Morgan, Agnes Moorehead and Bill Williams.

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME (MGM) — Frank Sinatra and Gene Kelly as baseball stars in a Teddy Roosevelt era ball club owned by Esther Williams. The comedy, dancing, and singing are all very nice. In Technicolor, with Betty Garrett, Edward Arnold and Jules Munshin.

TOO LATE FOR TEARS (U.A.) —Lizabeth Scott as a deep-dyed villainess in a poor crime story. With Dan Duryea and Arthur Kennedy.

TULSA (Eagle-Lion) —Susan Hayward gets rich and greedy in the oil fields. Lots of exciting drama and interesting background atmosphere. With Robert Preston, Pedro Armendariz and Lloyd Gough. In Technicolor.

WE WERE STRANGERS (Col.) -One of the best films of all time. A story of Cuban revolutionists in the early 1930's, it combines horror and beauty with tremendous impact. Directed by John Huston, the performers, including Jennifer Jones, John Garfield, Pedro Armendariz and Gilbert Roland, all are magnificent.

PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6-7 Bob Beerman—8 Top, Wide World Bot., Bert Parry—10 Top, Wide World, Bot., Bob Beerman—12-13 Wide World—24 Lt., Bob Beerman, Cen., Wide World, Rt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—27 Bob Beerman—28 Eddie Hubbell—29 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exc. Bot. Lt., Bob Beerman—30 Wide World—31 Bob Beerman—32 Frank Powolny—33 20th Century-Fox—34 Modern Screen staff—35 Lt., Bob Beerman, Top Rt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Bot. Rt., Warners—36 Top, Sam Vandivert, Bot., Eagle-Lion—37 Warners—38-41 Bob Beerman—42-43 Bob Beerman and Bert Parry—44 Lt., Progress. Rt., Arpeda—46 Bert Parry—47 Bert Parry Exc. Bot. Rt., Bob Beerman—48-51 Bob Beerman—53 Top, Stork Club News Service; Phil Berg-Bert Allenberg, Inc., Bot., Gale Thompson; RKO—54-55 Modern Screen staff—56-58 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—61 International News—62 Top, Fox, Bot., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—63 Top Lt., Frank Muto, Top Rt., Modern Screen staff. Bot. Lt., Jules Buck, Bot. Rt., 20th Century-Fox—64 Bert Parry—65 Bob Beerman—67-74 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

For lips men long to kiss again.. and again ...and again— Tangee

Lips eager to kiss in a romantic love scene between

SUE ENGLAND

AND

PETER FERNANDEZ

IN

"CITY ACROSS THE RIVER"

A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURE

Tangee

KISSABLE TEXTURE

1. Keeps lips soft...invitingly moist.
2. Feels just right...gives you confidence.
3. Does not smear or run at the edges.
4. Goes on so easily...so smoothly...so quickly.
5. And it lasts—and LASTS—and L-A-S-T-S!

Tangee

KISS COLORS

TANGEE PINK QUEEN—You'll be queen of his heart with this perfect pink on your lips.

TANGEE RED RED—This reddest of reds makes all girls more kissable—especially brunettes!

TANGEE THEATRICAL RED—Dramatize your lips—for him—with this amorous, glamourous shade.

TANGEE GAY-RED—A kiss-catching color for the fair-haired girl.

Don't trust your romance to anything less than Tangee!

After four years, the Vincente Minnellis are breaking up their marriage. Temperamental difficulties were the cause.

For Judy, it's happened before—the crashing walls of a marriage and then heartbreak. And healing can come only from deep within herself.

By GEORGE BENJAMIN

Three-year-old Liza, who's been in two films, went to live with Judy when she left Vincente.

Judy married David Rose when she was only 20. When he returned from Army service two years later, they called it a day—they couldn't seem to get adjusted.

Can Judy Garland Love Again?

■ Four years ago, on the night before she was scheduled to marry him, Judy Garland sent Vincente Minnelli to her mother's home to pick up some clothes she'd left there.

As Vincente, loaded with garments, staggered out of the house, Judy's mother, Mrs. Ethel Garland, patted him on the back. "Good luck," she said.

Vincente flashed her his warm, ingratiating Latin smile.

"I have a feeling," Mrs. Garland added kiddingly, "that in the years to come, Vincente, you're going to look back on this last night of freedom with a lot of longing."

Minnelli stopped at that and did a double take. He was so completely in love with his little gazelle-eyed Judy that he couldn't possibly imagine ever wanting to live the life of a bachelor again.

That was four years ago, when he and Judy culminated an on-the-set courtship by going to Mrs. Garland's house and having Dr. William Roberts of the Beverly Hills Community Presbyterian Church transform their director-actress love affair into a well-publicized marriage.

Today, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Vincente Minnelli are separated. And that marriage, according to their own statements, is floundering.

Judy moved out of her husband's Hollywood hillside home on April 7th and rented a little place of her own in Beverly Hills, temporarily leaving her three-year-old daughter, Liza, with Vincente. Then Liza rejoined her in a small house in Westwood. She'll probably file for divorce (Continued on page 76)

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

Always creamy and smooth ... lovely to use!

So effective ... Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle ... Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

For Bare-Skin Beauty

Bath Size Palmolive

with its famous

"Beauty Lather!"

New Fragrance!

New Charm!

New Allure!

THIS VERY DAY, see how big, thrifty Bath Size Palmolive smooths and softens arms and shoulders . . . how Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather" helps make you lovelier, more alluring all over!

To be a thrilling Bare-Skin Beauty—get Bath Size Palmolive Soap and use it regularly in your tub or shower! You'll find economical, long-lasting Bath Size Palmolive Soap makes oceans of rich, creamy "Beauty Lather"—leaves an exciting "whisper" of perfume on your skin. Get Bath Size Palmolive Soap today—for Palmolive's famous Complexion Care all over! Your whole family will love it!

So Big! So Thrifty

So Solid and Long-Lasting

Oceans of "Beauty Lather"

Exciting New Fragrance

Menfolk Love it, Too

Buy Bath Size Palmolive for

Bare-Skin Beauty!

don't let them down!

an open letter to wanda hendrix and audie murphy

Dear Wanda and Audie:

The story of your courtship and marriage is one of the best real-life romances we've ever heard about. It has had all the elements —appealing characters, suspense, the overcoming of obstacles, complications after the achievement of the goal, a happy ending.

Millions of people everywhere have followed the unfolding of this romance. And you'll continue to be closely observed by the fond public that has taken you into its heart.

This places a great responsibility on your young shoulders—a responsibility to do everything in your power to live up to the ideal you now exemplify. For the influence of Hollywood extends far beyond mere screen portrayals. The daily lives of the stars present standards of behavior that, consciously or unconsciously, are followed in thousands of homes, especially by young people.

If convention is treated lightly by screen idols, if honesty and faithfulness are perverted to suit the moment's whim, if marriage vows are taken as something to be shrugged off as inconsequential, it sets examples that can be widely harmful. On the other hand, if a dedication to the solid, worthwhile things of life is demonstrated by the stars, the effect is wholesome and heartening.

You, Wanda and Audie, are a notable example of the latter. Let's hope that despite all the strains and stresses your individual careers must bring you, you'll continue to exemplify in your joined lives the ideals of courage, simplicity and devotion to which you have so far adhered.

You have fame and influence. With the fame, Wanda and Audie, goes the great responsibility of using that influence well.

Wade H. Nichols

EDITOR

Ava Gardner,
the starlet, played life
as a joyous game.
Now Ava, the star, faces a choice that will make or break her career.

by JAMES DARSON

ava gardner's greatest gamble

■ Ava Gardner is sitting on a keg of dynamite. Whether or not she knows it, is something only time can tell. Either her career will be blown sky high, or she will emerge as one of the great young dramatic actresses of our time. The choice lies firmly in Ava's own hands.

When this beautiful young Southerner came out of her native North Carolina hills, wide-eyed and syrupy-voiced, Hollywood cynics promptly earmarked her for the "learning-the-hard-way" treatment. That was seven years ago, and seven years have left their mark. The hard way always does. But it has been harder on Ava than on most young hopefuls, even those who have failed and gone home, temporarily heartbroken. They at least have learned quickly that Hollywood is not for them. Ava, far beyond the point of last return, is up to her neck in the dangerous waters of screen fame.

For Ava Gardner is on the spot, a spot partly of her own making, partly of studio design. Although they may deny it, MGM executives can no longer keep secret what has frequently been hinted at by Hollywood insiders: that Ava Gardner is being groomed with all possible speed as a possible replacement for Lana Turner, (Continued on page 80) first stage:

While married to Mickey Rooney (below), Ava's chief film octivity was posing for leg-art. She's still in glamor shots (left), but not merely as scenery.

second stage:
Second husband Artie Shaw introduced Ava to good books, music and ort. He awoke her emotionally, made her realize she wos a reol person, not o studio puppet.

third stage:
Ava won recognition in The Killers, but it was The Hucksters with Clark Goble that opened up her prospect of becoming o major star in topflight productions.

Now I'll talk!

by robert mitchum

exclusive!

Robert Mitchum, who wrote this story without a ghost writer's help, chose Modern Screen as best-fitted to present the only authentic revelation of his current plans. Here—and here alone—is Bob's own story!

Bob and Dorothy Mitchum just after his release from jail, take off for Mexico, where Bob resumed his work on The Big Steal.

■ In 1947, after two years during which David Selznick vainly cajoled my cooperation, I was escorted to that gentleman's studio to report for a publicity conference. The enterprising Mister Selznick, traditionally thorough and lavish in every phase of the preparation of his product, was faithful to his reputation, and I was accorded the full treatment.

Ushered into a handsomely appointed office, I was seated behind a polished desk, and a parade of publicists (presumably in order of importance) marched into the room to be introduced, each reciting briefly the exact function of his duties, and the advantages of the service he rendered.

The idea behind this little ceremony was that I should express my attitude and opinions on the method of "presentation" I desired.

Should the subject be palmed off on the public as a "distinguished young actor," with a dignified cover portrait on a news magazine and a list of his professional credits? Should he be photographed with his biceps flexed and his stomach sucked in, whiling away his happy leisure with a yo-yo? Or should we picture him a moody rumpled clown who, like Topsy, "jes' grew"?

This, my children, is planning; the process through which the mighty shape the flesh of some stumbling soul who regards honest toil with such shuddering horror that he becomes that caviar geek, a movie actor.

Having myself planned my career as a character actor, wrestling with beards and dialects, with time out to do a little fiction-writing, and having watched those plans collapse with the war-born scarcity of leading men, I knew the folly of this (Continued on page 91)

"There shall be no more stories credited to me unless actually written by me," says Bob. Here he works on the first draft of his exclusive MODERN SCREEN story. Right: A portion of the manuscript in his own handwriting.

In 1947, after ~~Later~~ ~~I came~~ two years during which David Selznick vainly cajoled me to cooperate, ~~my secretary or one day~~ I was escorted ~~by~~ to that gentleman's studio to respond for a publicity conference. The enterprising producer Selznick, traditionally thorough, and keenly in every phase of the preparation of his productions was zealous to his reputation, and I was accorded the full treatment.
I walked into a handsomely appointed office, I was seated behind a polished desk, and a parade of publicists (presumably in order of importance) marched in to [illegible]

Michael arrived at the Brinkmans' January 20—providing Paul, Junior, with an assistant far unrolling towels and pulling aut kitchen drawers.

small Wonder

Baby girls are quiet, Jeanne Crain thought, maybe even neat. But it's a little boy, and if he's anything like Paul, Jr. . . .!

By LOUIS POLLOCK

■ The day her second baby was to be born, Jeanne Crain awoke at four o'clock in the morning conscious of a strange contentment. She wondered about it. She realized she should have been thinking of what lay immediately ahead and perhaps be somehow nervously affected by the prospect of the ordeal she was to undergo. But no. She just felt good.

It was puzzling. Except for the luminous face of the bedside clock showing the time, and Hollywood's night-defying neons that she could see far below the house by stretching her head to peer through the window, the world was dark and all things in it seemed remote. She could hear the steady breathing of her husband, Paul, in the other bed beside hers. . . . Then she felt again that which had awakened her—the first of the signals that meant the long waiting was now nearly over.

She lay there for a while, enjoying the odd sense of companionship that is related to motherhood at such a time. Then she got out of bed—moving very quietly. For one thing, she didn't want to disturb Paul. This was going to be a long day for him, too—if this were actually to be the day. For another thing, she wasn't sure Paul would exactly approve what had now come into her head. She had a yen to work on herself, to shower, to wash her hair and set and dry it, to fuss over her makeup—and to do it all slowly, lingeringly, while a lot of thoughts, which she knew were only awaiting such an opportunity, came straying into her mind.

Seated at her vanity a few minutes later, her thinking going backward and forward in her life, the first thing she remembered was The Great Deception. It hadn't started out to be that. Jeanne had merely said to Paul, when they first knew about the second baby, "I want to keep working as long as I can. I don't want to make an announcement until we just have to."

"Again?" Paul had asked. "Our poor children—always getting off to a secret start. Why?"

"It's better to keep on working," she had replied—but she hadn't known how much better, then. That came when she was summoned to Mr. Otto Preminger's office at the studio.

"Jeanne," he began quite calmly, as if he didn't even suspect what his words were going to do to her, "how would you like to play Lady Windermere in The Fan?"

Her heart had almost leaped out of her right then and there. It was a part she had dreamed about but knew wasn't for her because . . . well, she asked Mr. Preminger: "What do you mean, I play Lady Windermere? It's Gene Tierney's role. Everybody in the studio knows that."

"Gene can't take it," he replied. "Gene is going to be a mother."

"Oh!" Jeanne had cried, feeling a strange, mixed (Continued on page 83)

While making The Fan (left), with Michael on the way, Jeanne fainted from tight stays. Pinky (right) is her most important role.

Myths stars believe about themselves

★ by HEDDA HOPPER

■ Some years ago, a very fine actor named Fredric March burlesqued an even finer one named John Barrymore on the screen in The Royal Family and for months after he wasn't quite the same.

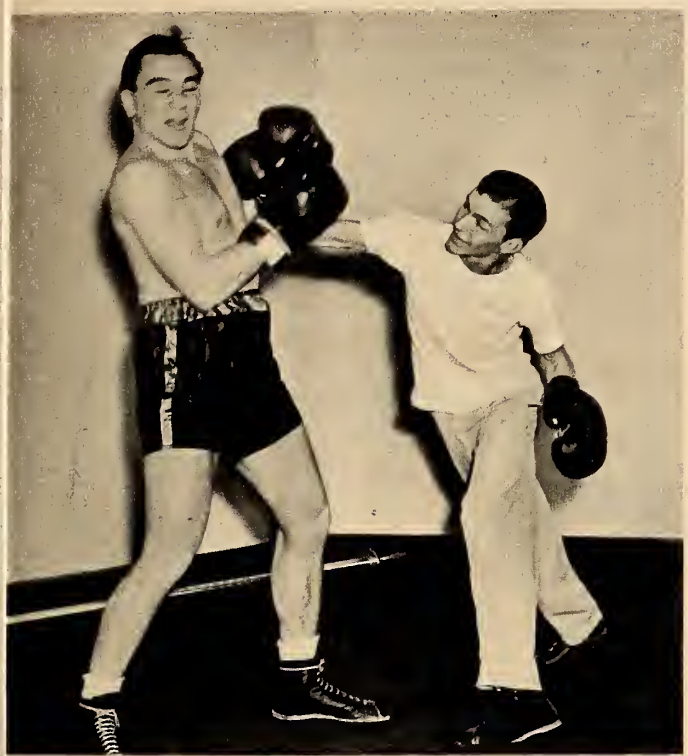
After aping Jack, Freddie couldn't help copycatting every thing about Barrymore—his stalky walk, his upswept eyebrow, his Jovian glare, even his abysmal burps. Fred used to laugh about it himself—and swear at the same time.

"The Barrymore curse has got me," he confessed. "I can't get rid of that guy's spook. Whatever I do, I'm still playing Jack Barrymore."

Fredric March finally banished the hex and went on to a brilliant career in his own stellar style. But it took him years to outfox the myth that he really was The Great Profile, even though his good sense told him better. A lot of stars aren't that realistic. The biggest suckers for their own parts and poses, pictures and publicity, too, are many of the stars themselves.

Greer Garson has been playing Mrs. Miniver in person ever since she played that lordly lady on the screen. Myrna Loy acted out the perfect wife for so many years in Hollywood that she finally wound up being one. Pat O'Brien has been the spirit of Notre Dame walking ever since he played the great Irish coach, Knute Rockne.

The Hollywood air stays hazy as the stars draw on their own ripe imaginations for dream pipe puffs. Lawrence Tierney played the outlaw Dillinger in a movie and he's been battling the law in real life, in and out of jail, ever since. Boyish Bob Walker mimicked juveniles so much he wound up acting out reckless youth, even though he was long grown-up and a



JOAN CRAWFORD'S best off-screen role has been that of a grand lady accepting the homage of fans with regal graciousness. Frequently she has seen herself as a patron of the arts—but her excursions into the elevated fields of culture have not always proved too successful.

ORSON WELLES, once the boy wonder of show business, might again do great things if he'd stop believing he's wrapped in a cosmic mantle. After his Martian invasion broadcast some years ago, he saw himself as a superman and has always tried hard to live up to it.

where actors sometimes are convinced that fiction is really the truth.

FRANK SINATRA, here sparring with Tami Mauriello, fancied himself a heroic fellow with his fists and punched several noses to prove it. After lots of bad publicity, he's finally seen that his tough-guy attitude doesn't quite go over and nowadays behaves with more discretion.

GREER GARSON, above with Walter Pidgeon in a scene from Mrs. Miniver, seems to have taken over that role in her own life. She always strives to be the personification of what the U.S. public thinks an English lady ought to be—genteel, gracious, elegant and stately.

JOAN FONTAINE was unhappy for years under the delusion that she was destined to go through life as Olivia de Havilland's "little sister." It wasn't until she won an Oscar in 1941 for her acting in Suspicion that she realized she had no need to feel inferior to Olivia.

ERROL FLYNN (here with Howard Hill after a wild boar hunt) has tried to pattern his life after his dashing screen roles. In addition to his skill with bow-and-arrow, he's also an expert swordsman, sailor and spinner of extremely tall tales about his harrowing "adventures."

All the world's a stage for the stars who forget to be themselves

VICTOR MATURE revelled in his "gargeaus hunk af man" publicity and soan was believing it himself. He helped spread the legend by giving detailed occaunts of his romances, bath real and imagined, and cavered the walls af his studia dressing-raam with telephane numbers.

HEDY LAMARR may for a time have hod her beautiful head turned by the "glamarous siren" myth creoted by her screen roles, but actually she remained a dawn-ta-earth girl. She's happiest when accupied with hausehald chares, gardening ar caring for her three children.

dad of years standing. The result has been sad.

Paul Muni's been too, too dignified ever since he played Louis Pasteur and Zola in make-up to trifle seriously with less eminent Hollywood roles. Instead, he spends his time bawling out the town which made him great. Tyrone Power, that erstwhile gay, grinning American boy, seems to be seeking his soul after playing the questing Larry in The Razor's Edge. He's giving Horrible Hollywood the back of his hand and longs to dwell abroad in lotus land with Linda Christian forever more.

What gets into these celluloid characters anyway? What bites the stars? How do they themselves fall for the fictions cooked up about them?

Me, I've often wondered just how great the great boy wonder, Orson Welles, might have become if he hadn't accidentally scared the pants off the U. S. A. with that blood-curdling Men-from-Mars broadcast. Because up until then nobody packed a brighter promise than Orson. He was—and still is, under his erratic ego—an authentic dramatic genius.

But ever since he handed America the screaming-meemies, Orson has been playing Superman, and his own Olympian myth has clouded his once shining future with a fog of foolishness. He's lost his artistic aim trying to shock again and again. And so the thrill of standing the world on its ear has wound up dumping Orson on his rear, professionally speaking. He's been out of this world of reality—and it just doesn't work, not even for Wonder Boy Welles.

Orson came out to Hollywood with his oversize dome still floating in the outer reaches of space, with the power of the world-shaker still delightfully agitating his ego. I can't list all of Orson Welles' divine didoes here but his creator complex led him into some beautiful flops. He went to South America and spent hundreds of thousands of RKO dollars exposing hundreds of thousands of feet of film. Most of it was never even developed. It was to be the greatest picture ever made—and it never turned into any kind of a picture. But Orson rose blithely above that. He turned to remaking the world politically. He orated over the radio, organized and campaigned for this and that, seeking the power that goes with shaking the world again. He rewrote Shakespeare, even the Bible. He wanted to astound Broadway, Hollywood and the radio public—and sometimes he did, all right. But everything Orson Welles did was designed to shock—even his irresponsible treatment of his wife, Rita, was shocking.

I'm a sucker myself for Daring Young Men, but they have to hook (Continued on page 99)

Back from his four-months' stay in England, where he starred in The Hasty Heart, Ronald Reagan wants to gain weight and get a suntan.

MY DAZE

by Ronald Reagan

The fog was thick over London, but I moved in a daze of my own—till someone set me wise.

■ I hadn't slept for three nights. I'd go up to my London hotel room and hit the sack early, toss and turn for a while like a landed fish and then, with a groan, turn on the light and read until morning. At eight o'clock, haggard and worn, I'd have breakfast and afterward doze fitfully until the middle of the afternoon.

On the third morning, I spoke about it to the waiter who brought me my breakfast. "What's to become of me once the picture starts shooting and I have to be at the studio at the crack of dawn?" I said dazedly.

The waiter smiled. "The solution is really quite elementary, sir. Remember there's eight hours' difference between London and Hollywood. Your mind knows that. But does your body?"

That waiter cured my insomnia. I stayed up all that day, staggering around staring sleepily at the Tower of London and beautiful old Windsor Castle. By nightfall I'd been awake for about (Continued on page 97)

Lady in Waiting

Since it's 10 a'clack, June Haver—wha hapes saan ta be Mrs. Duzik—decides she might as well hit the deck. She's been revelling in being able ta sleep late every marning naw that she's thraugh making Oh, You Beautiful Doll.

Na hurry abaut getting dressed. June takes her awn sweet time putting the finishing touches an her hair-da and applying her make-up—of which she uses practically nane.

Fare! A galf lessan being an the day's agenda, June has hied herself aver ta the Califarnia Country Club. She's develaping quite a presentable game and shaats a little aver 100 (if it isn't toa windy). The pra is Jock Goge.

June, wha has numeraus small-fry friends, is a frequent visitar at Uncle Bernie's tay shop in Beverly Hills. After galf, she staps there ta get a present far niece Kathy.

Hoppily lazing in her own bockyord, June studies a golf book while she sooks up some of those celebrated Californio sunbeoms.

Busy doing nothing, she hardly went farther than her own backyard. But June Haver's vacation has been special . . . exciting. Because there's been the thrill of looking forward to something that may make life complete.

■ For the past few weeks, June Haver has been waiting for a dream to come true. Life for June—as you may see in the pictures on these pages—has been happy, and relaxed, and lovely. For at last, after all the pain and the disillusion and the yearning, she's known that the dream she's held so long in her heart may soon be fulfilled. Just around a sunny corner, if the Catholic Church approves her petition to invalidate her previous marriage to Jimmy Zito, lies marriage with John Duzik.

As she awakens these cheerful mornings—and she awakens late, for Oh, You Beautiful Doll is finished, and time is her own—it comes over her in a soft, heavenly glow: She may be one day closer to life with that wonderful guy. . . .

Recently, a Hollywood writer who'd been away for a spell on European assignments was startled to sight June striding briskly along a Beverly Hills street, all zip and vigor. He stopped his car and hailed her.

"Well!" he said. "Last time I saw you, you didn't look as if you could walk to the corner by yourself."

"After Silver Lining?" smiled June. "Yep, I guess I was a pretty feeble girl."

"You've obviously made a brilliant recovery," said the writer. "The sparkling eyes, the firm step, the rosy cheeks. How'd you do it?"

"With a six-months rest cure," said June. "And boy, did I need it!"

June had indeed had more than her share of reasons for a good long rest. First, there'd been the sad mistake of her union with Zito, which ended unhappily after an attempt at reconciliation. Next, there was all the dismal strain of the divorce trial. Then came the topper to her problems—the appendectomy she had to undergo just as she was starting strenuous ballet rehearsals for Look for the Silver Lining.

Lady in Waiting

When she'd recovered, she worked like a Trojan on the film. It helped her to forget her troubles, but she ended the picture completely bushed. She had a cold, a nervous little cough, and not enough poundage on her to fill out her most form-fitting dress.

So she called her business manager. "Look," she said, "I don't care if I do go broke—I'm going to see what it's like to loaf for a while."

Well, a six-months vacation can do wonders if you do it right. And June did. Her first week off she spent entirely in bed. Just lay there and sopped up the mattress. That licked the cold.

The next week, she was puttering around the house. Nothing strenuous, mind you. Just sat around eating apples and reading the pile of books she'd been stacking up. Away went the nervous little cough.

She began saying, "Hello, you," to the mirror. Always a good sign.

Then she started wearing skirts again instead of slacks, and began answering the door, and it was no time before her mother was suggesting that maybe June ought to take all that vitality out of doors.

So she played golf, caught up on her shopping, went swimming, got some more of those books read, played with her friends' children and her little cousins and nieces, had dates with a fellow named John Duzik. Best of all, she had dates with a fellow named John Duzik. . . .

Then, when it finally came time again for June to go back to honest labor—to make Oh, You Beautiful Doll—she found the chore a comparative breeze.

And during the past few weeks, she's been taking life easy again. She's been occupying herself with much the same things as on her previous vacation. But this time, it's been really much more fun.

For now, as we've said, something very wonderful may soon be added.

When she can, energetic June likes to include a few sets of tennis in a day of vacation.

After tennis, June dons a cool dress and entertains company. Her niece Kathleen (right) drops by with her cousins, Donald and Karen, to pose for June's own movies.

The sun's going down—and there's a date with Dr. John Duzik. June chooses the dress she'll wear for a festive evening.

June Haver steps out with Dr. John Duzik.
Every date with him is an important one for June—who hopes to marry him soon.

Later, Kathleen (center) again appears with Donald and Karen to view her celluloid self. As an added attraction June shows the kids a series of Mickey Mouse films.

June has another day full of events to record. Soon, she hopes, there'll be a very special entry, beginning with the very wonderful words . . . "Dear Diary—today I married John Duzik."

the home she left for him

■ The ghost of a vanished woman still haunts these silent rooms, rooms filled with the gay and sentimental things that meant so much to her, rooms whose vibrant colors and beautiful furnishings tell of her love for elegance and warmth. This is the home, once gay with laughter and tinkling music, that Rita Hayworth left for Aly Khan.

Before the deserted house was sealed to all outsiders, MODERN SCREEN was permitted to take the intimate photographs appearing on these pages. It remains just as it was that whirlwind day when Rita went away. Cherished mementos still crowd the cupboards and cabinets—such as the first sets of castanets carved lovingly for Rita by her grandfather Cansino.

Here Rita's uncles, cousins, younger brothers, father and grandfather would gather with her for true Latin celebrations. Guitars were strummed, castanets clicked, and mellow voices blended in ancient songs. Grandfather Cansino, whom they all called Padre, could out-play and out-sing them all. . . . Though one night he found that Rita and her little daughter, Rebecca, had for a joke replaced the strings in his instrument with cotton thread. He went right ahead and sang and "played" on the silent strings—Padre wasn't going to let anyone get the better of him!

When will Rita return to fill this lonely house with happiness and life? It waits for her, hushed and expectant. Like some burnished instrument of lovely music, put aside for a season while its mistress roams the flowered by-ways of the world, it waits to awaken once again, some golden day, in torrents of shining melody.

Exclusive!

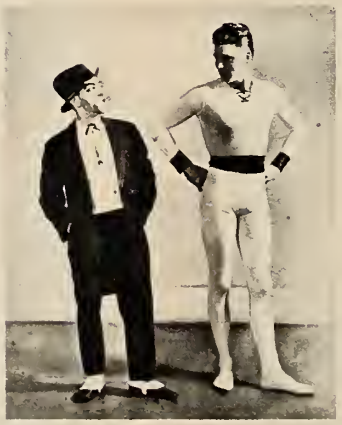
These dramatic pictures tell the story of Rita Hayworth's house—a place of echoes, haunted by the memories of other days . . .

Rita's favorite perfumes, Chanel No. 5 and Femme, are part of the collection on her lacquered dressing table. Souvenir booklets from Paris are sentimentally preserved under the glass top.

On the far woll of Rito's living room are 25 pictures depicting an entire bull-fight. They were o gift fram Fernando Lopez, one af Mexico's finest motodors. Another entire wall af the raam is given over to baaks Orsan Welles had awned.

This message awoits Rito on her return from Europe.

Rita's bedroom is her favorite place to study scripts, reod Indion poetry ond relax. A telephone alongside her oversize Hallywoad bed connects instontly with her doughter Rebecco's nursery.



Fans, castanets and cambs add colar ta Rito's study.

The way his life turned out, Burt Lancaster can uncross his fingers. But if it hadn't been for three potent things . . .

BY HOWARD LATANE

HE COULD HAVE BEEN A BUM

In 1935, Burt Loncoster and his friend Nick Crovot were bigtime acrobats. Left: Perfecting their "perch" oct (with Burt on top) in New York's Union Settlement House.

■ Burt Lancaster created a sensation on his entrance into show business. He was four years old. Taking part in a church Christmas pantomime, he was seated quietly on the stage, wrapped in the flowing robes of a shepherd. An angel entered, bent on some very sublime business. At this earnest moment, Burt glanced down at his feet. Then he raised one foot across his knee, stared indignantly at the sole of his shoe—and stretched off a large wad of chewing gum.

"Where the hell did this come from?" he piped loudly.

Burt Lancaster could have been a bum. A number of things prevented that—three things most of all. One was his mother, Elizabeth Lancaster —who, after the performance mentioned above, had some stern things to say when she got him home. Another was a New York City neighboring house, Union Settlement—where the church dramatic group was presenting the Christmas pantomime. The third was acrobatics— (Continued on page 89)

the queen says, "NUTS!"

When Barbara Stanwyck talks, egos fall and bores tremble. She says what she thinks. And the Queen has a talent for getting away with it.

BY FRANCES CLARK

■ A group of old Hollywood hands were sitting around recently discussing two famous characters who, while notoriously bitter enemies, had been doing a gushing Alphonse-Gaston act in public.

"I'd love to watch Barbara Stanwyck's reaction to them," one chuckled. "Can't you just hear her saying, 'Why don't we choose up sides and heave?' "

Yes indeed, Barbara emerges head and shoulders above all the other Hollywood gals when it comes to using forthright vernacular. The tales about her spicey tongue are countless—as are the incidents in which she's been involved.

There's the one concerning the actor whose breath is heftier than his brains when he pontificates on intellectual matters. In the midst of his bore-ologue at a dinner party one night, Barbara held up her hand school-girl fashion and asked, "May I interrupt, please?" Grandly, he granted a fellow native of Brooklyn the floor and was kayoed with, "I just wanted to say, 'Aw nuts!' "

And there's the one about the reckless gossiper who poured some nice juicy tales about another actress in Barbara's ear. After hearing him out, she calmly picked up the telephone and, while the gossiper listened aghast, told her maligned fellow-thespian everything she'd heard—and the source.

Of course neither the "intellectual" actor nor the gossiper, of the above anecdotes, who dislike having their names bandied about in those widely-recounted stories, now consider Barbara a dear friend. But others who've been (Continued on page 96)

Barbara demands 10 minutes a day to "make love to Gus Peters," her long-time friend. He's the electrician on her new movie, File On Thelma Jones.

Make-up man Bob Ewing gets a bit of his own medicine from Barbara on the Paramount set. A favorite of the motion-picture crew, Barbara has a ferocious loyalty to her less publicized co-workers.

The Taylors' friendship with Earl Wilson, newspaper writer, started with Earl offending Barbara in his column. Shortly afterward, Barbara wittily pinned Wilson's ears back—and now she writes guest columns when he's on vacation.

The quiet dinner party which Bab Stack had planned mushraomed into a fancy dress party featuring games and a mob of guests.

Footloose and Fancy Dress

"Come dressed" the party invitation said, so some came in calico and others in lace. They stacked up the records, stoked in the food and let 'er rip!

Jahn Agar was, quite naturally, Shirley Temple's beau.

by reba and bonnie churchill

■ Robert Stack had carefully enclosed tiny hand-sketched maps with the invitations to his costume party, showing just how to get to his Bel-Air home, high on a crest overlooking Los Angeles. But as we started up the steep, winding road that led to Bob's house, no map was needed. All you had to do was follow the gay caravan of gypsies, cowboys, swashbuckling cavaliers, French maids, 1890 belles and what have you.

Sporting these brightly bizarre get-ups were Shirley Temple and John Agar, Guy Madison and Gail Russell, the Donald O'Connors, Martha Hyer and Dick Jackson, Anthony Curtis and Lois Maxwell, Michael North and Barbara Lawrence, Dick Flato and Annie Rooney—and we, the Churchills. Reba was a 17th-Century French countess, while Bonnie appeared as a be-haloed angel (the halo was through the courtesy of two bent clothes-hangers).

As we followed trail-blazers Guy and Gail into Bob's flagstone driveway, we could hear soft music and the laughter of early arrivals. Through giant eucalyptus trees, we caught glimpses of multi-colored Chinese lanterns strung around an emerald-green pool.

We rang the bell—or, rather chimes—and the oak-carved door swung open on a burst of festive noise. Against a background of balloons, serpentines and confetti, stood our grinning host, Bob Stack. Tonight he was Two-Gun Texas Bob, toughest cowboy in the West.

Taking a properly bow-legged stance, he drawled, "Howdy, friends! Right proud y'all could come to my little ole git-together!"

"Little" proved to be a bit of an understatement. The party had started out to be a dignified dinner for six, featuring barbecued pheasant (which Bob had shot on a hunting trip some months ago and had been keeping in the deep freeze). But somehow, plans had snowballed until the guest list had multiplied to 20—but the pheasant hadn't.

This switch in menus didn't bother Bob or his guests. He dropped the pheasant back in the deep freeze and started ordering other food.

The first sensation of the evening came when Barbara Lawrence appeared in a black wig. At first, we thought she'd dyed her blonde tresses. "Oh, no!" we moaned, "you didn't!"

"Of course not," said Barbara. "Mike North just talked me into being Carmen to his Don Jose. Never again! My head itches like fury."

Donald O'Connor thoughtfully inquired, "You mean you don't know if you're Carmen or going?"

Before Barbie could crown him with a coke

Donald O'Connor doesn't need an audience to be funny, but he's got one anyhow in the attentive Mike North. The ladies (Barbara Lawrence and Gwen O'Connor) concentrate on gossip and good food.

Martha Hyer has Dick Jackson nibbling out of her hand while host Stack serves Shirley. Bob had planned on having pheasant, but he put the birds back in the deep freeze when his guest list multiplied.

Gail Russell tries out a shootin' iron from the trophy room—and even though it isn't loaded, Guy Madison, Bob, and Lois Maxwell stay out of her way. Gail spent most of the evening sambo-ing with Guy.

After some persuading, Shirley and Jack Agar, Barbara Lawrence (that's a black wig) and Mike North got Bob to take them to the trophy room where he keeps his many awards for sailing, flying, polo, etc.

The 400-pound phonograph console was moved out to the patio where there's dancing space. (He-man Bob gave up trying to push it alone.) Lois, Bob, Guy, Gail and Gwen select their favorite records.

Mike chooses an angel (it's Bonnie) as his partner for some foxtrotting. That beautiful halo was once a couple of wire clothes-hangers

Bob acts as safety-man for bannister-sliding Bonnie. He had to catch her twice before anyone guessed the charade she was acting out—Fallen Angel, natch!

Richard Flato (the killer in Vendetta) came as a band-leader with baton and music case. Gail Russell adds a false nose, a blond goatee—and presto, a maestro!

"Diamond Jim" O'Connor suggested all the games—and walked off with all the prizes. The next day, he and Gwen started a two-week vacation. After Yes Sir, That's My Baby, Curtain Call at Cactus Creek and this fancy dress brawl, he needed the rest.

bottle, Gwen O'Connor led him quietly over to the phonograph, where Guy and Gail were piling on samba records.

Then, between shakes and twirls, Guy explained that he and Gail were trying out some of the steps they'd learned on their two-day tour of Cuba.

Besides the dance-steps, they'd also acquired two cases of sunburn and a couple of native drums, which Guy had installed in his apartment and insists on thumping at all hours. "He's pounding out his own eviction notice," said Gail.

Those who weren't dancing drifted onto the glass enclosed patio, where pale pink and aqua porch furniture was strategically placed. Here there was a low, very wide, green-marble coffee table bearing heaping bowls of homemade potato chips and pop corn. Across one end was a garden-banked wall, on which small bunches of old-fashioned flowers had been mingled with ferns and other greenery.

Sitting just in front of this were Shirley and John Agar, decked out in the 1905 costumes they'd worn in RKO's Adventure in Baltimore.

Lois Maxwell had also borrowed a period gown from the studio. But when trying it on at home, she'd decided it wasn't exactly her type. "I took a pair of scissors and snipped off the sleeves," confessed Lois, "and let my Adrian tendencies take it from there."

Before the evening was over Reba was wishing that she'd done a little snipping on her costume. It was a French colonial hooped-skirt outfit designed by Kay Drake. Before going through any door, she had to pause a moment and remember to shift sideways.

No one needed to be urged twice to approach the candle-lit buffet with its centerpiece of lilacs, when (Continued on page 78)

Which girl has the Gable?

They say Gable's going to marry again—maybe he is. And now there are two girls in his life—one of whom may well make up his heart.

by JANET FRANKLIN

Is it love between Nancy Davis and Clark Gable? Hollywood, as this story reveals, believes it is. But one question still remains—the question of Ann Sheridan. For a report on that, read the other story on this page.

■ Has something at last happened to Clark Gable—something, to be exact, in the form of a slim, brown-eyed, brown-haired beauty named Nancy Davis—that is changing the fitful pattern of his romantic life? Is there to be an end to the short-lived affairs, the undecided hovering over first one girl and then another, that has been his story ever since he got back from the war?

Has he, in other words, finally found the Gable Woman, for whom he is more than willing to give up the Gable Women?

The answer seems to be yes—even though, if it is a love at all, it is so far a love in hiding. For the story behind it has more than just two pretty legs to stand on—there are interesting facts that can be tied to it. And the way Hollywood is connecting up the facts is causing even the most cynical of scoffers to believe that the impossible has come to pass: A girl has shown up who has caught not only Gable's eye—which, after all, he has given to many—but also his heart, which, since the stunning death of Carole Lombard, he has given to none.

by DOUGLAS JOHNSON

Although only Gable knows what Gable will do, those who saw him at the Racquet Club in Palm Springs are willing to make predictions. They say Clark has found the right girl at last. She's Ann Sheridan, and here's why . . .

■ It was gay, it was giddy, it was romantic. It was also sensational. For while Clark Gable and Ann Sheridan have known each other for years, they'd never been more than casual friends until that recent week in Palm Springs. And what happened then may be the prelude to a behind-the-scenes drama which will eventually remove Clark Gable from the bachelor ranks.

True, both Ann and Clark are supposed to be involved with other people. Ann with Steve Hannagan, the famous publicist whose constant companion she has been for several years. Clark with a lovely young girl who has just been signed by Metro. Yet—well, this is the story of what happened. . . .

For a change, Clark was taking a vacation in style and had been lolling around the swank Palm Springs Racquet Club for several days. Sometimes he dined with his friend and host, Charlie Farrell, who himself was once the Number One man of the screen. Sometimes Clark played a little tennis or sat on the sidelines and watched Paul Lukas and Jimmy Ritz knock themselves out.

The fact that little has been printed about the two doesn't necessarily mean much. Obviously a lot is taking place—especially when you consider Nancy's career. Something extra, something that doesn't ordinarily happen to a girl whom Clark meets and likes, is going on with her. It's a process that has already given them a relationship professionally. And that's not a bad point to start from if you're going to be together later on. Nancy Davis arrived in Hollywood only recently from New York where she first met Clark. Her film experience is meager—a few shorts she made in the East. Yet, you can get a pretty good bet in certain quarters that before the present year is out, or at least before the new one is well started, Nancy will enjoy starring status.

In the movie business, made-to-order success like this doesn't come very often—and that's just the thing. The path to fame she is walking seems to be so expertly paved, so conveniently shortened and cleared of all the usual difficulties, that there's a touch of magic about it. And when you look around for whomever may be waving the potent wand that's accomplishing all this for her—darned if an awful lot of things don't point to the Great Gable himself!

To begin your looking, you (Continued on page 87)

Nancy Davis met Gable in New York. They appeared together frequently at parties, nightclubs and theaters. Later, in Hollywood, Clark paved the way for Nancy's deluxe screen test and her contract at his studio (MGM). Gable's friends think that he's finding his way back to marriage—perhaps with Nancy.

Clark was a man relaxing, with nothing on his mind—that is, until the fateful afternoon when Ann Sheridan checked in.

In a way, it was like a boy suddenly discovering that the girl he used to chin with over the back fence had grown up into something highly desirable. To understand, you must know that Clark has worked for most of his career at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Once, more than a dozen years back, he was employed at Warners where Ann worked for so long, but he was dropped. If Clark had never left Warners for a studio clear across town, he and Ann could have discovered each other a long time ago.

As things turned out, though, Clark worked at Metro, married Carole Lombard, and later lost her in a tragic plane crash. Ann, in the meantime, worked in picture after picture at Warners, married George Brent, and divorced him.

After that exciting union was blown apart by clashing temperaments, Ann is reported to have said, "Never again will I marry an actor."

Something else that had worked to keep Clark and Ann from seeing much of each other is the desire they hold in common to get out of the movie-making atmosphere the moment they finish (Continued on page 75)

Ann Sheridan and Gable have known each other a long time—but it wasn't until recently, when they met at the Racquet Club in Palm Springs, that their casual friendship seemed to ripen into real interest. Although they're both involved with others, observers think it likely that their futures may be linked.

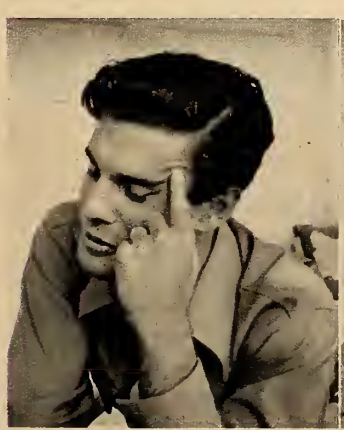
"Quique's willingness to give up family and home to come to a strange land told me she loved me. . . . I pray I will never fail her."

This love of ours

by Louis Jourdan

third in a series

Our love has weathered a lifetime of decisions and separations and the strangeness of a new world. Together we have discovered a magic formula for greater happiness . . . and brighter dreams that are meant to be shared.



■ As time is reckoned, ours is not an old love. We have been married only four years and knew each other for just about two years before that. And yet it has weathered a lifetime of decisions and separations and the strangeness of a new world for both of us.

I do not know for sure, and Quique says she doesn't either, when our love began. France, in its pre-Liberation days, was not a very happy setting for a romance. What gaiety and laughter its people attempted were only a cloak fashioned to hide its heartaches and despair.

We were both staying at a small hotel in Nice, where Quique and her family had come after fleeing from their home in Paris. The first time I saw her was one evening at a small dinner given by a mutual friend. It was a very casual meeting, and we certainly did not fall in love that night. I was aware of Quique, yes, because no man could see my wife and not be acutely aware of her. She is so utterly feminine, (so fragilely beautiful, with her pale gold hair, the lovely laughing eyes and the pert nose). And Quique was aware of me, too . . . aware, she confessed later, that here was a fellow who was a picture actor, probably very puffed-up, and that consequently she would not like him. I regret to say that she ignored me completely.

Months passed before our paths crossed again. Fate, I suppose, brought me back to Nice, but I am sure that subconsciously I was helping Fate a little by deciding to go back to the same hotel. Quique and her family were still there, and when she bumped into me in the lobby and I suggested that we might have luncheon, she did not act too surprised. She said she would.

But in love? I do not think we were in love until our first separation. And after that, in the hectic months before our marriage, it was a series of partings and reunions. Desolate farewells because we never could be certain that it might not be the last . . . joyous meetings that would seem an eternity in arriving, minutes in (Continued on page 92)

"She is so fragilely beautiful with her lovely laughing eyes."

"The months before our marriage were a series of partings and reunions."

"I do believe she loves me a little better than gin rummy."

"We have shared much happiness; we dream many plans."

In MGM's The Great Sinner, Gregory Peck and Ava Gardner surmount spirituol decoy to find idyllic love.

Picture of the Month

THE GREAT SINNER

■ The scene of The Great Sinner is a fashionable European resort in the 1860's. Here, a brilliant young writer (Gregory Peck) is seized with a ruinous passion for gambling and sinks to the depths. He then is regenerated by religious faith and by the devotion of the beautiful woman (Ava Gardner) who had been chiefly instrumental in his taking the path of destruction.

This may sound a bit old-fashioned. It is, being based —somewhat—on "The Gambler," one of the minor works of Dostoievski, the great 19th Century Russian novelist. But it's also a fine MGM example of slick, absorbing and opulent movie-making and, as such, The Great Sinner is excellent entertainment.

Miss Gardner, surely as lovely a creature as ever illumined the screen, wears handsome clothing and performs with delicate adequacy. Mr. Peck shows his usual firm grasp of his profession. Melvyn Douglas, as the heavy, keeps his touch light. And Walter Huston, Ethel Barrymore and Frank Morgan, in the other top roles, go about their business with the brilliant ease one would expect.

On the following pages, Modern Screen tells the story of The Great Sinner in pictures.

A drama of gambling fever is brought handsomely to the screen.

1. Scene of The Great Sinner is Wiesbaden, Germany, in the 1860's. Fedar (Greg Peck), a rising Russian writer, meets Pauline (Ava Gardner) and her father, Gen. Ostrovsky (Walter Huston).

2. Fedar is amazed to find that father and daughter are gambling addicts, heavily in debt to the Casino head, Armand (Melvyn Douglas), who has dark hopes of keeping Pauline in his power.

3. Fedar encounters another intense gambler, M. Picard (Frank Morgan), formerly a praminent professar. He gives Picard train-fare hame, but Picard gambles with it, lases, and kills himself.

4. As a writer, Fedar wants to understand this gambling fever, questions Pauline. He upbraids her when she says she must marry Armand to clear the debts. They realize they're falling in love.

5. Her father, the General, tries to break this up—he fears it might upset his gambling credit. Fedar decides he'll try to pay the debts himself. Sa he plays raulette—and breaks the bank.

6. With the General he goes to Armand ta buy back the nates. But Armand says that since it's Saturday, he'll have ta wait till Monday—the nates are in the bank. (Continued on next page.)

7. That evening Fedar gambles again and loses all—and more. He agrees that if he hasn't paid off in a year, Armand will get all his future writing income. Wildly, Fedar denaunces himself.

8. Armand surprisingly gives the General the notes, tells Fedor the privilege of making Pauline unhappy is now his (Fedor's). But Fedar avoids her. Her grandmother (Ethel Barrymore) arrives.

9. She's vastly rich and the General hopes saon ta inherit her wealth. But she catches the gaming fever, loses her fortune, dies at the table. Fedor, pawning things and sponging, still gambles.

10. For days he has hidden from Pauline in the barren hotel roam ta which he's reduced. She seeks him aut, having spent her last coin an train tickets, and gets him ta agree ta leave with her.

11. He manages to steal a bracelet from her wrist, pawns it, sells the train tickets. Later, down-and-out and having hallucinations—one ts meeting Picard an a park bench—he wanders into a church.

12. Here he undergoes a great spiritual rebirth, staggers back to his room—and in a few days has finished a fine novel about his recent grim life. It's a big success—so all, it seems, ends happily.

Everywhere—lovely hands agleam with this pure, pure, pure-luxury polish!

Beautiful NAIL BRILLIANCE BY CUTEX only 25¢ *

Talk about Brilliance (and smart women do), isn't this a brilliant idea?

A polish that's all luxury, from the top of its graceful "artist's" brush to the last long-wearing drop in the bottle. Yet the cost is a mere 25¢.

Never before, a polish with so many extras. Amazing wear. Beautiful "dressing table" bottle. Eleven alluring, fadeless shades, including new "Star Bright."

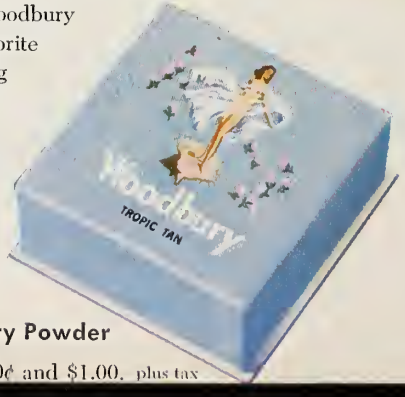
Never before, a polish so completely pure and harmless. Even women whose skins are allergic to other polishes tell us they can safely use Nail Brilliance.

Now—lovelier lips, too! New Cutex Lipstick has everything you long for in a lipstick. Silk-satin texture! Clinging-vine cling! Colors to harmonize with those heavenly Nail Brilliance shades! Only 49¢.* New "purse" size—25¢.* *PLUS TAX.

"it's Tawny... glowing... glamorous!

...a Midsummer Dream of a Shade"

Woodbury Tropic Tan



Linda Darnell

starring in "SLATTERY'S HURRICANE"
a 20th Century-Fox Production.

Could be your skin was warmed by the sun to a breathtaking bronze . . . or could be Woodbury Tropic Tan you're wearing! No telling with this summer glamour shade—it's that natural-looking! . . . that perfectly toned to your skin!

Like Satin on your Skin...

Smooth as tawny Satin! . . . the smoothest look your skin has ever known, with New Woodbury Powder! Only Woodbury contains the new secret ingredient that does it . . . gives a Satin-Smooth look that's priceless. Now see for yourself why women from Coast to Coast voted New Woodbury the 4-to-1 favorite over all leading face powders!

New
Woodbury Powder
15¢, 30¢ and $1.00, plus tax

NEW! Tropic Tan in Woodbury Tinted Cream Make-up!
Now — a new kind of make-up that veils tiny lines, blemishes, gives a "perfect" complexion!
Not drying, not greasy! Your complete make-up. Woodbury Tinted Cream Make-up gives the new, fresh-glowing young look! Or wear with Woodbury Powder in matching shades. The two together — fabulously beautiful! Tropic Tan, Brunette, Natural.

39¢ plus tax

Never underestimate the Power

There'd been six women before, and then came Linda. "He'll never marry her," said his friends. But they didn't know Ty—or Linda.

by MORGAN MacNEIL

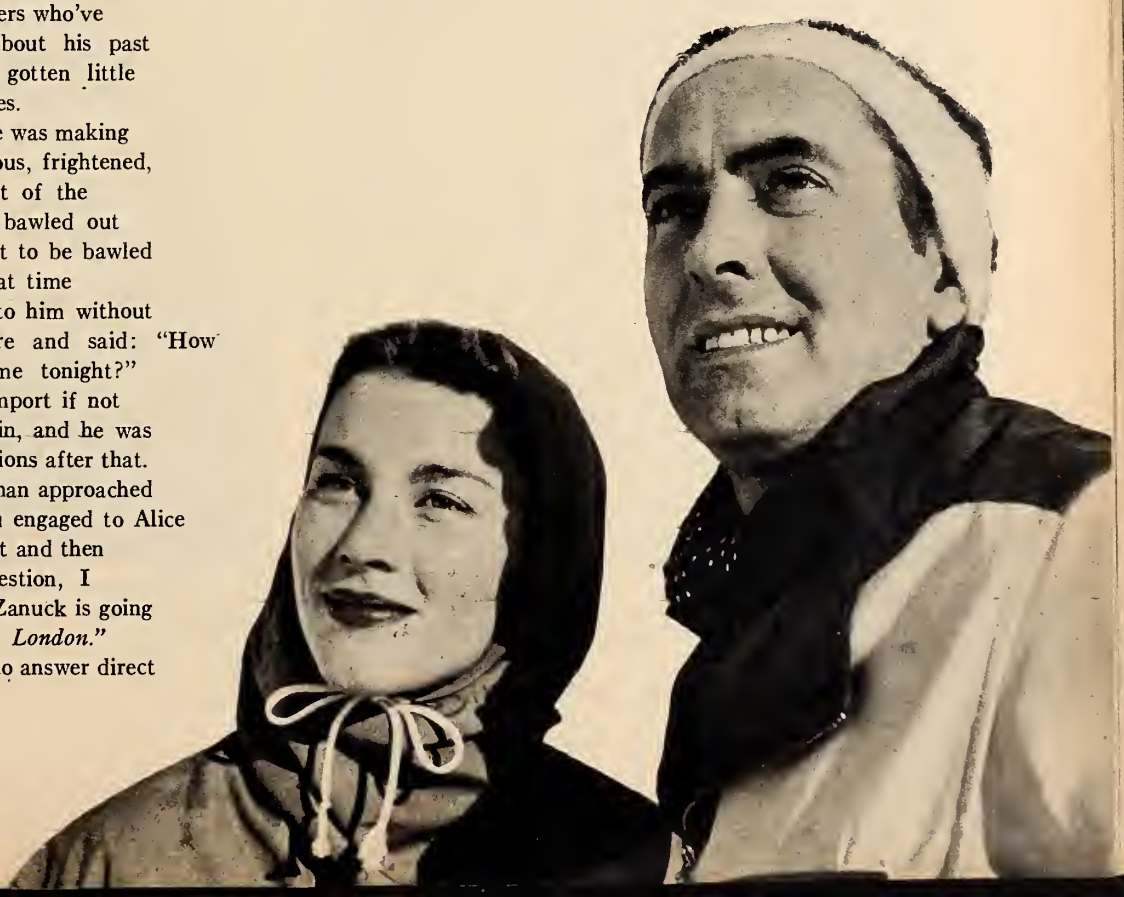
■ Even after pictures of their wedding had been radioed to America, photographs showing Ty and Linda being wed in the church of Santa Francesca Romana by the Pittsburgh-born Msr. William Hemmick—even then, Ty's friends found the marriage difficult to believe.

For months those friends had been going around Hollywood slyly whispering that Tyrone Power would never marry Linda Christian. "She's not his type," they would say. "We've known the guy for years, and take it from us this is just an infatuation."

Even now, months after the marriage, a large segment of Hollywood finds it difficult to realize that Linda is actually Mrs. Tyrone Power. It's hard for the movie colony to admit how wrong it was.

Actually, it shouldn't be. For Tyrone Power has always been one of the foremost mystery men in Hollywood.

In the past 13 years, he has starred in more than 40 films. His every romance has been avidly charted by the press. He's been interviewed by a multitude of writers. He's played opposite scads of talkative actresses. And yet, despite this, almost no one really knows his heart, his mind, his true personality



"I'd have bet my last dollar," says one director, "that Ty would never have married Linda. Guess I really don't know the boy."

Ty Power rarely speaks about himself or his plans and almost never about his women. He's been like that ever since he first set foot in Hollywood. Reporters who've questioned him repeatedly about his past heart interests have always gotten little from him but irrelevant replies.

Fourteen years ago, when he was making his first picture, he was nervous, frightened, and quite ill at ease in front of the cameras. He had just been bawled out by the director and was about to be bawled out again. Alice Faye, at that time a great Fox star, walked up to him without ever having met him before and said: "How about having dinner with me tonight?"

That invitation, subtle in import if not in delivery, saved Power's skin, and he was seen with Alice on many occasions after that. On one of them, a newspaperman approached his table and asked, "Are you engaged to Alice Faye?" Ty thought a moment and then said, "In reply to your question, I can honestly say that Darryl Zanuck is going to let me play in Lloyds of London."

In addition to such refusal to answer direct questions, it is also characteristic of Ty that while all his external doings may portend one obvious course of action, in the end he usually does the unexpected.

For instance, when he started going with Lana Turner, he really rushed the lady. Night after night he saw her exclusively. Ty and Lana partied together, danced together, they were virtually inseparable.

Lana made no mystery of her feelings toward Ty. Each time she looked at him, she saw him with her heart. When they sat down together in restaurants, they held eyes across the table. Lana was very frank with her intimates about the actor. She hoped to marry him.

As for Power, he said nothing. Whenever he's gone with a girl, he's let others do all the talking. He holds his own counsel.

In the case of Lana Turner, he decided to take a round-the-world flight. Everyone predicted that as soon as he returned, he and Lana would marry. Tyrone publicly predicted nothing and promised less.

When he hit Rome in his aerial junket, a girl phoned him. He invited the girl to his hotel for refreshments. A day later, he and the unidentified beauty were throwing pennies in the Fontana de Trevi, Rome's historic wishing well.

An Italian newspaperman who spotted the couple bouncing along the streets of Rome, wrote in his column the next day, "Lana Turner, the American actress, is secretly in Rome with dyed hair."

The girl wasn't Lana at all. She was Blanca Rosa Welter, professionally known as Linda Christian, now known as Mrs. Tyrone Power.

What had happened was that the press had so played up the Turner-Power love affair that no one could possibly couple Ty with any other girl but Lana.

When Ty got back to Hollywood, and Miss Turner's studio announced that Lana and Ty were no longer romancing, movie-goers everywhere were a little sad. The whole world loves a love affair and here was one which had faded into nothingness.

Weeks later, when Lana moved on to New York and Bob Topping and could look back objectively on the whole story of her relationship with Ty, she sadly acknowledged "He never said anything about marriage. People just took it for granted. They built up the whole affair."

And this, in general, is what three other women in Ty's life have said at different times.

The first was blonde, pert, winsome Sonja Henie. In the early years of his Hollywood fame, Ty was attracted to Sonja with all the ardor and passion of his youth. These two clicked right from the start. Rumors of their impending marriage were spread everywhere. The gossip columns were cluttered with Henie-Power items.

But Ty said nothing.

When eventually he stopped calling upon Miss Henie, the reporters were baffled. "How come," they asked Sonja, "you and Power didn't get hitched?"

Miss Henie was as sweet as ever. There had never been anything really serious between her and Mr. Power, she explained. "Besides," (Continued on page 95)

ALICE FAYE storred in Tyrone's first movie 14 yeors ogo. A great Fox nome ot thot time, she took Power under her wing. Morriage rumors were expertly scuttled by Ty's refusol to moke public comments.

NORMA SHEARER wos extremely lonely after the death of her husband Irving Tholberg. She accepted dotes with Power ond they become a well-known combinotion until people discussed their getting morried

Never underestimate the Power

SONJA HENIE delighted Ty in the early years of his Hollywood fame. Rumors of their impending marriage spread everywhere, but Ty said nothing. Later, Sonja stated that skating, not marriage, was for her.

JANET GAYNOR was eight years older than Power. Attracted by her maturity and sharp intellect, he dated her exclusively for six months. As gossip about them grew, his apparent interest quickly diminished.

ANNABELLA was the first woman Ty spoke about. In 1939, he told the press he would marry her—and he did. Seven years later, after service in naval aviation, Ty announced that he preferred to be single again.

LANA TURNER made no mystery of her feelings toward Tyrone. She hoped to marry him. When their romance was over, Lana acknowledged, "He never said anything about marriage. People just took it for granted."

Goddess in Shadow

For the first time, Bergman has felt the hot breath of gossip. And whether true or false, the rumors may easily cloud the Bergman legend.

BY SANDRA SUE DRESKER

Ingrid Bergman attends the Hollywood première of Paisan with its famous Italian director, Roberto Rossellini. He came to her in Hollywood when, deeply impressed with his work, she wrote him that she'd like very much to be in one of his films.

■ For many years, Ingrid Bergman has managed to remain a veritable goddess to most of her acquaintances, and to the general public as well. Now, many are wondering if their goddess has feet of clay.

As this is written, the newspapers have been filled with reports that Ingrid plans to divorce her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, and marry the great Italian director Roberto Rossellini—with whom she went off to the Mediterranean island of Stromboli to make a film currently titled After the Storm.

For the first three weeks after the story hit the front pages, none of the trio would make any public comment to confirm or deny. Finally, on May 4, a few days after Dr. Lindstrom had flown to Italy and had conferred with his wife and Rossellini, Ingrid issued the following indefinite announcement:

"I have met my husband and we discussed and clarified our situation. . . . Once the film is completed, I shall leave Italy and meet my husband in Sweden or the United States. Beyond this there will be no further statements about our private lives. . . ."

This announcement, obviously, was not an outright denial of a romance between Bergman and Rossellini. And it is known that Rossellini had just taken legal steps to make his Hungarian civil divorce binding in Italy.

At first, some of Ingrid's intimates insisted that her silence merely reflected her belief that the innocent need make no denial. Yet in view of developments, even those who initially scoffed at the idea of a romance are beginning to believe that beneath the smoke of gossip has burned the flame of truth. Why, they now ask, did Ingrid wait so many weeks before making a statement to the press? Why did she oblige her husband to travel thousands of miles when a simple, "There's nothing to it," would have stilled the romance reports?

Dr. Peter Lindstram, Ingrid's husband, flew to Italy as Bergman-Rossellini gossip increased.

In any event, the average citizen has been amazed that Ingrid Bergman, of all people, should be the center of such a storm of conjecture.

Before digging into the truth underlying this remarkable affair, let's examine Bergman the Goddess.

Ingrid's elevation to that status began, it is said, when David O. Selznick discovered what a big girl he'd imported from Sweden. He banned the slang dictionaries from his publicity department and installed volumes of romantic poetry.

"Miss Bergman," one publicist was thereupon inspired to write, "is as unspoiled as a fresh snowfall, and is as magnificent. She is like a goddess."

When the press met her, they found her a young woman wholesome as milk and pretty as a large, firm, prize peach. They heard her say earnestly, "I do not want I should become a sign." At which point, a spokesman for Mr. Selznick stepped forward to explain, "Miss Bergman means she doesn't want to become typed."

Quietly, Miss Bergman slipped away while the spokesman gave the interview for her.

The aura of Miss Bergman grew and grew. And grew—until finally several Eastern editors sent their most experienced, cynical reporters to Hollywood with these instructions: "Get Bergman—the real Bergman. Don't go near a press agent. Talk to everyone else. Get some dirt. Nobody's as wonderful as she's being made out to be." When whisperings of such doings reached Selznick's public relations boys, they laughed loudly. (Continued on page 93)

End guesswork in your next home permanent

Find your "Rayve Number" on the Dial-a-Wave, exclusive with

Rayve

...the new personalized HOME PERMANENT

FASTER . . . GENTLER . . . EASIER

Rayve's personalized waving times are up to twice as fast as ordinary home permanents. Yet Rayve's improved creme formula makes waving action noticeably gentler. And it's all as simple as rolling your hair in curlers. Picture-booklet directions are crystal clear, and you don't even wear a turban!

LONG-LASTING . . . YET SOFTER, MORE NATURAL—No fuzzy ends, no frizz with Rayve. Even on the very first day, your hair feels satin-soft . . . looks and acts as if you'd been born with naturally-curly hair. Once you've tried this personalized home permanent, you'll never be satisfied with any other kind of wave.

COMPLETE RAYVE KIT — everything for a perfect permanent. Includes 60 "easy-wind" plastic curlers, step-by-step directions, and the Dial-a-Wave. $2

REFILL KIT—with Dial-a-Wave. Complete except for curlers and bands. $1

FROM THE FAMOUS PEPSODENT LABORATORIES

YOUR "RAYVE NUMBER" IS YOUR GUIDE TO THE ONE RIGHT WAVE FOR YOUR KIND OF HAIR

There's nothing hit or miss about a Rayve cold wave. With the easy-to-use Dial-a-Wave that's in every Rayve kit, you just set the dial for the texture and condition of your hair—and up comes your own Rayve Number. It's your guide to the professionally correct timing procedure for your type of hair and the amount of wave you prefer.

Your hair needs special summer care

Look for the helpful display of essentials for summer hair beauty at your favorite drug or cosmetic counter right now.

"I dress for a beach party... at 8 o'clock in the morning!"

1. "At business I wear a soft linen suit. Its tucked-in jacket is held by a rainbow of belts whose circles are echoed by bands of hem tucking. And, of course, I rely on gentler, even more effective Odorono Cream . . . because I know it protects me from perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!"

New Odorono Cream brings you an improved new formula in a bright new package. Stays creamy smooth too . . . even if you leave the cap off for weeks!

2. "At the beach I don braided, bright straw sandals, an apron copied from a Portuguese fisherwoman's, take off my jacket, and get down to work in my pretty yellow linen peasant blouse. I'm confident of my charm all evening, too, thanks to new Odorono Cream . . . because I find it gives me the most effective protection I've ever known!"

It never harms fine fabrics, and is so gentle you can use it right after shaving! You'll find it the perfect deodorant!

New Odorono Cream safely stops perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!

(Now in 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, plus tax.)

how to be the only pebble on the beach

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ Naturally, you can't really be the only pebble on the beach—where would be your audience? But it never hurt any girl's morale to feel as if she were stealing the show; what are sun, sand and salt spray for—but to make a pretty girl look prettier?

Of course, a glamorous bathing suit has a great deal to do with how many interested looks come your way. And your beach etceteras count too—the cute shoes you kick off; the gay bag you keep your sun lotion in; the dramatic sunglasses you size up the situation behind.

In this issue we've rounded up bathing suits and beach accessories we think will draw crowds (well, almost)—on any sands under the sun! The suits speak for themselves, as you'll see when you turn the pages. But we especially urge you to look carefully at the smaller photos of tricky trimmings:—the terry scuffs and the Greek thong sandals on pages 68-69; the jaunty tramp-bag, page 70. And don't miss the terry shirt with the three big carpenter pockets to stuff your stuff in (page 72)—or the sophisticated terry stole that curves down to your knees in back, page 74.

Cyd Charisse goes down to the sea in a petal skirt suit

■ Cyd Charisse, whom you'll soon see in a straight dramatic role in MGM's forthcoming Tension, models a nylon moulded and draped sea-green suit with mermaid petal skirt. The bra is softly boned, can be worn with or without halter strap. It's nylon sharkskin. Green, cherry red, cocoa brown or black. Sizes 32-38. By Brilliant Fashions. $8.98.

At Martin's, Brooklyn,
The Hecht Company, Washington,
Rice's, Norfolk.
Other stores, page 73.

modern screen fashions

how to be

THE ONLY PEBBL

cyd charisse

strikes a dancer's pose in gleaming moulded satin lastex —perfect show-er off-er for the body beautiful. In yellow, green, rose, blue, aqua or black. Sizes 10-16. By Rose Marie Reid . . . about $10.95. At Woodward & Lothrop, Washington. The May Co., Los Angeles— other stores page 73.

Greek thong sandal. Red, green, yellow, white with crepe sole. By Dalton Reed. $2.98.

ON THE BEACH...

Hard-to-find terry scuffs.
Blue, pink, yellow, white.
By Honeybugs, $1.99.
At Abraham & Straus, Bklyn.

cyd charisse

makes like a Venus in a luster-black swimskin with a knot of gold at the bodice, a cuff at the bottom. (Secret: it contains more than a mile of lastex—which accounts for the poured-in look.) Can be worn strapless. Gold braid is non-tarnish. Sizes small, medium, large.

By Gantner . . . about $10.95.

At Best & Co., N. Y., other stores page 73.

THE ONLY PEBBLE ON THE BEACH...

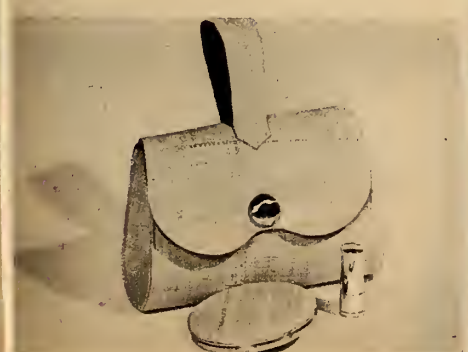
. . . In duck print boxer shorts.

Show-stopping shorts and halter bra, with dramatic duck-and-catkin print. In Celanese Prospector rayon. Gold with brown print; white with blue; natural with green; light green with bright green. Sizes 32-38. By Catalina . . . about $10.

Saks-34th, N. Y.—other stores page 73.

Denim Tramp bag on stick carved with names. By Dan Gertsman—$3.95 plus tax.

summer sundries



Polka linene pump to spike any summer costume. Green, navy. By De Liso Debs. $12.95.

Bag to match shoes, above. Bag and shoes also in colored dots on white. By Lennox.

Glamour Highpoint glasses—"gold" on shell rims. By Grantly, $3. "Gold kid" case included.

Straw handle bag, complete with straw compact, lipstick, comb. By Lin-Bren, $2.98 plus tax.

Artcarved

diamond and wedding rings

NEW YORK • LONDON • AMSTERDAM • ANTWERP

Choose your ring by name—by trusted name—Artcarved.
Artcarved diamond rings are made by America's oldest and largest ringmaker. He brings you fine diamonds never before worn . . . performs and controls every step in the making of an Artcarved ring, from the rough diamond and molten gold to the finished product. This complete control and protection, by Artcarved expert craftsmen, results in savings which are passed on to you in better values—better prices. Genuine Artcarved diamond rings are registered and guaranteed. At your jeweler's, look for the name Artcarved in the ring, on the tag.

Diamond rings $75 to $5000 Wedding rings from $8

GOWN BY CASTILLO OF ELIZABETH ARDEN

MILFORD SET, an outstanding value in yellow gold. Engagement ring, $275. Wedding ring, $92.50. Groom's ring, $125.
Prices include Fed. tax.

FREE! "How to Select Your Diamond Ring," a new, illustrated booklet. Write to J. R. Wood & Sons, Inc., Dept. S-4, 216 E. 45th St., New York 17, N. Y.

Rings enlarged to show detail *Trade Mark Reg.

Artcarved · Beloved by brides for 99 years (1850-1949)

THE ONLY PEBBLE ON THE BEACH...

In draped faille—one strap

Water sprite suit, minimum for the slim young thing. Draped in front, smooth in back, plastic-buckled at shoulder and waist.

Coral, green, pale blue, yellow or black. Sizes 32-38.

By Sea Nymph . . . about $8.98.

For where to buy, see page 73.

Terry beach shirt with carpenter pockets. Many colors. By Coral. About $3.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

Petol skirt bathing suit worn by Cyd Charisse in color photograph (page 67)
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Martin's, 501 Fulton St., Resort Shop, Casual 5th fl.
Chicago, Ill.—Goldblatt's State Street Store, 333 S. State St., Sportswear Dept., 3rd fl.
Norfolk, Va.—Rice's, 400 Granby St., Beachwear Dept., 1st fl.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Boggs & Buhl, Federal St. & Parkway, Sportswear, 2nd fl.
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co., 7th & F Sts., Beachwear Dept., 3rd fl.

Moulded satin lastex bathing suit worn by Cyd Charisse (page 68)
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co., 19 N. State St.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co., Broadway & 8th Sts., Sports Accessories, 3rd fl.
Newark, N. J.—Bamberger's, 131 Market St., Beach Club, 3rd fl.
New Orleans, La.—Maison Blanche Co., 901 Canal St., Sportswear, 2nd fl.
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop, 10th & G Sts., Sportswear, 3rd fl., Main Building

Greek thong sandals (page 68)
Order by mail: Dalton Reed
(Post Paid) Boston 1, Mass.

Luster black swimskin worn by Cyd Charisse (Page 69)
Ft. Worth, Tex.—Stripling's, 209 Houston St., Sportswear, 2nd fl.
Madison, Wis.—Baron Bros. 14 W. Miffin St., Sportswear, 2nd fl.
Minneapolis, Minn.—The Dayton Co., 7th St. & Nicollet Ave.
New York, N. Y.—Best & Co., 51st St. & 5th Ave., Beach Shop, 4th fl.
Tampa, Fla.—Weil-Mass Inc., Sport Shop, 2nd fl.

Terry scuffs (page 69)
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St., Slippers, 4th fl.

Duck print boxer bathing suit (page 70)
Baltimore, Md., Gaxton's, 214 N. Charles St., Sportswear, 1st fl.
Chicago, Ill.—Maurice L. Rothschild, Sportswear Dept., 7th fl.
Ft. Worth, Tex.—Stripling's, 209 Houston St., Sportswear, 2nd fl.
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th, 34th St. & Broadway, Sportswear, 3rd fl.
San Francisco, Calif. — Davis-Schonwasser, Grant Ave. & Sutter St., Sport Dept., 2nd fl.

Denim tramp bag on stick (page 70)
New York, N.Y .—Bloomingdale's 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Sportswear Dept., 3rd fl.

SUMMER SUNDRIES (page 71)
Polka pumps and polka bag
Morristown, N. J.—Jack Decker, 6-8 Washington St.
Glamour Highpoint sunglasses
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Optical Dept., Balcony.
Straw handle bag
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th, 34th St. & Broadway, Main fl.

Draped faille one strap bathing suit (page 72)
Buffalo, N. Y.—J. N. Adam Co., 383 Main St., Town & Country Shop, 4th fl.
Chicago, Ill.—Goldblatt's State Street Store, 333 S. State St., Sportswear, 3rd fl.
Columbus, Ohio—The Union Co., High & Long Sts., Sports Dept., 4th fl.
New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St. & Ave. of Americas, Sun & Sand Shop, 3rd fl.
Richmond, Va.—Thalhimer's, 613 E. Broad St., Budget Sportswear, 5th fl.
Terry beach shirt (page 72) and terry beach stole (page 74)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th. & Lexington Ave., Deb Sportswear, 3rd fl.
Peoria, Ill.—Block & Kuhl, Adams & Fulton Sts., Sportswear Dept.

White pique bathing suit with gold (page 74)
Write: Lee Swim-Play Suits
1410 Broadway
New York 18, N. Y.—for stores

How to Order Modern Screen Fashions
(1) Buy in person from stores listed.
(2) Order by mail from stores listed.
(3) Write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.—for store in your vicinity.

It's the Ho-Bo Bag*

. . . Swing a "Ho-Bo-Bag" o'er your shoulder and hit the road . . . to the campus . . . to the beach. Stuff it with all of your paraphernalia . . . its waterproof lining makes it a haven for bathing suit, cap, oil, etc. In denims, polka dots and bright colors, just $3.95. Available at your favorite store, or write to:

Bloomingdale's New York
Bullock's, Inc. Los Angeles
C. F. Berg Co. Portland, Ore.
Roos Bros. San Francisco

Dan Gertsman -CALIFORNIA
a California Creation

*Trademark Registered — Patent Pending

Plus 20% Federal Tax

722 So. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, Calif.
Factory: 2202 Broadway, Santa Monica, Calif.

BUY U. S. SAVINGS BONDS preserve your natural skin beauty!

—and GUARD AGAINST DRY SKIN

Lanolin Plus quickly improves dry, rough or aging skin by supplying the extra lubrication it needs. Because Lanolin Plus is rich in refined liquid lanolin, it is easily absorbed by your skin—quickly brings back the feeling of softness. Lanolin Plus is not sticky, always pleasant to use.
At drug and department stores.

Lanolin Plus is even more effective when used with Lanolin Plus Soap—a fine, super-fatted toilet soap made with lanolin.

Lanolin Plus
LANOLIN CREAM OIL
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE

CONSOLIDATED COSMETICS, Dept. 57
430 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send me FREE sample bottle of Lanolin Plus.
NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY.....STATE.....

THE ONLY PEBBLE ON THE BEACH...

. . . In white pique—with gold.

And it comes in larger sizes, to make the generous figure look its most seductive. Slimming princess lines with gold buttons and gold piping. White, pink, blue or maize waffle pique. Sizes 32-40

By Lee Knitwear . . . about $12.95.

For where to buy, see page 73.

Terrific terry cloth beach stole with huge pockets. Drapes over shoulders, dips deep in back.

Back, same stole. White, pink, maize, others. By Coral. Abt. $4.

WHICH GIRL HAS THE GABLE? Ann Sheridan . . .

(Continued from page 53)

a picture chore. Clark goes hunting in South Dakota or Mexico, or just stays home. Ann goes East to visit friends.

And though Ann, when she's in California, lives less than five miles from Clark in the San Fernando Valley, she and he have never traveled much in the same circle of friends. Ann's idea of a whale of a time is to have several cronies drop in for an evening to listen to a three-piece Mexican band. She never issues invitations to formal parties and seldom accepts them. (Her great pal Steve Hannagan, when an associate once asked him why Ann so seldom came into New York from her Connecticut farm hideaway, is said to have answered, "I just can't get her to put shoes on.")

On one occasion, though, some time back, she went to a party at Ann Sothern's home in Beverly Hills. Ann Sothern had just separated from Bob Sterling and friends were rallying around to keep her from being lonesome.

As Ann Sheridan was being driven over, her escort said, "Know something? Gable's going to be there tonight. You know, you two would be a really great pair."

Ann's reaction was something below the boiling point. She said she'd known Clark for a long time, but she never again wanted to mix with the Hollywood crowd. At the party, she and Clark kidded around as they had countless times before, but they were like brother and sister. Other guests who had hoped that a spark might be struck were doomed to disappointment.

they meet again . . .

Now, as the saying goes, years pass. Clark is having a fine time in Palm Springs at the Racquet Club. His presence there has stirred excitement among all the ladies present, from starlets to wealthy Eastern dowagers. He is charming, considerate, kind. There is an extraordinarily beautiful girl there named Yvonne de Carlo. Willingly, Clark spends a lot of time having his picture taken with her. The pictures may be of some publicity use later on. Not for Clark. who has no need for publicity—but he likes to see youngsters get ahead, and during his stay on the desert he poses for dozens of photos with people who could use pictures showing them with someone important.

Enter Ann Sheridan. When Ann arrived at the Racquet Club, walking through the oddly-arranged entrance which leads directly into the bar-dining room, Clark looked up from his conversation and made a mental note that the new arrival was quite attractive. In a matter of seconds, he did a double-take. Why, it was Annie Sheridan!

What happened from there on is a peculiar reversal of events as they have been known in Gable's life. Usually, Clark doesn't have a chance to be the aggressor. If he makes himself available, there are a half-dozen charming women around. This time, it seemed to people watching, that for the next few days Clark pursued while Ann retreated. At least, her interest seemed casual enough.

Vacationers at the Racquet Club watched the little game like people clustered around a television set. They were delighted to note, on the third or fourth day, that Mr. Gable abruptly began to make progress. Now Ann, who had been so casual, seemed to light up.

Everyone looked forward to the Saturday evening gathering of the Racquet Club clan. A big dinner had been planned with a number of Hollywood folk, including Frances and Van Heflin, to be present. When dinner began, however, there were two conspicuously empty chairs. An hour passed, then two. Guests began to speculate on whether or not Ann and Clark hadn't checked out and taken off for some place like Nevada where two people can become one in a hurry.

This didn't happen, though. Along about 11 o'clock, the two showed up. They'd been for a long ride in Clark's car. Immediately, they were the butt of considerable happy ad libbing, and for an answer they just grinned at each other like a couple of high-school sweethearts who had ditched classes for an afternoon in the park. During the course of the evening, they toasted each other at the table, danced together to the tropical music, holding tight as though they expected any moment to have a director yell, "Cut!"

Of course, Charlie Farrell's Racquet Club has witnessed quiet little romances before, but this was so obviously something different. Those who know have never taken Clark's constant dating with various young Hollywood girls seriously. Here, however, were a man and a woman so clearly drawn together and so absolutely right for each other that those present felt like breaking out in applause.

Around midnight, onlookers had caught the fever that the pair were generating.

"How old is Clark, anyway?" an Eastern matron wanted to know.

"Oh, I'd guess around 40. It's a funny thing—that gray at the temples seems to make him look younger than he did a couple of years ago."

The lady scoffed. "That's not what's making him look young. It takes a woman like her to bring out the best in a man's appearance."

Actually, Gable is 48. Ann is getting acquainted with her thirties; yet she is much younger than the women in whom Clark has been interested in the past. Perhaps more than any other girl he has ever known, Ann is the most like the late Carole Lombard. She has the same flair for beautiful clothes and a similar disregard for the niceties of high fashion. She has a robust, riotous sense of humor of the type for which Carole was so well-known.

There the comparison should end—for Ann is strictly individual to the nth degree. And independent. Being so, her sudden interest in Gable prompted speculation that perhaps she had seriously quarreled with Steve Hannagan.

At least, during the time Ann was at the Racquet Club she certainly had nothing on her mind but Clark. So much so that in the intimacy of this small club hotel the two soon became taken for granted and no longer a matter of curiosity.

Abruptly, the holiday was over. Ann returned to Hollywood. On the heels of her departure came news that Steve Hannagan was flying to the Coast. He does that frequently in any event—but now he had real reason. Perhaps now, when their friends had long since ceased to speculate on possible marriage, Ann and Steve might have headline news to announce. (Though up to now Ann seems to have had a "why marry him and spoil a beautiful friendship?" attitude.) Or, a battle could be in prospect. Whatever was in store, Clark stayed on for a few days in the desert, looking noticeably lonesome, absent-minded and completely disinterested in the ladies who remained.

Away from the immediate proximity of the swift, exciting romance between Ann and Clark, the ill-informed were inclined to disregard the entire affair as trivial gossip, particularly since neither bothered to confirm or deny the obvious. Even if they had, any veteran reporter will assure you that Hollywood denials are often synonymous with the word proclamation.

Now, let's see what happens. THE END

(For the Gable-Davis story see page 52)

"Your job is just to release them, Pettiman; it isn't necessory to spur them on!"

CAN JUDY GARLAND LOVE AGAIN?

(Continued from page 24)

after she finishes Annie Get Your Gun. That musical may be completed by the time you read this, and Judy may already have ordered her attorney, David Tannenbaum, to file the divorce petition.

Reconciliations in Hollywood are legion, and the possibility exists that Judy and Vincente may have one. In fact they may be giving their marriage another try at this very moment. But the probability seems remote, since Judy has come right out and said flatly, "Vincente and I have come to the realization that we're happier apart. I'm sorry to say that, but it's true. We tried very hard to overcome the difficulties of incompatibility. But it just won't work."

Put yourself in Judy's position for a few moments. Go back to June 7th, 1945. Her divorce from David Rose, the composer, had just become final. She'd had a tough two years with David. He was so taut, so on-edge, especially when he was working and composing such memorable music as "Holiday for Strings."

She'd tried, Lord knows how she'd tried, to make that first marriage a success. But she was young and David was drafted into the Army and there was a war and somehow the two of them just couldn't straighten things out.

a new leaf . . .

But now that was done with. A clean white page was coming up. Thanks to Vincente, she'd made a successful transition from child pictures to mature roles. Her agents were going to re-negotiate a contract at MGM, and it looked very much as if she'd average $3,750 a week from there on in.

Best of all, she was overwhelmingly in love with Vincente. She was going to marry him next week—on June 15th, 1945—and then there'd be the honeymoon in New York.

Then she became Mrs. Ben Vincente Minnelli for better or for worse. She was married at her mother's house, and wore a wonderful silk jersey gown of pearl gray. Ira Gershwin was Vincente's best man; her sister was her bridesmaid. The whole world looked good, golden, and glorious.

Nine months later, she gave birth to her first child, Liza. Liza was a cute little trick, with her father's piercing brown eyes and high Latin forehead and just the warmest, friendliest way of cuddling up.

But somehow, after the birth of little Liza, Judy and Vincente didn't seem to get along too well. Quibbles developed into quarrels. They were both extremely sensitive, both very high strung. Vincente, one one occasion, left home for the night. The studio announced that she was going to appear opposite Fred Astaire in Easter Parade. She knew what a perfectionist Astaire was.

She wondered and worried about Astaire, about her career, about her home, about her child, about her marriage. Her happiness seemed to be ebbing away. The Hollywood gossips began to spread rumors. They said she and Vincente were finished. They said Judy couldn't sleep. They said she was so nervous she had to use sleeping pills all the time. They said she and Vincente were separating.

The rumors continued, and she began to lose weight, and she knew deep in her heart that some of those rumors were true. But she had to deny them. She couldn't admit to anyone, least of all herself, that this marriage was a failure, too.

She lost more weight. She kept making pictures all the same. But the evidences of her unhappiness became clear-cut. Her cheeks became hollow.

L. B. Mayer, chief of the studio, called her in and said, "Judy, I think you need a rest after your last two pictures. You've been working too hard."

Ginger Rogers was given the role originally scheduled for Judy in The Barkleys of Broadway, and Judy broke down and wept.

Gradually, her health improved and she was put into In the Good Old Summertime, but simultaneously, her marriage to Vincente seemed to be going on the rocks.

When The Good Old Summertime was over, she realized that she and Vincente couldn't keep on like this. Before she started Annie Get Your Gun, which may turn out to be really the greatest role in her career, she had to make a decision.

She talked it over with Vincente. It was useless to pretend any longer; it was senseless to attend all the parties around town and play-act that they were divinely in love. Too many people knew or suspected the truth.

It was like sticking a knife into her own heart, but she just had to do it. She picked up the phone and rang Hedda and Louella. "I'm very sorry," she managed to blurt out, "but Vincente and I have separated."

That's the position Judy Garland is in at the moment of this writing.

Actually, the major difficulty in Judy's marriage was and is that she and Vincente are too much alike. They don't complement each other. They have the same strengths, the same weaknesses.

Both of these charming people are high-strung and extremely tense; both are subject to artistic and temperamental moods of elation and despair. They are both incredibly sensitive—the key to their great talents, of course—but it is the kind of aroused, attenuated sensitivity that wears the nerves and eventually plays havoc with one's outlook. It has done so particularly in Judy's case.

At this moment, Judy will talk to no one about the feelings locked tightly in her soul. And her Hollywood friends, of which there are dozens, are genuinely worried about whether Judy is capable of loving and marrying again—or wants to.

Some believe that she is so disillusioned about matrimony that from here on, she may devote herself exclusively to her career and her child. She sees little Liza every day, as does Vincente. And they both would be tickled silly if Liza developed into an actress.

The baby has already played with her mother in In the Good Old Summertime, and Judy says, "Liza can be in any picture that I'm in or any film that her father's directing. I started in show business when I was three, and I'm sure it didn't hurt me a bit."

Show business may not have hurt Judy, but two unsuccessful marriages have left their mental scars on her—and it may be some time if ever, before she tries a third.

Meanwhile, she may be remembering the advice David Rose gave her when they separated. "Listen, Judy," he'd said. "Don't go home to your mother. Live your own life for a while. Find yourself. Find out what you're like and what you really want."

Perhaps she never did give herself this chance. Caught up in the rush of her career, and emotionally exhausted, she found a haven in Vincente. If she had waited longer, if she had thought it over more carefully, she might have chosen a different sort of man—one who would have been as good a husband for her as Vincente was a director.

To have loved and lost twice at 26 is surely no heinous crime—although it may leave a bitter taste. But bitterness comes slowly to the girl who found it in herself to say to David Rose, "I'll never in my life be sorry I married you . . . you've always been so kind, David. I'll never forget it. I'll never be sorry."

learn by living . . .

And later, after testifying for her divorce, she rushed to the phone to call him. "David, I didn't mean any of those horrible things I had to say about you. Don't read the papers, David. . . ."

It is Judy's nature to live fully and to learn by the acceptance of life, however stern its teaching. She's been learning for a long time. When she was 14 and they kept promising to put her in pictures they later gave to other youngsters, she grew restless and miserable and sick. Her mother even asked Mr. Mayer to give the whole thing up, at least till Judy was older.

"I didn't know you had a glass chin, Judy," said Mr. Mayer.

Her hand flew up to it.

He smiled, "You've got to take things on that chin every so often," he'd said. "As long as it's not glass, we don't have to worry."

Lessons learned in childhood are not easily forgotten—especially not by Judy, who today feels that failure in any field is unthinkable. To fail as a woman, at 26, would not be Judy's way.

She is not the kind to shut herself off from love or marriage, or to deny them as unnecessary for happiness. Her intelligence and her zest for life would not come through so beautifully in her screen performances if they did not stem from depths within her.

So it isn't hard to believe that, once she's straightened out emotionally, she again will find a partner with whom to share the joy and the pain of everyday living. Perhaps the man in her life will once more be Vincente Minnelli. Perhaps it will be another. But whoever it may be, Judy Garland will again love and be loved in return.

THE END

MODERN SCREEN

"Maybe we could say we were kidnapped!"

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

FLAMINGO ROAD—"If I Could Be With You" by Kay Starr (Capitol); Herb Jeffries (Exclusive); Gwenn Bell* (Manor); Doris Day* (Columbia); Bill Lawrence (Victor); Art Lund (MGM); Guy Lombardo (Decca); Phil Brito (Musicraft).
Remember this one? The late Henry Creamer, a veteran vaudevillian from Virginia, wrote it in 1929 (he also gave us Dear Old Southland and Way Down Yonder in New Orleans). Now it's a big movie revival. Wish I could recommend you the original Louis Armstrong version, but alas, it's out of print.

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN—"I Only Have Eyes For You" by Al Jolson* (Decca); Billy Eckstine* (National); Kate Smith (MGM); Paul Weston (Capitol); Coleman Hawkins (Mercury); Freddy Gardner (Columbia).
A hit of 1934 which seems to be sung in the picture by Larry Parks (but needless to add, that ain't Larry's larynx).

MAKE BELIEVE BALLROOM—"Miss In Between Blues" by Toni Harper* (Columbia).
Twelve-year-old Toni gives a delightful description of the so-called awkward age.

ROADHOUSE—"Again" by Doris Day* (Columbia); Tommy Dorsey* (Victor); Vic Damone* (Mercury); Art Mooney (MGM); Vera Lynn (London).
Day, Dorsey and Damone do delightfully.

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME—"The Right Girl For Me" by Frank Sinatra* (Columbia).

TULSA—Title song by Jack Kilty* (MGM).

WIZARD OF OZ—Album of four sides by Joel Herron* (MGM).
WMGM's musical director does a neat job with Over The Rainbow, We're Off To See The Wizard, If I Only Had a Brain and Ding Dong The Witch Is Dead. Good, typical movie music.

POPULAR

BOB CROSBY—"Need You"* (Columbia).

VAUGHN MONROE—"Riders In The Sky"* (Victor).

"BOPULAR"

CHUBBY JACKSON—"Father Knickerbopper" (Columbia).

DAVE LAMBERT—"Always"* (Capitol).

RED NORVO—"Dee Dee's Dance"* (Brunswick).

EDDIE SHU—"Flamingo" (Rainbow).

MARY LOU WILLIAMS—"In The Land of Oo-Bla-Dee"* (King).
Chubby has an exciting new 14-piece band; Dave Lambert does wonders with a 12-piece boppish vocal choir. Red Norvo features vibes, clarinet and guitar in a polite, easy-listening brand of bop. Mary Lou does a cute bop novelty sung by Pancho Hagood, ex-Gillespie vocalist. Eddie Shu, to this reporter, is the most amazing new jazz star in years. Plays terrific alta sax, great clarinet, trumpet, and, of all things, bop harmonica. He and his quintet make their disc debut with Flamingo and Two Pair o' Shu's, featuring just about every talent he has.

"When did we stop using Fels-Naptha Soap?"

"Five bucks I laid out for this beauty—not three months ago. Now it looks like Exhibit A in a test of radioactivity . . .

"You tried what? . . . Look, Honey, we're not running a research lab for experimental chemistry. I'm all for scientific progress but nobody's going to play guinea pig with my best shirt.

"Never mind the contests and coupons or what-have-you. I bought you a swell washing machine and I can still give you the price of the best laundry soap to use in it.

"Let's get back to fundamentals. And I mean Fels-Naptha Soap."

Fels-Naptha Soap is the proven laundry product for best results with all kinds of family wash. Get some today. Get gentle, quick-cleaning, sneezeless Fels-Naptha Soap Chips for your washing machine or automatic washer.

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

RIGHT? WRONG?

You can Shower, Dance, Swim, any day, all summer

RIGHT! It's safe to shower, dance, swim, any day of the month if you wear Meds. Meds are internal sanitary protection... no pads, belts or pins. No odor.

Single girls can wear tampons.

RIGHT! Any normal woman can use tampons as soon as she is fully grown. Meds, designed by a doctor, made by Modess, come in three sizes. Meds are worn by thousands of nurses who are in a position to know.

You can expect discomfort on "those days."

WRONG! Meds are so comfortable you'll forget you're wearing one. Small, invisible Meds put an end to bulk, bulge and chafing. Wear Meds—enjoy cool, comfort, blissful freedom, every day, all summer long.

Buy a purse-size box today. Be ready. Or write for a free sample package in plain wrapper to Personal Products Corp., Dept. MS-7, Milltown, N. J. (U. S. only)

3 absorbencies to choose from Regular Super Junior

Go Meds... Go Merrier with The Modess tampon

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Acceptable for advertising in the Journal of the American Medical Ass'n

FOOTLOOSE AND FANCY DRESS

(Continued from page 51)

dinner was announced. The fragrance of steaming silver casseroles filled with tomato rarebit was a beautiful lure. There we found other delicacies spread before us. There were twin trays of jelly-glazed baked ham decorated with large slices of baked apples, green peas, tossed salad, scalloped potatoes, and the most wonderful crab meat and avocado in aspic that any of us had ever tasted. The dessert was fresh strawberry pie (made with whole berries) topped with whipped sour cream. Glory be!

Some of the recipes had been in the Stack family for generations. (For a few of these recipes, see our Fan Fare department on page 82—Ed.)

The boys gallantly volunteered to prepare trays for the girls.

Jack Agar, with a stately bow, presented us Churchills with our dinners. (Not that we minded, but it might have been better if he hadn't filled over half of our plates with delectable but calory-filled scalloped potatoes.)

Martha Hyer and Dick Jackson migrated out to the flagstone terrace to eat their dinners. Here, Bob had umbrella tables and chairs set up.

Others, more venturous, walked down the narrow stepping-stone path, bordered with camellias, to dine beside the swimming pool. This was heavenly. A warm night, a ceiling of stars, jasmine and honeysuckle heavy in the air, and—leave us face it—heavenly food. . . .

After dinner, Don O'Connor decided that now was the time to play games. Dick Flato—who has the killer role in Vendetta—gave Don a crafty glance as he suggested that oldie, Drop the Handkerchief.

Tony Curtis immediately excused himself from participating. Tony, you see, was wearing the dashing Beau Brummel outfit Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., had sported in The Fighting O'Flynn. And the skin-tight trousers were just that—skin tight. "As far as I'm concerned," he announced, "if any fair lady drops her handkerchief tonight, I'll just have to let it lie there—for security reasons!"

Thereafter we played everything from charades to monopoly. The latter was at Don's request. The guy won every game.

By the time "Diamond Jim" O'Connor's winning streak was over, we were all too weary to compete. So we went exploring in the trophy room. Here, Bob keeps part of his umpteen (we counted 30 on one table alone) medals and awards for sailing, flying, skeet-shooting, polo and just about every sport but jacks.

Though we literally had to drag Bob into the room, we did finally wring out one statement about his interests in sports. Seems his fervor for death-defying motorcycle and motorboat racing is getting to be a thing of the past. When he was an aerial gunnery instructor in the Navy, one of the new recruits accidentally shot 25 holes into his plane. It was then that Bob decided that if he ever lived to be a civilian, he'd take it a bit easier. Dying in bed holds a great appeal for him, now.

Also in the room was Bob's desk, piled high with papers, books, and letters. (It looked almost as cluttered as does ours when we're writing our newspaper movie column.) Right next to the desk is where the phonograph console usually sits.

"But," groaned Bob, "I got ambitious. Thought it would be more convenient to have the records and paraphernalia on the patio." The moving job proved to be a little more strenuous than he'd anticipated—for the console weighs 400 pounds. After one push, he'd called for reenforcements.

But the effort had been worthwhile—at least, for those who hadn't had to labor! The phonograph kept spinning most of the evening. Even in the trophy room you could catch faint strains of the "Polonaise" or the last chorus of "So In Love."

When we returned to the patio, we found Annie Rooney trying out a second piece of pie for size. She'd planed in from New York that afternoon and was a house guest of the O'Connors. Just before we'd left for the party, Don and Gwen had frantically called us with the stimulating question of where to find a costume for Annie at eight o'clock on a Saturday night.

The problem had finally been solved when Gwen had taken a large hem in one of Annie's black dresses, added a doily atop her brown locks, and presented her with a duster (vaguely resembling a dish mop). Viola! She was a French maid.

All evening Shirley and John wore matching smiles and looked as pleased as punch. Thirteen-month-old Linda Susan had soloed for the first time that morning. Shirl had been bedded with the sniffles for several days and had been isolated from the baby. When she recovered, Su-Su had been so glad to see her that she'd promptly started walking toward her.

The balloons and serpentines, which had been neglected up until now, were re-discovered. Mike North and Dick Flato entered into a balloon-blowing marathon. It wasn't until Mike was blue in the face from puffing into his balloon that Barbara Lawrence let him in on the fact that there was a pinsize hole in the bottom of it.

Guy and Gail were back doing their Latin-American antics and rapidly gaining converts. We all finally formed into a long conga line and—one, two, three, ugh!—wove around the living room and den.

Footloose and fancy dress—that we were, that we were! THE END

Special offer to our readers

The 1948-49 edition of MODERN SCREEN's exclusive "Super-Star Information Chart" is something no real fan should be without. It's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of over 500 of your favorite stars—complete with birthdates, hobbies, real names, recent pictures and inside facts. To obtain your copy, send 10¢ in coin, plus a large self-addressed, stamped (3¢) envelope to Service Department, MODERN SCREEN, P. O. Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y. Send soon!

your letters . . .

EVIL INFLUENCE?

Dear Editor: I'm writing in regard to the story, "Hollywood's Amazing Love Squabble," in your May issue. I can't see why the Flynns and the Haymes don't take up permanent residence in Reno so they'll save time and traveling expenses on their divorce jaunts. I also cannot see why Modern Screen stoops to flaunt such sordid stories in the faces of decent citizens. If these stars don't have the slightest regard for dignity and good taste, why encourage their romantic escapades with publicity?

EDNA MARTIN, LAKE CITY, FLORIDA

Dear Editor: I think the publicity you gave Robert Mitchum was truly bad. You seemed to be painting a very pleasant picture of a man who had done wrong. This is certainly an evil influence on the young and easily impressed children of our land.

EMILY CHAVER, PORT HUENEME, CALIF.

(Modern Screen's coverage of the Mitchum story and other stories of news interest is based on fact alone. The magazine does not endorse anyone or anything by the mere fact of reporting what has actually happened.—Ed.)

SPOTLIGHT ON HAYWORTH

Dear Editor: I've just read Eduardo Cansino's story in your April issue, and I don't blame Rita, either! She's a movie star in love with a Prince, and she's not afraid to show it—that's bound to rate a spotlight. Naturally, the papers tear the couple to pieces editorially. It's noticeable that the Merle Oberon-Count Cini and Ingrid Bergman-Roberto Rossellini romances have gotten by with comparatively few headlines. Why pick on Rita?

GLORIA STRAUS, ATLANTA, GEORGIA

ARE PARENTS HUMAN?

Dear Editor: I think Margaret O'Brien ought to be ashamed of herself. I had a stepfather when I was her age, and you can be sure I didn't put on any acts in public. I love my stepfather and he has made our home a happier place to be in. Let Margaret try to love her new father and she will be a happier girl.

MARION BRADY, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Dear Editor: Your May editorial seems to give only one side of the Margaret O'Brien story. Of course, her mother does have a right to lead her own life, but you must consider the sort of life Margaret has been leading before you berate her. She's been in movies since she was a tiny girl. I don't imagine that this makes for an exactly normal life, especially if Margaret is, as she appears to be, an extremely sensitive child. You asked, "Are parents human?" I say that children are human, too, and even the brightest cannot be expected to act with the wisdom of mature people.

LYDIA BASS, NEW YORK CITY

ORCHIDS DEPARTMENT

Dear Editor: This is just a line to thank you for your enjoyable publication. I particularly want to rave about the movie reviews by Christopher Kane. More than once I've laughed aloud at some especially witty line that appeared in Miss Kane's review. This is the first "fan letter" I've ever written, but I hope I have many more occasions to say "bravo" to your movie reviewer and your magazine.

LORETTA KABAK, BRONX, NEW YORK

THE LOVABLE GIRL-OF-THE-MONTH

loves her Lovable BRA

Miss Caroline O'Connor
Lovable Cover Girl

Dress from Morgot Dresses Inc.

You'll be lovely, too, in a Lovable® BRA

Lovable's captivating Half-BRA to wear with portrait collars or strapless summer frocks. Tie the ribbon snugly and it holds up, stays up!

Rayon satin: #831, white with white ribbons; #832, black lace over pink. A and B cup, sizes 32 to 38. $2

LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO.
358 Fifth Avenue
New York 1, N. Y.
Pictured on another Lovable model

Of course you can . .

go in swimming . .

with Tampax!

WHY ENVY OTHERS at that certain time of the month? You can wear Tampax in the water on sanitary-protection days and no one will be the wiser! This summer at any popular beach, you are almost sure to find many women who go in swimming on "those days"—wearing Tampax without any hesitation whatever....There is nothing about Tampax in the slightest degree embarrassing (or offending) under bathing suits wet or dry.

WORN INTERNALLY, Tampax discards belts, pins, outside pads — everything that can possibly "show." Perfected by a doctor, Tampax is made of highly absorbent cotton compressed in modern applicators for dainty insertion. The hands need never touch the Tampax. No odor forms. There is no chafing with Tampax. Changing is quick and disposal easy.

COMES IN 3 SIZES (Regular, Super, Junior). Sold at drug stores and notion counters in every part of the country—because millions of women are now using this newer type of monthly sanitary protection. A whole month's supply will go into your purse. The Economy Box holds four months' supply (average). Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

AVA GARDNER'S GREATEST GAMBLE

(Continued from page 29)

the studio's Number One sex-appeal star.

The truth of the matter is that Ava has long been paralleling Lana's own meteoric rise. Whether or not she can maintain the pace depends not upon dramatic ability, for Ava has more than enough to warrant a spot at the top of the ladder, but upon temperament. All the dramatic ability in the world is not going to pull her through if she can't control her emotions.

Early in her career, Ava was living proof of what can happen to a naïve country girl dropped into the middle of the Hollywood maelstrom. Success and publicity went to her head with all the devastating effects of too much champagne. It was all so easy. She had only to flick her finger and people rushed to do her bidding. She was Ava Gardner, MGM's brightest new light, and she made the natural mistake of confusing a publicity build-up with genuine stardom. She had not yet learned that stardom carries with it the sobering responsibilities of hard work and getting along with people.

danger signal . . .

Here and there along the way, little warning signs cropped up, signs which she ignored simply because she could not recognize them. One night she had a dinner date with David Street, a date which she took to be part and parcel of her due as a star—out on the town with a handsome and popular young bachelor, out on display at all the right places. But right after dinner, David said he was sorry, that he had to work next morning and would have to take her home early.

"But David," she pouted, "I want to go to Ciro's, and then to the Mocambo. It's much too early to go home."

"I'm sorry, Ava," David said quietly, "but I have a heavy schedule tomorrow and I have to be fresh for it. And you have to be at the studio yourself in the morning."

"I don't care," Ava cried, furious. "I'm not going home this early."

But she went, for David had long since learned that work and play can be mixed only in the proper proportions. Ava was so angry she didn't speak to him for months. The little warning sign was lost on her entirely.

It was shortly after that that Ava rushed headlong into her ill-fated marriage with Mickey Rooney. And perhaps one of the reasons for its failure was Ava's own failure to realize that her happiness depended on the happiness of others. Her thoughts were still centered on only one person: Ava Gardner.

An incident at a luncheon one day with several of her studio associates threw this attitude of hers into bold relief. As they were leaving the restaurant, she noticed that several people at the next table had their heads together, whispering. She was sure they were talking about her. Out of earshot, she turned to one of her friends and asked anxiously, "Weren't they talking about me? What were they saying?"

He looked at her oddly. "Do you really want to know?" he asked.

"What were they saying?" she demanded.

"They were saying," he replied drily, "that there goes Mrs. Mickey Rooney."

Not Ava Gardner, but Mrs. Mickey Rooney. Ava didn't know it, but that marked the beginning of the end of her marriage. Her disappointment at not being recognized for herself was the tip-off on her own estimation of herself. No marriage can last when a woman is not willing to be known as her husband's wife. Ava was still primarily interested only in Ava.

Hollywood, meanwhile, had relentlessly cut the cloth of Ava's personality to fit its own design. Her delightful North Carolina drawl was put through the meat-grinder of voice lessons until her voice had lost every shred of individuality. She was taught how to walk, how to dress, how to express emotion with her face and hands. Hollywood was still a starry heaven to Ava, and what could be more divinely perfect than to have a "Made in Hollywood" label sewed tightly to her brand new personality? She reveled in it. What young girl wouldn't?

But what young girl could survive it? Ava gave no thought to the hundreds and hundreds of girls who had walked this same path before her, sacrificed their individual personalities upon the altar of machine-tooled "glamor" and lost forever the chance to be a person instead of a product. Ava had never heard of them. Perhaps it was just as well, for it might have undermined her confidence in herself. She was still under the impression that Hollywood's way was the right way.

It was Artie Shaw who blasted her out of her happy day dreams, shook the complacency out of her as a terrier shakes a rag doll, and taught her that emotions are not just a toy to be played with in front of a camera. Artie Shaw reached down into the very heart of her inner being and breathed life into that spark of North Carolina individuality that Hollywood had almost succeeded in putting out. Artie Shaw woke her up to reality with a jolt. In unlocking her emotions he uncovered an actress. The finishing school automaton disappeared once and for all.

Their marriage lasted only a year, but it was long enough for Ava to realize that there were other things in life besides night clubs, glamor and adulation. She learned that there were books to be read, music to be heard, history and art and philosophy to be studied. She learned that home, not Hollywood, was the true center of a woman's life. Above all, she learned about love.

Whatever it was that broke up the mara midsummer's dream june allyson on the august cover of modern screen on sale july 8

riage of Ava Gardner and Artie Shaw, it was clearly not a lack of love. Ava has since been heard to say that she has never loved anyone as she loved Artie Shaw, that she still loves him, that she will always love him. Time has a way of dimming the torch, but it has not yet been three years since Ava and Artie called it a day—and Ava has not yet been heard to proclaim her love for anyone else.

She wants to go home, but it must be a home of her own making, her own extremely careful choosing. If Ava marries again, it must be, this time, for keeps.

And what of Ava and MGM—and Lana?

It's no longer a secret that Lana had been her studio's prime headache for more years than Hollywood cares to remember. When it finally began to appear that her drawing power at the box office might eventually be harmed by the unfortunate publicity that Lana seems to attract as sugar attracts flies, studio executives began to cast about for insurance—insurance in the form of a new and stellar name. Ava Gardner could be it, if only the right role in the right A picture could be found.

Fate took a hand here, for Ava's career and the education of her own private emotions had reached just the right psychological moment for a "slick" role at the precise moment The Hucksters came up for casting. The second lead opposite Gable fitted her like a glove. It was too small a part for Lana Turner, too big for a hopeful starlet. It was just right for Ava.

a star is born . . .

There are those who will tell you that The Killers made Ava Gardner, but Hollywood insiders know better. It was her performance opposite Gable in The Hucksters that put the final, authoritative stamp of big-time stardom, the MGM kind of stardom, on the beautiful North Carolinian. It was that picture, and that picture alone, that qualified her for a future in productions opposite the biggest male stars in Hollywood. She drew the lead with Robert Taylor in The Bribe, and was tapped for Great Sinner opposite Gregory Peck. She'll match strides with Spencer Tracy and James Stewart in Operation Malaya.

The real truth about Ava Gardner is just this: She escaped the rocky road to oblivion by a hair's breadth. She had the moral courage to take to heart a cruel and bitter lesson, the kind of lesson that is dished out at top speed in Hollywood, a ruthless speed that has broken the will of more than one young hopeful. She has learned that publicity-fed glamor and adulation is a dangerous quicksand. She has learned that you get out of life only what you put into it. Above all, she has learned to grow up. She has discovered her emotions and knows now that they are real and living feelings, not merely facial expressions.

Ava, today, is an actress. Yesterday, she was just a pretty young girl to be exploited by the publicity department. She leaped the gap between the two with only an inch to spare—but that inch spelled the difference between success and failure.

Why, then, is Ava sitting on a keg of dynamite? The answer is very simple. Like a patient who has passed the crisis and wants to be up and around, Ava does not yet know her own strength. This time she has real stardom, but real stardom can be even headier than the tinseled variety which almost proved her undoing. Backed by the harsh lessons of the past seven years, will Ava choose to meet her new responsibilities intelligently and courageously? Her friends say she will. Her studio is betting three big pictures that she will. But only Ava has the power to prove them right or wrong.

Ava stands at the true crossroads of her career.

THE END

Glamour begins with grooming!

Safe-and-sure deodorant ends perspiration troubles!

1. ETIQUET actually ends under-arm perspiration odor—safely—surely!
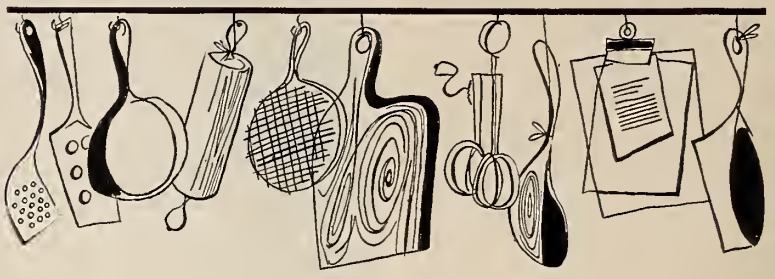
2. ETIQUET—made by specially patented formula—really checks under-arm perspiration!
3. FLUFFY-LIGHT AND SOOTHING—Etiquet goes on easily—disappears in a jiffy! No gritty particles!
4. NO DAMAGE TO CLOTHING when you use Etiquet—famous cloth-test proves!
5. MORE ECONOMICAL TO BUY—Etiquet won't dry out in the jar! Four sizes, 10¢ to 59¢, plus tax.

Etiquet

THE SAFE-AND-SURE DEODORANT

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK



Have you heard Modern Romances?

Everyone's talking about that new kind of daytime radio show—"Modern Romances". It's now being heard over American Broadcasting Company stations from coast-to-coast. The radio program "Modern Romances", like the magazine, is packed with exciting stories of real people in situations you yourself may face. "Modern Romances" is great listening—you're going to like it!

Tune in every day Monday thru Saturday on your local ABC station. Check your newspaper for scheduled time of "MODERN ROMANCES"

fan fare

Reba and Bonnie Churchill had to corner Bob Stack before he'd part with any of these recipes. They were used at his Fancy Dress party (see page 48) and have been in his family for many years. Try them out on your Saturday night gang; they'll come running for seconds.

tomato rarebit

- 1 pound sharp cheese, grated
- 1 (10½ ounce) can condensed tomato soup
- 2 egg yolks
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
- ½ teaspoon salt
- English muffins or crumpets, toasted and buttered

■ This can be kept warm in double boiler for a half hour before serving. Heat grated cheese and tomato soup in top of double boiler until cheese melts. Beat egg yolks slightly, add Worcestershire sauce, dry mustard, and blend. Add to cheese mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and salt. May be thinned with milk or tomato juice, if desired. Serve on well-buttered, toasted English muffins or crumpets. Serves 8.

crab and avocado in tomato aspic

(alternate dish for tomato rarebit)

- 1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
- 2¼ cups tomato juice
- ½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice, or to taste
- 1 pound flaked cooked crab meat
- 1½ avocados, peeled and diced
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, or to taste

■ Allow gelatin to soften in ¼ cup cold tomato juice. Heat remaining tomato juice and dissolve gelatin in it, stirring thoroughly. Add salt, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce if desired, and cool. Arrange avocados in mold with crab meat. When tomato mixture has thickened to consistency of unbeaten egg whites, pour over diced avocados and crab meat. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. May be made the day before, if convenient. Serves 8 to 10.

scalloped potatoes

- 8 medium potatoes pared, cut in slices
- 2 large onions, sliced
- Salt and pepper
- Flour for dredging
- 4 tablespoons butter
- Top milk

■ Arrange a layer of sliced potatoes in buttered baking dish, then a thin layer of sliced onions. Sprinkle with a tablespoon (or a little more) flour, salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Continue layers until dish is filled. Add milk until it may be seen through top layer. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until potatoes are tender. Serves 8.

SMALL WONDER

(Continued from page 33)

sort of reaction, but also sympathy. "I know just how she feels."

Mr. Preminger didn't seem to like that. "You do?" he asked, a little suspiciously.

"I mean—how wonderful for her—the baby . . ." she had said hastily.

"Oh! Yes. . . . Well, she can't play the part and that means you'll do it. You'll start right after A Letter To Three Wives."

Jeanne heard herself thanking him as he took her to the door. When she was walking away he called out, "Goodbye, Lucky!"

And knowing that her own baby was definitely, even decidedly, on the way, she could only smile back weakly. In her mind was a worry. "Can I get away with it?"

It hadn't been easy. There were days when she wished she'd volunteered the truth, had said, perhaps, "Oh, I'm sorry, Mr. Preminger, but I just can't play Lady Windermere. You see, I, too, have been called for a Greater Role." It might have made as nice a scene as any on the screen.

She thought of this particularly on the day she had to put on one of the costumes, a regal drawing-room gown, which included an old-fashioned, whalebone corset to draw her into the wasp-waisted figure favored in Lady Windermere's time. No wonder she fainted toward the end of the picture, walking around with that bear-trap snapped around her middle! But it was hot that day, everyone agreed, and nobody suspected anything. And finally, the shooting was over.

Even then, with the baby hardly more than four months away, she'd made no announcement. She'd stayed on at the studio to pose for publicity shots, and even to make tests for further possible roles.

But she knew that nature was catching up on her steadily. There came a day when she realized that if she didn't say something soon, words would no longer be necessary. It was with relief that she and Paul told the world, and she went home to stay.

Now it was fun staying home and relaxing. They had a nice couple living with them who took care of all the household work and got along wonderfully with little Paul, who was now almost two. Jeanne whiled her days away easily and she even experienced something that hadn't happened at all with little Paul. It had left her a little disappointed at the time, because it was supposed to be a common experience with expectant mothers—a craving for odd tastes in food. That is, she had the craving, all right—but for what?

"Pickles?" suggested Paul, when the

I SAW IT HAPPEN

I was watching them shoot a picture on the U.S.C. campus. The director asked me if I'd lend my sweater to one of the actors. I did, and after the scene was over the actor returned my sweater saying, "Thanks. This is only my first picture so I'm sure you wouldn't want my autograph." I insisted, however, remarking that some day he might become a star. He signed his name—Robert Montgomery.

H. Miner
Los Angeles, Calif.

LITTLE LULU

Now — all you need is Kleenex*!

Little Lulu says: FOR BIBS -- FOR SOOTHING BABY'S SNIFFLES -- PATTING POWDER ON HIS TENDER SKIN, NO OTHER TISSUE IS "JUST LIKE" KLEENEX. SOFT! STRONG! POPS UP! KLEENEX SAVES, SERVES SO MANY WAYS.

© International Cellucotton Products Co. ★ T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

PETER PAN

brings you

"Low 'n' Behold"*

the bra with the dare-devil plunge

and the

Merry-Go-Round cup

With necklines going audaciously DOWN, Peter Pan comes UP with the most daring bra ever—

• The deep plunge of a long line brassiere in a slim bandeau!

• Unique Separator* breathes with you—sit...bend...twist—flattering uplift, always!

• Patented Merry-Go-Round cup accentuates small bust—minimizes full bust..."The Secret's in the Circle!"

• Pre-tested "Shrinkage Control"—FIT and LIFT won't wash out.

Want lovelier curves? Write for FREE booklet, "Your New Guide to Bustline Beauty".

See Low 'n' Behold at your favorite store. There's never been a bra quite like it!
$3.50 in broadcloth • $3.95 in satin • $5 in nylon taffeta

Patent pending* Dept. D-2 © PETER PAN FOUNDATIONS, INC., 312 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 1, N.Y.

Add Color TO YOUR HAIR...
Add Romance TO YOUR LIFE!

It's wonderful how a Marchand Rinse makes your hair glow with warm, alluring color . . . how your brighter hair helps your whole personality sparkle. This new glamour can be yours . . . whether you are blonde, brunette, brownette or redhead.

Use Marchand's "Make-Up" Rinse after every shampoo. It adds rich color, glorious highlights and removes dulling soap film. It even blends in those first tell-tale gray hairs. Easy to use, safe, shampoos out readily.

Marchand's
"MAKE-UP"
HAIR RINSE
2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢
plus tax
★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

NOW ODORLESS!
The NEW ZiP
CREAM
HAIR REMOVER
For satin-smooth legs and arms. Removes every trace of hair. Easy. Quick. Pleasant. Keeps skin alluring . . . 25c, 49c.
SPECIAL: Large 89c size of ZiP Cream Hair Remover sold in combination with 50c container of AB-SCENT Cream Deodorant . . . Both for 89c thing had gotten to be quite a problem and would send Jeanne into deep studies about it. "That's what they're all supposed to want. Pig's knuckles, maybe? With toasted pound-cake? Wild cherries dipped in hollandaise?"
Use a proven hair remover, not an ordinary cosmetic. Insist on ZiP.

Then Paul took her for a ride. They had hardly turned onto Sunset Boulevard when Jeanne sat up straight. "That's it!" she cried, sniffing the air. "That's it!"

"That's what?" Paul asked, pulling the car to a stop. Jeanne was looking around for where the smell might have come from. A half block back there was a street peddler's hot-dog cart. Then she knew. "Hot dogs!" she said. "Hot dogs with chili sauce. That's what I've been wanting all this time!"

"Ah-h-h," mourned Paul, pretending a great disappointment. "I thought my wife at such a sublime time as motherhood would want something different from that. Something exotic, maybe."

"That is exotic," said Jeanne, dreamily. "Hot dogs with chili sauce! Oh-h-h . . ." And that's what they had.

help wanted . . .

Yes, the first few weeks at home were fun. She and Paul were never closer. They went out a lot. She found that if she rested a good part of the day she could go out with him without getting too tired. They were together more often than ever before, it seemed. And then . . . they lost their household couple. Rather, it was a case, first, of the couple losing each other. Something came between them and they said they could no longer work together in the house. They left. Jeanne found herself with the house, Paul Junior, and the day's meals all on her hands. The holiday was over.

She started in on her housework determined to handle it systematically. But she reckoned not on little Paul, on late deliveries from the market, on other things that could go wrong, and on spells of tiredness that would assail her without warning.

Little Paul's favorite sport was unrolling the paper towels in the kitchen. There were times when she stopped him. Then there were times when she couldn't leave what she was doing and decided it was worth the towel to have him safely occupied. But the trouble was, he was interested only in rolled towels; once he'd unrolled them, he walked indifferently away from the mess. Further, he got so adept at it that instead of taking an hour to get a towel unrolled, he learned to do it in 10 minutes. Then he'd be ready for something new. That would generally consist of pulling out one of the kitchen drawers and spilling the contents—silver, cookie-cutters and what not—all over the floor.

One day Jeanne was busy at the kitchen sink when she heard a crash just behind her. Little Paul had pulled a drawer out (leaping clear, as he had learned after his toes had been whacked the first time) and the floor was simply littered with everything, including a spaghetti-like heap of the paper towelling.

"Oh, Baby Paul!" she exclaimed, running to him. Just then there was a horrible noise from the sink. She didn't have to look to know what happened. A fork had slipped into the grinding garbage-disposal unit. She ran over, fished it out—knotted and gnarled like a pretzel—and stood looking at it ruefully. At that moment her husband chose to come home. He strode into the kitchen, looked at the havoc and then at her and little Paul. And then—he said it.

"I wonder how other women do it? Some women have four children and they manage somehow. What would you do if you had four children to care for as well as a house to run?"

That's what he'd said. That was exactly what her husband, Mr. Paul Brinkman, had said. . . .

Jeanne, still seated at her vanity on this early morning when she was preparing for her trip to the hospital, had to smile when she recalled this scene; her despondent feeling as she stood there in the kitchen, little Paul's bright face as he looked up at his daddy, and big Paul's words about "women with four children." She'd taken Paul seriously enough to go and talk to some friends of hers who had four children—and more. What did they do? They told her and she went back and told Paul.

"They just do what they can and that's all," she reported to him. "Sometimes they get everything done and sometimes they don't and just lie down and let the house go to pot. Or, sometimes, when the older children are big enough, they just sit and give orders. See?"

Paul had nodded. He was watching her closely.

"Any comment?" Jeanne had demanded.

Something told him he had better not have any. "Oh, no!" he had replied. "No comment! I just wanted to know. It was—just a question, you understand. And now you've told me. Right?" He smiled brightly.

Shortly after that Paul showed up with another couple, an elderly pair. Jeanne welcomed them with a cry of delight. They grinned and replied—in French.

"They've just come over," Paul volunteered. "Can't talk English yet," he added, as if he had to.

It didn't work out. The couple was willing but revealed utterly no idea of the duties, and explanations, in view of the language barrier, were extremely difficult. Only one person in the family seemed to know how to make himself understood—little Paul. The international language of babies was as effective with the old couple as it was with his own parents—too much so. Jeanne and Paul realized little Paul was being spoiled by the old couple.

In two weeks, Jeanne was sole manager of her menage again. But by now she had fallen into a real system. If she was tired, she rested. If she saw little Paul playing with something he had taken from a drawer or off a table, she didn't call out or go racing after him. If the object wasn't worth over a dollar or so, and not made of glass or with sharp corners on which he could cut himself, she just forgot about it. The fireplace had been scrubbed clean and was no longer a fireplace; it was strictly little Paul's house and he could play in it as that's hollywood!

Now listed among Hollywood's backstage literary classics is William Powell's reply to a correspondent who wanted to know how, despite his age, he managed to keep so physically fit.

"I have a swimming pool," the star replied. "Every day I give it a long and critical look. I think a lot about tennis, and I talk a good game of golf. After that I start to worry because I never get enough exercise. Worry makes me lean. Leanness is fitness. And there you have it."

Irving Hoffman
Hollywood Reporter

much as he wished. If he happened to pull out a drawer and everything spilled—why, he just pulled out a drawer and everything was spilled. She never even turned to look at it. And the result of all this? Well . . .

"You know, darling," said Paul, after he got home one night, "you're wonderful. Really wonderful. Even though the time is getting near and I know how hard it is for you, I come in and find you sweet and peaceful, and your temper not gone. How do you do it?"

"Oh," said Jeanne, shrugging modestly. "It's nothing, really. Just a matter of scientific organization."

When this last incident had recalled itself to Jeanne's mind and she had gone over it, chuckling, she heard a noise from the bedroom. She turned the dryer off and tiptoed to the doorway. It was getting light out and she could tell that Paul was waking up. She went back to the vanity and waited. She knew now why she had awakened feeling as she had. The fuss and fretting were over. It had been tough trying to take care of her home at such a time but it was all a worthwhile part of life. The fact that she had done her job to the best of her ability and had kept their lives in order meant she was now ready to go to the hospital feeling secure in herself, in her husband, in her home. The contentment had come from that.

There was a thump from the bedroom and she knew that Paul had jumped from bed. Then came the quick patter of his bare feet and he burst into the dressing room.

who's excited? . . .

"Hey! What are you doing up so early?" he demanded, worriedly. "Is it . . . are you . . . today . . .?"

"I think so," Jeanne replied. "I think we'd better go down this morning."

He looked at her a moment and then went over and touched the dryer. He pulled his fingers back quickly.

"It's hot!" he cried. "I bet you've been up for hours doing yourself. That's a fine thing! You know you should have rested as long as possible with what's ahead!"

She smiled, got up and put her face near to his. "Now remember, dear, you must be calm. You mustn't get in a dither."

"Well, just the same it's no joke," he said, his face getting an executive look.

"Yes, darling," she agreed, her voice very obedient.

"Can't take any chances you know!" he pointed out.

"Yes, darling," she repeated, as humble as before.

"At a time like this you have to . . ."

"Yes, darling," she had started to say again, but he had sensed that she was kidding him and now he reached for her . . .

* * *

When Michael Anthony Brinkman was born he weighed seven pounds, 11 ounces—four ounces less than his brother, Paul Frederick. But he was one inch longer than Paul. Right now he sleeps in the dressing room where his mother sat on the morning of his day of birth harboring such feelings of gratefulness to him. There is a room for him in the new nursery and by the time Michael is old enough for it, his father will have painted it blue instead of the pink it was originally done in. It seems that Jeanne was prepared if her second baby should be a girl. But now she has another boy—and she knows that means, among other things, more drawers upset, more paper towels unrolled, more ashes walked over her rugs and furniture, and a few new depradations that she is pretty sure Michael will be able to think up for himself. But she also knows that it takes all this to make a house livable. THE END

Have you spoken frankly to your daughter about these Intimate Physical Facts?

Before she marries—make sure she has scientific knowledge she can trust!

The practice of vaginal douching two or three times weekly for intimate feminine cleanliness, health, married happiness, after menstrual periods and to combat odor—has become so thoroughly recognized and recommended today, it's no longer a question of whether a woman should douche but rather what she should use in her douche.

And every woman should be made to realize this: Of all the liquid antiseptic-germicides tested for the douche—no other type proved SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues as ZONITE! You can use ZONITE as often as you want without the slightest injury.

Cautions Against Weak or Dangerous Products

It's shocking how many women, through ignorant advice of friends, still use 'kitchen makeshifts' such as salt, soda and vinegar for the douche. These are NOT germicides in the douche. They NEVER can assure you the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

The ZONITE principle was developed by a famous surgeon and chemist—the first antiseptic-germicide principle in the world with such a powerful germ-killing action yet absolutely safe to the most delicate tissues.

Truly a Miracle!

ZONITE positively contains no phenol, no mercury, no harsh acids—overstrong solutions of which may damage tissues and in time even impair functional activity of the mucous glands. ZONITE is strictly non-poisonous, non-irritating—truly a blessing to womankind.

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It immediately kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE ZONITE DOES kill every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Any drug counter.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-79, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Keep waves and curls neat and shining all day long...

with Nestle SPRAZE

Like magic—NESTLE SPRAZE keeps your waves and curls smooth and glamorous all day long. This delicate hair "mist" gently controls every wave and curl without making them stiff or sticky. It's quick, easy, absolutely safe to use. Comes in a wonderfully handy "squeeze-spray" bottle. At all beauty counters. 98¢

Made by NESTLE—originators of permanent waving and makers of the famous Nestle Colorinse—Meriden, Conn.

To Tampon Users...

*Fibs

is the Tampon with Rounded Ends...

the only Tampon

"Quilted" for Comfort...

"Quilted" for Safety...

Next time try Fibs

*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

(internal sanitary protection)

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

GLORIA LAMPERT
director

•

BEV OTT
associate

News: Things are really jumping this month and we have more news of free offers from fan club prexies just dying to have you join. Remember though, no prexy wants you in her club unless you're really interested in the star or in club activities. Lots of people join clubs just to be free-booters, never contribute anything to it in the way of time, work or friendship and drop out as soon as their membership is over. So if you join one of our clubs, be sure you have something to offer . . . The Monty Clift club headed by Maryland Wong is offering a six-month free membership to the first 50 people who mention Modern Screen when writing to her. You get the half-year membership free after you join for a whole year. Her address is Eastman Rd., Cape Elizabeth, Maine . . . The Barbara Lawrence club is now headed by Dolores Olsen of 37 Willard St., Jamestown, N. Y. All former members of Barbara's other clubs are invited to join. Dolores also has a mimeographing service . . . The Milton Berle club is back in full swing and asking for new members. This is a slightly different club with no dues charged and lots of good fun . . . A new twist in club memberships is being offered by the Perry Como and Michael North fan clubs, both run by Margaret Staley. To the first 25 who write, Margaret is offering a year-and-a-half membership for one dollar, in addition to which the new member will receive a packet of clippings on three of their favorite stars . . . The Macdonald Carey fan club is having a membership drive and the winner will receive some wonderful exclusive pictures (of Mac, of course) . . . Bronx fans will be glad to know that we have a Perry Como club almost especially for them. Mary Bimonte is president and her address is 1508 Grant Ave., Bronx 56, N. Y. . . .

Foreign members are welcome in most U. S. fan clubs and in case your country has strict regulations about sending money to other countries, you can probably work out some deal with the club you decide to join . . . George Diefenbach, president of the Dick Contino, Richard Melari, Harold Peck fan club is interested in 15 foreign members, and his address is 2607a, West State St., Milwaukee 3, Wisc. Parties, clambakes, festivities and gatherings . . . Club Friendship is making plans for its annual convention in August. This club is just what its name implies. Run mainly for shut-ins, the club is featuring special picnics and outings as part of their get-together. Souvenir hunting and swimming make up the rest of the festivities. Write to president Betty Petrie, Box 2620, Winston-Salem, N. C. . . . The Penny Edwards club met their honorary backstage while she was on a personal appearance tour . . . Ted Steele invited his members to his Television show and threw them a party afterwards . . . Local members of the Terry Moore fan club met in Terry's home in Glendale, California. Prexy Bob Waste and Terry were co-hosts and Terry answered clubbers' questions, posed for snaps and autographed journals . . . Frieda Hymer, secretary of the John Garfield club, met her honorary backstage where he is appearing in The Big Knife. They discussed his performance, club matters and had one fine time . . . The Jeanette MacDonald club, prexied by Martha Farrington, concentrated on sending seed packages overseas. These were distributed by CARE and Martha writes they'll have four gardens in Europe this year. Here is a nice new charity for other clubs to think about, as well . . . The James Family Club (Betty Grable and Harry James) has announced a new president. She is Doris Von Behren, 8401 Ardsley Drive, St. Louis 21, Mo. . . . Many of you club presidents have asked us to list your addresses in the column along with your name. We try to as often as we can, but many times space forbids, and in that case we'll be awfully glad to give any address to anyone who writes . . .

Prizes: We've had terrific response from ELGIN-AMERICAN compact winners. "Beautiful," "Lovely," are only two of the nice adjectives applied to this prize. As for this department, we've got nothing but raves for the compacts. They're lightweight, finished in jeweler's bronze and we know all of you correspondents will want to own one. The black velvet box that holds the REVLON KING'S RANSOM set looks like something for rare gems. Matter of fact, that's what the Best Editors will find inside . . . 7 lipsticks and a gold holder . . . fit for a queen! Strictly from a rainbow are the ENGER KRESS pastel colored billfolds. These prizes come in red, pink, yellow, green and blue. They're called Candlelight models and all you need is a pot of gold. We'll be devouring the journals looking for those Best articles. With summer nigh, we take it you'll be going on a vacation. The TANGEE TRIP KITS are just about the best excuse you could want for an excursion. The set is jam-packed with cosmetics. It looks like a million and so will you!

9th Semi-Annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
5th Lap

This Is My Best: (100 points) "Suppose," Wag Wagner, Ronald Reagan Journal. "What Perry Means To Me," Natalie Antonelli, Perry Como Journal (Staley). "Tall Tales," Jean Howard, Musical Notes Journal. "Meaningful Medley," Mary Petrone, Dorothy Shay Journal. "The Littlest One," Shirley Graham, Humphrey Bogart Journal. "In Answer to Who Knows," Marjorie Honey, Whitemore and Lowe Journal. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. (Tied) Bob Crosby, Bette Davis. League 3. (Tied). Ron Randell Journal (Hreha). Charles Korvin Journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. Marion Hesse, Ginger Rogers Journal. League 3. Tied. Lilyan Miller, Virginia Field Journal. Carolyn Kubli, Doris Day Journal. Best Artist: (150 points) Doris Dietrich, George and Dinah Shore Montgomery Journal. Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. No entries. League 2. Jeanette MacDonald Journal (Riley). League 3. Marie MacDonald Journal. Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Corine Pilcher, Eddy Arnold Club. League 3. Madeline Watson, Elliot Lawrence Club. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. Nelson Eddy Club (Mottola) (donation to Metropolitan Opera Fund). League 2. June Allyson Club (donation to crippled children's hospital). League 3. Gordon MacRae Club (donation to Infantile Paralysis Fund). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Gene Autry Club. League 2. Bing Crosby Club (Ness). League 3. Michael Kirby Club. Candid Camera Winners: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others) Zelda Multz, Ronald Reagan Club. Bernice Wigginton. Lanny Ross Club. John McNamara, Terry Moore Club. Virginia Pink, Bobby Beers Club. Fred Bellinger, Penny Edwards Club. Shirley Warren, Richard Jaekel Club. Leading Clubs: League 1. Jane Wyman Club (1550). Gene Autry Club (950). League 2. June Allyson Club (1300). Bob Crosby Club (1200). Joan Crawford Club (1050). League 3. Charles Korvin Club (1250). Ron Randell Club. Hreha (700). James Melton Club (700).

WHICH GIRL HAS THE GABLE? Nancy Davis . . .

(Continued from page 53)

have to go back to Clark's New York trip last winter when he appeared at the U. S. Air Forces show at Madison Square Garden. At parties and affairs all over town during his stay, a new beauty appeared with him. Together, they dropped in at a cocktail party at the Waldorf Towers given by the wealthy Tommy Royce. They lunched at 21 and dined at the Colony. They saw the Broadway shows. When they attended High Button Shoes the audience applauded Clark when he got to his seat, and he had to get up and take a bow. The eyes of everyone were very much on the girl with him as well. People everywhere kept asking, "Who is she?"

The first, quick identifications were wrong as usual There was talk about her being a Continental belle, a wealthy heiress, an English girl he had met during the war. It took Louella Parsons to furnish the right answer, even if she was 3,000 miles away in Hollywood that night. She correctly named Nancy in her column and told of her being a young stage actress and the daughter of a Chicago brain surgeon, Dr. Loyal Davis. Shortly after the item appeared, Clark went back to the Coast, leaving Nancy behind in New York.

the eyes had it . . .

People who saw her around Manhattan after his departure expected to find her on the sad side. After all, she'd seemed radiant in his company, looking in every way like a girl who was having the most wonderful time of her life . . . and this wonderful time was now over. But, surprisingly enough, Nancy's manner didn't fit that part at all. In fact, she seemed happier than ever, acting more like a girl who knows something is beginning—rather than ending.

Naturally, some of her friends jumped to conclusions and were after her to talk about Clark. But she was evasive. She looked things, but didn't speak them. Yet, one late afternoon at a cocktail party at the home of one of her friends, Mrs. Shirley Wolfe, she couldn't restrain herself and had to say a few words. A guest, in from Hollywood for a visit, mentioned hearing that she and Clark had been seen together frequently.

"Oh, Clark is divine!" she is reported to have said. "I love him. He's the most charming man I have ever met."

In show business, things like this can be said without their meaning much. And girls who have said them have gone on to other things—and other men. But not Nancy. Not long afterwards, she was missing around New York. Not long after this, she was present in Hollywood—very much present. For soon word drifted around that she had a great big movie contract, same being with MGM, and MGM being, as if you needed to be told, the studio where Mr. Gable earns his bread-and-butter plus.

It must not be thought that Nancy was signed without the usual screen test being made to determine what her photographic and voice possibilities were. That is to say, a screen test was made. Yet there was little about it that could be called usual. In fact, it was such a gilt-edged operation all around, so well supervised artistically and technically to make sure nothing went wrong, that when the details got to be known, any number of aspiring starlets around Hollywood gulped their envy frankly to any and all who would listen. The sum of their remarks was, "It should happen to me!" Or, as one girl, with a more direct mind, put it: "He should happen to me!"

The scene Nancy did was a sequence from East Side, West Side. As a rule, a new player is tested by whatever directing and camera personnel is available. But Nancy, as she herself explains, was "lucky." The director she had was Mr. George Cukor, just about the top man in his line in Hollywood, let alone MGM. In his career only the most precious of moviedom's stars have ever been assigned to him—from Garbo and Norma Shearer of old, on up to Greer Garson, Spencer Tracy, James Stewart and Deborah Kerr today. These are the sort of artistic responsibilities he ordinarily shoulders.

The cameraman, the fellow who can really influence the executives who see the test into saying either "Hello" or "Goodbye," was George Folsey. His job, too, is hardly that of merely testing new talent—he is among cameramen what Cukor is in the directorial field. Some of Folsey's pictures, both released and unreleased, include State of the Union, Take Me Out to the Ball Game, The Great Sinner and Operation Malaya.

How did the test turn out? Fine. Nancy had some honest words to say about it afterward. They were, "I don't know what I'd have done without them!"

And then, within two weeks after the test was made, an announcement was forthcoming from the front office which was quite in keeping with the general uptake of her career since she first saw Clark in New York. The studio declared that it was going to make Death in the Doll's House, from a recent best-seller, and that Nancy was the first actress to be assigned to it—in a major role. Subsequent announcements added Ann Sothern as the star, and along with her, little Gigi Perreau, the eight-year-old girl who scored such a triumph in Enchantment.

one world . . .

Since Clark's interest in her has become known, there has been a general weighing-in of Nancy's appearance and background, and the consensus has it that she runs very much in the mold of the sort of girls he likes. In her middle twenties, she is tall (five-feet-five sans heels) and slender (117 pounds). And since, in addition to there being the tradition of the stage in her family, she was also a Junior Leaguer in her deb days, she should not be out of place in Clark's world—which lately seems to include the social set.

Nancy's mother, Mrs. Edith Davis, was a well-known actress who worked with such greats as David Belasco, Chauncey Olcott and George M. Cohan. Nancy's godmother was the late Alla Nazimova—whom she pairs with the late Laurette Taylor as her all-time favorite actresses of the stage. (Incidentally, she and Clark agree on Spencer Tracy and Walter Huston as tops among screen actors.)

She started her education in The Girls' Latin School in Chicago and went on to become a Smith College girl in Northampton, Massachussetts, majoring in dramatics and English. While in high school in Chicago, she did a little radio work and was president of the dramatic club. During her summer vacations at Smith, she worked in stock in New England and Wisconsin, later in New York. She says, "I can't remember my exact 'start.' I always wanted to be an actress—used to watch my mother and stay backstage as the deodorant that works

YODORA

TWO WAYS

1. STOPS not just masks—perspiration odor

2. SOFTENS and beautifies
underarm skin

Oh joy, oh bliss! YODORA is different . . . doubly divine, doubly effective, because it's made with a face cream base. Works two ways: 1—really stops perspiration odor . . . 2—keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders. Safe for clothes, too. Today, try YODORA, the wonderful deodorant that works two ways! Product of McKesson & Robbins, Bridgeport, Conn.

Tubes or jars
10¢, 30¢, 60¢

much as I could." But she recalls vividly her first real job in New York after she left college. She tried for a job in Ramshackle Inn on the road, was turned down, then got it when the girl already signed suddenly quit. Later, she won parts in Lute Song and Cordelia.

Those who are wondering about her and Clark want to know if, beyond her ambition to succeed as an actress, she has anything else in mind for the future—something that might include Clark. This brings us to an ambition she has discussed which, she admits, is even greater than the first one—though she isn't naming names. "I want to have a successful, happy marriage," she says.

How about Clark on the same subject? His most familiar quote generally has to do with his marriage to Carole Lombard, to which he almost invariably refers in any conversation with a close friend. "It was a perfect thing. I never expect to find it again."

But Virginia Grey—a girl, incidentally, whom Hollywood once rated the logical choice to be the fourth Mrs. Gable—thinks that deep in his heart he has never given up hope of finding it. Others who share this belief about him are convinced that in the past year Clark has become disgusted with the aimless course of his bachelorhood.

irate iris . . .

There was something about the way he walked out on Iris Bynum at the Ocean House in the famous break-up of that affair some months ago, that may have been a tip-off. After they'd arrived together, Iris reportedly went off to dance with another man, leaving Clark alone. But it isn't like Clark to come even close to making a public scene or doing anything that might cause talk. Yet this time he marched out on Iris and refused to come back, though she went chasing after him. Iris thereupon sealed the end of that entente by commenting, when she returned, "Let him burn!" (It is a question whether or not he was burning—but he could hardly have been happy about the situation when it broke into the columns, since this isn't the kind of light he likes to be seen in.)

Marriage is very much in his mind. He has held on to his big valley ranch even though an apartment, or even a smaller house in Hollywood or Beverly Hills, would be much handier and certainly less expensive.

Clark has one well-known trait. He likes to give a new experience a whirl, no matter where it takes him, or in whatever company—but in the end, as he says, "I like to get back to my friends." In the end, these friends think, Clark, who was never as happy as when he was married to Carole Lombard, will find his way back to home-life again as a husband.

Nancy won't say whether or not she's the girl destined to be his wife. She just keeps busy with preparations for her first picture while Clark, in between pictures at this writing, spends his time golfing, making no appearances at parties or the night spots.

Where and when he and Nancy see each other (and under the circumstances Hollywood is pretty sure they do) hasn't come out yet. Maybe they will first be reported together at some unexpected place like Clark's golf club Not that Nancy has ever played the game. The sports she has been active in are tennis and swimming. But when she told about them, soon after arriving on the Coast, she added, for whatever it might be worth, "I would like to learn golf."

And her chances look good. THE END

(For the Gable-Sheridan story see page 53.)

new faces

WALLY CASSELL'S first flyer into show business occurred when he got a job at the San Diego Exposition as a barker. No one discovered him there, so he went on to New York and landed song-and-dance jobs in summer stock. A long-term contract with MGM followed and on a loan-out, he made The Story of G.I. Joe, his first important movie. Wally was born in Italy on March 3, 1917, is 5' 10" tall, weighs 160 lbs., and is married. You saw him recently in Saigon and his latest is We Were Strangers for Columbia.

ALLENE ROBERTS wanted to be a waitress when she was very young because she thought that would be a good way of getting her fill of banana splits. As she grew up, she began to turn her thoughts toward acting and won a nation-wide contest with a screen test as a prize. The screen test didn't pan out, however, and her debut in television was discovered by Sol Lesser. Born on September 1, 1928, in Birmingham, Alabama, Allene is 5' tall and weighs 90 lbs. She plays Emma in Knock on Any Door.

RUTH ROMAN was born in Boston, Mass., on December 22, 1925, where her father ran a side show carnival. She got her acting experience in New England repertory theaters, and signed a contract with Selznick in 1945. After Belle Starr's Daughter, in which she starred, Stanley Kramer gave her a seven-year contract and a leading role in Champion with Kirk Douglas. She is 5' 4" tall, weighs 110 lbs., has brown eyes and reddish hair. You'll see her soon in The Window.

PETER MILES, who played David Niven as a boy in Enchantment, has had a very varied life considering the fact that he's only 11. He was born in Tokyo on April 1, 1938, but when he was three weeks old flew with his family to France. They left there in 1940 and shortly after arriving in this country Peter's little sister was born. She's now known as Gigi Perreau. In addition to his acting talent Peter is quite a good artist. He has grey eyes and blond hair and you've also seen him in Family Honeymoon and Red Pony.

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

And no wonder! KARE, the new "wonder" deodorant, keeps you bath-sweet. So nice to use—a satin-smooth lotion! So different from creams and liquids—not greasy or messy! Start now to use KARE, an amazing improvement in underarm deodorants—the one that . . .

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration harmlessly
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢*, at drug and department stores. *Plus tax one second's and you're carefree!

The Grove Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

In Misery from ATHLETE'S FOOT?

this "WET-DRY" ACTION brings relief! FIRST: Swob skin between toes with cotton sooked in Absorbine Jr. This "wetting" action removes dead skin, dissolves perspiration products. SECOND: Pour on Absorbine Jr. Its "drying" action inhibits growth of all the infecting micro-orgonisms it can reach. Result . . . in 3 out of 4 coses of Athlete's Foot (tested clinically), Absorbine Jr. brought relief! $1.25 o bottle ot drugstores.

ABSORBINE JR.

HE COULD HAVE BEEN A BUM

(Continued from page 44)

UNION SETTLEMENT

Union Settlement, located at 237 East 104th Street in that section of Manhattan known as Spanish Harlem, has, since its founding in 1895, been an incalculable force for good in one of the poorest and most densely populated districts in America. A non-sectarian outfit run entirely by private donations, it gives health and family guidance and recreational facilities to some 55,000 New Yorkers in the area of 50 square blocks it serves. It arranges educational scholarships, operates two upstate summer camps, runs a play center for small children whose parents must leave them for work, holds dances, theatricals, basketball tournaments and so forth.

"Union Settlement," says Burt, "gave me my first real purpose in life. Maybe if it had never existed I'd still have managed to get someplace in the world. But maybe that's not likely. The way things worked out, it was my major springboard. It's been a vast help to thousands of others." Whenever he's in New York, Burt goes to the Settlement and talks to the kids there. And on the annual list of financial contributors, his name is always high.

skill in which Burt developed in the Union Settlement gym.

Consider his mother. By the time she died when he was 16, she'd instilled principles in Burt that he'll never lose. "To her," says Burt, "wrong and right were as black and white—and she brought up her kids accordingly. She was always telling us, 'Anything you get in life without earning it isn't worth a thing.'" Other kids in the impoverished neighborhood where Burt grew up might filch apples with nary a qualm; never the Lancaster brood.

That Burt was regarded as a comparatively model youth is proved by the fact that—if only for a month—he was an assistant Boy Scoutmaster. The pastor of Burt's church asked him to take over as assistant leader of the church Scout troop, even though Burt wasn't actually a Scout. This project went well enough for a time, although Burt thought woodcraft and knot-tying an awful waste of time. Besides, when it came time for their Saturday hike, the eager little men always had to go to his house and rout him out of bed. By mutual consent, Burt's tenure as a Boy Scout was ended.

The Lancasters were regular churchgoers. The church they attended stood next door to the Union Settlement House. One of the church activities was a group called The Mimes and Masquers.

Every year, the Lancaster boys, Jim, Bill and Burt, took part in the Christmas pantomime. Despite Burt's unfortunate debut, he continued throughout his youth to be active with The Mimes and Masquers. One of his most celebrated performances was given when he was 12, in a fantasy called Three Pills and a Bottle. Burt played a wheelchair-ridden invalid. At the time, Richard Boleslavski—who eventually became one of Hollywood's ace directors—was a leading light in New York's American Laboratory Theater. He saw Burt in Three Pills and was eager to have him enroll as a student with the ALT. Burt balked. "You know how kids are," he says. "I was afraid if I seemed to be taking dramatics seriously, my pals would think I was a sissy or something."

In the summers, Burt and his brothers went to the Settlement's boys' camp—Camp Nathan Hale at Southfield, N. Y. Burt got to be a junior counselor and then a senior counselor. As a senior counselor, he was a pretty cocky guy. A group of five buddies decided they'd better take him down a peg. One night they seized him in his tent, carried him down to the lake, painted him green, and tossed him in. Burt was somewhat less imperious after that.

When he was 16, the year his mother died, Union Settlement arranged a basketball scholarship for him at New York University. Burt decided that, besides being a basketball star, he'd also like to make the NYU gymnastics team. He failed to make the team, but the effort introduced him to the third great influence of his youth: Acrobatics.

faraway places . . .

"Acrobatics," says Burt, "is a terrific character builder. It teaches you concentration, helps you to overcome fear, gives you wonderful discipline."

Burt's getting into this constructive activity happened this way:

Every afternoon, to repay Union Settlement for his NYU scholarship, Burt coached the lads at the Settlement house in basketball. One day, a small, muscular gentleman in his forties named Charles (Curly) Brent came into the neighborhood. Born in New Zealand, the son of a well-to-do Englishman, he'd been kidnapped by native Maoris at the age of two. He lived in a native village until 14, then was restored to his parents by a missionary. Shortly thereafter, he ran away from home. When he was 18, he saw his first circus, joined it as a waterboy, and became an acrobat. This career took him all over the world. Eventually, his hands were badly injured in an automobile accident and he could no longer trust them under the strains of regular horizontal bar work. He came to New York, got a job installing awnings, and then showed up at Union Settlement. He said he'd like to keep in shape by working out in the gym. Permission was granted.

Burt and a close pal named Nick Cuccia (who later became Nick Cravat) were immediately interested in this colorful newcomer. Nick, up to this point, had concentrated on boxing; at 18, he'd had a score of professional fights. But now he was helping Burt work up a few horizontal bar tricks. Here, in Curly, was a guy who obviously could give all kinds of helpful hints. He agreed to coach them. It was a fateful arrangement.

As the boys began to get pretty darned good, they also started thinking of professional careers as acrobats. Curly's tales of the glamorous life he had led—world travel, triumphs before crowned heads, vast monetary returns—fired their ambitions.

Then, after laboring on the project on and off for a year and a half, the boys completed, with Curly's advice and help,

YOUNG WIVES SO GRATEFUL for this 'extra' advantage in

INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Daintier, Less Embarrassing Yet One of the Most Effective Methods

Greaseless Suppository Assures Continuous Medication For Hours

Here's a modern, higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness which gives you extra advantages. Zonitors are easier, daintier, more convenient to use, yet they're one of the MOST EFFECTIVE methods ever discovered. Zonitors are POWERFULLY GERMICIDAL yet ABSOLUTELY SAFE to delicate tissues. They are positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-smarting.

Easy To Carry If Away From Home

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. They are not the type that quickly melt away. Instead, they instantly begin to release powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours. They never leave any sticky residue.

Leave No Tell-Tale Odor

Zonitors do not 'mask' offending odor. They actually destroy it. Help guard against infection. Zonitors kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can be sure Zonitors immediately kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-79, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

DR. SCHOLL'S ZINO-PADS

GIVE INSTANT RELIEF!

Soothing relief follows the instant you protect corns, sore toes, callouses or bunions with Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. Painful shoe friction stops and pressure is lifted almost like magic! Used with the separate Medications included, these soft, cushioning, protective pads speedily, yet gently remove your corns or callouses.

NO OTHER PAD LIKE IT! New patented creep-proof Pinked Edge molds pad to toe or foot with form-fit smoothness. Won't come off in bath. Flesh color. As easy to apply as a postage stamp. FREE sample and FOOT BOOK. Write Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Chicago 10, Ill.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in CHRISTMAS CARDS

MAKE Extra MONEY FAST

Gorgeous Satin and Velour Designs Show Rich New Satin and Velour Cards never before offered. Amazing Value! Gets easy orders fast! Gorgeous Christmas Cards with name, 50 for $1 up. New features, clever ideas.

50 FOR $1 With Name

Pays up to 100% cash profit. Imprinted Stationery. 20 other money-makers sell at 60c to $1.00. Samples on Approval.

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 95-J, St. Louis 3, Mo.

Blondes!

GIVE HAIR LOVELY NEW

Lightness and Shine

With New Home Shampoo Containing ANDIUM

Made Specially for Blondes

To wash blonde hair shades lighter safely—to give it that soft SHINY "Spun-Gold" look, use BLONDEX, the home shampoo—made specially for blondes—containing ANDIUM. Helps keep blonde hair from darkening—brightens it if faded. Instantly removes the dingy film that makes hair dull, old looking. Takes only 11 minutes. Safe for children. Get BLONDEX at 10¢, drug and dept. stores.

a set of horizontal bars and a trampoline. (A trampoline is a large piece of canvas stretched tightly in a frame, upon which acrobats bounce.) In order to be near Curly's quarters in the neighborhood, they set up the equipment in the back yard of the Cement Masons and Helpers Union clubhouse. The masons and helpers were thereafter entertained, and occasionally alarmed, to see Burt and Nick leaping from a second-story fire-escape onto the trampoline, bouncing high in the air, and then coming down on the horizontal bars.

By the time Burt had finished his sophomore year at NYU, he and Nick felt they were ready; they would become professional acrobats. Burt's family, with the exception of his father, was intensely opposed. At best, they argued, it was a precarious profession. Burt's father, easy-going as ever, simply said, "Burt, if that's what you really want to do, go right ahead—and good luck."

Burt then abandoned any idea of further formal education. But just how to go about getting an engagement as a professional act was something they were a bit vague about. The Great Depression had set in, bookings were scarce and, of course, the boys were completely inexperienced. Curly had the obvious answer—an agent.

After hours of sitting in outer offices with unemployed one-man bands, dog trainers and Chinese magicians, they finally talked an agent into taking them on. Following another long wait, the agent called them with great news: He'd managed to get them a booking—three nights at the Bronx Opera House.

The fact that they'd receive no pay whatsoever was of small moment to the jubilant youths. All that counted was that now, at last, they were to perform professionally before a paying audience.

not in the act . . .

The great night came, and Burt, Nick and Curly—whom they'd persuaded to lend his seasoned if unsteady talent to the act—erected their gear on the stage. Nick, as the comedy element of the act, wore a derby hat and a handlebar mustache.

Everything went beautifully. Representatives of Ringling Brothers failed to pound on their dressing-room door afterward, but the audience had been enthusiastic.

The second night went equally well. So did the third—up to a point.

On that final night of the engagement, their devil-may-care routine came off superbly and, as the snare-drum rolled and Nick poised himself for a running leap upon the trampoline to execute the last stunt, the boys felt they were, indeed, in.

Nick ran, leaped, bounced high in the air, somersaulted, came down on a bar, swung off it, twisted around in flight, and expertly grasped the lower bar. At that, with a tremendous crash, the homemade gear collapsed on the stage.

The curtain was immediately rung down on the debris. Nick, unharmed, was assisted to his feet. The audience was roaring with laughter. Certain that the mishap had ruined them, Nick and Burt, despite the urgings of Curly, refused to go out for a bow.

Nick's brother, Lou, who'd been out front with Burt's family and dozens of other neighborhood supporters, rushed backstage to persuade the lads they weren't a flop. The comedy finish, he insisted, was a wow. They refused to be convinced, dressed morosely, and slipped away to a nearby soda fountain. There they sat, staring silently into their malteds, certain they were failures. How, after that amateurish climax, could they ever again get a booking? . . .

Almost three years went by—and sure enough, no bookings were to be had. But this wasn't due to that first fiasco. Hundreds of well-established acts were unemployed in those days.

Curly Brent, after working for a time walking the streets on stilts bearing advertising signs, left for parts unknown. (Today, he's a flourishing chicken farmer in Connecticut.) Burt and Nick were not to be discouraged. Working at whatever odd jobs they could get, they continued to polish their acrobatic technique. At last they landed a job with the Kay Brothers traveling carnival, talking themselves into it by building up their Bronx Opera House appearance as a major triumph. . . . The salary? Well, the team got three bucks. (After a week, they were raised to five.)

When the 30-weeks' tour ended, Lang & Cravat were an established attraction. Now they were taken up by a good, big-time agent, whose clients included Cab Calloway and such top stars. But now the boys aimed at bookings in the better-paying field of night club and theater work. They had great difficulty getting these. Trouble was, the proprietors and theater managers took a dim view of having holes bored in their dance floors and stages—a thing essential to erecting the acrobatic gear.

Then they came up with a solution to their booking problem—a perch act. A perch act is one in which one man supports a long pole atop which gymnastic feats are executed by the other performer or performers. This, of course, requires no boring of holes. The new act was developed in the Settlement gym, to which they continued to repair for workouts between engagements.

Soon they were getting excellent dates—touring theater circuits with name bands such as Ozzie Nelson and Guy Lombardo. Then they signed on with another carnival to do two acts—the horizontal bar act plus the perch act. This arrangement resulted in some sudden improvisation.

They'd never done the perch act except indoors, where there'd be some point of reference overhead at which the pole could be aimed and hence kept in balance. When they attempted to do it outdoors in rehearsal at the carnival lot, they ran into trouble. The only points of reference overhead were clouds, and these just wouldn't stand still. After several tries, they concluded that the act would wind up with an excessively dramatic climax—somebody getting killed.

They told the manager. "But I signed

Burt Lancaster rehearses the act he did on his recent four-weeks tour with Cole Bros. circus. His new film is Hal Wallis' Rope of Sand.

you for two acts!" he growled. "What else can you guys do?"

"Just a minute," said Nick, and drew Burt off in a huddle.

"You know we haven't got another act!" said Burt. "What'll we do?"

"You," said Nick, "are gonna sing."

"You're nuts," said Burt. "What am I, John Charles Thomas?"

"Who knows?" said Nick.

Nick went over to the manager. "My partner has a great voice. For our opening act, he'll sing."

"Sing!" said the manager. "I thought I hired a couple of acrobats! People don't come to a carnival to listen to singers."

"Sure!" said Nick. "That's just it. A singing acrobat—something new! Sensational! The people'll love it. You'll see! Just try it."

The manager was unenthusiastic: "He better sing good, know what I mean?"

At the first performance, Burt came out alone and, through a megaphone, boomed "Old Man River." The people loved it.

Afterward, they saw the manager again. "Well?" said Nick. "Satisfied?"

"O.K.," said the manager. "The song stays in . . . And, son—that really is a voice you got. Imagine—an acrobat who can sing! I got to admit, you surprised me."

"Ah," said Nick, "you don't know my partner. This boy's got hidden talents. Here you see what's going to be a great man."

"Baloney," said Burt.

But Nick was certain. He still is. And maybe he should be, at that. Whenever a fellow who might so easily have been a bum becomes a guy like Lancaster, who's to say that greatness isn't there? Nick won't, for sure. THE END

NOW I'LL TALK!

(Continued from page 30)

whole arrangement. . . . After a while, being weary from jumping up and down to acknowledge each introduction, I went over to a convenient couch in the room, kicked off my shoes and lay down, trying to think of some way to tell these nice people I wouldn't be needing them. Then one of them came over, sat on the couch beside me and touched my limp brow with a cool hand.

Looking up, I was overjoyed to regard Anita Colby, on the Selznick roster at the time, and the sight of that enchanted face simply changed the subject.

I did, however, manage to thank the assembly, and tell them that it would be safer not to plan, but to just stick around a few years and see what happened, a suggestion which surely spared them all a good deal of later embarrassment.

Some time afterward, I again wrestled with a plan in attempting to set my economic house in order. I entrusted my fate to a highly-recommended "expert" on those affairs. But this gentleman apparently was doing a bit of quiet planning of his own, with the result that my little program met with disaster. I believe the state of California has some plans for him.

Now the question of plan arises once more, arousing in me the same caution and thrift of promise, for it begins to appear that no plan at all is better than a plan which fails, so rather than define the course of the future, I shall hark on the lessons of the past and practice a program of "don'ts."

One would think that a background such as mine has been, should be a source of constant enlightenment. Yet, it appears that I have repeatedly gambled my very future and solvency—certainly my comfort and privacy—on a foolish and naïve belief in everyone.

That silly impulse shall be most definitely controlled. I've been offering my chin so long that I'm punch drunk, but I must finally admit to having a glass jaw.

There shall be no more stories or statements credited or attributed to me unless actually made or written by me.

During my sojourn at Sheriff Biscailuz's home for wayward boys, numerous accounts of my past and present activities found their way into print. Several writers did stories on me using material copied from my probation application. These were published and howled through the streets of the world as "Robert Mitchum's Life Story."

Things such as these are unfair and distasteful and it makes me appear a bit silly to have stolen my own material. Besides that, I can use the money myself.

As to domestic plans, these are surely of no interest to anyone other than my wife, my children and myself. We must find ourselves a suitable house and the means to acquire it, and I do plan to take the kids fishing. Dorothy and I have never been nightclub-goers, we are the couple least seen at parties, and it surprised no one that Atwater Kent ignored us in his will—so there is no necessity for planning to "slow down" our lives.

My motion picture plans are the concern of my employer, and my most excellent agents, although I shall be more definite in my opinions and suggestions in the future.

I plan to improve my golf game so that Pat Knowles won't jeer at me, and to spend more time with people. People are more fun than almost anyone, and it recently occurred to me when I cast about for friends, that most of these friends turned out to be people.

My recent chastisement by the staunch burghers of society illustrated to me that even in jail there are people.

As a matter of fact, recalling their missteps at treading on the tight wire of propriety, I am amazed that almost all people aren't in jail.

Being strictly a "hard-way" guy all my life, I have come to relish the hard way as a worthy challenge. Not that I advocate the road of total experience—if you can learn the lessons of "don'ts" at mammy's knee, then by all means attend that school. But before I should become an "I-told-you-so-er," it behooves me to suggest that youngsters take note of each deliberate misstep, and see how clearly retribution defines it as a mistake!

The (a) "I-told-you-so-ers" were the first ones to go from my book, and the (b) "too bad, kid, you got a rotten deal-ers" are the next.

These are not people, they are (a) moralists and (b) moral opportunists, both of whom feed on people as fair game.

I plan to be mighty elusive game. I plan to discover for myself whether I am worth my salt as an actor and, if so, plan to be paid for it. Not in box-car salaries, but in responsibilities, opportunities and authority.

If my abilities are truly mediocre, then I plan to afford a way out, that I might preserve my honesty.

In truth, I plan to live my own life, as progressively, as productively as possible, allowing enough time to appreciate what already has befallen me, and to hope for what the future may bring. THE END alone...

because she doesn't know

LOVE can be lost... romance ruined if you offend with perspiration odor. So stop it before it starts!

DRYAD — Jergens new kind of deodorant actually stops the decaying action of bacteria... the chief cause of embarrassing perspiration odor... before it starts!

Its complete deodorizing action keeps you sweet to love and adore.

APPROVED by leading skin specialists. Harmless to clothes.

SMOOTH as face cream as long as it lasts. 10¢, 29¢, 59¢.

Dryad

stops perspiration odor

before it starts

Jergens New Kind of Deodorant

Montgomery Clift

FREE PHOTO

LARGE GLOSSY PICTURE of your favorite

MOVIE STAR

INTRODUCTORY OFFER

direct from HOLLYWOOD, home of the STARS. Send name of your FAVORITE STAR with fifteen cents, to cover handling and mailing and receive also our beautiful catalog with names and pictures of hundreds of STARS.

★ Hollywood Stars ★

4633 HOLLYWOOD BLVD., BOX 9747
Dept. D3, HOLLYWOOD 27, CALIFORNIA

Catch and hold a man's eyes!

• It's that caressable "spun-gold" look that catches and holds a man's eyes. The very look Marchand's Golden Hair Wash can give your hair!

If your hair is darkened or streaked, Marchand's can make it thrillingly golden again. Brunettes and redheads love it, too, for the golden highlights it adds.

Whether you want to make your hair definitely blonder or just add that fascinating touch of gold, Golden Hair Wash can give you the flattering effect you desire.

Not a dye, not an "expensive treatment", Marchand's new, improved Golden Hair Wash is easier than ever to use at home. Try it for lightening arm and leg hair, too.

In 60¢ and 90¢ sizes

MONEY FOR YOU—SELL CHRISTMAS CARDS—UP TO 100% PROFIT

FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1 NAME PRINTED CARDS, NAPKINS AND STATIONERY

$50 PROFIT selling 100 Feature Boxes. Complete line 50 new, fast selling Christmas, Everyday boxes. Plastics, Carols. Big variety embossed cards, napkins, stationery with name, 50 for $1 up. No money needed to start. Special Offers. Cash Bonus. Write for samples.

EMPIRE CARD CO. 210 FOX ST., ELMIRA, N. Y.

HE MAY TURN TO ANOTHER . . . IF YOU DO NOTHING ABOUT "DIFFICULT DAYS"!

Pity the woman who fails to realize those Monthly Blues can make her so nervous and irritable she actually drives love away! Take heed—and take Chi-Ches-Ters Pills, to help relieve cramps, headache and nervous irritability of functional menstrual pain. Ask your druggist today; take as directed a day or two in advance. 3 convenient size packages.

The Improved

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Co., Dept. 7-E, Philadelphia 46, Pa.

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 55)

passing, and then—another adieu. Finally, after the Liberation, I went to England to make a picture—and this separation, the first one which we could have avoided, we hoped would be the last. When I returned to Paris, in March, 1945, we were married.

What a cold, dreary day that was for such a heavenly occasion! There was a bleak, chill rain falling as we drove to the Mayor's office where the ceremony was to be performed. But, as I reasoned with Quique, how could there be sunshine outside when surely the world's supply was bottled up and overflowing in my own heart?

And Quique was radiant, too. The most beautiful bride ever dreamed of! She wore a gown that was silver gray and a little gray hat whose soft coque feather curled downward, touching her cheek. On the way to the registry, we stopped at a flower stand and found some white violets that she pinned at her waist. Until we stood there hand-in-hand before the magistrate, I had never quite realized how petite she is. Her chin just reaches my shoulder. Perhaps it was the sound of her given name, as our friend the Mayor pronounced it, so frighteningly dignified—Berthe Frederique—that made her seem so tiny by comparison. Berthe Frederique, indeed! "Quique" suits her much better.

After the ceremony, Quique's parents were hosts at a small reception for our relatives and a few friends. We had no honeymoon. It wasn't an era of honeymoons or holidays. We could have gone to the south of France for a few days, but we chose instead to postpone our wedding trip until happier times.

Quique teases me about that. "We came to America on our honeymoon," she tells people, "but on separate airplanes." As a matter of fact, it was almost a year later that I came to Hollywood, and it is true that Quique was delayed another month before her visa was ready. I could not wait for her, as I had promised to start work on a certain date.

Quique taunts me, too, about our reunion at the Los Angeles Airport when she arrived. Every woman who alighted and came toward the gate, I would scan anxiously, looking for my Quique . . . so intently that I finally worked my way out onto the field and in my excited search, passed her without even seeing her! I could hardly believe my ears when I heard her voice calling my name. Somehow this reunion was different than ever before . . . as though it were a finale to all those goodbyes and now we would never really be apart again. This was the honeymoon we'd had to postpone—and now it would never end.

And what a perfect spot for a honeymoon was our small Santa Monica apartment overlooking the magnificent panorama of the blue Pacific! Quique was thrilled by the lush, colorful beauty of California, as I knew she would be, and in those first weeks, when I could get away from the studio, we were undoubtedly the two most excitedly happy honeymooners who ever "did" Hollywood. Weekends we would just lie on the beach in the warm, friendly sun or go for long drives up the coast as far as Santa Barbara or south to Laguna. Or we'd explore the city of Los Angeles from the Santa Monica pier to the old picturesque Mission Church far downtown.

Quique, who is naturally shy, would go into a panic akin to stage fright when faced with any kind of conversation with a stranger in those early months. Her knowledge of English was limited to "hello" and "goodbye." Just recently, we ran into Rex Harrison at a cocktail party. He and Quique were chatting, Quique very animatedly, when she reminded him of a previous meeting, shortly after her arrival.

"Don't you remember?" Quique asked him. "We sat next to each other at dinner."

"Of course," Rex replied, with a puzzled look. "Now I remember! But what was the matter with you? I remember talking a blue streak, trying my best to make conversation, but you would just smile politely and look at me as though I were talking Chinese."

"Well, you might just as well have been," Quique admitted, "because I had no idea of what you were saying. I didn't know a word of English."

her burning passion . . .

We have had many good laughs over Quique's English—her old English, I should say—because her present output is better than mine, really. And she can also beat me at gin rummy, which I can take or leave alone but for which Quique has a burning passion. One evening when some friends had dropped in and we had been playing "gin," David Selznick was teasing her about her fondness for the game. "Quique," he chided, "I think you would rather play gin rummy than play a love scene with that romantic movie star, Louis Jourdan."

But did Quique deny the accusation vehemently? She did not. Quique just laughed. The more I think about it, the more I think I should demand from her a definite "yes" or "no" on this momentous question. However, I do believe she loves me a little better than gin rummy. At least she has known me longer.

Quique's willingness to give up family and home and loved ones to come to a strange land with me told me that she loved me a great deal. And I pray that I will never fail her trust in me. There have been times, surely, when she has been lonely and homesick. But she never mentions a word of this. And when I come home from the studio, she is vivacious and tender and interested in how the day went for me. Me, I am not always so considerate. If I am blue or discouraged or tired, I'm afraid I look to Quique to cheer me out of it.

We are very close in spirit, Quique and I. We have shared much happiness, we dream many plans, we have shared sorrow and disappointments. In this love of ours, we have found a magic formula that makes the happiness greater for having shared it, the dreams brighter and the disappointments easier to bear. THE END

SEEING STARS?

Everyone sees stars at one time or another. We see them practically all the time, but we're not qualified—for the $5 bills, that is. They're for the lucky people whose "I Saw It Happen" anecdotes we print. So, if you've ever had an amusing incident happen to you and a movie star, write it down and send it to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. The anecdote must be true and it must be short. Try for one of our $5 bills—we've plenty!

GODDESS IN SHADOW

(Continued from page 65)

They were confident that Miss Bergman was as good as their build-up.

Their confidence was not misplaced. The reporters were unable to find any cracks at all in the shining armor. Then one editor, feeling that the man he'd assigned was simply too susceptible to some new brand of feminine charm, sent out a woman long familiar with the Hollywood scene to do the job.

After talking to nearly everybody who'd had any contact with Miss Bergman—about 300 people—the writer arranged to meet the subject of her proposed article. "Tell me, Miss Bergman," she asked, "don't you have any faults?"

"Of course, I do," Ingrid replied.

"And what are they?" The writer poised her pencil eagerly.

"I won't tell you," the actress replied with a jolly laugh. "They're dark, secret vices!"

Afterward, the writer wrote the editor: "What are you going to do with a woman like that? Everybody says nothing but nice things about her. And now, darned if I'm not completely for her, too. My illusions are sort of restored." And then she went into a long paean of praise.

Ingrid has generally been more popular with men than with women. Yet even women have had, up to now, a hard time finding real grounds for criticism. But they've tried.

"You've got to hand it to her," one female cynic has said. "She manages to make all her faults appear to be virtues. For instance, she doesn't know the word "stingy" exists. She's replaced it with "thrifty." Look how she sent an old friend a bottle of cheap champagne and a single aspirin tablet for his birthday—with a note saying she hoped his celebration would be so festive he'd need the aspirin the next morning. Thoughtful, wasn't it? Clever, wasn't it? But think what she saved!"

A studio secretary exclaimed dazedly not long ago. "The goddess is human after all!" She'd just overheard Miss Bergman express herself with a few minor cuss-words after looking at some photographs which had been retouched.

"No, darling," the secretary's companion said, "she's still all goddess. She just can't conceive that someone might want to improve on her face."

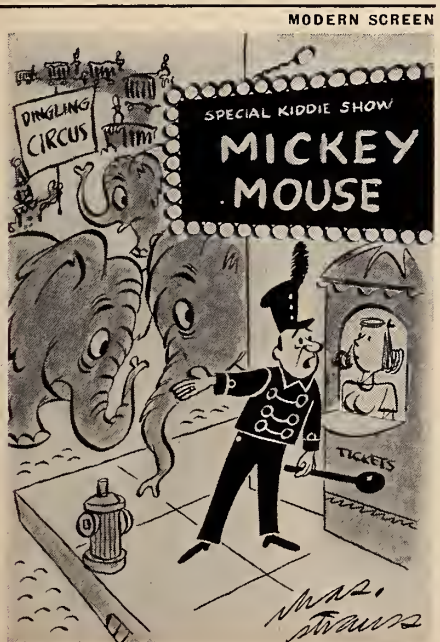
"She was absolutely right," a photographer defended hotly. "Take out one line and you spoil the characterization she's trying to convey."

The cuss-words were unusual. So unusual that some people have accused her of being a prude: "Yoghurt every evening before she goes to bed. Quantities of milk. Never says anything naughty. The goodest girl in Sunday School, she is," has been heard. However, the truth is that in addition to all this, Ingrid Bergman has always enjoyed a cocktail or a glass of champagne or two. And since learning to smoke for Arch of Triumph, she smokes regularly.

However, there's been something about her that's made everyone mind his manners in her presence. One widely-syndicated columnist noted for his brash approach visited Hollywood, asked to meet her and told the person taking him to be introduced, "Brother, let me warn you—I'm going to tell her a dirty story or two. She can't be as pure as everyone says she is." But when he met her, he became as tongue-tied and awed as any young lad first discovering love.

divine inspiration . . .

During the war years, all studio visitors were restricted to men in uniform. Ingrid Bergman was among those actors and actresses who were never too busy to meet them. Many of these men were on a long-deserved holiday—and full of the spirit of it, too. There was more than one who would call any actor or actress by first name, then proceed to make some crack. Few if any of them were intimidated by pre-knowledge of Ingrid Bergman's position in screen entertainment. But in her presence, somehow, they became as well-behaved as little boys in church.



The crew itself is vastly different on a Bergman set than on that of any other actress. Usually free-and-easy, they become, while working with her, men more cleanly shaved, neater in attire, and circumspect in language.

None of her leading men has ever had a word to say against her. When one columnist intimated that Cary Grant had fallen in love with her, Cary and the other men in the cast and crew sent the columnist a note which read, "Of course, we're in love with Ingrid Bergman. All of us."

Yet the one inescapable rumor any married actress must endure sooner or later, is that she's divorcing her husband. Ingrid, until the current field day in the press, had suffered perhaps less of this sort of thing than almost any other celebrity. However, divorce gossip did arise during the period when Dr. Lindstrom was far away in New York State studying at the University of Rochester. It was quickly stilled when he came to complete his studies at the Los Angeles County General Hospital—where later he became resident head of neurosurgery.

One doctor there said recently, "Dr. Lindstrom has gone further in his profession than his wife has in hers. But he's publicity-shy. And how sensible this is! Let one word of his achievements get out and the newspapers would make a three-ring circus of it because of her. That would be bad for him professionally—and probably domestically. As it is, the Lind-

MODERN SCREEN

"Couldn't you just change the program until we get the elephants past the theater?"

Broken fingernail?

Cover broken nail with cellophane tape, trim to shape and cover with nail polish. You won't be able to tell it's broken!

Keep "SCOTCH" Cellophane Tape in every room for sealing, holding, mending jobs.

GET THE TAPE HABIT . . . it's thrifty!

For quality, insist on—

REG U S PAT OFF

SCOTCH BRAND

Cellophane Tape

SEALS WITHOUT MOISTENING
TRANSPARENT AS GLASS

ANOTHER 3M COMPANY PRODUCT

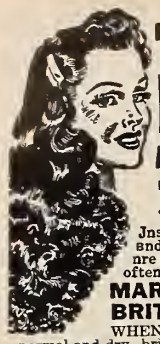
MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO.
ST. PAUL 6, MINN. © 1949 3M CO.

PAIN

of headache, neuritis and neuralgia

RELIEVED

incredibly fast



the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—

ANACIN®

Here's why

Anocin is like o doctor's prescription. Thot is, it contains not one but a combinotion of medically proved ingredients. Get Anocin Toblets todoy.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. V-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

A REAL MIDGET RADIO!

CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET

Works on new diode—Needs No Tubes, Batteries or Electric "Plug-Ins." Plays years for nothing! In Beautiful Red Plastic.

Guaranteed to Work on local stations

SEND ONLY $1.00

(bill, ck., m.o.) and pay postman $2.99 C.O.D. plus postage or send $3.99 and we pay postage. SENT COMPLETE, READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. Has Personal Phone. LISTEN AT HOME, IN BED, ON FARMS, SCHOOL, MOST ANYWHERE, ANYTIME! Wonderful gifts for anyone! Amazingly low-priced! Order Now!

MIDWAY CO. Dept. TMM-7 KEARNEY, NEBR

WANT TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE?

EASY TO TRAIN AT HOME

ACT NOW—HELP FILL THE NEED

Now you can prepare for practical experience as a Trained Practical Nurse in spare time. Many earn while learning. Ages 18 to 55. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Write for free information and sample lesson pages.

WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, INC.
2301 N. Wayne Ave., Desk K-42, CHICAGO 14, ILL.

Fast Way to MAKE MONEY!

Sell Christmas Cards

It's easy! Just show SIX big NAME IMPRINT Lines to friends—low as 50 for $1. Make up to 50c on 21-card DeLuxe Box. Also show Secret Pal, Plastics, Eastern Star, Religious, Relative, Gift Wraps, Birthday Stationery, KIDDY Cards, Books, and Records. Most COMPLETE Line in country. Extra Cash Bonus! WRITE NOW for FREE Imprint Samples and 2 Feature Boxes on Approval. MIDWEST CARD CO., 41S N. 8th St., Dept. 17-M, St. Louis 1, Mo.

50 for $1 With Name

GET FREE Samples

High School Course at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, HB-14, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 2709, Detroit 27, Michigan.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

stroms are about the happiest and best-adjusted couple I know."

Would he say that of them now?

Ingrid Bergman has said time and time again: "Of all I have to be grateful for, I am most grateful to my husband for giving me freedom to pursue my profession. Without his complete sympathy, encouragement and understanding, I should never have been able to achieve both personal and professional happiness."

"But if she weren't in love with Rossellini," the Hollywood raised-eyebrow set has been asking as a clincher, "why didn't she stay right here and make a movie for a lot more money?"

One answer to that might be that she was deeply disappointed when Joan of Arc failed to bring her an Academy Award. Beyond that doubtful possibility, there exists an explanation that is much more probable:

By this time, the thrifty Miss Bergman is pretty well free of financial worry, so money isn't as important to her now as a fresh artistic challenge. For a long time, she had deeply admired from afar the film-making genius of Roberto Rossellini. A few months ago, she wrote him, "If you can find a small part in one of your new productions for a little Swedish girl by the name of Bergman, she is ready for it." Soon he came to her in Hollywood, on fire about a picture idea. He described it as a film in which everybody but one girl would speak Italian, French or German. The girl would speak English. "I want to prove," he said, "that a good love story, like love itself, knows no language barriers. People say I'm crazy, that it can't be done. But with you as the girl—I know it can!"

opportunity knocks again . . .

After many long conferences, with Dr. Lindstrom beside her to ask surgically precise questions of the challenger, she decided to accept the part. Once again Dr. Lindstrom had said—as he said long ago when Selznick wanted her to leave Sweden for Hollywood—"If you want to grow in your profession, this is a chance you can't afford to miss."

It may be that Ingrid's great professional admiration for Rossellini has deepened into an emotional involvement. But she has shown a great deal of demonstrative enthusiasm for several other men with whom she's worked—for David Lewis, producer of Arch of Triumph; for David Selznick; for Alfred Hitchcock; for Cary Grant—and in every case, it's been nothing more than professional.

Possibly the same could hold true of her attitude toward Rossellini.

Finally, there's an explanation that, while cynical, does indeed seem to have a good deal of logic to support it: The entire Bergman-Rossellini "romance" may have started as a deliberate publicity device—which then got wildly out of hand.

Millions were poured into Bergman's Arch of Triumph. Up to now, it's been a dismal flop at the box-office. Aside from any intrinsic shortcomings in the film, there is one major reason for its failure to attract the customers: In it, Bergman played a very shady lady indeed, a character completely at variance with the sweet and wholesome Ingrid the public has come to idolize. A large number of Ingrid's faithful followers were shocked and disturbed. They didn't like it a bit, and said so. Since word-of-mouth advertising is still the most important publicity a film can get, Arch of Triumph became a commercial dud. Mainly because of the financial beating taken on this, the producers, Enterprise Productions, folded. Ingrid, who was reported to have signed to make the picture for 35 percent of the profits, has, [illegible]se, not realized a penny.

Obviously, things might have been vastly different if Ingrid's appearance in Arch hadn't seemed to the people to be such glaring mis-casting. Could it be that an effort was therefore made to demonstrate that perhaps Bergman isn't entirely the saint she's seemed—that she should be just as acceptable playing lurid parts as any other actress who actually possesses a few garden-variety frailties?

If this idea were successfully implanted, Arch still might be salvaged.

Besides, in Ingrid's new Hitchcock film, Under Capricorn, she plays a dipsomaniac who sinks to degradation. Coming on the heels of Joan of Arc, Ingrid in this might be even more disturbing to the public than she was in Arch. So here might well be a further powerful consideration in deciding it would be sensible to allow the fans to view the real-life Ingrid in a less angelic light.

If the affair had been engineered by publicists, it is quite conceivable that Ingrid herself didn't realize it. It is not unheard-of for press agents to place a star in some situation that promises publicity without the star's really knowing what is afoot. Then, when he or she honestly tries to cope with the situation, the whole phony arrangement seems the more plausible.

Thus, if rumors of a romantic attachment were judiciously planted at the time Rossellini first approached Ingrid, everything that thereafter developed in the normal course of events would have served to make the fabrication convincing. If Ingrid and Rossellini had categorically denied the gossip, the speculation would still have continued through the mere fact of their working closely together. And their refusal to comment, even if springing from a sincere conviction that by so doing they were refraining from dignifying the rumors, added considerably to the flames.

Obviously, whether or not the whole thing was started as a publicity scheme, Ingrid and Rossellini may have come to have a sincere affection for each other.

At this time, after surveying all known and theoretical aspects of the matter, it is impossible to reach any firm conclusion as to where the reality lies.

Time will tell. In the meantime, speculation goes on apace concerning one of the most surprising stories ever to come out of the film world. THE END

Ingrid Bergman, director Rossellini and (right) Mario Vitole—the fishermen who's her new leading man—on location at Stromboli, Italy.

NEVER UNDERESTIMATE THE POWER

(Continued from page 62)

she added. "I'm not interested in marriage. I'm interested in skating."

Fade-out Sonja Henie!

Fade-in Janet Gaynor!

Up until the advent of Linda Christian, Ty has usually preferred the company of women older than he. Highly intelligent, he has found himself attuned to their likes, their standards, their settled ways.

Janet Gaynor was eight years older than Ty when they began going with each other. She had known success for many years, and possessed wealth and charm and beauty. Power, newly come upon fame, found her maturity, her sharp intellect, completely irresistible. But only for a short while. For six months, however, he courted her exclusively. There was for him no other woman in the world. (Power always has been a one-woman-at-a-time practitioner.)

Naturally, the wedding bells were prematurely rung by the columnists. As they were rung more frequently, Ty began seeing less and less of Miss Gaynor. Finally, he broke off, and Janet married Gilbert Adrian, the dress-designer—just as, 10 years later, Lana Turner was destined to marry Bob Topping.

what romance? . . .

When Miss Gaynor was asked why her companionship with Ty had failed to ripen into matrimony, she told reporters that Ty had never discussed the subject, that their romance was merely a dream conjured up by the newspapers. Through it all, Ty held his tongue.

Fade-out Janet Gaynor!

Fade-in Norma Shearer!

Norma was nine years older than Ty. She had lost her husband, Irving Thalberg, in the 1930's. She was extremely wealthy, extremely talented, extremely anything good you want to think of.

Ty phoned for dates. Lonely, knowing that despite death, life must go on, Norma decided to accept the young man's invitations. They became a well-known combination. When people began discussing them in terms of matrimony, Mr. Power stopped concentrating on Miss Shearer and started concentrating on his career.

When she was asked what had caused the break in their romance, Miss Shearer evinced surprise. "What romance?" There had never been any romance between her and Mr. Power.

As usual, Ty said nothing.

The only times he has talked about any woman, he has talked about his two wives, Annabella and Linda.

In 1939, Ty frankly told the press that he would marry Annabella as soon as they could get a Papal dispensation. It wasn't forthcoming, but Ty married Annabella anyway. She gave her age as 26. He said he was 25. For three years Ty and Annabella lived together as man and wife. On August 24, 1942, Ty enlisted in the Marines as a private. Four years later, he was released as a senior lieutenant in naval aviation.

He tried to take up his marriage where he'd left off, but apparently something was wrong. Either he'd outgrown Annabella or Annabella had outgrown him.

According to papers filed by Annabella in the California Superior Court, Ty told his wife six months after he left the service that "he was no longer inclined to accept the responsibilities of marriage." He was leaving home.

Fade-out Annabella. Fade-in Lana Turner and Linda Christian.

It was while Ty was going with Lana that he met Linda. Few people realized that there was any fondness between these two until Linda suddenly showed up in Rome while Ty was there on his round-the-world trip.

It then became apparent to those in the know that Ty would drop Lana as soon as he hit the States and substitute Linda for her.

No one, however, expected the dark-haired Lothario to marry the Mexican girl. All Hollywood underrated Linda—largely because Hollywood didn't know her and has never really known Tyrone.

Many persons thought they knew Power, thought they knew all about the women he liked—the older women, the charmers, the sophisticates. Some of them had predicted that he would never marry Turner because she wasn't sufficiently mature and worldly. They were right.

These same prophets imagined that they could predict correctly about Linda Christian. They were wrong.

She knew from the start that she would marry Tyrone, and she so told the Countess Van Horne, one of those continental dowagers who introduce attractive young girls around town. Through the Countess, Linda met the Hollywood upper crust.

What made Linda so confident about capturing Ty, especially when some pretty nifty predecessors had failed, she alone knows, and at the moment, she isn't telling.

We do know, though, that of all the women Power had gone with previously, Linda was the only one who was willing to give up her career for marriage. There are some who say that she didn't have much of a career to give up, that she'd been put in a Tarzan picture largely through the intervention of Bo Roos, a Hollywood business manager, and that she had done precious little acting—but such catty comments don't alter the fact. And the fact is that Linda does not want a career. She wants a husband, a home, and five kids.

womanly-wise . . .

If Lana had wanted such domesticity, if Sonja Henie, Janet Gaynor, and the others had wanted the same thing, perhaps Ty might have married one of them.

The undeniable fact, however, is that Linda was the first girl Ty had ever gone with who was willing to renounce everything for that gold band on the second finger. In addition, she was loaded with characteristics he admired. She was a linguist, she was better educated than he (there is no part of the world in which she doesn't feel at home), she made no great demands for riches, wealth, or ostentation.

She also ran into Ty at the right strategic time. A man who has been married once is almost dead-certain to get married again. Over the years he becomes accustomed to a woman around the house, and he misses a hostess and all the feminine niceties that come with a wife.

Moreover, Linda knew what traits appealed to Ty and, being equipped with these, she brought them to the fore.

Linda is the seventh woman of any importance in the love-life of Tyrone Power. She told her 18-year-old sister, Ariadna, who was her bridesmaid, "No matter what people say, I will be his best and last."

If anyone can speak with authority on the matter, the womanly-wise and beautiful Linda is clearly the one to do so.

THE END

YOUR hair can be Much More Colorful and Glamorous

USE

NOREEN SUPER COLOR RINSE

The rinse that really blends in gray, beautifies and glorifies all shades of hair with abundant temporary COLOR...Color that looks so natural. Try NOREEN today as a thrilling but harmless experiment. NOREEN is so easy to rinse in and wash out. You'll find at least one of NOREEN'S shades perfect for your hair. Packed in dainty capsules for convenient use at home. 25¢ and 50¢ sizes . . . at Leading Cosmetic Counters.

NOREEN Distributors 450 Lincoln Street. Denver 9, Colorodo

for Summer Play

"Gloves On Your Feet"

Your twinkling feet will never grow tired in SQUA-MOCS—gay, soft-sole Indian Moccasins. Beautiful hand-sewn Indian beadwork on toes. Made of finest Buck Ton or Pearl Buck. Wash them like gloves! In pearl gray, brown or fawn.

Only $3.75. Full range of sizes.
Postage Prepaid (except on C.O.D.'s)

CHEROKEE TRADERS, Dept. 3-D
319 N. Robinson, Oklahoma City, Okla.

SELL LOW COST—HIGH PROFIT CHRISTMAS CARDS

Up to 100% profit, cash bonus for you. Fascinating new type Plastic, Metallic, 3-Dimensional Christmas card assortments. Gift Wrappings, Special Gift Items, Floral and Personal Stationery. Send at once for Free 48-page catalog, feature samples on approval and Free Name imprinted Christmas card sample portfolios. Special offers.

FREE SAMPLES 50 for $1.00 PERSONALS

NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS, North Abington 53, Mass.

NEW! smart idea!

For home permanents, cosmetics—special top holds wave lotion, package gives you clean cotton as you need it! Get it today.

COTTON PICKER ®
Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton

A CURITY Product

BAUER & BLACK Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

THE EASY, PROVED WAY TO COMBAT THE DISTRESSING SYMPTOMS OF ASTHMA!

The aromatic fumes of ASTHMADOR bring amazing relief from the symptoms of bronchial asthma. Try it today—powder, cigarette or pipe mixture.

DR. R. SCHIFFMANN'S

ASTHMADOR

At All Drug Stores in U. S. and Canada

MAKE MONEY FAST

SELL CHRISTMAS CARDS to Friends, Neighbors, Club members, others. Amazing profits. No experience necessary. 100 sell-on-sight items. SIX Plastic assortments — Christmas and Everyday — "Little Stars", "Jack Frost", "Little Ones". Glamorous "Gleam 'n' Glo" metallic cards, "Mild Animals", "Smile Please", Stationery, Imported Napkins, Wrappings, Mechanical Juveniles, Christmas Trees, Gift Items. Write TODAY for Feature Box on Approval and Special Offers. Fund-raising opportunity.

HEDENKAMP & CO., Inc., 343 Broadway, Dept. D-1, New York, N.Y.

BROKEN JEWELRY WANTED

All kinds. Highest cash prices paid for rings, jewelry, spectacles, gold teeth, diamonds, broken and usable watches, etc. Cash mailed promptly. Write for FREE shipping container.

LOWE'S, Dept. MS
Holland Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Does GARLIC Relieve GAS?

ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the largest selling garlic tablet in the world. For sale at drug stores everywhere. Ask for

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

NEVER-TEL

LIQUID Perfumed DEODORANT

Dancing, walking, working, playing . . . there's no better way to fresh, sweet underarm daintiness than NEVER-TEL.

NEVER-TEL, Dept. 7-A, Kansas City 6, Mo.

Learn here the TRUTH about PSORIASIS

IS IT A SKIN DISEASE OR INTERNAL?

For the past several years a number of Physicians have reported amazing success in treating Psoriasis with LIPAN—a new medical wonder taken internally. LIPAN (registered U.S. Patent Office) is a combination of glandular substances that treat certain internal disorders which many medical men now agree to be the cause of Psoriasis. Clinical results show LIPAN successful in over 90% of the cases treated. Even stubborn lesions are alleviated to a degree almost beyond belief. Absolutely harmless! Ask your druggist for LIPAN, or write direct for free booklet. Or send for month's supply (180 tablets), enclosing check or money order for $8.50.

SPIRT & COMPANY, Dept. DM-7, Waterbury, Conn.

THE QUEEN SAYS "NUTS!"

(Continued from page 46)

somewhat floored by the lady's remarks, themselves tell with great enthusiasm of their encounters with the Stanwyck tongue.

Earl Wilson, the syndicated self-styled "saloon editor," reports his experience as being the beginning of a beautiful friendship with her. This started several years ago when Robert Taylor was in New York on a mission for the Navy. Missy—as Barbara's known to friends—wanted to have all the hours the Navy left her of her wartime Lieutenant, so she was there with him. When people came to interview Bob, Barbara would duck, holding that it was a sound idea not to intrude. So it came about that after Earl had gone up to the hotel to see Bob, he reported in his column, he hadn't met the Lieutenant's attractive wife. He said, a shade bitterly, that when he'd inquired after her he'd been told she was in the bath. His further comments angered the lady's pals. When they wanted to do something about it, she bade them lay off. "It'll be okay," she promised.

Shortly afterwards, she and Bob were in the Stork Club. Earl tried to get their attention, but failed. When Earl marched up to challenge, Bob honestly explained he hadn't seen him. Missy, however, turned on Wilson and said, "I'm the one who saw you—and didn't speak to you."

choice words . . .

Right there the friendship started. Barbara even writes guest columns for Earl when he goes on vacation. It was Earl who had the temerity to urge her to see her ex-husband, Frank Fay, with the invisible rabbit in the play Harvey. Not being one who stomachs the Hollywood bromide of couples remaining friends forever, after a divorce, Barbara came back with a retort that was gleefully reported by Earl. "No, thank you. I saw all the rabbits Fay had to offer years ago."

This direct attitude of hers is nothing new. At the age of 13, she lied about her age (a practice she scorns today) to get a job with the telephone company. Some talent scout for the company knew a good speaking voice when he heard it and cast Ruby Stevens—as Barbara was named then—in the complaint department. There she served as a shock-absorber for disgruntled patrons until one particularly querulous woman suddenly heard the patient, impersonal voice of the telephone company break into sharp Brooklynese: "*No*body talks to me that way, lady! Keep your blank-blank shirt on." Plus a few more well-chosen words.

Of course, the woman didn't take this calmly. So Ruby Stevens was shoved out of earning her keep with a telephone until years later when, known as Barbara Stanwyck, she scored in Sorry, Wrong Number.

Back when her name was first changed from Ruby Stevens, she confused her unsuspecting but experienced family. They went to see their Ruby make her debut as an actress in the Broadway opening of The Noose. Settled in their seats, they looked over the program. There was no Ruby Stevens billed. With one united sigh, they arose and left before the curtain went up, saying, "She probably shot off her mouth and got fired again."

There are those who say that Willard Mack, director of The Noose, furthered the lady's determination to say "Nuts!" when she felt the occasion called for it. She has stated many times, "Mr. Mack threw the corn out of all of us. He used to say that if we couldn't come on stage without screwing up our faces or beating our hands in the air, we could just make the next exit permanent."

One of Hollywood's top directors got a permanent exit from Barbara's life when he made the mistake of bawling out her stand-in—who couldn't answer back. Her ferocious loyalty to those who work with her but don't share in the acclaim, provided particular inspiration for remarks to that director of which only her concluding line can be printed. "I'll never work with you again!" And she never has, despite the fact that one picture offered her, with him as director, was one she longed to make; and despite the fact that she generally believes everyone must do his job regardless of personal feelings.

That latter belief makes her mighty quick to bat sulkers down. Joel McCrea tells of being lent to Warners to play opposite her as leading man. His only picture experience then consisted of two juvenile roles in Will Rogers' films. His first excitement over his elevation died rapidly when, as the son of a wealthy father, portrayed by the late distinguished and suave C. Aubrey Smith, he found himself hardly noticeable in the picture. He seethed while, in most scenes, only the back of his head or an angle of his broad shoulders was photographed. The climax came when he was given the same business by the still photographers getting pictures for advertising purposes. He started to walk away, saying angrily, "You don't need the back of my head to get everybody else's faces."

Barbara called out, "Listen, slug—for the son of C. Aubrey Smith, your manners aren't very good!"

Recalling the incident recently, on the set of South of St. Louis, Joel said, "She really gave me the works. I knew she was right. When I cooled down and apologized, she was wonderful to me. She went to infinite pains to help me. I've made four pictures with her since. She's never lost that quality. Not long ago, I was so impressed by her realism in a scene that I forgot to say my lines. Was she flattered when I explained? She exploded, 'Blank-blank it! Must you spoil a good scene?'"

While she's a great one to go all-out to help new talent, she isn't intimidated by any "Be Kind to Newcomers" propaganda.

MODERN SCREEN

"I'm tying shoeloces together—whot ore you doing?"

While Bob Taylor was in the Navy, she was pursued at a party by a young leading man who hoped to get a role in her next picture. He was so obviously certain the way to get it was to conduct a flirtation, that when he finally backed her into a corner, she competently disposed of him by asking, "What is this, the mating season?"

Nor is she to be intimidated by the star-chasing hoodlums who spend their days recklessly pursuing celebrities in foul ways or fair. Once when she was staying on the 25th floor of the Waldorf in New York, there was a terrific racket at her door. When she opened it, a dozen or so boisterous, demanding boys started to stampede through. With a strength born of determination and with no apology, she pushed them right back. One complained bitterly, "Say, we walked up 25 flights to get your autograph!"

"Did anybody invite you?" she asked blandly. The door was locked behind them.

She blames Bob Taylor entirely for attracting fans. She says they never recognize her unless she's with him.

"Oh, once I was recognized," she'll admit. "I was having dinner without Bob at the Vine Street Derby. Chelios, the maitre d', asked me if I'd go through the kitchen when I left. He said someone had spotted me and a mob of fans had gathered outside to wait for me and the officer on the beat was afraid of a disturbance. I was never so impressed in my life. So, the one time I was recognized without Taylor along, I got shown out the kitchen door!"

Soothing compliments are met with that same "Nuts!" attitude. Someone recently told her she had such beautiful blonde hair. "Blonde, my eye!" she retorted. "Don't you know silver gray when you see it?"

Another person, just before the latest Academy Awards, pointed out that, after three previous times up and no Oscar yet, she should have this year's Award for Sorry Wrong Number. "Huh!" she answered. "Olivia de Havilland should have it for The Snake Pit. I hope she does—nobody can be jealous of a great talent like hers. It's something you have to respect. Sentiment shouldn't enter into it."

In case anyone suspects she was guilty of a bit of an Alphonse-Gaston act herself, he should have heard her when she failed to win the Award a few years back for her fine work in Stella Dallas. "I really thought I'd get it. My heart's blood was in it," she said simply. In that era of sweetness and light on the part of the loser, her words came as a shock.

As did her remark to a big businessman recently. She was at the home of some non-professional friends when the tycoon happened to drop in. She was telling about a personal experience in a big store which had just opened in Los Angeles. He tried to impress her with his business acumen by making involved predictions concerning the store's future. She kept moving away from him, but he kept following. Having at long last unlimbered himself with a barrage of boring facts, figures and opinions to back up his predictions he said, "Now that I've told you all this, have you come to any conclusion?"

She ignored him at first, trying to avoid creating a situation. But he raised his voice and repeated, "I said, have you come to any conclusion?"

"Yes," she answered. Then, creating the impression she had gone to the top of a grand staircase for her pronouncement, she said, "The conclusion of this conversation." And she departed for home.

While she never tells stories of how she's squelched someone, she's quick to tell of others' ability to do so. She has two current favorites. One was delivered by Dr. Joel Pressman, Claudette Colbert's husband. He'd treated Mrs. William Paley, one of the late Dr. Harvey Cushing's beautiful daughters and recently acclaimed the year's best-dressed woman, for a minor throat ailment. That evening at a party, a gushing woman said, "Oh! Dr. Pressman! Wasn't it exciting to treat the best-dressed woman in the world?"

"I was under the impression I was treating the daughter of the world's greatest brain specialist," he said softly.

The other one is on herself. While at Slapsie Maxie's one night to see Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis perform, she was invited to dance by Jerry Lewis. An enthusiastic jitterbugger, she was no more than two minutes on the dance floor when he threw her arms off him and said, "I won't dance unless you let me lead."

Well, that's the lady who says "Nuts!" Not long ago, she was in the office of her personal press representative, Helen Ferguson. Helen and her staff keep a pot of coffee going all the time. Barbara was offered some and took a couple of swallows before she left.

A couple of hours later, a magnificent, fool-proof coffee maker was delivered to Miss Ferguson. Accompanying it was a note which read:

Dear Helen: If you use this you won't be serving poison.
Missy

P. S. Rude, ain't she?

"But magnificently so, magnificently so," her friends, many of whom are converted critics, remind you. THE END

MY DAZE—BY RONALD REAGAN

(Continued from page 37)

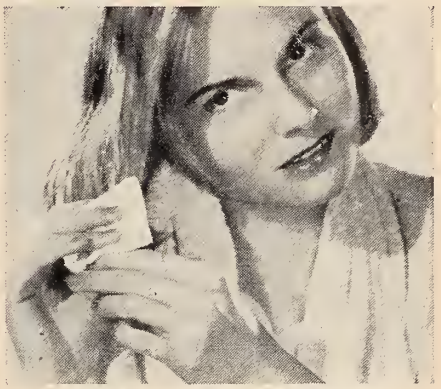
30 hours straight—and my body finally agreed with my mind that we were on a new schedule. I slept like a log all night, and never had any more trouble.

I'd gone to London last November to play the role of Yank in The Hasty Heart. (The script described him as being "in his early thirties, more wholesome than handsome, with a manner more relaxed than lazy." "Type casting," my friends had grinned.) I'd never been outside the U. S. before in my life and when I found myself jogging along in one of those famous London cabs on my way from the station to the Savoy Hotel, I felt a little uncertain about this Yank's reaction to England. As I peered out into the blanket-like fog I was already a little homesick. I wondered if I were going to feel that way throughout the four months I'd be there.

Within a minute of registering at the hotel desk I had my answer. I had just put down the pen after signing my name when a girl's voice called, "Ronnie!"



I turned—and there stood Elizabeth Taylor and her mother. In London to make The Conspirator, they too were staying at the Savoy.

"We just got a big food package from home, full of roast beef," Elizabeth said, "and you are hereby invited to join us at dinner!"

So that night we three Hollywoodites sat in the Savoy's dining room having Hollywood roast beef, especially prepared by the chef. Homesick, indeed! I told the Taylors what I could of the West Coast, and they told me news of the other Hollywoodites in London. I heard about Cary Grant's yellow jaundice, and about other

GET Coets

FOR APPLYING THE SOLUTIONS IN YOUR HOME PERMANENT WAVE KIT

HANDY COTTON SQUARES
DOZENS OF COSMETIC USES
LARGE PACKAGE 29¢

Listen to

"Modern Romances"

exciting true-to-life stories from Modern Romances magazine

A new half-hour program every Monday thru Saturday on your American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) station

FREE PHOTO

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c for handling.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309, Dept. L-79, Hollywood 28, Calif.

AMAZING OFFER — $40 IS YOURS
For Selling Only 50 Boxes Christmas Cards
Also 50 and 25 for $1.00 with or without name. Free samples. Other boxes on approval. Entirely new, different deluxe assortment with feature television card. Cute plastic assortments. Write today. It costs nothing to try.
FREE SAMPLES
CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-21, White Plains, N. Y.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"
Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

BE A Nurse
MAKE $35-$45 A WEEK
You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 50th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men, women 18 to 60. High school not required. Easy tuition payments. Trial plan. Write today.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 237, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

He started retiring today!

. . . and it feels good!

It's going to take time, but the point is . . . he's taken that all-important first step . . . he's found a way to make saving a sure, automatic proposition . . .

He's buying Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan!

This makes saving an absolute certainty! You don't handle the money to be invested . . . there's no chance for it to slip through your fingers and . . . U. S. Savings Bonds pay you 4 dollars for every 3 invested, in ten years!

Think it over! We believe you'll agree that bonds are the smartest, surest way there is to save.

Then—sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan yourself, today! Regardless of your age, there's no better time to start retiring than right now!

P. S. If you are not eligible for the Payroll Savings Plan, sign up for the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank.

Automatic saving is sure saving—
U. S. Savings Bonds

Contributed by this magazine in co-operation with the Magazine Publishers of America as a public service.

fellow-guests at the Savoy—Robert Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotten, Virginia Mayo, Michael O'Shea, Howard Hawks, and director Henry Hathaway and his wife. Quite an American Club!

After dinner, I went calling on Ann Sheridan, who was ill with pleurisy in the same hotel. I was armed with clippings from home, magazines, and as much news as I could remember (I'm not very good on gossip). I found most of the London Hollywoodites at her bedside—then and the other times I saw her. It was impossible for any of us to see Cary Grant in his flat; his type of yellow jaundice was contagious.

That was my introduction to faraway London. As time went on, however, our work schedule prevented us from seeing very much of each other. (Besides, as I've said, the first three days I was struggling along in a daze of insomnia. What a relief it was to have that fog lift!)

But even so, I felt right at home working on the picture. For one thing, although everyone in the picture was British except Patricia Neal, director Vincent Sherman and myself, I was dressed just as I always seem to be in American movies. Yep, I was wearing a U.S. Army uniform! There's no doubt about it—studios have kept me in uniform longer than the Army did.) The British crew was just as friendly as an American one, and far more curious. The set soon had what was called "The Reagan Corner," and I became an answering service for hundreds of questions. Mainly, they wanted to know three things about us: our weather, our food, and the life in Hollywood. Really, the only strangeness I found in making a British picture boiled down to one thing: after a couple of months away from the California sun, my face became so pale that I had to wear a suntan make-up—breaking my record of never having worn any make-up at all. Otherwise, making my 38th picture was a lot like making the first 37.

hi-ya, queen . . .

My social life was, however, very different and extremely limited. I got up at 6 A.M., rode out to the studio in the suburbs of London, and worked all day. At night, I never got back to the hotel before 8 P.M., and generally (like the other Hollywood actors) I'd have dinner in my room, fall into bed, study my lines and go to sleep.

Once, though, I had the climax of all British social experiences—at a Command Performance, I met the Royal Family. I'm sorry to say I acted like a typical Yank! In spite of all my preparation in court etiquette, I forgot all the "Your Majesties" and just blurted out, "How do you do?" to the Queen. She was as charming about it as if she, too, had grown up in Illinois.

I got a huge kick out of going to the European continent, after the picture was finished. With Arthur Abeles (he's the London head of Warners) and his wife, I went to Monte Carlo. But after only two days there, I got the sad news that I'd have to rush back to London for retakes on the picture. So I boarded a French train alone—wondering how my high-school French would serve me during the overnight trip to Paris. Well, if I do say so, I did myself proud! I'm still surprised about it. As in all French trains, I was not alone in my compartment; my partner was a pleasant French businessman. I forced out a few French sentences, and soon we were getting on so well that he asked me to lunch in Paris the next day, at the Rotarian Club! I did equally well with two other Frenchmen in the dining car.

I suppose one reason that the whole trip seemed to me amazingly homelike was because of incidents like this one: I ate the one meal I had time for in Paris, alone, in a restaurant. I sat down at a table, ordered, and then heard an American voice say, "Hello, there." I looked up to see a strange American couple at a nearby table. I nodded hello, although I didn't know them at all. Then I heard the man murmur to his wife, "I swear I know that fellow—but I just can't think of his name!" Throughout the meal he tried to place me; he still hadn't when I left.

By the time I landed in New York in March, I was so homesick for California I didn't bother to stay long. I allowed 24 hours for New York, dining with my agent and his wife at their home—and falling asleep at the dinner table! (I was back at my old can't-adjust-to-the-time tricks.)

As I write this, I'm rushing back to Hollywood. You know what I want most, after these months away? I want gallons of orange juice, and I want to get the darkest suntan in California. I'd like to regain the weight I lost in England, too. (How much I lost I don't know, but I sure look scrawny!) But mainly, I want to get back on the busy end of a posthole digger. I was building new paddock fences around my Valley ranch all last summer—and I can't wait to finish what I started. This will mean working in the sun for hours every day, and eating meals with my ranch-partner Nino Pipitone and his family.

I'm making only one stop-over on my way to those paddock fences. I'll be in Washington, D.C., for a few hours because I'm lucky enough to have an appointment with President Truman—not alone, however; I'm on a Hollywood committee. I'm representing the Screen Actors' Guild, and there will be representatives from Hollywood labor groups at the meeting. But it's a great way for an American to return from a trip abroad—to shake hands with the President on his way home.

Now, there are two final questions I'd like to answer. Everyone asks me, "Didn't you have any heavy dates in London? Don't you expect to have some heavy romance in Hollywood?" My answer to the first is that I didn't, and to the second, that I don't. But I do own several horses, and they're all mares!

THE END

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ After Broadway Serenade, many people said the story closely resembled the case of Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres. But Ginger and Lew reaffirm that there are no sentimental reasons for staving off their divorce, just purely sensible ones. For one thing, they are economically better off on account of community property and, for another, they feel that staying married to each other is a safeguard against making any more marital mistakes.—October 1939 Modern Screen their trapezes to something solid or they fly off into space. Orson Welles still rises grandly above mere matters of money and business. As a result, he's chronically busted. He's so wrapped up in his Olympian robes he pays no one else or their feelings any mind. Once during the war Orson staged a big Bond rally in Texas, with the Secretary of the Treasury, and half of Hollywood's biggest stars, lined up to put over the show. The stars rehearsed for days, then when the program came on, Orson talked so much himself that half of them never got a chance to peep into the mike!

MYTHS STARS BELIEVE ABOUT THEMSELVES

(Continued from page 36)

Orson's genius is still there beneath the lordly legend he's been living for years. He's just delivered a terrific performance as Borgia in Ty Power's picture, Prince of Foxes. But he can't lose his Superman mantle. Ever since Laurence Olivier scored so brilliantly in Shakespeare's Henry V, Orson's been going to outdo him or bust. He's busted once—when he made a Macbeth so weird it may never be released. He's going to tackle Othello this summer and Heaven knows what out-of-the-world twist he'll tack on that.

razzle-dazzle . . .

Only the other day Orson wanted some Hollywood stars to come over and do a picture with him in Paris. They have Orson's number by now; they cabled back, "For how long and for how much?" He answered them airily, rising above these mundane matters, "Paris is beautiful in the spring." Sure it is, but I don't see how the Man from Mars can observe that from way up where he perches beyond the clouds. I do wish he'd come down to earth!

Now, I'm certainly not against the stars kidding themselves if it doesn't hurt their careers and if—particularly if—it tints Hollywood with some dash and color. As far as I'm concerned, characters like Errol Flynn and Victor Mature can go ahead and stage all the razzle-dazzles they want so long as nobody is really injured.

Errol rode into Hollywood on a fabulous fiction of derring-do which set the stage for all the swashbuckling parts he's played since—and maybe for the life he's lived since, too. Being Irish and blessed with a vivid imagination, Errol had everyone who quizzed him drop-jawed with blood-curdling tales—tales starring E. Flynn as the hero, of course—even before his first Hollywood movie came out. It's true enough that young Flynn had sailed around the South Seas a bit, adventured here and there in New Guinea, Tasmania and a few wild and woolly parts. But how Errol ever lived through those death defying ordeals he used to spin out by the yard without being a nine-lived cat, it's hard to figure.

To hear Errol tell it—and he could always tell it—if a head-hunter wasn't after his handsome profile, a crocodile had designs on steak à la Flynn. He was either wrestling a python in the jungle or shinnying up a waterspout in a South Sea typhoon. The Perils of Pauline had nothing on Flynn and after a session with the boy you couldn't wait until next time to see what death defying yarn he'd come up with. Sometimes he'd get his facts a little mixed, and when you'd call him he'd grin disarmingly and wiggle out with a slick excuse—or maybe a new chapter.

Once, Errol showed up with a patched noggin which, he explained, was the result of racing his speedy motor dashingly but too fast. The "auto accident," in that case, was actually champagne that his French wife, Lili Damita, applied—still bottled—to Errol's scalp during one of their love spats. But who cares about facts where Errol Flynn is concerned? He's got the dash, charm and personality to carry the act and I, for one, hope he never drops it. And I wouldn't be surprised if that fanciful mind of his doesn't believe his own gay tongue, anyway. Other day I was asking him about the picture he wants to produce and star in, too, The Great Buccaneer.

"It's the kind of thing I'm perfect for, Hedda," said the Flynn. "A pirate, in a sense, a sort of nautical Robin Hood. He steals from the rich and gives to the poor."

"I suppose," I mentioned, "you know all about pirates."

"As a matter of fact," brightened Errol, going right into stride, "once sailing the South Seas—did I ever tell you . . . ?" he started.

"Yes, Errol," I told him, "you did. But I can't wait for the new, 1949 version."

Victor Mature, after he ran around in fur rugs like an antediluvian Tarzan in One Million B.C., began pulling his famous "gorgeous hunk of man" act with a vengeance. He lived in a tent, you know, he surrounded himself with huge dogs, he let his hair wave in the breeze, he never covered, when possible, the whiskers on his chest. And—it certainly was no secret that Mister Mature was a devil with the women. He would flaunt his florid affairs to be sure they didn't bloom unseen. With a couple of Hollywood publicity pals, the Mature campaign kept in high gear right up until he joined the Coast Guard and took time out to fight a war.

the doghouse . . .

There were society girls swooning at studio gates and stage doors and lovely ladies sneaking pass keys to his hotel rooms and what-all. Vic beaued Rita Hayworth around, before and between her battles with Orson, and their sweet secrets were an open book; Vic obligingly turned the pages when anyone inquired. The walls of his studio dressing room (which he called "the doghouse") were black with scrawled telephone numbers of bundles for Victor. (He called a painter frantically, I remember, the day before he got married and hustled him to that dressing room, pointed to the numbers. "For Pete's sake," urged Vic, "paint those out right away, will you?")

Vic revelled in such critical snorts as "the overripe Romeo" and "hunk of man." And his lusty lover legend paid off. Well, Vic may believe his own theme yell of "Wolf, wolf"—but I don't. Do you know where he shines—really shines? Not as Don Juan with golden keys to milady's boudoir. But as a family man, supreme, thoroughly domesticated and loving his role of foster dad. (I think he's even stopped kidding himself by now.)

Speaking of Victor Mature recalls the beautiful gal who's just finished playing Delilah to his Samson for Cecil B. De Mille. Hedy Lamarr, of course. I'm not sure how much of that glamor gush Hedy herself believed when she got the age-old Hollywood vamp build-up. Maybe that siren role in Algiers did turn her head a little. At least, after meeting Charles Boyer in the Casbah, Hedy had a stretch of fancying herself quite an actress and MGM had trouble from then on getting her to take direction and to play the parts they wanted her to. But that was pro-

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M154, Hollywood 38, Cal.

NEW EXTRA MONEY PLAN

SHOW FRIENDS UNUSUAL CHRISTMAS CARD ASSORTMENTS

Make up to 100% Profit without experience showing new line including Plastic Christmas and Everyday Card assortments, Gleam and Glo, Christmas Wrappings, Stationery, Coasters, unusual and attractive gift items. Bonus. Special offers. Send today for FREE samples. 30 different Personal Christmas Cards, 50 for $1, 25 for $1, and $1.95. Stationery Coasters.

FREE SAMPLES PERSONAL CARDS AND STATIONERY

THOMAS TERRY STUDIOS, 63 Union Ave., Westfield, Mass.

Be an ARTIST

LEARN AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME!
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 or more a week. By our practical method step by step we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training and opportunities in art. STATE AGE. Course G.I. Approved.

STUDIO 807 R, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

stop Scratching

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

MATERNITY DRESSES WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

SUMMER STYLES

Smart, youthful styles for morning, street, afternoon, sports, or formalwear. Also maternity corsets and Lingerie.

Crawford's, Dept. 61, 729 Baltimore Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

SHORTHAND in 6 Weeks at Home

Famous Speedwriting system. No signs; no symbols; no machines. Uses ABC's. Easy to learn; easy to write and transcribe. Fast preparation for a job. Surprisingly low cost. 100,000 taught by mail. Used in leading offices and Civil Service. Write for free booklet.

Speedwriting, Dept. 807-9, 55 W. 42 St., N. Y. 18

AMAZING CREAM REMOVES UNSIGHTLY HAIR QUICKLY, SAFELY

Acts Below "Razor Line" Without Cutting or Scraping Legs

The modern way to remove ugly hair from your legs is with Neet® Cream Depilatory. It works deeper than a razor, below the surface of the skin. Safer too from razor cuts and scratches. Neet leaves tender skin soft and smooth, free from razor stubble. Just apply Neet like any cream, then rinse off and hair disappears like magic.

FIT to be seen in...

... this cloud white beauty under sheer blouses. Miss Swank's exclusive straight-plus-bias design molds to your figure—assures better fit, more comfort, smoother lines. Won't twist, ride or bunch. 3.00 and up.

STYLE SHOWN IN SOFT BUR-MIL RAYON CREPE. ABOUT 6.00 AT YOUR FAVORITE STORE.

Bur-Mil Rayon Fabric

Miss Swank*

MISS SWANK INC., 112 Madison Ave., New York 16, N.Y.

PAT. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. COPYRIGHT 1949

HELP WIN THE GREATEST FIGHT OF ALL

Give to the Damon Runyon Fund for Cancer Research

Take This Easy Step To

BIG MONEY!

Sell* CHRISTMAS CARDS

Earn extra dollars fast! Take orders for lovely EMBOSSED Christmas Cards WITH NAME. Sell themselves at 50 for $1.25, up. BIG CASH PROFITS on every order! Amazing $1 "Southern Beauty" Assortment of 21 Christmas Cards pays you up to 50c! Complete line of fast-sellers. Write for Samples on approval. SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO., 216 South Pauline Street, Dept. C-8 MEMPHIS 4, TENN.

add a spot of leopard to your summer wardrobe

THONG SANDALS

Summer Leopard Fabric

- Wedge Heel, Platform Sandals
- Summery Danflex Sole
- Adjustable Straps

ONLY 2.95 Pat. Pend.

Actual Photo

Immediate Delivery
Money Back Guarantee

SIZES: 1 to 12
Narrow Medium Wide

Also available in Velvety Red, Green, Black, Navy, White, Balenciaga, Beige, Yellow . . . Lustrous Gold, Silver, Bronze, Copper.

ORDER BY MAIL—SAVE!

COLLEEN ENTERPRISES, Haverhill, Mass.

Rush me_____prs. Leopard Thongs @ 2.95
Rush me_____prs. Colored Thongs @ 2.95
SIZE_____ WIDTH_____ COLOR_____
NAME _____
STREET _____
CITY _____ ZONE___ STATE _____
☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D.

fessional. In person, Hedy remained what she is—a beautiful and simple girl. The earthy things are Hedy's dish—not the silks and satins and emeralds, in spite of the Lamarr legend. She's a born mama and housewife and the great tragedy in her life is that she hasn't made a happy marriage.

When she was expecting her last baby, she used to come to see me wheeling her first born in a heavy carriage five long blocks and then lifting the buggy up my steps alone before I could help her. "You'll hurt yourself that way," I scolded her more than once. "It's good for me," she'd reply. "I am—what you say?—the pioneer woman type."

Joan Crawford has lived her Hollywood legend to the hilt. The legend, that is, of the Perfect Movie Star in Person. Crawford makes headlines day in and out, whether it's a romance, a robbery or just a dog fight—as when her pooch tangled with Lady Mendl's in the lobby of the St. Regis Hotel in New York.

culture vulture . . .

Joan adores her fans and all the adulation that goes with her Hollywood fame. Years ago Joan set out to be the Hollywood spotlight star and she's succeeded. By now her star act is natural and she's written Hollywood history, both on the screen and off. But there are a few Crawford acts that don't ring as true—except to Joan herself. I think when she's in their grip, though, she can even hypnotize herself enough to believe 'em.

There was Joan's Culture period—the Poetry one where she dallied with the Muse. And I'm sure Joan herself was certain, when she was in her Musical fable's throes, that she was headed right for La Scala or the Met. She studied voice for years and warbled at the drop of a suggestion.

Joan went through the Little Theater madness, too. She built one right in her garden when she was married to Franchot Tone, and was going to turn Broadway upside down one of these days. One of them. She never did—but you can't blame a gal for trying anything—singing, acting, writing, painting or praying—except when she makes such a production of it.

Joan Crawford's trouble is that she overdoes what she does; for instance, her celebrity collecting which she works at overtime. The last time Noel Coward came to Hollywood Joan took over Le Papillon and sent wires to almost everyone inside the city limits. "Please come to a party to meet my great friend Noel Coward," she invited. Bea Lillie happened to be here at the time, a lady who really is a great friend of Noel's. She replied, "Thanks so veddy much, but I've already met Noel."

Another Joan—Joan Fontaine—had another sort of trouble. Hers was a "little sister" bugaboo, the stubborn conviction that Olivia de Havilland's screen success had relegated her dismally to a position in the shade. She was quite hipped on it when she first broke into pictures herself—to the extent of changing her name, writing a contract forbidding publicity linking her with Olivia, feuding with her good-natured sis and even going after her beaus. (Joan's first husband Brian Aherne squired Livvy around before Joan took him away and married him.) That competitive chimera was very real to Joan. It damaged her health and disposition, but who knows—maybe it was also the spur which made her the fine actress she is today. At least, it was cured for keeps the day Joan captured her Oscar for Suspicion and at last stood on equal footing with Big Sister Olivia. There's not a more poised, happy, gay and charming lady in Hollywood now than Joan.

I've been mighty pleased to see Frank Sinatra drop his chip-on-shoulder act and stop challenging everybody who criticizes him. Frankie, who fancies his fistic talents and even sponsors prizefighters now and then, socked one newspaper columnist and had to pay off—not only in money but bad publicity. He chose another who double-dared him right back in print—and maybe that cured him. Anyway, Frankie's not mad at anyone now, is packing no pistols and I hope he has shaken that "Go on, hit me," chip he lugged around so long. (He did get on the front pages again recently by socking someone at a party, but that was a minor skirmish, quickly forgotten.)

Now there are, of course, many fine examples of stars who've never succumbed to the temptation of taking their legends seriously. Shirley Temple certainly grew out of her Girl Goddess legend gracefully, keeping her curly top screwed on sensibly. . . . Clark Gable's been called "King" for years by all his friends, but he's never draped any purple robes around his psyche or imagined a cardboard crown on his head—and in my book, Clark is Garbo's mate as the male all-time Hollywood great. . . . Robert Taylor licked that "Beautiful Bob" fable which added him up as a panty-waist by doing everything manly in his private life to disprove it—flying, fighting, racing, ranching, and taking on adult responsibilities. . . . I've been pretty proud of Marlene Dietrich, too, ever since she chucked over that cold, aloof, beauty badge of hers when all the time she was a warm-hearted girl dying to meet the people. When she finally did, she became a true heroine, the greatest one-star morale builder to come out of wartime Hollywood, rivalled only by Hopalong Hope. And it's the shame of Hollywood that there aren't more of the right kind of jobs for a woman like that. . . . Another 18-karat character, Ann Sheridan, lived through that sexy "Oomph" ballyhoo without turning a hair on her level red head. . . . Right now, the sexiest girl in Hollywood—if you believe her sizzling stills—is Jane Russell. Well, Jane has laughed at her sexy fable since it began. Her favorite book is not a love romance but the Good Book. She is quietly and happily married and spends a large part of her time and money doing good deeds.

let's be sensible . . .

And look at the steady stars—Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Ronald Colman, Barbara Stanwyck, Irene Dunne, Ginger Rogers—who go on year in and year out playing a passel of assorted parts, but leaving their false faces on the set and their publicity in the papers, where they both belong.

Success, security and serenity in Hollywood demand an iron-clad sense of humor and a healthy helping, too, of common sense—besides a law of living that old Will Shakespeare penned in a play of his 300 years ago. That particular play was good enough this year to top the best Hollywood could offer—and a lot of our fabulous stars in our fabulous town could do worse than soak up his words of wisdom in Hamlet:

> "This above all—to thine own self be true;
> And it must follow, as the night the day,
> Thou can'st not then be false to any man."

I could say it myself—a lot shorter but not nearly as pretty. Just, "Be yourself, kids!"

THE END

See the Difference Maybelline Makes!

Compare the two sides of this revealing picture. First, cover the right side . . . then cover only the left. What a thrilling difference! Soft, lovely Maybelline Eye Make-up can do the same for you. It's amazing to see how much larger and more expressive your eyes appear when lashes are darkened to their very tips with Maybelline Mascara—and brows are gracefully defined with the smooth, soft Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. Insist on Maybelline — the Eye Make-up in good taste.

MAYBELLINE SOLID MASCARA in the new gold-colored metal vanity, $1. Refills, 50c. Shades: Black, Brown, Blue.

MAYBELLINE CREAM MASCARA (applied without water) comes in handy leatherette case, $1. Shades: Black, Brown.

MAYBELLINE EYE SHADOW in subtle shades of Blue, Brown, Blue-gray, Green, Violet, Gray.

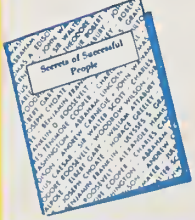
MAYBELLINE EYEBROW PENCIL with fine, smooth, soft point — so easy to use! Black or Brown.

The Wallet for Successful People

INNER SANCTUM*

*reg. U. S. patent off.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR WALLET



A wonderful wallet made of fine leathers that's trim, slim and beautifully tailored for all occasions! Secure all-around zipper closing; zipper coin pocket; 4 acetate windows for cards and photos!

A wonderful Inner Sanctum Secret Compartment keeps your private affairs strictly confidential! Divides and hides your large bills from prying eyes.

In 6 attractive colors

STEER GRAIN · BROWN · BLACK
RED · KELLY GREEN · NAVY

FREE! With each wallet, a copy of the famous booklet "Secrets of Successful People." Inner Sanctum is the wallet for successful people

Beautifully Gift Packaged

Aristocrat
FIFTH AVENUE

Popularly priced at your favorite store or write to ARISTOCRAT LEATHER PRODUCTS, INC., 292 Fifth Ave., New York 1, N. Y

Was Ingrid Indiscreet? Photos Tell!

JUL 19 1949

modern screen

©C1B 202010

August 15¢

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIALS DIVISION
AUG 2 1949
RECEIVED

PER.

June Allyson

Amazing New Creme Shampoo

TINTS HAIR

to black, brown, auburn or blonde beauty

DULL, FADED OR GRAY HAIR WORRIES ENDED IN 22 MINUTES HOME TRIAL

IMAGINE! In just 22 minutes you, too, can change the drab, streaked or ageing gray appearance of your hair to astonishing new, youthful, natural-looking color. Right at home, this wonderful new Tintz Creme Shampoo replaces the lost color of your hair, dimmed by time and neglect. Tintz contains magic Paraphenylene Diamine and is guaranteed to recolor more naturally and leave your hair more lustrous than any other type hair coloring. It "locks" the color in. Won't wash or rub off. Won't hurt permanents. Order your Tintz Today.

MEN LOOK YOUNGER, TOO

Men in all walks of life use Tintz because it leaves hair so natural appearing. Doesn't shout "dyed." Order now. Only $1.25 plus tax.

SO EASY TO USE—YET COLORS SO NATURALLY

Just brush on Tintz Creme Shampoo Hair Coloring and shampoo. Like magic, this one easy application cleans, reconditions and recolors your hair to thrillingly soft, natural-looking beauty. No muss or fuss! Caution: Use only as directed on label and perfect results are guaranteed.

FOR TOUCH-UPS OR COMPLETE COLOR CHANGE

Tintz Creme Shampoo colors hair permanently, but when new hair starts to grow in, simply retouch with Tintz as needed. Color perfectly matches your previously Tintz-shampooed hair.

SEND NO MONEY ON THIS NO RISK OFFER

Just clip coupon, check your shade and mail today. On arrival deposit $1.25 plus tax and postage with your postman; then shampoo-tint easily, quickly, right in your home. You must be completely delighted with results or your money will be refunded.

AT THESE DEPARTMENT STORES

Bloomingdales, Gimbels, Goldblatt's, Jordan Marsh, Jones, Lit Brothers, Macy's, Mandel's, and Sterns.

AT THESE DRUG CHAINS

Bartells', Cohen, Crown, Cunninghams, Dow, Gallahers, Grays, Griest, Hart, Hooks, Katz & Bestoff, Katz, King, Kinsel, Liggetts, Madings, Marshall, Fred Meyer, Owl, Pantaze, Parkview, Pay Less, Rands', Rea & Derick, Read's, Red Cross, Snyders, Sun, Sun Ray—Nevins, Sutliff & Case, Thrift, Thrifty, Veazey, Whelans, Walgreens and Wards.

TINTZ CO., Dept. 3-B, 349 W. Ontorio St., Chicago 10, Ill.
Canadion Office: 56½ Adelaide St. E., Toronto, Ontario

No Finer Hair Coloring Known. Tested by 100,000s of Users.

MAIL COUPON TODAY

Tintz Co., Dept. 3-B, 349 W. Ontorio St., Chicago 10, Ill.
Canodion Office: 56½ Adeloide St. E., Toronto, Ontario

☐ Send my Tintz Creme Shampoo Hair Coloring in shade checked at right. On arrival I will deposit $1.25 plus tax and postage charges with postman on guarantee I can return empty carton for any reason within 7 days and you will refund my money. (If $1.50 tax included, comes with this coupon, Tintz pays the postage.)

- ☐ JET BLACK
- ☐ BLACK
- ☐ DARK BROWN
- ☐ MED. ASH BROWN
- ☐ AUBURN (HENNA)
- ☐ MED. WARM BROWN
- ☐ LIGHT BROWN
- ☐ BLONDE

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ ZONE____ STATE_____

It's no picnic—
that "Left-Out Feeling"!

Yes, a gay gathering is sad if you're not in on it! So be sure you belong—and never trust your charm to anything but dependable Mum! For Mum's unique modern formula guards your daintiness—contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Be a safety-first girl—get Mum today!

MUM safer for charm . . . Mum checks perspiration odor for the whole day or evening. Protects against risk of future odor after your bath washes away past perspiration.

MUM safer for skin . . . Smooth, creamy Mum contains no harsh or irritating ingredients. Doesn't dry out in the jar to form scratchy crystals. Mum is harmless to skin.

MUM safer for clothes . . . No damaging ingredients in Mum to rot or discolor fine fabrics. Always quick and pleasant to use. Economical, too—no shrinkage, no waste.

For sanitary napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, sure—dependable for this important use, too.

Mum keeps you nice to be near

Product of Bristol-Myers

(Advertisement)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Don't be Half-safe!

by

VALDA SHERMAN

At the first blush of womanhood many mysterious changes take place in your body. For instance, the apocrine glands under your arms begin to secrete daily a type of perspiration you have never known before. This is closely related to physical development and causes an unpleasant odor on both your person and your clothes.

There is nothing "wrong" with you. It's just another sign you are now a woman, not a girl . . . so now you must keep yourself safe with a truly effective underarm deodorant.

Two dangers—Underarm odor is a real handicap at this romantic age, and the new cream deodorant Arrid is made especially to overcome this very difficulty. It kills this odor on contact in 2 seconds, then by antiseptic action prevents the formation of all odor for 48 hours and keeps you shower-bath fresh. It also stops perspiration and so protects against a second danger—perspiration stains. Since physical exertion, embarrassment and emotion can now cause apocrine glands to fairly gush perspiration, a dance, a date, an embarrassing remark may easily make you perspire and offend, or ruin a dress.

All deodorants are not alike—so remember—no other deodorant tested stops perspiration and odor so completely yet so safely as new Arrid. Its safety has been proved by doctors. That's why girls your age buy more Arrid than any other age group. More men and women use Arrid than any other deodorant. Antiseptic, used by 117,000 nurses.

Intimate protection is needed—so protect yourself with this snowy, stainless cream. Awarded American Laundering Institute Approval Seal—harmless to fabrics. Safe for skin—can be used right after shaving. Arrid, with the amazing new ingredient Creamogen, will not dry out.

Your satisfaction guaranteed, or your money back! If you are not completely convinced that Arrid is in every way the finest cream deodorant you've ever used, return the jar with unused portion to Carter Products, Inc., 53 Park Pl., N.Y.C., for refund of full purchase price.

Don't be half-safe. Be Arrid-safe! Use Arrid to be sure. Get Arrid now at your favorite drug counter—only 39¢ plus tax.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

AUGUST, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

THE BACHELOR TAKES A WIFE (Jimmy Stewart) ..... by Carl Schroeder 22
WHY HOLLYWOOD PRAYS FOR JUDY (Judy Garland) ..... by Denise Carlson 24
HER EYES HAVE TOLD ME SO! (Elizabeth Taylor) ..... by Hedda Hopper 30
WE FOUGHT TO SAVE OUR MARRIAGE ..... by Dick Powell 32
THERE'S A GREAT DAY COMIN' (Doris Day) ..... by Jack Wade 34
JOHN WAYNE'S DOUBLE LIFE ..... by Morgan MacNeil 36
HOLLYWOOD'S TANGLED ROMANCES (Duff, Gardner, Granger, Winters, etc.) by George Benjamin 38
AND THE LIVING IS BREEZY (Dana Andrews) ..... by Viola Moore 40
HOW COULD I BE SO WRONG! ..... by Anne Baxter 43
HUTTONTOTS: CARE AND FEEDING OF (Betty Hutton) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 44
I'M NO PLAYBOY ..... by Peter Lawford 48
WAS IT LOVE? (Ingrid Bergman) 50
ALL THAT MONEY CAN'T BUY (Bob Stack) ..... by Kirtley Baskette 56
OUT OF HIS MIND—AND BACK (Gregory Peck) 60

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: Ill Will Isn't Good (Montgomery Clift) 29 PICTURE OF THE MONTH: The Girl From Jones Beach 58

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 16
NEW FACES 26
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 27
FASHION 66
YOUR LETTERS 83
BEAUTY: Don't Flirt With Old Sol ..... by Carol Carter 91
THE FANS ..... by Gloria Lampert 100
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed) 108

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of June Allyson by Nickolas Muray
Other picture credits, page 96

WADE H. NICHOLS, editor

WILLIAM HARTLEY, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
FLORENCE EPSTEIN, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
MAXINE FIRESTONE, assistant fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor
TOM CARLILE, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
VIOLA MOORE, associate editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
NANCY WOOD, food editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 39, No. 3, August, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U.S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U.S.A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

M-G-M gives you Gable and that gorgeous redhead...in the exciting drama of a gambler and his girl...and the intrigues and the romance that go with the game!

CLARK GABLE · ALEXIS SMITH

IN

"Any Number Can Play"

WITH WENDELL COREY · AUDREY TOTTER

FRANK MORGAN · MARY ASTOR · LEWIS STONE · BARRY SULLIVAN · EDGAR BUCHANAN

A MERVYN LeROY PRODUCTION Screen Play by RICHARD BROOKS From the Book by EDWARD HARRIS HETH

Directed by MERVYN LeROY · Produced by ARTHUR FREED A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

TWENTY YEARS AGO, as we understand it, Jimmy Stewart's father asked him, "Boy, when are you going to get married and settle down?" Jimmy-boy shrugged his shoulders and pawed the ground. "I like to keep all the girls happy, Pop," he blushed. Time passed. All the girls were getting hysterical. "He'll never get married!" they screamed. "Never!" Then one moonlit night, Stewart went to Gary Cooper's house for dinner. Gloria Hatrick McLean was there. Stewart's comment: "The soup was good." Well, our writer, Carl Schroeder, was under the table at the time, taking cryptic notes on a napkin. "Quite a dish," he wired (showing just how cryptic things can get—because the dish he had in mind was Gloria). Jimmy must have had that dish in mind, too, because eventually one thing led to another, and finally to page 22 of this issue, where you'll find "The Bachelor Takes A Wife."

PEOPLE ARE PRETTY indifferent about what we do with our larynx. Whenever we break into song, someone invariably suggests we shut up. This throws us completely off key. Anyway, because we might have been one ourself, singers fascinate us—particularly singers like Doris Day (with all that golden hair). Another remarkable thing about Miss Day is her voice—she never really knew she had one until she broke her legs. She was 15 at the time, and a professional dancer. In Miss Day's case, everything turned out for the best (as you will see if you read "There's A Great Day Comin'," on page 34). We broke a leg once, too. A lot of good that did us. . . .

ONE THING THE Churchill sisters never thought: They never thought they'd have to play horsey to work for MODERN SCREEN. They were over at Betty Hutton's home with pencils poised when the phone rang. Next thing they knew, Betty was backing out of the garage and they were being ridden by her tiny daughters—the Huttontots. (For fuller details see page 44.) Pretty soon those Churchills will be wanting to get paid for the stuff they do. . . .

ON PAGE 38, there's a piece called "Hollywood's Tangled Romances." We tried figuring them out—but it'll take a better brain. All we know is, there's one good telephone number in our book—and we're sticking to that. . . .

EVERYBODY'S KNOWN SINCE June 6 that Elizabeth Taylor's in love. June 6 was the day her mother announced her daughter was fixing to marry Bill Pawley, Jr. Hedda Hopper, though, knew that Liz was in love with the guy some time before that. Liz told her—only she didn't exactly tell her. Didn't have to. Elizabeth's eyes—but the story's on page 30. . . .

A FEW MONTHS ago, people might have looked for Stromboli on a menu. Not any more. Now everybody knows that Stromboli's an island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, and that Ingrid Bergman and director Rossellini were on it to make a movie. Ingrid and director Rossellini also made the front pages. The exciting, exclusive pictures starting on page 50 show why. Had to drag that photographer out of the darkroom before he'd let us see them! . . .

JUST A NOTE to remind you we're here every month . . . There'll be some stuff in the next issue that you'd have a heck of a time buying anywhere else for 15 cents: Some intimate, some gay, some loaded with cold, hard facts. And, since we're name-droppers—how does Dan Dailey sound? Or Betty Grable? We'll have stories about them, and about Glenn Ford, Bill Holden, Roy Rogers, Susan Hayward and more. All wrapped up in our September issue . . . Don't crowd, now!

LADD

Man of Violence and Mystery

...vs.

Women of Wealth and Beauty!

A love story to match the tension of the times.

Paramount presents

ALAN

LADD

BETTY MACDONALD

FIELD · CAREY

RUTH

HUSSEY

BARRY

SULLIVAN

HOWARD

DA SILVA

in F. SCOTT FITZGERALD'S

"The GREAT Gatsby"

with SHELLEY WINTERS · Produced by RICHARD MAIBAUM · Directed by ELLIOTT NUGENT

Screenplay by Cyril Hume and Richard Maibaum • From the novel by F. Scott Fitzgerald and the play by Owen Davis

. . . and all the world said "ah-h-h-h!"

Rita and Aly sealed their marriage vows with a kiss on May 27, after the civil ceremony was performed by Mayor Derigon (right) of Vallauris. In a white suit (left), is the immensely wealthy Aga Khan.

Friends and relatives of Aly gave the wedding and reception lots of exotic color and excitement. Natives of the small town were thrilled to find the saried women and turbanned men suddenly in their midst.

Only the strong arm of the law kept the townspeople of Vallauris from mobbing the bridal couple as they drove from the wedding. Aly, in the spirit of a potentate, donated generously to town's charities.

Under Aly's watchful eye, Rita used a long, white-handled sword to slice the three-tier wedding cake. The reception was held at Aly's Chateau de L'Horizon in Cannes and champagne flowed like water.

In the brilliant Mediterranean sunshine, groups of musicians strolled in the sea-lapped grounds of the Chateau, serenading Rita and Aly and their reception guests with tunes from many of Rita's pictures.

Rita and Aly sat at a table with their children during the reception. Prince Karim and Prince Amyon are Aly's sons by his former wife, Joan Buller. Rebecca's father is Orson Welles, Rita's second husband.

Surrounded by Florido beauties, Rito's first husbond, Ed Judson (left), wished her success. Rita's father (right) couldn't attend the wedding, but enjoyed photos of it with his wife.

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

Louella Parsons was the only press correspondent to attend the wedding of Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan as an invited guest. The following is her special dispatch to Modern Screen.

■ VALLAURIS, France (By Cable)—I'm glad to be able to give first-hond news of the wedding of Rita Hayworth to Prince Aly Khan. I consider it to have been the most colorful experience of my life.

Rita is now Princess Aly Khan, mistress of many homes, possessor of many gems of untold value. She was presented with a king's ransom in jewels by visiting Ismailis. They gave her diamonds as big as walnuts, gorgeous silks, cloth of golden coins.

The town of Vallauris got up at daybreak to see the American movie queen become a princess. Every available window in town was rented and crowds lined the narrow streets of the quaint French village. Prince Aly's father, the Aga Khan, who has endowed hospitals on the Riviera, received big cheers when he drove to the city holl with his wife, the Begum. She was dressed in a periwinkle-blue sari, very becoming to her brunette beauty. She was still quite pale from her recent illness.

Rita was dressed in a "Rita blue" Jacques Fath creation. She carried a bouquet of white roses and orange blossoms. A touching part of the civil ceremony was the presentation to Rita of a bouquet of roses by two little French girls.

Following the ceremony was the wedding reception at the Chateau de l'Horizon on the sun-bathed Mediterranean—something I'll never forget. There were only a very few Americans present, most of the guests being the Prince's Continental friends. Contrary to reports, the Chateau de l'Horizon does not belong to the Aga Khan but is the Prince's own.

The night after the civil ceremony, the Moslem ceremony was performed quietly, with only relatives present. According to Moslem law, it's not necessary for the bride to be present, but Rita attended. The Prince did not wear Ismaili garb.

I'm delighted to say that Rita returns to Hollywood this fall to make a picture. Her only stipulation is that it be a glamorous story. Aly saw Carmen four times and loved it. The Prince told me he wants Rita to be happy and also thinks it would be too bad to deprive the public of her.

This marriage, whot with the visiting Indions in native costumes, the manner in which the Prince lives and the lavishness of the reception, was so fabulous that if I hadn't seen it, I wouldn't believe it!

See FILM Routed By New Improved Pepsodent!

You'll have brighter teeth, cleaner breath in just 7 days —or double your money back!

Run the tip of your tongue over your teeth. If you feel a slippery coating there — you have FILM!

WHY FILM MUST BE REMOVED

1. FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull
2. FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath
3. FILM glues acid to your teeth
4. FILM never lets up — it forms continually on everyone's teeth

Now Faster Foaming! Make this 7-Day Pepsodent Test!

In just 7 days, new improved Pepsodent will bring a thrilling brightness to your teeth, new freshness to your breath—or we'll return twice what you paid!

New Pepsodent Tooth Paste foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film: (1) Pepsodent makes short work of the discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It routs film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent helps protect you from acid produced by germs that lurk in film. This acid, many dentists agree, is the cause of tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly and quickly with Pepsodent.

Try New Pepsodent now on our double-your-money-back guarantee. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula! No other tooth paste contains Irium*—or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent. For the safety of your smile use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year.

Irium is Pepsodent's registered trade mark for purified alkyl sulfate.*

Use New Pepsodent for just 7 days. If you're not completely convinced it gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth, mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent Division, Lever Bros. Co., Dept. G, Chicago, Ill. Besides postage, you'll receive—

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Another fine product of Lever Brothers Company

Jane Wyman carried her Oscar all the way to England to show to Laurence Olivier who, of course, had one of his own to show to her.

■ Who would have thought we would be Good Newsing from Paris this month?

But then, who'd have thought a few months ago that Rita and Aly Khan would be married? Which occasion, of course, is what sent me abroad as a reporter.

Gay Paree, in the spring! What could be more romantic? I wish every pair of lovers in the world could come to France during these wonderful months of May and June. Some evenings, the rain falls gently, wetting the pavements and streets just enough to reflect the lights on the Champs Elysées. The French girls wear garden flowers in their lapels—ofttimes just a single rose or a spray of lilac. Their suits and dresses may be old—but the flowers make them look gay and young and light-hearted.

The very first thing I did was put in a telephone call to Rita at Aly Khan's palace in Cannes. She said, "Louella, I can't believe you have come all the way from Hollywood to cover my wedding. It's wonderful to have someone from back home."

What a simple old-fashioned phrase that was—"back home"—from the girl who is the talk of the Continent. People over here were goggle-eyed over Rita and her marriage to the Indian Prince. Not since the marriage of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor had there been such excitement over a wedding.

I couldn't have been more amazed over the changes in Rita I had heard about. When she was married to Orson Welles she seldom opened her mouth. Now, a mutual close friend says, "Rita has made a real study of her job of being the wife of a Prince, and the daughter-in-law of the Aga Khan, one of the wealthiest men in the world and leader of millions of people." She now speaks French almost as well as she speaks English. She knows how to preside over the most formal dinner parties. She has the graciousness that comes with savoir faire and confidence.

MONUMENTAL BEST-SELLER!
TOWERING SCREEN TRIUMPH!

GARY COOPER

THIS IS HIS ROLE OF ROLES!

LOOK AHEAD TO THE THRILL OF THE

FOUNTAINHEAD

CO-STARRING

PATRICIA NEAL

with
RAYMOND MASSEY
KENT SMITH
ROBERT DOUGLAS
HENRY HULL
RAY COLLINS

DIRECTED BY KING VIDOR PRODUCED BY HENRY BLANKE

Screen Play by AYN RAND • From her Novel "The Fountainhead" • Music by Max Steiner

Are you in the know?

How to get to the dance floor smoothly?

☐ You walk ahead ☐ He leads the way ☐ You go arm-in-arm

Be sure who follows whom. When you rise to rhumba, your date won't expect an "after you" routine. Walk ahead! As to calendar-time, you can be 'way ahead in poise and comfort by choosing new Kotex. This napkin's made to stay soft while you wear it. Gives downy softness that holds its shape. And here's the very last word in comfort!—your new Kotex Wonderform Belt that won't twist, won't curl, won't cut! Made of duPont nylon elastic . . . quick drying, light weight, smooth-feeling.

To judge what you should weigh—

☐ Compare your pal's poundage
☐ See an "average weight" chart
☐ Measure your wrist

You and your gal pal may be the same height—but a large-boned femme should weigh more, and vice versa. For instance, are you over 5'4" tall? Measure your wrist. If it's less than 6¼" you're small-boned. More than 6½"—large-boned. Consider your frame when you read an average-weight chart. In sanitary needs, too, all girls aren't "average." Find just the right Kotex absorbency for you by trying all 3 . . . Regular, Junior, Super. They're designed for different girls, different days.

If he's talkative, what's your cue?

☐ Lend both ears
☐ Keep one eye on the field
☐ Plan tomorrow's schedule

What if he is chatter-happy. The fact remains, he's talking to you, so listen . . . without a roving eye, or daydreams, or tapping tatoos on the table. Boys are people . . . they like to be appreciated. And the best-rated fillies never forget it. They're also the gals who (on difficult days) never forget to choose Kotex. They've found the special flat pressed ends of Kotex prevent revealing outlines . . . and the exclusive safety center gives extra protection. What girl wouldn't appreciate that?

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Betty Hutton is delighted as Romo Burton, our Western editor, hands her M.S.'s Mother-of-the-Year award—a pink leather photo album.

As hostess of the Chateau de l'Horizon, Rita has brought a touch of America into the mansion on the Mediterranean. She has added gay chintzes to the oriental antiques with which the Aga Khan had furnished the Chateau. Rita's boudoir is in pink-and-white and is a combination of French and American decor.

Well, let's see what else is going on in France.

* * *

One of the first persons I ran into was Errol Flynn, our boy friend, who's very much on his vacation. Errol, gayer than gay, was dining at Tour D'Argant (one of the swank places to dine in Paris).

With him was his new flame, Princess Irene Ghica—and I must say I would not have picked her out, beautiful though she is, as the usual "Flynn type." She is very quiet and reserved and, I am told, she had many bitter experiences before she escaped from her native Bucharest.

You are going to have the opportunity of seeing the Princess on the screen, for Errol told me she will be his leading lady in his independent film, Last of the Buccaneers.

When I asked Flynn if the Princess could act, he said, "Who cares? She is beautiful. And I shall do the acting!"

Later the same evening, we all went on to the Carrere, and heard the most remarkable trumpet player since Harry James. Rita Hayworth's business manager, Johnny Hyde, who was with us, was so enthusiastic about this sensational young musician—who looks like Rory Calhoun—that he talked to him then and there about coming to Hollywood.

The night we were at the Carrere, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were guests. They walked out looking straight ahead and nobody seemed to be even slightly interested in them.

THERE'S MORE THAN MONEY ON MITCHUM'S MIND...
When He Tangles With This Gal With the Million-Dollar Figure!
"IF YOU PULL A FAST ONE, I'LL PULL THIS TRIGGER!"
MITCHUM'S NEWEST PICTURE... hot off location down Mexico way!
Heart-pumping action, super-speed excitement, when this T-N-Trio crosses paths on the danger-filled trail of a fortune in stolen money!
RKO PRESENTS
ROBERT MITCHUM
JANE GREER · WILLIAM BENDIX
in
THE BIG STEAL
with
PATRIC KNOWLES · RAMON NOVARRO · DON ALVARADO · JOHN QUALEN
Executive Producer SID ROGELL
Produced by JACK J. GROSS · Directed by DON SIEGEL Screen Play by GEOFFREY HOMES and GERALD DRAYSON ADAMS
RKO RADIO PICTURES
Based on the famous Saturday Evening Post Story "The Road to Cormichael's" by RICHARD WORMSER

Does your nail polish CHIP? PEEL? FLAKE OFF?

New miracle-wear ingredient discovered!

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN who've put up with polish which chips soon after manicuring are making a thrilling discovery . . .

It's the new 10¢ Cutex polish . . . the new miracle-wear polish! Now it contains Enamelon, a Cutex-exclusive ingredient designed to give incredible wear!

Cutex with Enamelon stays lovely day after day after day! Resists chipping, flaking, peeling as no polish ever did before!

Today, try this new, miracle-wear Cutex! So pure . . . even women with skins so sensitive they cannot use other polishes state that they can use new Cutex with perfect safety!

14 fashion-styled colors. Only 10¢ plus tax. In the bottle with the blue label, at your favorite cosmetic counter.

If you don't find that New Cutex wears longer than you ever dreamed possible, send the bottle to Northam Warren Corporation, Box 1355, Stamford, Conn., and your money will be refunded.

Angie Pappan, who is seriously ill with a heart ailment, dreamt about many things dear to a 14-year-old's heart. One of them came true, recently, when Shirley Temple arrived to cheer her up.

But, before doing more of Paris, let's cut back and forth to some news from Hollywood. Just call me Lopalong Parsons!

* * *

The last party I went to before I took off from Europe was the dinner dance given by Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor to observe their 10th wedding anniversary.

It is the first big party Barbara and Bob have ever given in Hollywood and when I said to her, on entering, "This is the first time I've seen your lovely new home," she laughed and replied, "It's the first time anyone has seen it."

The house is a small, but charmingly rambling red-brick place, set deep in rose gardens and wonderful trailing vines. It's right next door to Irene Dunne's.

Barbara had enclosed the entire terrace, overlooking the swimming pool, in cellophane walls and, I swear, the candlelit tables and gleaming silver decarations made the whole setting where we dined and danced look like a picture, wrapped up.

The most rabid movie fan among you could not have planned a more thrilling guest list of good-looking actors and beautiful movie stars. Don't envy me too much, but I had dinner with Gary Cooper, Alan Ladd, John Lund (who is as devastating off-screen as he is on) and Robert Cummings!

At the next table sat Van Johnson, William Holden, Claudette Colbert, Deborah Kerr and the Jack Bennys.

But the evening really got underway when the tables were cleared off the dance floor and the expert hoofers took over. Barbara, who looked about 16 years old in a shorty pink satin formal, did a revival of the Charleston with Robert Cummings that would have been a show stopper on Broadway! Later, she did a dreamy exhibition waltz with Cesar Romero and a hot-foot foxtrot with Van Johnson. What a dancer that gal is—or had you forgotten that Missy Stanwyck used to be a chorus girl, and is proud of it!

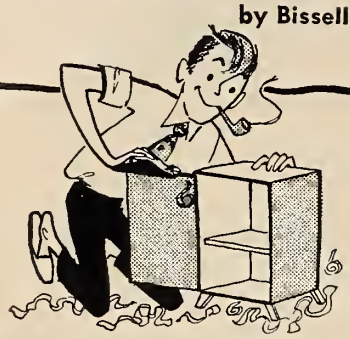
Next most sensational couple on the floor was tall, lanky Gary Cooper taking the curves with tiny Gracie Allen—and believe me, that was something to see.

Alan Ladd danced only with Sue—not entirely because he thinks married men should always dance with their wives but because, "I've got just two good dances an evening in me—the first and the last."

The most incongruous couple were Anne Baxter and John Hodiak—John sporting a 10-days' growth of beard for *Battle*ground and Anne done to the teeth in a décolletté red taffeta gown.

As dawn was breaking, the John Lunds drove me home. I hope Barbara and Bob don't wait another 10 years to give a party. They give such good ones.

* * *



Guess who has taken Judy Garland under her wing and is mothering the unhappy girl like a wise, older sister? Katharine Hepburn—yes, I mean crisp, cynical Miss H.

For years, Judy and Katharine have passed one another on the MGM lot, bowing politely when they met in dressing-room corridors or lunched at adjoining tables in the commissary. But that's all. They barely knew each other.

BIGGEST PICTURE IN TEN YEARS!
GREATEST CAVALCADE OF INTRIGUE, SPECTACLE, ADVENTURE AND EXCITEMENT YOU'VE EVER SEEN ON THE SCREEN!
BLACK MAGIC
EDWARD SMALL presents
'BLACK MAGIC'
STARRING
ORSON WELLES
AND NANCY GUILD
WITH AKIM TAMIROFF • FRANK LATIMORE
VALENTINE CORTESE • MARGOT GRAHAME
BASED ON ALEXANDRE DUMAS' "CAGLIOSTRO" from "Memoirs of a Physician" Produced and Directed by GREGORY RATOFF • Screenplay by CHARLES BENNETT Additional Scenes and Dialogue by Richard Schayer • Released thru United Artists
From a story by
ALEXANDRE DUMAS author of 'THE THREE MUSKETEERS' and THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO'

Just Whistle...

by Bissell

Fred has fixed things, but good . . . with guests due any minute. It's dinner in the dog house for you, Fred, when your wife sees that rug. But...

Fred just whistles . . . and trots out the Bissell Carpet Sweeper. Swish, swoosh! That new "Bisco-matic"* Brush Action picks up every speck, with no pressure on the handle a-tall!

"Adjusts itself to any rug, thick or thin!" brags Fred. "Even sweeps clean under beds and chairs, with the handle held low."

Adds Mrs. Fred: "My vacuum's fine for occasional cleaning. But for quick everyday pick-ups, we couldn't do without our 'Bisco-matic' Bissell!"

Exceptional values. "Bisco-matic" Bissells now as low as $6.45. Other models for even less. Illustrated: the "Vanity" at $8.45. Prices a little more in far South and West.

Bissell Sweepers

Bissell Carpet Sweeper Company

Grand Rapids 2, Michigan

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Bissell's patented full spring controlled brush

The whole town's talking about this romantic duo—Brian Donlevy and Audrey Totter. Here they appear very affectionate at the Mocambo.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Then, along came Judy's big trouble—her temperamental outbursts on the set of Annie Get Your Gun which were climaxed when she threw down her script and yelled, "That's all. I'm through! You can take it from here—without me!" And her harassed studio bosses took her at her word. Little Judy had cried "Wolf" once too often. Betty Hutton replaced her in one of the biggest casting upsets ever to take place in Hollywood.

Judy hadn't expected that—it darn near broke her foolish little heart.

In the excitement that followed, her Hollywood co-workers were divided in their sympathy. Some loudly insisted she deserved it. Others shrugged their shoulders.

But Katharine Hepburn did an amazing thing. She drove herself over to Judy's house, marched right into the room where Judy was sobbing her heart out and threw her arms around her!

Then she started to talk—like a Dutch uncle. She told her, in effect, that it was up to Judy, herself, whether this thing made her or broke her. She told her she could come out of it a bigger person, with the good wishes of thousands of people, hoping and plugging for her. Or, she could smash her life and career to splinters.

She told Judy to hold her head up and to be the first to congratulate Betty Hutton. She told her there are some things in life more

(Continued on page 78)

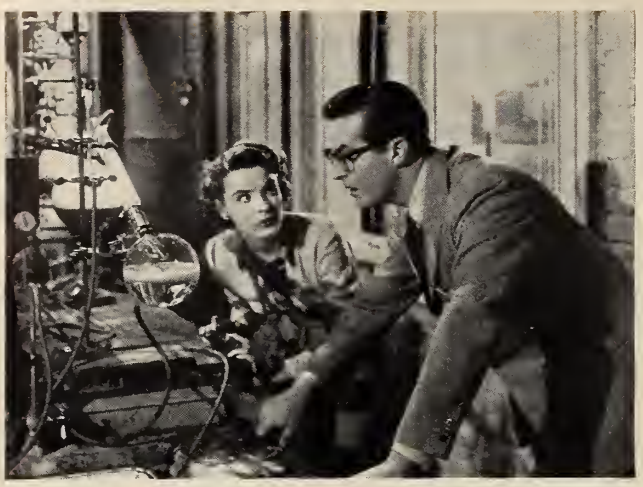
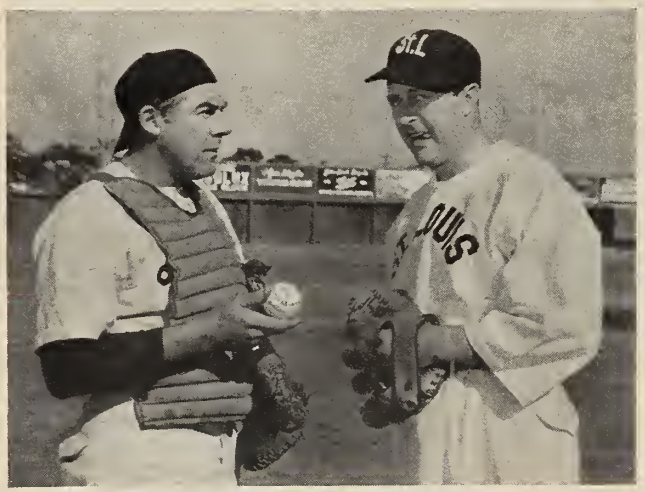
As a rising young star, Janet Leigh's been seen with a whole slew of handsome beaux lately. Arthur Lowe, Jr., is one of her frequent dates.



Could that be a flying fish Chris Mitchum's pointing out to his dad and brother Josh on Lake Mead? Bob took the whole family there.



Would you let your brother marry an
Anna Lucasta?
The great stage success brought excitingly to the screen
COLUMBIA PICTURES presents
Anna Lucasta
Starring
PAULETTE GODDARD
William Bishop · John Ireland · Oscar Homolka and BRODERICK CRAWFORD
Screen Play by Philip Yordan and Arthur Laurents · Based upon the play, "Anna Lucasta", by Philip Yordan
A SECURITY PICTURES PRODUCTION · Directed by IRVING RAPPER · Produced by PHILIP YORDAN

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

In It Happens Every Spring, chemistry professor Roy Millond hopes to get rich by perfecting o chemicol mixture, then morry the prexy's doughter, Jeon Peters. But o wild boseboll wrecks his geor.

He's crushed—then notices his mixture is wood-repellant. He sneoks out of town, becomes o great big-leogue boseboll pitcher by using his invention on the boll, which then con't be hit by boseboll bots.

But he's kept his activities o secret from Jeon ond her fomily—they'd think him undignified. When he sends her costly presents, she decides he's taken to crime. But eventuolly, he returns to her in triumph.

IT HAPPENS EVERY SPRING

Cast: Ray Milland, Jean Peters, Paul Douglas, Ed Begley, Ted De Corsia, Ray Collins, Jessie Royce Landis.
20th Century-Fox

Chemistry professor Ray Milland loves co-ed Jean Peters (daughter of the President of the University). Ray and Jean are going to get married as soon as an experiment he's working on makes him a fortune. But some kid throws a baseball through Ray's lab window, wrecking his equipment, and sending his miracle solution into the sink. He's mopping up his broken heart and his shattered apparatus, when he notices a remarkable happenstance. The baseball (which was soaked in the solution) is wood-repellent. Wonder dawns in Ray's eyes. He funnels into bottles all the solution he can salvage, and sneaks out of town. He's decided to get a job with the St. Louis baseball team, (they need a pitcher) and make enough money for him and Jean to marry on. He figures no batter will be able to hit a ball thrown by him, because the ball (saturated by fluid hidden on a sponge in his glove) will simply zing back from the bat. So Ray becomes the world's greatest, if most dishonest, pitcher. He wins games and more games. But he'll never let the papers take his picture because he doesn't want the news to get back to Jean and Jean's family. They wouldn't think baseball was dignified. He sends Jean a trinket now and then—a huge diamond, to begin with—and she assumes he's trafficking with crooks, but she plans to stand by him. After all, he did it for her. I'm not going to give away the picture's ending, and I'm not sure but what its ethics are revolting (Ray really doesn't give anybody else a sporting chance), but if you want to spend a light-hearted hour and a half, don't miss It Happens Every Spring. Paul Douglas, as the team's catcher is wonderful, Ted De Corsia is just as good as the coach, and there's nothing wrong with the rest of the cast, either.

New! Woodbury De Luxe Cold Cream with Penaten.....penetrates deeper into pore openings cleanses skin cleaner

Newly, truly a miracle! A wonder cream that cleanses your skin cleaner, brighter, clearer! For PENATEN in Woodbury De Luxe Cold Cream penetrates deeper into pore openings. Frees hard to remove make-up, clinging soil. Smooths more effectively . . . PENATEN carries Woodbury's rich skin softeners deeper. Never, ever, till Woodbury put PENATEN in this new De Luxe Cold Cream, has your skin looked so luminous. So alive. So luscious-soft.

For extra-dry skin—extra-rich Woodbury De Luxe Dry Skin Cream

If you're "over-thirty"...if your own skin oils are decreasing, supplement with lanolin's benefits...four special skin softeners . . . in Woodbury De Luxe Dry Skin Cream. PENATEN speeds this richness deeper into pore openings. Softens instantly. Smooths tiny dry lines that lead to wrinkles. Soon . . . YOU look younger!

Jars dressed in pink-and-gold. Trial size, 20¢ to largest luxury size, $1.39. Plus tax.

doing your hair at home?

Good-bye chipped teeth and broken fingernails with

DeLong

curl setting pins

At last—a marvelous new discovery—a curl setting pin you don't have to open. No torn fingernails! No chipped teeth! Scientifically designed to set your hair in half the time.

DE LONG CURL SETTING PINS are made so that you can sleep peacefully with a whole headful. As you turn your head the pins also turn and lie flat and comfortable against your head.

DE LONG CURL SETTING PINS have an extra heavy satin-smooth finish. They won't rust or become rough. And what a grip! When you put them in—they stay in. Used by professionals. Look for the DE LONG CURL SETTING PINS on the famous blue card in Department, Drug and Variety Stores.

De Long Bob Pins • Hair Pins
Safety Pins • Hooks and Eyes • Snaps • Pins
Hook and Eye Tapes • Sanitary Belts

The Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend: Rudy Vallee, Olga Son Juon, ond Betty Groble stoge a gun bottle with town hoodlums. Sterling Hollowoy ond Danny Jockson ore on the opposing side.

THE BEAUTIFUL BLONDE FROM BASHFUL BEND

Cast: Betty Grable, Cesar Romero, Rudy Vallee, Olga San Juan.
20th Century-Fox

Since she was left an orphan at an early age, Betty Grable's grandpaw taught her to shoot awfully straight, so she could take care of herself. Grandpa's been gone to his reward these many years when you first meet Betty, but she's still shooting. She's jealous of her boy-friend (Cesar Romero) so she aims at him and a lady-friend, but she only succeeds in plugging a right honorable judge in the seat of his right honorable pants. The judge forgives her once, but after it happens again, a week or so later, he's very sore (both ends) and since he's threatening Betty with hanging, she and her pal Conchita (Olga San Juan) make a break for it. Olga swipes some clothes and pocketbooks from, I regret to say, a coffin, and she and Betty catch the first train out of town. Upon examination of their tickets (in one of the stolen purses) they discover they are one Hilda Swandumper and her Indian maid. Hilda's due to arrive in a town called Bashful Bend; she's the new schoolteacher. Now there's no danger of the real Hilda's showing up (alas, poor Hilda) but Betty's not keen on the idea of schoolteaching. Still, she wants to save her skin. She and Olga descend on Bashful Bend, to be greeted by the town's leading citizens (including Rudy Vallee) and a drunken mob run by a man called Basserman. Basserman has two slobbering half-idiot sons, and none of his friends are clean-living prize packages, either. Betty tries to be a good schoolteacher. (Example: "The earth is divided into three kingdoms—animal, vegetable and-er-er-ah-uh—mineral. Now, ain't that something?") Olga doesn't even try to be a good Indian. Every time someone addresses her in pidgin English she grits her teeth and mutters, "How would you like to go suck an egg?" Before the girls get out of Bashful Bend, there's been a wholesale gang war, Betty's subdued the Basserman boys, Rudy Vallee's fallen in love with Betty, Cesar Romero shows up to say he always loved her, and if you think that's all, you're all wet. But this is a movie review, not a book-length novel, so go see this hilarious epic yourself. Words can't describe it, anyway.

THE GREAT DAN PATCH

Cast: Dennis O'Keefe, Gail Russell, Ruth Warrick, Charlotte Greenwood, Henry Hull, John Hoyt.
United Artists

Dan Patch, the greatest trotting horse in history, not only broke all the records there ever were but, according to United Artists, was involved in some pretty romantic goings-on as well. He belonged to an old farmer (Henry Hull) who'd waited all his life for a really fleet horse. When the colt was three years old, Hull had sent him to trainer John Hoyt, and Dan Patch became the first horse ever to run a mile in 2:04 with three weeks' training. Whereupon Hull had a heart attack, and died of excitement. He left Dan Patch to his son, Dennis O'Keefe. O'Keefe had always loved horses, but he's married to a social climber (Ruth Warrick) who's forced him to live in the big city and be somebody. He's made a fortune out of a sulphur process (he's a chemist) and Ruth has spent the fortune on formal gardens, butlers and satin chairs. She's not the girl to go back to the farm, the better to be near Dan Patch. Furthermore, Hoyt's daughter, Gail Russell, is in love with O'Keefe, so Ruth doesn't like O'Keefe hanging around the farm too much, either. O'Keefe conveniently loses his money, splits up with his greedy wife, comes home to Gail and Dan Patch (who by now is the talk of the countryside). This is as harmless as a picture can be. The horses are beautiful, and the era (before the motor car took over) so restful, it's a pleasure.

THAT'S JUST TO REMIND YOU... YOU'RE IN A TOUGH RACKET NOW!

Tough? . . . you've got to be tough with dames like her! Here's dramatic tension that screams from the screen!

ALAN was late in learning that she was the kind of woman who doesn't do anybody any good!

BLAKE knew her . . . "Now we'll make a deal—my way", he said.

DANNY: "You know Tiger, I didn't know they made them as beautiful as you, or as smart, or as hard."

HUNT STROMBERG

presents

LIZABETH SCOTT
DON DE FORE
DAN DURYEA

in

TOO LATE FOR TEARS

with

Arthur Kennedy • Kristine Miller • Barry Kelley

Screenplay by ROY HUGGINS

Produced by HUNT STROMBERG

Directed by BYRON HASKIN

Released thru United Artists

From the shock-packed pages of Roy Huggins' Saturday Evening Post serial story that electrified twelve million readers!

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless, new Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting.

No nicks . . . no bristles . . . no stubbly regrowth. No irritation to normal skin.

Nair keeps legs hair-free longer . . . because it dissolves the hair itself closer to skin.

Have "second look" legs! Get Nair today.

For free sample mail this ad before November 30, 1949, to Dept. 410, Nair, 53 Park Place, New York 8, N. Y.

COSMETIC LOTION
TO REMOVE HAIR SAFELY

79¢ plus tax

For Legs that Delight Use NAIR Tonight

INTERFERENCE

Cast: Victor Mature, Lucille Ball, Lizabeth Scott, Sonny Tufts, Lloyd Nolan.
RKO

Victor Mature is star halfback of the New York Chiefs (played by the Los Angeles Rams). His wife, Lizabeth Scott, is a selfish pig. Wants to be a famous interior decorator, and pours Victor's cash into her chi-chi shop. The fact that she's such a bug for glamor and high sassiety loses Victor a big coaching job at Illinois State, his alma mater. (Some old coot of a head coach is retiring, and Victor's due to be offered the plum, but team-mate Sonny Tufts is elected because old coot doesn't believe Lizabeth is suited to the simple campus life.) Victor's doubly crushed, because it develops he has heart trouble, and he's about washed up as a player. What to do? Wifey won't love a broken-down shoe salesman, and Victor does love that girl. She, meanwhile, is having an affair with a rich, elderly connoisseur named Vollmer. Vollmer collects young women; when he's through with them, they commit suicide. I don't know exactly why. Vollmer lets Lizabeth redecorate his apartment, but he tells her she has no taste and no talent. He's the frank sort. There's a dramatic moment toward the end, where you think Victor's going to go in and play a big game and kill himself (he never told coach Lloyd Nolan about his heart, and he wants to get Lizabeth back) but he's not that much of an idiot. He stops just in time. Lizabeth, given the air by Vollmer, comes weeping back to her husband, anyway, much to the sorrow of Lucille Ball, the football team's secretary, who loves Vic. I don't think Victor and Lizabeth are ever going to be happy together, but RKO does, and it's their picture. (That Mature's a good actor.)

STAMPEDE

Cast: Rod Cameron, Gale Storm, Johnny Mack Brown, Don Castle.
Allied Artists.

The parade of Westerns goes on, Stampede taking its place in line. Rod Cameron and Don Castle are brothers. They own a ranch in Arizona, and their cattle graze on the surrounding countryside. A couple of characters named Stanton and Cox (Donald Curtis and John Eldredge) sell this surrounding countryside (after first cutting it up into lots) to a

(Continued on page 107)

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

We're olways interested in woys to sove you money ond this is o fine woy indeed. Works like this: If you're omong the first 500 people to moil this questionnaire bock, we'll send you o three-month subscription to MODERN SCREEN, obsolutely free! All you hove to do is list the stories you like, the stors you like, ond we'll do the rest. Remember—the September, October, ond November issues ot a 100% saving. Thot is, free!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories did you enjoy the most in our August issue. WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2, ond 3 AT THE RIGHT of your 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

Why Hollywood Prays for Judy (Judy Garland) ☐
The Bachelor Takes a Wife (James Stewart) ☐
Her Eyes Have Told Me So (Elizabeth Taylor) by Hedda Hopper ☐
We Fought to Save Our Marriage by Dick Powell ☐
There's a Great Day Comin' (Doris Day) ☐
John Wayne's Double Life ☐
Hollywood's Tangled Romances (Gardner, Duff, Brady, Granger) ☐
And The Living is Breezy (Dana Andrews) ☐
How Could I Be So Wrong! by Anne Baxter ☐
Huttontots: Care and Feeding of, (Betty Hutton) ☐
I'm No Playboy by Peter Lawford ☐
Was It Love? (Ingrid Bergman) ☐
All That Money Can't Buy (Robert Stack) ☐
Out of His Mind—and Back (Gregory Peck) ☐
Picture of the Month (Girl From Jones Beach) ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the obove did you like LEAST?.....

Whot 3 MALE stors would you like to reod obout in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

Whot 3 FEMALE stors would you like to reod obout in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

Whot MALE stor do you like leost?.....

Whot FEMALE stor do you like leost?.....

My nome is.....

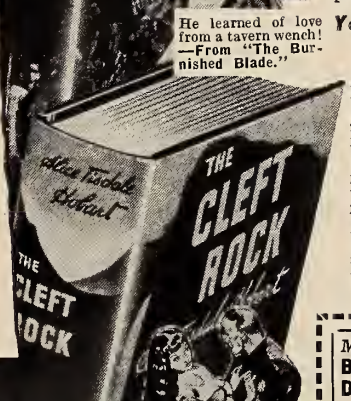
My oddress is.....

City..... Zone..... Stote..... I om ..... yeors old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

HERE'S A BOMBSHELL ANNOUNCEMENT from "AMERICA'S BIGGEST BARGAIN BOOK CLUB"

8 BOOKS FREE!



IF YOU JOIN THE BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA NOW

What shameful secret terrified this girl?—From "The Golden Fury."

He learned of love from a tavern wench! —From "The Burnished Blade."

RACHEL avenged France because of one kiss too many! —From DeMaupassant.

Thousands Have Paid $18 for these 8 Books—But YOU Get Them FREE!

THE GOLDEN FURY, By Marian Castle — Caroline Lawlor tried desperately to forget her scarlet past—yet continued to love the one man who made her remember it! Unforgettable story of passion and greed in a raw Colorado mining town.

WINE OF SATAN, By Laverne Gay—Beautiful Zoe looked up from the floor of the tent into the arrogant eyes of Bohemond, the great warrior of the First Crusade. Could she conceal her love? Or would the handsome Prince force her to betray her vows?

SHANNON'S WAY, By A. J. Cronin. Young Dr. Shannon risked everything to find a cure that meant life to millions. But the only cure for his own heartache was a woman he was forbidden to marry!

THE BURNISHED BLADE, By Lawrence Schoonover. Dashing Pierre learned swordsmanship from a cavalier, manners from a gentle priest, passion from an innkeeper's daughter.

THE CLEFT ROCK, By Alice Tisdale Hobart. Katya's husband denied her his love. But she found happiness in the arms of her black-sheep brother-in-law!

SHORT STORIES OF DEMAUPASSANT—Over 50 of the frankest, most daring stories of their kind ever written!

TALES FROM THE DECAMERON — Boccaccio's lusty tales—about the amorous antics of sinning "saints" and saintly "sinners."

JANE EYRE, By Charlotte Bronte. A passionate love affair between a sophisticated Englishman and a young governess—haunted by a screaming secret.

YES—All 8 of these best-read books are YOURS FREE . . . to prove how much you will enjoy the thrilling love stories and the exciting adventure tales which Book League members receive regularly at trifling cost.

Ordinarily, you would get your Club Bonus Books at the rate of one free with every two Selections (or alternates) purchased. But on this special offer, we send you ALL 6 right away—and IN THE SAME PACKAGE you get 2 MORE best-sellers free, as your new membership gift! EIGHT fine books in advance, worth $18 in publishers' editions. Send coupon for them NOW!

You Choose YOUR OWN Best-Sellers!

You never pay any dues or fees as a Book League member—and every month you get your choice of fine new novels of romance and adventure . . . best-sellers by authors like Steinbeck, Hemingway, Maugham. And although the book you select may cost $3 or more at retail, YOU pay only the Club's bargain price of $1.49, plus few cents shipping charges. Imagine the great savings your membership will mean to you on the twelve novels you take during the year!

You Can Get MORE Free Bonus Books, Too!

Moreover, if you remain in the Club, you CONTINUE to receive free Bonus Books—including not only popular best-sellers, but also masterpieces by writers like Shakespeare, Dumas, Balzac, Poe, etc. These volumes grow into an impressive library which you will be proud to display to others.

No Need to Take Every REGULAR Selection

The best-selling book you receive need NOT be Club's regular Selection. Each month you get without extra charge the Club's "Review," which describes other popular best-sellers; if you prefer one of these to the regular Selection, choose it instead. No membership dues; no further cost or obligation.

Send No Money— JUST MAIL COUPON NOW

Mail coupon today—without money—and you will receive the 8 splendid books described on this page.

You will also receive, as your first Selection, the current best-selling novel now being distributed to members. Then you will understand why this IS "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club"! Mail coupon—without money—now. BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA, Dept. DMG-8, Garden City, N. Y.

Mail Without Money to

BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA
DEPT. DMG-8, GARDEN CITY, N. Y.

Please send me at once—FREE—all eight of the books described on this page (worth $18 in publishers' editions) and enroll me as a member of the Book League. You may start my subscription with the current Selection.

The best-selling book I choose each month may be either the regular Selection or any one of the other popular books described in the Club's monthly "Review." I am to pay only $1.49 (plus a few cents shipping charges) for each monthly book sent to me.

I may cancel my subscription at any time after buying twelve books, or I may continue to take advantage of the Club's book bargains for as much longer as I choose. I will then be entitled to additional Bonus Books—one for each two Selections or alternates I buy. There are no dues for me to pay; no further cost or obligation.

Mr. }
Mrs. } .....
Miss }
Please print plainly

Address.....

Zone No.
City.....(if any).....State.....

Slightly higher in Canada. Address 105 Bond St., Toronto 2

As Hollywood's leading bachelor, Jimmy Stewart didn't even know how to propose. But he tried. And it worked—beautifully!

BY CARL SCHROEDER

the Bachelor takes a wife

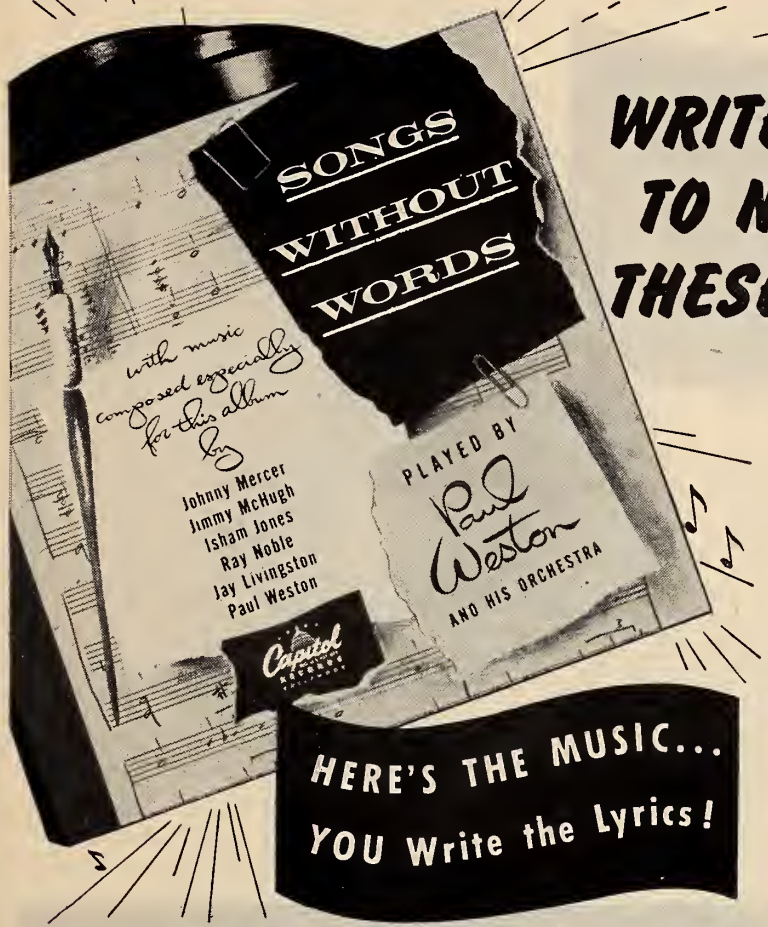
Jimmy Stewart and Glaria McLean take in a Hallywaad night spat saon after the annauncement af their engagement. A little aver a year aga, Jimmy vawed he would remain a bachelar. He'll be married in August.

■ It was not a case of love at first sight.

The way Jimmy Stewart remembers, he first met Gloria McLean at a dinner party at the Gary Coopers. Sort of informal, it was, with the conversation racing along about everything except the subject of marriage. When the evening was over, though, Jimmy came out with a thoughtful statement as Gary saw him to the door.

"Ahh, Miss McLean . . . Very nice girl."

Coop considered his friend's judicious comment and delivered a fulsome reply. He said, "Yep."



This was about a year ago, at which time Jimmy Stewart was not considering marriage. Matter of fact, he seemed to be going in the opposite direction, he thought. He'd disposed of a beautiful piece of property over in Mandeville Canyon and tossed away the plans he'd sketched for a dream house. He moved into a home in Brentwood and was enjoying himself with things as they were—unless you count a certain annoyance with people who liked to speculate audibly in his presence, "Jimmy, you can't stay a bachelor forever. Why don't you find a nice girl and settle down?"

If Jimmy didn't go out, people felt sorry for him, being so lonesome and all. If he had a flock (Continued on page 104)

WIN $6000* and SONGWRITER FAME

*Advances against contract royalties

IN CAPITOL RECORDS CONTEST!

WRITE ORIGINAL WORDS TO NEW MELODIES BY THESE TOP COMPOSERS

JOHNNY MERCER
co-composer of "That Old Black Magic"..."Blues in the Night"

JIMMY McHUGH
co-composer of "I'm in the Mood for Love"..."Don't Blame Me"

ISHAM JONES
co-composer of "I'll See You in My Dreams"..."It Had to Be You"

RAY NOBLE
co-composer of "The Very Thought of You"..."Goodnight, Sweetheart"

LIVINGSTON & EVANS
composers of "To Each His Own"..."Buttons and Bows"

PAUL WESTON
co-composer of "I Should Care"..."Day by Day"

THINK OF IT!

YOU... writing the words to the melodies of internationally famous composers who have made many thousands of dollars with their music.
Here's what you may win: For each winning lyric, you will be offered a regular songwriter contract (SPA form)—and $1000 cash advance against contract royalties. (Winning songs will be recorded by famed Capitol artists and sold nationally!) You stand to make many times more than $1000, if the songs become hits. (Remember, it's possible for you to win more than one prize...even all six!)
PLUS the fact that as a co-writer with one of America's greatest popular composers you'll have made a big step to fame and fortune in a business where the rewards are great.

Never Before A Contest Like This!

Here's your big chance to "team up" with Hollywood's top tunesmiths... become a recognized songwriter. Hear the music...get your official "Songs Without Words" contest entry blanks today, at your favorite record store. NO FEE TO PAY!

DO THIS...NOW!

- Capitol's new "Songs Without Words" album and Official Entry Blanks are available July 1, 1949, at your nearest record dealer.
- Write your own original lyrics to the melodies. All six are simple, singable tunes composed especially for this contest by the famous songwriters listed.
- Write lyrics for only one, or for all six songs. Each lyric will be judged on its individual merits.
- Be sure to submit each song-entry on a separate official "Songs Without Words" contest entry blank.
- All entries will be judged by the Contest Division of Reuben H. Donnelly Corp. in cooperation with the composers of the six melodies and two top lyric writers.

DON'T PUT IT OFF. GET STARTED TODAY. You have as good a chance as anyone to win this contest with a future! For full details get your Official Entry Blank!

ATTENTION!

This contest—sponsored by CAPITOL, one of America's largest record producers—should not be confused with the dozens of "school offers" to make you "a songwriter overnight." Capitol expects to uncover new talent. Remember, it costs you nothing to enter!

FIRST WITH THE HITS FROM HOLLYWOOD

Capitol RECORDS HOLLYWOOD

See Your Record Dealer Today!

Why Hollywood PRAYS for Judy

They're all pulling hard for a great star to come out of the dangerous whirlpool into which life has plunged her.

BY DENISE CARLSON

■ Ten years ago, when Judy Garland was not yet 17, she made a picture called Thoroughbreds Don't Cry. Judy isn't crying now. But there are tears about her in Hollywood—tears and hope.

The tears are not for Judy, the star, because the studio announced it will look elsewhere to fill the star role she was suspended from in Annie Get Your Gun. The tears are for Judy, the person. They come because there is a fear, evident in the voices of all to whom one mentions her name, that she will succumb altogether under the weight of an emotional and physical strain that is already beginning to dull the snap of her coal-dark eyes and draw tight and wan the pertness and fresh bloom the whole world has learned to love.

"If she can't snap out of this, what difference does it make whether she finishes another picture or not?" asks a woman who has worked close to Judy for years. And her words echo those heard everywhere.

"If she can't snap out of it. . . ."

Can she?

Her friends will better be able to tell when Judy completes her treatment in the Eastern sanitarium which, at this writing, she has just entered.

Two summers ago she was advised to take a long rest. Then, too, she went to an Eastern sanitarium, though she was reluctant to leave her baby daughter, Liza, her Vincente Minnelli, her whole life in Hollywood. She returned looking better, telling friends that she had a wonderful new outlook on things.

"I found such peace!" she cried. "I can eat and I want to eat! I can sleep and I never think of a sleeping pill! I feel like a new woman!"

These words were cheering. But the peace that Judy found then, she has since lost, apparently.

During the early shooting of Annie Get Your Gun a few months ago, Judy failed to show up one morning—again. There followed soon afterward an unpublicized suspension which, however, was rescinded within 24 hours. Judy came back to work —and trouble broke out again. She didn't like her director. She didn't like her wardrobe.

As a concession she was given an entirely new wardrobe, and the director remained. But not for long. There were further arguments and, eventually, a new director.

It was expected now that things would go smoothly and the picture would be hurried to completion. (Continued on page 102)

Judy attends o Mocombo opening night with her personol monoger, Corlton Alsop.

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

Always creamy and smooth ... lovely to use!

So effective ... Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle ... Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

Beauty is my business—

AND SWEETHEART IS MY BEAUTY SOAP

say 9 out of 10 Cover Girls!

• We questioned the gorgeous girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year. "What beauty soap do you use?" we asked. And 9 out of 10 replied . . ."SweetHeart Soap."

"I'm devoted to SweetHeart Care!"

says JUDY JENKS, Glamorous Cover Girl

"It gives my skin the radiant freshness of dewy rosebuds . . . leaves it soft and smooth as silk. That's why I can earn $100 a day. Since my complexion is so important to my success, I simply couldn't afford to do without SweetHeart Care."

• And think of the many ways a clear, lovely complexion will pay you in happiness. So like 9 out of 10 cover girls, make pure, mild SweetHeart your beauty soap.

Each day enjoy the benefits of SweetHeart's creamy lather that has a gentle Floating Lift. It's a remarkable beauty action. You'll quickly see results. One week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

• Donna Lee Archibald, 6 months old, makes her bow as a model in a lovely SweetHeart complexion all over! For her mother bathes her with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap. Today get gentle SweetHeart in the new, large bath size, that's so luxurious, so economical!

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

new faces

JOHN IRELAND made such an impression in A Walk In The Sun that he was immediately signed to other, more important roles. The newest of these are in All The King's Men and Anna Lucasta for Columbia Pictures. Before coming to Hollywood, John was well-known on Broadway. He was born in Canada on January 30, 1914, but was educated in New York and got his first acting job with a touring Shakespearean company. John is 6′ 2″ tall, weighs 175 lbs. and has blue eyes and brown hair. He's married and has a small son, John.

MARY JANE SAUNDERS became a movie star with hardly any trouble. Her mother heard that Paramount was looking for a talented little girl to appear with Bob Hope in Sorrowful Jones so she mailed Mary's picture to the studio and Mary got the job. She was born in Pasadena on October 12, 1942 and though her only camera experience had been as a model, she now is slated to become the second Shirley Temple. Mary has light brown hair and eyes and is 41 inches tall, but growing fast. She thinks acting's fine but she'd rather ride a pony or play with her dolls.

LOLA ALBRIGHT'S mother wanted her to become a musician. Lola wanted to become an artist, so they compromised and Lola went into radio—as a typist. She was born in Akron, Ohio, on July 20, 1925 but later moved to Chicago to try her fortune. There she became a model, and photographer Paul Hesse suggested she try Hollywood, where he felt her natural blond hair and blue eyes would be a definite asset. She now has a long term contract with United Artists and you've recently seen her in Champion.

LEO GENN, whom you saw as Dr. Kik in The Snake Pit, left his legal career in 1930 and except for a brief interlude as a war crimes prosecutor during the war, seems to have made his second career his best. Receiving his dramatic training in amateur theatricals, Mr. Genn made his screen debut in 1937. London born on August 9, 1905 he was first seen in this country in Henry V and Mourning Becomes Electra. He's 5′ 11″, weighs 175 lbs., has brown hair and eyes. You can write to him at 20th Century-Fox studios.

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

BARKLEYS OF BROADWAY—"My One and Only Highland Fling" by Buddy Clark-Dinah Shore* (Columbia); Gordon MacRae-Jo Stafford* (Capitol); Freddy Martin (Victor); Lawrence Welk (Mercury).
The Astaire-Rogers album recommended last month, has a little competition here, but Fred and Ginger did the best job.

BEAUTIFUL BLONDE FROM BASHFUL EEND—"Every Time I Meet You" by Margaret Whiting (Capitol), Art Lund (MGM). Title song by Art Lund' (MGM).

IT HAPPENS EVERY SPRING—title song by Margaret Whiting (Capitol), Frank Sinatra (Columbia).
What's happened to Frankie's voice? Some of his old drive and spark is missing. He sounds better on the coupling, Huckle Buck, aided by the Ken Lone Quintet, but he's still no Billy Eckstine, by a mile.

LUCKY STIFF—"Loneliness" by Jerry Wayne (Columbia).

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER—"Baby, It's Cold Outside" by Esther Williams and Ricardo Montalban* (MGM), Margaret Whiting and Johnny Mercer (Capitol), Louis Jordan and Ella Fitzgerald (Decca), Dinah Shore-Buddy Clark (Columbia), Sammy Kaye (Victor).

PORTRAIT OF JENNIE—title song by King Cole* (Capitol), Freddy Martin (Victor).
This isn't really from the picture—just "inspired by it," it says here.

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME—"The Right Girl For Me" by Gordon MacRae* (Capitol), Derry Falligant (MGM), Sammy Kaye (Victor).

TASK FORCE—"If You Could Care" by Freddy Martin (Victor).

POPULAR

SOUTH PACIFIC—original cast album (Columbia).
Terrific competition among the big record companies to sell the songs from the year's No. 1 hit Broadway musical. Nobody will really compete with this Columbia collection starring Mary Martin, Ezio Pinza et al. However, there's a Decca album in which the songs don't suffer at all at the hands of Bing, Danny Kaye, Evelyn Knight and Ella Fitzgerald. The Capitol cuttings have Gordon MacRae, Maggie Whiting and Peggy Lee.

HOT JAZZ AND "BOPULAR"

DUKE ELLINGTON—"Singing In The Rain" (Columbia).
Nice, but not up to ducal standards.

BENNY GOODMAN—"Shishkabop" (Capitol)

GEORGE SHEARING—"September in the Rain"* (MGM).

ART TATUM—"I Got Rhythm" (Brunswick).

GEORGE WALLINGTON—"Knockout"* (De Luxe).
Wallington is the young pianist-arranger who wrote "Lemon Drop" and "Godchild." He has a good, well-recorded boptet here, with vocalist Buddy Stewart.

...dream girl, dream girl... beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl
...hair that gleams and glistens...from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!..Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP! NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S RICH LATHERING CREAM SHAMPOO WITH LANOLIN

for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; 10-oz. economy size $2. Smaller jars and tubes 49¢ and 25¢.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight, if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today!

Only Lustre-Creme has Kay Daumit's magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin. This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

Now! Palmolive's Famous "Beauty Lather" Brings You Something

Thrillingly New!

New Fragrance!
New Charm!
New Allure!

And Doctors Prove Palmolive Soap—Using Nothing But Palmolive—Can Bring Lovelier Complexions!

Millions of women will prefer this "Beauty Lather" Palmolive over all other leading toilet soaps . . . the minute they try it!

And small wonder! For Palmolive's famous "Beauty Lather" has a new, clean, flower-fresh fragrance for new allure, new charm.

And using Palmolive Soap, the way doctors advised, is so effective that all types of skin—young, older, oily—respond to it quickly. Dull, drab skin appears brighter, coarse-looking skin finer. Even tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads—disappear or improve remarkably.

So do as Doctors advised. Stop improper cleansing! Instead, wash your face with Palmolive Soap three times each day, massaging Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather" onto your skin, for sixty seconds each time, to get its full beautifying effect. Then rinse! That's all.

Yes, 36 doctors—leading skin specialists—advised this way for 1285 women, and proved Palmolive can bring lovelier complexions to 2 out of 3 in just 14 days. Get Palmolive Soap and start today!

Get Bath Size Palmolive, too!

Use it in tub or shower. The alluring new fragrance of Palmolive's "Beauty Lather" leaves you even lovelier all over!

ill will isn't good an open letter to montgomery clift

Dear Montgomery Clift:

Early this year, this magazine was bombarded by letters from groups of readers who wanted to be chartered by the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Association as members of Montgomery Clift fan clubs. Knowing what these clubs represent, in terms of value to their communities and to the players they favor, we agreed. Upon request, you also agreed. A large number of Clift clubs came into existence.

Presently we found ourselves receiving troubled letters: "Clift won't write to us . . ."; "We tried to get a statement for the club magazine but he never replied. . . ."; "As club president, I tried to arrange a five-minute interview, but was told it couldn't be done. . . ."

And recently: "We have voted to disband our club. Why should we work hard and spend our money for someone who doesn't appreciate us?" (We'll come to that "spend our money" business in a moment, Mr. Clift.)

If these letters are accurate—and we're afraid they are—we think you are making a serious mistake. Entirely apart from the disappointment you have brought to people who offered their friendly admiration, you may be hurting yourself professionally.

You are a stage actor, accustomed to performing before "live" audiences. In your stage work, if you are as perceptive as we think you are, you can measure the effectiveness of your performance by immediate audience reaction. Now, as a screen player, you perform for invisible, silent millions. How do you propose to evaluate your work? By what the publicists tell you? By seeing your own films? By reading reviews? By box-office profits? All these studies can give you a part of the story, but you'll have to reach the people themselves for any complete understanding of your effectiveness.

That's where the fans come in—and the fan clubs. These young men and women can offer you respect, loyalty and (this may astonish you, Mr. Clift) honest criticism. Further, they associate your name with dozens of worthy causes. Fan clubs, under this magazine's sponsorship, have contributed large amounts of energy and money to such enterprises as CARE, community chest drives, cancer funds and other causes too numerous to mention.

In this situation we are merely interested bystanders. We like you; we like the fan club members. On that basis we'd like to make a perfectly fair suggestion: Ask the older, more established stars about fan clubs. You'll hear some criticism—no organization is perfect. But we know, with certainty, that you'll hear far more praise—and from actors you respect. Your course of action after that should be clear enough.

Ida Kay Nichols

EDITOR

Elizabeth wouldn't say much about her new romance, but she didn't have to. There was a soft, gay look in her eyes that spoke of love . . .

by hedda hopper

her Eyes have told me so!

Liz Taylor met Bill Pawley, Jr. (above), shortly before Glenn Davis (right) returned from Korea. Liz broke her engagement to Glenn and is now engaged to 28-year-old Bill.

In recent months, the public was greatly intrigued by Elizabeth Taylor's romance with Lieutenant Glenn Davis. Then, almost overnight, the picture changed. Davis dropped out of it and a new man, William Pawley, Jr., entered Elizabeth's life. On June 6, her engagement to Pawley was announced. Here, Hedda Hopper tells the story of their sudden, exciting romance—and gives a charming picture of a girl in love trying to keep a lovely "secret."—THE EDITORS.

■ I sat with Elizabeth Taylor in the Taylor home just a few days before her engagement to Bill Pawley, Jr., was announced. "Officially, please say I'm not engaged," said Elizabeth, very officially.

"All right," I agreed, "then officially you're not. . . . By the way, what's that gold watch bracelet on your wrist—a present from Bill?"

Liz's china-blue eyes looked down and her rose-ivory cheeks reddened and swelled in a smile. "It is," she confessed. "How did you ever guess?"

"He has good taste," I told her, "that Bill of yours. In more ways than one, if you follow me."

"Thank you, ma'am," grinned that charming Taylor romancer.

Guessing is sometimes my business in Hollywood—but when I first heard about Elizabeth and Bill I was none too sure that she was in love again. I wasn't at all certain that love was the precise word to use about the hasty heart-throbs of a sweet seventeener, especially one as wrapped up in sighs and liable to sudden flip-flops beneath her bosom as Elizabeth is at this stage of her young life. I'd have called it romance, myself—which even Liz admitted to me was the best tag for her engagement to Lieutenant Glenn Davis, the ex-West Point football flash.

(Continued on page 95)

WE FOUGHT TO SAVE OUR

by Dick Powell

MARRIAGE

I guess June and I were about the happiest couple in Hollywood—until the morning some wise guy said our marriage was skidding . . .

In a delightful scene familiar to all married couples, Dick kisses June hastily before leaving for work.

■ I don't want to sound like a wise guy—but I wish those termite-brained saboteurs who were trying to blow up June's and my marriage just about a year ago would screw on their false faces and come around to see me. You may remember some of the printed stories about how the Powell marriage was falling apart. Well, a year has gone by. We still have, as we had then, one of the happiest marriages anybody could locate..

It's time some actor spoke right out in public and let the people know what a devil of a lot of trouble the idiotic chattering of rumormongers can cause. There are quite a number of marriages around Hollywood that might have survived a little trouble if these worms hadn't chewed away the foundations. Here's the sort of thing I mean:

One morning around six a.m., I woke up and looked for Mrs. Powell. She was gone. Oh yeah, I forgot: Final scenes for Little Women. I put on my robe and clumped downstairs. There was June in the breakfast room, gulping a fast cup of coffee.

I presented her with a smack on the forehead. She looked up with that worried expression she gets sometimes that makes her resemble a pleasant turnip. "Read that!" she exclaimed, handing me the morning gazette.

Four lines in a column read something like this: "What's skidding in the Dick Powell homestead? Too bad, blaa, blaa, et cetera, and blaa."

"I don't like it," June said.

"Some reporter this guy is," I growled. "Last night we were holding hands at the movies, as if we'd just met, and here's this boy smearing around his printer's ink, shoving us right down to the Hall of Justice. Why, I ought to punch him right in the nose."

"Gee," June grinned. "Get madder. Get real sore. Proves you love me on Thursdays." Then she kissed me goodbye, raced out, jumped into her convertible Ford and beat it for Metro.

Right after breakfast, I dialed a number and asked for somebody who'll have to be known as Joe Columnist. He was there, probably loading his typewriter with venom for the next day's blast.

"Joe," I said, "this is that actor, Dick Powell. Joe, I hate to be sensitive and all that rot—but where did you get the notion that the Powells can't stand each other?"

"I dunno, Dick," he replied easily. "I just pick things up."

"All right!" I snapped. "You're supposed to be a friend of mine. You just picked this up and it's wrong! Put it down!"

"Okay, Dick," he said. "Okay, friend. Want me to deny that you're (Continued on page 88)

there's a great DAY comin'

She'd never acted in her life, but that didn't matter. She had taffy-colored hair and a pure white smile—and she knew what to do with a song . . .

BY JACK WADE

■ The Chinese clerk on Grant Avenue handed over the package of lichee nuts to the leggy, freckle-faced girl who was doing San Francisco's Chinatown.

"You a movie star?" he inquired.

"No, sir!" protested the pretty customer. "Not me!"

"You're Doris Day, aren't you?"

"Yes," she admitted.

He nodded wisely. "Then you're a movie star, all right."

Doris Day shouldn't need the Wisdom of the East to tell her she's riding high in the Hollywood heavens. Right now all kinds of wonderful things are popping which should prove that D-Day in Hollywood is here for a young and healthy lady of the same name. Practically every time the clock chimes, fan letters enough to give the postman lumbago are piling in on Doris, saying, "You're terrific!" She's endorsing contract checks from Warner Brothers for movies, from Bob Hope for radio, and from Columbia Records for platters—all of which adds up to over $2000 every Saturday night. She has My Dream Is Yours and It's a Great Feeling to back up the hit she made in Romance on the High Seas. She has stars and producers trailing her to sign contracts for more starring jobs at fancier figures. Wherever she's exposed her friendly grin, pearly pipes and bouncy body, the public's loved that girl. It was Doris' enthusiastic mobbing on her first personal appearance in San Francisco that tipped off the canny Chinese that his blonde young customer was something special.

But when her rise in the world is called to her attention, Doris keeps shaking her taffy-colored head and saying, "Who, me?" (Continued on page 79)

Doris tries to be an hand when her turkeys get hungry. She laves animals—wants to own a ranchful af them sameday.

Bob Hope and Daris head for a broadcast. Dynamic Daris divides her time between radio, recardings and mavies. Her newest: It's a Great Feeling.

JOHN WAYNE'S DOUBLE LIFE

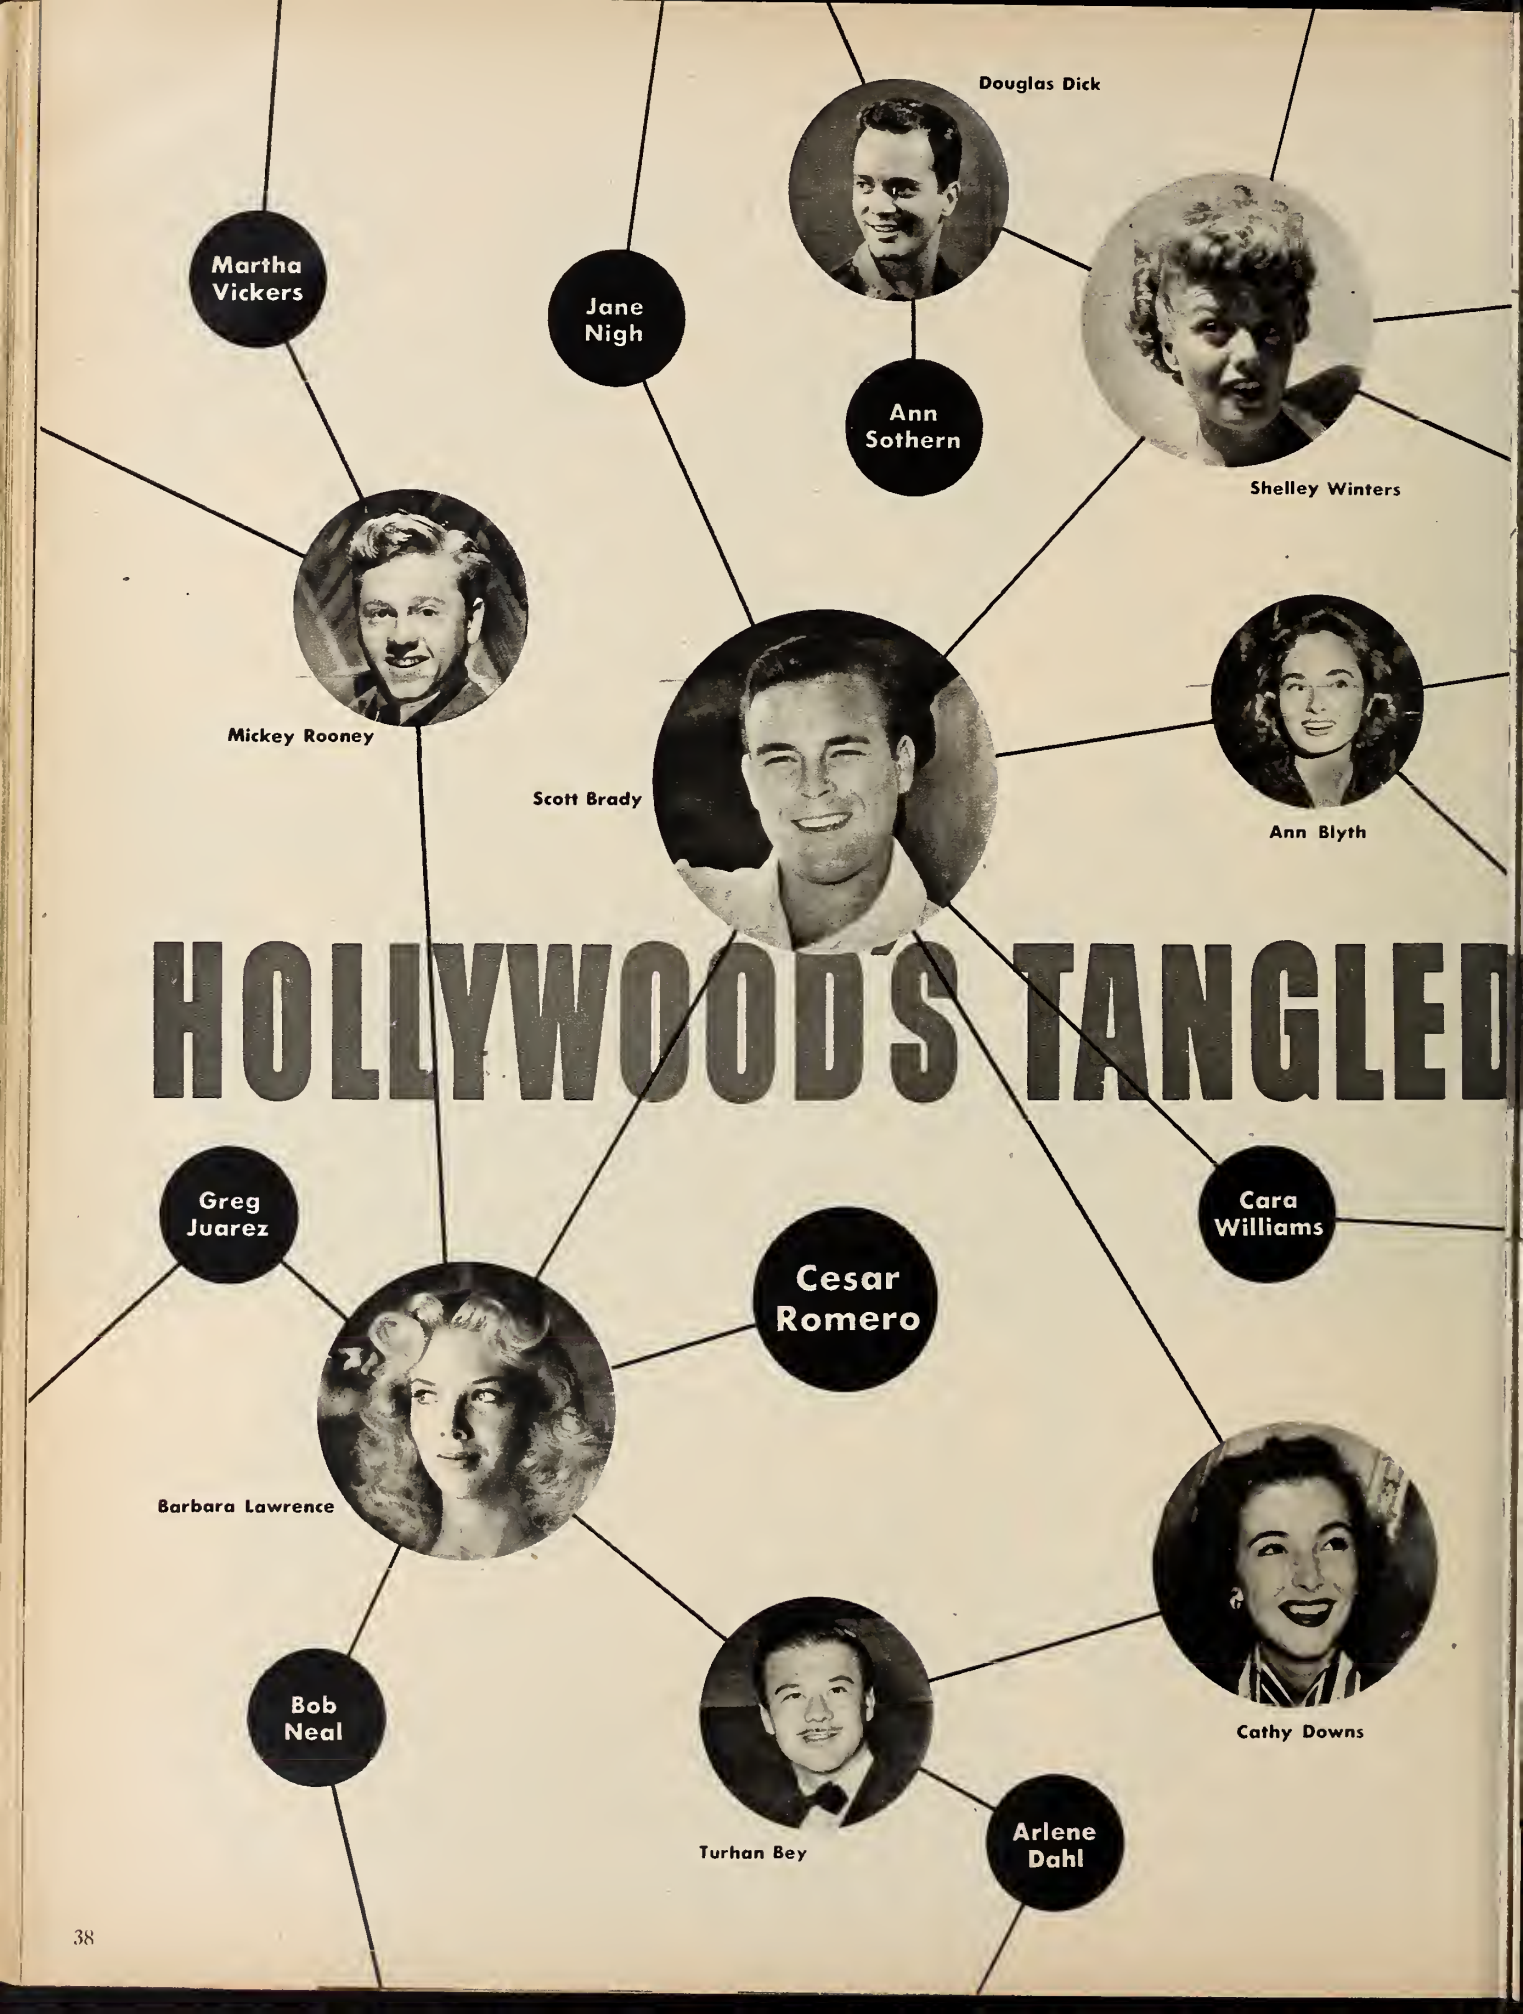
In his 20 yeors in Hollywood, Woyne—here on the set of Strange Caravan—hos been in 143 films.

John and his Chata sunning in the patio of their Van Nuys home. They met in Mexico, after his first marriage ended, and were wed in 1946.

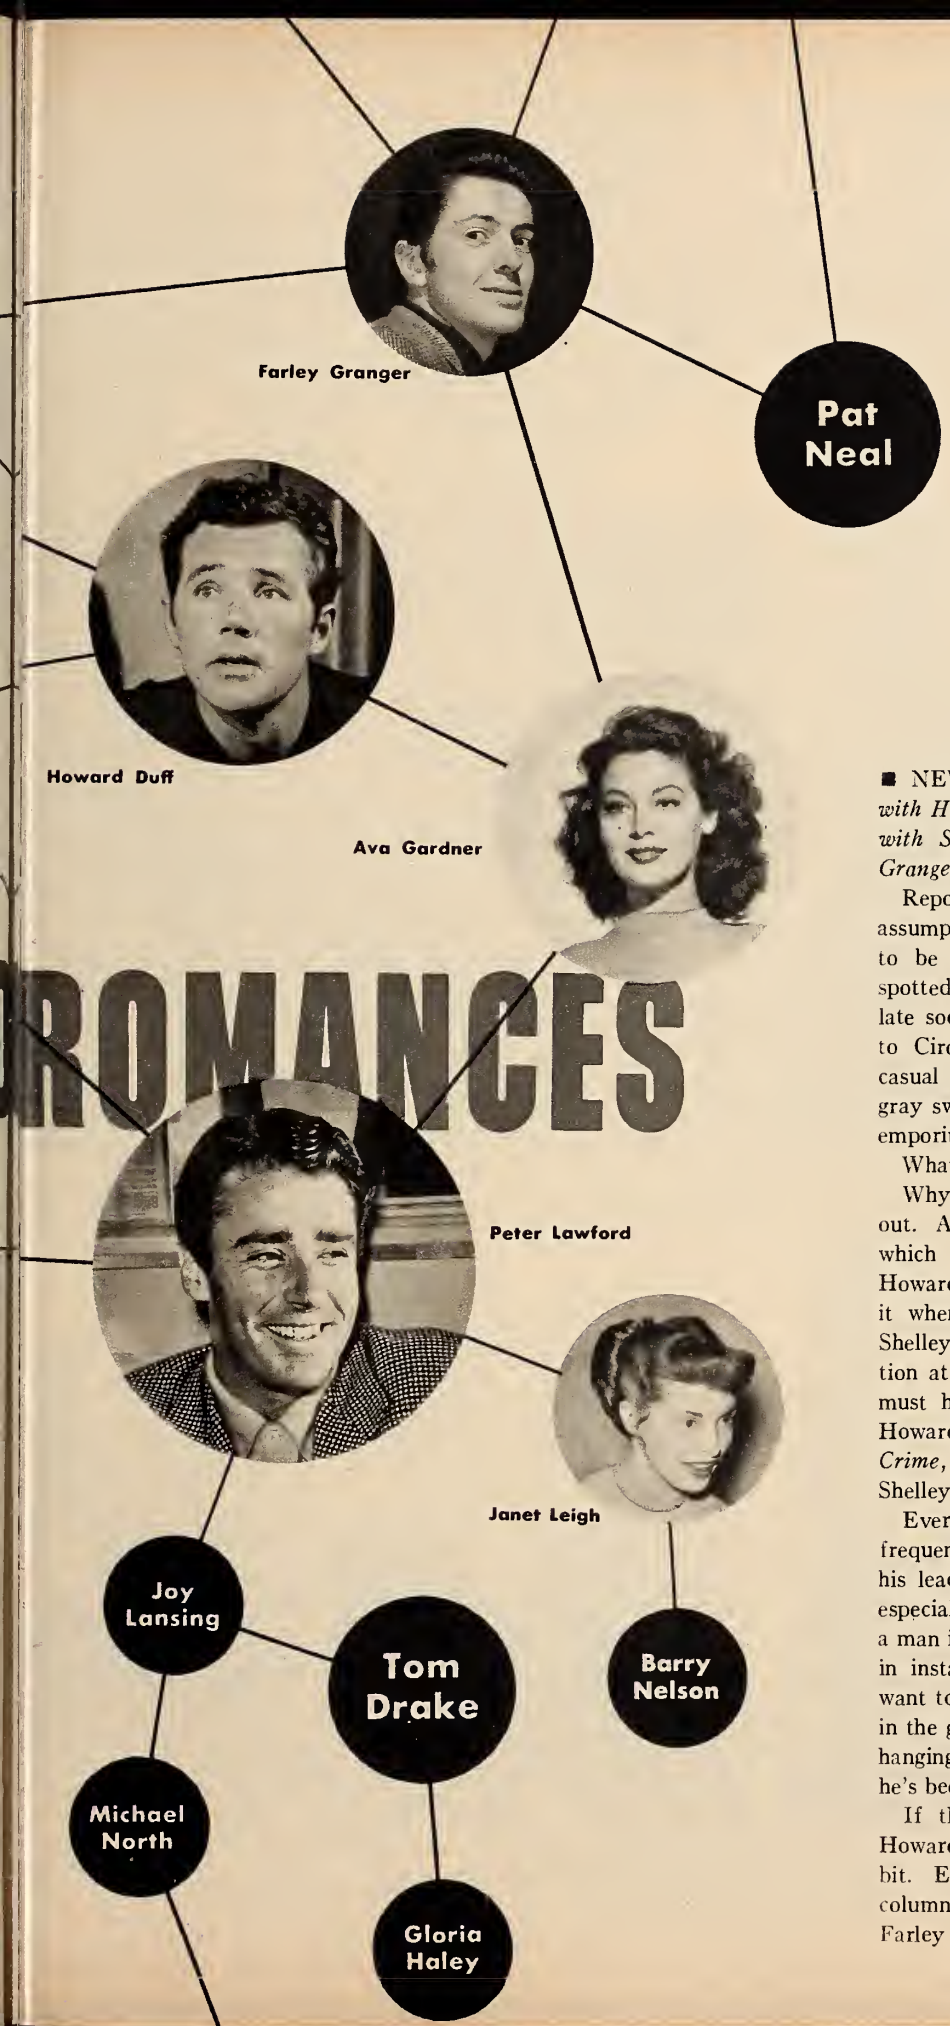
His virile image on the screen is as familiar as sun and wind—yet the real man has remained a silent enigma . . .

By MORGAN MacNEIL

■ A few months ago Betty Grable and Harry James who, next to horses, like movies best, had a night off.



"How about going to a show?" Harry suggested.



"Okay with me," Betty said. "What's playing?"

Harry picked up the local newspaper and glanced at the movie ads. "I may be nuts," he announced after a few minutes, "but the only thing playing in Los Angeles is John Wayne."

"Now, come, Harry," Betty said.

"Honest," Harry insisted. "Just listen to this." He began reading aloud. "In Westwood, they're showing John Wayne in Red River. In Hollywood, they're showing John Wayne in Wake of the Red Witch. In Beverly Hills, they've got John Wayne in Three Godfathers. In Glendale, it's John Wayne in two revivals, Stagecoach and The Long Voyage Home. In Burbank, they're showing John Wayne in Fort Apache. And in Pasadena they're sneaking a preview of John Wayne in She Wore A Yellow Ribbon. . . . I'm telling you, this guy is blanketing Los Angeles." (Continued on page 99)

Douglas Dick
Martha Vickers
Jane Nigh
Ann Sothern
Shelley Winters
Mickey Rooney
Scott Brady
Ann Blyth
HOLLYWOOD'S TANGLED
Greg Juarez
Cesar Romero
Cara Williams
Barbara Lawrence
Cathy Downs
Bob Neal
Turhan Bey
Arlene Dahl

Who's dating in Hollywood—and are they really? Here's a play-by-play account of recently reported romances.

By GEORGE BENJAMIN

■ NEWS ITEM: Ava Gardner has tiffed again with Howard Duff, who is now being seen around with Shelley Winters, while Ava dates Farley Granger, who used to go with Pat Neal.

Reporters have no sooner settled down to the assumption that this is the way things are going to be for awhile when Ava and Howard are spotted strolling into Schwab's drug store for a late soda. That does it. A fella can take a girl to Ciro's or Mocambo and it may be only a casual date, but when they show up in look-alike gray sweaters and bright smiles at the local drug emporium they go together like ham and eggs.

What happened here?

Why, nothing much. Ava and Howard did fall out. Ava promptly went out with Farley Granger, which should have had a crushing effect on Howard. If such were the case, he didn't show it when he stepped out the next evening with Shelley Winters. Outwardly, Ava paid no attention at all to this turn of events. Inwardly, she must have seethed—for, a few days thereafter, Howard left to do location scenes for Partners in Crime, in which his leading lady happens to be Shelley Winters.

Everyone in Hollywood knows that an actor frequently falls more than a little in love with his leading lady during the filming of a picture, especially when location trips are involved. Then a man is away from telephones which can put him in instant touch with his best girl in case they want to make up. Then, too, a man finds himself in the great outdoors often with a great big moon hanging around, to enhance the charms of the girl he's been making love to all day.

If the studio gossip were true, Shelley and Howard weren't going to mind this situation a bit. Except for one thing. At the same time the columnists had Ava Gardner holding hands with Farley Granger, Ava (Continued on page 85)

And the Living is breezy...

The easy informality of the Andrews' home allows the kids a maximum of freedom. Even baby Susan joins Steve and Kathy for meals in the cheerful breakfast-room.

Dana's leather chair in the den is his favorite spot for relaxing with travel books. It's also Kathy and Steve's favorite spot for relaxing with Daddy, and half the time he's submerged by small, sprawling arms and legs.

The Queen Anne dining room in golden oak is Mary's particular joy. On a recent trip to England, she haunted antique shops and braught home some fine finds.

Dana and Mary's bedroom, within earshot of the children's roams, shows a Victorian influence. They often use it as a sitting room when the kids are tucked away for the night. Tiled fireplace is actually used on cool nights.

Mary and Dana gather with Kathy and Stevie for a sing in the living room. The portrait is of Dana's oldest boy, David.

Nine years ago, Dana Andrews began his dream house. Now he has it furnished—with a lovely wife, four rollicking kids, and furniture those kids can't take apart.

BY VIOLA MOORE

■ "You know those hermit crabs that won't go anywhere without taking their houses on their backs?" asks Dana Andrews. "Well, I'm kind of like that. I'm darned if I'll go on location anywhere in the world without taking my household with me."

And that's no gag. When Dana went to England not long ago to make The Forbidden Street with Maureen O'Hara, he took along his wife Mary, two of the children, Kathy and Stevie (his older boy, David, was at boarding school), and Mary's mother and dad. The merry Andrews are a close-knit clan.

Which is plain to see when you drop in at the Andrews' home—the focal spot of their world. One-year-old Susan, the newest member of the family, presides over the happy establishment, which is housed in a roomy, grey stucco structure trimmed with touches of white. A gabled roof looks over a paved courtyard. Sloping lawns are guarded by a high white wall, equipped with an electric gate to insure privacy.

The Andrews' home is no mere showplace, furnished by impersonal decorators: The Andrews have created their own atmosphere. Dark green

And the Living is breezy...

Baby Susan Andrews, here getting her hair brushed, was born January 30, 1948. Her nursery walls are done in deep robin's egg blue, set off by draperies figured with story-book characters.

The clan assembles in the den to discuss new voyages on their ship Vileehi. Except for Susan, all the Andrews (including 16-year-old David, who is away at school) are enthusiastic tars.

In their beautiful living room, Dana and Mary can smile now as they recall the tiny apartment they started married life in nine years ago. Dana has well justified her faith in his future.

walls in their beautiful formal living-room are accented by pastel printed chairs and a bright pink couch under the bay window. Mahogany-panelled walls in the den have been utilized to provide a bookshelf in the same wood. Stately Queen Anne dining-room furniture in golden oak is backed by scenic wallpaper depicting the early days of Boston, Philadelphia, New York and San Francisco. The children are allowed full run of the house, for Mary believes that only by expecting good behavior are you likely to get it.

In the spacious den, leading out of the living-room, the Andrews family gets together for evenings of fun and frolic. With one glance at the room, you can tell they're bound together by their truly fanatic interest in boats—particularly their own two, the Katherine and the Vileehi. Enlarged snapshots of the boats and its three young deck hands line the walls. Six-year-old Kathy, impish-eyed, with heavy Dutch bangs; Stevie, with his belligerent baby chin, and 16-year-old David are shown in assorted nautical poses. Prints of old sailing ships, maps and fishing equipment are scattered about. Dana's navigation books weigh down the oak coffee-table.

By one window, there's an oversized leather chair—in which, supposedly, Dana reads scripts and travel books of an evening. Usually, though, it's a mad scramble of slithering legs and arms as Kathy and Stevie clamber all over him. Slippery leather chairs—particularly if they're occupied by a good-natured father who enjoys rough-housing—seem to have a most magnetic appeal for all such energetic infants.

But the kids' behavior in the dining room is definitely different. Here, where a chandelier composed of six antique lamps glows softly upon her silver coffee service and her Queen Anne tea service on the buffet, slim, blonde Mary insists on manners to match the elegant appointments of the furnishings. The raspberry red carpet quiets the scamper of small feet as they hurry into their appointed chairs.

The Andrews children's sunny bedrooms are off the main hallway upstairs. In a central play-space are their record-player, books, paints and mechanical toys. Mary and Dana's master bedroom is within earshot. It's a restful room with twin beds of dark polished wood covered with quilted spreads of deep rose satin that match the large roses in the wallpaper. An early Victorian mahogany highboy and small tables match Mary's dressing table. The rose-patterned wallpaper is carried right through Mary's dressing room and into the bathroom, whose walls and ceiling are cheery with the same bright design. Flanking the massive fireplace in their room, Mary has placed (Continued on page 105)

Anne Baxter gives a little loving service to husband, John Hodiak. She's in You're My Everything; he's in Malaya.

how could I be so Wrong!

by Anne Baxter

I used to make speeches on who should marry and who shouldn't; on mixing careers and domesticity. Then, three years ago, the unexpected happened . . .

Just the other day—July 7th—Anne Baxter and John Hodiak celebrated their third wedding anniversary. At this appropriate time, MODERN SCREEN is happy to present Anne's revelations of her married life.—THE EDITORS.

■ Once, when I was young, foolish and unmarried, I sounded off recklessly on a certain subject with words which have haunted me ever since.

I said—and right in print—that I'd never marry an actor.

I gave all the old, familiar reasons: Two careers, I argued, were domestic dynamite. Two ambitions could breed only rivalry and unhappiness, sure as shooting. Two incomes were deadly; a man has to be the provider. Two busy lives left no time for married companionship; a wife must be only a wife. And so on. At that point I believed every word I said—but I simply didn't know what I was talking about. (Continued on page 92)

H

HUTTONTOTS,

the care and feeding of

by Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Candy and Lindsay were little angels. But when Betty Hutton left home, their halos slipped and nearly strangled the baby-sitting Churchill girls!

■ What's a Huttontot? Well, if you look in the dictionary you won't find it—it's not there. If it were, it'd be defined this way:

"Huttontot (hĕd′āk), n. 1. One of a small race of offspring belonging to Betty Hutton. Famous for creating havoc and bedevilling baby sitters. 2. Plural, Huttontots. Double trouble."

But we didn't need a dictionary. We found out all about 'em at first-hand. . . .

Everything had started out so gay—so carefree. Just a nice, entertaining home interview with Betty for MODERN SCREEN.

As Betty greeted photographer Bob Beerman and us at the door of her Brentwood house, Lindsay, aged two, and Candy, 11 months, were shyly peeking around her slack-clad legs. It was the nurse's day off, and Betty had wonderful plans to spend her time relaxing with the children.

As Betty talked and we took notes, Lindsay and Candy kept up a steady procession from the nursery to the den. Candy would bring her favorite dolls and tenderly deposit them in our laps, while Lindsay showed up periodically with a book from her growing library.

"Lindsay's the bookworm of the family," explained Betty. "Don't know where she gets it! I'll risk sounding like a boastful mom, which I am, but she can recite over a hundred nursery rhymes without any coaching from (Continued on page 47)

Left, Betty Hutton has an urgent call from Paramount to come right over. But who'll baby-sit with Candy and Lindsay? Well, interviewers Reba and Bonnie Churchill happen to be there, so. . . . Above: "Good luck!" says Betty.

Reba and Bonnie take Lindsay and Candy for a brisk gallop on their rocking horses. The Churchills' first attempt at baby sitting was, to say the least, strenuous—the kids have their mother's energy.

HUTTONTOTS, the care and feeding of Reba ties a hair ribbon for Candy, the baby bombshell, as Lindsay supervises the delicate operation. Later, the small Briskins got around to making mud pies—and asking the Churchills ta eat them.

The Briskins try their hand at their own type af be-bop in the nursery, with Candy at the ivaries and Lindsay an the xylophone. Be-bap or not, the peaceful moment was music to the Churchills' ears.

Lindsay instructs Reba in the fine art of turning somersaults—which the athletic tot mastered at an earlier age. Fundamentally, however, Lindsay's a baokworm—she knows over 100 nursery rhymes.

"Hi-Ho, Churchill," scream the Briskin tats as they ride the living roam range. Play came to an end when Candy decided ta use Bonnie's long hair far reins. "Harsey" is their favarite game with Dàddy.

Outfitted in look-alike bib aprons, Candy and Lindsay have their lunch, prepared according ta Betty's instructions. Lindsay daesn't go for spinach, but Candy does. Both have fine table manners.

Reba tries to convince Candy that it's time to put on sleepers. But the littlest Briskin daesn't like the idea. "Schnooklee" (Candy's nickname) usually wears anything or nothing with equal zest.

Bonnie kneels with Lindsay as she begins her prayers. . . . But afterwards, Reba and Bonnie had to sing to get the little girls to go to sleep.

(Continued from page 45) the audience. And you should hear her sing 'Buttons and Bows'! . . . Some of my friends are sending their kids to nursery school. But I said none of that for Lindsay—she's too smart already."

Betty continued to breeze along. The interview was proceeding as smooth as glass. And then—the phone rang. It was a call that changed our lives.

It was the Paramount studio. They wanted Miss Hutton to come right over. Something important about her latest film, Red Hot and Blue.

"But——but who'll baby sit with the youngsters?" said Betty. "It's Kirchey's—the nurse's—day off. Mother's in Palm Springs. And Ted's at the office."

She waved her hand in a desperate little gesture. She stopped. Her hand paused in mid-air and then slowly pointed a finger in our direction. "You!" she exclaimed. "Of course, you two!"

Looking around as if (Continued on page 101)

Betty and Ted returned home to find two exhausted Churchills collapsed on the nearest bed. "The kids've been giving you the treatment, eh?" said Betty. "That's what we go through every day."

This isn't just a gag shot. Pete spends so much time in the family garden in Brentwood that his mother calls him "Gopher."

Pete has managed to get this close to Noella Ouellette, MGM messenger, only because she hasn't seen the guy first—she'll probably scream when she does.

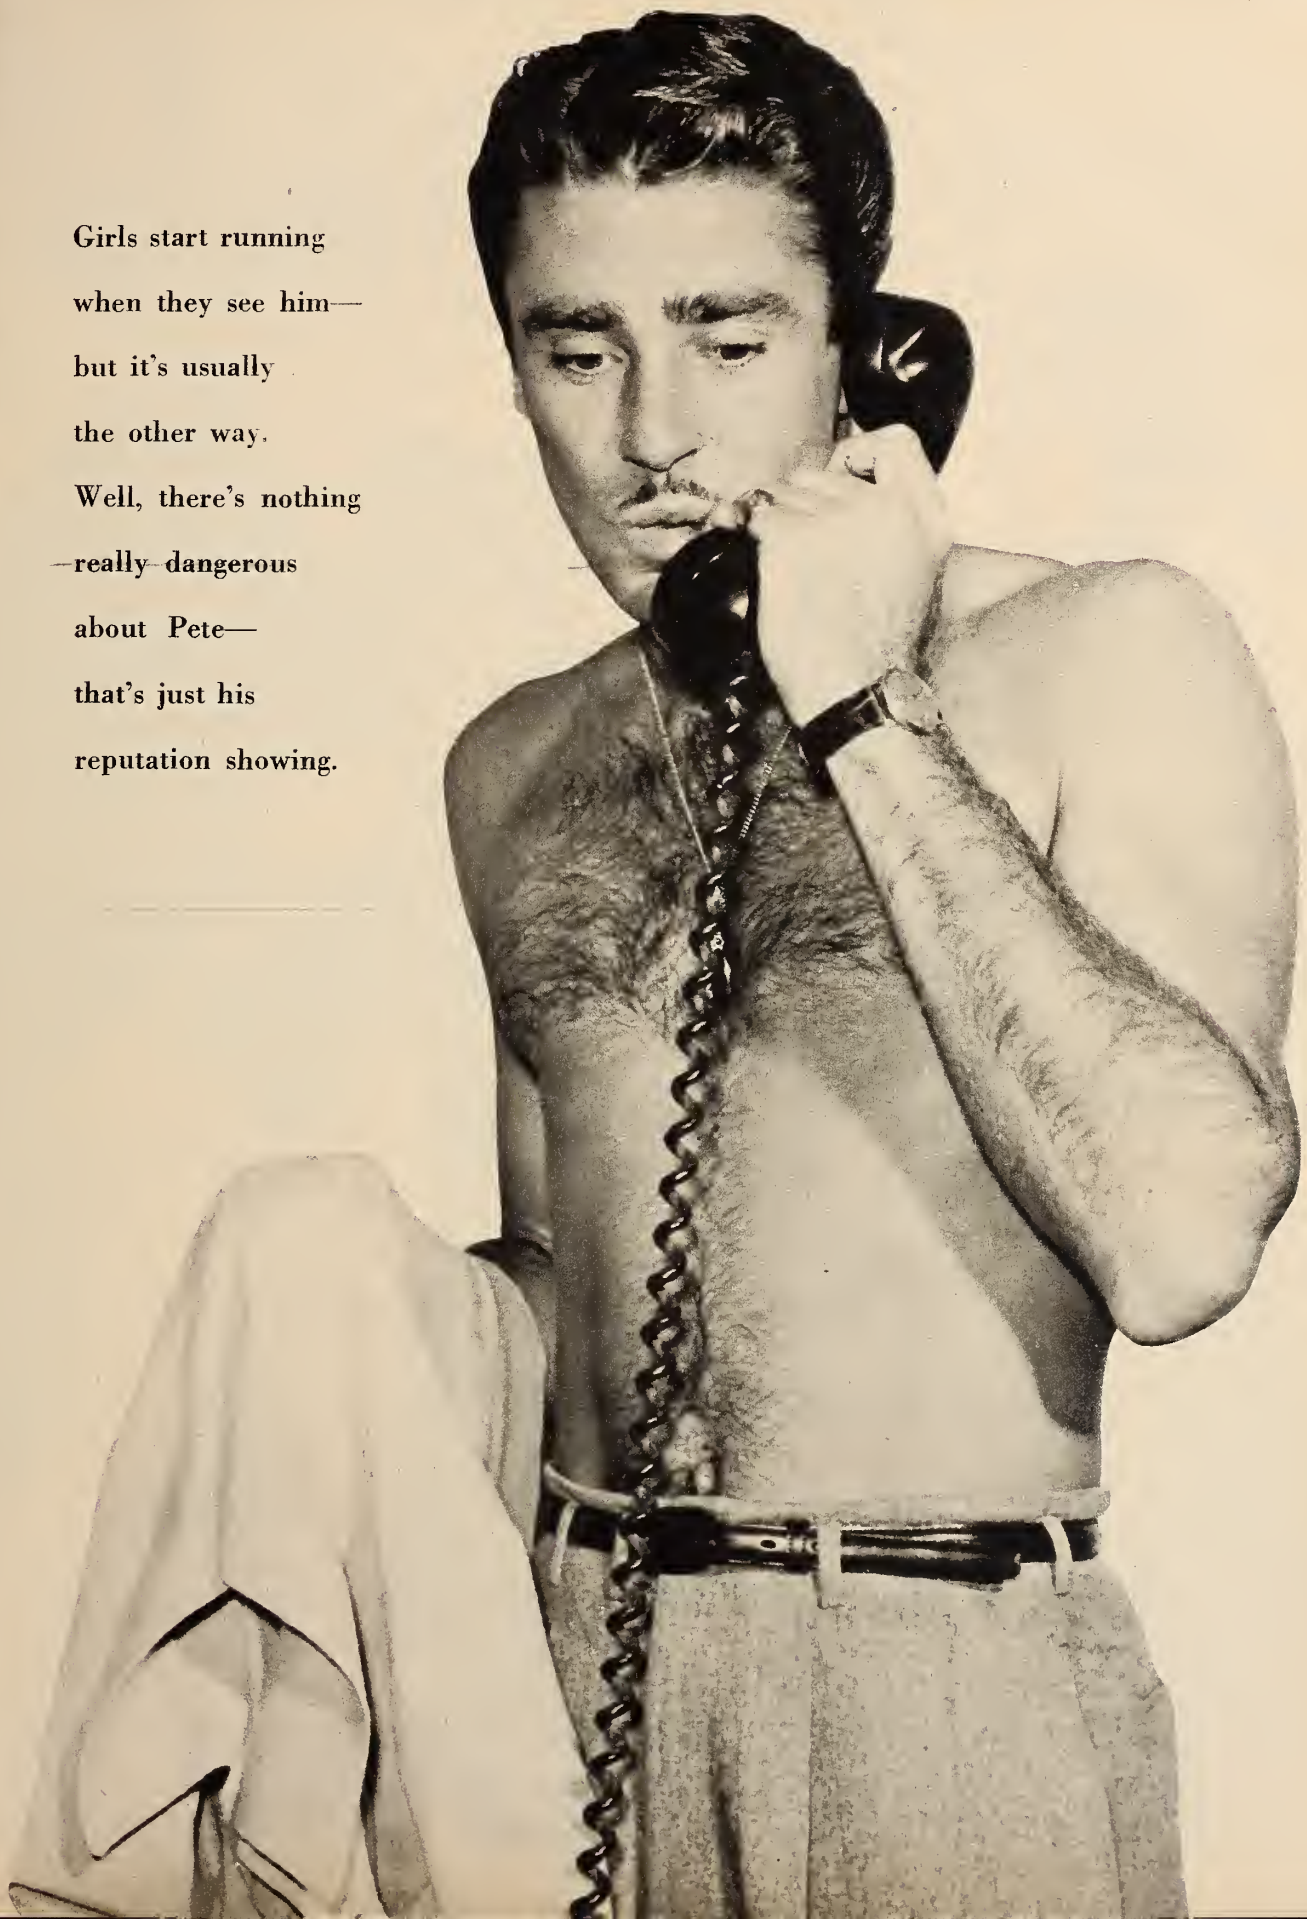
Hedy, the Lawford maid, helps Pete pack up for a vacation in England after he finished The Red Danube.

I'm no PLAYBOY

by Peter Lawford

In "Peter and the Wolf" in the June MODERN SCREEN, it was pointed out that there are two Peter Lawfords—the real Peter and the playboy his publicity has made him out to be. In the following delightful story, Pete tells of some of the awful misunderstandings he's had with girls as a result of his reputation.—THE EDITORS.

■ Was it Bilkie the Bear, or was it Hunky the Hippo, in the old nursery tale, who escaped his cage at a village carnival because he was such a friendly soul and wanted to meet the people at close range and be treated as one of them? Anyway, I don't have to tell you what happened. He got beaned with staves and whiffletrees by the frightened citizenry and ran back to his cage howling for protection.



Well, that's me—Peter the Playboy, so-called.

I want to be friendly. But that reputation . . . whew! Every time I wander off the Hollywood reservation and meet a girl not in the movie colony, the things that happen! If she sticks around at all, she's hostile. If she isn't hostile she's narrow-eyed and watchful. If she isn't that she's a hundred other things—but rarely the pleasant girl she would be had she met anyone else but me.

Take a Saturday a few weeks ago in Laguna Beach. I went there to attend a beach party but arrived without a girl. (Yeah . . . I tried but it was short notice.) There was another fellow there—call him Joe—who also was without a girl. But Joe wasn't worried. He lived in Laguna and was sure he could run into somebody he knew. He even offered to help me get a date—and we went off in my car, recruiting.

How did we do? Well, let's skip our first two tries and go right into the third. We ran into a pretty twosome of blonde loveliness just outside of Carpenter's, the town's unique general store which sells everything from fat men's pants to (Continued on page 64)

Girls start running when they see him—
but it's usually the other way.
Well, there's nothing —really—dangerous about Pete—
that's just his reputation showing.

WAS IT LOVE?

Was Ingrid indiscreet? These exclusive photos from Stromboli tell a fascinating story.

The first complete coverage of the Ingrid Bergman-Roberto Rossellini story to appear in any national magazine was published in the July issue of MODERN SCREEN. Now, in the exclusive series of pictures beginning on this page, we present in graphic detail scenes from the story of Ingrid and Rossellini on Stromboli.—THE EDITORS.

■ The blue sea sweeps toward the rocks, striking, and retreating, and subsiding in twisted garlands of foam upon the endless waves that charge again. At night, when the few inhabitants have put out their lamps and the only sound is the roar of the dark water, the island becomes a place of shadows and mystery. . . .

They call the island Stromboli. It lies to the west above the toe of the Italian boot, like a pebble kicked into the sea. It is 132 miles from Naples on the mainland, 70 from Messina on Sicily, in the cup of the Tyrrhenian sea.

Until April of this year, few Americans had ever heard of Stromboli. But today, millions of Americans know about this strange, volcanic Italian island. It is a place to which an actress went to make a motion picture. The name of the actress is Ingrid Bergman. The name of her director is Roberto Rossellini.

Bergman, who had recently completed Under Capricorn for Warners before meeting Rossellini in Hollywood and going with him to Stromboli, had been to most moviegoers an embodiment of perfection, not only as an actress but as a woman above reproach, whose marriage to Dr. Peter Lindstrom had never been touched by gossip.

Rossellini, although his work has not been well known to American moviegoers, is a director whose reputation, both on the Continent and in the United States, is one of the highest in the profession.

. . . and the waves surge against Stromboli, foaming around the jagged rocks, echoing in the caverns, painting the blue water with a careless brush. . . .

Less than two weeks had passed after the arrival of Like eager children in o strange new land, Ingrid and Rossellini rediscovered the ancient island day by day. Here, Rossellini pushes open the door of on abandoned cottage.

Anxious for her to absorb the atmosphere and to love the bleak country, Rossellini took Ingrid on long rambles. Village youngsters watched them curiously as they passed.

One of the few diversions for Ingrid ond Rossellini was fishing in the Tyrrhenian Sea. They did this between scenes for After The Storm, ond here, too, Rossellini was her director.

WAS IT LOVE?—or the enchantment of an island, silent and lonely and far away . . .

Ingrid, Rossellini, and the RKO company assigned to making After The Storm, before rumors began to appear in the American press. Reports had it that a deep affection had developed between Miss Bergman and Rossellini. Under the spell of the strange, wild island, the two most important figures in the movie company were supposed to have found each other irresistible.

"Romance!" the columnists shouted.

Dr. Lindstrom flew to Italy from Hollywood. Ingrid issued a statement. (She had been bombarded by cables and phone calls from the American press, and the greatest mystery of all had centered around why she refused to deny, point-blank, the various stories in the press.)

Ingrid said, in part: "I have met my husband and we discussed and clarified the situation. . . . Once the film is completed, I shall leave Italy and meet my husband in Sweden or the United States. Beyond this there will be no further statements about our private lives. . . ."

. . . More than just an island, Stromboli is a volcano rising from the sea. Once it boasted a (Continued on page 54)

As a motor boat carries them out to sea where they will shoot an opening scene of the movie, Bergman and Rossellini sit arm-in-arm.

Her face tense and drawn, Ingrid waits to perform. In a little while she'll act the part of Karen, the young fisherman's wife who must make her home on the volcanic island amid alien customs.

After hours of tiring work, rest and refreshment are offered in the shade of a crumbling building. Now the mournful, silent island of Stromboli is suddenly, magically awakened.

Even deep-sea diving doesn't take director Rossellini's mind from the script. Before plunging into the water, he's pushed back his goggle helmet to deliver an opinion on acting technique.

With his diving goggles lying beneath his chin, Mario Vitale relaxes between his plunges. Vitale is the 21-year-old Salerno fisherman whom Rossellini has chosen to play opposite Bergman.

A young Frenchman explains to Ingrid his mysterious appearance on the island. He has come all the way from home just to present Ingrid with a song whose words and music he composed for her.

Ingrid, scenarist Sergio Amidei and Rossellini stand entranced before the door of their cottage. It is one of Stromboli's angry nights and the sky is overspread with a foreboding red glow.

Gently, Rossellini puts tears in Ingrid's eyes as they prepare for a scene. Although his work is little known to U.S. audiences, Rossellini has a high reputation among professional movie-makers.

An assistant shows the scene he's just typed out to Ingrid and Rossellini. Below: Amid the bustling activity, an island woman combs her child's hair, seemingly indifferent to her surroundings.

WAS IT LOVE?

(Continued from page 52) population of 5,000, but the danger of living in the path of frequent eruptions—the most dramatic and memorable were the ones of 1919 and 1930—has gradually driven its dwellers away. Of the 400 souls living there today, at least 300 are natives of the neighboring Lipari Islands, forced to Stromboli by homelessness. For this is one of the few places in the world without a housing problem. Abandoned homesteads, falling into ruin, dot the island. In many of them one can still trace the signs of hurried departure, of flight from the deadly streams of lava. . . . Stromboli is an island of death. In a few years' time, it will be utterly abandoned, its doors gaping, its walls crumbling, a new Pompeii. And the volcano will continue to seethe and rumble and flame, like a baleful and triumphant diety astride the sea. . . .

Was Ingrid indiscreet?

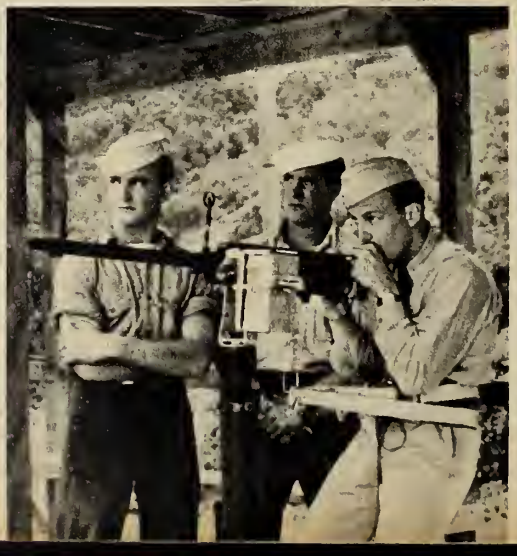
Indiscreet, according to the dictionary, means lacking in caution and prudence. Did Ingrid show caution and prudence with Rossellini on Stromboli?

For a person who must have been aware that her every movement was being observed by the public in all parts of the world, Ingrid showed little caution or prudence. On these pages, MODERN SCREEN presents a remarkable series of pictures—possibly the most remarkable ever to appear in a movie magazine. They tell, with clarity and perception, of the fascinating events that made the island of Stromboli suddenly so important.

Today, for a while, the island of death has awakened as if by a magic touch. In the narrow passages of the abandoned village are voices and footsteps. Faces peep into the deserted houses, the ancient walls echo with songs. But soon Stromboli will once again sink back toward the dim destiny of forgotten things that must, someday, claim it utterly.

Yet there are some questions about it that always will remain—questions concerning two persons whose names, whether they wish it thus or not, will be linked together in history so long as are told great tales of men and women and the strange involvements into which their questing hearts must forever lead them.

Like two figures in a classic drama, Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini face the oncoming storm atop the black rubble of Stromboli. The day's work done, they look forward to tomorrow, unaware that the swirling waters on the rocks beneath may be symbolic of the forces now bearing upon their futures.



Bob Stack couldn't help it if he was born rich, and it wasn't his fault he was handsome. But he had to wage a mighty struggle to overcome those advantages.

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

All that money can't buy

Bab gets set to demonstrate the hard-wan skill that has wan him sa many shaating hanars.

His marksmanship paid aff in the war when, as Ensign Stack, Bab taught gunnery. Previausly, he had been graduated as tap man in his naval training class.

Bab plays tennis (and every ather game he tries) with an almast professianal skill.

For years, rugged Bob Stack has burned when called handsome. That beautiful wave in his hair has been a constant pain to him.

■ On his desk at home Bob Stack keeps the remains of a particularly handsome picture of himself which looks tragically the worse for wear. The edges are mashed, the corners crumpled and torn. The boyish face which this wreckage frames is a debutante's dream for sure. The golden hair is curly, the nose straight, the lashes long, and the lips full. It's the face of a young Adonis—and that's just the trouble.

For the past nine or 10 years, whenever Bob has encountered that photograph face-to-face, he has seized it with his muscular paws and shaken it as a terrier does a rat. "Get older, blast you!" Bob has growled. "Get older, do you hear?"

There's a wave, too—an irritating, rebellious wave on the left side of Bob's forehead that any girl would give the prospect of a mink coat to own. It sweeps, smart and smooth, just the right way to set off his crop of corn-silk and it's made of sturdy stuff. For years Bob has been pressing it flat, wetting it down and plastering it tight, cuffing and combing it out—with no progress whatever. It's still there to make him burn like a bonfire any time anybody calls him (Continued on page 75)

Picture of the Month

the girl from JONES BEACH

■ While it may not wind up among the ten best pictures of the year, Warner Brothers' The Girl From Jones Beach is a shiny, fresh and diverting comedy—nice, light summer entertainment.

If you can't get to the famous Long Island beach yourself on a hot August day, a pleasant substitute will be to watch Virginia Mayo there. Miss Mayo plays a high-minded schoolteacher who resents the fact that men, the beasts, are less interested in her mind than her figger.

The gayly complex plot revolves about the efforts of promoter Eddie Bracken and artist Ronald Reagan to get Virginia on a national television show as Ronald's model. In the course of it, Ronald pretends he's an immigrant and enrolls in one of her night-school classes. Naturally, they fall in love. Virginia, in a sudden feminine shift, begins to worry because he seems interested only in her intellect, not in her good looks. She thereupon sets out to change his attitude. For details on these farcical generalities, see the pictures to your right.

The Girl From Jones Beach has been happily cast. Besides her obvious physical qualifications, Virginia Mayo brings to her role a surprisingly deft talent for comedy. Ronald Reagan, as the artist, is a proper blend of worldly and corn-fed charm. Eddie Bracken is consistently comic as the hungry promoter with a fondness for letting his girl think he's going to commit suicide. As Eddie's girl, Dona Drake disports with her usual pertness.

This movie's like a good soft drink—sparkling, harmless, refreshing. Go see.

1. Impoverished promoter Chuck Donovan (Eddie Bracken) will collect $10,000 if he can sign artist Bob Randolph (Ronald Reagan) and his famed Randolph Girl model to a television contract. Bob refuses, for his creation is a composite of 12 girls.

2. Next morning, in a rowboat off Jones Beach, Chuck spots an in-the-flesh version of the Randolph Girl through field glasses. She disappears before Chuck reaches shore. He calls Bob. They haunt the beach until they find her—Ruth Wilson (Virginia Mayo).

3. Ruth is a teacher who wants to be admired for intellectual rather than physical attributes. Learning that she teaches an evening naturalization class, Bob enrolls so he can get her to pose. When Ruth discovers his identity, she's in love—and doesn't care.

4. Ruth thinks she's loved for her brain—and now doesn't like the idea. Still not realizing just why Bob enrolled, she asks him to meet her at the beach, hoping to end his seeming blindness to her beauty. Meantime Bob decides to call off the hoax and marry her.

5. When Chuck hears the meeting being arranged, he and best girl Connie Martin (Dona Drake) arrive with newspapermen and cameras. The resulting publicity causes Ruth's school board to dismiss her from her position. It also ends her romance with Bob.

6. Ruth takes her dismissal to court where, in a bathing suit, she's exhibit A. Bob comes to her defense and the judge (Henry Travers) upholds her right to teach. After a surprise twist, Ruth and Bob reconcile as Chuck and Connie plan to make it a double wedding.

out of his Mind-and back

Or how Modern Screen's fun-loving photographer found Gregory Peck in Florida.

MEMORANDUM
FROM: Editor, Modern Screen
TO: Managing Editor Hartley
Understand Gregory Peck somewhere in Florida on location for Twelve O'Clock High. Isn't Ike Vern also in Florida now? If so, let's have Vern scoot over to Peck's location to shoot us some pix.

Nichols

IKE VERN
CORAL GABLES
FLORIDA
GREGORY PECK IS AT FORT WALTON FLORIDA, ONLY COUPLE INCHES AWAY FROM YOU ON MAP. CAN YOU SHOOT PICTURE STORY ON WHAT HE DOES WHEN NOT WORKING?
HARTLEY, MODERN SCREEN

WILLIAM HARTLEY
MODERN SCREEN
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HAPPY TO DO PECK COVERAGE. DON'T KNOW WHERE FORT WALTON IS BUT WILL FIND OUT AND LEAVE IMMEDIATELY. WILL REPORT TO YOU FROM THERE.
IKE VERN

IKE VERN
BACON'S BY THE SEA
FORT WALTON, FLORIDA
WHAT'S UP? THREE DAYS WITH NO WORD FROM YOU MAKES ME VERY NERVOUS. HOLDING SPACE IN MAGAZINE FOR PECK STORY.
BILL HARTLEY

(Continued on next page)

Technical adviser Captain J. W. Adams (right), director Henry King (center) and Peck discuss a scene of the wartime film placed in England. The Alabama site was chosen far resemblance ta the English landscape.

Peck and the 20th Century-Fox crew form a chowline far their lunch of peanut butter sandwiches, cheese and lemonade. Peck was flawn to the airfield daily—200 miles fram his motel quarters in Fort Walton, Florida.

A ghost airfield in Alabama served as location for Gregory Peck's new movie, Twelve O'Clock High. Here, Peck waits as the set is made ready.

Gregory Peck went unrecognized during the early part of his stay in Florida. Then he sat under this Tringas Theatre poster and soon was mobbed. Owner Tringas and son are with him.

Peck had to charm the kitten before Betty Bacon would even talk to him. Betty's grandfather owns Bacon's-By-The-Sea, a motel near the Gulf of Mexico where Peck stayed during the filming.

Peck canoes to his "private" beach along the Gulf. There, on days off, he'd forget about the rigorous working schedule that called for him to be up at five and on the go till 7:30 P.M.

Ignoring the view, Peck sits on a buoy and studies his script. (Right) Meditating on the sand, he tries to work out his own reactions to a tensely dramatic scene in Twelve O'Clock High.

Mr. Wade Nichols,
Editor, Modern Screen,
261 Fifth Avenue,
New York City
Dear Nick:

Hartley can read this over your shoulder. Then both of you can drop dead. Nothing about this job was simple except me.

I should have known it when you wired, "It's only a couple inches away on the map." Listen, those two inches took me two days and a night on busses, planes and a hired auto. What map were you looking at?

Finally reached Fort Walton at 2 A.M. Monday, Peck's day off. Hit the hay at 3, slept four hours, then started banging on the door of Peck's little rented cottage.

How a guy can be pleasant at that hour is beyond me. Peck was. I started to apologize, moving around to make myself a shifty target in case he started throwing things.

Then whaddaya think? The guy reverses the field on me by apologizing for sleeping so (Continued on page 84) guaranteed-never-to-turn-green engagement rings. Joe knew the girls and introduced me.

I'M NO PLAYBOY

(Continued from page 48)

There they stood, their eyes taking me in apprehensively, their hands beginning to pluck at themselves nervously, and their nostrils twitching like Bambi smelling the first ominous whiff of the raging forest fire.

"Peter L-L-Lawford?" the nearest one finally managed to respond.

"Yes, that's me," I replied with my best smile. We told them about the party. What fun it ought to be. That we'd love to take them. So—

"Peter Lawford!" gasped the other girl —and I noticed that she was edging away from there. The situation took on a familiar aspect that wasn't at all promising. Maybe I began pressing about this point. After all, it's happened to me before. My car was right at the curb. I pointed to it and suggested that we all get in. Instead, the first girl noticed that her friend was moving off and leaving her. That was too much. With a little cry she turned and followed. Then they broke into a run and actually fled around the corner!

sheep in wolf's clothing . . .

I turned to Joe. He looked annoyed. "I'm sorry," I said, laughing a prop laugh. "Nervous kids, weren't they?"

"Never seen them that nervous before," replied Joe pointedly.

I gave up. "Blame it on me, Joe. But that's the way it is—all too often. You did your part all right. It's just the way I've been tagged. It scares them."

He nodded. "This being the third pair you've chased off, I began to figure that," he said.

"Maybe you better try alone," I suggested humbly. "I won't hold you to your promise. I'm kind of slowing you down."

He looked a little uncomfortable—but resolute. "I hate to do it to you," he said, "but, after all . . . well, you know. There are only so many girls. . . ."

"Yes, I know," I told him. "Go ahead."

He did. I'm sure he got himself a girl and had a wonderful time. I drove back to Brentwood—back home to sit and lick my wounds. . . .

Yes, to be a wolf in sheep's clothing is one thing. But to be just a sheep in sheep's clothing, and still look to others like a wolf—partner, that's rugged! Why, it's getting so that even the girls in the business, who have known me for years are beginning to fall for that playboy talk about me. I'm beginning to feel a certain resistance when I try to make a date. Used to be that the first two lines of dialogue in any phone call I made for a date would run like this:

"Hello, Cynthia? [Obviously, I'm using a prop name.] This is Peter Lawford. How about an evening out?"

"Why, sure, Peter!"

Now my calls run more like this:

"Hello, Cynthia? This is Peter Lawford. How about an evening out?"

"Who? [They don't seem to hear my name as clearly as before, somehow.] Oh, Peter. Tonight? Oh. Well-l-l. . . . I'm sorry, but. . . ."

Remember the polo matches in Beverly Hills this spring? I took a young starlet with whom I've been out often. We were sitting in my car, watching, when I noticed a wasp on her shoulder. I raised my hand and was just putting it around her back to brush off the insect when she sensed the movement.

She exploded my name the next instant. "Peter!"

"B-b-but," I stuttered, "there's a wasp on your back. I was just going to. . . ."

"Peter!"

"Really! A wasp!"

Her eyes got like needles. "I don't mind wasps," she said. "Wasps, I don't mind at all."

Get it? So now there were three of us watching the polo game. And if the game meant nothing to the wasp, it meant less to me from that point on. And as for the girl—well, if you should happen to read this, B————, please believe me. So help me, it WAS a wasp!!

Peter the Playboy! I have started a three-man investigation of how and why this base canard ever got started—that is to say, a two-man, one-woman investigation. Helping are my friend Charlie Dunne and his beautiful wife, Molly. They're pitching in because they were recent witnesses to a demonstration of this Lawforditus Playboyitis that strikes some girls at first flash of me.

We were driving back to Hollywood from San Diego, very tired and very hungry, when we dropped in at a roadside restaurant for dinner. The waitress handed Molly and Charlie their menus and I held out my hand for mine. But at that moment she recognized me and stood frozen —the menu held just beyond my fingertips. I waited, hand extended, but nothing happened. So, to break the spell, I lurched a little from my seat to reach for it. She gave a backward hop and screamed at the same time. Other diners turned around and saw a perfect tableau depicting a man who had obviously tried to make a pass at a girl and was caught in the act.

What made it worse was that many people recognized me and gave vent to some choice comments—none of which they bothered to whisper:

"Yes, that's him, sure. Get the wolf coming out!"

"A fine thing! That's Hollywood for you."

MODERN SCREEN

"Molesting a poor waitress. It's a wonder someone doesn't pop him one!"

I fell back in my seat. I scrooched down throughout the meal, red-faced and dampish about my collar and the small of my back. When Charlie and Molly gave their orders I just mumbled, "the same." But it wasn't the same. What the girl brought me had no more relationship to what I ordered than a stick of licorice has to Yorkshire pudding. But I made no complaints. I knew when I was licked.

Yes, sir, Peter the Playboy—that's me.

good old Edna . . .

You know the old established custom of making a girl walk back from a ride. Well, has anything like that ever occurred in my romantic career? You bet. Only it wasn't the girl who did the walking.

It was at a party on a recent trip to New York. The hostess asked me to be nice to a girl who'd come alone—whom I shall call Edna. I was only too eager. Edna was smart, intelligent and lots of fun. By the time the party broke up we were getting along famously, so of course I asked if I could drive her home. She was delighted. And then I realized that my car was 3,000 miles away in Brentwood. I made a quick canvass of the fellows I knew and one of them obligingly handed over the keys of his car.

It wasn't far, she said. At her direction I started west across town through Times Square. A little later she had me run up on the Westside elevated highway heading north. It wasn't far, she assured me, as we kept going on . . . and on.

"We're coming to the little bridge," she volunteered a little later. "Just over that."

The "little bridge" proved to be that majestic span across the Hudson known as the George Washington Bridge. After that there were miles and miles of "just a little further" before we finally pulled up in front of a neat, suburban-type home in Tenafly, N. J.

"Don't bother to get out," said Edna, leaping to the sidewalk. "It's after midnight and you've got to get all the way back."

"No bother at all, Edna," I naturally replied, squirming out from under the wheel to follow. But the car door was neatly shut on that idea. Edna gave me a smile calculated to make up for the long distance we had come but which fell short by about 20 miles or so. And a few seconds later I was alone—alone in Tenafly, N. J.

I started the car. It moved about four feet, the motor gave three agonized gasps and stopped. I was whirring away at the starter when I noticed the little dingus on the dashboard that describes the gas situation. The needle was way over to one side where I could see a big "E" for empty.

Miles of dark loneliness were ahead of me up the street. Behind was the same. The last gas station I remembered seeing open was back near the Jersey end of the bridge. There was nothing to do but get Edna's help. Maybe I could phone someone to bring out a gallon or two of gas. Or maybe she'd let me siphon that much from the family car. I went to the door and knocked discreetly. There was just silence. I knocked again—louder. This time I thought I heard someone coming. Then her voice came to me in a whisper through the door.

"What is it?"

"It's me, Peter," I whispered back, following her cue.

"What do you want?"

"I've run out of gas."

"Huh!"

There was a touch of scorn in the way she said that which I resented, but I realized I was hardly in the position to resent anything, so I overlooked it.

"If I could just come in and phone someone," I suggested hopefully.

"Oh, no!"

"Or get some gas from your car. . . ."

"Oh, no! Dad would hear you fooling around the garage."

"Well, what if he does? You could explain."

"Oh, no. He'd want to talk to you. He makes it a point of meeting all my boy friends. And then he'd find out."

"Find out what?"

"You know—that you're Peter Lawford."

"Well. . . ." I was puzzled. "What of it?"

"Oh, you know . . ." she said. "Anyone else would be different. But . . . Peter Lawford. I can just hear what he'd say!"

Need I go on? Those weary first four miles which I walked. Those cars that ignored my thumb and whizzed by. The truck driver who finally picked me up, and his roaring laugh when I explained what had happened. How foolish and sickeningly unlike a wolf I felt when he so kindly brought me back to the stalled car and we puttered about transferring gas—while all the time, I'm sure, Edna watched from her window. Good old Edna. I bet she felt like the wisest of the Three Little Pigs.

what's the diff? . . .

You know, not long ago I appealed to Ava Gardner for advice. Ava is a friendly soul, someone you can open up to.

"Oh, you're kidding," she said.

"No. The girls just shy away from me. Or something odd happens," I protested.

"Then disguise yourself. Grow a mustache," she said.

"I beg your pardon," I said stiffly. "I happen to be wearing a mustache at the moment, if you will notice."

"Oh, so you are," Ava answered. "With some men it makes a difference. With you . . . well, you're still Peter Lawford, aren't you?"

I got a notion the other day that in all Hollywood there is probably only one other man who suffers more than I do under the weight of his reputation, and he is Frank Sinatra. Oh, I don't mean as a playboy. I mean the specialized effect on women credited to him. When I think of this I realize that maybe I'm not so bad off.

Frank was driving into town from Palm Springs one afternoon when he saw a sedan ahead of him swerve off the road and pile up on its side in the ditch. He stopped, ran over and clambered up on the car. Pulling at the door, he managed to get it open and then he worked his back under it to keep it that way. Looking inside he saw a pile of luggage which he started throwing out. Then, underneath, he saw a girl tumbled into a heap, her back to him.

"Are you all right in there?" he asked.

"Yes," came a voice and he felt thankful that whoever she was, she had retained consciousness and could probably climb out.

"Good girl," he said. "Just take my hand and I'll pull you up."

She managed to get on her knees and he got a good grip on her arm. But just then she saw his face. "Oh!" she cried. "Oh, Frankie!" And to his great disgust swooned dead away!

At least the girls I meet get away on their own power. I don't have to pick them up.

THE END

With a flick of your finger... the Dial-a-Wave ends guesswork in your home permanent

Her Rayve Wave Number is 14. Find yours on the Dial-a-Wave . . . easy as dialing your radio! It gives you the kind of wave you want . . . for your kind of hair.

Only Rayve...

the new HOME PERMANENT has the Dial-a-Wave that personalizes your wave!

RAYVE REFILL KIT $1

COMPLETE RAYVE KIT $2

Both kits contain the Dial-a-Wave

AND RAYVE IS FASTER, GENTLER, EASIER!

A TWIST OF THE DIAL assures you of professional-looking results. Your Rayve Wave Number shows in a flash how to get the amount of wave you want . . . for your kind of hair. Everything about Rayve is simpler, better. No turban to wear . . . easy picture-booklet directions.

WAVING TIMES ARE UP TO TWICE AS FAST as ordinary home permanents. Yet the improved creme formula is noticeably gentler. You can use Rayve with confidence. It's a Pepsodent product, accepted for advertising in publications of the American Medical Association.

LONG-LASTING—YET SOFTER, MORE NATURAL—No fuzzy ends, no frizz with a personalized Rayve cold wave. Even on the very first day your hair feels satin-soft . . . looks and acts like lovely natural curls. Change to Rayve for a better wave with any plastic curlers you may have.

FROM THE FAMOUS PEPSODENT LABORATORIES

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use...Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the free jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Write to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for your free jar.

how to have the sophisticated look

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ What makes one girl look sophisticated—and another girl look merely pleasant, in exactly the same dress? We think it's how she wears it, what she wears with it, and her general air of confidence.

In this issue we concentrate on sophisticated clothes, sophisticatedly worn. Beginning on the opposite page we show what happens when a smart cotton is made smarter by knowing accessories. On pages 68-69, cast an eye on what you can do with the modern version of a t-shirt—providing you know your way around belts, scarves and jewelry. (Notice also the cropped hairdos—tremendous rage among the fashion models.)

For that unmistakable New York look—see cotton trimmed with velvet on page 70. That's the very latest fabric teamup, and typical of the young woman of Manhattan. And on page 72, marvel at how dashing you half-sizes can look in side buttoned gabardine teamed with checked shoes and bag.

Joan Evans is a young sophisticate in polka pique

■ Joan Evans, the young star currently exhibiting very grown-up acting ability in Samuel Goldwyn's Roseanna McCoy, an RKO Radio release, shows how sophisticated cotton can be.

Her polka pique is smart because of the reverse dots; high fashion because of the shawl collar and soft shoulders; dramatic because of the red belt, which she echoes with matching sandals and a carnation. For mid-summer excitement, try it in navy, red, or green. 12-20.

By Nali-Bee—$7.98.

At Loeser's, Brooklyn
Lit Brothers, Philadelphia
Crowley, Milner, Detroit
Other store information, page 71.

Pique gloves and Whisper nylons by Kayser. Bag by Kadin.
Red sandals by DeLiso Debs.

modern screen fashions

the sophisticated upper half

Very if-you-want-anything-just-whistle. Cotton cardigan with flippant flap pockets. White, yellow, pink, blue, melon, navy. By Garland . . . $3.98

Woman-of-the-world look: the plunge, the shawl collar, the soft shoulder line. Cotton knit in maize, pink, copen, turquoise, black, others. By Shepherd . . . $2.98.

Sleek chic—the cardigan with the non-stop buttons. Started in Paris; madly adopted everywhere. White, maize, grey, pink, aqua or black combed cotton. By Loomtogs . . . $2.98.

belts by Vogue

Sophistication in two colors. Vivid yoke zips high to a closed collar; low to a daring plunge. Red, green, navy or brown yoke on white knitted cotton. By Coral . . . $3.

High-fashion cardigan —the better to show off scatter pins. Ribbe to fit at waist. Combed cotton in white, pink, blue, mint, yellow, others By Old Colony. $2.98

Right: Patch-pocketed cardigan, over matching slipover. Cocoa, chartreuse and white; or navy, red and white; or rose, white and grey. Cardigan, $2.98. Slipover, $1.98. By Helen Harper.

All jewelry by Coro.

for where to buy see page 71

dark velvet on bright cotton

■ Silhouetted against Manhattan's famous Queensboro Bridge, the last word in fabric duos: cotton print and velvet. Very New York, very advance fashion, for now and for fall. Mustard with black; green with rust; pink with green; blue with purple. Sizes 7 to 15. By Nan Scott Jr. About $8.95.
Stern's, New York
Halle Brothers, Cleveland
Meier & Frank, Portland.
Other store information, page 73.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

Reverse polka dot pique dress worn by Joan Evans in the full-color photograph (page 67)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Loeser's, 484 Fulton St., Daytime Dress Shop, 5th Floor

Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Brothers, State & Madison Sts.

Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co., Gratiot Ave., House Frocks, 3rd Floor

New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable, 5th Ave. & 40th St., Cotton Shop, 5th fl.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lit Brothers, 8th & Market Sts., Dixie Cotton Shop, 2nd Floor, Center Bldg.

Pique gloves, $2 and Whisper nylons, $1.95 by Kayser, shown in color photo (page 67)

New York, N. Y.—At all Kayser Shops.

Cotton cardigan with flap pockets (page 68)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St., Misses Sportswear, 3rd fl.

Cotton plunge neckline shirt with shawl collar (page 68)

Atlanta, Ga.—Rich's, Broad & Alabama Sts.

New York, N. Y.—Franklin Simon & Co., 5th Ave. & 38th St., Sportswear Dept., 3rd Floor

Cotton non-stop button cardigan (page 68)

New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St. & Ave. of Americas, Sun and Sand Shop, 3rd Floor

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Gimbel's, 339 6th Ave., Cabana Shop, 3rd Floor.

Cotton two-tone shirt with zip close (page 69)

New York—Russek's, 5th Ave. & 37th St., Sports Shop, 7th Floor

San Francisco, Calif.—Joseph Magnin, Stockton & O'Farrell Sts., All American Sports Shop, 2nd Floor

Cotton patch-pocket cardigan, matching slipover (page 69)

New York, N. Y.—McCreery's, 5th Ave. & 34th St., Blouse Dept., Main Floor

Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop, 10th & G Sts., Sportswear, 3rd Floor, North Bldg.

Cotton cardigan, ribbed at waist (page 69)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's, Washington St., Jr. Sportswear Dept., 4th Floor

New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Deb Sportswear, 3rd Floor

Vogue belts shown on pages 68 and 69

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St. Belts, Street Floor

Jewelry shown on pages 68-74 by Coro

Store list continued on page 73

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

✓ Not a soap, not a cream—cannot leave dulling film!

✓ Quickly, effectively removes dandruff from both hair and scalp!

✓ Gives fragrant, soft-water lather even in hardest water!

✓ Leaves hair lustrously soft, easy to manage—with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or cream shampoos hides its natural lustre with dulling soap film

✓Halo—not a soap, not a cream—contains no sticky oils, nothing to hide your hair's natural lustre with dulling film. Made with a new patented ingredient, Halo brings out glossy, shimmering highlights the very first time you use it! Its delightfully fragrant lather rinses away quickly, completely in any kind of water—needs no lemon or vinegar rinse. For hair that's naturally colorful, lustrously soft, easy to manage—use Halo Shampoo! At any drug or cosmetic counter.

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

side buttons—checked shoes

■ Super-sizzle for the half-size. Side-buttoned gabardine (Paris is crazy for buttons)—side pocket (fashion loves pockets)—plunge neckline, big cuffs.
Worn with pearl lariat to dangle in plunge, plus Twenty-Ones' checked shoes and bag—wow!
Grey, blue, beige, aqua, brown.
Sizes 14½ to 24½.
By Demi-Tasse—about $12.95.
At Loeser's, Brooklyn
Woodward & Lothrop, Washington
Frost Brothers, San Antonio
Shoes and bag at Mary Lewis, N. Y.
Other store information, page 73.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY (Cont.)

Printed cotton dress with velvet trim (page 70)

Cleveland, Ohio—The Halle Bros. Co., 1228 Euclid Ave.

New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 West 42nd St., Jr. Dress Dept., 3rd Floor

Portland, Oregon—Meier & Frank, 621 SW 5th Ave.

San Francisco, Calif.—Davis-Schonwasser, Grant Ave. & Sutter St., Jr. Dress Dept.

Half size side-buttoned gabardine dress (page 72)

Boston, Mass.—E. T. Slattery Co., 154 Tremont St., Casual Dresses, 2nd Floor

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Loeser's, 484 Fulton St., Daytime Dress Shop, 5th Floor

Los Angeles, Calif.—Coulter's, 5600 Wilshire Blvd., Daytime Dresses, 4th fl.

San Antonio, Texas—Frost Bros., 217 E. Houston St., Inexpensive Shop, 4th fl.

Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop, 10th & G Sts., Inexpensive Dresses, 3rd Floor, Main Bldg.

Wichita, Kan.—Walker Bros., 123 N. Main St., Informal Frock Shop, 3rd Floor

Checked shoes by Twenty-Ones, $10.95 and matching checked bag, $10.95, plus tax shown with half size dress (page 72)

New York, N. Y.—Mary Lewis, 746 5th Ave., Shoe Dept. 2nd Floor

Plaid dress with white wings of pique, flared cuffs (page 74)

Order by mail: Florida Fashions, Inc., Sanford, 459, Florida

how to buy
modern screen fashions

buy in person

Go to the store in your city listed in the Where to Buy Directory, ond be sure to go directly to the proper deportment ond floor, which ore olso listed.

To sove even more time, toke olong the Modern Screen photo of the foshion you wont. If you hoven't the poge from the mogozine, be sure to tell the soles girl you sow it in Modern Screen.

If no store in your city is listed, write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.

buy by mail

Order by Check from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Order by Money Order from ony store listed, whether in your city or not.

Order by C. O. D. from ony store listed, whether in your city or not.

It's an "Easy Life" . . . the slipper that makes you feel like a million . . .

Honeybugs®

Butter-soft leather with genuine leather soles. Black, Red, Royal, Blue and Red combination. Sizes 4 to 9 (1/2 sizes) medium widths.

$2.99

Little Miss Honeybugs, sizes 10 to 3 (full sizes) $2.99

At your favorite store, or write to Holiday Casuals — 39th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NO WONDER FOLKS

Make Good Money!

. . . These Exquisite DOEHLA Greeting Cards Sell on Sight!

HERE'S a friendly way to make a fine income, spare-time or full time. Show lovely Doehla Box Assortments of richly decorated All-Occasion Greeting Cards, Christmas Cards, distinctive Stationery, gay Gift Wrappings. Many other Doehla items so exceptionally beautiful that your friends, neighbors, and co-workers will be delighted to give you big orders. NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED — our FREE BOOK shows you easy ways for any beginner to make money! You make up to 50¢ on each $1 box, even more on bonus orders. Mail coupon below—without money—for sample boxes on approval. No obligation. Send coupon NOW. HARRY DOEHLA CO., Studio D-18 Fitchburg, Mass. (If you live west of Rockies—mail coupon to Palo Alto, Calif.)

Mrs. Donald Hance of Bristol, Penn. writes: "A year ago I needed things for my 2 boys; but couldn't afford them. I read ad, sent for samples. The extra money earned paid for more than boys needed. Now saving to help pay for home."

HARRY DOEHLA CO., Studio D-18, Fitchburg, Mass. (or Palo Alto, Calif.)

Send me — for FREE TRIAL—sample boxes on approval, money-making plan, extra-profit bonus offer. Also send FREE BOOK of easy ways for anyone to make money.

Name.....

Address.....

Zone No.

City.....(if any).....State.....

SOPHISTICATED JUNIOR WEARS . . .

white wings – black patent

For the girl with a junior figure—a vivid plaid.
Plus—and this is what makes the difference between a merely nice plaid and a sophisticated one—wide white wings of pique—flaring buttoned cuffs—and the high-fashion touch of a black patent belt.
Red or blue. Sizes 9-15.
By Florida Fashions—$4.98.
For where to buy, see page 73.

ALL THAT MONEY CAN'T BUY

(Continued from page 57)

good-looking or, what's worse, handsome —both of which, of course, Robert Stack definitely is.

If Bob Stack had another item handy, namely the silver spoon he's supposed to have been born with, it would be taking a far worse beating than the offensive photo or the yellow lock. In fact, it might be a sterling sieve, by now, from Bob's angry teeth gnashing it into holes. And a Social Register would be pulpy tatters for sure. For if there's anything that makes Bob Stack bellow like a stuck bull it's that "rich society boy" guff he's been taking ever since he gave Deanna Durbin her first screen kiss in First Love, back in 1939, and found himself smack in the movie spotlight.

start of a legend . . .

At that point, Bob was a babe in arms Hollywood-wise. So when studio press agents ganged up on him for a publicity angle he told the truth and all the truth about himself. Yep, his great, great, great-grandfather or someone back there was one of the first Yankee settlers of Los Angeles. Uh-huh, he guessed his family was in the Blue Book. Money? Well, his dad had left him and his brother Jim a trust fund. Yes, he'd lived abroad as a kid, spoke three languages, had been educated at USC, while there was on the polo team, and had his own string of ponies. Hobbies? Racing boats, speed-planes, guns, horses. Girl friends? He mentioned a few he'd grown up with—Cobina Wright, some Los Angeles society buds.

What came out of that quiz was Robert Stack-the-millionaire-playboy, a blown-up blend of Alfred Vanderbilt, Tommy Manville and the Duke of Windsor—the bemused rich boy toying with a picture career as a whim. That's what they tacked on Stack at the start. After 10 years or more, Bob's still stuck with it—and nothing could be sillier.

The other night, for instance, George Jessel introduced Bob publicly at a Hollywood affair like this: "And now here's the rich man's Errol Flynn, Robert Stack." Bob gritted his even teeth and smiled; he had to. What he'd have liked to have done was say, "How about tying the can to that moth-eaten old wheeze?" But he knew that would only make him a bigger target than ever.

And when a caustic columnist slashed at him recently thus: "It must be tough to be down to your last polo pony and racing boat like poor Bob Stack," all he could do was write a polite note and point out that he didn't have a polo pony and his racing boat was gone, too, and what he'd like at this point was a job making a picture!

Bob has racked up some pretty impressive personal triumphs—such as his championship sport records—which took persistence, determination, work, skill and guts. Yet he's always had to buck the sneer, "Ah, he's a rich guy—it's easy for him." Only people like Bob Stack know —but they can't say it—that a heck of a lot of times being the fair-haired guy makes things twice as tough. There's always that hostile, undeclared dare of "Prove it," and always the crowd is ready, willing and eager to roar, "I told you he was a softie" if ever a foot slips. Bob's had to steel himself to the test time and again to lick that.

One tight moment he'll never forget happened in Hawaii where, as an ensign, he was ordered after his training at Pensacola. (At Pensacola, incidentally, he surmounted the skepticisms all Hollywood stars faced in the war—and graduated top man in his class.) Well, in Hawaii, because of his fame as a rifle champion, Bob was chosen to teach air-to-air machine gunnery on an Island firing range. When he reported to his commanding officer, the c.o. bent a slightly leery eye on the handsome movie face he'd seen on the screen.

"Would you like to go out and shoot a round of skeet this afternoon?" he invited.

Bob broke into a happy grin. "I sure would, Commander," he accepted eagerly. He hadn't held a skeet-gun since leaving home and his hands itched for a good shoot. He supposed it was to be a friendly afternoon of sport. Perhaps they'd heard he was something of a trap shooter and they'd like to compete with him. Not exactly.

When Bob walked on the range he found 50 or so officers standing around, along with the skipper. They handed him a gun and ammunition. Bob looked around the array of brass. They weren't there to shoot with him, but to see if he really was all he was cracked up to be. It was no fun session; it was a test. Bob took the gun and gave the signal. Though out of practice, and taut-nerved under the challenge of "Okay, Mister Hollywood, be terrific"—he was terrific. He shattered 100 clay birds in 100 shots.

forecast:
sunny and warm followed by betty grable on our september cover.
on sale
august 9.

When he was through, his commander said curtly, "You take over here tomorrow. It's your range."

There's a big table in Bob Stack's apartment—out by the garage behind his mother's big Bel-Air house—crowded with enough loving cups to stock a jewelry store. They testify that Robert Stack is one of the real competitive shooting masters of the United States, and that he got that way when he was still a kid.

I can't list them all here, but among his target trophies are some for being Western open skeet champion, All-American skeet team-member, holder of the world's record for long-run skeet shooting, national 20-gauge champion, Southern California skeet champion, open 20-gauge champion, Del Monte pistol champion—and on and on through the years.

You don't buy baubles like that with money or social standing, or a handsome profile. You earn them with steel nerves, patience, and skill.

Naturally, Bob Stack loves guns and when he picks one up you'd think he was fondling a baby. But there's a big difference between just loving something and being a champion in its use. "You know," Bob said to me the other day, "maybe all these trophies and cups are the evidence of a wasted youth. Maybe some of the things I've done seem frivolous. Sometimes, at my ripe old age of 30, they do to me. But they sure didn't when I competed. I gave them everything I had. People can criticize me all they want for riding a sport hobby so hard—that's okay. The only thing that makes me burn is when they say it's easy."

Every shooting trophy he has, Bob pointed out a little indignantly, represents long hours of patient study, learning everything about shooting irons—the science of ballistics, muzzle velocities, range, balance, a hundred bores and actions, the chemical make-up of ammunition, physics. For seven years Bob Stack ate, slept and lived shooting. Most people don't know what he's talking about when he discusses guns. They just say, "It must be fun," or "that sounds lucky," when they read, for instance, that Bob smashed 999 out of 1,000 clay pigeons. They don't know about the patience, practice and sweat—which, incidentally, paid off very practically when his country could use an ace marksman.

It was the same in college days when Bob set his sights on making the polo team at USC. Before he ever swung a mallet, he put in two years of gruelling horsemanship training at Riviera, going through riding, jumping and dressage under the toughest instructor in Southern California. He made the team at 17, and that team won the intercollegiate matches. Bob, the good-looking "rich boy" with his own horses, had to swarm all over the field to keep the respect of his skeptical teammates. He wrecked his knee, banged up both eyes, had a ball flatten his mouth and broke his wrist three times to prove his moxie.

Before that, too, as a high-school kid of 14, Bob teamed with his brother, Jim, and hauled their little speedboat across the Atlantic on a cattle boat to win the International Outboard Motor championship at Venice, Italy. But before he went Bob knew how to take his boat apart and put it together again blindfolded. Not to mention how to give her the gun expertly, in action.

look at the record . . .

"Sure I was lucky to be able to shoot and race and play polo—and believe me I know it," Bob tells you frankly. "I didn't have to sell newspapers to get my start when I was a kid. But," he'll add, "my dad did."

That's true talk and now's as good a time as any to look at how the legend of the elegant young Mr. Stack got started. How, too, Bob shucked the future his family had all picked out for him to take off in what one relative snorted, "that dreadful profession"—meaning acting and the movies.

Bob's dad, James Langford Stack, peddled papers in rough and tumble Chicago, then scrapped his way to a fortune in the advertising business (he thought up many slogans that have become nationally famous) before he married Bob's mother, who was old Los Angeles family from away back. Bob was born in Los Angeles January 13, 1919. When he was a mere nipper of three, a family rift blew up and his mother took him to Europe to live, while his big brother, Jim, stayed in America with his pop.

Bob went to school in Paris, Italy and Switzerland and when his parents patched things up again and he came back to Los Angeles, he couldn't even talk to Jim without an interpreter because he didn't know a word of English—although he could prattle French, Italian and German like a Continental.

snap that story! . . .

No kid ever tried to live down the pretty, rich-boy onus harder than Bob did. His foreign accent drew jibes from American moppets, and his pretty looks got him into fist fights. His dad died in Bob's early teens, leaving him and Jim those trust funds, also a guardian until he was 21—and every time Bob mentioned "my guardian," especially when he was a young man, he knew darned well a lot of people thought he referred to a nurse.

Bob Stack did everything in his power to snap the Fauntleroy story that chased him. He went out for every reckless sport in the book—motorcycles, speedboats, a French racing Talbot. He packed off some summers to a logging camp where he drew the toughest duties, designed to get his goat—and came through.

The others he spent playing perpetual motion on Lake Tahoe, where the family had a summer lodge—swimming, climbing mountains, sailing and roaring his speedboat over that choppy lake. He boxed, worked out on the bars, went all out for every rugged sport he could find—and one look at the whip-muscled body Bob owns today proves he had no cream-puff past.

But he couldn't hide his looks. "I used to oil up with everything I could find in the medicine cabinet to grow a beard and moustache," Bob laughs. "All I got was a chapped face."

Among the things that make Bob grind his back molars resentfully is the fiction that family pull eased him into his Hollywood break. The way I'd heard it myself, rich producer friends of the Stack family had been patting Bob's golden head ever since he was a tot, saying, "Bobbie, my boy, when you grow up, come see me and I'll make you a star." I should have known better; nobody makes anybody a star but the public. But the set-up was deceiving.

Bob's mother has always been mixed up in artistic circles, music and the arts. Bob's uncle by marriage is Richard Bonelli, the Metropolitan Opera star. His grandmother was Mrs. Modini Wood, a pretty famous soprano who sang at La Scala in Italy. Come to think of it, that old Yankee ancestor settler in Los Angeles also built one of the first theaters in the puebla in the 1849 days of the Dons. So neither stars nor Hollywood Big Wheels were strange sights to Bob around the Stack home as he grew up. But if those associations gave him ideas, they didn't hand him any free passes.

Most of the influential Hollywood family friends shooed Bob off his movie ambitions with avuncular frowns. "It's risky and a rat race," they told him. "You're the type for law—it's respectable and dignified." Bob sometimes wonders what kind of an attorney he'd have made.

But if Bob missed his calling, he missed it with his eyes wide open and of his own free will and he's never had a single regret. He crossed his Rubicon when his guardian called him into his office one day around Bob's 21st birthday and said, "Bob, those polo ponies have busted your bank account. You're going to have to earn your own living and you'd better decide how, right now. What is it—law or acting?"

Stack replied by quitting USC and enrolling in the Henry Duffy Acting School to learn his dramatic ABC's. What happened soon after to clinch the career question was nothing connected with family pull. "Just fool luck did that," Bob admits.

He was out listening to Deanna Durbin record a song one day at Universal Studios. When she'd finished her silver notes, Bob, who still lapses now and then into a foreign phrase, exclaimed, "Wunderbar!" —which, of course, is German for "Wonderful!" Producer Joe Pasternak heard him, whipped around, and they jabbered together in German. Joe was looking for a young, handsome and completely-unknown leading man to bring love into Deanna's screen life in her next picture, First Love. He saw what he wanted in Bob—and Bob knew a break when one bit him.

Since First Love, Bob Stack hasn't bothered often to blast the rich boy, playboy, beautiful boy Bob stuff that has buzzed

"No coaching from the audience, please!"

out about him from that beginning ballyhoo. For one thing, he's been too busy trying to dig a foothold as a real actor in what he knows is a mighty tough league. He was rocking along perfectly swell as a hit leading man when Pearl Harbor made some changes in his plans and four years later, more matured but every bit as handsome, he had to start his movie career all over again.

Bob confesses frankly he's mighty fond of Irene Wrightsman, a Los Angeles girl he's known a long, long time. He likes her a lot—no secret about that. But he won't admit anything about wedding bells.

"Listen," Bob explains with that unaffected honesty he owns, "I've got to work for a living, believe it or not, and when I get married—and I'm still hoping—I'll have to support my wife and future family not on any trust fund, but on what one Robert Stack makes. That's why right now I'm interested in getting good enough to make it."

Bob hasn't kicked for a minute—but he has drawn the punkest kind of career luck in Hollywood since he took off his naval senior lieutenant's stripes. He had the part of his life dropped in his lap, playing opposite Barbara Stanwyck in The Other Love. He worked ten days in the picture, came down with what he thought was a bad cold. It turned out to be mononeucleosis, a blood bug pretty common with Army and Navy GI's who saw the Pacific. It took Bob four months to bounce back from that attack. By then, of course, the picture was finished—without Bob Stack.

And Bob bet on the wrong horse when he picked up the reins of his career which the war had snapped. He had contract offers from several studios, but he picked Liberty Films, the independent movie outfit which ace directors Frank Capra and George Stevens started. Bob thought they could teach him more than a bigger lot could and he wanted to get really good this time.

the breaks . . .

Well, unluckily, that combine dissolved at the start of Hollywood's hard times and Bob was stranded. He had a part in A Date With Judy, but it was scarcely up to what he can do and MGM didn't ask him to join the regular studio star squad. It was the same story at Paramount after Miss Tatlock's Millions. After Fighter Squadron, Warner Brothers closed down production for a while, so his option wasn't picked up there either.

That's how it's gone. Yet Bob's fan popularity has zoomed like a jet. Bob Stack won't have any trouble finding jobs. But he means what he says about getting good before he takes any marriage vows. He can't touch that trust fund of his until he's 35—and anyway, it's just about enough to keep the wolf from a bachelor's door.

So, meanwhile, Bob Stack is enjoying life as he always has in an active, masculine way. But not exactly as the moneybags myth would have him—surrounded by million-dollar toys, society belles and buckets of champagne. Bob's very comfortable in the made-over garage guestroom with his guns and sporting gear scattered over some Stack family antiques that his mother slipped in. He drives a good car and doesn't exactly go cold or hungry.

He has plenty of the soft, roomy sports clothes he likes, the fine food he's always appreciated and spending dough enough in his pocket. He has a flock of friends. They're mostly the boys and girls he grew up with around Los Angeles, but he also has a lot of sportsmen friends from hunting, skeets and polo—people like Andy Devine, Walt Disney, Bob Montgomery, Hal Roach and Alex Kerr. Other screen colony buddies are Bill Holden, Glenn Ford, Macdonald Carey and Bill Orr. Since he's a very eligible bachelor, Bob's date book is always black with invitations for this and that.

Bob Stack, six-feet-one-inch and 172 pounds of young, healthy and ambitious manhood, is obviously more than ordinarily blessed with the good things and the gifts of life. But that's no reason why an absurd pampered-playboy label should be pinned to his coattails, bobbing around after him all these years. Maybe it's high time to yank it off and give Bob an overdue break.

It would be appreciated, I'm sure. Although if that ever happened, Bob might feel as did other uniformed Hollywood stars at one time or another during the war.

They all got the chill and distant treatment for weeks and weeks—then, finally, a grudging backhanded compliment from their buddies, something like this: "Say, you're not such a bad guy after all!"

Today, Bob Stack might feel very much like retorting what he often did then: "Well, for Pete's sake—don't act so surprised!" THE END

NOW! TONI HOME PERMANENT TWICE AS EASY—TWICE AS FAST

Which Twin has the Toni? (See answer below)

new SPIN curler

Cuts winding time in half—makes it double-easy!

New exclusive Toni SPIN Curler grips . . . spins . . . locks with a flick of the finger. No rubber bands! All plastic, all-in-one! Nothing to tangle up in your hair! Non-slip grip holds hair-tips securely so even the shortest ends become easy to manage! Easy-spin action—built right in—rolls each curl up in one quick motion! Snaps shut! Assures a better, longer-lasting curl. Winds more hair on each curler. Makes winding twice as easy!

new FASTER process

Gives you the most natural-looking wave ever!

New Photo Method Directions show how Toni waves many types of hair in as little as 30 minutes! No other home permanent waves hair faster yet leaves it so soft and lustrous, so easy to set and style. For the Toni Waving Lotion is the same gentle lotion that has given over 67 million perfect permanents. Try this exciting Toni with new SPIN Curlers and see how quickly you give yourself the most natural-looking wave you've ever had!

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER

New Toni Refill Kit. Guaranteed to give you the most natural-looking wave you've ever had—or your money back! Waves many types of hair in as little as 30 minutes! $1.00

Complete Set of New Toni SPIN Curlers. No more rubber bands. Makes every wave from now on twice as easy. ($2 when bought separately.) $1.29

Both for $2.29

"Now we're both Toni Twins," says Katherine Ring, of Chicago, Ill. "When I saw how easy it was for Kathleene to give herself a Toni with the new SPIN Curlers I decided on a Toni, too!"

Who knows what shampoo is best? Your beautician! Use this 2-to-1 favorite of professional beauticians. Leaves hair misty-soft, dazzling clean, manageable, glowing. Billows of foam instantly even in hard water. No soap film! Rich emulsified Lanolin prevents drying. America's greatest value.

HELENE CURTIS INDUSTRIES, INC.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 14)

important than a great role. Good sportsmanship is one. Then, she told her not to hide away, to go out and see people or plan a vacation trip (which Judy sorely needs).

Judy listened to Hepburn as she has never listened to anyone else. And, until Judy went East to enter a hospital there for rest and treatment, there was not a day that went by that they did not see one another or talk on the telephone.

This is the nicest story I have had to pass along in a long time.

(For the story of Judy's current difficulties, see page 24—ED.)

* * *

The James Masons are so crazy about their baby, Portland, they won't have a baby-sitter. When they go over to the Van Heflins or the Glenn Fords to play poker on Saturday nights, they pack Portland in a basket, surrounded by her feeding formulas, and take her along.

But the funniest sight was when they took baby-in-the-basket to a Beverly movie show. They bought an extra loge seat for the basket, and deposited baby in it. Everything was peachy until Portland woke up in the middle of a dramatic scene and started hollering.

Then, Beverly movie patrons were treated to the odd spectacle of Mr. Mason swinging the basket over his arm and heading outside—where he walked Portland up and down until she calmed down!

* * *

Have you ever wondered what takes place when a happily married couple in Hollywood hear a radio announcer blare out that they are on the verge of getting a divorce?

One night, not so long ago, I happened to be having dinner with Frances and Van Heflin. We had just come back into the playroom, after dinner, and Van switched on the radio. By accident he got a Hollywood gossip program (not mine, natch).

Says this ether gent, "The Van Heflins are on the verge of divorce. Van has been trying to keep their marriage together for months!"

Well, Van looked at Frances—and Frances looked at Van.

If I had expected fireworks, I had another guess coming.

"When are you leaving?" grinned Van to his red-headed wife.

"Oh," she drawled, "in my own sweet time. I've got to pack up the kids!"

"I'll keep the kids," replied Van. "I'm used to them."

"In the meantime," said Frances, "want to get me a long, tall, cold beer? Don't forget, you're the one trying to keep the marriage together!"

Then they threw themselves in each other's arms, laughing helplessly.

They didn't really start getting serious until several hours later when Van's mother and Frances' mother, terribly distressed over the "news" put in long-distance calls.

"That's the sort of thing that breaks your heart about such nonsense," said Van. "Our parents have been so needlessly distressed."

(For the story of another couple who've also been the victims of false reports of divorce, see page 32—ED.)

* * *

Is Jennifer Jones becoming a recluse? Friends in Paris tell me she is. Jennifer, who had been resting in Zurich, Switzerland, at the Grand Hotel Dolder, a charming spot in the mountains, joined David Selznick in Paris. They chose an old hotel for their rendezvous, one of the less fashionable places.

No one saw them. They visited none of the Paris night spots and kept entirely to themselves. They will be married, I am sure, by the time this is printed.

* * *

That's all for now—see you next month!

Dining together at New York's Stork Club, Dick Haymes and Nora Flynn plan to marry as soon as their individual divorces are final. Dick's wife, Joanne Dru, may eventually marry John Ireland.

THERE'S A GREAT DAY COMIN'

(Continued from page 35)

Frankly, Hollywood fame and fortune has socked Doris so hard and so fast that she's dizzy—and Doris Day is a little on the dizzy side anyway, just naturally.

One day when Doris was shooting her first movie, Romance on the High Seas, she trotted on to the set bright and early lugging a suitcase, all set for a trip.

"Sit down, take off your hat and make yourself at home, Doris," suggested Jack Carson. "Where do you think you're going?"

"Rio!" said Doris, enthusiastically. "They said we'd shoot the Rio scenes today, remember? When do we start?"

Jack couldn't believe it. But in a minute he got enough breath back to say, "Look, Honey, I've got news for you: This is Rio —right here on this set."

"Oh," said Doris, definitely deflated.

No starlet was ever more innocent about the scientific do's and don't's of camera drama than Doris. For a few days they even had to walk her up to the chalk marks and say, "Stand here, now, and look this way." But once she got there, nobody worried much about Doris. The director just said, "It's like this," and she caught on the first bounce. "I know what I'd do in about any situation," Doris admits, "and so I do it naturally. If that's acting, that's good." Mike Curtiz, a veteran director if there's one left around Hollywood, sized her up shrewdly the day Al Levy, Doris' agent, trotted her out to Warners. Mike needed a new girl for Romance on the High Seas, and fast—but the right girl. He'd never heard of D. Day, which made things square, because Doris had never heard of him, either. She'd been 'way out of this Hollywood world in a music mist, singing with dance bands.

Mike took a look and liked what he saw. "Can you act?" he asked.

"Heavens, no!" confessed Doris. "Unless you call being a duck in a Mother Goose play at school, acting."

Later on, when Doris had established herself as Mike's pet protégée, she asked him time and again, "Don't you want me to take drama lessons or something and learn to act?" And each time he blew right up. "Do—and you're fired," thundered Mike. "I want you to stay just as you are!"

In Doris Day's life there's been plenty of sunshine, but lots of rain, too. She keeps the sunny side up, her grin working overtime and her queen-sized heart wide open. She meets what comes along head-first and chin-up. It's a pretty happy ending —or, rather, beginning—that's happened to her in Hollywood.

Friendliness sticks out all over Doris' freckled face. Last year, when she was East singing with Frankie Sinatra on the Hit Parade, she took a train between shows to Cincinnati to see her mother and Terry.

SEEING STARS?

Everyone sees stars at one time or another. We see them practically all the time, but we're not qualified—for the $5 bills, that is. They're for the lucky people whose "I Saw It Happen" anecdotes we print. So, if you've ever had an amusing incident happen to you and a movie star, write it down and send it to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. The anecdote must be true and it must be short. Try for one of our $5 bills—we've plenty!

Is there Adventure in your hand?

Is the tip of your middle finger rounded? You're optimistic, daring, not afraid to take chances

THE ADVENTUROUS HAND
One of a series... watch for your hand

Is the space between your ring and little fingers wide when your hand is relaxed?

You love freedom, you're active, pay little heed to criticism

Are the knuckles of your index finger straight? You're quick, impulsive. Your first impressions are usually right

Can your hand be read like a book? Whether you believe it can be or not, your well-groomed fingertips reveal your smart fashion sense. When you use Dura-Gloss, they show you're practical, too. For Dura-Gloss means exciting shades, quick application, long lasting beauty...all yours for 10¢.

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

DURA-GLOSS NAIL POLISH

non-smear remover 10¢ and 25¢...lipstick 25¢

10c

©1949 Lorr Laboratories, Paterson, N. J. Founded by E. T. Reynolds

Prices plus tax

"I dress for a square dance... at 8 o'clock in the morning!"

1. "At work, I feel like a 'best dressed business woman' in my smart black jacket with clear, clean-cut lines above a pumpkin-colored skirt. I add a black belt, an orange silk scarf, and, of course, I rely on gentler, even more effective Odorono Cream . . . because I know it protects me from perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!"

New Odorono Cream brings you an improved new formula in a bright new package. Stays creamy-smooth too . . . even if you leave the cap off for weeks!

2. "At the party, the jacket comes off and my pretty, boat-necked jersey blouse makes its appearance. Highlighted by the gold of my necklace, bracelet and belt buckle, it's perfect with my pretty pumpkin skirt! I'm confident of my charm all evening, too, thanks to new Odorono Cream . . . because I find it gives me the most effective protection I've ever known!"

It never harms fine fabrics, and is so gentle you can use it right after shaving! You'll find it the perfect deodorant!

New Odorono Cream safely stops perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!

(Now in new 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, plus tax)

Time crept up on her and she had to return to New York by plane. She was the only female aboard. One look at the pack of hungry travelling men, and Doris' heart went out for the stewardess. She trotted up and begged, "Let me help," and spent the whole flight hustling trays and coffee.

Her fast break in Hollywood caught Doris short in the clothes department; all she had to her name were a few pairs of slacks and evening drapes, fine for night club singing, but hardly correct for the Vine Street Derby or Romanoff's. On a day off from Romance, Doris trotted into Magnin's and there met up with an unusually friendly, helpful salesgirl, Lee Levine. They hit it off right away. So Dodo said, "I like you and I'm lonesome. Why don't you come and live with me?" Now Lee's her top chum and firmly settled in the new Day home as a regular member of the family.

A girl like that was bound, sooner or later, to make friends and influence people. Especially a girl with the talent drive and ambition with which the good Lord blessed Doris Day.

what's in a name? . . .

Doris was born in Cincinnati on April 3, 1924. They christened her Doris Kappelhoff. It was only when Doris bagged her first singing job with Barney Rapp's band, considerably later on, that her moniker drew complaints. Barney clapped his brow at the "Kappelhoff."

"It means 'churchyard' in German," explained Doris.

"Then put it back where it came from," suggested Barney, "six feet deep. You need a new name."

She took the "Day" from a song in her early repertoire, "Day After Day,"—and it's worked out pretty well. Of course, Dodo gets things like "Day Dream," "Happy Day," "Hey Day" and "D Day" tossed at her right and left, but she thinks they're kind of cute. (Besides, the name's led her to a very healthy Pay Day, so she can't exactly kick.)

But about that Kappelhoff kid: Doris had a prophetic hint of things to come when her mother named her after her own screen star idol, Doris Kenyon. Doris herself grew up worshipping Ginger Rogers—and maybe that's why she grew up to look so much like a young Ginger. Anyway, it was pretty plain from the start that the snub-nosed, round-faced towhead was going to do something besides bake apple-strudel and scrub the front steps.

Her father, a pianist who played with symphonies, gave organ concerts at the cathedral and taught serious music, plunked Doris down on a piano bench, early. But it didn't take. "I didn't like the black keys," sighs Doris, "too gloomy. And I couldn't handle Handel." So she didn't progress much beyond "Chopsticks." After she hookeyed off from practice a few times to bust up some neighborhood ball games, her dad gave up.

Pretty soon he and Alma, Doris' mother, were divorced and the cultural influence waned. Tough times took over then; Doris' mother had to work and Doris, when she wasn't bending over her books at St. Mark's Parochial School, started beating the floorboards at Hessler's Dancing School, with lessons on credit. Even as a kid, she was leggy and loaded with rhythm, and Doris was willing to begin dancing her way through life as soon as possible to pick up a few extra bucks to help the family.

That's how she started out, all right. But, luckily for us cinema customers, the future had other ideas, which it dumped on Doris in rather drastic fashion. Before she hit high school, Doris had worked up some dance dates around town, at church and school affairs, at clubs and such, with a boy partner, Jerry Doherty. They got so good that Alma Kappelhoff and Mrs. Doherty toured their young hopefuls out to California and Hollywood. Fanchon and Marco snapped up Doris and Jerry and toured them around on kiddie stage shows to do their comedy dance routine. By the time she was 13, Doris was a fairly seasoned stage veteran. It looked as if the only thing that could stop her from being an Eleanor Powell some day was a couple of broken legs—which is exactly what she got next.

She was visiting in Hamilton, Ohio, and had gone for a ride with a boy she knew. On the way back, they crossed some gateless railroad tracks a split second before a fast freight high-balled through. The whole front of the car was ripped off and they got dragged a block and a half. Nobody was killed, but both Doris' educated legs snapped like pipestems. It was 15 months before she could walk again. That was goodbye to dancing right there.

But long before Doris was cracked out of her plaster cast, she was planning to take a crack at another life's ambition. Her brother, Paul, had heard her humming around the house and told her she'd been wasting her time tapping her toes. "Ought to sing," he said. As it turned out, Paul had something there. Because the minute Doris put herself in the hands of Grace Raine, a voice teacher who'd started Jane Froman and other songbirds off to fame, Doris started off in the same direction, and on the fly.

About a year later, bandleader Barney Rapp needed a new singer for the Cincinnati nightery he'd bought, "The Sign of the Drum." He called Grace Raine. "Got anyone who's ready for band work, Grace?"

"Yes, I have," she told him right back. "Doris Day." (Only she said, "Doris Kappelhoff." I've told you how Barney changed that pretty quick.)

Doris got the urge to travel as soon as she'd polished off the rough spots in her pipes by working with Barney. Soon she heard news: Bob Crosby could use a girl to sing with the Bobcats up in Chicago. That looked like the spot. Being young and cocky, Day had no complexes about asking for the job. But she used her head, too. She cut a record of "With the Wind and the Rain in Your Hair" and sent it right off to Brother Bob. A wire bounced back, "COME UP RIGHT AWAY." So she was in at the Black Hawk. From then on, Doris has had nothing but Big Time.

She sang for Fred Waring next. Then came Les Brown, New York and a taste of national fame when she waxed "Sentimental Journey" and the GI juke-box bunch ate it up. She was a Number One favorite

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Many of Mel Torme's fans went to see him after his show at the Chase Hotel in St. Louis. I and many other of his fans tried to speak to him all at once, and at the other end of the hotel lobby, another group of people were making more noise. Suddenly, Mel pulled out a little gold whistle, blew it, and the whole lobbyful of people paused to listen and then laugh.

Rosemarie Stroeher
St. Louis, Mo.

Mirror, mirror on the wall . . .
is my hair fairest of them all?

Your hair behaves so beautifully with Rayve Creme Shampoo

Even on shampoo day you'll see the miracle in your own mirror!

Your hair does just what you want it to—when you use wonderful Rayve Creme Shampoo! Rayve leaves your hair silky soft, clean and lustrous—yet so easy to manage!

Here's the secret! Your hair has a natural body that helps keep it in place. The pure lanolin in Rayve is specially blended with other important ingredients to help preserve the natural body of your hair. That's why Rayve makes hair behave beautifully—even right after it's shampooed.

Rayve is not a soap so it can't leave dulling soap film! Rayve billows into rich, active lather that cleans—rinses thoroughly. No flaky dandruff remains. Always use Rayve—the perfect shampoo before and between home permanents.

To make your hair behave beautifully use wonderful Rayve Creme Shampoo. See your hair shimmer with highlights—your curls lie softly obedient—the very day you use Rayve!

In handy tubes or jars at drug and cosmetic counters—costs no more than ordinary shampoos!

Another fine product of Pepsodent far and wide overnight—and what Doris didn't know about the band business she got very busy learning. She stayed with Les Brown three years—although there was time out for a marriage that didn't take.

At 25, Doris is already a two-time loser at marriage. She was 18 when she married Al Jorden, who played with Jimmy Dorsey. She moved right back home to Cincinnati the minute her boy, Terry, was born. Although she was well on her way to being the top-paid girl vocalist in band business, Doris stopped singing to raise a family.

It was only when she couldn't make a go of it with Al Jorden that Doris took up her career ambitions where she'd left off. By then, Terry was pretty hard to tear away from, but he had to be supported, too. His grandmother took over the care and feeding, and back went Doris Day to Les Brown's band.

On swings around the country to the top dance spots, Day went, of course, to the famous Palladium in Hollywood. Every time she got within earshot of a movie studio, Doris got offers to make pictures. But they were never big enough to lure her away from band work. Besides, she tumbled hard for another musician.

In 1946, she married George Weidler (he's Virginia Weidler's brother), who played the sax in Stan Kenton's band.

They'd separated a year after they'd said "I do," without having had much chance to set up the home Doris had dreamed about since she left her old one in Cincinnati. In fact, everything seemed to gang up on the newlywed Weidlers.

They tried to settle in Hollywood—but at that point there was barely room for an extra termite in Hollywood's crowded housing set-up. "We bounced around like golf balls at motels on a 'Four Days and Out' booking," recalls Doris. "A new home twice a week was two too many." They wound up buying a trailer and parking it out by the bean patches on Sepulveda Boulevard. Then George's band job pulled him out of town.

Doris got so depressed sitting around the trailer park alone that she went back to work at the Little Club in New York. The hit she made at that exclusive supper club eventually proved to be the pass for Doris Day, movie star. But it also proved to be a passout for Mrs. Weidler. Songwriters Julie Styne and Sammy Kahn heard Doris sing there and told Mike Curtiz at the psychological moment how good she was. But George Weidler was someplace else all the time—and when she got back west, the spark was dead. She was granted a divorce in Los Angeles last May 31st on grounds of desertion.

But by now, Doris has some everyday homelife and happiness to back up her sudden success, even though it's single blessedness at this writing. When she started clicking and her spot on the payroll looked permanent at Warners, Doris started hunting a house. She searched for a whole year without any luck. Then one day, taking a ride in the San Fernando Valley, she spotted one of those "Open House" signs in Hidden Village, walked in, loved it, and had her down-payment check ready that night.

Today there are cozy French provincial pieces spread around, rugs, draperies, color and warmth in the house. Outside, bulbs are shooting up flowers and there's a new lawn for Terry and the two pups to rip to pieces, with Doris' energetic help when she has a free day. Which seems to be rarely.

But pressed though she is, Doris Day wouldn't have a single thing different—except maybe a California ranch swarming with dogs, horses, chickens and ducks to give Terry and herself more room to romp and play cowboy. She's promised him that paradise someday and he hasn't forgotten. Also, Terry's still plugging for what he considers real success and eminence for his mom. Out on a recent Bob Hope city-to-city radio tour, Doris got lonesome and blue for her boy one night, and called home, hoping to hear him wail, "Oh, Dodo—I miss you so," or something equally sweet and tender.

Demanded Terry, "Hey, Mom, when are you going to make a picture with Roy Rogers, anyway, and get famous?"

Doris Day is counting her blessings night and day, glad she's alive, doing what she's doing and living where she is. "Let the smarties knock Hollywood all they want," she says right out loud. "I've been all over, from Memphis to Saint Joe, and points east and west, and Hollywood's Shangri-La to me."

Which points up the eager accent on youth that Doris Day lives and works by. Shangri-La was the place where you didn't grow old, wasn't it? THE END

"Okay—so we drop the scene where Dagwood gives the neighbor's cat a bath!"

TOBACCO MOUTH
[OFF-COLOR BREATH OFF-COLOR TEETH]

Why take it with you?

New tooth paste with Lusterfoam attacks tobacco stain and off-color breath.

Don't kid yourself about "tobacco mouth"—it's as real as the stain on a chain smoker's fingers!

But your tongue can tell! (You can "taste" an odor.) And your dentist knows when he cleans your teeth. And your friends might notice . . . you know.

But they won't point the finger at you (after you've left the room of course) if you're a regular user of Listerine Tooth Paste. Here's why—

It contains Lusterfoam—a special ingredient that actually foams cleaning and polishing agents over your teeth . . . into the crevices—removes fresh stain before it gets a chance to "set" . . . whisks away that odor-making tobacco debris!

See for yourself how Listerine Tooth Paste with Lusterfoam freshens your mouth and your breath! Get a tube and make sure that wherever you go—you won't take "tobacco mouth" with you!

TOBACCO MOUTH ...give it the "brush-off" with

"Feel that Lusterfoam work!"

Your letters . . .

ABOUT M.S.'s SALUTE TO YOUTH

Dear Editor: Reading your "Salute To Youth" issue recalled the pleasure I used to get, going through the old High School annual and checking over the familiar faces. I got a great kick out of catching up with the latest doings of some of the gang I haven't been able to see in months—you lose touch when you're working night and day. I'd like to thank writer Lou Pollock, too, for the encouraging words he wrote about me in his "Meet the '49ers." The Brady dream is off to a good start.

SCOTT BRADY, HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor: I was in Florida making Twelve O'Clock High when the June Modern Screen came out. I beamed all over the little drug store in Valparaiso when I read "Baby Face"—an account of the face that has given me a prolonged juvenile life on the screen and off. Nothing can be quite so disastrous to the ego as to feel you're fully grown and then have someone yell, "Hey, Sonny." Your writer, Carl Schroeder, didn't yell "Sonny" when he interviewed me. He just laughed with a certain understanding—and he doesn't look as old as he feels, himself!

ROBERT ARTHUR, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Dear Editor: Your brilliant Liz Taylor cover stopped me on my way to the MGM soda fountain, and right quick I plunked down my fifteen cents. My college pal, Marge Hiers, will certainly get a thrill out of our joint picture layout. My first impulse was to call her long distance and tell her to buy a copy, but knowing Marge as I do, I figured she already had it on her lap. Thanks for both of us for our story, "There's No Place Like Hollywood," and congratulations on a wonderful issue.

JANET LEIGH, HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor: . . . I'd never miss reading Modern Screen but I think you deserve a scolding for overlooking Douglas Dick in your "Salute To Youth" issue. . . .

ROBERT JEAN, WELLS BEACH, MAINE

Dear Editor: . . . You didn't mention a single word about one of the most popular young actors, Lon McCallister. . . .

PAT BLAKERY, BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

Dear Editor: . . . How could you ever have ignored Michael Kirby in your "Salute To Youth" issue? . . .

BARBARA PARKES, LIVINGSTON, N. J.

(We might have known this would happen. There are so many promising young players in Hollywood, we couldn't have hoped to include them all in one issue. We apologize if we've overlooked one of your favorites—it was purely unintentional.—The Editors.)

Dear Editor: I want to tell you how much I enjoyed your "Salute To Youth" issue. You not only covered all the best young actors in Hollywood, but you devoted a whole magazine to them—that was a pretty wonderful idea.

ROSALYN BROOKS, NEW YORK CITY

Dear Editor: Thanks so much for the June issue of Modern Screen. I think it's about time the fan magazines paid some attention to the newer people in Hollywood. Hedda Hopper's "Make Way For Youth" sure hit the spot.

LANE BROWNING, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

TRAVEL TRAILWAYS

For the Vacation TIME OF YOUR LIFE

VISIT AMERICA'S FAVORITE PLEASURE AND PLAYGROUNDS WITH TRAILWAYS LOW FARES . . . See more for less while enjoying such TRAILWAYS features as sightseeing at scenery-level from a soft-cushioned reclining seat; the pleasant informality and fun of making new friends; or the wonderful satisfaction of contentedly resting the miles away while an expert TRAILWAYS driver brings the big, safety-colored bus smoothly to your destination.

The fare chart below shows a few examples of how little it costs to travel by TRAILWAYS. Similar low fares are in effect to all points on TRAILWAYS great nationwide network of famous routes.

For complete information on fares, schedules, tours and charters, consult the phone book for your friendly local TRAILWAYS Agent or write Department 19-D, NATIONAL TRAILWAYS BUS SYSTEM, 185 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago 1, Illinois.

BETWEEN → AND ↓	BOSTON	CHICAGO	DENVER	NEW ORLEANS	PORTLAND	WASHINGTON, D. C.
ATLANTA	$18.90	$12.30	$25.05	$ 8.25	$48.90	$11.80
CHARLOTTE	14.85	13.60	27.75	13.00	49.50	7.60
DALLAS	27.75	17.05	16.00	9.45	39.20	21.40
MIAMI	25.75	22.35	34.80	14.40	56.05	18.35
NEW YORK	4.15	13.60	31.35	22.15	49.80	4.05
SAN FRANCISCO	52.60	36.85	20.15	34.40	10.25	47.45

Trailways Serves the Nation at "Scenery Level"

Hurry, while they last! Get your beautiful copy of TRAILWAYS famous VACATION-AND-PLAY U. S. A. map. 3 ft. x 2 ft., brilliant, colorful, perfect for framing. Only 25¢ with coupon below.

National Trailways Bus System
185 N. Wabash Ave., Dept. 19-D, Chicago 1, Ill.

Please send me large (for framing) map and/or FREE information, as checked.

☐ I enclose 25c. Send Vacation-and-Play U.S.A. (map)
☐ Additional Information on TRAILWAYS
☐ TRAILWAYS Pleasure Planned TOURS

Name (Please print) _____

Address _____

City & Zone _____ State _____

OUT OF HIS MIND AND BACK

(Continued from page 62)

late! SLEEPING LATE! he says. If seven A.M. is sleeping late, you take his contract!

"Usually get up at five," Peck says.

We ate in the dining lodge. It's fixed up to look rustic. So is his appetite, as follows: orange juice, eggs (scrambled, soft), toast, two cups of coffee and grits. ("Great stuff, grits," he says, "sticks to your ribs.")

Over coffee, I explain I'm going to tail him for a couple of days—just show what he really does. I expected a squawk. Peck didn't even mutter, although he certainly must have known I'd use up all of his free time.

"What do you do on days off like this?" I asked him.

"Take a canoe. Paddle to that beach over yonder."

"Let's go," I said.

We borrowed a canoe, and went to what Peck called his private beach. This was a beautiful stretch of stuff on the Gulf of Mexico.

I took some shots of Peck on the beach, and also trying his luck with a fishing pole. He didn't catch anything. That's always the way when you're standing there with a loaded camera in your hand.

We went for a swim. Out a little way, porpoises were ducking and playing. There was also a shark's fin cutting through the water. Seemed to me that if that shark ever came our way it would be the most expensive nip any shark ever took.

After the swim, we sat on the beach and talked. Greg told me all about the summer stock theater he was running with a group of Hollywood actors at La Jolla. And he talked about his new house, his expected baby (a daughter, he hopes), his eventual vacation in Europe with his wife.

"This is a normal guy," I told myself. And it's a fact. The guy deals it straight.

We finally paddled back to Bacon's, where we were staying. I was a beat-up character when we arrived. My arms ached, my shoulders ached, my head was beginning to ache—but Peck, he was doing fine. He posed with the various guests for their husbands' cameras, and even took the trouble to pass out advice on their photo problems.

I figured a good shot would be one of Peck with little Betty Bacon, the granddaughter of the owner of the motel, and her cat. Betty wasn't much interested—not old enough, I guess—and the cat was even less interested than the kid. I'd get it all set up—and then the cat would take off, with Betty after the cat. Finally Greg charmed the cat into sitting still, and I got the picture.

We went downtown, to the center of Fort Walton, drank a couple of malts and visited with the local movie manager. I wanted to get some shots of Peck signing autographs, but would you believe it, nobody recognized the guy.

"I'm not doing so well, am I?" Peck said.

Finally we fixed it. We sat Peck down in front of the local movie house, right beneath a poster advertising The Paradine Case. Chums, that was really funny. People would stroll by, look at the poster, look at Peck, look away, look back again—brother! Our boy signed some autographs, and passed up a dinner invitation offered by a woman who said her husband would never believe she had met Peck unless she brought him home. The way he did it, she'll be a fan for life. This guy has plenty finesse.

Then back to the motel, where Greg took time off to write a few letters and study his script. I hit the sack for a few minutes. So far, everything had worked out fairly well.

At six, Greg banged on my door and invited me to have cocktails with him and Dean Jagger, and dinner at a local nightery. Very good filet mignon.

To bed at nine, with a five o'clock date the next morning to leave for location.

Five o'clock is for birds. For actors, too.

A quick breakfast, followed by a 20-mile drive to a local Army Air base. Slept all the way. And now troubles.

I was pretty sleepy, but I suppose I looked too happy. Soon as I stepped out of the car the Army started to complicate my life. It's the same old snafu. Remember?

Where were my credentials? Lost. Had the story been cleared with Army Public Relations in Washington? Sure. Well, if it had been cleared, why hadn't they been notified?

"Look," I said, "all I want to do is to fly up to location with these guys." (Location was 200 miles north, at a ghost field in Alabama.)

The Army says no.

By this time, quite a crowd has collected. Guys from 20th are milling around and yelling, a couple of colonels are arguing, I'm saying, "Why don't you call Washington, why don't you call New York, why don't you call Hollywood?"

Peck is right beside me through all of this, punching on my team. Turns out that 20th Century-Fox has a chartered plane, but there isn't room for me on it. Things are looking very bad, and I'm yelling at a colonel and he's yelling back at me, when suddenly an Air Corps captain steps up.

"I would recognize that voice anywhere," he says. "How are you, boy?"

MEET THE PHOTOGRAPHER

Ike Vern, who shot the pictures of Gregory Peck for this story, has been a photographer for national magazines since 1939, busily taking photos of presidents, politicians, crooks, beautiful women, Rotarians, horses, cops, bombing runs in the Aleutians, snakes, wildcats, athletes, movie stars, draft boards, cities and circus performers—to name merely a few subjects. During the war years, he traveled thousands of miles while photographing activities at various military installations. His recent work has appeared in Holiday, Collier's, True, and many other national periodicals. He is a former president of the Society of Magazine Photographers.

So help me, this is the guy who flew me all around Alaska during the war. With his help, the colonel quieted down and I was loaded into a B-17.

Off we go to location. This location was chosen, incidentally, because it looks like England. Never having been to England prevented me from arguing that a cold autumn morning, described in the script, didn't mean May in Alabama. I settled down, though, to watch acting the public will never appreciate as much as it should.

Sheep-lined flying jackets and boots—and a temperature of 90 in the shade! And to make things real dandy, the arc lights were turned on. Arc lights are used to kill shadows—and actors. Now I know how Peck manages to keep his excellent figure.

One thing. Peck was worrying about a scene the script called for. He told me this scene showed him reacting to the news that a buddy had been killed during an air mission.

"I couldn't figure how to handle it," he said. "Should I look at the ground, should I turn my back—how would I do it?"

"Well, how will you do it?" I asked him.

"Let me tell you," he said. "A couple of nights before you got here, some guys at the air base learned that a friend had been killed in a crack-up. They laughed. They said, 'Well, old Joe finally got it!' To cover their emotions, they treated it almost as if it were a joke. I'll handle the scene pretty much along those lines."

That's an example of why this guy Peck doesn't ring sour on the screen. He figures the angles, and plays it realistically.

Well, boys, that's about all. We had a very bad lunch—peanut butter sandwiches, dry cheese, lemonade—and flew back to Walton, arriving at 7:30 P.M. Peck came in to help me pack. I suddenly remembered I was short of dough.

"How much in your pocket?" I asked Greg.

"About 60 bucks." He never flinched when he saw the bite coming.

"Give," I said. I wrote out a check for it. Raised another $30 from the motel. Am writing this on the plane.

There's just one thing more. I've seen plenty of celebrities, but this guy Peck is a right guy. If he had been putting on an act with me, I would have known it. Acts I've seen.

When I left, he said he was going to be in New York before he left for Europe. "May I call you?" he said. "We ought to get together."

Notice the way he put it. "May I?" That's a nice guy. And that's more than I can say for two guys who will send me out on a "nice, simple little story" that nearly gets me thrown in a military prison.

No regards,

IKE

THE END

Special offer to our readers

The 1948-49 edition of MODERN SCREEN's exclusive "Super-Star Information Chart" is something no real fan should be without. It's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of over 500 of your favorite stars—complete with birthdates, hobbies, real names, recent pictures and inside facts. To obtain your copy, send 10¢ in coin, plus a large self-addressed, stamped (3¢) envelope to Service Department, MODERN SCREEN, P. O. Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y. Send soon!

HOLLYWOOD'S TANGLED ROMANCES

(Continued from page 39)

had packed a bag and gone to visit Howard on location. There she made up with Howard. If Shelley looked at the moon, she gazed at it alone. But was she unhappy? Not that one, because . . .

NEWS ITEM: Now that Ava Gardner has gone back to Howard Duff, Shelley Winters and Scott Brady are dating, while Farley Granger, who has been seen around so much with Shelley, is being seen again with Pat Neal.

Well, who's this man Brady and what's he doing here? Oh, not much, maybe, unless you count the fact that Scott has just been named the nation's Number Three new leading man by vote of 11,000 exhibitors, who place him just a hot breath behind the remote Montgomery Clift and the much-married-to-Shirley-Temple, John Agar. Scott Brady! Look out for him. Handsome, blue-eyed, hard-muscled, six-foot-three of male who just a little more than a year ago was shuffling lumber in Beverly Hills for $1.10 an hour, Scott has just recently finished such picture assignments as Montana Belle with Jane Russell, The Western Story with Yvonne De Carlo, and now goes into The Story of Molly X opposite Ginger Rogers.

double-trouble . . .

That's some speed, but it's not half as fast as the way he's been going around the romance set. Strong man Brady makes news after the manner of a Tyrone Power in the old days. For example:

NEWS ITEM: Scott Brady, who double-dated Shelley Winters and Cara Williams the other night, took Cara home, then fell asleep in the car in front of her apartment.

"What the heck," Scott Brady declared when this item was called to his attention, "you live only once, and I guess every actor has to get publicity like this. The trouble is that if I didn't know Shelley pretty well, she'd get sore about a story like that. Well, I didn't double-date. But I could have fallen asleep. It's a funny thing, I fall asleep any time I get tired, and I can give you a list of 10 girls I've been out with when I fell asleep with my eyes wide open—but neither of these two. While you're at it, you might correct the impression that I've been dating six dozen girls. I was spanked over the air one night by a radio columnist, but the only girls I've dated, and with not too much frequency at that, have been Shelley, Jane Nigh and Cathy Downs—all wonderful people. And as for Cara, though I've never done anything more with her than drive her home one night from a party when her escort was called away on urgent business, you might say she's a swell little actress, and her work in Knock on Any Door proves it."

That should be sweet music to Cara's ears. For some fool reason she's been one of the regular casualties on the merry-go-round ride, always taking the bad bumps. For instance:

NEWS ITEM: When Pete Lawford leaves Ava Gardner, he late-dates Cara Williams.

"When I saw that story in the newspapers," Cara Williams declared, "I wept." That made twice in a row that she was classified as the girl to be called for as a late date.

"Somebody seems to have it in for me," the tiny, red-haired actress said indignantly. "I've said hello to Peter Lawford at parties, but we haven't dated once."

About six years ago, before she was

I use Fels-Naptha Soap because it's gentle

I let my lovely lace curtains soak in mild Fels-Naptha suds—squeeze them through the suds and then rinse. They stretch-dry so soft and fresh and spotless—they're just like new.

I use Fels-Naptha Soap because it's gentle

I wash all my underwear in lukewarm Fels-Naptha suds. It's the only soap I've tried that removes all the dirt without soaking. My undies never look gray or dingy.

I use Fels-Naptha Soap because it's gentle

I like my sweaters to fit. So I always wash them inside out in gentle Fels-Naptha suds. They dry soft and fresh and absolutely clean.

I use Fels-Naptha Soap because it's gentle

No diaper rash for my young man —and no diaper bleaching either. Just gentle Fels-Naptha Soap that removes every stain and every trace of odor.

Fels-Naptha is so very, very gentle because it contains two great cleaners—mild, golden soap and active naptha. This is why it removes dirt completely—without harsh cleaning action . . . and helps all your lovely things stay clean and fresh and new!

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

LITTLE LULU

Towels in Shreds-

Spares Hubbies' Heads!

Margé

LITTLE LULU SAYS: DON'T BE A CUT-UP! WIPE RAZOR BLADES WITH KLEENEX★ AND SAVE TOWELS, TEMPER! KEEP THAT HANDY KLEENEX BOX IN THE BATHROOM AND EVERY ROOM IN YOUR HOUSE. SOFT! STRONG! POPS UP! KLEENEX IS YOUR BEST BUY IN TISSUES.

© International Cellucotton Products Co.

★ T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

LOVELY GIRLS EVERYWHERE

DEPEND UPON

Stillman's Freckle Cream for the skin that suggests that well-groomed look. What does a popular girl have that draws others to her? An exquisitely lovely skin and perfect grooming . . . the two create self-assurance so necessary to personality and popularity. You can be more charming . . . more popular by caring for your skin. The gentle bleaching action of Stillman's Freckle Cream can help you to have a clearer, smoother, softer looking skin, with charming appeal. On sale wherever toiletries are sold . . . inexpensive. Write today for "The Joy of New Personal Charm."

THE STILLMAN COMPANY
BOX 3 AURORA, ILLINOIS

feminine daintiness

. . . how to make sure of it!

Intimate feminine daintiness is vital to your charm. To be sure . . . syringe regularly. Faultless Feminine Syringes are designed specifically for this hygienic care, their gentle flushing action cleansing thoroughly, quickly. Modern, convenient, no accessories to handle, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

send for this free personal booklet

"Facts You Should Know About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-89
The Faultless Rubber Co., Ashland, Ohio.

Faultless
feminine syringes

married, had a baby, was divorced, and then settled down to hard work, Cara used to date like mad around Hollywood. Too much, if you asked some executives who thought she wasn't serious about her work. That isn't the situation today. The fact is that while she was supposedly late-dating various people, Cara actually was in Palm Springs with her little daughter, resting up for an important screen test.

As for Pete, what's he been doing?

NEWS ITEM: Peter Lawford has had it bad for Gloria McLean, so what's he going to do now that she's engaged to Jimmy Stewart?

Say that isn't so! What really happened is that aside from his occasional dates with Ava Gardner, Pete has stepped off the merry-go-round. For him it's a game of musical chairs and he's at least temporarily the boy who's odd man out. Quite a bit of the time, he's just plain lonesome to the point that old cronies like June Allyson and Dick Powell have been saying they wish they could find a really interesting girl for him. (Yes, Pete and the Powells are really good friends—that old, ridiculous rumor that he was "breaking up" this marriage to the contrary.)

what goes on here? . . .

Funny thing about Pete. He used to be a top man in the tangled romance department. When he first started his career, he was worried. Nobody paid any attention to him. The only time he got his name in the paper was when somebody cast him in a picture with Lassie. "Start dating," he was advised. "Go get yourself a romantic reputation."

[For Peter Lawford's own account of the trouble that's got him into, see page 48.—Ed.]

But what really went on while he was reported to be so interested in Gloria McLean? Why, he'd climbed back on the merry-go-round again.

NEWS ITEM: Janet Leigh, who used to be seen with Peter Lawford, is all excited that Barry Nelson is about to return from New York, while Pete Lawford and Ava Gardner are on fire again. What's with Howard Duff?

Uh-huh, you guessed it. Ava and Howard decided to take another vacation from each other. Lucky Pete Lawford. Lucky Howard Duff, too.

NEWS ITEM: Howard Duff is consoling himself with Ann Blyth.

"Off the record," Ann advised, "I wouldn't make too much of it. Howard and I have been friends for a long time, but if I'd been going seriously with every man I was supposed to be interested in, I'd have to be a dozen women.

"Every other day I see myself, in the newspapers, out with someone new, dining at this restaurant or that. Why, if I ate that much I'd weigh 203 pounds instead of 103. If you want to know, I've been out most with Tony Curtis, a new actor at Metro; Richard Long, and Roddy McDowall."

Shucks, up until now this romantic pyramid has been an unbroken chain of everyone dating everyone else. Can it be that little Annie is the one to break all this up? Wait a minute, though. Miss Blyth overlooked one important date—Scott Brady.

NEWS ITEM: Scott Brady is dividing his time these days between Ann Blyth and Shelley Winters—who has been dating Douglas Dick.

Ah, that starts a whole new train of romantic events, for wasn't it Douglas Dick and not Kirk Douglas, as reported, who had that date with Ann Sothern?

Said Kirk Douglas: "I'm not dating anyone who is well known in pictures. Who can tell what a man will do a couple of weeks from now, or a couple of years?

In the meantime, the radio commentators have been wrong week after week with their predictions that any minute now, my wife and I would reconcile."

As for Ann Sothern, she isn't really a part of the Hollywood circle of romance, although she seems to fit in, for she has had two dates with Clark Gable, who also has had an evening or two out with Joan Crawford. Although it was true that, way last February, Clark and Joan stepped out together three times in a single week, they simply arrived at social functions and spent a lot of time together. Joan's real heart is still the attorney, Greg Bautzer —so to follow the trail of mutual daters, the news hounds must make a detour to the Metro lot—where they'll discover the beautiful, Minneapolis-born Arlene Dahl.

Arlene has been having dates with Turhan Bey. Remember him? Turhan burst on Hollywood a few years back with his furious foreign look and immediately scared the daylights out of all the local swains. Before anyone knew it, he was Lana Turner's steady date, but this didn't stop Hollywood's anxious males from warning their girls not to step out with Turhan.

At the time, Lana suffered a temporary broken heart when all was over between them. The finger of scorn was pointed so heavily at the Turkish lad that he went into seclusion in a little beach cottage and made himself scarce at parties. Now, he's very much alive, and he fits neatly if more modestly into the giant jigsaw puzzle in which Hollywood boy meets girl. For example:

NEWS ITEM: The suave Turhan Bey has been out dancing several times with lovely Barbara Lawrence, who adds a new touch of glamor to 20th Century-Fox.

What's so exciting about Turhan? Well, for a couple of hints, Barbara said, "He has just about the most entertaining sense of humor of any man I've ever met, and he's a superb dancer."

all fall down . . .

This last qualification doesn't count the crazy accident Barbara and Turhan had one night at Ciro's. She was wearing a long lace dress, and as they got up from their table to step onto the dance floor, someone stepped on the train. Barbara promptly sat down with a resounding thud. Turhan bent over to pick her up, slipped and fell. Brandy Brent, with whom they were sitting, went to their aid—but in so doing failed to notice that he was sitting on a corner of the table cloth. As he stood, the entire table was swept clean of glasses and the place looked as if it had been struck by an earthquake.

All this, so help poor Barbara, was done without the aid of a single drink, for she doesn't indulge.

There's something spectacular about Barbara that requires no accidental dance-floor tumbles to mark her as a girl to watch in the field of romance. Nineteen years cute, tall, with a beautiful figure that has resulted from her passion for swimming and horseback riding, she has grown up in studio atmosphere since she was first signed to a contract at age 14.

"I used to have the most violent crush on Tyrone Power," she'll tell you, "but I was just a baby. By the time I'd grown up a little, all the interesting actors I'd gawked at were married. Hollywood is such a disappointing place for a teen-ager." Her arresting blue-gray eyes twinkled. "Why, I've never even met Clark Gable. As for Errol Flynn—well, we almost had a date one night. Loretta Young was sweet enough to ask me to a party she was giving, and promised to introduce me. But me—what did I do but go skiing the weekend before. I picked

She knows the secret of charm!

Safe-and-sure deodorant ends perspiration troubles!

1. ETIQUET actually ends under-arm perspiration odor—safely—surely!
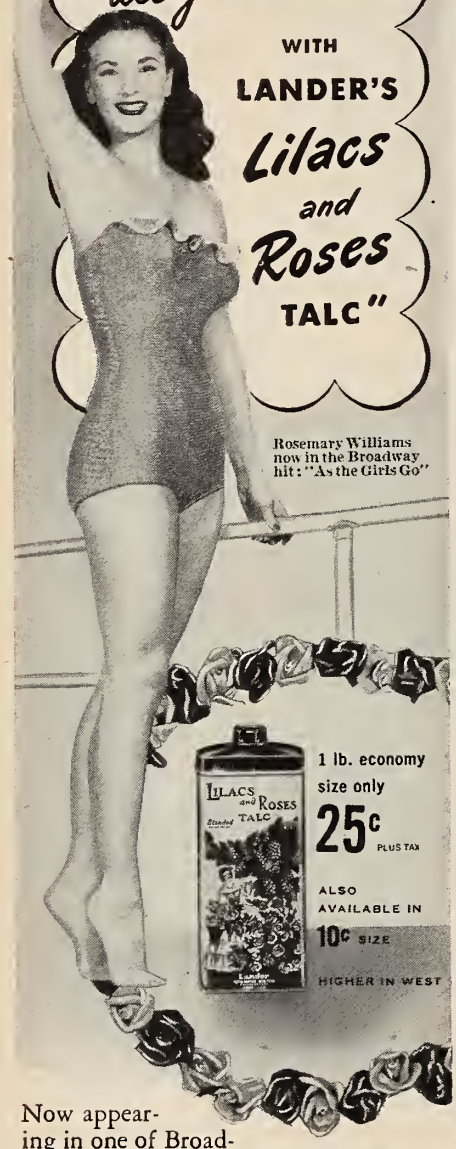
2. ETIQUET—made by specially patented formula—really checks under-arm perspiration!
3. FLUFFY-LIGHT AND SOOTHING—Etiquet goes on easily—disappears in a jiffy! No gritty particles!
4. NO DAMAGE TO CLOTHING when you use Etiquet—famous cloth-test proves!
5. MORE ECONOMICAL TO BUY—Etiquet won't dry out in the jar! Four sizes, 10¢ to 59¢.

Etiquet

THE SAFE-AND-SURE DEODORANT

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN



PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

NOW! ALSO AVAILABLE IN HANDY TUBE!

BEAUTIFUL BROADWAY STARLET SAYS:

"Feel Summer Sweet all year round

WITH LANDER'S Lilacs and Roses TALC"

Rosemary Williams now in the Broadway hit: "As the Girls Go"

1 lb. economy size only 25¢ PLUS TAX

ALSO AVAILABLE IN 10¢ SIZE

HIGHER IN WEST

Now appearing in one of Broadway's all-time hits, dark-haired Rosemary Williams has won nation-wide acclaim for her loveliness. Charming Rosemary says: "One thing I know. It's more important to be feminine and dainty than it is to be beautiful. That's why I use Lander's flower-fresh talcs. Those garden fragrances are really captivating. You'll love them!"

10¢ each

HIGHER IN THE WEST

Gardenia and Sweet Pea

Spicy Apple Blossom

Sweet Pea

Available at your favorite variety store

THE LANDER CO. • FIFTH AVE. • NEW YORK

up the most awful wind-burn you ever saw, and rather than show up with a bright red face I stayed home and nursed my sorrow."

It's impossible to tell when Barbara is, or isn't, kidding.

About a year before Mickey Rooney became serious about Martha Vickers, whom he married in Hollywood last June 4th, he called Barbara up one day and said, "I saw you at the polo games Sunday and thought I'd like to meet you."

Barbara fleetingly considered her five feet, seven inches of height, compared it to The Mick's stature, and was about to say no when she remembered that she had a girlhood chum visiting from Oklahoma. She'd be a perfect match for Mickey.

As it turned out, when Mick burst into Barbara's place, he was so full of fire and excitement that she forgot all about how tall he was. An hour later, they were over at his place holding a jam session with a gang of his musician friends.

Barbara, who is going to be a very important young actress when her work in Collision is seen, thinks that people seldom really get a true picture of Hollywood folk. "Mickey, for example. You spend 10 minutes with him and you realize that there couldn't be a more entertaining man anywhere in the world. It turned out that we were the brother and sister type. The only thing that bothered me about him was what would happen when we tried to dance. One evening, he asked me. I had been looking at a woman dancing with her little boy—and thinking; oh, no! But you can believe it, when Mickey began to whirl me around the floor it was as much fun as dancing with Cesar Romero."

NEWS ITEM: Cesar Romero and Barbara Lawrence did not plan to elope to Mexico. They simply went there on a personal appearance.

"This is how that story got started," said Barbara. "The studio asked Cesar and me to go for the opening of a theater in Vera Cruz. Somehow, word got around that we were eloping. Newspapers began calling my mother to see if it were true, and fortunately she knew that we were only buddies."

As for Barbara's other dates, she's been going out occasionally with Bob Neal and Greg Juarez, two old friends, and more recently with Scott Brady.

Yes, you read that last line correctly—Scott Brady. It's just like watching a movie, and this is where we all came in, because in Hollywood everyone sooner or later is likely to have dated just about everyone else.

Which brings us right back to the beginning with this press-time gossip item in a Hollywood column:

NEWS ITEM: Ava Gardner has tiffed again with Howard Duff, who is now being seen with Shelley Winters, while Ava dates Farley Granger who used to go with Pat Neal.

But where does Mr. Brady come in? Don't worry about that. Just because Mr. Brady hasn't met Ava yet doesn't mean that he isn't going to—because in answer to a direct question he said, "The most beautiful girl in Hollywood? Well, if you say she's Ava Gardner, who am I to disagree?"

Of course, the dating cycle doesn't always match up perfectly, even though it will eventually if one waits with patience. Consider Howard Duff again. He doesn't always take out Shelley Winters when Ava dates someone else. Not long ago, he and Gloria De Haven were seen together while Gloria's ex, John Payne, dated Joan Caulfield.

Then, to start another small flurry, the so-beautiful blonde television starlet, Joy Lansing, dated in one week Peter Lawford, Michael North and Tom Drake, who's been reported engaged to Gloria Haley. Meantime, Cathy Downs, who had been seeing Bruce Cabot, showed up at a party with Turhan Bey.

And on and on the tangled romances go. According to reports, anyhow. THE END

WE FOUGHT TO SAVE OUR MARRIAGE

(Continued from page 33)

really thinking about getting a divorce?"

"I don't want you to do anything! Just skip it!"

"All right," he agreed. "But how about some news?"

So I calmed down and gave him some. I explained that it looked as if the baby we were adopting would be along any day now. He thanked me kindly—and that was that.

Oh, it was, was it? That first printed rumor was like a rabbit growing up and having 5,000 relatives. Within a week, about 60 reporters had noticed the first item, re-circulated it, denied it, revived it. Then, to curdle up a sour climax, some granite-head observed that the reason we were adopting was that we hoped this would tend to smooth out our domestic problems.

How silly can things get?

June and I had been waiting for that baby for two years. But as the fury of outrageous rumor swept over us like a black South Dakota tornado, there was the danger that those who controlled the adoption might postpone the event or cancel it altogether. How could they know that there was not one particle of truth in any of those rumors?

I had to go to New York for the opening of my picture, Pitfall. June intended to come along, but was prevented from doing so by added scenes at the studio. When I returned, she went East to keep commitments she'd already made for radio shows. These separations, understood so well between us, added more fire to the rumors. We were both so sick of making denials that we finally stopped talking to anyone.

Before June could get back from New York, I received a rather anxious call about those rumors from the Tennessee Children's Home. I was alarmed that they should be the slightest bit perturbed. I thought it best to go there and explain that the divorce-mongering idiots had broken out of their padded cells and were haunting us Powells for no sane reason.

I wired June what I was going to do and grabbed a plane. The weather was rough. We had to sit down in Arkansas. I called June to explain. She said she'd go home and wait for me there. I went outside the little airport and swore at the weather. It growled back at me and dumped down another 8,000 gallons. All this had to stop sometime.

Before I could continue on to Tennessee, urgent business called me back to Hollywood, so I returned there and did some more long-distance reassuring. The people at the Tennessee Home who had been arranging for the adoption of our baby were very understanding. I explained that there was not, nor had there ever been, a grain of truth in any of the stories printed about a pending separation of June Allyson and Dick Powell.

I knew that none of the gossip had really touched June's and my feelings towards each other, but who could tell what might happen if the end result was the loss of the child June wanted so badly?

The whole thing was beginning to get us down. Outwardly, it's possible to withstand almost any amount of pressure. Subconsciously, though, there's a fight to maintain your balance. Then too, there's something we men never really learn about women. There are times when they can walk around with the Rock of Gibraltar on their shoulders and a laugh on their lips. Then, a harsh look, a little snub, or some other trifle can drive them into a corner, whimpering. When June arrived back from New York, she was about done in.

I KNOW THAT SHE KNOWS

Twice a year June decides to retire. "I'm going to quit," she says. "No more pictures. I don't care what it costs. I'm going to buy back my contract and just stay home."

"All right," I agree. "We'll see the men about it in the morning."

"You won't mind?" she asks.

"Not a bit," I reply. "Of course, there are several million people who may be a little upset. And then, working isn't work for you. It peps you up. You like it. However, you're right. When you get tired of a thing, just quit, that's all. I admire the way you're doing it."

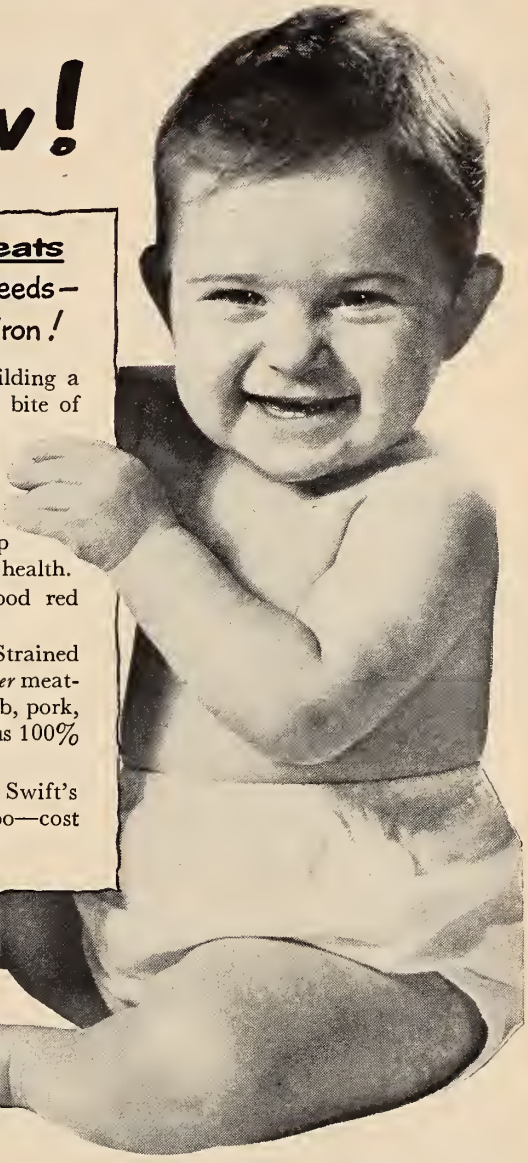
Next morning, we don't go to see the men about June quitting. We don't even mention it. And at night, there's a preview of one of her pictures. When we come out, everybody is raving and congratulating June.

"Did you like it?" she asks me. "Did you really like my work? Tell the truth, now."

"I thought you were great."

"Hmm," she ponders. "Somehow, watching you watching me, I got the idea you didn't care much for the way I played it."

"Look," I retort, "you know about my face. It doesn't jump up and run up and down the aisles. I thought the picture was fine. I thought you were better than the picture. You were even better than the reviewers are going to say you are, and nobody'll be able to top that."



Now she feels swell. "I'm glad," she says. Then a few seconds later she begins again. "Dick, I don't know. Did you really . . . ?"

Her voice trails off as I look at her. She gets the point. She knows that I really.—Dick Powell

Fortunately for both of us, Pamela Allyson Powell arrived a few days later. Then, too, another Hollywood couple began to make genuine divorce news. With the baby keeping June knee-deep in books on how to raise children, formulas and diapers, we soon forgot the grim fight to save our marriage from unthinking attacks—which had come from all but a few of the more reliable and honest members of the press.

But, of course, our plans to sell our Bel-Air home were shot to pieces. We had decided, after almost completely rebuilding the house, that it wasn't quite the thing we wanted for our family, and we hoped that we could at least get our money back. Then, when those divorce stories began to pop, two interested prospects backed off.

Oh! How meat helps baby grow!

Swift's Strained Meats provide what every baby needs—proteins, B vitamins and iron!

Just see the nourishment for building a healthy baby in every tempting bite of Swift's Strained Meats!

Complete, high-quality proteins—baby must get for sound sturdy growth.

Natural B vitamins—to help keep baby's appetite keen—guard his health.

Food iron—needed to build good red blood and avoid infant anemia.

Soft, smooth in texture, Swift's Strained Meats are specially made for earlier meat-feeding. Wide variety—beef, lamb, pork, veal, liver, heart. All six, delicious 100% meat!

Simple to serve—just heat. Swift's Strained Meats save money, too—cost less than home-prepared meats!

YOUR DOCTOR—is best qualified to say how early your baby should start Swift's Meats—ask him.

All nutritional statements made in this advertisement are accepted by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

ACCEPTED COUNCIL ON FOODS AND NUTRITION AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

P.S. (PLENTY SPECIAL) Diced Meats for—

TEETHERS (Just learning to chew) "PICKY" EATERS (to perk up appetites) MAMA—who's busy (No bother—just heat and serve)

Tempting—Thrifty—Time-saving

SWIFT ...foremost name in meats

...first with 100% Meats for Babies

SWIFT & COMPANY, CHICAGO 9, ILLINOIS

Tampax is discretion itself at swimming time. Because this remarkable monthly sanitary protection has no outside pad... Give this one fact your full consideration—and you'll realize that Tampax can be trusted in the water and out of the water with your bathing suit wet or dry. So get Tampax for the next occasion and enjoy those additional "stolen" swims!

Made of highly absorbent surgical cotton, Tampax is worn internally and comes in efficient easy-to-use applicators. When in place it is not only invisible but unfelt. No chafing is possible. No edge-lines can show under soft summer dresses. No odor can form. Changing is quick and disposal no trouble at all.

This Tampax was invented by a doctor and is by no means intended as an occasional convenience. It meets the demands of this special hygienic need every month of the year. Millions now use it. Sold at drug and notion counters in 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior). Average month's supply slips into purse; economy box holds 4 months' average supply. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS
NO ODOR

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

They figured they'd hold off for awhile because it's easy to grab a bargain when a couple is splitting up. Well, we fooled 'em, but in the meantime, the market fell way off.

Besides keeping us from planning our new home, all this monkey business cost us a really sizable amount of money, what with all the running around, telephoning, and extra plane travel.

"Sure does put a dent in the old budget," I pointed out.

"Uh-huh," June agreed. "Like it was hit with a Mack truck. But thank goodness we weren't even scratched." As I write this it occurs that she should have a little present from me. Something important. But there I'm stumped. She doesn't want anything.

Could be my fault. The first real present I ever gave her was a mink coat. June doesn't know from mink coats. You have to put the coat in storage, have it fixed up regularly. But do you think she can get around to that? Not on your life. She takes care of it herself and won't let the coat out of her sight. She thinks there's something special about it that nobody should have custody of it in off season. That's her coat. Something not to be fooled with by total strangers.

Even if it falls apart.

Oh well, I guess it won't. Mink coats wear well forever.

Like a good marriage. Like ours.

This might be a good place to stop. And yet . . . Did I say that it had been almost a year since June and I were bothered by a rash of silly, dopey and phony rumors? Well, on a recent Sunday, a certain radio commentator let go with another blast. The Powells, he said, had indulged in a "king-sized" quarrel at Romanoff's restaurant in Beverly Hills.

I didn't hear the news myself until my good friend, columnist Harrison Carroll, called up Monday morning to "check." I turned from the telephone and asked June, "Honey, where were we last Thursday night?"

"Gee," she replied, "I dunno."

"Were we at Romanoff's having a big fight?"

"What's all this about?"

"It's Harrison. There was a broadcast last night—said we staged a family quarrel at Romanoff's. He wants to know."

"Oh, I remember," June chuckled. "We had dinner with your radio producer, Don Sharpe. You were talking about your radio show, and you had that hard-boiled look on your face. I remember, you looked at the salad and it just curled up and withered."

Well, there you have it. Actor takes his wife to dinner. Commentator hard up for news dreams up an argument that never happened and blabs a completely erroneous story over the air. Next day you have a hot little rumor trying to grow up into something important.

What should we do? Hire a radio program and talk baby talk to each other? Punch the offending reporter on the nose? You figure it out. All June and I know is that this is where we came in. It's an old story and we hope that everyone else is as tired of it as we are.

As for the columnist, if he really told the truth, he'd say something like this: "An informant told me that the Powells were arguing in a restaurant the other night, but I've been so busy this afternoon that I didn't have a chance to check with them personally. So, instead of passing out false information about a couple of people who have a real nice marriage and would like to keep it that way, I'm going to keep my mouth shut."

In other words, there wasn't any fight, there isn't going to be, and what the man said was an unfair attack on our small share in the institution of matrimony which he loudly claims to uphold.

That ought to settle it. THE END

(Dick Powell's latest film is Mrs. Mike; June Allyson's is The Stratton Story.)

CAN'T STAY MAD

The other day I came home, opened the front door and called for June. "I'm in the den, Richard," she called back. "We've got company."

I'll say we had. Two tall motorcycle officers who looked like the types that have beaten me up in some of my pictures. We had a nice talk. Seems that June had been in a hurry to get home. She brought the boys along. They sold me 12 tickets to a policemen's benefit.

June disappeared and as I was showing them to the door, one of them handed me another ticket. "Almost forgot this," he said cheerfully. It was for June—a traffic ticket for doing 45 miles in a 25-mile zone.

When I shut the door, she was standing right behind me, looking like a little girl three years old who'd whipped off her party dress in front of company and gone running through the water sprinkler.

"You angry?" she asked.

"No," I retorted. "No, I've got nothing to beef about except a 10-dollar ticket and 12 tickets for the policemen's ball. Think what it would cost if I hired somebody to drive you around. I guess I'll just give you a solid spanking and let it go at that."

"You wouldn't dare," she said, putting on her imp face.

Well, maybe not. You never can tell who's hanging around our place, and think how a thing like that would look in the columns!—Dick Powell

LOVE THAT FLYING

I can't begin to tell how amazing this girl June is. She insists on knowing what everything is about, down to the smallest detail. Take the matter of my flying. I am an earnest advocate of private plane advancement. I fly everywhere I can. June gets nervous and rarely flies. Still, she can talk your arm off on the subject of such things as determination of wind force and direction as it applies to dead reckoning navigation.

Once when we were going across country on one of the finest airlines, we ran into rough weather. I could tell by the look on June's face that she was scared pink, but before I could deliver a small lecture, she was bouncing up and down the aisle while the plane lurched through the murk.

"Isn't flying wonderful?" she exclaimed to a jittery young mother with two children. "I wouldn't travel any other way." She launched into an explanation of the non-importance of a few bumps and the complete non-existence of such false items as "air pockets."

As we walked away from the plane after landing I said, "What a little fibber you are. You were jumpy as a morning after."

"I know," she agreed, "that's why I didn't want to pass it on to other people."
—Dick Powell

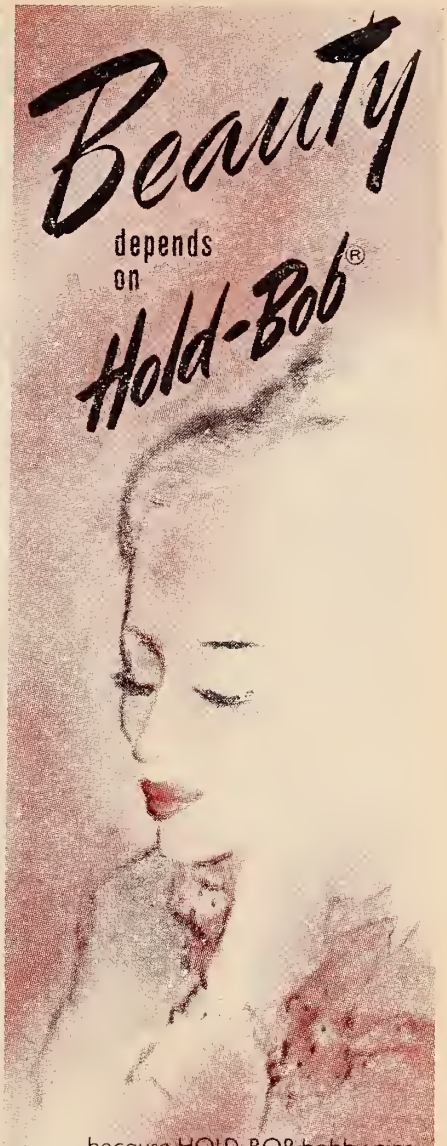
don't flirt with old sol

Screen stars like Lizabeth Scott, who never gamble with their beauty, protect their skins with suntan lotion.

IT'S NO FUN BEING A BURNT COOKIE—PROTECT YOURSELF FROM SUNBURN!

■ Just make up your mind that you can't get as brown as that gorgeous life-guard on your first afternoon at the beach without getting gruesomely burned! Too many of us feel so deliciously cool and free in our new bathing suits or play clothes that we forget about the sun's ultra-violet rays. They don't feel hot for about three or four hours after the first exposure; then, each year, they send some 25,000,000 of us to the drug store for a package of sunburn remedy! The heat rays of the sun are harmless. Look out for the ultra-violet ones, though, which can burn on a cool summer day. They bounce back from the water and creep under beach umbrellas to do their mischief. They even poke through a hazy sky.

Of course, your white and pastel summer things look terrific with a rich, golden tan, but don't risk all the complexion difficulties which can come from careless burning. Freckles might be the least of your troubles in that case, because your pigment often goes splotchy; warts and moles show up importantly; your skin gets dry and thick and unlovely and if you have eruptions, they may get worse after a sunburn.



The smart and obvious thing to do is cover yourself with an antiseptic sun tan lotion which is greaseless and invisible on the skin, screens out 90% of the burning rays but lets you tan glamorously. If that's too slow, there's always a wide choice of coppery make-up to give you that summery glow at a minute's notice.

Wear sun glasses, too, when you're actually out in the sunlight. Continual squinting, otherwise, will put lines around your eyes as well as make them feel hot and puffy.

Lipstick protects your lips from unsightly parching and looks extra luscious with a tan skin.

Don't neglect your hair—wear a turban or a big, floppy hat whenever possible. Give your hair a hot oil rub frequently to keep it silky and smooth. A little care now can bring you into fall looking prettier than ever.

BY CAROL CARTER, BEAUTY EDITOR

...because HOLD-BOB bobby pins really hold. The perfection of this beauty is assured because those perfect curls are formed and held in place gently, yet so very securely, by this truly superior bobby pin. There is nothing finer.

More women use HOLD-BOB than all other bobby pins combined

. . a GAYLA® hair beauty aid

GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED
©1949 CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

Pride comes before a fall . . . and if it weren't for Kay Kyser my pride would still be intact. Perhaps I should explain. When I first heard that Georgia Carroll, John Powers' famous model, was slated to change "Carroll" to "Kyser" I thought, "Well, there stands another victim of 'southern charm'. Fifty million 'y'alls' wouldn't devastate ME!" But now for the awful truth. I heard Kay's "College of Fun and Knowledge" over the ABC network the other day and I find that I am not only susceptible to 'southern charm' in the form of Kay Kyser but that I'm ready to send an apple to the teacher wrapped in a natty rebel flag.

Pillsbury's Professor is in a class by himself as far as entertainment goes. His spirited version of laughter and learning from the halls of his mythical college is imaginative. And the playful way he leads contestants into unpredictable "slur of the moment" remarks is downright ingenious. All of which should prove that you can teach an old dialer new tricks. And Kay Kyser with that certain captivating something (I'll admit it! Southern Charm!) is the man to do it. Kay's College is in session at 4 P.M. EDT Mondays through Fridays.

★ ★ ★

There's a scriptless wonder—also on the ABC network—that is unquestionably the greatest "rise and shiner" since the invention of the sun. It's the sixteen year old tradition called "The Breakfast Club." Don McNeill, with his "be good to yourself" philosophy is irresistible as the M.C. and his delightfully daft gang which includes Jack Owens (the cruising Crooner), clowning Sam Cowling, Fran (Aunt Fanny) Allison contribute a buoyant humor and freshness that make every program as irrepressible as a premiere. Patsy Lee and Eddie Ballantine share the musical honors on this bouncing breakfast bonanza which is understandably regarded with pride by its fathers: Swift, Philco and General Mills. First call for breakfast is 9:00 A.M. EDT—every Monday through Friday.

★ ★ ★

Other Tips on ABC Daytime Dialing

"My True Story" 10:00 AM edt
Drama ripped from the pages of real life.

Galen Drake 11:45 AM edt
A relaxing quarter hour of homey philosophy.

"Welcome Travelers" 12 Noon edt
A daily visit with interesting people from the world over.

Joan Lansing

HOW COULD I BE SO WRONG!

(Continued from page 43)

About the same time, a young actor I'd never heard of was sitting at a lunch counter between radio shows in Chicago and telling a friend of his, "When I go to Hollywood and break into pictures, I want to fall in love with an actress and marry her. Then I'll be happy."

The day that young man—whose name was John Hodiak—walked into my life, that foolish idea of mine flew out, and for keeps. I remember how suddenly it happened. Hume Cronyn pointed him out to me in the studio café and kidded, "Now there's a nice eligible bachelor you ought to meet." John had just made Lifeboat with Tallulah Bankhead and he was very interesting to plenty of unmarried young actresses around Hollywood. But not to me—I said.

"Don't be silly," I answered, "I'm not interested in eligible actors. Two careers—" But Hume was beckoning him over and all of a sudden I forgot what I'd started to say. Soon afterwards—three years ago this July to be exact—I was walking down a flower-banked path in my mother's garden toward an altar, with the strains of Mendelssohn sweet in my ears, on my way to being Mrs. John Hodiak, an actor's wife. And as much in love as I was then, I didn't know how lucky that was.

no one else but . . .

So now, with our Third Anniversary just around the corner, maybe it's high time to make a confession: John had the right idea—and mine was all wrong. Also, perhaps, a slight correction is in order: Being an actress, I don't see how I could ever be happy married to anyone but an actor. Because, by now, I know that two careers don't menace a marriage. They make it all the better. At least for Mr. and Mrs. John Hodiak they do. And for some very solid reasons.

First of all, I know that when two people are deeply devoted to the same thing in life, when their common ambition, their mutual goal is the same, they're not hunting for something to share—they have it, every day, every hour. John and I have acting.

I've wanted to act ever since I can remember. I started on the stage at 13, broke into pictures at 16. As a boy, John was probably the most all-out movie fan in his hometown, Detroit. He skipped school one whole year just to watch movies. He saw three and four a day sometimes, watched one picture 27 times! He sneaked into theaters, faked passes, got himself in Dutch with truant officers and at home. That's how crazy he was, and still is, about what he wanted to be.

To us both, an acting career is the most vital, thrilling life imaginable. Double that life with marriage and you double the joy and excitement, the surprises and delights. It's as simple as that.

The other afternoon when I came home, our maid met me at the door with an important message. "Mr. Hodiak called when you were out," she said. "He has some big news. He wants you to have two drinks ready." I fixed cocktails, and fussed around the house dying with curiosity and suspense. John was busy shooting Battleground; I felt sure it must be something about that.

At last he got home, looking wildly happy. This was a moment, an occasion. I took his arm, we walked into the front room, sat down by the drinks. "Well . . . ?" I said.

"They've taken me out of that supporting part and given me the lead!"

"Oh, how wonderful! Darling!" And we both hit the clouds. I couldn't tell you who was more excited and happy, John or I. Any wife is happiest when her husband is happy; any truly married couple shares the good things to the full. But for us I think the thrill packed extra-special kick for this reason: I knew exactly what that meant to John. The same thing could have happened to me; in fact, it has. Maybe I'm wrong, but I don't think I could have shared that joy so deeply if I'd never stepped on a stage or a movie set in my life. How could I have really understood?

Actors are poor self-critics. The only time you really believe you're good is when you're told so by someone who you think knows what he's talking about. You can lose yourself in a bottomless pit of the ghastly awfuls so easily when you watch yourself on the screen. When I've done a scene and I think, "It's horrible, just no good at all!" someone who wasn't an actor might say, "Oh, I thought that was very good"—and, even if he were my husband, I wouldn't believe him. It might even make me madder than ever. I'd think, "He's just trying to make me feel better, and anyway he doesn't know anything about it."

But when John says, "Wait a minute, Anne. You're crazy. That was swell!" Well, suddenly I believe him. He's an actor, himself. Suddenly, I think, "Maybe it was all right, after all"—and that's all I need. The world's sunny again. That's comfort coming from where it counts.

Actors are emotional people; they'd be terrible actors if they weren't. But their hair-trigger temperaments make them moody or merry, up in the clouds or down in the dumps, especially when they're working. Luckily, actors are also expressive. They can blow off steam, and usually do. It's only when emotions are clamped down and repressed that all sorts of serious things happen. There isn't much danger of that in our house.

so nice to come home to . . .

Both John and I go through stretches when, frankly, we are no joys to live with. Something's going wrong at the studio. A job is tedious and exasperating, the pressure is on to do something we don't want to do. Or we're just sore at ourselves for not being better than we are.

At such times, being exposed to exactly the same thing, we usually know enough to leave each other alone. If I drag in around seven o'clock, glum, silent and worn to a frazzle, pad silently upstairs and have my dinner in bed, nobody asks me why, John knows why. He knows as only a Hollywood actor knows, that nowhere else is there quite the kind of tiredness that comes after a tough day on a picture set—the drained emotions, the numb, exhausted nerves, that result when the harassed self is exposed for long hours to the pull and haul and exactness of picture making. I'm not on the spot to be fresh and bright, seductive and charming to my husband. He understands—he's so often dragged through the same thing himself.

Or if John wobbles home with that beaten-carpet look you get when the studio day has been rugged in all directions, do you think I'm going to bounce up and hey-hey him out of the house to dine and dance at some hot spot? One look and I want to put him to bed with milk toast and a hot water bottle, because I can see myself in the mirror of his played-out face.

To act at all, you have to put yoursel in someone else's place. You have to know people inside and out—and the more you know people, the more you understand and sympathize with what makes them tick and the more tolerant you become. Actors are famous for their tolerance. And certain tolerance is of prime importance in marriage.

There's rarely a dull moment in our lives, but if there ever is we can banish it quickly at the movies. Movies are not just an idle hour to us; they're our lives' work. John and I will often drop something twice as glamorous to chase across town to a neighborhood theater where an interesting picture we've missed is playing. On Sunday evenings, we haunt the Academy Theater to see old-time silent movies and movie stars who made Hollywood history—Wally Reid, Rudy Valentino, Garbo, Swanson and all the others. We run and re-run pictures at our studios so often I'm sure they'll send us a bill one of these days. We talk movies constantly, study and kibitz, happily argue and analyze. We take them apart for direction, camera angles, scoring, acting and art. We love our profession—and that doesn't hurt us in loving each other.

But I can sense some resistance rising at this point, perhaps like this: "Okay, but those are little things. What about the big ones—such as having time to make a home for husband, looking after the old man's comfort? How about that necessary feeling of providing that a man has to have to be happy—can John have it when you have your own salary? How about time to do things together, with both of you on call at different studios and neither one knowing about his leisure hours from day to day?"

All right—one at a time.

on the agenda . . .

First, let me admit right off that being Mrs. Domesticity is harder with a career. But before I leave for the studio in the morning, I'm up at six o'clock. After breakfast, I write a flock of notes. To John: Do this, please; or how about a party, Tuesday; or call me here or there; or what do you think of this or that? To the cook: Here's a complete menu and shopping list. To the laundress: Not so much starch in Mr. H's shirts. And so on. Then I pack up my lunch of cottage cheese and tomatoes. If John's working too, I pack his ham sandwich and thermos of coffee. (We take our lunches because that's best for our stomachs and nerves.) I don't clean the house with a rag around my head and I don't fry the breakfast eggs and wash the dishes. But I know how and what's more I know how it's being done and when. That's about all an actress acting from nine to six can do.

Then there's the ever-present question of family finances, of who supports whom. And it's an important one. So important that before John Hodiak said "I do" he made it plain as print that he was supporting the Hodiak household, or else. He still does, and no back talk—not that I'm thinking of giving any.

I have my salary and John has his. It would be pretty silly to ignore that and pretend you were making pictures for fun. It would be just as silly to expect your husband to pay the running expenses of your screen career. There's really no issue at all when you look at it sensibly. I'm Mrs. John Hodiak, so John Hodiak supports me. He pays all the household expenses, all the family bills. I buy my clothes, which are a business necessity to an actress, even though sometimes it's hard convincing Uncle Sam of that fact. I pay any bill connected with Anne Baxter, Hollywood actress.

For instance, the other day I had a tooth

Are you a young wife who knows only half the truth?

Then read this scientific knowledge you can trust about these INTIMATE PHYSICAL FACTS!

It's really a pity when you consider how many young women continue to enter matrimony without first learning the real truth about these intimate physical facts. So often a young wife finds her husband's honeymoon devotion rapidly cooling—yet she doesn't realize the wife is often the guilty one.

Every young woman has a right to be instructed on how necessary vaginal douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, married happiness, after menstrual periods and to combat offensive odor.

And even MORE IMPORTANT, she should be told that no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide of all those tested for the douche is so powerful yet so safe to tissues as ZONITE!

Developed By Famous Surgeon and Scientist

A great surgeon and scientist developed the ZONITE principle—the first antiseptic-germicide principle in the world with such a powerful germ-killing and deodorizing action yet ABSOLUTELY SAFE to tissues. ZONITE is positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as you want without the slightest risk of injury to most delicate tissues.

A Modern Miracle!

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It's so powerfully effective—it kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can FEEL CONFIDENT that ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Complete douching instructions come with every bottle. You can buy ZONITE at any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

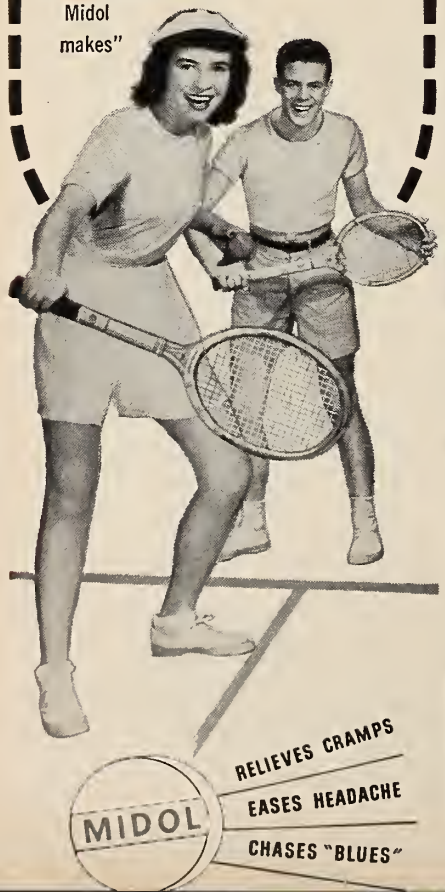
FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-89, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____



CITY_____ STATE_____

"DREADED" DAYS
CAN BE ACTIVE DAYS

MIDOL
RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL
PERIODIC PAIN
CRAMPS-HEADACHE-"BLUES"

"What a DIFFERENCE Midol makes"

MIDOL
RELIEVES CRAMPS
EASES HEADACHE
CHASES "BLUES"

capped to even off a slightly rough edge. I paid the bill. That was for the camera. There was nothing wrong with my tooth; if it had ached or needed filling, that would be family health—and John's bill. When we were married, I owned the house we still live in. It made sense for us to start housekeeping there. We couldn't have bought, built or rented a place half as desirable at that post-war time. "All right," agreed John, "we'll live in your house, but I'll pay you rent."

"Don't be silly," I argued, "I'm not going to be my husband's landlady!" But John painstakingly inquired just what a house like mine would rent for and I got my monthly rent check—and I still do. So I am my husband's landlady whether I like it or not; he likes it—and that's the point. We have separate bank accounts, separate business managers. But when we get a new house one of these days we'll buy it together just as we've bought some other things we enjoy together.

Now about companionship, living a life together, having fun, sharing golden moments that make marriage wonderful and all that—in the face of the always too-true fact that a Hollywood actor's schedule is willy-nilly as irregular as a Toonerville trolley.

It's true I can never plan ahead, like a businessman's wife, on having our vacation, say between July 4th and 18th. Two different contracts at two different studios make that impossible. When you live and work in Hollywood you never know in advance when your free time will be—or when, after you've got it, that hurry-back phone call or wire will come.

But in our three years of marriage, John and I have had some pretty wonderful trips together—to New York, Texas, Oregon, Mexico and Jamaica. All of them were quick grabs at golden opportunities, spur-of-the-moment flights, hectic hurry-up holidays. And you'd be surprised how much fun it can be that way.

we're off! . . .

I had just finished You're My Everything last winter with no idea what I would or could do about a holiday. Suddenly, John came up with three free weeks. From the start of the idea until the step aboard the plane took exactly two days. We went to Jamaica, our first trip out of the United States together, and we couldn't have had a more wonderful time. It's been the same way about our fishing trips to Guaymas and Acapulco, Mexico. I think those were carefully planned excursions of possibly 24 hours. Last summer John and I ran up to Pebble Beach for a few precious days off together, and while we were there two messages reached us: (1) we had more days and (2) Zachary and Elaine Scott called and said, "How about flying to Texas with us tomorrow?" So we flew to Texas. We wound up having one of the best times we ever had, partly because a relative of Zach's runs the fabulous King Ranch and there we saw everything deep in the heart of —yippeee!

So if our companionship is precarious with two careers, it's fresh and adventuresome and doubly precious because it's snatched in unexpected moments with a "Let's go!" takeoff. Stolen fruits are definitely sweeter.

As for sharing each other's every interest—there's absolutely nothing different about that in a marriage of two careers, or one or more. It's rare when you do share every interest. But heaven knows I tried. Golf, for instance.

John adores it. (He's terrific at coordination sports. He was offered a chance at big league baseball in high school.) John has a seven handicap after two years on the links—which means he's considered to be only seven strokes away from being able to shoot par when he plays.

He naturally gets a great deal of pleasure out of the game. I tried to share it with him. No good. The climax came one day on the course at Rancho Santa Fe. "Take this four-iron and just hit it," said John. I was still trying to hit that ball when John and the rest of the foursome disappeared over a hill, deserting me merrily. I swung until I cried. I suppose they thought I'd be coming along. I wasn't. I went back to the clubhouse and that was the end of sharing my husband's passion for golf.

But on the other hand, I love to dance and John just doesn't enjoy it. I've got him taking rhumba lessons but I wouldn't bet how long that will last. I don't suppose any wife or husband sees eye-to-eye on every little thing, even in the best regulated families—in Hollywood or anywhere else.

In Hollywood or anywhere else, the main ingredient that makes a happy marriage is, of course, that old-fashioned commodity—love. If you love a man and he loves you, it doesn't matter much what either one of you does, or how many careers add up in the family. It's the purest tripe to say that two acting careers threaten married happiness, when the love is there.

surprise, surprise! . . .

When I start a picture, I always get yellow roses on the set from John; and when he starts one I can send his little horseshoe of carnations—even though we do have a family rule against visiting each other's set in person.

I planned a surprise party for John on his last birthday. I had 50 people to prepare for, a big tent to get up, an orchestra to place, food and drink, flowers to arrange, this and that. But the important thing was to keep it all a secret from John. What I went through to pull that off! I had to keep John out of the house, so I drove him a hundred miles north to Ojai that afternoon and back on the excuse of seeing my family, just making it home in time to greet our guests. But John stayed in the dark about his birthday party until the moment he walked in, to be plainly thrilled with surprise and happiness.

And on my last birthday I came home from work to find a Spanish guitar player in one corner of the candle-lit living room, strumming "Mañanitas," the Mexican birthday song—which John knows I loved. The musician played for an hour while we sipped our champagne and opened my presents in this romantic moment that John had planned before the guests came.

I don't know how John and I will spend our wedding anniversary this year. Maybe we'll be lucky and free to run off to some romantic honeymoon spot like Carmel, as we did on our first. And maybe we'll just have time to dress up and dine out à deux at some quiet Hollywood café, as we did last year.

But I can tell you one thing about it: We'll be looking over the past year and making plans for the next, checking up on our happiness and finding, as usual, that it gets better every year. And we'll be thanking our lucky stars, again, that we're living as we are, both of us busy and interested in whatever comes our way —our double way.

So what I'm saying on this Third Anniversary of ours is that it's a pleasure to eat those silly words I once spoke. Thank Heaven I married an actor—especially since his name is John Hodiak!

THE END

HER EYES HAVE TOLD ME SO!

(Continued from page 30)

"It was never official with Glenn and me," she pointed out. "It was never announced. It was more like going steady—you know. I thought he was a wonderful man. I still do. But it was just romantic."

At first, as I say, I was tempted to tie the same fragile label to her second affaire de coeur. I mean, of course, the one that seized Elizabeth right at the dramatic climax of that first love when, with Glenn flying to visit her packing a ruby-and-diamond miniature class ring in his pocket to make their troth official, she fell head over heels for another man. He's the tall, dark and handsome William Pawley, Jr., of Miami, Florida, who—very officially, now—is keeping Elizabeth's beautiful head in the clouds.

She was already smitten that new way when a camera caught her giving Glenn a big, beautiful kiss as he stepped off the plane, which seemed to tell the world that they were altar-bound. Right after that Glenn got the bad news: They were not. She'd met Bill two weeks before.

Hollywood didn't get the final straight dope on the Taylor love tangle until the day Elizabeth arrived by plane from Florida with no fiancé anywhere in sight. "Where's Glenn?" asked the baffled reporters. "I don't know," answered Elizabeth. "He's not here." Obviously.

their last date . . .

A week later I called Sarah Taylor, Elizabeth's mother. I wanted to know if Glenn Davis would take Elizabeth to the Academy Award ceremony.

"No," she answered. "He's gone fishing with his father." She said they thought so much of Glenn and his fine family, and oh dear, it was all so awkward.

"Well," I suggested, "you'd better get him back from that fishing trip to take Elizabeth tomorrow night or there's going to be a lot of talk about their engagement being broken that will embarrass everyone concerned." She said she'd do her best.

So Glenn Davis came back and escorted Elizabeth to that spotlighted Hollywood affair. It was a tough assignment, but they don't come any nicer than he.

That night he was a self-sacrificing escort and that was all. I never saw two kids look so glum and unromantic. It was all over by then.

The next time I spied romantic Liz, she was on the arm of the reason why, Bill Pawley. It was at the Icecapades, the second time Elizabeth had appeared publicly in Hollywood on the arm of her new dream guy.

He was visiting the Taylors, staying at their Beverly Hills home, and Elizabeth was keeping him as much to herself as possible. The preview of her new picture, The Conspirator, was the only other time she'd exposed him to the public gaze in Hollywood.

Bill had just flown home to Florida when I trotted over to the Taylors the other night to quiz lovelorn Lizzie on the tender subject of her mixed up amours. I've known Elizabeth since she was five years old and I'd never seen that beautiful girl so gorgeous. She was simply blooming with ripe young womanhood and wore a lovely pink dress that set off her black and white beauty superbly. It had a high collar.

"You aren't still wearing a certain gold football underneath that collar, are you?" I teased her. For a long time Elizabeth wouldn't take Glenn Davis' gridiron trophy off, even when she took a bath.

"Not lately," smiled Elizabeth.

"There wouldn't be a ring dangling there on a fine gold chain in its place, would there?" I teased. She shook her head and her eyes twinkled.

"Want to inspect?"

"No," I told her, "I'll see it later on—maybe. Right now I've got some questions to ask. I want to know all about Glenn and Bill."

"I'll tell you nothing but the truth," promised Elizabeth. Well, she told me nothing, period. That is, nothing official. And at the same time she told me all I wanted to know.

In fact, Elizabeth went to great pains to convince me, by denying everything, that she'd fallen for Bill Pawley like a ton of orange blossoms.

Yes, romance was in bloom again for Elizabeth. Her eyes—if not her lips—told me so then. It stuck out all over her pretty self. And incidentally, it's a pretty self that's noticeably more grown-up and mature since she travelled to England, then to Florida—and met Bill Pawley. I told her, "My, but you look grown-up."

"Oh, thank you," she breathed gratefully. "I wish I were—lots more."

"Like maybe 28?" I suggested. Elizabeth laughed and blushed. That's Bill Pawley's age. "Now, look here," I baited her, "you can't marry an old man 28 years old!"

"Who said I was getting married?"

Well, that's the way we operated—playing cat and mouse all evening. I must say the lady was too cute and coy about her heart for any direct confessions. But in between rounds I learned the story of how it switched, the way the hearts of 17-year-old girls have been switching since time began.

she was true blue . . .

The new deal in Liz's romance probably would never have happened if her Uncle Howard Young, who's a prominent art dealer in New York, hadn't owned a dreamy Florida winter home on Star Island, out in Blue Biscayne Bay off Miami. The Taylors have been going down there to visit hospitable Uncle Howard (he's Francis Taylor's uncle and Elizabeth's great uncle) every time they're East, if it's winter and the place is open. This time, Elizabeth and her mother headed for Miami after their stay in England where Elizabeth made The Conspirator with Bob Taylor. She'd been strictly loyal to Glenn ever since she kissed him goodbye and they parted in sweet sorrow, going in opposite directions—Elizabeth crossing the Atlantic to Britain and Glenn heading over the Pacific to Army duty in Korea. Even when happily-married Bob Taylor asked her out to dine and dance in London, she declined. In Manhattan, too, when she landed, Elizabeth spent two weeks without a date, although the Taylors know plenty of people there with sons to beau her around.

"I was being true blue," she explained.

"Did you write Glenn every day?" I asked her.

"He wrote me every day," she said. "I wrote him maybe every other day." But when I asked Liz if she'd kept those first love letters to warm her heart in her old age (I have mine), she shook her head. "Oh, no—I'm not that sentimental."

For seven long months they didn't see each other, months in which Elizabeth dreamed about marrying her dashing lieutenant—or did she? I asked her.

YODORA

the deodorant that works

TWO WAYS

1 STOPS

not just masks—perspiration odor

2 SOFTENS

and beautifies underarm skin

Oh joy, oh bliss! YODORA is different . . . doubly divine, doubly effective, because it's made with a face cream base. Works two ways: 1—really stops perspiration odor . . . 2—keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders. Safe for clothes, too. Today, try YODORA, the wonderful deodorant that works two ways! Product of McKesson & Robbins, Bridgeport, Conn.

Tubes or jars
10¢, 30¢, 60¢

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

You're embraceable—always, when new, wonderful KARE keeps you bath-sweet. A lotion deodorant—satin-smooth, fragrant. So nice to use. So different from creams and liquids—not greasy or messy. Safe to use after shaving. KARE, an amazing new improvement in underarm deodorants, is the one that:

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration safely
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢ (plus tax), at drug and department stores.

The Grove Laborotories, Inc., St. Louis. Mo.

AMAZING OFFER—$40 IS YOURS
FOR SELLING ONLY 50 BOXES CHRISTMAS CARDS
Also 50 and 25 for $1.00 with or without name. Free samples. Other boxes on approval, including entirely new, different deluxe assortment with feature television card. Cute plastic assortments. Write today. It costs nothing to try.
FREE SAMPLES
CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-22, White Plains, N.Y.

AMAZING CREAM REMOVES UNSIGHTLY HAIR QUICKLY, SAFELY

Acts Below "Razor Line" Without Cutting or Scraping Legs

The modern way to remove ugly hair from your legs is with Neet® Cream Hair Remover. It works deeper than a razor, below the surface of the skin. Safer too from razor cuts and scratches. Neet leaves tender skin soft and smooth, free from razor stubble. Just apply Neet like any cream, then rinse off and hair disappears like magic.

"Well," she said, "you see we really couldn't plan on getting married until 1951 at least, when Glenn could get out of the Army. It was definitely in the future all the time. And I'm not sure we really knew each other as well as we thought we did. We'd only had seven dates before he went away."

So to give Liz a break—and I think she deserves one in her first semi-serious heart troubles—there were certain unrealities about her engagement, official or not, to Glenn Davis. It was so very long-term, and I've never been sold on drawn-out engagements—they're too risky at any age. At Elizabeth's, especially, when everything's fascinating, including every attractive young man you meet, and when even vows that you yourself think are true blue can fly away with your heart and you can't do a thing about it. Nothing's going to hold a young girl back if she falls in spite of herself with no strong arm to grab her. Certainly not when that arm is 5,000 miles away.

Another unreality about the romantic affair of the handsome lieutenant and his Hollywood princess was what Elizabeth specializes in on the screen—glamor. Only this time it was on Glenn Davis' side.

her hero . . .

There never had been a greater football star at West Point. For four years Glenn and his husky pal, Doc Blanchard, were the nonpareil, unstoppable big wheels of the collegiate pigskin parade. Sport writers tabbed Glenn an all-time gridiron immortal, a peer of Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, George Gipp. At the very moment Elizabeth met Glenn—and swooned—he was the man to watch in a big, ballyhooed charity football clash at the Los Angeles Coliseum. It was the only game the Army would let Glenn play, off duty, the lone chance for every Southern Californian to see their great rambler in action. Glenn's home town is Claremont, near Hollywood. So the papers were full of him, and he was the hero of the hour.

Now, at Elizabeth's age football heroes are dashing young knights. Glenn Davis was an All-American and from West Point, too—and what girl's heart doesn't thrill to that manly long, gray line with its shining brass buttons and high ideals, the very cream of the USA's college youth? How more glamorous than Glenn Davis could you be to any girl?

Also, Liz was sweet 16 and dying to be doing what every girl she knew was doing—"going steady." She was frank enough about that in our cagey conversation. The Taylors had taken a house at Malibu beach just so Elizabeth and her older brother, Howard, could have their boy and girl friends down to have their fun around home. Most of them wore fraternity pins, or rings. But Elizabeth had no beau. She wasn't going steady, there was no pin or ring to sport like the rest of her girl friends, no special man to sigh and rave over. Gosh, she was withering on the vine, passing up life—and life is never so urgent as it is at 16.

So when Doris May Kerns, a friend of hers at MGM, and her husband Hubie, an ex-USC athlete, brought their friend, Glenn Davis, down to the Malibu house one day, what happened was practically inevitable Glenn's really divine looking, a wonderful young man. He was just out of the Academy and any cadet wants a best girl, object matrimony, the first thing after he pins on his gold lieutenant's bars. What sweeter, more beautiful girl could you meet anywhere than Elizabeth Taylor? The romance sparked hot and bright. A more handsome and glamorous pair teamed with tender intent hadn't hit the front pages for a long time—although how they did that, by the way, was pretty unreal, too. In fact, it was a trick on Elizabeth which put her and Glenn on the spot just a little too quick for comfort. It happened like this:

A sharpshooting columnist grilled Elizabeth after her first date with Glenn. "Would your parents stand in the way if you'd want to marry Glenn Davis when you're 18?" she asked.

"Why, no, I don't think they would," Liz answered honestly.

The headlines blared, "ELIZABETH TAYLOR REVEALS PLANS TO WED."

So that's how it began, with unrealities—and then the very real facts of two different lives took over.

Lieutenant Davis would proceed to Korea, his orders read, and duty with the Occupation Forces. Miss Elizabeth Taylor, her studio advised, would go to England, to make The Conspirator. Liz left to sample, as a young lady, the cosmopolitan world she had left as a baby girl. She saw London, was presented to the King and Queen, grew up some more, had her eyes widened with fascinating sights and interests, and time passed—those seven months.

I know that Elizabeth has neither a fickle character nor a flighty heart, really. Even if she herself kids about it, Liz is "true blue." She just got caught in a love trap she couldn't help, that's all, and changed her mind—a lady's privilege—to Glenn Davis' loss and Bill Pawley's gain.

I feel sorry in a way for Glenn because he's such a swell young man and it isn't fun for him to taste the defeat he never sampled on a football field. But he's so attractive himself that I'm not worrying about the future affairs of his heart—and besides, Glenn's a soldier and knows all's fair in love and war. And he and Elizabeth still are undoubtedly "good friends," whatever that means after romance.

Elizabeth knew the old feeling wasn't there even before she met Bill Pawley in Florida. Absence had not made the heart grow fonder. But she was still holding her romance, keeping her vows, being "true blue." So was Glenn Davis in Korea, counting the days until he could fly to Elizabeth and slip on that ring he'd had a jeweler make. But when he stepped off that plane in Miami it was too late—two weeks too late.

Uncle Howard had given Elizabeth a big party for her 17th birthday. The Star Island house was festive with his friends and among them were Mary Ann and Dick Reynolds of the tobacco Reynoldses, who had a home in Miami. How older people do love to team up young beauties and eligible young men! "Elizabeth will just have to meet Bill Pawley," they said. "They'd be perfect together."

Bill Pawley was a favorite with everybody, you could certainly tell that. Every-

PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6 Top., Wide World, Cen, Lt., Acme Cen. Rt., Wide World, Bot., Acme—7 Wide World—8 Acme—10 Bob Beerman—12 International News Photo—14 Bob Beerman, Exc. Bot., Wide World—22 Wide World—24 Bob Beerman—29 Paramount—30 Top, Bob Beerman, Bot., Wide World—31 Nickolas Muray—32, 33 Bob Beerman—34 Bert Parry—35 Lt., Bert Parry, Rt., NBC photo by Earl Zeigler—36, 37 Bert Parry—40-42 Bob Beerman—43 Bert Parry—44-47 Bob Beerman—48, 49 Bob Beerman—50-53 Fed. Patellani—Pix, Inc.—54 Fed. Patellani—Pix, Inc. Exc. Top, Wide World—55 Fed. Patellani—Pix, Inc.—56 Lt., Roman Freuhlich, Cen., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Rt., Bob Beerman—57 Bob Beerman—60-63 Ike Vern—67 Mathias Caldy of Pagano Studios—67-74 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios—78 Stork Club News Service—91 Paramount.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Right.

one there, including Uncle Howard, sang his praises. "He's a wonderful young man, such a gentleman, so sincere, so bright and honest and such fun—just the nicest boy in the world." Everyone knew Elizabeth would be in Florida several weeks, no one could stand seeing her bored. She needed an escort. After all, she wasn't officially engaged. "You've just got to meet Bill." But Bill was up in Palm Beach that birthday. So two nights later the Reynoldses gave a party at their house with a definite objective: "Elizabeth, this is Bill." By then, Elizabeth admitted, she was curious as a cat about this dream man. Who wouldn't be at 17, on a holiday, under a tropic moon?

"Was there a moon?" I asked Elizabeth. Because they grow those big ones down there and they make silver sweeps on the bay that look like bridal trains.

"I don't know," she said. "I don't remember. I guess I didn't look to see." She had eyes only for Bill.

Well, who is this new sweetheart of Elizabeth's? What manner of young man is this who can step in on fast-stepping Glenn Davis' time, who can beat out an All-American back for Hollywood's All-American beauty?

William Douglas Pawley, Jr., is his full name and he's the son of William D. Pawley, former U. S. Ambassador to Brazil. His father now runs the Miami Transit company—buses and things. Bill helps out there and also, with his brother, runs a Florida radio station.

Bill was born in Georgia and educated in a Southern military school. He's a pilot who flew the Hump for three years during the war, wants a private jet plane of his own some day, considers his dad's DC-3 way too slow and old-fashioned. He's an athlete too, a snap swimmer and skier, expert with horses. He's 28, four years older than Glenn, tall and sun-bronzed. I was amazed, when I saw him, how much he looks like Elizabeth; he could pass for her brother, since he has exactly the same coloring—fair skin, dark hair and eyebrows, piercing blue, blue eyes. He's good-natured looking, poised, easy in his manner. "He's humorous but intelligent, too. Not the personality type, sort of—uh—conservative," Elizabeth added him up.

I wouldn't know about that, because Bill wasn't exactly conservative about making time with Elizabeth's wayward heart. They spent a lot of it around movie mogul Nick Schenck's pool, swimming and lying in the sun and—well—getting acquainted. They rode horseback on the white sands. They spent the nights at gay parties, here and there—in the two weeks before Glenn Davis was due on the scene with that ill-starred engagement ring burning inside his blouse pocket. All in all, Bill sounded like a pretty smooth operator to me; I asked Liz if he'd ever been engaged before.

"Yes," she said, "but not officially. Oh," she caught herself, "understand, I mean he's not engaged now."

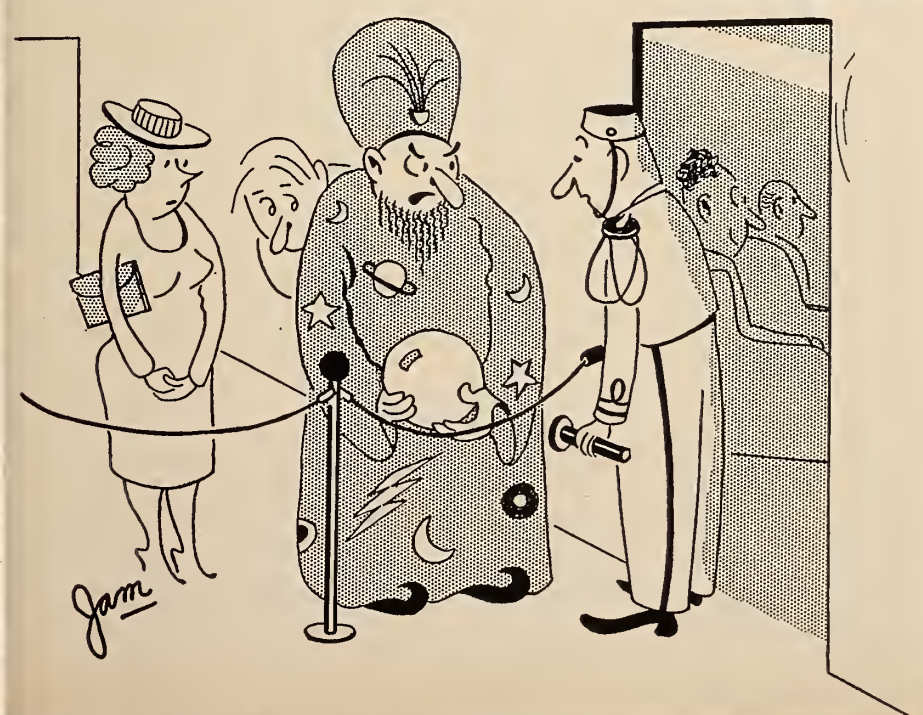
"I wondered when you'd get around to that, dear," I teased her. "But tell me, after all the build-up, what did you think of this wonderful Bill when you finally met him?"

"Oh, he was very nice," dodged Lizzie. "Did he send you flowers and things?"

Elizabeth looked horrified. "Oh, no!" she said. "Not down there. It wouldn't have been proper. I'm an old-fashioned girl with old-fashioned ideals. I was supposed to be engaged to Glenn, you know. . . . I wouldn't have ever posed for that picture at the plane if I'd known about it. The photographers promised they'd give us time to say hello before they took a picture. But they didn't." Elizabeth meant that surprising embrace that came out in a national picture magazine to embarrass them both after her romance with Glenn was dead. I believe her, too, because I know she wouldn't hurt any one if she could help it. "After all," she explained, "I'd invited Glenn down there. He was my guest."

"Did you ever see that engagement ring he brought along?" I wanted to know.



She nodded. "Yes, it was very pretty."

"Come on now, Elizabeth," I prodded her, "didn't you slip it on just once—just for size?" She shook her head. I had another question:

"Did Glenn and Bill ever meet?" She nodded, said they met each other at a party a few nights later.

"What happened?"

"It was very interesting," said Elizabeth. I'll bet it was!

"Whot d'yo mean no seots? Whot about those singles in the fourth and the sixth rows?"

YOUNG WIVES LESS EMBARRASSED

when they use this higher type

INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Greaseless Suppository Assures Hours of Continuous Medication

Every young wife should be most grateful for the extra advantage which this higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness offers. Zonitors are not only more convenient and daintier to use, but one of the most effective methods ever discovered.

So Powerfully Germicidal Yet So Safe to Tissues

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. Positively non-irritating, non-poisonous, non-smarting. Ready for instant use, Zonitors release powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours. They're not the type which quickly melt away. They never leave any sticky residue.

Zonitors do not 'mask' offending odor. They actually destroy it. Help guard against infection by instantly killing every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you CAN BE SURE Zonitors immediately kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Easy to carry if away from home.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-89, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

AT LAST!

A QUICK, EASY WAY TO APPLY WAVESET

SHAKE LOTION THROUGH CAP...

Cut wave setting time 33%! Get a bottle of Nestle Superset with the new Shaker top today! Superset produces beautiful waves and curls – dries quickly – never flakes – contains Lanolin. At all beauty counters. 8 big ozs. 25¢.

A product of NESTLE—makers of the famous Nestle Colorinse • Meriden, Connecticut

NEED MONEY? GET IT EASY!

Sell Plastic Christmas Cards—Other Novel Assortments—Profits to 100%

Show friends new Christmas, Everyday assortments. Excellent money-making plan. Exquisite Plastic, Christmas Carol, Christmas Tree Ornament assortments. Gift Wrappings, Correspondence Notes, Imported Napkins. Extra bonus. Write for free samples Name Imprinted Christmas Cards, Personal and Floral Decorated Stationery and Feature assortments on approval. Special offers.

PILGRIM GREETING CARD CO.
111 Summer St., Dept. M-2, Boston, Mass.

FREE SAMPLES
50 for $1.00
25 for $1.00
25 for $1.95
NAME IMPRINTED CHRISTMAS CARDS

QUICK RELIEF FOR SUMMER TEETHING

EXPERIENCED Mothers know that summer teething must not be trifled with—that summer upsets due to teething may seriously interfere with Baby's progress.

Relieve your Baby's teething pains this summer by rubbing on Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion—the actual prescription of a famous Baby Specialist. It is effective and economical, and has been used and recommended by millions of Mothers. Your druggist has it.

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION
Just rub it on the gums

"Well, did Glenn know what went on between you two when he looked at Bill?"

"He didn't have to look at Bill," came back Elizabeth. "All he had to do was look at me!" And yet she wouldn't admit—officially that is—she was in love with the guy!

In Florida, Elizabeth and her mother were entertained at Bill's home. And Liz hadn't been back in Hollywood very long before ardent Bill Pawley accepted their invitation to visit them and meet Francis, her dad. If you wanted to make a case for a betrothal you could very well start from there. Moreover, Bill stayed at the Taylors for two-and-a-half weeks, right in the house. I asked evasive Lizzie:

"Did you like him as much at breakfast as you did at dinner?"

unglamorous atmosphere . . .

"Every bit," she answered firmly. Well, with a man underfoot around the house for that long, with no gay whirl to enchant either one, I should think Elizabeth and Bill would have had plenty of time and opportunity to know if they really suffered from anything like real love. And Elizabeth admitted frankly that she'd planned it that way. She said, pretty sensibly, but at the same time giving herself away more and more:

"We'd seen each other in Florida before, it was almost always at parties, having fun. You can think you like someone terribly much in an atmosphere like that—but it might be just the glamor. When you're around together alone all day, having a quiet time, you find out so many important little things that show each other's character and disposition. So we just stayed around the house."

Well, if that didn't betray a girl bending a seriously-interested eye on a man, I've flunked my psychology course in sweet young things! And it's true, too, that Elizabeth and her visiting boy friend acted more like old married folk than a strictly good-time team when Bill was in Hollywood. They never went dancing. Bill wasn't interested in seeing studios; he went to MGM just once. He'd never seen Elizabeth in a movie, so she showed him her girlhood hit, National Velvet, and then one night when she was tired he went by himself to see Little Women.

"Bill wasn't too impressed with the movie me," grinned Elizabeth, implying that's exactly the way she wanted it. "I think he likes ice cream better than me, anyway. That's the most exciting thing we did—run down to Will Wright's and eat hot fudge sundaes. I do wish," said Elizabeth, with a mock frown at her blooming figure, "I didn't eat so much."

"That settles it," I kidded her, "you can't be in love."

"Oh," she bit, "when I'm in love I eat twice as much!" Then Liz caught herself. "Oh, oh, what did I say?"

"You've said enough by now to tell me that you're pretty crazy about Bill Pawley," I told her. "And now—when will you see Bill again?"

"I'm very tired and overworked," sighed Elizabeth in her most dramatic actress manner, "and Bob Taylor shook some vertebrae in my back out of place in a scene of The Conspirator. So I really need a long rest in the Florida sun, don't you think?"

"There's plenty of sun right here in California," I informed that pretty joker, "but not Bill." By then, of course, Elizabeth know darned well she wasn't kidding me and I think she was glad I knew her glorious secret.

I kissed her goodbye and wished her good luck.

Bill Pawley—you're getting a grand young wife! THE END everybody's listening to modern romances!

People are taking "MODERN ROMANCES" to their hearts . . . Right from its first week on the air, "MODERN ROMANCES" has been a favorite with critics and listeners everywhere. Like Modern Romances magazine, on which it is based, each story is about real people in situations you yourself may face. And each story is told with a frankness that may startle you. Treat yourself to this exciting new radio show—

Tune in "Modern Romances"
every weekday
Mon. thru Sat. on the American Broadcasting Co.
ABC NETWORK
see your newspaper for local time

JOHN WAYNE'S DOUBLE LIFE

(Continued from page 37)

So, like millions of other movie fans, they went to see John Wayne.

John Wayne is a guy with a double life. There's John Wayne, the star, today probably the most widely-seen motion picture actor in the world. And there's John Wayne, the private citizen, today probably the least known of all Hollywood personalities.

In the last 20 years, the public has seen him in 143 pictures, a number few other stars can approach. And yet, ask any movie fan about the tall, rugged Duke, and the chances are you'll get something like, "Oh! He's good. I like him very much." That and nothing more.

Now, the reason for this appalling lack of dope on Wayne lies in the man's character. He's frank, polite, easygoing, and friendly—but somehow he's constitutionally incapable of speaking at great length about any subject concerning himself.

he don't say nuthin' . . .

A press agent who was his Sigma Chi fraternity brother at the University of Southern California and who has known him all his adult life, recently explained Wayne in this manner:

"Duke is the only actor I know who has never made any attempt to get his name in the papers. In this business, that's almost incredible. I've handled dozens of stars, and they've always done things like calling me at daybreak to say, 'My cat just gave birth to kittens. Do you think we could make Louella's column with that?'

"Duke is entirely different. Even when something really newsworthy happens to him, you can't get it out of him. A few years ago, for example, he went hunting with Ward Bond. When he returned, I asked him if anything interesting had happened, something I could use for a publicity item. 'Nothin' much,' he said.

"Later, I found out that on that trip Duke had mistaken Bond in the woods for a deer and had accidentally shot him in the back. He then carried Bond 20 miles through a forest to reach a hospital—where they took 20 pieces of buckshot out of Ward. To Duke, that wasn't worth a line in any paper."

When Wayne was first signed to a contract at Republic pictures, he was handed the usual publicity questionnaire to fill out.

What's your real name? "Marion Michael Morrison," he wrote.

What was your first job? . . . "Picking apricots."

What was your employment before acting? . . . "Truck-driving."

List any distinguished ancestors. . . . "Have never looked 'em up."

When the publicity man read the answered questionnaire, he shook his head in disbelief. "This guy," he said, "is just about as colorful as a dead fish."

That was more than two decades ago, and in two decades a man can pick up a lot of color and glamor. But Duke Wayne today is the same sort of man he was back in 1929.

He's plain, simple and unaffected. He combines picturesque ruggedness with the type of awkward tenderness that most American women love. He's the kind of guy who grows on you. And almost imperceptibly, he has grown on movie fans to that rewarding point where they accept him as a full-fledged star and yet make no demands on his private life.

The Wayne home is a ranch-type house that's furnished half in Early American and half in guns. His best friends are lusty fellows like Ward Bond, John Ford, Frank Borzage and Bo Roos, and while he now gets $100,000 a picture, this rise to affluence has been fairly recent.

"I'm just a guy," he explains, "who's trying to make a living in the movies. I don't have a capital gains set-up like some of these other guys, and that's why I've got to keep working.

"I've got two families to feed, and Bo Roos, my business manager, tells me my overhead comes to $2,600 a month. I don't know where it goes to, but that's an awful lot of dough, and I've got to keep hopping.

"Actors who make one picture a year think I'm working like the devil now—but for 15 long years I averaged eight pictures a year, and once I made a 25-chapter serial in 18 days.

"I used to work for peanuts, but I guess I've come a little way since then."

"The little way," Duke has reference to began May 26, 1908 when he was born in Winterset, Iowa, and christened Marion Michael Morrison. "He didn't look like any Marion," his mother now says. "He was a tall, skinny baby and even before he could walk, we started calling him Duke."

Marion Morrison is still Duke's legal name, though, and he's used it on all such legal documents as his two marriage certificates, his high-school diploma, and so forth. But when Winnie Sheehan, head of Fox Studios many years ago, was told that Duke's real name was Marion, he quickly pronounced it impossible. "From here on in," he stated, "the boy's name is John Wayne. With a name like that, he's at least got a chance."

When Duke was five, his family moved to Lancaster, California, and from there to Glendale where his father purchased a drug store.

falling in love . . .

"Once we were in Glendale," Duke's mother recalls, "Duke decided that he'd like to make the Navy his career. He had a real yen to go to Annapolis, and all through high school he used to study hard. But he lost out in the entrance exams, and when USC came across with a football scholarship, he decided to go there."

Duke remained in college two years, and then his money ran out. In those two years he became a member of Sigma Chi, he took the start of a law course, he played football, and he fell in love with a dark-eyed campus señorita named Josephine Saenz.

As a football player, Duke was fairly good, but he was never the All-American that studio publicity departments later made him out to be. These phony releases are still a constant source of embarrassment to him.

"Just for the record," he says, "I earned my letter playing football. And that's all. I was never an All-American, an All-State or an All-Anything."

At the time, however, he was all-out for Josephine Saenz. And people like Mrs. Gladys Belzer (Loretta Young's mother) who remember that love affair, claim it was idyllic. "Duke," Mrs. Belzer says, "wouldn't get married until he could decently support a wife, even though Josephine, I'm sure, would have married him if he hadn't had a thin dime."

Thanks to John Ford and Raoul Walsh, Duke did have more than a thin dime alone...

because

she doesn't know

LOVE can be lost... romance ruined if you offend with perspiration odor. So stop it before it starts!

DRYAD — Jergens new kind of deodorant actually stops the decaying action of bacteria... the chief cause of embarrassing perspiration odor... before it starts!

Its complete deodorizing action keeps you sweet to love and adore.

APPROVED by leading skin specialists. Harmless to clothes.

SMOOTH as face cream as long as it lasts. 10¢, 29¢, 59¢.

Dryad

stops perspiration odor

before it starts

Jergens New Kind of Deodorant

Get on "UNCLE SAM'S" Payroll

START AS HIGH AS $3,351 YEAR

MEN-WOMEN Thousands appointments being made. 40 Page Book FREE

Mail Coupon Today.

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. S108, Rochester 4, N. Y.
(Not Government Controlled)
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 40-page book with list of U.S. Government Jobs; (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name .....
Address .....

YOU ARE IN DEMAND IF YOU CAN DRAW!

Make Money WITH YOUR BRUSH and PEN

If you like to DRAW, SKETCH or PAINT, write for TALENT TEST. No Fee!

ART INSTRUCTION, INC.

7699-1 MINNEAPOLIS 15, MINNESOTA

Please send me your FREE Talent Test:

NAME_____

OCCUPATION_____ AGE_____

ADDRESS_____ CITY_____

ZONE___ COUNTY_____ STATE_____

MAKE $100.00

FREE Imprint SAMPLES 50 for $1 up FREE! Bonus Boxes with orders

SELL XMAS CARDS Full or Part Time

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY!

Sell only 100 special Xmas card deals. Your cost only 75c each regardless of quantity ordered at one time! Your PROFIT $1 on each and every deal! Write today for details of complete line. Make More Money with Creative. Costs Nothing to try! Feature boxes on approval.

CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc.
45 Warburton Ave., Dept. E1. Yonkers 2, N. Y.

CAMERA FANS GIVE YOUR PURSE A HOLIDAY!

Save Money This Summer

8 to 16 Exp. Roll Dev. and Printed — 1 of ea., 25c — 2 of ea., 35c — Reprints 2½c ea.
8 Exp. Roll Enl. to Jumbo Size, 30c — 12 Exp. 45c — 16 Exp. 60c — Ex. Jumbo Prints 4c ea.
35mm fine grained and Enl. to 3¼x4½ — 20 Exp. 75c — 36 Exp. $1.25 — 65 Exp. $2.25.
ENL. IN GLOSSY OR D.W. MATTE FINISH. 4x6 15c ea. — 5x7 20c ea. — 8x10 35c ea.
We mail film daily all over the world. For Foreign Countries and Possessions add Air-mail Return Postage for fast service.
Send for Free Mailers

BRIDGEPORT FILM STUDIOS
Dept D, Box 2061, Bridgeport 1, Conn.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE) Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 2809, Detroit 27, Michigan.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

when he was married. He had half a dozen Westerns behind him, a screen contract in his pocket and, according to Ford, "one of the finest futures in the business."

Ford, who's won the Academy Award for direction five times, is the staunchest Wayne supporter in the movie colony. He will not direct a picture without Wayne if he can help it. He refused to make Stagecoach unless his protégé were given the lead.

Wayne's affection for Ford borders on hero-worship. It was Ford who gave the tall hunk of handsomeness his first break in The Big Trail 20 years ago, and Duke isn't the kind who ever forgets.

On June 24th, 1933, Wayne and Josephine Saenz were married. Ten years later, Duke was sued for divorce, his wife charging him with mental cruelty. She was awarded custody of their four children—Michael Anthony, Mary Antonia, Patrick John, and Melinda Ann.

A basically uncommunicative man on any topic, Wayne is downright balky when it comes to any discussion of his first marriage. All you can get out of him is, "Well, it was just one of those things."

Friends are of the opinion, however, that the marriage hit the rocks because of the couple's difference in backgrounds and faiths. Daughter of the one-time Cuban consul in Los Angeles, Josephine Saenz was raised very devoutly in the Catholic faith and churchly way of life. Duke Wayne is a Presbyterian.

In the 10 years of that first marriage, he worked harder and longer than any other actor in the movie colony to support his family.

Duke was never seen in night clubs, was never privately or publicly connected with any girl but his wife. When Mrs. Wayne's lawyer was drawing up the divorce petition against Duke, all counsel could find to level against the actor was the charge that on several evenings he had absented himself from home. Today, Duke still supports his ex-wife and four kids in elegant style and sees them often.

The present Mrs. John Wayne is a 26-year-old Mexican actress named Esperanza Baur. She is tall, dark-haired, extremely well-built, and speaks English with only the slightest trace of a Spanish accent. Duke calls her "Chata," which is Spanish for "pug-nose."

They first met in Mexico City in 1945 when Wayne was on one of his rare vacations. They were introduced at a dance where "Chata" snuggled into Duke's arms and turned on the charm. Six months later they were married. They're currently living in Van Nuys with two cocker spaniels, one mother-in-law, and three large piles of scripts.

After 20 years, practically every studio in Hollywood wants John Wayne for a picture, but Wayne has enough of his own scheduled to last for the next few months. Currently he's operating as actor-producer on Republic's Strange Caravan.

When it was announced at Republic in 1945 that John Wayne, besides acting in The Angel and the Bad Man, was going to produce it, several of the grips and prop men who were assigned to the job were puzzled as to how to address him. In Hollywood, all producers are called Mister. The boys decided to use that title.

So when Wayne walked on the lot, he was called Mister by three persons. He failed to acknowledge them. When one of the boys finally broke down and called him Duke, Wayne grinned broadly. "Thought for awhile," he said, "you fellows had forgotten my name."

"I'm just a guy," says John Wayne. And he'll never be able to see himself as anything more.

THE END

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

THE WINNERS: 9th semi-annual Trophy Cup contest. League 1—Jane Wyman club, prexy Jeanette Mendro—with 1550 points. Runners-up in this league were the Gene Autry club with 1400 points and the Nelson Eddy Music club with 1100 points. League 2—Bob Crosby club, prexy Isabelle Lee—with 1450 points. Runners-up were the June Allyson club carrying 1300 points and the Joan Crawford club with 1150 points. League 3—Charles Korvin club, prexy Nelda Clough, with 1250 points. Runners-up were the Nina Foch club with 800 points and the James Melton (Dot Reisser) and Ron Randall (Anna Hreha) club tied for third place with 700 points . . .

Natice af revocatian of charter: The Modern Screen Fan Club Association has revoked charters of the following clubs, effective May 23, 1949: The Peter Lawford Fan Club, Urban Jones, President (Buffalo, N. Y.); The Virginia Mayo Fan Club, Urban Jones, President (Buffalo, N. Y.).

Prizes: Well, this contest may be over, but we have another thrill-packed, and prize-packed one coming up. Compacts are one thing, but Elgin-American compacts are something else. They're beautifully finished and a real joy to any girl's purse. We're really proud of the nice things you correspondents have been saying about them . . . Revlan's King's Ransom sets may be fit for a king, but they're none too good for our fan club editors. Handsomely packaged in a black velvet box, each set comes with a gold lipstick holder and seven luscious, separate shades . . . All the colors of the rainbow very aptly describes our wonderful Enger-Kress wallets. We have them in gold, green, blue, red and violet and they've been specially designed to hold lots of your favorite snaps as well as money and valuables. The Tangee Trip-kit is so wonderfully packed with such necessary cosmetics for that trip you've been planning, we don't wonder it's such a favorite with club artists. The kit includes make-up base, cologne, powder, rouge and other swell articles.

9th Semi-annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
Last Lap

This Is My Best: (100) points "As the Years Roll By," Florence Ufolla, Lanny Ross Journal. "The Dreamer," Iris Cohan, Martin and Lewis Journal. "Stars and Stuff," Eleanor Ciccarone, Marilyn Maxwell Journal. "Does Vaughn Monroe Have Adenoids?" Edward Howard, Vaughn Monroe Journal (Staub). "Pirate Invasion," Cathy Cali, Glenn Vernon Journal (Olson). "We're To Blame, Too," Helen Highsmith, Freddie Stewart Journal. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Rise Stevens Journal. League 3. Tied. Nina Foch Journal. Dorothy Kirsten Journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. Dorothy Crouse, Gene Autry Journal. League 2. Dee Fling, James Stewart Journal. League 3. Alice Geigley, Douglas Dick Journal. Best Artist: (150 points) Marge Delgarian, Bill Lawrence Journal (Lawson). Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. None qualified. League 3. Vanessa Brown Journal. Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Marion Hesse, Ginger Rogers Club. League 3. Beatrice Smith, Marta Toren Club. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. Nelson Eddy Club (Mottola) (Donation Julliard Scholarship Fund.) League 2. Bob Crosby Club (Box of toys for Crippled Children's Home). League 3. Art Mooney Club (Donation to Children's Home). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Gene Autry Club. League 2. Perry Como Club (Staley). League 3. Dick Contino Club (Rosenthal). Candid Camera Winners: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others) Martha Kaye, Joan Crawford Club. Dorothy Nix, Sinatra Club of Staten Island. Kay McGowan, Jean Pierre Aumont Club. George Bunch, Penny Edwards Club. Margie Keith, Eddy Arnold Club. Gerry Kee, Alan Ladd Club.

HUTTONTOTS, THE CARE AND FEEDING OF

(Continued from page 47)

there had been ten other persons in the room, we swallowed, "Who-o-o? Us?"

"You're not scared to tackle it, are you?" asked Betty, fixing her extra-large hazel eyes directly on us.

"N-not exactly," we stammered. "But . . . well, baby-sitting's a little out of our line, we've never. . . ."

Our sentence trailed off, as we sneaked a swift glance at Lindsay and Candy. They were shy and sweet—and not even half our size. At that moment they couldn't have looked more spiritual if halos had been prancing above their heads.

"Fine! It's settled. Thanks a million!" said Betty. "Be right over!" she said into the phone, and hung up, beaming. "Now, come with me, gals, and I'll show you everything to do." And with this she zipped off to the kitchen. We tagged along, notebook still in hand—only this time we were jotting down pointers on care and feeding.

Betty lined up a row of baby food cans. In between her rapid-fire be sure to's, and you mustn't's, and oh yes, remember's, we nodded and noted. We continued the procedure in her dressing room as she changed to go out. Then, in the driveway, as she jumped behind the wheel of her chartreuse Cadillac, she delivered a few last-minute instructions that ended with a prophetic line: "Good luck, girls—you'll find this an interesting experience."

We sure did!

dick tracy saves the day . . .

A cloud began to cover Candy's sunny face as she contemplated what was happening. Before Betty had backed out of the driveway, Candy was bawling lustily.

We began to get a helpless, lost feeling, like someone adrift at sea, until Lindsay (bless her) said, "Please read to us." Instantly, Candy turned off the tears and looked up at us expectantly.

"Sure!" we cried in relief. "Where's your book of nursery rhymes?"

"No-no," said Lindsay. "Let's hear Dick Tracy."

"Dick T'acy," echoed Candy.

So, Dick T'acy it was. We went into the living room, stretched out on the yellow hooked rug and spread the funnies before us. Lindsay followed every word with large, fascinated eyes. It was almost as if she were reading along with us.

The funnies, however, soon lost their appeal for Candy. She preferred the livelier sport of bouncing up and down on Reba's back, exclaiming, "Burrump! Burrump!" with each bounce. Being on the unenlightened side, we had to get Lindsay to interpret.

"She wants to play horsey."

"How do you play that?"

"Our daddy knows how. He plays it with us every day. He even gave us cowboy boots. Mine's red. Candy's brown."

So we played horsey. We went scampering around the room on all fours while our two riders rode us behind the couch, under the piano and around every table in the room. This would have continued indefinitely, but Candy decided she'd like to improvise.

She grabbed hold of Bonnie's long hair and reined her in—but hard. The steed, naturally, r'ared back with a most unhorselike yell. We decided to try some other type of fun.

The baby Briskins, still brimming with zest and bounce, wanted to play outside. We sized up the yard with its swings, slides and sand-box. There were giant palm trees, skirted with clinging ivy, that edged the wall-enclosed yard.

At the far end was an oval swimming pool, carefully fenced in. The gate boasted several padlocks and a caution to guests to "Please keep gate closed." (We knew Betty had taught Lindsay to swim, and we'd often seen her floating across the shallow end of the pool making like a whale.)

We felt sure that nothing could go wrong in such a peaceful and well-protected setting. We left them enjoying their little playthings and quietly re-entered the house, hoping for a little peace.

We were just beginning to relax when an ear-piercing scream shot in from the yard. Our hearts went up and down like yo-yos. Absolute silence followed.

We tripped over chair legs and tables in our scramble to get to the yard. We arrived just in time to watch the opening round of a sand-throwing fight to the finish. Candy, the powerhouse of the Briskin family, was holding—or rather, throwing—her own.

We broke it up. At least, the spat was suddenly interrupted when Lindsay spied the artificial red flowers adorning Reba's hair. Immediately she observed, "Poises need water." And thereupon picked up a pail and gave them a liberal dunking.

Hereafter, we kept an eagle eye on events. From time to time we consulted Betty's list of instructions. At 11:30 we said, "All right, girls. Time for lunch!"

"You eat, too," said Lindsay, pulling at our skirts. "Here, have this apple pie." She shoved her latest culinary effort in our direction—a mud pie swimming in water and decorated with blades of grass.

"Doesn't look quite done," we remarked.

"Oh yes, it is," affirmed Lindsay. "Look!" She took her tiny hands and spanked the wet goo, splattering everything in sight—which, besides ourselves, included Candy. She immediately set up a howl.

At this moment, their halos were fading and our thoughts were showing.

We had considerably more success when

critic's corner

WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

Joan Crawford gives an impressive performance [in Flamingo Road] as the put-upon heroine of the story. She creates sympathy by making her seemingly courageous in the face of adversity, and having her stand up with fortitude under brutal injustices. . . .

Kate Cameron
N. Y. Daily News

Miss Crawford runs this gamut in 94 minutes flat, and we think it rather significant that she isn't even winded in the end. . . . From one dramatic crisis to the next one she moves like a sleek automaton. Her face deeply plastered with makeup, in an ageless, emotional mask. Adversity only registers now and then in her glycerin-moistened eyes.

Bosley Crowther
N. Y. Times

Every Tampon user should know

fibs*

is the Tampon with Rounded Ends...

the only Tampon "Quilted" for Comfort..

"Quilted" for Safety...

Next time try Fibs

(internal sanitary protection)

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

HEADACHE NEURALGIA
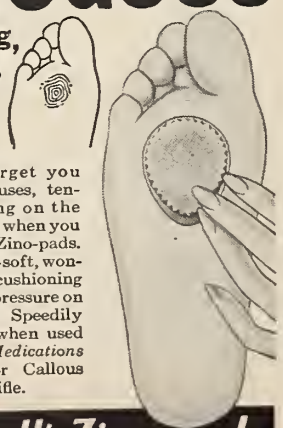
NEURITIS
Pain
RELIEVED
incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—
ANACIN®



Here's why
Anocin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combinotion of medicolly proved ingredients. Get Anocin Tublets todoy.

Never-Tel
LIQUID PERFUMED DEODORANT

Dancing, walking, working, playing . . . there's no better way to fresh, sweet underarm daintiness than NEVER-TEL. It combines a really dependable deodorant and finely-scented, delicate perfume. Gives twa-way protection that lasts far longer—yet is harmless—does nat stap perspiratian ar injure clothing ar skin. At drug counters, or write far generous FREE SAMPLE bottle, ta
NEVER-TEL—Dept. 8A, Kansas City 6, Mo.

EXTRA MONEY NOW TO CHRISTMAS
Selling CHRISTMAS CARDS
A PERSONAL MESSAGE FROM C. L. EVANS

Up to 100% profit, cash bonus for you. Fascinating new type Plastic, Metallic, 3-Dimensional Christmas card assortments. Gift Wrappings, Special Gift Items, Floral and Personal Stationery. Send at once for Free 48-page catalog, feature samples on approval and Free Name Imprinted Christmas card sample portfolios. Special offers.
FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1.00 PERSONALS
NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS
North Abington 53, Mass.

Callouses
Pain, Burning, Tenderness Quickly Relieved

You'll quickly forget you have painful callouses, tenderness or burning on the bottom of your feet when you use Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. These thin, downy-soft, wonderfully soothing, cushioning pads instantly lift pressure on the sensitive spot. Speedily remove callouses when used with the separate Medications included. Ask for Callous size. Cost but a trifle.
Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

it came to lunch. Following Betty's instructions, we outfitted them in their look-alike bib aprons and settled back to watch them enjoy their food. They both can feed themselves and have excellent table manners. All went well.

After lunch, Candy gave a one-woman concert on the nursery's tiny white piano. Lindsay preferred to show us what mama brought them from New York. Tiny look-alike dresses. (Betty plans to dress them in twin outfits until they develop their own likes and dislikes.)

Lindsay has already developed a style sense. Whenever possible, Betty takes her along when shopping and allows her to select her own socks. She'll eye the assortment at the counter for a few moments and invariably pick out a pair with fire-alarm red, yellow and purple stripes. She's happiest when she's wearing them.

"Schnooklee" (that's one of Candy's nicknames—the other is "Stuff") will wear anything or nothing (preferably the latter) with equal enthusiasm.

Whenever Betty has to go out of town, she brings back souvenirs for the children. She always tells them where she's going and why. Recently, she and Ted were invited to Washington to meet the President and attend the Press Photographers' Ball. Lindsay knew all about it and when she saw a photo of the trip afterward she promptly pointed, "That's my mommy, and that's Harry."

While away, Betty spends half her time worrying if the babies are all right, and the other half long-distancing to make sure they are. Lindsay can carry on quite a phone conversation. "But," Betty will tell you, "when she grows tired of talking she simply says 'good-bye now' and hangs up. On long distance yet!"

Candy is a little young for the phone. Once in a while the nurse will hold the receiver up to her ear. Her eyes will fill with wonderment and surprise as she hears Betty's voice. After the first thrill, she usually decides to see what makes the thing tick.

We noticed that Candy's piano-playing was growing steadily slower, so we decided it was about time to put them in their sleepers for their nap.

We knelt beside Lindsay as she began her prayers. "Now I lay me down to sleep. . . ." She was very earnest. That's due to Betty's training. She wants Lindsay and Candy to learn about all religions, so when they grow older they can decide for themselves on the church they wish to join. Betty and Ted see alike on this subject. Since they are of different faiths, they plan to have a tutor instruct the youngsters in the principles of all religions.

We tucked Lindsay and Candy into their identical ruffled canopied beds. "Have a nice nap," we said.

"But Mommy always sings to us," said Lindsay.

"Well—we'll just play a record, and then you two go to sleep."

"But Mommy always sings to us," retorted Lindsay in a somewhat louder tone.

So we hummed a lullaby. Nothing happened. We switched to something more gay. The third time around on "MacNamara's Band," they were still wide awake.

"Do 'Doctor, Lawyer 'n' Indian Chief' like Mommy," coaxed the bright-eyed Lindsay.

We sang—we gestured—we hopped around the room.

It wasn't until we'd reached the louder wavelengths and were beginning to stagger slightly, that the Briskins rolled over on their tummies and went sound asleep. (We'll never know if it was from our singing, or from sheer boredom.)

Seeing them lying there, so warm and cuddly, we got all fluttery inside. We picked up Lindsay's baby book and saw where Betty had carefully recorded Lindsay's first haircut and enclosed a few of her blond locks to remember the event.

We looked at the youngsters again. Their faces were angelic. We could forget the drenched flowers, the pulled hair, the sand-box caper. . . A sharp snap in our sacroiliacs brought us back to earth!

We decided to collapse quietly in some corner for a few years. Then, we heard a car enter the driveway, the screen door slam, and a vibrant, "Yoo-hoo!"

Betty and Ted were home. They bounced in with merry cries. "How'd you get on? How're things?"

"Please!" we cautioned in our best librarian whisper. "Not so loud. We've finally got them to sleep."

"Oh," laughed Betty. "The kids've been giving you the treatment, eh? That's what we go through with them every day."

"It is?" We gave a groan. But they seemed to be enjoying our misery. Ted was practically in hysterics.

With such goings-on, the expected thing happened: Lindsay and Candy both woke up with a bang!

Betty hurried into the nursery. "None of that, now!" she said firmly. And that was that.

Why hadn't we heard of this approach before? THE END

WHY HOLLYWOOD PRAYS FOR JUDY

(Continued from page 24)

But again the old quarrelsome pattern reasserted itself, delays took place, and the gentlemen who sit in the accounting room to estimate costs began slowly tearing their hair out as the figures started zooming upwards again.

This time Judy was accusing the new director of needlessly shooting scenes over and over. The situation took on a hopeless aspect with scores of actors standing by while the bickering went on. Then, with Judy's failure to report on the set after lunch one day (she arrived that morning only a little while before lunch), her suspension was ordered.

This decision was not lightly taken by the company. It has been reported that Louis B. Mayer, for whom Judy originally auditioned in a dusty pair of slacks when she was but 13 years old, climbed from a sick bed at home to come to the studio and consider the case. But, serious as the suspension was, to her friends it served only to point up the whole strange aspect presented by the girl they loved.

The Judy of today is a mother who adores her baby, yet lives apart from it, saying, oddly enough for any mother, that it is best for the child.

The Judy of today is a wife who admits that her best friend is her husband, to whom she runs continually for advice and comfort, yet announces, nevertheless, that they cannot continue together.

The Judy of today is an actress long acquainted with the simple but important obligations of her art, yet fails repeatedly to appear on the set on time.

The Judy of today, in the opinion of all who know her, is ill—and has come to a crisis in her life.

Yet Judy is only 27 years old. She has

HOW TIME FLIES!

Marlene Dietrich won't let photographers snap her with her daughter Maria Sieber any more. It's not because Marlene doesn't love her offspring, but it seems Maria has grown so rapidly of late, that right now she's as tall as her mother. And glamour queens simply don't have grown daughters.—Modern Screen, August, 1937.

the resiliency of youth still in her on which to draw in bouncing back to her old, vital self. That is why there is hope mingled with the tears.

Those who make excuses for Judy, and sometimes even condone her erratic viewpoint on her relationship with her friends, her associates and her studio, often speak of the tender age at which she began her professional life.

It is perfectly true that, at 27, she has already had a career—complete with both hard luck and good. Hedda Hopper, a close friend of Judy's ever since she came to Hollywood, often points out that at the age when other girls were graduating from grammar school, Judy was already caught in the throes of a competitive acting life on the screen and suffering sleepless nights worrying whether she'd get the parts she wanted—and whether she could handle them if she did.

But a good deal of the confidence that her friends still have in her is based partly on the hope that Judy will not accept this as an excuse for herself—even if others do. They have in mind that Judy can still achieve adult happiness even if she spent childhood and youth before the public. A few of these friends received a pointed illustration of this one evening, not so long ago, when they attended a special revival showing of Sam Goldwyn's Hurricane in Beverly Hills. They were standing in the lobby of the theater when they noticed Judy entering, her face pale, her manner subdued, and looking neither to right nor left.

"Hello, Miss Garland," said a man standing just a few feet away from her. Judy nodded, but her eyes failed to light with any sign of recognition. She vanished quickly through an aisle entrance. There were other people in the lobby and a momentary feeling of depression seemed to touch them all. The old Judy would have winked and sparkled to find herself among people she knew. She would have left those behind her smiling and aglow with just the fleeting sight of her. And, surprisingly, that very effect was created in the same lobby hardly three minutes later when another girl entered.

This second girl, exactly Judy's age, came running in on a burst of happiness, followed by her husband. She, too, knew people in the lobby and it developed that she was running because she thought she was late for the picture, and that she was happy because she had just found a wonderful baby-sitter and felt she could get out for a night without any worries on her mind. Along with this breathless explanation went merry sallies, quick reports of her baby, and greetings to every familiar face. Then, with her husband having to tug her away. she marched laughingly into the auditorium.

The contrast between the two girls was startling for more reasons than the fact that they were of the same age. It happens, as everyone present very well knew, that they also were stars together at one time. Both had started their professional careers as tots, both had worked their way to the top. But here their paths had split . . . without seeming to. The second girl had turned to marriage and motherhood, finding so much satisfaction in it that, without giving it a second thought, she has practically abandoned her career. Judy? Judy still has her career, as well as a husband and a child. Yet her life has arrived at a point characterized mainly by her discontentment with it.

This was not the dream that Judy had in her 'teens, which those who knew her then very well recall, and which particularly saddens them. For years she always kept her grandmother's wedding gown in the bottom drawer of her bureau. She planned to be married in it. But when she eloped with Dave Rose on a July night in 1941 the wedding gown lay in the drawer forgotten. Nor did she wear it when she married Vincente four years later after her divorce from Dave. Impulse had outspeeded plan . . . and Judy has long been a creature of impulse.

Impulse, of course, is often very much the outstanding trait of an artist. When Judy wanted to learn to play the piano she wouldn't take time to study music. She placed her fingers on the keys and made such music as she could—made better music as she went along. When she wanted to sing she opened her mouth and sang. If her voice wasn't trained, her heart was full of melody and more than made up for any technical shortcomings. When it came time to embrace life for the lasting happiness that is possible in it, Judy didn't stop to plan. She just leaped—more or less blindly, her friends feel.

And now?

For a few nights after her suspension, Judy was not seen anywhere around town. Then, on the opening night of a new attraction at the Mocambo, she attended with her personal manager, Carlton Alsop. She was draped in a white, flowing, Grecian gown, had her hair combed back severely, and wore no wedding ring.

Hollywood eyes are observant. Judy must have realized she was being studied closely by most of those present. But no sign of this was forthcoming from her. She danced, laughed at Carlton's quips, seemed to be having a most enjoyable time.

"A wonderful kid," commented an actor seated nearby. "Whatever her studio situation, whatever her trouble, she's out there smiling. That takes a great heart—and she sure has one."

"You think she'll come through?" asked his companions.

"I'm praying for her," he answered.

The other nodded, as if to say, "Aren't we all?"

THE END

The screen story of Judy Garland's latest film, In the Good Old Summertime, is one of the brightest items in the August issue of that bright Dell magazine, SCREEN STORIES.

Nestle Lite
with Conditioning Oil

AT LAST! — a hair lightener that leaves your hair soft, silky, natural-looking — while making it beautifully blonde. Nestle LITE is made from a special patented formula containing beneficial conditioning oils. It's easy to use — delicately scented — complete in one package!

Lightens unsightly dark hairs on arms and legs, too—quickly, safely!

At drug & dept. stores $1.00 . . or

— MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY —

The Nestle-LeMur Co., Meriden, Conn.

Please send me (tax and postage paid) full size Nestle Lite with instructions. $1.00 enclosed.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State..... MS-8-49

Nestle LITE — made by Nestle, originators of permanent waving and the famous Nestle COLORINSE.

LASH-KOTE
Water-Proof
Eyelash-Make-up

For lustrous, longer-looking eyelashes. Easy to apply, smudge-proof, positively will not run or rub off. Absolutely harmless!

Black or Brown. 25¢ at 5 & 10¢ stores.

VOGUE PRODUCTS, LOS ANGELES 31, CALIFORNIA

EASY DOLLARS for YOU!..

Selling CHRISTMAS CARDS

MATCHED GIFT Wrapping ENSEMBLES
20" x 30" size sheets
15 DESIGNS
Gift Folders, Tags, Seals that MATCH!

FOR TOP EARNINGS, show the TOP line, and cash in on the easiest money-making plan. 100% PROFIT on name-imprinted DeLuxe personals. 50 FOR $1.00 Treasure Box. "21" FEATURE BOX, a Christmas Special like your 365-day money-maker, the JANES ART "21" Everyday Box and 24 other fast-selling items. FREE — Smart carrying carton for samples, the exclusive "Guide to Easy Selling," profit-making display mounts. Send for samples on approval AT OUR EXPENSE.

JANES ART STUDIOS, INC. BABYLON 7-A. N.Y.

TRADE MARK Please rush samples on approval

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M170, Hollywood 38, Cal.

HERE'S THE WAY TO ...EXTRA MONEY!

Sell Very Latest Christmas Cards and Stationery Not Obtainable Elsewhere
Plastic Christmas Cards. Cash profits to 100%. Bonus. 74 different boxes. Write today for free samples Exclusive Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards and Stationery with Christmas and Everyday Assortments on approval.

FREE SAMPLES EXCLUSIVE Name-Imprinted CHRISTMAS CARDS and Personalized STATIONERY

REGAL GREETING CARD CO.
19 W. Woodruff St., Dept. DM-8, Hazel Park, Mich.

Does GARLIC Relieve GAS?

ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the largest selling garlic tablet in the world. For sale at drug stores everywhere.—only 69¢

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

Put CASH in the BANK with CHRISTMAS CARDS

Sensational values sell like magic... bring you superb earnings for spare time! Just show FREE Samples of lovely Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards at 50 for $1.25 up. Also Christmas and Everyday Assortments, Address Book, Children's Book, others. $1 Box of 21 cards pays you up to 50¢! Get free Imprint Samples, 21 card box on approval.

FREE Samples
PHILLIPS CARD CO., 739 Hunt St., Newton, Mass.

stop Scratching

Relieve itching caused by insect bites, athlete's foot, eczema, scabies, pimples and other itch troubles. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

HAVE 2 INCOMES! Sell CHRISTMAS CARDS

Take this easy step to extra earnings. Show FREE Samples of exquisite NAME-IMPRINTED Christmas Cards to friends, others. Sell themselves at 50 for $1 and up. You make fine profit. Fast sales with NEW PLASTIC Christmas Assortments! Also show novel Humorous, Religious, Birthday, other fast-selling Christmas and Year 'Round Assortments. Name-Imprinted Napkins, Personal Stationery. Special fund-raising plan for clubs, churches. Write for samples, Assortment on approval.

COLONIAL STUDIOS, INC., 642 S. Summer St.
DEPT. M-39 • HOLYOKE, MASS.

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, HC14, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

Take This Easy Step To BIG MONEY!

Sell* CHRISTMAS CARDS

Plastic Cards for Christmas and Everyday. Also lovely EMBOSSED Christmas Cards WITH NAME. Sell themselves at 50 for $1.25, up. Amazing $1 "Southern Beauty" Assortment of 21 Christmas Cards pays you up to 50¢! Complete line of fast-sellers. Write for Samples on approval. SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO.
216 South Pauline Street, Dept. C-8, MEMPHIS 4, TENN.

THE BACHELOR TAKES A WIFE

(Continued from page 22)

of dates, reporters broke out in a rash of speculation. One zealous journalist suggested to Jimmy that perhaps there was some girl in his past who'd jilted him, thereby dooming him forever to the single life.

"Well, now that you mention it," Jimmy said, "that's exactly what happened."

The writer bloomed with expectation of a scoop.

"Uh-huh," Jimmy continued. "Vivian was her name. A beautiful redhead. Most gorgeous girl you ever could imagine. Why, when we held hands I was speechless for hours. A man couldn't want for anybody more perfect."

"Well, what about this girl? Why didn't you marry her?"

"I thought of it a good many times, but her folks broke up the romance."

"Oh, that's too bad."

"Yeah, sure was. Vivian moved to another town and I guess I was just about the unhappiest nine-year-old in Indiana, Pennsylvania."

All things considered, though, Jimmy Stewart made a remarkable recovery from this crushing blow and in later years he went around with quite a few pretty girls who almost made him forget this Vivian creature.

But enough of this. Jimmy has a large, all-inclusive statement to make about Gloria, the lady of his final choice:

"She's a wonderful girl, that's all."

You ask anyone who knows Gloria McLean, brunette, 31, fragile in a pretty sort of way and pretty in the style of a strong little thoroughbred racehorse, charming, witty, philosophical, practical, over-all delightful—and they'll say that's it: She's a wonderful girl.

without benefit of script . . .

As Jimmy says, he didn't reach this conclusion in a split second. The idea grew in his mind by easy stages as they had dinner together several times a week at Dave Chasen's restaurant, to which people like to go to rearrange their lives in a congenial atmosphere.

Jimmy began to think about proposing to Gloria several weeks before he got around to it on May 20th, which was his birthday. This was the first time Jimmy had ever asked a girl to marry him—outside movies, that is. In pictures, he'd always had the choicest of dialogue for such occasions, and he found himself wishing now that he could think up something really distinctive. Some way of asking the girl in a way she'd never forget.

Well, he made it all right, but the words will never be preserved for posterity because he was a little nervous at the time.

"I just asked her if she'd have me and she said yes," he remembers.

After a while, Jimmy is going to take his girl back to Indiana, Pennsylvania, and show her off to the home folks—some of whom, by the way, weren't too sure that this Stewart boy would ever amount to very much in the world.

"Uh-huh," Jimmy ruminates, "I was quite a problem. I didn't realize it at the time. Everything I did seemed to be logical, but the end results were something else again. Thinking back, my earliest recollection is the time I ran away from home. I wasn't going anywhere—just down to the hardware store a few blocks away. Got there all right, navigating really fine even though I was only four at the time. Walked right in and said to my dad, 'Well, here I am!'

"Dad wasn't much for talking. He just looked at me and said, 'Son, let's go out in back.' So we did. We sat down on a couple of nail barrels and he began whittling with his pocket knife. I thought that was pretty nice of him, going to all that trouble to carve something for me out of that board he had. Yup, it wasn't until I saw what he was whittling that I began to lose interest. It was quite a thing—a big, solid paddle. He didn't say a word, just whopped me good about eight times."

That's the way it was with Jimmy and his father. And maybe his dad's example accounts for Jimmy's growing up not wanting to do a lot of talking about this or that, or himself. When Alex Stewart made a point, words weren't necessary.

"Come to think of it," Jimmy declared, "if I'm not too hard to get along with now, maybe it's because I got a lot of hell-raisin' out of my system when I was a kid. Not that I ever really intended to get into trouble. I was just mighty curious. Still am, I guess."

He sure was. He ran around with a bunch of kids who were like millions of other American kids before and after. "I'm lucky I stayed out of the penitentiary for what happened one time with a train. We were looking at this thing when it pulled into the station, and being mechanical-minded, I wanted to find out how the air brakes worked. Well, we found out that by moving a certain gadget, the steam came out with a wonderful hissing sound. Then, after awhile, we worked our way up to the front of the train where I discovered I could ease all the steam out of the brakes clear to the end of the train with one manipulation.

"I was pretty proud of myself. Then I looked up—and there was the train crew. They picked us up by the scruff of our necks and our feet didn't touch ground until we got to the hardware store. I don't remember what happened to the other guys, but Dad got out that bat he'd carved. Didn't say a word. Just let me have it. And ever since, I haven't had any interest in what makes a train stop or go."

Yes sir, when Jimmy brings his bride

MODERN SCREEN

"I've been proposing for 20 years now, Matildo. Isn't it time you gave up on Francis X. Bushmon?"

back to the old home town, sure as shootin' there's going to be some old timers who'll say, "Well, Alex Stewart's boy's finally got himself a real nice wife." And then they'll add, "Funny thing—never would have thought the way he started out he'd turn into such a solid citizen."

Yup, as Jimmy says, you can kind of see it now. . . . Jimmy and the folks in the front room. Maybe Gloria'll show 'em she's got a talent for the piano. The same one they used to try to get Jimmy to practice on is still there. Jimmy's mother says he was quite a disappointment in that department. He just made a noise as if he were practicing and never took an interest in music until Dad bought that old accordion at the Salvation Army. It was a present for his sister, Virginia, but she couldn't lift it.

As it turned out, though, that accordion was what really got Jimmy started. Helped him get into the Triangle Club show at Princeton. Then, when he was graduated, he joined up with the Falmouth Players in Massachusetts. Not as an actor, though. He played the accordion in a tearoom until the customers objected, so they let him act instead.

At this time, while Jimmy was breaking into show business, Gloria McLean, his bride-to-be years later, was just entering high school in Larchmont. It's doubtful whether Gloria would have been much impressed, being around 13 at the time, with this raw-boned apprentice actor who made his Broadway debut at the Biltmore Theater in Carrie Nation. As for Jimmy, if by some miracle she had been transplanted backstage at the moment, he would have looked at her and said, "Out of my way, child. I'm a busy man."

And he was.

In Carrie Nation, Jimmy did more acting in one job than he has ever done since. He played a gardener, a sheriff, a vigilante, a deputy, and a man in a crowd wearing a derby hat. For this last character, he came in walking on his knees, figuring that way the audience wouldn't recognize him as the four other people.

The play wasn't good or bad, but it was the beginning of a career that led to Hollywood.

Jimmy has a way of keeping his friends. Consider Billy Grady, whom he chose as best man for his wedding. It was Billy who brought Jimmy into the office of Harry Rapf when that producer was looking for a man to play the part of Shorty along with Spencer Tracy in Murder Man back in 1934.

Rapf took one look at Jimmy, then turned to Billy and yelled, "Are you trying to kid me? We want an actor to play Shorty and you bring me in a man 12 feet tall!"

"Couldn't we rewrite the script," Grady suggested, "and call the character Slim?"

Raft snorted. "Nothing doing. The character is Shorty and he stays Shorty."

Even so, Jimmy played the role, and he didn't do it on his knees. He credits Grady with having a great deal to do with his success in pictures. Another good friend—this one tied up with his romance—Jack Bolton, Jimmy's agent.

Way last February, when Jimmy and Gloria first started going together, Jack Bolton and his wife, Peggy, invited them on a fishing trip down around Mazatlan, Mexico. They flew down and for the first two days the results were nil. Then the fish began to cooperate and in two-and-a-half hours they established the season's record, catching five marlin.

"Gloria," Bolton says, "is one of the wonderful people. She's not the exotic type. She has the glamor of reality, and she'd be just as much at home shooting marbles with kids on the corner as she would in the swankiest Bel-Air drawing room."

Matter of fact, Gloria has two children by her former marriage to Ned McLean—Ronald, five, and Michael, three. They are a couple of fine little fellows whose mother never treats them as pampered darlings, as was observed by a friend who watched her send them off to bed one evening. Instead of kissing them and saying, "Goodnight, sweeties" in approved Hollywood fashion, she swooped them up and, after being partially strangled by bear-hugs, saluted them with, "So long, men."

It was Gloria who caught the biggest marlin on that trip which was the beginning of her romance with Jimmy. It took her 40 minutes to land the critter—which tipped the scales at 185 pounds.

Bolton took one look at it and whistled, "Some fish!"

"Yup," Jimmy retorted. "And some girl!"

He's right. Look what she landed.

THE END

. . . AND THE LIVING IS BREEZY

(Continued from page 42)

two high-backed chairs covered in Wedgewood blue linen.

The Andrews were married nine years ago. David, Dana's son by his first marriage, was seven at the time. Mary remembers how, in the courtship days, the three of them used to go on picnics to Lake Malibu, and how David took her for granted in his little world and called her "Mary" as though she were his contemporary. She was worried then, for she didn't quite know how he'd take her and Dana's marriage, and whether he'd ever call her "Mother" naturally. She decided to do nothing about the matter, just to wait and see what would happen. When Dana and Mary were first married and had a small apartment, David stayed with his grandmother. But when they moved a few months later, David moved into the rooms Mary had fixed up for him—and it's been his home ever since. He has a wood-panelled study with lots of shelves and cabinets for his mechanical gadgets, a short-wave radio and a writing desk. Off the study are his sleeping quarters, with a man-sized bed and a yellow decorative scheme.

David came into Mary's room the day she got home from the hospital with baby Kathy. He stood hesitantly in the doorway, as Mary smiled at him from her blue chaise longue—then came forward to inspect his new sister. Kathy's face was red and rather angry, and she waved one tiny foot at him. David took the foot in his hand and closed his fingers round her ankle. For a moment he said nothing, then he lifted his serious face to Mary.

"When the baby gets a little older, she's going to think it funny if I keep calling you 'Mary'," he said. "I think I'd better start calling you 'Mother'—right now." That decision made, he gently released Kathy's foot and hurried off to put a new condenser in his radio. Mary marks that moment as a definite milestone in her marriage.

Dana first got interested in boats when his stand-in took him out for a mild afternoon's sail at Newport harbor. Dana, who never does anything by halves, soon found

GET Coets

FOR REMOVING NAIL POLISH

HANDY COTTON SQUARES
DOZENS OF COSMETIC USES
80 FOR 29¢ 40 FOR 15¢
At drugstore and cosmetic counters

QUICK! EASY! CASH FOR YOU SELL
Amazing variety! Profits to 100% Show novel Plastic, 3-dimension "Stage Set," Metallic, Christmas Carol cards. Deluxe Gift Wraps. Animated Books, Napkins, Table settings. 14 special money-saving offers. Bonus. Write for Feature samples on approval and FREE SAMPLES 4 different Name Imprinted Christmas Card lines, Floral and Personal Stationery
Distinctive NEW CHRISTMAS CARDS
INCLUDING NEWEST PLASTICS
ELMIRA GREETING CARD CO., Dept. MA-141, Elmira, N.Y.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"
Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

FREE PHOTO
DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD
LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c for handling.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309, Dept. L-89, Hollywood 28, Calif.

EASY EXTRA MONEY
Sell New CHRISTMAS CARDS From Sunny California
Show friends, sensational 21-Card $1 Christmas Assortment with Patented Television Card. Sells like wild fire! Up to 100% profit. 7 Super Name-Imprinted lines, 50 for $1, up. New Plastic Christmas Cards, many other money-makers. Send for FREE SAMPLES.
IDEAL CARD CO., 165 N. Hill Ave., PASADENA 4, CALIF. DEPT. 708.
FREE SAMPLES—WRITE TODAY!

CALLING FOR PRACTICAL NURSES!

EASY TO LEARN AT HOME
Help fill the need for Trained Practical Nurses, in your community or travel. Wayne Training Plan, welcomed by doctors, prepares you for experience—at home in spare time. Many earn while learning. NO HIGH SCHOOL NEEDED. Ages 18 to 55 accepted. Nurses Outfit included. Easy payments. Information & sample of lessons Free. Write today.
Wayne School of Practical Nursing, Inc., 2301 N. Wayne Av. DeskK-43, Chicago 14, Ill.
Excellent Earning Opportunity for Full or Spare Time

Let Christmas Cards Bring You
BIG MONEY!

You'll have all the extra dollars you need ... if you start now to sell our luxurious Christmas Cards. Friends, relatives, businessmen, are delighted with smart designs, extra-value trims, joyous sentiments of our FEATURE Christmas Assortment. At only $1 for these wondrous boxes of 21 Greeting Cards they sell fast. Just show samples.

Your Profit: Up to 50¢ Per Box!

Religious, Gift Wraps, Everyday, Birthday, Plastic Cards, many other money-making Assortments. Also FREE SAMPLES of Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards to sell at 50 for $1 and up. Extra-money plan for churches, clubs, organizations. Write for samples.

Get FREE Samples

WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC.
749 Monroe Ave., Dept. R77, Rochester 2, N.Y.

"Birthstone Ring" GIVEN

Made in 1/40–14k rolled Gold plate–Set in your favorite Birthstone color. Order 4 boxes famous Rosebud Salve, sell at 25c a box, remit the $1.00 and select this lovely "Tailored Ring" mounted with a "brilliant" full ten cut machine stone set in your size and month Birthstone color. GUARANTEED. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 along with your order.)
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO, Box 59, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

AMAZING We guarantee you $50.00 for selling 100 boxes 21 for $1 Xmas cards; also 50 and 25 for $1 with name on; also Napkins and Stationery. No experience needed. Costs nothing to try. Samples and Selling Plan on approval.

MERIT
370 Plone St. Dept. G Newark, N. J.

BROKEN JEWELRY WANTED
All kinds. Highest cash prices paid for rings, jewelry, spectacles, gold teeth, diamonds, broken and usable watches, etc. Cash mailed promptly. Write for FREE shipping container.
LOWE'S, Dept. MS
Holland Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FREE 24 PAGE CATALOG

STAMPED LINENS at 1/2 CATALOG PRICE
Buy direct from manufacturer—and save! Seamless tubing pillow cases, show sheets, scarfs, luncheon sets, tablecloths, show towels, aprons, infants' garments, etc. Complete embroidering instructions free. It's easy. Write:
MERRIBEE ART EMBROIDERY CO.
Dept. 291 22 West 21st St., New York 10, N.Y.

MAKE $27.50 CASH . . .
Sell New PLASTIC Christmas Cards
Easiest money you ever made. Show gorgeous Christmas PLASTIC folders, Box Assortment of 15 for $1.25. Exciting fast sellers — you make up to 55c per box. Also Name Imprinted Christmas cards, 50 for $1 and up. Over 50 other Christmas and Everyday assortments in complete line. Get FREE Personal Samples. Assortments on approval.
CHAS. C. SCHWER CO., Dept. 61B, Westfield, Mass.

For Selling Only 50 Boxes
Send for FREE Name Samples

Easy as A-B-C

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher
LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY SAVING WAY
Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you are playing popular music. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1448 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y. 51st year.
FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1448 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.
Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).
Have you
Instrument..... Instrument?.....
Name.....
(Please Print)
Address.....

himself the owner of not one, but three boats of his own. All within the space of three months. Five years later, he still has two of them, and parks them at Terminal Island. There, they rock at anchor from week to week, ready at instant notice for jaunts to Santa Barbara or Catalina.

On ordinary fishing trips, Dana takes the whole family. Mary dresses the kids warmly in blue jeans and pullovers and they fish as though their lives depended on it. Kathy has just recently landed her first catch, a two-pound bass. She landed it unassisted, except for a maternal hand on the belt of her pants. Stevie is still hoping. Quivering like a bird dog, he has almost dived into the ocean in his anxiety to scoop up his prey. So far, the wily bass that have nibbled so tantalizingly at his live bait, manage to nibble and scram with disheartening regularity. In a little while it will be Susan's turn to fish. She has already inherited Stevie's outgrown polo shirts, but right now she'd rather tug at Dana's hair or scramble over the deck on all fours.

having wonderful time . . .

Mary had the time of her life on their trip to England. She haunted antique shops and auctions from London to Oxford and brought home a crateful of treasures for the house. Old English bellows for the den fireplace, chestnut tongs of gleaming brass, and an Old English coach horn for the mantel.

"Everything was dated prior to 1830, so in that way we didn't have to pay any duty on our finds," Mary says delightedly. "The whole trip was wonderful, particularly for the children. We got a good English Nanny to take them on trips to the zoo, Kensington Gardens, and Hampstead Heath. They got a real child's-eye view of the London sights and once when I got lost, Kathy showed me the way home.

"We had a few bad weeks waiting for the Queen Elizabeth to sail home. First, dock strikes held us up, and then it was the fog. Being cooped up aboard the ship with nowhere to go was pretty dull—but I used the time in teaching Kathy to read from the primers I'd brought along. That is, while I wasn't keeping an eye on Stevie, who had a horrible habit of hanging out the porthole to see how far he could reach without losing his balance."

Every morning, chunky young Stevie would leap from his bunk and scramble over his prostrate mother to the porthole over her bed. He'd survey the sky and the sea and then shake his head portentously.

"Uh-uh. We don't sail today. Too foggy," he would announce cheerfully. For three days he was right. Then came the great day. Stevie made his usual leap to Mary's bed and peered outside.

"Fog's going away. We'll sail today," he squealed. To Mary's amazement, they did. The captain of the Queen Elizabeth was evidently of the same opinion as Stevie, for a few hours after Stevie's pronouncement, the Queen was heading for the open sea.

Dana has been treating his four-year-old with added respect ever since. Seems to think he'll be quite a help on the Vileehi this summer. THE END

You'll want to read the screen story of Dana Andrews' newest movie, Sword in the Desert, in the August issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

Promise of Love is an experience that you owe yourself—that no one should miss. Written by MARY RENAULT, this is a story of an emotion so great that it overcame all obstacles.

A DELL BOOK ONLY 25c

At first it was heaven on earth, this love of theirs—then the girl realized that she brought her lover nothing new and exciting.
She tried an experiment—innocent at the time—but destined to have a far-reaching effect on their lives. This story will be an inspiration to all women.

• ● •

OTHER DELL BOOKS YOU'LL LIKE

Dr. Hudson's Secret Journal
by LLOYD C. DOUGLAS, author of the best-seller, "The Big Fisherman"

Satin Straps
Another fast-moving MAYSIE GREIG novel.

dell books—25c
GOOD READING FOR EVERYONE

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 20)

passel of Westward-ho'ers. Stanton and Cox neglect to tell these settlers that their land is awful dry, because Rod and Don control all the water in the area from a dam on their ranch. The settlers feel they've been gypped, ond they holler to Stanton and Cox. Rod and Don won't help, because they don't want the settlers around, puttin' up fences, and wreckin' it for the cows. Stanton, sick of the settlers' complaints, decides he'll blow up the boys' dam, and send the water coursing through the vicinity. When Don surprises him with dynamite in hand, he kills Don. After that, he sends men to stampede Rod's and Don's cattle off a cliff. He's not going along on that party though; he's staying to blow up the dam, like the stubborn cuss he is. Rod, his cattle stampeded (in one of the grimmest scenes of all time), his brother killed, his visage stony, goes to the dam. First he kills Stanton. Then he's joined by the daughter (Gale Storm) of one of the settlers. She loves him. That's all he's got left. That and his dam. But he decides the dam never brought him anything but trouble anyway, so he blows it up himself. Now the settlers will have water, and he'll have a settler's daughter. Probably even have to become a settler (whatever they do). Didn't seem to be much future for a cattleman there.

SORROWFUL JONES

Cast: Bob Hope, Lucille Ball, Mary Jane Saunders, William Demarest, Bruce Cabot.
Paramount

In this one, Bob Hope's a Broadway bookie, ond a miser—but a hard-working, sincere miser. Damon Runyon wrote the original story. It's funny and crazy and sentimental—the kind of mixture Runyon was famous for. Hope is Sorrowful Jones, Lucille Ball loves him despite her better self. She hasn't seen him in four years, but she recognizes him by his suit. Lucille's a night club singer and her boss (Bruce Cabot) is a louse. He thinks he owns Lucille and the horse-racing racket (but don't worry, he gets his). Sorrowful has to pay graft to this cur to make a killing on a horse called Dreamy Joe. Seems Dreamy Joe runs on speedballs. (Slip him three and he'll fly.) Now enters a poor, deluded fool, Orville Smith (Paul Lees). Orville thinks he can beat this racket, but unfortunately, he doesn't own a dime. He leaves his five-year-old daughter, Mary Jane Saunders, with Sorrowful as security for a $20 bet and he goes off and gets himself tossed into the East River. Seems he overhears Cabot's plot to fix Dreamy Joe's race and he's gonna tell. Anyway, the police find him in the river with a $20 marker in his pocket. (Now it gets complicated.) Mary Jane doesn't have a place to go, so Sorrowful takes her home. Eventually, he amazes everyone by moving to a high class joint—he wants to treat this child proper. He breaks open his piggy bank to buy her milk, he buys her dresses—all that soft stuff. Meanwhile, the police are on Cabot's trail, so Cabot registers Dreamy Joe in Mary Jane's name. He doesn't know who her father was. When he finds out, he wants to get rid of Mary Jane and Sorrowful Jones. (Children in institutions and dead men don't talk—get it?) When Cabot's men come to get Mary Jane, Sorrowful hides her on the firescape—from whence she falls. Scene shifts to the hospital day before the race. Mary Jane's delirious. She keeps calling for Daddy and Dreamy Joe. Sorrowful dashes out to the racetrack, steals Dreamy Joe, gallops down Broadway (better than a Western) and into the hospital. It's pretty funny when Hope walks Dreamy Joe into the elevator. A doctor looks at the horse inquiringly. "Oh, him," Sorrowful laughs apologetically, "that's my brother—he thinks he's a horse." A lot more happens—but you can guess. It's nice; it's heartwarming—and there's Hope.

Sorrowful Jones: Hope tokes core of Mory Jone Sounders in Domon Runyon's rocetrack tole.

BLONDES! Wash Hair Lighter, Shinier, SAFELY

New home shampoo made with ANDIUM helps keep hair from darkening... brightens faded hair...gives wonderful luster. Safe for children. Get it at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

Blondex SHAMPOO

MADE SPECIALLY FOR BLONDES

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW AND SENSATIONAL IN CHRISTMAS CARDS

MAKE Extra MONEY FAST

Gorgeous Satin Velour & Plastic Show Rich New Cards never before offered. Amazing Value! Gets Easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% Cash Profit. FREE SAMPLES of Gorgeous Christmas Cards With Name 50 for $1, Imprinted Stationery, Floral Charmettes, Napkins. 50 other assortments 60c to $1.25. Samples on approval. Write today for Samples and money-making facts.

50 FOR $1 With Name

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 95-K, St. Louis 3, Mo.

SHORTHAND in 6 Weeks at Home

Famous Speedwriting system. No signs; no symbols; no machines; uses ABC's. Easy to learn; easy to write and transcribe. Low cost. 100,000 taught by mail. For business and Civil Service. Also typing. 26th year. Write for free booklet to:

Speedwriting®

Dept. 808-9, 55 W. 42 St., New York 18

Fast Way to MAKE MONEY!

Sell Christmas Cards

It's easy! Just show SIX big NAME-IMPRINT Lines to friends—low as 50 for $1. Make up to 50c on 21-card DeLuxe Box. Also show Secret Pal, Plastics, Eastern Star, Religious, Relative, Gift Wraps, Birthday, Stationery, KIDDY Cards, Books, and Records. Most COMPLETE Line in country. Extra Cash Bonus! WRITE NOW for FREE Imprint Samples and 2 Feature boxes on approval. MIDWEST CARD CO., 415 N. 8th St. Dept. 17-P, St. Louis 1, Mo.

50 for $1 With Name

GET FREE Samples

FREE PHOTO

LARGE GLOSSY PICTURE of your favorite MOVIE STAR

INTRODUCTORY OFFER

direct rom HOLLYWOOD, home of the STARS. Send name of your FAVORITE STAR with fifteen cents, to cover handling and mailing and receive also our beautiful catalog with names and pictures of hundreds of STARS.

★ Hollywood Stars ★

4633 HOLLYWOOD BLVD., BOX 9747 Dept. D3 HOLLYWOOD 27 CALIFORNIA

Montgomery Clift

MONEY FOR YOU—SELL CHRISTMAS CARDS—UP TO 100% PROFIT

FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1 NAME PRINTED CARDS, NAPKINS AND STATIONERY

$50 PROFIT selling 100 Leader Boxes. Complete line 50 new, fast selling Christmas, Everyday boxes, Plastics, Carols. Big variety embossed cards, napkins, stationery with name, 50 for $1 up. No money needed to start. Special Offers. Cash Bonus. Write for samples.

EMPIRE CARD CO. 210 FOX ST. ELMIRA, N. Y.

LEARN AT HOME TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates.

HIGH SCHOOL NOT REQUIRED

50th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men, women, 18 to 60. Easy tuition payments. Trial plan.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

Dept. 238, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.

Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____

City_____ State_____ Age_____

Neptune's Daughter: Esther Williams is a career-minded girl in the bathing suit business with Keenan Wynn. Betty Garrett's her sister.

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER

Cast: Esther Williams, Red Skelton, Betty Garrett, Ricardo Montalban, Keenan Wynn.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

With a title like Neptune's Daughter, you know it's going to be Esther Williams. With a studio like MGM, you know it's going to be Technicolor. These simple truths established, we can proceed. Esther's a swimming champ who goes into business with Keenan Wynn, to design, manufacture and sell bathing suits. You should see the lush layout they've got. Complete to large landscaped pool where they put on their fashion shows. Keenan loves Esther, but she's a career girl. Her main worry is sister Betty Garrett. Betty falls in love a lot, and she's none too bright. Right now, she's read that the South American polo team is in town, and she's declared herself enamored of the entire aggregation. Esther says Betty must stop chasing men. "Men are men," she says, "and women are women, and you can't change it." "I don't want to change it," says Betty. "I just want to get in on it." Eventually, she fastens on Red Skelton, whom she discovers in the captain-of-the-South-American-polo-team's dressing-room. (She happened to be passing through the neighborhood.) She assumes Red's the captain, though he's really just a dopey masseur. That's one romance that starts in a blaze of glory. Esther also finds love when she meets the real captain, Ricardo Montalban. There's oodles of mistaken identity (captain, captain, everybody's got a captain), there are dance sequences which are nothing short of orgiastic (Cugat plays, and the spectators throb), there's the wonderful song, "Baby, It's Cold Outside," there are crooked gamblers, and kidnapping, and slapstick; it's an entirely satisfying movie.

SAND

Cast: Mark Stevens, Coleen Gray, Rory Calhoun, Charley Grapewin.
20th Century-Fox

Here's a picture version of Will James' "Sand." And, I might add, there is no particular reason why it should be called Sand. I didn't see no sand. I didn't hear no talk about sand, and I didn't under-sand it. Otherwise, I guess I have no fault to find. Mark Stevens plays the Technicolored owner of a prize horse (worth $35,000) who escapes into the wilds of the West from a blazing box car. The box car (along with the rest of the train) is en route to California. Well, Mark wants to find that hoss. He gets help from rancher Coleen Gray, and her old grandpappy, Charles Grapewin. (Grandpappy's eager to pair off Coleen and Mark; he treats them like a couple of blooded horses.) Coleen's foreman, Rory Calhoun, loves Coleen and hates Mark. You see, he shot at Mark's prize horse (thought it was a wild stallion) and killed, instead, his own prize mare. Rory's mare meant a lot to Rory, and from then on, he's not to be trusted. He'd rather kill Mark's horse than bring him back alive. Mark's horse, meanwhile, has turned a mite crazy, due to various encounters with wild animals and some Indians who try to brand him on the ear. Mark keeps tracking him through the hills, but the horse keeps right on going, only stopping long enough to neigh derisively, or to paw some innocent human in the face. It looks for a time as though he's become a real killer (he sure doesn't want to come back and be civilized again) and then we have the trouble between Rory and Mark to settle, etc. This picture won't strain your brain, but maybe it will relax your nerves.

also showing . . .

capsule criticism of films previously reviewed

ADVENTURE IN BALTIMORE (RKO)—Shirley Temple, as a young lady of 1905 who thinks women ought to vote and has other radical notions, gets herself, her parents—Robert Young and Josephine Hutchinson—and neighbor John Agar in various fixes. Brightly performed by all concerned, pleasant and amusing.

THE BARKLEYS OF BROADWAY (MGM)—An extremely happy re-teaming of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, just what we've all been waiting for. There's a story—something about the female member of a bigtime musical comedy team wanting to be a great actress—but it doesn't matter much. What does matter are the clever lines, the good songs and the wonderful dancing. In Technicolor, with Oscar Levant and Billie Burke.

CHAMPION (U.A.)—Kirk Douglas punches and double-crosses his way to the top of the prizefight racket, wrecking a few lives en route. A tense, exciting and realistic film, brilliantly acted, directed and photographed. With Paul Stewart, Ruth Roman, Arthur Kennedy and Marilyn Maxwell.

EDWARD, MY SON (MGM)—Spencer Tracy, determined to become rich and powerful for his son's sake, doesn't let morality, legality or common decency stand in his way while achieving that goal. An absorbingly dramatic picture, well performed. With Deborah Kerr, Ian Hunter, and Leueen MacGrath.

FLAMINGO ROAD (Warners)—Carnival dancer Joan Crawford, tired of being pushed around by Sydney Greenstreet, a political despot, decides to play the game his ruthless way and rapidly rises in the world. The background of crooked politics is convincingly presented, the complicated plot moves along fast, and the acting is good. With Zachary Scott, David Brian and Gladys George.

THE FORBIDDEN STREET (20th-Fox)—Maureen O'Hara, a young lady of the Victorian era, marries [illegible] to live with him in the slums, to her sorrow. He dies, along comes a nice young down-and-outer, together they find romantic and financial happiness. Dana Andrews plays both men's roles. Slow, but well acted.

THE FOUNTAINHEAD (Warners)—Gary Cooper is a famous architect with rather psychopathic ideas of integrity (when they change his plans for a low-cost housing development, he dynamites it). Patricia Neal is a rich girl who gets a yen for him. With Raymond Massey, Kent Smith, Robert Douglas and Henry Hull.

HOME OF THE BRAVE (U.A.)—A powerfully outspoken study of racial discrimination, told in terms of the story of one young Negro G. I. in World War II Pacific warfare. James Edwards, as the Negro, gives a tremendously moving performance, and Douglas Dick, Steve Brodie, Frank Lovejoy, Lloyd Bridges and Jeff Corey lend effective support. A tight, absorbing and exciting drama.

ILLEGAL ENTRY (Univ.-Int.)—Immigration Service investigator Howard Duff becomes a member of a gang of alien-smuggling racketeers to get the goods on them. Done in semi-documentary style, this has a large quota of pretty breathtaking thrills. With George Brent, Marta Toren, Paul Stewart and Gar Moore.

THE LADY GAMBLES (Univ.-Int.)—Barbara Stanwyck as a luckless lady who just can't stop gambling. Presumably a study of human frailty à la Lost Weekend, it never, despite Stanwyck's all-out performance, quite achieves reality. With Robert Preston, Stephen McNally, Edith Barrett and John Hoyt.

THE GREAT SINNER (MGM)—Another gambling drama—a big, lush, highly entertaining one laid in a fashionable European resort in the 1860's. Gregory Peck becomes a gambling addict, rapidly degenerates, then is brought back to respectability by spiritual rebirth and Ava Gardner—who started him downward in the first place. The outstanding cast includes Walter Huston, Melvyn Douglas, Ethel Barrymore and Frank Morgan.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING (Warners)—June Haver as the late Marilyn Miller in a Technicolor biography of the famous musical comedy star. Much singing and dancing, of course. With Ray Bolger, Gordon MacRae and Charles Ruggles.

LUST FOR GOLD (Columbia)—A violent Western about a lost gold mine, with Glenn Ford, Ida Lupino, Gig Young and Will Geer. Good show.

MASSACRE RIVER (Allied Artists)—Guy Madison, Rory Calhoun, Cathy Downs, Carole Mathews, Johnny Sands and a number of redskins involved in a good deal of gunfire on the post-Civil War frontier. A solid, satisfying, well-executed Western.

MR. BELVEDERE GOES TO COLLEGE (20-Fox)—The vastly talented Mr. Belvedere of Sitting Pretty fame, again superbly portrayed by Clifton Webb, becomes a beanie-wearing freshman. Among the collegiate lives he influences are those of Shirley Temple and Tom Drake. A lot of fun.

SCOTT OF THE ANTARCTIC (Eagle-Lion)—The story of the British explorer, Captain Robert Scott, and his ill-fated attempt, in 1910, to be the first man to reach the South Pole. Done with elaborate authenticity, this remarkable Technicolor film contains some of the most magnificent and terrifying vistas ever photographed. The all-British cast, with John Mills as Scott, is first rate.

THE STRATTON STORY (MGM)—A fine and inspiring biography of Monty Stratton, the big league baseball pitcher who came back after losing a leg in a hunting accident. Jimmy Stewart, as Stratton, and June Allyson, as his girl, give memorable performances. With Frank Morgan, Agnes Moorehead and Bill Williams.

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME (MGM)—Esther Williams owns a baseball club in Teddy Roosevelt's day, and among her players are Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra. A very diverting Technicolor musical, with Betty Garrett, Edward Arnold and Jules Munshin.

TULSA (Eagle-Lion)—A drama of the oil fields, showing how Susan Hayward gets rich and materialistic. Plenty of spectacular action and good acting. With Robert Preston, Pedro Armendariz and Lloyd Gough. Technicolor.

Make UP TO $460.00 by Christmas IN YOUR SPARE TIME

AND GET YOUR OWN DRESSES WITHOUT COST as an extra bonus

What a happy holiday you can have—with money worries off your mind! Starting right away, you can earn up to $23 a week in spare time, just by showing Fashion Frocks to your friends and neighbors. Like some exceptional Fashion Frocks representatives, that would mean up to $460 in the 20 weeks before Christmas, to spend any way you want! And get your own lovely dresses, too, as a bonus! — without paying a cent! This remarkable opportunity is offered by FASHION FROCKS, INC. Our dresses are bought by women in every state, and nearly every county. We need new representatives right away to take orders in spare time and send them to us. Any woman, even without previous experience, can act as our representative. Whether you are married or single — housewife or employed — you can get the chance to obtain stunning dresses as a bonus — dresses that will not cost you a penny. In addition, you can make splendid weekly cash commissions — up to $23 and $25 a week, or more! You simply take orders when and where you please for FASHION FROCKS—gorgeous originals of exquisite fabrics, unbelievably low-priced down to $2.98. For every order, you get paid in cash on the spot.

NO CANVASSING—NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED

Each dress carries the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval and our own unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back. No house-to-house canvassing is needed. When women see these exclusive styles—so different from run-of-the-mill dresses — so easy to buy without going to crowded stores — they just can't help but order 2 and 3 at a time! Amazing variety of styles, colors, weaves, and patterns. Famous fabrics that are soft, rich, enduring. And a complete range of sizes for every type of figure—Misses, Half-Sizes, Juniors and Stouts. With these features, you don't need previous experience to take in steady cash earnings, week after week! Can't you use a handy extra income—especially with Christmas coming on? And wouldn't you like your own lovely dresses without cost? Just mail the coupon!

DIAMOND POINT worsted rayon suit sparkles with the new long-lines look.

STRIPES in finest cotton have slenderizing ways for half sizes.

PRIDE OF AMERICA gingham — crisp and fresh with jaunty waffle-bib front.

START EARNING RIGHT AWAY!

Christmas will be here before you know it. So don't put off writing in. Get started earning extra money for the things you want. Your Style Portfolio — with samples of America's finest fabrics — is absolutely free. Make up your mind right now — then send the coupon. There's no obligation, nothing to pay. Paste the coupon on a postcard, and mail it today!

Free PORTFOLIO OF LATEST FALL DRESSES as low as $2.98

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE EXCEPTIONAL CASH EARNINGS LIKE THESE?

Marie Patton, Illinois — took in an average of $39 a week, this past year.

Mrs. Carl C. Birch, Maryland—earned an average of $36 a week—and loved every minute of it!

Mrs. Claude Burnett, Alabama — averaged $31.50 a week right in her home community.

Fashion Frocks INC.

Desk C-2054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio

PASTE THIS COUPON ON POSTCARD — mail now!

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Desk C-2054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio

YES—I am interested in your opportunity to make money in spare time and get my own dresses without a penny of cost. Send me everything I need to start right away, without obligation.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *Zone*____ *State*_____

*Age*_____ *Dress Size*_____

Mrs. Llewellyn Lord Jr.

In a drawing room—or at a drawing board—petite, elfin "Jinx" Lord proves again that Baltimore society is rightly famous for lovely women. Her jewels are by Harry Winston . . . her ermine cape is from Maison Leon . . . her cigarette is Camel!

"Jinx" Lord made the 30-day Camel test!

Result? In her own words:

"Camels are the best-tasting cigarette I ever smoked—and so mild!"

And Mrs. Lord's words are echoed by millions of Camel smokers. They have found that these superb tobaccos have a mildness and flavor that put Camel in a class by itself.

If you've never given Camels a real, day-to-day tryout. now's the time to start your own 30-day test!

Like "Jinx" Lord and millions of other Camel enthusiasts, you may well find yourself saying, "Best cigarette I ever smoked!"

So try Camel's mildness and flavor in your "T-Zone"—T for Taste and Throat—your proving ground for a cigarette. Try Camels for 30 days—see how mild a cigarette can be!

According to a Nationwide survey:

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE

Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Camels for Mildness

In a recent test of hundreds of people who smoked only Camels for 30 days, noted throat specialists, making weekly examinations, reported

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

"WHY OUR LOVE FAILED" – Dan Dailey

15c

AUG 11 1949 ©C1B 204881

modern screen

September

A DELL MAGAZINE
DELL
A DELL MAGAZINE

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIAL RECORD
AUG 1949
2

PER

BETTY GRABLE

There's new skin beauty in your First Cake of Camay!

MRS. JOHN LESLIE GRIFFIN, JR.
lovely Camay Bride from Orange, N. J. bridal portrait by Wm. Hess

Music set the theme for the Griffins' courtship. They often go to concerts in Boston where Griff's finishing college. Hazel won that softer, lovelier skin with her very first cake of Camay!

Their first dinner guests were two of Griff's classmates. Everything went smoothly. Hazel even baked a cherry pie! She's a good cook. And her recipe for beauty is on the Camay wrapper.

Romance is near when your skin is soft and clear! Yes, and your first cake of Camay can help make your skin softer... lovelier. So give up careless cleansing—go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay's beauty promise on the skins of scores of women.

Almost all these women won smoother, softer complexions, each using one cake of Camay. Follow directions on the Camay wrapper—and you'll be lovelier, too!

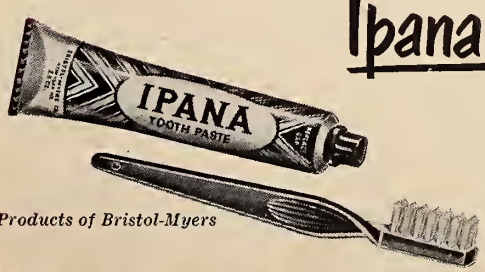
Camay the soap of beautiful women

"Try the IPANA way—dentists say it works!"

...says junior model Jane Werner — who shows how it can work for your smile

Ahoy there! It's 17-year-old Jane Werner, New York cover girl... whose date thinks her sunny smile is the brightest thing on deck! That Ipana smile helped launch Jane on her mighty promising career, too!

Top-flight junior models like Jane know the importance of firm, healthy gums to a sparkling smile. "I follow the Ipana way to healthier gums and brighter teeth," Jane explains, "because dentists say it works!" Try this professionally approved Ipana dental care. See how it can work for you, too...



The Ipana way, as Jane demonstrates here, is pleasant ... and easy as 1, 2:

1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all tooth surfaces with Ipana Tooth Paste at least twice a day.
2. Then massage gums the way your dentist advises—to stimulate gum circulation. (Ipana's unique formula actually helps stimulate your gums. You can feel the invigorating tingle!)

Try this for healthier gums, brighter teeth—an Ipana smile. Ipana refreshes mouth and breath, too. Ask your dentist about Ipana and massage. Remember, a good dentifrice, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

YES, 8 OUT OF 10 DENTISTS SAY:

Ipana dental care promotes Healthier gums, brighter teeth*

Products of Bristol-Myers

 In thousands of recent reports from dentists all over the country.

P.S. For correct brushing, use the DOUBLE DUTY Tooth Brush with the twist in the handle. 1000 dentists helped design it!

NOW! PROOF that brushing teeth right after eating is the safe, effective way to

HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY with Colgate Dental Cream

NOW dental science offers proof that always using Colgate Dental Cream right after eating helps stop tooth decay before it starts!

Continuous research—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most important news in dental history!

X-RAYS SHOW HOW PROPER USE OF COLGATE'S HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY

Eminent dental authorities supervised 2 groups of college men and women for over a year. One group always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating. The other followed usual dental care. X-rays were taken at regular intervals.

The average of the group using Colgate's as directed was a startling reduction in number of cavities—far less tooth decay! The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

The Colgate Dental Cream now at your dealer's is the same formula used in the tests. No claim is made that using Colgate's can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating is the safe, proved way to help prevent new cavities, help stop tooth decay with Colgate Dental Cream.

Always Use Colgate's* to Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth —and HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY!
Right after eating*

NO CHANGE IN FLAVOR, FOAM, OR CLEANSING ACTION!

SEPTEMBER, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

WAS MARGARET O'BRIEN TO BLAME?.....by Florabel Muir 20
MY HEART DECEIVED ME.....by Doris Day 24
WHY DAN DAILEY'S MARRIAGE FAILED.....by Hedda Hopper 30
AM I CHEATING MY CHILDREN?.....by Susan Hayward 32
HOW PHONY CAN YOU GET! (Richard Widmark).....by Carl Schroeder 34
JUDY'S ALL RIGHT! (Judy Garland).....by George Scullin 36
PRIDE OF THE IRISH (Maureen O'Hara).....by Viola Moore 38
WHY STARS TURN TO PRAYER (Stanwyck, Crosby, Williams).....by Louis Pollock 40
WESTWARD, WHOA! (Roy Rogers).....by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 42
I'M STILL WILD ABOUT HARRY.....by Betty Grable 46
HOLLYWOOD'S ROMANTIC HIDEOUTS (Granger, Powell, Jourdan)..... 48
DON'T TELL MY GIRL.....by Glenn Ford 51
ONE-MAN MARSHALL PLAN (Bill Holden).....by Ida Zeitlin 52
LET'S NOT TALK ABOUT LOVE (Betsy Drake-Cary Grant).....by Mary McSkimming 54
ARE ODDS AGAINST TEEN-AGE BRIDES?.....by Ted Wilson 56
HE'S THE BOSS (John Lund).....by Marie Lund 63
WIFE IN FAME ONLY (Guy Madison-Gail Russell).....by Gail Russell 64

features

THE INSIDE STORY..... 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS..... 6
EDITORIAL: DON'T LET LIES HURT YOU (Temple, Grable, O'Hara)..... 29
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: Red, Hot and Blue..... 58

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS.....by Christopher Kane 16
YOUR LETTERS..... 26
NEW FACES..... 27
THE FANS.....by Gloria Lampert 62
FASHION..... 68
BEAUTY: Point with Pride..... 94
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot.....by Leonard Feather 105
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed)..... 110

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Betty Grable by Nickolas Muray
Other picture credits, page 15

WADE H. NICHOLS, editor

WILLIAM HARTLEY, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
FLORENCE EPSTEIN, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
MAXINE FIRESTONE, assistant fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor
TOM CARLILE, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
VIOLA MOORE, associate editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
NANCY WOOD, food editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 39, No. 4, September, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

Whatever it is that French women have... Madame Bovary had more of it!

M-G-M presents

JENNIFER JONES
VAN HEFLIN
LOUIS JOURDAN

Madame Bovary

with CHRISTOPHER KENT · GENE LOCKHART · FRANK ALLENBY · GLADYS COOPER and JAMES MASON Portraying GUSTAVE FLAUBERT, THE AUTHOR

Screen Play by ROBERT ARDREY • Based on the Novel by GUSTAVE FLAUBERT

Directed by VINCENTE MINNELLI • Produced by PANDRO S. BERMAN

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

The Madame Bovary Waltz and Themes From "Madame Bovary" available on M-G-M Records

(Advertisement)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Don't be Half-safe!

by

VALDA SHERMAN

At the first blush of womanhood many mysterious changes take place in your body. For instance, the apocrine glands under your arms begin to secrete daily a type of perspiration you have never known before. This is closely related to physical development and causes an unpleasant odor on both your person and your clothes.

There is nothing "wrong" with you. It's just another sign you are now a woman, not a girl . . . so now you must keep yourself safe with a truly effective underarm deodorant.

Two dangers—Underarm odor is a real handicap at this romantic age, and the new cream deodorant Arrid is made especially to overcome this very difficulty. It kills this odor on contact in 2 seconds, then by antiseptic action prevents the formation of all odor for 48 hours and keeps you shower-bath fresh. It also stops perspiration and so protects against a second danger—perspiration stains. Since physical exertion, embarrassment and emotion can now cause apocrine glands to fairly gush perspiration, a dance, a date, an embarrassing remark may easily make you perspire and offend, or ruin a dress.

All deodorants are not alike—so remember—no other deodorant tested stops perspiration and odor so completely yet so safely as new Arrid. Its safety has been proved by doctors. That's why girls your age buy more Arrid than any other age group. More men and women use Arrid than any other deodorant. Antiseptic, used by 117,000 nurses.

Intimate protection is needed—so protect yourself with this snowy, stainless cream. Awarded American Laundering Institute Approval Seal—harmless to fabrics. Safe for skin—can be used right after shaving. Arrid, with the amazing new ingredient Creamogen, will not dry out.

Your satisfaction guaranteed, or your money back! If you are not completely convinced that Arrid is in every way the finest cream deodorant you've ever used, return the jar with unused portion to Carter Products, Inc., 53 Park Pl., N.Y.C., for refund of full purchase price.

Don't be half-safe. Be Arrid-safe! Use Arrid to be sure. Get Arrid now at your favorite drug counter—only 39¢ plus tax.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

WHEN WE HEARD Judy Garland had checked into a Boston Hospital, our ulcers began to have ulcers. We were that worried. We sent for that sterling reporter, George Scullin. "George," we said, "we know Judy's seeing no one. But try and find out how she's getting along." George handed us an aspirin. "I will talk to Judy herself," he said. Then he disappeared. Some 48 hours later, he returned. Into our lap he dumped an exclusive story. You'll find Judy's All Right! on page 36 Now we're feeling better, too!

SOMETIMES WE WISH we were more like Glenn Ford. When we're tired of looking at the same old color in our living room, for example, we complain to our good wife—and get nowhere. Our boy Ford, on the other hand, empties a bottle of ink on the ceiling. Then his wife Ellie consoles him as follows: "Accidents will happen," she says, and goes to call the painters. Well, in short, we were just amazed at the things this fellow does—and without telling his little woman. We were sworn, of course, to secrecy. So when you read Don't Tell My Girl, on page 51—keep it quiet, willya bud?

"DON'T BE SO formal," we said to Reba and Bonnie Churchill. (They were standing at the mantel taking turns at the typewriter.) For our pains we got a very cold stare. For their pains, however, they got a story. When we read that story we understood. You will, too, because Westward, Whoa! (page 42) is about their day with Dale and Roy Rogers . . . about the ranch, the picnic, and the horseback ride. The Churchills loved every minute of the day, they tell us, even if they didn't think they'd live through it!

THERE'S NOTHING COMPLICATED about us. We're sure of that because so many people call us simple. But take a fellow like Richard Widmark. He is the only guy we know who's ever had his personality split by a typewriter. In print he was tagged a menace. But he'd no sooner learned to leer nicely for the reporters than the rumor got round that actually he was exceedingly meek. Under such circumstances, it seemed reasonable to ask the man, "What are you, chum, a louse or a mouse?" He gave us a harried look. "Ask that guy Schroeder," he said in a tired voice, "he'll tell you." So Schroeder told us. How Phony Can You Get! is on page 34.

EDITOR WADE NICHOLS is in packing his briefcase. He's moving on to another job. Looking around the office we see everyone sobbing into handtowels. We try to be sympathetic. "Don't take it so hard," we cry. But people just look at us happily. "These," they say, "are tears of joy. Bill Hartley's the new boss." This exuberance stems from the fact that Bill Hartley is a genius. Exclusive stories just follow him around. He's hep! So next month, as Editor-in-chief he's giving you stories on Jane Powell, Rita Hayworth, John Agar, Jennifer Jones, Farley Granger and many others. Read 'em and you'll see what we mean.

Paramount presents
BETTY HUTTON
and VICTOR MATURE
In
"RED, HOT AND BLUE"
IT'S HAPPIER THAN NEW YEAR!
• • •
IT'S ZINGIER THAN THE 4TH OF JULY!
• • •
IT'S THE BIG MUSICAL FUN-SHOW OF '49!
Wait'll you hear those FOUR wonderful tunes written especially for Betty ...by Hollywood's No. 1 Songwriter Frank Loesser!
A
JOHN FARROW
production with WILLIAM DEMAREST
JUNE HAVOC
Produced by
ROBERT FELLOWS
Directed by
John Farrow
Screen play by Hagar Wilde and John Farrow
Story by Charles Lederer

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

■ Everyone asks me, "Why didn't you go down to Stromboli and get the truth about Ingrid Bergman while you were covering the Rita Hayworth-Aly Khan wedding in Europe?"

Well, not to give you a short answer—Bergman would not see me. It wasn't anything personal. She sent a personal message saying she was just not seeing any reporters.

I think I know why. I think Ingrid, herself, does not know which turn her heart affairs will take. From someone very close to the situation, I hear she has days of thinking she has been a fool and that Roberto Rossellini has used her to exploit himself.

Then, because she is really completely infatuated with the fiery Italian, she does an about-face and becomes as deliriously in love as a bobby-soxer.

Want to know what I think will eventually happen? When the picture is finished (if ever!) Ingrid will admit that she is planning to marry Rossellini.

Friends of her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, say he is practically reconciled to the idea of a divorce—even to the point of pulling up stakes in this country and returning to Europe to practice. He was in London when I was there, but he was definitely hiding out.

* * *

When Jane Wyman walked into Bebe Daniels' and Ben Lyon's cocktail party for me in London, with a handsome man by her side, I thought, "Good heavens, Lew Ayres has flown over to be with her!" But no such luck for Janie. Her escort was not that unpredictable gent, but Clark Hardwicke, the spit and image of Lew.

Young Hardwicke, millionaire golf champion, obviously has it bad for Jane—but I think she still has it bad for Lew, and that ain't good.

I've known Janie since she first came to Hollywood and when she is in love there's Paulette Goddard, who is going to be divorced from Burgess Meredith, is squired to Desi Arnaz' opening night at the Mocambo by Clark Gable.

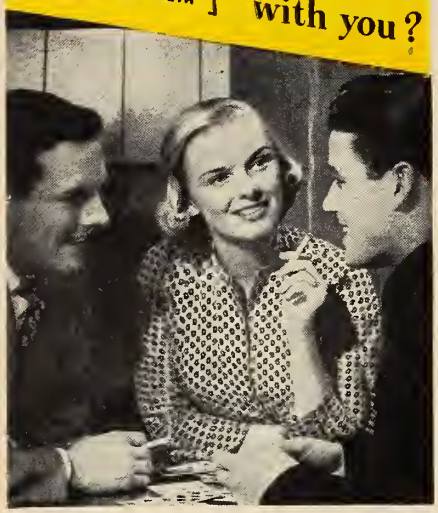
Cathy Downs gives Janet Leigh the latest dirt as the girls wait for their escorts to check their hats while attending the Circle Theater.

Bing Crosby, in the caurse of his recent visit to the East, seems to be asking another young singer, Marton Downey, what to say next.

Alan Ladd gives encouragement as his twa-year-old son, David Alan, bravely undergoes a haircut at the Paramount studio barbershap.

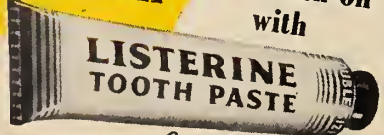


Who says radia acting is nathing but sound? Bill Zuckert and Dick Widmark wax really expressive on an NBC Cavalcade of America pragram.

Dale Evans and Ray Rogers, all decked out in matching white outfits on a recent jaunt to New York, see how the city slickers have fun.

Smoke all you want, but... why take TOBACCO MOUTH [OFF-COLOR BREATH OFF-COLOR TEETH] with you?

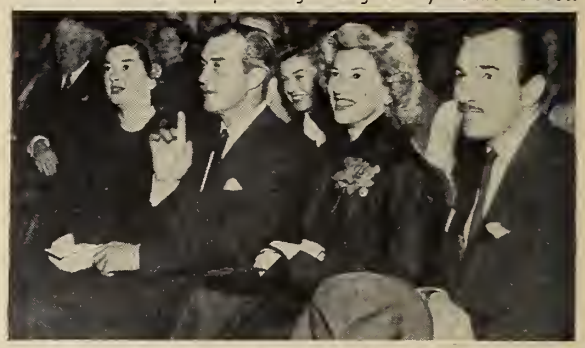
The most unfortunate thing about "tobacco mouth" is that it becomes part of you so gradually. The only people it gives a "start" to are your friends!



Your friends, your neighbors, your dentist—they all recognize "tobacco mouth" at the drop of a smile. But you, you're never quite sure . . . unless, of course, you are a regular user of Listerine Tooth Paste. There's a good reason why you can be sure—

It contains Lusterfoam—a special ingredient that actually foams cleaning and polishing agents over your teeth . . . into the crevices—removes fresh stain before it gets a chance to "set" . . . whisks away that odor-making tobacco debris!

See for yourself how Listerine Tooth Paste with Lusterfoam freshens your mouth and your breath! Get a tube and make sure that wherever you go—you won't take "tobacco mouth" with you!



TOBACCO MOUTH ...give it the "brush-off" with

"Feel that Lusterfoam work!"

Celebrities gave castly items to Loretta Young's St. Anne's Maternity Haspital charity auctian. Loretta, Irene Dunne and Debarah Kerr inspect a figurine given by Delmar Daves.

Ray Milland gives the benefit auctioneer the high sign far 20 hats. Ray, who's surrounded by Rasalind Russell, Mrs. Milland and Lee Bawman, helped raise the tremendaus sum af $42,000.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

no one more in love. She was literally "out of her mind" about Ronnie Reagan and was so jealous of him before their marriage that he could hardly speak to another girl.

But she got over Ronnie—and I'm sure she will get over Lew.

If she could only learn not to fall so hard, I think she could have more fun. She is so chic these days, easily one of the smartest-looking girls in London or Paris. When Parisiennes turn to look after another woman, you know she is smartly turned out—and believe me, they turned and took a good look at Janie, everywhere she went. She is studying French like mad and chatters away like a magpie, complete with Gallic gestures and rolling eyes. Very cute.

* * *

While we're still on the subject of Paris—Maria Montez and Jean Pierre Aumont are more lovey-dovey than ever since their separation and reconciliation. When I saw them lunching at Maxim's they were either trying to convince themselves—or me—how much they cared. Such smooching!

Maria has become very Parisian and dresses to the teeth. They told me they were spending their summer vacation on the French Riviera, then Maria is coming back to Hollywood for a movie. Jean Pierre isn't returning until Spring. He loves his native France and will stay there to write a play.

* * *

There's been a lot of publicity that Claire Trevor will wear one of the new French bathing suits in Borderline—but don't let them kid you. She couldn't wear the real thing—our censors wouldn't let her, thank heavens.

Honestly, I've never seen such nudity as was exhibited on the beaches at Cannes. The so-called bathing suits amount to nothing more than a G-string and a couple of rosettes. What lies between is neither seductive nor alluring.

Florenz Ziegfeld, the greatest exponent of feminine allure who ever lived and whose Follies were world-famous, once said: "There is nothing seductive about complete nudity. Most people do not realize it, but the Follies girls are dressed to allure—not undressed." And that's from a man who knew.

* * *

Around Town:

Over the back of a booth at Romanoffs: "Of course I'll talk about Peter Lawford and all this nonsense linking his name with Junie's," said Dick Powell, being interviewed about his wife. "I'd rather bring all the whispers out in the open than ignore them."

At La Rue: Glenn Ford holding his hands over his eyes so he couldn't see what his order of caviar and blinis added up to. He just put his wallet down on the table and pushed it toward the waiter.

Mocambo: John Hodiak kidding Anne Baxter so much about her hat that she took it off and put it under a table. . . . Ava Gardner posing prettily for the photogs but Howard Duff brushing them off. (How come he always seems so surly in public? He's really a nice guy.)

Beverly Hills Hotel Lanai Room: Jane Powell and Geary Steffan looking dreamy-eyed as the violinist plays "Kiss Me Again" in front of their table.

At the Farmer's Market: Gregory Peck, at the pastry stall, and Dana Andrews, eating a tamale—eyeing each other politely, but not speaking. They had never met until I came along and introduced them. "I'm not supposed to eat tamales," said Dana, "so that's why I sneak down here to do it. Then, I get

STARRING JUNE HAVER RAY BOLGER GORDON MacRAE

DIRECTED BY DAVID BUTLER PRODUCED BY WILLIAM JACOBS

From a Story by Bert Kalmar & Harry Ruby
Musical Direction by Ray Heindorf

Screen Play by Phoebe & Henry Ephron and Marian Spitzer

Despite record heat-wave world premiere at Radio City Music Hall brought out all New York!

WIN $6000* AND SONGWRITER FAME IN CAPITOL RECORDS CONTEST

*Advances against contract royalties

WRITE ORIGINAL WORDS TO NEW MELODIES BY THESE TOP COMPOSERS

JOHNNY MERCER — co-composer of "Blues in the Night"
JIMMY McHUGH — co-composer of "I'm in the Mood for Love"
ISHAM JONES — co-composer of "It Had to Be You"
PAUL WESTON — co-composer of "I Should Care"
LIVINGSTON-EVANS — composers of "Buttons and Bows"
RAY NOBLE — Co-composer of "Goodnight, Sweetheart"

HERE'S THE MUSIC... YOU Write the Lyrics!

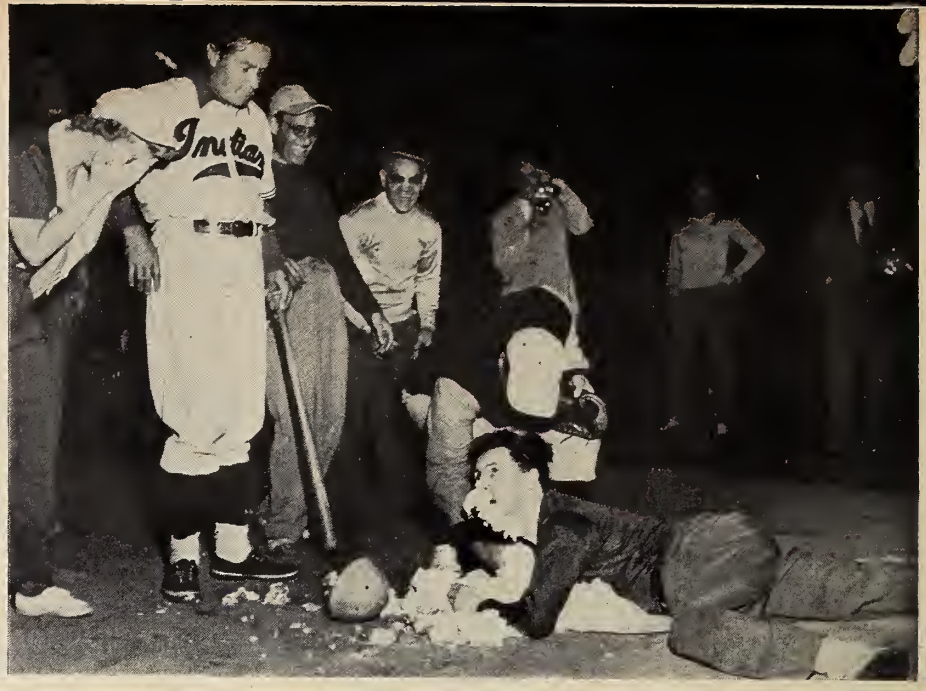
THINK OF IT!

YOU... writing the words to the melodies of internationally famous composers who have made many thousands of dollars with their music.

Here's what you may win: For each winning lyric, you will be offered a regular songwriter contract (SPA form)—and $1000 cash advance against contract royalties. (Winning songs will be recorded by famed Capitol artists and sold nationally!) You stand to make many times more than $1000, if the songs become hits. (Remember, it's possible for you to win more than one prize...even all six!)

PLUS the fact that as a co-writer with one of America's greatest popular composers you'll have made a big step to fame and fortune in a business where the rewards are great.

NEVER BEFORE A CONTEST LIKE THIS!



Here's your big chance to "team up" with Hollywood's top tunesmiths...become a recognized songwriter. Hear the music...get your official "Songs Without Words" contest entry blanks today, at your favorite record store. NO FEE TO PAY!

ATTENTION!

This contest—sponsored by CAPITOL, one of America's largest record producers—should not be confused with the dozens of "school offers" to make you "a songwriter overnight." Capitol expects to uncover new talent. Remember, it costs you nothing to enter!

SEE YOUR RECORD DEALER TODAY!

Capitol RECORDS HOLLYWOOD

At the Annual Charity Baseball game, Eddie Brocken slides home with a gag cake for Hope.

Ava Gardner and Howard Duff wait for their time at bat. He was called out at first, afterward hit a home run to thunderous cheers.

Ronald Reagan was borne from the field like a true hero. He thought he'd torn a tendon but later found he had a badly broken leg.

caught red-handed." He looked on a little enviously as the lanky Peck consumed a chocolate éclair, holding it, goo and all, in his fingers.

At the Bantam Cock Bar: Rod Cameron and Marie Windsor having one you-know-what of a battle. She hurled over her shoulder as she flounced out, "Just forget you ever knew me."

* * *

What a wonderful thing Loretta Young did when she took on the task of raising $30,000 needed by St. Anne's Maternity Hospital for Unwed Mothers to carry on their great charity. Aided by a small but willing committee, Loretta got the idea of putting on an auction and asked her movie friends to contribute things to be sold.

The response was beyond her wildest dreams—and, instead of the $30,000 they had hoped they could raise, the actual figure from the three-night auction at the Goldenberg Galleries was nearly $42,000! Merchants and jewelers contributed everything from mink coats and stoles to diamond bracelets—but here are some of the things contributed by the movie stars:

Walter Pidgeon: Complete dining room set; sofa, desk.
Cary Grant: Two antique mirrors.
Claudette Colbert: French chair.
Frank Sinatra: Gold pen and pencil set.
Barbara Stanwyck: Jeweled cuff links.
Howard Hughes: Gold and ruby pin.
Van Johnson: Original painting.
Joseph Cotten: Original portrait of clown.
Ray Milland: Silver demi-tasse spoons.
Ann Blyth: Silver candlesticks.
Robert Mitchum: Silver cigarette box—matching lighter.
Humphrey Bogart: Liquor set—silver and crystal.
Jeanne Crain: Compote dishes, candlesticks, ash trays, baby cup, porridge dish—all silver.
John Garfield: Pearl-handled rattle.
Ann Sothern: Chafing dish.
Gary Cooper: Jeweled snuff box. Pair of antique china dogs.
Clark Gable: Antique carved chest.
Bob Hope: Schiaparelli gown.

* * *

If you are one of the millions of girls with movie ambitions, beware of any man who

One Mardi Gras Night in New Orleans

. . . that exploded into murder!

ON the eve of the gay Mardi Gras, Orson Foxworth, financial buccaneer, gave a dinner at world famous Antoine's for seven extraordinary guests. One was beautiful young Odile St. Amant. An unkissed wife, she ached with desperate longing for the embraces of Leonce, her playboy husband.

And at the table sat Odile's younger sister, voluptuous Caresse, even more sultry than her name. She resided with Odile and her husband in the family mansion and she drove Leonce to a maddening desire to put an end to his wife so that he could possess her. And Foxworth himself had reasons of his own for wanting Odile out of the way!

What a setting for a story when these people and five others as deeply involved with one another meet for dinner at glamorous Antoine's! All the color, romance and intrigue of New Orleans creole society is packed into Frances Parkinson Keyes newest best-seller, Dinner at Antoine's. This book, PLUS another popular novel, High Towers, is yours for just a three-cent stamp—yes, BOTH for 3¢—if you join the Dollar Book Club now!

THESE 2 FLAMING NOVELS OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

BOTH for a 3¢ STAMP YOURS

WHEN YOU JOIN THE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB

HIGH TOWERS by Thos. B. Costain

THE best-selling new historical novel, packed with romance and thrilling action by the author of "The Black Rose." High Towers, plus Dinner at Antoine's, BOTH yours for a 3c stamp when you accept this amazing membership offer of the money-saving Dollar Book Club.

The Only Club That Brings You Best-Sellers for $1

THE Dollar Book Club offers to send you both "Dinner at Antoine's" and "High Towers," for just a 3-cent stamp—as a generous sample to new members of the wonderful reading entertainment and equally wonderful savings that nearly a million families enjoy through the Club.

The Dollar Book Club is the only club that brings you popular current novels for only $1.00 each. Yes, the very same titles sold in the publisher's retail editions for $2.75 to $3.00 come to members for only $1.00 each—almost a ⅔ saving!

How are such values still possible, with book manufacturing costs at an all-time high? First, because of the great economies effected in printing huge editions for so large a membership. Second, the Club's own great new book plant, recently completed at a cost of millions of dollars, is designed for money-saving, large-scale production with equipment and methods never before possible.

Take as Few as Six Books a Year!

Membership in the Dollar Book Club requires no dues of any kind. You do not even have to take a book every month; the purchase of as few as six books a year fulfills your membership requirement. You can build a choice library of outstanding modern fiction this way for as little as $6.00 a year!

Start Enjoying Membership Now

Upon receipt of the attached coupon with just a 3-cent stamp, you will be sent BOTH "Dinner at Antoine's" and "High Towers." You will also receive the current selection for only $1.00. Thereafter, every month, you will receive the Club's Bulletin, which describes the forthcoming Club selections. It also reviews many other popular books which you may purchase at the Club price of only $1.00 each. Buy only the books you want!

Just Mail Coupon with 3c Stamp!

When you see the books you will get and realize they are typical of the values you will continue to receive from the Club for only $1.00 each, you will be delighted to have become a member! Mail coupon now.

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB, GARDEN CITY, NEW YORK

Mail This Coupon

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB
Dept. 9DMG, Garden City, N.Y.

Please enroll me as a Dollar Book Club member and send me at once Dinner at Antoine's and High Towers—BOTH for the enclosed 3¢ stamp. Also send me the current club selection and bill me for $1 plus shipping cost.

With these books will come my first issue of the free descriptive folder called "The Bulletin" telling about the two new forthcoming one-dollar bargain book selections and additional bargains offered at $1.00* each to members only.

I have the privilege of notifying you in advance if I do not wish either of the following months' selections and whether or not I wish to purchase any of the other bargains at the Special Club price of $1.00 each. I do not have to accept a book every month — only six during each year that I remain a member. I pay nothing except $1 for each selection received plus a few cents shipping cost.

Mr. / Mrs. / Miss .....
Please Print

Address .....

City, Zone & State .....

Occupation ..... If under 21, age, please .....

*Same Price in Canada: 105 Bond St., Toronto 2

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless, new Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting.

No nicks . . . no bristles . . . no stubbly regrowth. No irritation to normal skin.

Nair keeps legs hair-free longer . . . because it dissolves the hair itself closer to skin.

Have "second look" legs! Get Nair today.

COSMETIC LOTION
TO REMOVE HAIR SAFELY

79¢ plus tax

For Legs that Delight Use NAIR Tonight

Escorted by fiancé Geary Steffan, Janie Powell pauses at première of The Stratton Story to autograph the MGM Silver Anniversary scroll.

Elizabeth Taylor's fiancé, Bill Powley, was in Florida, so Elizabeth attended the Stratton opening with her old pal, Raddy McDowall.

says he is from Hollywood until it is proven that he is really the "big league" personality he claims to be.

Two women have been victimized by a character claiming to one of them to be Sam Engel, 20th Century-Fox producer, and to the other, to be Carl Laemmle, Jr., son of the founder of Universal Pictures.

Both women gave the impostor their money and jewels and one married him. Police records later revealed that he has a long list of offenses—each time representing himself as a big shot from Hollywood and winning the confidence (and usually money) of his victims.

* * *

Now that he has made up his mind to take the plunge, perennial bachelor Jimmy Stewart can hardly wait to get married. Believe me, in Gloria Hatrick McLean, he has certainly found the Right Girl he said he was waiting for.

She is a delightful woman, charming and beautiful. She has two children and, fortunately, Jimmy likes youngsters. Gloria was terribly hurt over the break-up of her marriage to Neal McLean, son of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean, until she fell deeply in love with Jimmy.

She has always adored her father, Edgar Hatrick, for years an executive of the Hearst newspapers. When she took Jimmy to see her father, ill for months in Colorado Springs, he told Gloria that he liked Jimmy and knew she would be happy with him.

* * *

The big social event of the month was the West Coast opening of the play, A Streetcar Named Desire, and the big party afterward hosted by Louis B. Mayer in honor of his daughter, Irene Selznick, producer of the show.

I have never seen such a good-natured sidewalk crowd and—perhaps because of this—I have never seen so many big stars signing autograph books and pausing to chat with the kids and oldsters.

Clark Gable came to the theater and later to the party, with Ann Sothern. When someone in the crowd yelled, "Hey, Clark, where did you get that sunburn?" Gable grinned and called back, "Fishing!"

Joan Crawford, her hair cut very short, had on a beautiful lace dress made little-girl style with a pink satin bow in back.

Ethel Barrymore, looking so lovely with her gray hair very, very short, was enthused over Mary Welch, who plays the sister in the play. Ethel, who sat in front of me, turned around to say, "This girl worked with me on the stage in a small role. I am amazed and delighted over the way she is handling this big assignment."

Later on, at the Mayers', many stars who had not been able to get tickets for the opening showed up to toast Judith Evelyn and Tony Quinn, anyway. (Among those who couldn't get tickets was Jessica Tandy, the actress who created the star role in the play on Broadway! But Jessica and her husband, Hume Cronyn, told me they had seats for the second night.)

Cary Grant was on hand for his first party since coming home so ill from making I Was a Male War Bride in Europe. Cary is over his long siege of yellow jaundice and looks swell with the weight he has put on.

Anne Baxter had on the most dazzling red dress-and-cape outfit I have ever seen. Only a girl as pretty as Annie could get away with it. She came alone because her husband, John Hodiak, was on location.

Joseph Cotten was stagging, too, because Mrs. Cotten has been very ill in the hospital.

Among the hundred-odd guests enjoying the buffet and the lovely music, I saw Loretta Young and Tom Lewis, Janet Gaynor and Adrian, the Artur Rubensteins, the Arthur Hornblows, Otto Preminger, Mary Livingston Benny, Mrs. Danny Kaye, the William Goetzes, and many more.

* * *

I happened to be out at MGM visiting on the Bodies and Souls set and got in on the fun when the cast and crew surprised Glenn Ford with an "anniversary" party. Since it was not his birthday nor marriage date, Glenn could not have looked more surprised when three technicians hauled a big cake up to him, inscribed "Happy anniversary. Glenn."

Story and Screenplay by OSCAR BRODNEY · Produced by LEONARD GOLDSTEIN · Directed by GEORGE SHERMAN · A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURE

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use... Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the free jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Write to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for your free jar.

Jane Wyman gives away a friendly smile with each dish of ice-cream she sells at a London benefit for British stage and film charities.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

"But it isn't my anniversary," said Glenn, completely puzzled but pleased. "What's this all about?"

Then they told him it was the tenth anniversary of his debut in pictures—that they had found out from his agent that he signed for his first picture, Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence, exactly 10 years ago to the day.

Glenn was as pleased as punch. The thoughtful little party couldn't have happened to a nicer guy.

* * *

Will Errol Flynn marry Princess Irene Ghika, the girl who received his exclusive attention all summer? All I can say is that he appears to be deeply in love with her. She really bosses him around and he loves it.

Also, I'm sure that it is her idea, not his, that she appear in a picture with him. Now Errol is all-out for putting her into his independent movie and doesn't seem to mind thot she hasn't had an iota of acting experience.

When I was in Paris, I talked with Errol at length about Greer Garson, for whom he has great respect and admiration. He told me he thought Greer one of the finest women he had ever known and that he believed she will be happy if she marries Buddy Fogelson. When Greer's romance with the rich Texan cooled for a little while, it was because Buddy likes to have a good time and when Greer is working she isn't interested in anything but her career. But the rift made them realize how much they really cared, and now they have announced their engagement.

* * *

Don't mention The Beautiful Blonde From Bashful Bend to Betty Grable. Betty, usually the most amiable and tractable of stars, just doesn't like the picture she made with Preston Sturges and she is saying so, out loud.

"I knew it was not right when I was making it," says Betty. "I'll never be talked into anything like that again."

All Preston Sturges says is, "I find Miss

Lono Turner ond Bob Topping pose with the prize tunas they caught in the Bohomas. The fish were even bigger than the ones that got owoy.

Grable talented, charming and a very lovely person."

* * *

Keeping tabs on my personal mail: Glenn Ford is mentioned most often in the letters that came to my desk this month. Peter Lawford is second (there are pro as well as con comments about Pete), Robert Mitchum (also pro and con), followed by William Holden, Louis Jourdan and Montgomery Clift! I guess the reason Monty slipped from top spot in my mail is because he has been a long time between pictures.

But wait until you see him in The Heiress! You'll fall for that boy all over again.

Where the girls are concerned, Elizabeth Taylor is way out in front. Following in the order named are June Allyson, Jane Powell, Shirley Temple, Lana Turner (she keeps her fans whether she's on the screen or not, that gal), Esther Williams, Jane Wyman, Betty Grable and Gail Russell—Gail making the list for the first time.

Again, I want to say I like getting your letters whether you are praising or panning. Several times I have had ideas for radio editorials from what you have written me.

That's all for now. See you next month.

PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6—T. Bob Beerman, Bot. Bert Parry—7 T. Lt. Stork Club. T. Rt. Wide World. Bot. Lt. NBC, Bot. Rt. Stork Club—8 T. Bob Beerman, Bot. Bert Parry—10 Bert Parry—12 Bob Beerman—14 Acme—15 International News—20 Wide World—22 Bob Beerman—24 Pat Clark of Warners—29 Modern Screen staff—30 Bob Beerman—31 Bert Parry—32 Eagle-Lion—33 Wide World—36-37 International News—38-39 Bob Beerman—40 Floyd Hopkins—41 T. Lt., T. Cen. Modern Screen staff—T. Rt. Bud Fraker of Paramount, Bot. Lt., Bot. Rt. Modern Screen staff—Bot. Cen. Bob Beerman—42-43 Bob Beerman—44-45 Bert Parry—46 Bob Beerman—47 20th Century-Fox—48-49 Bob Beerman and Bert Parry—50 Bert Parry Exc. bot., Bob Beerman—51 Gus Gale—52-53 Bob Beerman—54-55 20th Century-Fox—56 Universal—57 Lt. Jules Buck, Rt. Modern Screen staff—63 Bert Parry—64 T. Gus Gale, Bot. Don Ornitz—65 Bob Beerman—70-76 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

BING AND WALT

(CROSBY, THAT IS) (DISNEY, OF COURSE)

team up on The Headless Horseman!

Walt Disney presents

THE ADVENTURES OF "ICHABOD AND MR. TOAD" told and sung by BING CROSBY and told by BASIL RATHBONE

color by TECHNICOLOR

Distributed by RKO Radio Pictures

Hear BING sing: "THE HEADLESS HORSEMAN" "KATRINA" "ICHABOD CRANE"

TWO TALL TALES

In one hilarious all-cartoon feature...two of the finest stories ever written, are told by . . . three of the world's greatest storytellers: Walt Disney, Bing Crosby and Basil Rathbone.

Walt and Bing bring to rollicking, melodious life that famous masterpiece . . . Washington Irving's fabulous "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" with awkward Ichabod Crane, curvaceous Katrina and the hair-raising Headless Horseman.

Walt and Basil Rathbone tell another tall tale about that rich, reckless, uproarious rake, The Magnificent Mr. Toad, and his frantic friends in a sparkling interpretation of Kenneth Grahame's "The Wind in the Willows."

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

In Any Number Can Play, Clark Gable owns a gambling club. He works so hard that wife Alexis Smith sees little of him.

His son, Darryl Hickman, is ashamed of Pop's profession. Bitter at this, Clark won't retire despite his doctor's orders.

The drama, which includes a sub-plot concerning an old flame of Clark's, reaches a tense climax when the casino is held up.

ANY NUMBER CAN PLAY

Cast: Clark Gable, Alexis Smith, Wendell Corey, Audrey Totter
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

"A nice honest gambler is better than a little snob," is the moral of this motion picture. Clark Gable's the gambler. He owns a huge casino-restaurant, and he's rich. His wife, Alexis Smith, is sad because he works so hard she never sees him, and his kid, Darryl Hickman, is ashamed because his pop is what his pop is. Doctor tells Clark he has a weak heart. Get away from this life, the doctor says. Clark decides he'll give his wife a break. He and she and Darryl will go on a fishing trip. He's had enough excitement. He'll turn the business over to his trusty friends, Barry Sullivan and Edgar Buchanan. But Darryl doesn't want to go away with his father, and Alexis won't leave Darryl, and Clark is so dejected he goes back to the club to smoke and drink himself to death. At the club, his brother-in-law-employee, Wendell Corey, is cheating him blind. At home, Wendell's wife (Audrey Totter) is jealous of sister Alexis because sister Alexis has such a wonderful husband. And Alexis is miserable, as I said in the first place, because she never sees Clark. Sometimes she wishes they were poor and hungry again. So everybody's in trouble. But when two crooks try to hold Clark up, and Clark's kid comes along in time to see how many friends his pa has, things take a turn for the better. Kid's almost proud his old man's a gambler, after Clark explains it to him. "Everybody gambles. Who am I to try and reform the world?" Something like that. This isn't exactly first-class stuff, though there are a few nice character bits. Marjorie Rambeau has one as a rich old lady, and Lewis Stone has one as a poor old man. Stone seemed to me to have shrunk—he's smaller than I remember him—but maybe that's because he always played next to Mickey Rooney.

In The Good Old Summertime: Judy Garland and Van Johnson are music-store clerks—and mortal enemies. But, naturally, they're in love.

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMERTIME

Cast: Van Johnson, Judy Garland, S. Z. Sakall, Spring Byington
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Most of this picture takes place with snow on the ground, but the title song serves to place the period for you. Men are wearing skimmers, and ladies carrying parasols, when Judy Garland comes looking for a job (or rather, a position) in a certain music store. Head clerk Van Johnson says the store has enough help. The store's owner, S. Z. Sakall, who's just had a fight with Johnson (Johnson doesn't think they should have bought a hundred pint-sized harps because there aren't that many harpists—or midgets either) hires Judy just to spite Van. (Sakall's movie name is Okeldunker or Ovalstinger or Oberkuchen—I don't remember exactly—and he plays horrendous music on a Stradivarius, and he's in love with his cashier, Spring Byington.) Judy succeeds in selling one of the small harps. This leaves 99 to go. It also leaves her and Van mortal enemies, for obvious reasons. Van and Judy are in love with two unknown correspondents (they write to post office box numbers, so they don't know their true loves' names) and they keep bringing these unknown correspondents into their daily conversation. "You're so rude," Judy will observe. "Why, I know a man who has thoughts like—" And then she quotes poetry. You don't have to be Einstein to guess that Judy and Van have been writing to each other, and that everything will turn out jake. You do have to be a little clever to remember from one picture to another what a sensational performer Judy Garland is. There's a current between her and her audience which is more often found on the stage than in the movies. She can electrify me every time.

HOUSE OF STRANGERS

Cast: Edward G. Robinson, Susan Hayward, Richard Conte, Luther Adler
20th Century-Fox

House of Strangers may not be an Academy Award contender, but Edward G. Robinson certainly deserves a prize of some kind. He is great. He plays a man named Gino Monetti, who owns and operates an unorthodox bank, in a slum neighborhood. He lends people whatever amounts he thinks they should have, he's a law unto himself about interest rates,

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

Not a soap, not a cream— Halo cannot leave dulling, dirt-catching soap film!

Gives fragrant "soft-water" lather —needs no special rinse!

Removes embarrassing dandruff from both hair and scalp!

Halo leaves hair soft, manageable— shining with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or oily cream shampoos leaves dulling, dirt-catching film. Halo, made with a new patented ingredient, contains no soap, no sticky oils. Thus Halo glorifies your hair the very first time you use it. Ask for Halo—America's favorite shampoo—at any drug or cosmetic counter!

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

and he thrives. He has four sons: Joe (Luther Adler), Tony (Efrem Zimbalist, Jr.), Pietro (Paul Valentine), and Max (Richard Conte). All the sons except Max work for their father, but hate him. He doesn't pay them well ("You'll get it all when I'm gone") and he has no respect for their brains. Max, who's a lawyer, and independent, is loved and admired by Gino, and he returns the feeling. When the government decides Gino is violating legalities, Max tries to bribe a trial juror, goes to jail. Gino isn't convicted, but the other brothers manage to take over his business. Max promises to revenge his father, but his girl, Susan Hayward, finally talks him out of it. This picture is sheer excitement.

YOU'RE MY EVERYTHING

Cast: Anne Baxter, Dan Dailey, Anne Revere, Stanley Ridges, Shari Robinson
20th Century-Fox

Dan Dailey's an Irish hoofer. Anne Baxter's a Bostonian. All her ancestors taught Greek. But Dan and Anne get married anyway. He works her into his act (she's an awful dancer), a talent scout brings them to Hollywood (Dan assures Anne he'll be a bigger movie star than Rin-Tin-Tin), and Hollywood tries to sign Anne. She says she's no actress. They say, who cares? For silent movies, you only have to have a face. She's broken-hearted that they don't want Dan, but Dan's thrilled for her. She becomes the biggest flapper of the era; he goes on to be a popular night-club entertainer. They make loads of money, but they're never together. Anne eventually retires to have a baby. By the time she's ready to go back to work, the talkies have been born. She doesn't care about crashing the new medium; she's happy with her home and her child. Now Dan's moment comes. Musicals are the rage, and the movies put Dan in satin pants, and star him. He likes to take his small child (Shari Robinson) to the studio with him (he's always teaching her to sing and dance) but Anne doesn't approve. She wants the kid to be normal.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Send back this questionnoire before anyone else does! Each month we get millions back, and each month 500 of them are the winners of our free three-month subscription to MODERN SCREEN. All we want to know is which stories you liked in this issue and which stars you'd like to read about in future ones. It's so simple, we'd like to send back a questionnaire ourselves—but then, we're not allowed. Remember—the October, November and December issues, all free to the first 500!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our September issue? Write the NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

Was Margaret O'Brien to Blame? ☐
My Heart Deceived Me (Doris Day) ☐
Why Dan Dailey's Marriage Failed by Hedda Hopper ☐
Am I Cheating My Children? (Susan Hayward) ☐
How Phony Can You Get! (Richard Widmark) ☐
Judy's All Right! (Judy Garland) ☐
Pride of the Irish (Maureen O'Hara) ☐
Why Stars Turn to Prayer (Stanwyck, Crosby, Williams) ☐
Westward, Whoa! (Roy Rogers) ☐
I'm Still Wild About Harry (Betty Grable) ☐
Hollywood's Romantic Hideouts (Granger, Brady, Powell) ☐
Don't Tell My Girl (Glenn Ford) ☐
One-Man Marshall Plan (Bill Holden-Brenda Marshall) ☐
Let's Not Talk About Love (Betty Drake-Cary Grant) ☐
Are Odds Against Teen-Age Brides? ☐
He's the Boss (John Lund) ☐
Wife in Fame Only (Guy Madison-Gail Russell) ☐
Picture of the Month (Red, Hot and Blue) ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

You're My Everything: Anne Baxter and Dan Dailey cotch colds outside the stage door. Dan's o hoofer. Anne morries him and joins the oct.

The musical craze finally dies down, and Dan retires to be a gentleman farmer. Until the doy he reads about a certain producer needing a child star. He sneaks Shari out, sells the producer on her, signs her for the picture. Shari's career comes close to breaking up the perfect marriage (Anne's still agin it) but musicals always have a happy ending. This picture's early sequences are fresh and gay and Anne Baxter makes a fine flapper. I didn't admire little Shari Robinson much, but one man's child star is another man's poison. If you think she's adorable, you'll enjoy the last part of the picture as much as I enjoyed the first.

THE BIG STEAL

Cast: Robert Mitchum, Jane Greer, William Bendix, Patric Knowles
RKO

It only takes 71 minutes for Robert Mitchum to chase Patric Knowles all over Mexico, while justice powders its nose and gets ready to triumph. Mitchum is an Army lieutenant who's been entrusted with a $300,000 payroll. Knowles has swiped the payroll, William Bendix, an Army captain, has accused Mitchum of collusion, Mitchum's got to clear himself, and we're right back at the beginning. Seventy-one minutes of Mitchum chasing Knowles all over Mexico, with Bendix chasing Mitchum, a couple miles in the rear. Mitchum's companion en route is Jane Greer (Knowles once cheated her, too). They fall in love, but there's work to be done. Eventually, Knowles is tracked to his hideout and caught red-handed (he's red-handing the $300,000 to an international crook) but it looks as though Mitchum and Jane have taken on too much. Because Bendix arrives almost at once, and you discover that he was the boy in collusion with Knowles. He now proposes to shoot Knowles (and does just that). After which he proposes to shoot the international crook, Mitchum, and Jane. That it doesn't work that way is a tribute to clean living. Maybe you won't learn anything from this picture—I'll make that more definite; you positively won't learn anything from this picture—but the chase is exciting, the Mexican locations are delightful, and who wants to be educated all the time?

(Continued on page 109)

New Pepsodent Guaranteed to Sweep FILM Away!

Have brighter teeth, cleaner breath in just 7 days!

WHY FILM MUST BE REMOVED

1. FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull
2. FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath
3. FILM glues acid to your teeth
4. FILM never lets up — it forms continually on everyone's teeth

Now Faster Foaming!
Make this 7-Day Pepsodent Test!

In just 7 days, new improved Pepsodent will bring a thrilling brightness to your teeth, new freshness to your breath—or we'll return twice what you paid!

New Pepsodent Tooth Paste foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film: (1) Pepsodent makes short work of the discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It routs film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent helps protect you from acid produced by germs that lurk in film. This acid, many dentists agree, is the cause of tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly and quickly with Pepsodent.

Buy New Pepsodent now on our double-your-money-back guarantee. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula! No other tooth paste contains Irium*—or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent. For the safety of your smile use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year.

Irium is Pepsodent's registered trade-mark for purified alkyl sulfate.*

Use New Pepsodent for just 7 days. If you're not completely convinced it gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth, mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent Division, Lever Bros. Co., Dept. G, Chicago, Ill. Besides postage, you'll receive—

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Another fine product of Lever Brothers Company

was margaret o'brien to blame?

This is the strange tragedy of a woman who is more mother than wife, of a child who is loved too much, and of a man who is hurt and bewildered . . .

BY FLORABEL MUIR*

Margaret with Don Sylvio and her mother shortly before the wedding.

Margaret O'Brien's mother, Gladys O'Brien, married bandleader Don Sylvio in Palm Beach, Florida, last February 22, while Margaret wept. On May 31, it was announced that Mrs. Sylvio would seek an annulment of the marriage. In the following exclusive story, an ace Hollywood reporter presents a frank and revealing picture of this amazing emotional tangle.—THE EDITORS.

■ "Please don't blame Margaret for this," Gladys O'Brien Sylvio told me as she explained the crack-up of her marriage. "It isn't her fault. I should have realized that I'm too wrapped up in the child ever to give much of myself to a husband. There are some women in this world who are more mother than wife—and I'm one of them.

"Usually a couple have become adjusted to each other before the wife becomes a mother, so it isn't so difficult for the husband when he must share part of his wife's affection with another. Then, too, if the child is his own, he is far less likely to be jealous of it."

Margaret's mother sighed. "These are the facts I should have understood before I jumped into marriage with Don," she went on. "Unfortunately, I didn't. I thought Don could join our little circle that rotates around Margaret—but as it turned out, he's too much of an individual to take second place in my affections to my daughter."

As this Hollywood mother was talking, I thought of motion picture mothers in general—and then it occurred to me that you seldom hear anything at all about movie fathers.

Most of them seem to be shuffled off into the discard as the little stars climb to fame. Those who can't stand playing second fiddle to a child being groomed for stardom, go off about their business—usually via the divorce courts.

So it is slight wonder that orchestra leader Don Sylvio found himself in an intolerable position and didn't know what to do about it.

"You can't fight a little child like Margaret," he said wistfully. "I didn't know it would be like that. . . . But I want to tell you that I'm not blaming Margaret entirely for this smash-up. I think the child and I could have become very good friends if we'd had the opportunity.

"She's an amazingly brilliant little girl. I wanted to talk things over with her thoroughly before we held the wedding, but Gladie seemed to think it would be better to surprise her.

"Margaret was so shocked when she found out we really were getting married that she became emotionally upset. I can't blame her for crying."

Then Don went on to tell me how the romance had started—a romance which brought only fleeting happiness to Gladys, many tears for her daughter and bewildered frustration to Don.

It began one night in February, 1945, in Bill Bertolotti's night club in New York, where Don's orchestra was playing. Margaret and her mother were at a table and when Bertolotti introduced his orchestra leader, Gladys asked him to play her favorite song, "I Can't Begin To Tell You."

"That was the beginning of all my trouble," Don told me. He said he played the song over and over again that night and when Gladys and Margaret left, they both thanked him. They left New York the next day and he didn't see either of them for a year.

the melody lingers on . . .

In February, 1946, Mrs. O'Brien and Margaret visited Bertolotti's again. When they came in, the saxophone player reminded Don about the song he had played for them before and suggested it be played again now.

"I didn't think she'd remember having asked for it and thought it would be presumptuous for me to try to make her remember, so I skipped it," Don told me. "But when Bill, who was my boss and also my pal, asked me over to her table to shake hands, she smiled at me and said, 'I'm really disappointed in you, Mr. Sylvio. You forgot to play my song.'

"I stammered and stuttered like a schoolboy—and had to take some kidding from my saxophone player. To make it up to her for forgetting, I asked her if she'd have lunch with me next day. She said she'd love to.

"We began seeing a lot of each other while she was in New York. We had lunches and dinners and I gave her a party at Bertolotti's. We really got acquainted.

"Always we sang her song, 'I Can't Begin To Tell You'—and the words came to have a lot of meaning for us. A year later she invited me to be her house guest in Hollywood. I flew out here from New York and stayed three weeks.

"I proposed to her one night under a California moon and, although she didn't accept right away, I wasn't discouraged. She acted as if she were as much in love as I was. She visited New York oftener and we were always together.

"Last February, just four years after I first met her, I went to Palm Beach and Gladys flew down there to see me. That's when we made our wedding plans.

"I thought little Margaret and I had become very good friends while I was wooing

THE NEW

'Gold' Rush of '49

Maybe you've noticed it already—the way women are hurrying to buy Golden Fels-Naptha Soap and Soap Chips.

And no wonder! This 1949 Fels-Naptha brings them a brand-new washing experience. Every process in the Fels-Naptha formula has been tested and checked with the washing demands of today's smart, young housekeeper.

If you haven't tried the 1949 Fels-Naptha Soap or Soap Chips get some today. Get a big red and green box of Fels-Naptha Soap Chips for your washing machine or automatic washer. You'll really get a thrill at the way this grand, golden soap gets things fragrantly clean and sweet and a bigger thrill when your dazzling white washes are hung on the line.

Join the 1949 Gold Rush today—to The Golden Fels-Naptha Soap shelves in any grocery store.

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

She cares for her charm!

Safe-and-sure deodorant ends perspiration troubles!

1. ETIQUET actually ends under-arm perspiration odor—safely—surely!
2. ETIQUET—made by specially patented formula—really checks under-arm perspiration!
3. FLUFFY-LIGHT AND SOOTHING—Etiquet goes on easily—disappears in a jiffy! No gritty particles!
4. NO DAMAGE TO CLOTHING when you use Etiquet—famous cloth-test proves!
5. MORE ECONOMICAL TO BUY—Etiquet won't dry out in the jar! Four sizes, 10¢ to 59¢.

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

Etiquet

THE SAFE-AND-SURE DEODORANT

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

NOW! ALSO AVAILABLE IN HANDY TUBE!

her mother. At least, she certainly behaved as if she liked me.

"Our marriage got off to a good start. We spent our wedding night in the bridal suite of the Colony Hotel, and although Margaret had cried at the wedding, I didn't think too much about that. It's not unusual for relatives to become emotional at weddings.

"Gladie and I had talked over the trip to Europe she was to take with Margaret and we decided to postpone our honeymoon until they got back. The day after our wedding, Gladie had to fly to Boston with Margaret, who was participating in the Brotherhood Week activities going on there.

"I met them in New York to see them off for the European trip. I thought everything was sunshine and roses. Gladie wanted me to come to California and she understood I wouldn't be able to work as a musician here for six months—it takes that long to be transferred in the musicians' union. I put in for a transfer in April so I could come out.

"I was agreeable when Gladys suggested that we live in separate apartments until Margaret could get adjusted to having a man around the house.

"Gladie has kept two different apartments in Beverly Hills for a long time. I occupied one of them and she the other with Margaret. Gladie's sister, Mrs. Jean Harris, also lived with them. I thought after awhile, if things didn't work out, Margaret could go to live in the big apartment with her aunt.

"I arrived in Beverly Hills on the evening of Tuesday, May 17—but I didn't see much of Gladie until the following Tuesday. I went over to her and Margaret's apartment for meals and began teaching Margaret how to play the piano.

"On Tuesday afternoon I asked my wife not to make plans for that night, because I thought it was about time we had an evening alone together.

"We went out to the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador Hotel and had a wonderful evening together. We went to Sherry's on the Sunset Strip later and I was so happy when I took Gladie home.

"The next morning on my way to her apartment, a half-block away I met her sister, Marissa Bogue—who acted as if she were very upset. She told me Gladie was upset, too, and that instead of going to the apartment she wanted me to go to the office of Gladie's business manager, Al Blum.

"I couldn't understand what it was all about, but went to Blum's office. He coldly told me that Mrs. O'Brien wanted to have our marriage annulled and offered me $3000 to agree to it.

Margaret O'Brien and her mother set forth from their home in Beverly Hills for a day's work.

"I was shocked and completely broken up. I implored Blum to tell my wife to think it over for another day—I was sure she'd then see things differently.

"I tried calling her on the phone the following day. She wouldn't answer. I tried again on Friday. No luck. On Saturday morning she came to the phone and I asked her to see me that night. She agreed and we went to Sherry's about six o'clock that evening.

"We had a few drinks and it was just like a guy taking his gal out. I didn't argue with her about anything. I didn't want to upset her. I thought if we could see each other a few more times and have some laughs together, she'd change her mind.

"She has a great habit of blurting things out without weighing her words—and the next minute changing her mind. So I thought she'd react the same way again.

"I didn't call her Sunday because I thought if she wanted to see me she'd call me. I wanted her to feel that she wasn't being rushed by me into making a decision she'd regret.

"On Monday evening you called me and told me she had announced to the newspapers that she would seek an annulment. That was the first inkling I'd had that she was actually going to go through with her plans as told to me by Blum.

"Our get-together on Saturday evening apparently hadn't meant a thing to her. The idea of an annulment was preposterous. She had no grounds for such a move.

"I'm not going to give her up so easily. I still love her very much and believe if she were away from her sisters and daughter that I could make her see that she really loves me, too. I can't understand what she means in her divorce suit when she said I was cruel to her.

"I wouldn't hurt her for anything in the world. I'm going to stay in California and devote my time to trying to win her back."

Don was born in Brooklyn and his right name is Sylvio Sprigata. He is 42. Gladys is 45. This is his first marriage. He is the eldest of six children. When he was 22 he had his own band.

her heart belongs to mommie . . .

Like many mothers, Gladys plays down to her little daughter most of the time. This perhaps comes from the subconscious desire to keep the child a baby as long as possible.

In a family living normally this isn't so harmful as it can be with a child who has long been the wage-earner.

In many ways, the little actress is almost a dual personality. At home she is babied and everything is done for her. At the studio they expect her to use her own brains when she's before the cameras.

Perhaps Gladys doesn't realize it, but the child has a fiercely protective attitude toward her. From remarks she has made to folks around MGM, she really believes she is saving her mother from a marriage that could only bring her unhappiness.

She has a feeling that no man is good enough for her mother. It probably wouldn't matter who the fellow was. She liked Sylvio well enough when he was just a friend—but when he moved into the family circle, she looked at him with a different eye.

How this will all turn out is anybody's guess. Should Gladys get her interlocutory decree, she would have to wait a year before it became final. In that time, Don might persuade her to drop the whole thing. Stranger things have happened in Hollywood. THE END

(Margaret O'Brien's latest film is the forthcoming The Secret Garden.)

Aldens

176 ENCHANTING PAGES

FREE ALDENS NEW FALL AND WINTER FASHION DIGEST

THRILLING NEW STYLES! AMERICA'S LOWEST PRICES! EXTRA VALUE FOR YOUR FASHION DOLLAR AT ALDENS!

FREE! Your personal copy of America's famous fashion-guide—bringing you newest, most in-demand styles inspired by top designers of Paris, New York, Hollywood! Aldens 60th Anniversary Fashion Digest—greatest style-setting book ever—gives you EXTRA VALUE for every dollar. Look like a million in thrilling fashions you never thought you could afford! Aldens prices are lowest in America! Tri-color plunge-neck rayons only $2.98 (worth $2.00 more) . . . sequined Empire crepes low as $5.98. Exciting way-ahead-of-time styles, modeled and endorsed by America's top models!

Mail the Coupon today—get your FREE copy of Aldens 60th Anniversary Fashion Digest! Be you teen, junior, miss or lovely lady—see everything you want, from breathtakingly beautiful name-dresses, sweeping fur-laden coats to Calico cottons. See plunging necklines, wide sleeves, fly-away collars, clinging or swirling skirts! See newest home furnishings, fashions for all your family, too. Aldens guarantees greatest savings plus dollar-for-dollar top quality. Mail the coupon NOW for your FREE Aldens 60th Anniversary Fashion Digest.

Established in 1889 Aldens Chicago, Illinois

ALDENS, Dept. 642, Box 5362 Chicago 80, Illinois

Please rush my FREE COPY of Aldens Fashion Digest.

PRINT Name

PRINT Address or R.F.D.

PRINT Post Office (Town) State

ALDENS 60th YEAR

MAIL COUPON NOW

MY HEART DECEIVED ME

by Doris Day

She thought that love was all that mattered—until she learned it's friendship that really makes a marriage. Doris Day won't be fooled again!

Doris with a fellow actor on the set of her newest, It's a Great Feeling.

■ She was 17, a small dark girl and, I noticed, quite shy. As an editor of her high school paper she had been interviewing me, and now we had come to the end of our talk. She put away her pad and pencil, stood up and was ready to go . . . but didn't.

Instead, she leaned very close and, with troubled eyes asked, "But what I really mean, Miss Day, is how can I get to be like you and the other singers? I mean, really. I'm not as attractive and I know I lack so much. . . ."

I could almost hear my own voice asking this same question. Because I had asked it, and others like it, when I was 17. And when I asked it, talking to singers with orchestras and girls performing in night clubs, I didn't get a good answer. I had to learn for myself. But, I decided, now that I was being asked the question, I was going to answer it correctly. And I did.

"You think you're not as attractive as I am," I began. "But what would you say if I told you that there are at least 10 things about you that I would terribly like to have?"

She pulled away blushing, and her hand went touching here and there at her face in confusion. "Oh . . . you're just . . . just being nice," she said.

"All right, then," I went on. "I'll name them. I think they'll come to about 10."

And I did name them. What I said was just between the two of us as women. And as I itemized her good points, the transformation that came over her was marvelous. You could (Continued on page 98)

HAT BY JOHN FREDERICS. MANTELET DESIGNED BY PAULINE TRIGÈRE.

Heavenly CUTEX *Nail Brilliance only 25¢ **

Make six wishes—for everything you want in a perfect polish. Cutex Nail Brilliance will grant them all—for so little!

It's miraculously long wearing! Stays flawless, chip-free days longer than other polishes. It's artfully flattering! Utterly luxurious! In 11 luscious shades.

Such an immaculately pure, safe polish! Even women whose skins are allergic to other polishes tell us they can safely wear lovely Cutex Nail Brilliance.

The bottle's a beauty, with an "artist's" brush that makes application easy-as-play. Not even expensive polishes offer so many extras as Nail Brilliance!

Another new Cutex beauty! The prettiest lips are wearing Cutex Lipstick. You'll love it—for texture and "cling" like satin. For alluring colors that echo Nail Brilliance shades. Only 49¢.*

*PLUS TAX

Beauty is my business—

AND SWEETHEART IS MY BEAUTY SOAP
say 9 out of 10 Cover Girls

We questioned the beautiful girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year. "What beauty soap do you use?" we asked. And 9 out of 10 replied, "SweetHeart Soap."

"It's SweetHeart Care for Me Always!"

says MADELON MASON, Lovely Cover Girl

"For it simply wakes up my complexion's radiant, living beauty! My skin photographs glowing fresh and young. So I earn top modeling fees thanks to SweetHeart Care."

With such convincing proof to inspire you, promise yourself radiant, new loveliness! Like 9 out of 10 cover girls, use SweetHeart Soap!

Every day enjoy the beauty benefits of SweetHeart Care. For that creamy SweetHeart lather has a heavenly gentle Floating Lift. It's an amazing beauty action. You'll quickly see results! One week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . far fresher and younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

Only 7 months old, cute little Karen is already a model. And like grown-up cover girls, she has a SweetHeart complexion! Her mother, a smart New York housewife, always bathes Karen with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap.

Today get gentle SweetHeart Soap in the new, large bath size.

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

your letters . . .

DOUBLE LIVES

Dear Editor: Advice is sometimes pretty easy to give, but I've no doubt Hedda Hopper was sincere when she dished it out in "Myths Stars Believe About Themselves," in your July issue. However, what does she expect of stars? How can they remain themselves when they constantly play numerous other people on sound stages, read reams of publicity about their supposed personalities, are "groomed for stardom" with changes made in both their personalities and appearances? What does Miss Hopper expect of stars who have to sit in a spotlight with 99 million fans expecting them to be anything but themselves?

FORREST WALTERS,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor: Hedda Hopper knows what she's talking about when she advises the stars to be themselves. We go to the movies to see those people in character, but offscreen it's comforting to think of them as fairly normal and unaffected human beings. You'd think they'd have the integrity to behave as such. So orchids to Hedda Hopper for her brave attempt to set these stars straight!

ANNE FOLKS, EVANSVILLE, INDIANA

BERGMAN'S FOLLY

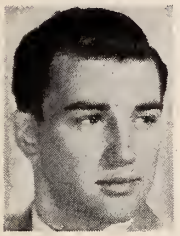
Dear Editor: I have to laugh when I think of the high ideals that were supposed to be upheld by Ingrid Bergman. Joan of Arc, itself, seems a little sullied by Miss Bergman's escapades, if rumors are to be believed. It's coincidental, and a pity, that having played both saint and sinner in the movies, Miss Bergman seems to want to go to the same extremes in private life.

EILEEN SULLENBERGER, NEW YORK CITY

Dear Editor: I've always admired Ingrid Bergman and her acting. Despite the unpleasant publicity concerning her and director Rossellini, I don't think it's too late for Miss Bergman to come back and again be one of Hollywood's finest and best-loved actresses. Others before her have survived foolish mistakes. Surely a woman of Miss Bergman's stature should be given another chance if she wants one.

THELMA ROSS, POUGHKEEPSIE, NEW YORK

IS M. S. HUMAN?



Dear Editor: Your type of magazine is one of the main things that is wrong with Hollywood. Seldom, if ever, do you see a good article. Ninety percent of the time they're cheap and trashy—"Are Parents Human?" "Is Sex Necessary?"—now really! The only good articles your magazine has are "The Picture of the Month" selections. In all probability you won't publish this letter. If not, it just illustrates further what I have said herein.

F. N. HANSEN, INGLEWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor: I have never written a fan letter before, but I would like to tell you how much I enjoy your magazine. Movie magazines in general aren't above telling lies to attract readers; they "scoop" each other in an effort to be the first to publicize a rumor even if it is false. In my opinion, Modern Screen is different. It leads all the rest in printing the truth.

ARTHUR BAKER, COOPERSTOWN, NEW YORK

new faces

MICHAEL KIRBY was born in Nova Scotia and at the age of four, doctors told his parents he should confine his sports activities to ice skating. He became so proficient at it that winning competitions was almost like child's play. Sonja Henie, whom he recently starred with in The Countess of Monte Cristo, says he is the best partner she's ever had. He married Nora McCarthy in 1943 and they now have two children. Michael's 6'2" tall, weighs 180 lbs., has blue eyes and dark brown hair.

PENNY EDWARDS made her first appearance in a B'way play when she was only 12, and after a series of hits and misses was at last discovered by a Warners dance-director. He thought her style of singing and dancing extremely original and the public wholeheartedly agreed with him when they saw Two Guys From Texas. Penny was born in New York on August 24, 1928. She has blue eyes, blonde hair and though she's 5'6" tall, weighs 118 lbs.

ROSSANO BRAZZI gave up boxing to study law, and then he gave up law to become an actor. Aside from college theatricals at the University of San Marco, he never had any inclination to act until he was given a supporting role in an Italian film. He became one of Rome's leading stars and was ordered by the Nazis to make propaganda films for them. Shortly after, Rossano disappeared. He was born on September 18, 1917, is 6' tall, weighs 180 lbs. and has blue eyes and brown hair. You've seen him recently in Little Women.

GALE ROBBINS came to Hollywood via a toothpaste ad. That is, the teeth were hers and they advertised a famous brand of paste. She was born May 7, 1921 in Indiana and got her schooling at Northwestern University. She joined the glee club there, and while pursuing her modeling career also sang with various dance bands. During the war Gale toured the European theater with the Bob Hope troupe. She's 5'3" tall, weighs 112 lbs., has blue eyes and honey-colored hair. Her latest is The Barkleys of Broadway.

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

So effective . . . Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle . . . Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

For Bare-Skin Beauty

Bath Size Palmolive

with its famous

"Beauty Lather!"

New Fragrance!

New Charm!

New Allure!

IF YOU WANT to be a real Bare-Skin Beauty—get Bath Size Palmolive and use it daily in tub or shower! See how proper cleansing with this big, thrifty Bath Size Palmolive smooths and softens arms and shoulders . . . how its famous "Beauty Lather" helps make you lovelier all over!

You'll find economical, long-lasting Bath Size Palmolive makes oceans of this rich, creamy "Beauty Lather"... leaves an exciting "whisper" of perfume on your skin—a whisper that says "come hither" to romance! Get Bath Size Palmolive today! Your whole family will love it!

So Big! So Thrifty
So Solid and Long-Lasting
Oceans of "Beauty Lather"
Exciting New Fragrance
Menfolk Love it, Too

Buy Bath Size Palmolive for

Bare-Skin Beauty!

don't let lies hurt you an open letter to shirley temple, betty grable and maureen o'hara

Will Price with his wife, Maureen O'Hara.

Harry James with his wife, Betty Grable.

John Agar with his wife, Shirley Temple.

Dear Ladies:

We hear that you are all on the verge of leaving your husbands. Yes, that's what we hear.

We realize, of course, that the reports are preposterous. (And they're certainly refuted by the stories concerning you, Betty and Maureen, in this issue of MODERN SCREEN, and by the one on you, Shirley, that appears next month.) But the fact that statements to the effect that you're all having domestic troubles are downright foolish hasn't stopped a number of Hollywood "reporters" from making them in recent weeks. And that situation is one we're all going to have to live with right along. For as long as the public has a legitimate interest in the lives of celebrities, there will always be gossip-mongers around who'll peddle any sort of intimate morsel—legitimate or not.

What can you do about it? What should you do?

Well, there's probably never been a marriage anywhere that hasn't, to some degree, been subjected to gossip. It may be a mild little report to the effect that, say, Joe Epperknoggen was secretly amused by the bonnet that his mate, Mary, wore on Easter morning. (The truth was that he told a friend that Mary had a wonderful sense of humor—and Joe just happened to be looking at the hat at the time.) Or the gossip may range in intensity up to a report, say, that Mary, weary at last of having Joe beat her up every night, has gone off with the kids to Atlantic City to think about a divorce. (The truth being that he's planning to join her there on their vacation in a couple of days.)

The sad thing is that such rumors, wild and unfounded though they may be, exert a real pressure on their victims. As the gossip goes on—and everyone knows how, especially in Hollywood, it does go on—a couple's trivial quibbles may tend, in the light of what they're hearing about themselves, to become enlarged into major quarrels. It takes a good lot of calm common-sense to resist this.

We hope that in your cases, Mrs. Agar, Mrs. James and Mrs. Price, your demonstrated level-headedness will prevail against the current blasts. We hope this not only for the sake of your own happiness—but in the interest of established marriages everywhere. It goes without saying that, as great stars, you set examples of incalculable power. If you allow gossip to undermine your marriages, thousands of other homes against which gossip is directed will be all the more susceptible to its attack.

If, on the other hand, you remain steadfast, it is no exaggeration for us to say that your example can be a clear and inspiring force in the preservation of what is, after all, the foundation of our society.

Audrey H. Nichols

EDITOR

It was love at first sight when Dan and Liz met. Here, in the happier days of 1947, they attend a night club.

why Dan Dailey's

MARRIAGE FAILED

by hedda hopper

Author Heddo Hopper interviews Dan.

His name in lights was the most wondrous sight he'd ever seen, and applause was magic music to his ears.
But gaining this, he risked the things that made it all worthwhile.

As we go to press, there are reports that Dan Dailey and his wife Elizabeth, who separated recently, may yet be reconciled. The following story is a frank account of why their marriage failed—perhaps temporarily, perhaps permanently.—THE EDITORS.

■ "I guess while I was making my success I was letting my home be destroyed," said Dan Dailey.

His frank face wore a puzzled look. He shook his wavy red head as if to wonder. "I didn't think it would happen like this. I didn't believe all those stories I'd heard about other couples. But, Hedda, the truth is—I've paid the penalty of success. I've just been too busy to be a husband. It's all my fault that Liz has left me. It's my own selfishness, my own thoughtlessness. But I've learned my lesson. There's still hope that we can iron out our differences. If and when we do get together again, it won't be for two or three months. It will be for keeps."

I was talking to Dan soon after his home had apparently been wrecked. His pretty wife, Elizabeth, had gone home to her family, taking with her the light of Dan's life, Dan Dailey III.

"Was there another woman?" I wanted it straight.

"Oh, no!" He sounded horrified. "There's been nothing like that. I forgot her, I forgot myself. I forgot everything except the million things connected with my career that I was doing, still am doing, love doing." Again Dan looked puzzled. And then Dan sang the same old song I've heard ever since I first hit Hollywood. "Nobody who isn't in the business can ever know what demands it makes on you—inescapable demands, night-and-day demands. And if you love show business as I have all my life, you can't say 'no.' At least, I couldn't," he confessed. "That's the story—the whole story—and I still can't believe that it's happened to me!"

Frankly, I couldn't either. But I should have known better. I should have known that something would have to give sooner or later for Dan Dailey, that he'd have to pony up with the fiddler's fee. The morning we talked (Continued on page 66)

Dan Doiley III shows his parents his gardening technique. His proud pappy insists the two-year-old can do on expert version of "Clancy Lowered the Boom."

One of Dan's favorite haunts in Hollywood is the Club 47. (You'll find a description of this hot-jazz spot on page 48.) Here he sits in as drummer, with Doc Rondo on the sax and Noppy Lamare on guitar.

Am I CHEATING my children?

by Susan Hayward as told to Mary Bain

It's a vital question that must be faced by every mother who has a demanding career. Here is Susan Hayward's straightforward answer.

■ "Timothy! Gregory!" called their nurse. "Come along—time to wash up for supper." And off rushed Susan Hayward's twins across the lawn.

The promising young actress from the East who, now that she'd landed a Hollywood contract, was visiting Susan to renew their old friendship, watched the tots disappear. Then, smoothing back her play-rumpled hair, she sat down again on the terrace between Susan and Susan's husband, Jess Barker.

"Gosh," she said, "if I had a beautiful pair of children like that, I swear I think I'd give up my career and just stay home with 'em and keep house!"

Susan and Jess exchanged smiles. This sentiment was nothing new to them. So often they'd heard actresses declaim wistfully about the glories of motherhood and housekeeping and how, without batting a false eyelash, they'd give up all the satisfactions a movie career can bring, in exchange for a dutiful career of washing diapers and bustling about a hot kitchen.

"You mean," said Susan, "that it'd be so much fun and besides, you'd feel you'd sort of owe it to them?"

"I guess I would, sort of," said the friend. "I mean . . . Of course, I know you're a wonderful mother, and everything—but . . . I mean . . ."

"You think that perhaps I am, in a way, cheating my children?"

"Oh, now!" said the friend.

"Well," said Susan, "here's the way I look at it."

I think I'm a pretty normal woman (said Susan Hayward), and I think that part of the reason normal women are put on earth (Continued on page 100)

After the day's work (her latest movie is House of Strangers), Susan hears the latest home news from her four-year-old twins, Greg and Tim.

HOW PHONY CAN YOU GET!

■ When Director Henry Hathaway was looking for someone to play that spine-chilling hop-head character called Tommy Udo in Kiss of Death, he toyed briefly with the startling idea of getting the genuine article to play the role. He almost had one, too, but the guy couldn't remember his lines. So he got a phony article.

For, as it happened, along came one Richard Widmark to apply for the job. Trouble with this guy was, he seemed so much like the college professor he'd almost become in real life. But, with a hairpiece pasted on his high forehead that pulled his hairline down to within a couple of inches of his eyebrows, and using an insane, high-pitched chuckle he'd once invented while playing a minor gangster in one of his thousand-odd radio shows, Dick became the perfect, trigger-happy killer.

Thus, a new and arresting personality was on the way to stardom. And to two-level public misunderstanding.

Shortly after the release of Kiss of Death, radio executive Bill Smith took Dick to his first Hollywood broadcast —on the Lux Radio Theater. When the studio audience caught sight of Dick, they shouted the rafters loose, and after the program they wouldn't let him go until he'd given out with his by-now famous hysterical laugh.

As Bill and Dick struggled through the mob of fans outside, a youngster called, "Hey Widmark—you don't look like such a tough mugg!" (Continued on page 85)

There are two Richard Widmarks—both as genuine
as a three-dollar bill.
But then, there's also another
Richard Widmark . . .

BY CARL SCHROEDER

JUDY'S ALL RIGHT!

Judy Garland faced complete collapse and professional ruin. Now, rested and happy, she's making a dramatic comeback—in the tradition of great performers.

BY GEORGE SCULLIN

Daughter Liza is greeted in Boston by Judy.

Following her dramatic breakdown while making Annie Get Your Gun a few weeks ago, Judy Garland entered a famous Eastern hospital for a complete physical check-up and subsequent treatment. While there, Judy was interviewed for MODERN SCREEN by George Scullin, nationally-known writer and editor—who then gave us the following remarkable story.—THE EDITORS.

■ I talked to Judy Garland while she was a patient at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

Filled with a sense of renewing vitality, smiling and sparkling, she talked candidly of the past, of her plans and hopes for the future.

The general outlines of what had happened to bring her to that hospital are well-known by now. In the midst of her strenuous work on Annie Get Your Gun, she suddenly folded up. After a series of battles on the set, she went out to lunch and didn't come back. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was left with slightly more than a million dollars tied up in the lavish production. A million dollars being what it is these days, the studio slapped a suspension on the "recalcitrant" Judy, and the report went out that Betty Hutton would get the role of Annie.

Then came the discovery that Judy had not actually rebelled, though she had made sounds curiously like it. Instead, she was halfway over the brink of exhaustion, and she simply didn't have the strength to go on. After years of furiously burning her candle at both ends, the flames had finally met in the middle and pouf!—Judy was a small glow and a wisp of smoke.

Talking to me about it, she said: "I'll admit my actions on the set those last few days were hardly up to winning friends and influencing people. But I really wasn't myself. It was just that I was so very tired." As she said the last word, she seemed weighted with all the exhaustion in the world.

A moment later, her famous voice vibrant again, she burbled, "But look at me now! Six meals a day, sometimes eight! I slept 12 hours last night, and 10 hours the night before. Do I feel good!" And she looked it.

As soon as a preliminary physical check-up had revealed the grave extent of Judy's exhaustion, Carlton Alsop, her manager, mentor and general counselor, packed her off to Boston. There, at the great Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, she was examined by specialists using just about every analytical device known to medicine. Their findings: "Absolutely nothing wrong." Their (Continued on page 79)

PRIDE OF THE IRISH

There's a touch of old Eire in this white house on the hill—the proud and sentimental touch of Maureen O'Hara.

BY VIOLA MOORE

An exquisite hond-crocheted spreod covers the canopied tour-poster in Moureen's bedroom. Sentimentol souvenirs—o piece of her wedding coke, o sprig from her bouquet—ore preserved in smoll, antique cobinets.

Moureen mokes plons tor one of her informal supper porties on the terroce—an ideol place for them. Her husbond, Will Price, does the cooking for these events—so well that she's hoppy to cleon up after him!

In the living room, Maureen arranges some of Will's flowers—he's a fine gardener. The vivid painting over the fireplace depicts a Negro legend.

Will's brown and yellow den houses his collection of Southern literature. Out of sight is the flag he brought home from Iwo Jima, where he landed with the Marines.

■ Things weren't exactly festive that day two years ago when Maureen O'Hara and Will Price moved into their house. Though they'd fallen in love with the stately white house on the tree-shaded hill the first minute they'd seen it, now that they were moving in they were too exhausted and worried to sit down on the staircase and admire their new diggings. Their daughter, Bronwyn, was coughing croupily as Will carried her upstairs to her bedroom. They had to stay up with her most of the night, for the doctor feared she might have pneumonia.

Then, when they finally settled down wearily in their own cluttered bedroom, Maureen's sleep was shattered by a chorus of murderous screams.

In a panic she awoke Will.

"Listen!" she breathed. "Those screams! They seem to be coming from the Everett Crosby house. Do you suppose . . . ?"

Will grunted. "Oh, I forgot to tell you, honey. They keep peacocks. Peacocks scream at night. Guess we'll just have to get used to it."

Sleep now being out of the question for Maureen, she went out on her bedroom balcony and, pacing up and down in the gray light of dawn, composed the monologue she planned to deliver to the owners of the peacocks next day.

"Mr. Crosby: I defer to no one in my admiration of peacocks. What, indeed, would life be without them? (Continued on page 87)

why stars turn to Prayer

Through deep experience in their personal lives, many in Hollywood have found the shining power of prayer, and the spiritual peace that comes from faith.

BY LOUIS POLLOCK

Father Peyton poses with three of his friends, Irene Dunne, Rosalind Russell, and Loretta Young, before one of his broadcasts.

RELIGIOUS FAITH has been, to Bing Crosby, the greatest guiding force throughout the years of his long, phenomenal career.

FAMILY PRAYERS, started on Father Peyton's suggestion, play an important part in the lives of the Ricardo Montalbans.

THE POWER OF PRAYER, Betty Hutton and her sister Marion agree, allowed them to surmount the poverty of their childhood.

FAITHFUL DEVOTION she learned from her mother has been held responsible for Esther Williams' happiness and success in life.

EARNEST SUPPLICATION, Pat O'Brien is certain, saved the life of his young daughter in 1937. That's Mrs. O'Brien with Pat.

TRIUMPH OVER PAIN was given Barbara Stanwyck (here with Al Jolson) when she prayed after a near-paralyzing accident.

The following inspiring account of prayer in the lives of Hollywood personalities is the first in a series. From time to time in future issues, MODERN SCREEN will present further religious experiences of individual stars.—THE EDITORS.

■ Two years ago a group of Hollywood stars attended a dinner party at Loretta Young's home. Father Patrick Peyton, who was then starting his Family Theatre radio program to bring his message of the power of prayer to the whole country, was also a guest.

After dinner, Father Peyton was talking to Ricardo Montalban and Ricardo's wife, Georgiana—who is Loretta's youngest sister. The priest mentioned the fact that in his home in Ireland, the family never missed a day without gathering to say the Rosary.

Ricardo turned to Georgiana. "I think that's a wonderful idea for us," he said. "Why don't we and the children do the same?"

She agreed enthusiastically.

Recently, Father Peyton ran into Ricardo again, at a gathering called to discuss the future of the radio program. The priest wondered if Ricardo and his family had managed to keep their good resolution, and asked him about it.

"Padre," replied Ricardo earnestly, "we haven't missed a day. We've vowed to keep it up the rest of our lives."

Father Peyton was pleased, but not surprised. He had already come to learn, as have the pastors of every denomination represented in Hollywood, that most of the stars actually live their religion—within it, and by it. And, very often, that which is referred to by outsiders as "luck" or "breaks" in their careers, is known by them to be the product of their prayers.

It would be difficult to think of any star, from the longest-established to the very newest names, and not come up with a living, working illustration of this.

Doctors have told Barbara Stanwyck, for instance, that she is lucky that her career wasn't cut short some 10 years ago when she fell from a horse and injured her back. But Barbara has her own view of the matter.

She was making The Great Man's Lady, when the mishap occurred. Not only was she thrown but the horse trampled on her. She was told to lie motionless and a doctor was summoned. After a preliminary examination, he told her that it would be beyond her power to get to her feet. An ambulance was sent for—but when it came Barbara had pulled herself up and was walking about!

As she had lain there, a yearning to pray had come to her. Then followed a feeling that she could get up. The pain was great. She almost fainted. But she persisted. And soon she was asking that (Continued on page 95)

Ray's guns are kept in his den alang with the mounted heads af animals he's bagged. Reba and Bannie were really impressed with the genuine sada fauntain.

Perched an the rail fence surraunding the ranch, Dale explains its set-up. Seven Palaminas, 11 haund-dags, cattle, pigs and chickens make up the livestack. The hens lay sa many eggs, Dale is getting desperate far new ways to caok them.

They gave us boots and saddles and put us on a horse.
"What now?" we shouted to the Roy Rogers'.
Well, they took us for a ride . . .

BY REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

westward, Ho-hoa!

Pal (Dale's horse) is patient, but Reba is slightly hysterical as Roy helps her into the saddle. Above: Roy, on Trigger, shows 'em how a cowboy rides.

■ We'd never been on a horse in our lives. There are worse places not to have been, but even so, we shouldn't have mentioned it to Roy Rogers and Dale Evans. They gasped, "What! Never?"

"Well, hardly ever," we quavered.

"We'll have to see about that," said Roy.

"No, no, don't," we pleaded. But it wasn't any use. "Come over to our place Sunday," said Dale. "We'll show you how to live."

We could have told her we already knew; we could have made at least 10 excuses—like, our lumbago isn't good for horses—but we didn't. We were cowards. We were also under strict orders from the editors of MODERN SCREEN. (We—Reba and Bonnie Churchill—are their roving reporters.) "When someone lays a story idea at your feet," these editors tell us, "pick it up—or else!"

A few minutes later we were standing in the center of Republic's wardrobe department being outfitted with levis and boots, checked shirts and felt pork-pies and fancy leather belts. We tried them on and looked in a full-length mirror and really, we couldn't say no.

Sunday morning we hopped into our borrowed duds, saddled our four-door sedan and headed for the Rogers' ranch. The highway stretched out before us like a gray satin ribbon; orange groves reflected the sunlight in brilliant patches; in the distance, hills stood out sharply against the sky. Did we appreciate the view? We did not. All we could do was wonder how it must feel to be kicked in the head by a bronco.

For a few giddy moments we wanted to die, but that would have been ungrateful. Besides, it was too late, for now the white rail fences that surround the Rogers' ranch came into view. Cattle were grazing peacefully beyond them, and fields of green alfalfa stirred in the breeze.

We turned off at a little white bridge and were immediately surrounded by 11 leaping, barking dogs who led us the rest of the way to the ranch. There we were greeted by Roy, Dale and a six-month-old Alaskan Husky pup named Spur. Spur took a liking to us; he almost chewed off our boots.

"I'm trying to get him used to ranch life," said Roy. "He's afraid of horses."

"Maybe," we laughed feebly, "we ought to start neighing."

Spur sure did like us. He (Continued on page 45)

The Churchills help Roy fill Trigger's saddlebags with the cartons of food Dale's prepared. They've already chosen the site of their picnic—a huge turnip field with a shady oak tree in the center.

Trigger and Pal are led out of the corral all spruced up for the picnic. The horses have identical $1,500 silver saddles, and Trigger has a deluxe $5,000 one which he wears for parades and rodeos.

The girls wouldn't go it alone, but it didn't take much coaxing to get them on Trigger with Roy along. Later, all three rode him back to the ranch. Trigger—who's 16—is looking forward to retiring.

The quartet settles down to a fine feast of roast beef and baked ham sandwiches, potato salad, juicy tomatoes and dessert—apple cobbler and ice-cold lemonade. Who said Western life was rugged?

Roy stretched himself out under the oak for a quick snooze. "Looks too comfy," whispered Dale. Bonnie, who agreed, tickles him under the nose with a sprig of grass. Roy pretends he's fast asleep.

The tickling finally gets Roy's goat; he chases Reba and Bonnie and, with a neat toss of his trusty lariat, easily snares them. It plumb doesn't pay to trifle with Roy Rogers, King of the Cowboys.

Tied up steer fashion, Bonnie collapsed to the ground for a little taste of her own medicine. Roy tickles her with a turnip leaf.

(Continued from page 43) followed us into the house, and while Dale went to collect the picnic lunch he followed us into the den. In a few minutes, though, our novelty wore off and he went away.

The den's furnished in real cowboy style with animal skins and heads dotting the walls. (Roy showed us the guns that shot 'em.) But you don't have to be a cowboy to enjoy the television set, the movie projector and the pool table—or the soda fountain. The soda fountain and a deep-freeze unit stand together in a pine-panelled alcove.

"Have a coke," suggested Roy, pointing to the freeze.

Delightedly we reached in—and pulled out a frozen possum! Roy was nearly convulsed with laughter. We looked about wildly for the door, but just then Dale appeared. One glance at our stricken faces told her all.

"Why, Pa," she said gaily, "we'll have to put you in the doghouse again."

The doghouse seemed pretty (Continued on page 102)

Bonnie pushes as Reba tugs off her boots. Then Reba tugged for Bonnie. "This is the life," they cried, limping to their car. "That is—if you can live through it!"

I'm still wild about HARRY

by Betty Grable

Seems only yesterday that Betty Grable became Mrs. Harry James . . . although the calendar says six years have passed since that wonderful day. But happiness gives wings to time.

Betty Grable helps Vicki, who's five, and Jessica, two, brush up on their dancing at home. Actually, Vicki is much more interested in watching Westerns on the James' television set.

■ As a rule, I can act pretty calm-and-collected, no matter how I feel. But that July weekend in 1943 I was up to my ears in butterflies, and didn't care who knew it. You see, I was about to be married to Harry James.

Thursday I bought my wedding dress—blue, for that's Harry's favorite color. Saturday, I shopped for gloves and a hat to match, and couldn't find either. So I had a blue-feather gardenia made for my hair, and figured Harry'd take me without the gloves. (I could have skipped the gardenia too. When the time came, I forgot to wear it!)

Sunday—July 4th—Edith Wasserman and I took the train for Las Vegas. It was through Edie that I'd started going to the Hollywood Canteen, and my first date with Harry was when he drove me home from there one night. So Edie was my Cupid and my bridesmaid.

All the way up I kept trying to push that train, which was a little silly, because Harry's train from New York wasn't due till 2:30 in the morning. By midnight I was dressed and ready. They kept telling me to relax, but that was like so much wind in my ears. We hit the station around 1:30, and sat waiting in the car for a couple of centuries till the Streamliner pulled in—exactly one hour late.

Two things I'll never forget about that morning. One was the sight of Harry ducking out of the last car and running toward us. Suddenly he stumbled and almost went sprawling, and my heart popped right into my mouth. Luckily, he came out of it right side up. But I must confess I went on shaking for quite a while.

The other thing was our last-minute change of plan. We'd intended to be married in the little church at The Last Frontier. Everything was arranged. Then, as we drove up, what do we see but a crowd of about a hundred people—and worst of all, a man with a mike, yelling, "Step this way, please!" Honestly, it was like a circus. Harry and I looked at each other. Nobody in the car said a word—nobody had to. We just by-passed the church.

I've been in pictures long enough to understand about publicity and cooperation. And believe me, I appreciate the interest of fans who'll turn out for (Continued on page 82)

The Marquis: Shelley Winters and Farley Granger love its swank coziness and come here regularly far late suppers. When the evening is warm, they dine outside on the terrace under turquoise umbrellas.

The Little Gypsy: Janet Leigh and Arthur Loew like the Hungarian food, the candlelight and lilting music of this tiny restaurant an the Sunset Strip where Paul Gordos (left) and Jack Scholl serenade the guests.

Bublichki: Quique and Louis Jourdan are habitués of this small Russian restaurant whose Cantinental atmosphere reminds them so much of a favarite café in pre-war Paris. Flaming shashlik is served an skewers.

Hollywood's

■ Some, like Café Gala and La Rue, are elegant establishments of glitter and sophistication. Others, like the bluntly-named Barney's Beanery, are Damon Runyonesque nooks that seem transplanted straight from New York's Third Avenue. Some, like the small, boxy Club 47, are merry jazz joints ajump with jive. Others, like The Little Gypsy and Bublichki, present a facsimile of Old World atmosphere, complete with yearning string music to go with their Old World fare. But all these Hollywood restaurants have one thing in common: Romance. Each, for various reasons, has become the favorite hideout for certain of moviedom's dating twosomes.

In exclusivė pictures on these pages, MODERN SCREEN takes you along on some of their intimate outings.

Shelley Winters and Farley Granger are often to be found at a table for two in the Marquis. This swank spot couldn't be more convenient when they've been working nights—it's on Sunset Boulevard just about halfway between their respective studios, U-I and Goldwyn. On such evenings, they don't bother to dress up, and get there before the lamé-and-black-tie set starts sweeping in. But when Shelley and Farley have been indulging their regular habit of catching plays at the Little Theaters around town, they're decked out in formal finery, too. Then they linger long, talking over the play they've just seen . . . "often linger so long," says Shelley, "that closing time and dessert arrive together."

When Janet Leigh and Arthur Loew set forth for an evening on the town, they generally begin with dinner at The Little Gypsy. Modified Hungarian is the motif of this tiny Sunset Strip café. First thing you notice when you come in is the fire-engine red bar, with the bartender doubling (Continued on page 50)

romantic hideouts

You'll find them by the beach and in the valley and on the Sunset Strip— the small, romantic places for wining and dining and falling in love . . .

Club 47: Jane Powell and her fiancé, Geary Steffan, spend many an evening here where the excellent Dixieland jazz brings in the aficionados.

Barney's Beanery: Mona Freeman and Pat Nerney ore attracted not only by the famed steaks and onion soup, but also by the vast knowledge of movies that Barney (center) dispenses.

Cafe Jay: Rory and Lita Calhoun had some of their first dates at this little place near Santa Monico beach—so naturally it'll always occupy a pretty special place in their hearts.

The Tallyho: Scott Brady and Ann Blyth usually leave its intimate dining-room to have after-dinner coffee in the cocktail lounge—where Harold Grahom plays songs from new shows.

(Continued from page 48) as disk jockey. He mixes Pink Ladies with one hand and puts on gypsy records with the other while the violinist and accordion player take time out. "The wonderful food—like Chicken Paprika—the dreamy music, the candlelight . . . It's a lovely place," says Janet.

Another little place standing modestly amid the more celebrated cabarets on the Strip is the Bublichki, a Russian restaurant beloved by Louis Jourdan and his wife, Quique. "It is almost an exact duplicate of a café called Korniloff's we used to go to in Paris," says Louis. "The food is the same—caviar, excellent soup, and shashlik. Quique and I are both very Americanized by now, but we still love to spend an evening in a place with a true Continental flavor."

Club 47, out on Ventura Boulevard, features some of the best Dixieland jazz to be heard anywhere. Jane Powell, who lives only eight blocks away, loves to stop off there with Geary Steffan on their way to her house. A hep pair, they get fine kicks digging the great pre-bop music put out by owners Nappy Lamare and Doc Rando—who were original members of Bob Crosby's Bobcats. Almost any night you can find big-band personalities sitting in with the regular band.

Barney's Beanery is a joint on Santa Monica Boulevard with a sawdust-floor atmosphere and good solid food. Besides being attracted by this, Mona Freeman and Pat Nerney love to go there on account of Barney's collection of old casting directories—great things for settling arguments. "The other night," says Mona, "while we were checking on Hedda Hopper in the 1925 directory, we came across a photo of Mervyn Leroy—who, it said, was available for 'city slicker' roles!"

Rory Calhoun and Lita Baron began going to the Café Jay at Santa Monica while she was singing evenings at Mocambo and they'd be spending afternoons at the beach. Jay's holds only about 20 people and the proprietor makes it his anxious personal business to see that every one of them is properly fed. Lita likes the candlelight and fine wines; Rory is enthusiastic over the steak. "From our table just inside the door," says Rory, "we get a view of everybody coming and going. Yet, if we want to, we can sink back into the shadows and be quite alone."

Favorite dating-dining spot for Scott Brady and Ann Blyth is the Tallyho, a hunter-style restaurant on Beverly Boulevard with red-coated waiters. Billy Mann, the wine steward, claims he's the only genuine wine steward in Hollywood and carries the key to the wine cellar on a silver chain to prove it. After dinner in the new intimate dining room, "The Buttery," Ann and Scott repair to the cocktail lounge for coffee by the glowing fireplace. . . .

These, then, are some of Hollywood's romantic hideouts—essential ingredients in the social life of what is, after all, the most glamorous town on earth.

Don't tell my GIRL

by Glenn Ford

Glenn Ford, the sly rascal, has been married all these years and there are still things he doesn't tell his wife. But when Ellie finds out —she'll love him just about twice as much.

■ I've never been one to do too much talking. Which is one of my traits that'll bring Ellie most of her gray hairs when and if she gets them. So, by not being loquacious, I've managed to store up a lot of—shall we say?—"surprises" to hand her someday.

For instance, she's eventually going to learn that she hasn't thrown away as many things as she believes. Not things of mine, understand. She's resigned to my mania for collecting all kinds of souvenirs. She gives house-room to such mementoes as a rock I picked up off a rock-pile at a state penitentiary in the Middle West during a visit. (Strictly a voluntary visit!) And she's patient about the aquarium of tropical fish I brought back from Cuba a few years ago. She's never said a word about the wagon wheel I proudly brought home from the desert one day.

But she has a passion for throwing away things of her own. I've never objected much to that. But guess what she tried (Continued on page 89)

ONE-MAN MARSHALL PLAN

Hollywood was disturbed when Bill Holden's Brenda went back to the screen. But Bill wasn't—he knew how beautifully the new plan would work.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

■ When it was announced that Brenda Marshall had signed to play opposite Alan Ladd in Whispering Smith, Hollywood was agitated. "Is Brenda discontented with being a plain wife and mother? Is Bill sore? How now, Holdens? Quarrels? Separation? DIVORCE?"

You see, Hollywood had had the Bill Holdens neatly catalogued. "They know two careers in a family won't mix. How sensible Brenda was when she gave up her career for good."

But Brenda and Bill, patiently denying all the rumors, remained unagitated. They also remained a happy couple—as they obviously were when I dropped in the other night to see them in the charming den of their new valley home.

"If you ask me if I'd rather have my wife at home or at the studio," said Bill, "there's only one sensible answer: At home, of course. Smelling of Chanel Number Five, and ready to enjoy a cocktail with me. On the other hand, I know how she feels, not acting. I had that same feeling myself during the war."

"But I don't always feel that way," said Brenda. "Often there's nothing I'd rather do than stay home and wash windows."

As you can see, it's no simple black-and-white picture. It's the story of two young individualists who, through the flux of eight years, have adjusted themselves to their changing lives and times, to marriage, to work, to children and one another.

The story goes back to the days of their courtship. Brenda, fresh from the New York stage, had been signed by Warner Brothers. Bill had come from the Pasadena Playhouse to Golden Boy and a Paramount contract. Both ate, drank and argued acting, both were bent on careers, both were wrapped up in the Hollywood dream. Differing in trifles, united by fundamentals, they fell in love and the future lay bright ahead of them. It included marriage, hard work and no more children for at least two years. They were young, they had Deedee by Brenda's former marriage, and brothers and sisters for Deedee could wait till their prospective parents got more than a toehold on the golden ladder.

Two things changed their minds: (1) separation and (2) terrible parts for Brenda.

At first it was kind of a tragi-comedy. They were married on a Sunday in July, 1941, went back to work on Monday, and parted on Wednesday, when Brenda took off for location in Canada. She was gone just over three weeks, and the day she returned, Bill left for 10 days' location in Carson City. It would have been nice to say hello and goodbye, but even that wistful hope proved a mirage, since she didn't get in till eight hours after he'd gone.

Well, what's 10 days? Merely an eternity to honeymooners. But they passed, and Bill reappeared, rubbing his right (Continued on page 77)

Bill handles the dialogue while West, Scott, Deedee and Brenda give rapt attention at one of the Haldens' nightly bedtime story sessions. Bill has just completed Sunset Boulevard for Paramount.

Bill, who is the culinary genius of the Holden family, gets to work on a late snack. He's also the chef every Thursday evening the cook's night out. Brenda—admittedly—is no Fanny Farmer.

LET'S NOT TALK ABOUT LOVE

Betsy Drake's career is looking very forward, but Betsy herself is staying very shy— especially if asked about her heart and Cary Grant.

BY MARY MC SKIMMING

Betsy Drake welcomes Cary Grant home after a 40-day voyage from Europe—where he'd been making I Was a Male War Bride.

Betsy confers with producer George Jessel between scenes of Dancing in the Dark. In order to do the leading role, the hard-working Miss Drake had to learn to sing and dance—completely new accomplishments for her.

On the set of Dancing in the Dark, co-star Mark Stevens and his stand-in Fred Fisher had a fine time ribbing Betsy about her romance, but she could take it.

■ The morning of the day Cary Grant was to get back from Europe, Betsy Drake's short mop of honey-colored ringlets was dress-rehearsed for the role she was about to begin in Dancing in the Dark.

She gazed in the studio beauty-parlor mirror at the sleek creation of upswirling waves and precise curls.

"Is that me?" she said. "Gosh, I—I hardly recognize myself."

"Guess not," said Irene Brooks, 20th Century-Fox's hair stylist, proudly. "Wouldn't know it was the same girl."

Lucky Betsy! Her best beau coming to town and here she had a beautiful new hair-do. So what did she do? She dashed right home and washed it out.

That's Betsy.

As she lathered away the glamor, Betsy grinned down at Suzy, her gray French poodle. "You heard what she said, Suzy. 'Wouldn't know it was the same girl.' We might get down to the pier and have him not know us. Besides, he finds enough to tease us about without us throwing in a la-de-dah hair-do."

That's Betsy.

But when the boat docked, it actually was Betsy who didn't recognize Cary. Searching the line of passengers at the rail, she did spot one tall figure who seemed to be wearing a familiar Grant suit. But he was much thinner than Cary—and was, besides, a sort of chocolate brown.

It was Suzy who really spied Cary first. She began wiggling joyfully and trying to jump up the boat's side to greet him. The thin, chocolate-brown guy was Cary. A violently deep tan, acquired in the long, lazy voyage from Lisbon, almost disguised the famous Grant features. As a rest cure following the seige of illness he'd suffered abroad, Cary had come home on a slow Dutch ship that took 40 days for the crossing. . . .

Betsy's the first to admit that Lady Luck tossed her a bouquet of roses when, aboard another ship, Cary asked Merle Oberon to introduce them—an introduction that, as everyone knows, was to lead to Betsy's starring with Cary in her first film. But strangely, the lucky break almost proved a boomerang. Every Girl Should Be Married was a hit, Betsy was a hit, and Cary and Dore Schary beamed with pride. Romance, though, is a much spicier topic than hard work, so Hollywood placed more and more emphasis on the influence of Cary's personal interest in Betsy. The boys and girls of the flaming typewriters by-passed the fact that Betsy had earned a right to her role by years of work and study, with a successful stage run to her credit, too. They skimmed lightly over the knowledge that, though a newcomer to pictures, Betsy had turned in a performance that would have won lavish praise for an established cinema queen.

Never one to shirk a bout with reality, Betsy faced the issue squarely: She hadn't really proved a thing. There was only one answer. Betsy reasoned: "I've got to do something clearly on my own."

(Continued on page 97)

TEEN-AGE MARRIAGES THAT FAILED

star	born	spouse	married	age
Joan Bennett	1910	John Fox	1927	17
Cyd Charisse	1922	Nico Charisse	1939	17
Doris Day	1924	Al Jorden	1940	16
Deanna Durbin	1923	Vaughn Paul	1941	18
Vera-Ellen	1925	Robert Hightower	1942	17
Judy Garland	1923	David Rose	1941	18
Ava Gardner	1923	Mickey Rooney	1942	19
Paulette Goddard	1911	Edward James	1927	16
Rita Hayworth	1918	Ed Judson	1936	17
Hedy Lamarr	1915	Fritz Mandl	1932	17
Barbara Lawrence	1930	John Fontaine	1947	17
Janet Leigh	1927	Stanley Reames	1945	18
Lana Turner	1921	Artie Shaw	1940	19
Loretta Young	1913	Grant Withers	1930	17

NON-TEEN-AGE MARRIAGES THAT SUCCEEDED

star	born	spouse	married	age
Lucille Ball	1911	Desi Arnaz	1940	29
Claudette Colbert	1905	Joel Pressman	1935	30
Linda Darnell	1921	Pev Marley	1943	22
Irene Dunne	1904	Francis Griffin	1927	23
Alice Faye	1912	Phil Harris	1941	29
Betty Field	1919	Elmer Rice	1942	23
Ruth Hussey	1915	Bob Longnecker	1942	27
Dorothy Lamour	1914	William Howard	1943	29
Jeanette MacDonald	1907	Gene Raymond	1937	30
Maureen O'Sullivan	1911	John Farrow	1936	25
Rosalind Russell	1912	Fred Brisson	1941	29
Eleanor Powell	1913	Glenn Ford	1943	30
Barbara Stanwyck	1907	Robert Taylor	1939	32
Teresa Wright	1919	Niven Busch	1942	23

are oldn

Deanna Durbin wed Vaughn Paul when she was 18. After their divorce she said, "If I'd known more . . . I might not have married the first man I ever dated alone."

Do teen-age marriages lead to happiness? Or are they the shortest road to despair? Here are the facts about young Hollywood girls who couldn't wait to be wed.

BY TED WILSON

against teen-age brides?

Rita Hayworth was 17 and still obscure when she was wed to 40-year-old Ed Judson. "He married me as an investment," she later cried.

Bing Crosby's marriage to Dixie Lee was one teen-age romance that lasted. On the verge of separation a year after the wedding, they reconciled.

Barbara Lawrence eloped with John Fontaine against her mother's wishes, was divorced less than a year after.

■ "Bing Crosby is a fine boy as a friend—but married, he and I cannot be happy!"

Dixie Lee (Mrs. Groaner) said that. Not yesterday, or last week, but back in March, 1931, when for one full week she and Bing were separated. "We have been married about six months," she continued, explaining to reporters, "but we have already found out that we are not suited to each other."

How about that? Today the Bing Crosbys are pointed to as one of Hollywood's finer examples of sane, happy, married folk. But at the time Dixie made her statement, she was ready to throw in the sponge. She was 18 when she wed the obstreperous, happy, playboy Crosby, and not yet 19 when she decided, briefly, to call it quits.

So they went back together after a lalapalooza of an argument. And only recently Dixie said, "That was the brightest thing little Wilma Wyatt (her real name) ever did!"

No such hearty endorsement of the wisdom of a teen-age wife can be uttered in connection with most adolescent movie marriages. The records of Hollywood divorce prove that these early marriages frequently result in more than mere temporary disillusionment. There for all to see is the fact that these divorces often are initial symptoms of tragedy to come—nervous breakdowns, prolonged ill health, search for escape in use of narcotics. Sometimes—yes, sometimes even death!

A sensational charge, that—but consider the case of Carole Landis. It is more than idle opinion that events leading up to her suicide began their inexorable march on January 14, 1934, when the doomed actress married at the age of 15. Five weeks later, while still in high school, she sought a divorce.

Always a "good egg," and one of the most delightful girls who ever rose to stardom, Carole was from the beginning haunted by one yearning—the desire for happy marriage. And by one great fear—that she would never find happiness. Three times, thereafter, her heart ruled her head. Between July of 1940 and December of 1945, she (Continued on page 103)

Picture of the Month

RED, HOT AND BLUE

In a wild and delightful musical farce, Betty Hutton is given an ample opportunity to display her great and special talents.

■ The genius of Betty Hutton comes to full flower in Paramount's Red, Hot and Blue, the best picture that matchless performer has ever made.

Without Betty, the film would still be a bright musical, with funny situations and dialogue and exceptionally clever songs. With Betty, it becomes one of the big treats of the year. Never idle a moment, she plays a light-headed but aspiring actress whose commercial ambitions ("I don't want to be Bernhardt, I just want to be me, with money!") are a constant grief to her true-love (Victor Mature), the starving director of an arty little-theater group with which, incongruously, her lot is cast. The plot is centered on her kidnapping by thugs after she happens to be the only witness at a murder. Head thug is played by Frank Loesser—who wrote the movie's music and lyrics. (He's the man to whom the nation is indebted for "Baby, It's Cold Outside" in Neptune's Daughter.) If Loesser ever wants to leave song-writing—Heaven forbid!—he obviously can have a brilliant career as a comedian.

On these pages, MODERN SCREEN tells the story of Red, Hot and Blue in pictures.

Betty Hutton and Victor Mature find their ideals clashing but their affections meshing throughout a riotous, off-and-on romance.

1. As Red, Hot and Blue begins, Eleanor (Betty Hutton) is kidnapped by a gangster (Frank Loesser) who insists she knows who murdered his chief. "I'm only a girl from Ohio," she moans.

2. She tells her story. In a flashback, we see her with Danny (Vic Mature), director of the little theater group she's with. They battle—he's all for Art, while she's for making money.

3. Having breakfast with a roommate (June Havoc), she encounters her press agent, Charlie Baxter (William Demarest), who wants her to be "Yum-Yum Collier" in a cereal ad. Danny is furious.

4. Danny smashes the poster, threatens Baxter. Undiscouraged, Baxter arranges a date for Eleanor with Mr. Creek (Raymond Walburn), an eccentric millionaire, for purposes of publicity.

5. When Eleanor finally gets him to take her to dinner instead of listening to his ballclub play, Creek's wife appears in the restaurant, douses Eleanor. Subdued, she makes up with Danny.

6. He tells her a producer wants the group to do Shakespeare in summer stock, later on Broadway. She's all for Art, now—but then Baxter shows her her name in a gossip column. (Continued.)

"RED, HOT AND BLUE" IS A BLEND OF CLEVER MUSIC, DEFTLY COMIC DIALOGUE AND ALL-OUT SLAPSTICK.

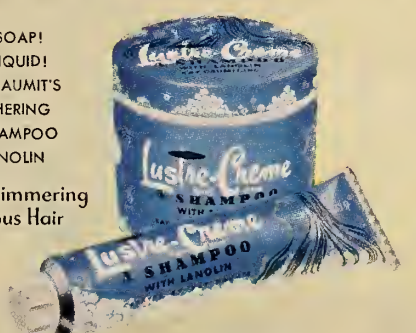
7. She's delighted and, hearing there's an opening in a musical, makes Danny take her at once to the theater—where, in the alley, the manager auditions her. His verdict: "You stink."

8. Deflated, she goes with Danny to show the Shakespearean producer the group's stuff. After straight Hamlet, she suggests they do their burlesque of it. The producer likes this better.

9. Afterward, Danny proposes to Eleanor and she accepts. But then he tells her she can't be in the Shakespeare play—the producer wants a big name. Upset, she breaks the engagement.

10. Baxter has introduced her to racketeer Bunny Harris (William Tallman) who, posing as a producer, lures her to his apartment to "read a script." Someone kills him from the hall.

11. Police grill her but let her go—her innocence is clear. But when she returns home, Bunny's henchmen kidnap her. Before she goes, though, she manages to leave a message in lipstick.



12. Danny finds the warehouse where she's being held, gains entrance as a piano-tuner. He and Eleanor then defeat the gang in one of the most satisfactorily slapstick brawls ever filmed.

Tonight!..Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP!
NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S
RICH LATHERING
CREAM SHAMPOO
WITH LANOLIN

for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; 10-oz. economy size $2.
Smaller jars and tubes 49¢ and 25¢.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight . . . if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today! It's Kay Daumit's exclusive blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin.

This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

You'll feel his burning kisses on your lips... when you use Tangee

Kiss-hungry lips... in a pulse-quickening scene starring

MIKEL CONRAD
AND CAROL THURSTON
IN
"ARCTIC MANHUNT"
A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURE

Tangee KISS COLORS

TANGEE PINK QUEEN—Puts your lips "in the pink" to attract loving looks...and lovelier kisses!

TANGEE RED MAJESTY—Lush and luscious...ideal for a man-hunting brunette.

TANGEE RED-RED—It's redder than you thought red could be...and definitely "kissterical."

TANGEE MEDIUM RED—A happy medium for the girl whose man needs—a little encouragement.

Don't trust your romance to anything less than Tangee!

Tangee KISSABLE TEXTURE

1. Keeps lips soft...invitingly moist.
2. Feels just right...gives you confidence.
3. Does not smear or run at the edges.
4. Goes on so easily...so smoothly...so quickly.
5. And it lasts—and LASTS and L-A-S-T-S!

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

News: We're just getting under way with a bright, new MSFCA contest with lots of swell prizes to be awarded each month and fun for all. So in order to get things into working order at the very beginning, we've decided to change the quotas of our membership leagues. We think our new system will provide for a more equal division of clubs and will be much fairer to the smaller clubs. Henceforth, League 1 will consist of those clubs having 300 or more members. League 2—clubs with a total membership of between 101-299. And League 3 clubs will have a total membership of between 10 and 100. This new system will provide more competition in League 1 where it is really needed and less competition in League 3 where our greatest membership is. This is a wonderful opportunity for new clubs to get into the swing of things, and a swell chance for older clubs to show their worth. We think you'll like our new scheme and we'll be awfully glad to hear from you about it.

Prizes: We'll still have some of those lovely Elgin-American compacts for some of you lucky correspondents, if you hurry and send us some interesting news about your club. They're all finished in jeweler's bronze and just about the handsomest compact we've seen in many moons. For club editors we have a prize we're sure you'll be mad about. They're little foto stamps, wonderful for your journals or stationery, and we'll be awarding them in blocks of 500 to winning editors. The American Foto Stamp Company is making them for us and we'll have them of any star you want. Winners in our This Is My Best contest have written us rave letters about the Enger-Kress wallets they've received. In all the colors of the rainbow, they're specially designed to hold your favorite snaps as well as folding money. Luscious is the only word that aptly describes our Revlon's King's Ransom lipstick set. Seven shades of creamy lipstick with a gold holder and all in a black-velvet case.

10th Semi-annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
1st Lap

This Is My Best: (100 points) "A Pome," Ruth Kellman, Arthur Kennedy journal. "My Favorite Memories," Shirley Baxter, Jack Berch Journal. "Bop Crazy," Lee Garber, Alan Ladd Journal (Kee). "Perry and the Pigtails," Marie Quick, Perry Como Journal (Staley). "Poem" Gloria Veripapa, Art Lund Journal (Sherman). "Can It Be True?" Joanne Okermeyer, Joan Caulfield Journal. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. Contino-Peck-Melari Journal (Diefenbach). League 2. (tied) Jack Berch Journal. June Allyson Journal. League 3. Dave Willock Journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. Ruth Schweitzer, Allan Jones Journal. League 2. Dorothy Fenger, Shirley Temple Journal. League 3. Janet Miller, Alan Ladd Journal. Best Artist: (150 points) Gene Jankus, Joan Crawford Journal. Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. Bariton-y Journal. League 2. Arthur Kennedy Journal. League 3. (tied) Peggy Lee Journal. Anthony Quinn Journal. Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. Dorothy Crouse, Gene Autry Club. League 2. Mary Jane Grootenboer, Nina Foch Club. League 3. Vivian Hewitt, Richard Walsh Club. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. Jeanette MacDonald Club (Farrington) (donation to children's home). League 2. Dick Contino Club (Rosenthal) (contribution to Cancer Fund). League 3. Perry Como (Hoffman) (donation to T.B. society). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Mel Torme Club. League 2. Dick Contino Club (Johnson). League 3. Gene Reynolds Club. Candid Camera Contest: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others). Betty Jane Engler, Macdonald Carey Club. Frank Bellinger, Penny Edwards Club. Kay McGowan, Jean Pierre Aumont Club. Gloria Martino, Nelson Eddy Music Club. Kathy Campbell, Darryl Hickman Club. Margie Hummel, Ginger Rogers Club.

John Lund's a nice considerate guy, but he doesn't fool about being the head of the house. And Marie's the kind of girl who likes it that way.

HE'S THE BOSS

by Marie Lund

■ When John heard I was going to do this story, he cautioned me: "Remember now—no build-ups!"

"Then shall I tell them you beat me, dear?"

"Certainly. Just don't tell them I'm adorable."

Okay. He's not adorable. If anything slips in that makes you think otherwise, it's a typographical error. The man said no build-ups, and he's the boss.

Yep, he's the boss. Not that he's bossy. Life with Lund bears no resemblance to Life with Father. My husband is a mild-mannered, considerate man with no yen to dominate anybody or anything. But the fact remains that I usually wind up doing just what he wants me to do. He's the kind of guy who's definitely the head of the house. I'm the kind of girl who likes it that way.

Not, on the other hand, that I consider men the lords of creation. Far from it. It's just that I'm highly susceptible to suggestions from my spouse.

He's got clear-cut notions, for instance, about what I should and shouldn't wear. No flat heels. No hats. No make-up. I like flat heels and hats and make-up as needed. So here's what happens.

We'll be getting ready for a party. John looks at my feet. "You're not going to wear those, are you?" Those are an elegant pair of gold sandals with wedges. From the way he says it, you'd think they were boa constrictors. "Why don't you put on high heels? Your legs look so much prettier." (Continued on page 107)

John (soon in My Friend Irma) doesn't really approve of Marie's whipping up her own clothes—but he cooperates by offering suggestions. Some of them she can actually use!

Guy and Gail are firmly putting their careers before marriage at present. Guy's latest movie is Massacre River, Gail's is Captain China.

wife in fame only

by Gail Russell

The couple often take to the woods to escape gossi questions about their romance. Guy's taught her ho to hunt (with arrows); she's taught him how to fis

People are always calling me

Mrs. Madison, and men hardly ever call me at all.

But, cross my heart—

even if only one

Guy believes me—

I'm not married!

Once, driving home from a day of sailing like this, Guy and Gail were amazed to hear over the car radio, an annauncement saying: "At this very moment, Guy Madisan and Gail Russell are eloping!"

■ "They don't seem to believe me," said Guy. "You try it."

All right, I will.

Ladies and Gentlemen, Guy Madison and I are not married. And the following is the way I feel about it.

I don't particularly like not being married to Guy. After all, when any Gail meets a Guy, she begins to think in positive terms—not negative.

When I met Guy I thought of many things—and kept them to myself. For instance, I thought of the Modern Chinese furniture which Mother had given me to furnish my apartment. (Now, while I like Modern Chinese very much, it's not my favorite. I prefer Early American. But Modern Chinese was the decorating theme in Mother's home.) I thought of the sort of linens I would like (blue—and my mother has just sent me a set including sheets, pillow slips and towels, all in blue and monogrammed with my initials in peach), the silver, the sort of home I would like and its arrangement. I thought of all these things, which shows what effect he had on me. Don't all girls have such thoughts when they meet someone they like? Or even imagine they could like?

After I got to know Guy better I found he had certain plans, too. And since they concerned both of us, I could let him in on a few of mine. I did. Our discussions had to do with our personal lives and our professional lives. It seemed to us that if we continued to like each other we ought to be able to do something about it by such-and-such a time. And we felt like two sensible people when we made this decision.

In any other place in the world—in Peoria where my mother and father went together for years before heading for the altar, in Bakersfield where Guy's parents did the same, in Pascagoula, Quebec or Sourdough, Alaska—in any other place you are permitted to make such long-range plans about so serious a thing as your future together—and to go through with them. But not in Hollywood.

We found that out on a Sunday about 18 months ago. Casually dressed (I was wearing shorts), we turned into a drive-in on our way home from Laguna Beach where we had spent the day sailing. Guy ordered hamburgers and malteds for both of us and we sat listening to a radio commentator over our car radio. Our food came. Guy started to drink his malted and I picked up my sandwich. Then—

"Exclusive!" came a voice. "At this moment Guy Madison and Gail Russell are eloping!"

Guy choked on his malted. I found myself staring at my hamburger and thinking how unlike a wedding cake it looked.

On the way home we kidded about it.

"What kind of an announcement did you send?" I asked.

"The usual," he replied gravely. "With rosebuds on it, pink cherubs and all (Continued on page 91)

WHY DAN DAILEY'S MARRIAGE FAILED

(Continued from page 31)

over his tragedy he was still on the merry-go-round of his sensational fame; it was still whirling giddily and he couldn't get off in spite of that jarring jolt. The night before he'd played a police benefit 40 miles away and had crawled home at two a.m.—after a full day's work on his picture, Rise and Shine. Next day, he was on the set again bright and early. That night he had a radio show.

In two years he's made six straight pictures and six straight hits. Last year he pitched every studio workday of the 365 and most Sundays, too, and his jobs were tough. On top of all that, I've watched this huge-hearted guy knock himself out playing four and five charity benefits a week around town, prodigal to exhaustion with his energies, time and talent.

A few weeks ago I ran into Dan hustling across the lobby at NBC. I was lined up myself to do a show with him there. "See you in Studio B," I called.

"Wait a minute!" Dan yelled, "Which show is that, Hedda?" He dug into his bulging pockets and fished out four scripts. He was on four different programs that night!

Dan Dailey's top man at 20th Century-Fox today. Businesswise, he's asked for nothing, griped about nothing, flashed no more temperament than a turtle. He's stayed grateful and glad about every part he's played. And once when I pointed out to him that Fox had $10,000,000 worth of pictures stacked ahead for him to do, Dan said eagerly, "I hope I make every one of 'em, too. If I can just keep on rolling like this, I'll be happy as a clam!"

Happy? Those words must ring hollow in Dan's generous ears by now. And yet, they may, someday, have real meaning again. That is, unless he's already lost more than his wife, unless the tide of his great Hollywood success has Dan floundering in deeper water than I think. Unless he can't take being top man at Fox and a bright-lighted box-office bonanza. Unless this domestic blue note is the opening bar of that old, old Hollywood refrain. Me, I'm just crazy enough to say I don't think so. I know I'm sticking my neck out at this point in Dan Dailey's defense, but that's an old habit of mine and I couldn't extend it for a nicer guy. I like him, you see, and well enough to sing out of tune.

And one of the main reasons I like Dan is because he's honest—even when the raps must hurt. He told me right out, "I left Liz alone. I was thinking of myself first. I wanted success above everything and I got it—but I made Liz pay." That's talking like a man, and that's the way Dan Dailey has always talked to me.

A few weeks ago, before one little straw of Dan's broke the camel's back of his home life, I asked Dan over to my house expressly to see for myself and for Modern Screen how he was taking his amazing fame. I'd heard the double-barrelled crack of shots sniping at the friendly, long-legged hoofer's success.

"Come in and sit down, Dan," I greeted him. "But don't sit by that window! A brick might come flying through. You're getting more vulnerable every minute." And I wasn't exactly kidding, either.

The bigger Dan Dailey gets, the better target he makes. Right now his family explosion makes him fair game. But this was before that happened—and he'd already sampled what he was in for if he made a false move. A newspaper gal had sniffed growing incompatibility at the Dailey's (they'd faced the problem twice before and had patched up for another chance because of their baby boy both times), "Come on, confess," pressed this lady reporter, "don't you and your wife ever fight?"

"Oh sure," quipped Dan, "I beat her one week—and she beats me the next!"

Well, that's almost a stock vaudeville gag about marriage. But it was Dan's bad luck that this babe was just waiting for a quote she could set a dynamite cap to. She wrote the item straight: Dan Dailey beats his wife—practically like that—and when Dailey saw it he couldn't believe it. A radio chatterbox grabbed the ball from there, ran up and down the field blistering his microphone about that wicked wife-beater Dailey's shame! Dan's thoughtless glib tongue so often gets him in Dutch, especially when there's the suspicion of fire behind his smoky wisecracks.

"Dan," I told him, "don't you know you're the bull's eye now? For gosh sake, when you crack wise put labels on 'em! Say 'that's a joke, son' or something to protect yourself."

But Dan Dailey's not the type to protect himself—that way. Maybe that's why I'm such a sucker for a guy who admits his faults and failings and stands ready to take the consequences, why I think he'll never phony himself up à la Hollywood, even though his big foot may slip many times again.

"Remember last fall when they were saying you were passionately in love with another man's wife, Betty Grable?" I reminded him.

I thought that'd certainly make sparks fly from Dan Dailey's red head. He just shrugged.

"Sure, I heard that," he said, "and I was sore at first. I went right in to see my boss, Darryl Zanuck, and told him what I'd heard. 'Dan, look,' he said, 'When anything's as silly as that, there's only one thing to do—forget about it.' That's what I did."

"Didn't you mention it to Betty Grable?" I asked.

"Of course," he said easily. "I called her right away. I said, 'Have you ever heard anything so utterly stupid in your life?'

" 'No,' she said, 'I haven't.'

"I asked her what she wanted to do about it. Betty said she'd like very much to tell 'em all to go to blazes, but that might not be ladylike. . . . But why bother?" Dan shrugged again. "It's true Betty Grable and I have a wonderful time together. We're the best of friends and we've hit it off right from the start. I've never known anyone as generous and considerate; there's not a shred of Hollywood hooey anywhere around her. She's a breeze to dance with, act with, sing with. I've always admired Betty Grable, but if I'm gone on anyone in that family it's Harry. I've been a fan of Harry James and his horn since before he went with Benny Goodman back in 1936. I used to drive down to the beach when his band played there, just to listen to him toot and beg him to let me sit in at the drums. But there's something else about that which everyone seems to have overlooked: I'm pretty crazy about my own wife."

That was Dan Dailey talking only a few weeks ago and it shows so many things—so many confusing things about Dan's complex make-up:

His generosity and frankness, his selfishness and thoughtlessness. His naïve uncaginess. His vagueness. His lack of understanding of his new big-star importance. His complete devotion to his job.

Now let's look at Dan Dailey's marriage and see what was wrong with it for a guy like that. Briefly, I'd say Dan Dailey married the wrong girl—and vice versa, although she's beautiful (Dan thinks she's the prettiest he's ever seen), sweet, peppy and fun.

Dan fell in love with his wife, Elizabeth the first time he saw her. He was showing his horse in a ring out in the San Fernando Valley one Sunday and a girl sitting in the stands kept pulling his eyes her way. By the time Dan won his ribbon the pretty girl was talking to someone he knew so he promoted an introduction. Turned out he knew her dad, who kep his horses at the same stable where Dan kept his.

"Four widely-scattered singles, please."

"I asked her if she'd like to go riding some time," Dan relates. "She said 'yes'—and that was it." Elizabeth Hofert was a Pi Phi co-ed at USC at that point. She's five-feet-four, blonde and pretty. The war kept them apart for some time but the minute Dan graduated from Officers' Training School at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, he took his shiny shavetail bars West to marry Liz.

Not long after, Dan went off to Italy and the wars. Liz sat it out alone, like any war bride, for months and months. Then one day Dan was back and she thought things would be different. Now was their chance for the fun together they'd talked about, dreamed about, wrote about in V-Mail rolls back and forth across the Atlantic. The dreams didn't come true. Dan Dailey was back and busting to make up lost time in something besides marriage—show business. Elizabeth nursed no such strange fire. Dan—well, it was bred in his bones. He says simply, "I've been at it all my life; I couldn't stop if I had to."

Dan's relatives, Dan Dailey and Lucy Dailey, were famous Broadway names. His mother was an entertainer. Dan's been through the rough-and-tumble ham-and-egging that young stage-struck performers seldom have the guts to get nowadays. He's a hoofer grad of the five-a-day circuits—burlesque, vaudeville, night clubs, marathon dances, carnivals, road shows—even summer stands in the Catskills. He's forgotten more buck-and-wing, cane-and-straw-hat off-to-Buffaloes than glamor dancers like Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly ever knew. Dan knew Gene when he was a "gyp" around Broadway, hunting any kind of job. He helped chorus boy Van Johnson land his first Broadway job.

Dan made Broadway, himself, at last in three musicals, Babes in Arms, Stars in Your Eyes and I Married an Angel. He was playing the last one on tour in Los Angeles when Billy Grady, MGM's talent chief, caught him at the Biltmore Theater and signed him up. He started his movie career at $225 a week. Dan's making more than $2,000 now. He didn't get that way sitting around the house.

Elizabeth was helpful and she tried to understand. There were confused and uncertain times at first when it looked as if Dan would go on playing gangster bits at MGM forever. He and Liz lived in a one-bedroom Hollywood apartment. They moved to a small Toluca Lake house only when Dan III announced he was arriving. Night they moved in, their baby arrived.

By now, the tot is almost two years old and Dan claims he's already taught him to sing "Clancy Lowered the Boom" and go into a whirlaway dance routine that has a split for a finish! It goes without saying that Dan's wild about his boy.

spoiled vacation . . .

That's what kept them together when Dan's ambition was making his wife a show-business widow. But Liz is not an actress, and doesn't want to be. She did want a husband whose life she could share. There wasn't enough of Dan's left.

There's always been a phone call or a wire or something to break up everything they've planned to do. Liz and Dan were up at Lake Arrowhead, for instance, when a mighty important one spoiled their vacation. They were up there with Dan pacing the pine needles restlessly, ducking the Hollywood people who were asking him, "What you doing, Dan?"—because he was tired of answering, "Nothing." That was when he was hanging around MGM on a war-interrupted contract with no job in sight and a half-hundred MGM stars—also back from the wars—on the list ahead of him. Liz was just settling down to getting acquainted with her husband, enjoying horseback riding and the water-skiing they both love, when Al Melnick, Dan's agent, rang and broke it up with, "How'd you like to make a picture with Betty Grable?"

"How would you?" cracked back Dan bitterly—and hung up. Dan figured that was no time for comedy. Only when Al called back and talked fast did he convince Dan his big break had arrived at last. The Daileys' delayed honeymoon ended right there and then. Of course, Liz couldn't have been happier for her ambitious guy—but she couldn't realize what that big-time break would do: take him away from her, every bit as much as if a seductive siren had grabbed his heart.

I've been an actress myself and I can understand Dan Dailey's dilemma—also Liz's, because I've been a wife and mother, too. I have no quarrel with Dan Dailey as a trouper. On the contrary, I have only admiration. He has humility and gratitude—which is very refreshing, believe you me, in a town crawling with Big I-Am's. The first time I ever quizzed Dan he tossed his credit sheets everywhere pretty as a picture! shirley temple on the october cover of modern screen

on sale
sept. 9

but at himself. Dan had champed at MGM bits—when he could get those—for eight years. I expected him to be bitter as gall about that wasted time. He almost bowled me over by saying: "I learned a lot there, Hedda. I got some wonderful training and some great advice. I still drop in and see my friends, George and L. K. Sidney and Louis B. Mayer—all the gang. They were swell to me, fair and helpful, and I'm grateful."

I can't help admiring an actor who points out the incredible Hollywood fact that he got some help along the way!

Showing how wrong a Hollywood prophet can be, Lamar Trotti, who produced Mother Wore Tights, told Dan's agent, Al Melnick: "I like Dan in this picture all right—but I don't know what he'll find to do around here after this."

What Dan found to do after Mother Wore Tights was Give My Regards to Broadway, You Were Meant For Me, When My Baby Smiles at Me, Chicken Every Sunday, and You're My Everything—just as fast as he could. They made some important gold for 20th-Fox and they made Dan Dailey—with an Academy nomination as best actor of the year to prove it. On the heels of that great honor, Dan got a vacation, his first in three pictures. He didn't share that with his wife, Liz. He went to New York with his agent to see his family and—you guessed it—to do shows, personal appearances, and keep right on chasing that career of his. That's my indictment of Dan—the same true bill he slaps dismally on himself today: He's guilty of consistently forgetting his own partner in life.

It's mighty convenient for busy husbands—whether they're in a studio or the stock market—to take a wife for granted and, when they do have a chance to relax, grab it selfishly without a thought for who's sitting alone.

fine but wobbly . . .

"Doesn't Liz like a good time, too?" I shot at Dan.

"Why sure—she loves it," he said. "Only we never had time to have them together."

"Whose fault was that?"

"Mine," said Dan. And it surely was. His intentions, I'm sure, were the best—but wobbly.

That night when he came to my house a few weeks ago, Liz was up at Lake Arrowhead hunting a house for the summer. Dan had come back from his New York holiday expansively satisfied that his career was under control. Liz, as usual, optimistically believed she'd see her husband for a while. When she left for that mountain-cabin hunt, Dan told her, "Get a small one, no guest rooms. We don't want a lot of drop-in guests up from Hollywood. Just us." He was to go up the next week and give it a preview, family style. Instead, Dan went off again to New York.

His studio asked him to take on a bond drive tour. "Sure!" said Dan. He was gone five days, worked like a beaver and had the time of his life, without a thought in his head about Liz and their plans. When he came back, he found that was one trip too many. There comes a time. That was when Liz told him flatly and finally that she was through—and left. "I can't live like this forever," she said.

Unless Dan's fooling me pretty badly, neither money, women, nor high life have turned his Irish head. If Dan had stuck his neck out stupidly that way, I'd be the first to whack it—and as hard as I could. But the only slight splurge I ever noticed Dailey indulge in was a new Cadillac he drove up to my house one night not long after he hit it big. He caught my awe-struck look and enjoyed it.

I knew how he felt and I thought it was swell. Dan had dreamed about owning that Cadillac for years and years. I was glad he had it at last. Incidentally, that little episode is as pure a picture of one Dan Dailey as I know, a big kid with honest weaknesses and a burning desire to get the things he's never had—like Cadillacs and big-time show business fame.

But I think he prizes them too highly. And I think, too, he's paid too high a price. Dan's precious career is still ahead of him and I'm not looking for him to knock over any more hurdles. Yet he'll find it different running the race alone—the trophies will be tasteless without someone to bring them home to. I think he realizes that now. But I'm not certain that, being Dan Dailey, he could do a single thing about it—even if he tried. He blames Dan Dailey, sure, but at the same time Dan blames what he loves best. "It's the penalty of fame," he told me gloomily, "and you can't win. You can't have everything."

No, you can't—in Hollywood or anywhere else—and I'm afraid that's the lesson of life Dan Dailey's learned the hard, heartbreaking way. Something had to give. But I wonder if Dan will ever convince himself in the years to come that what is left is worth what was lost?

THE END

ANN BLYTH, lovely star of "Once More, My Darling"—Universal-International release says, "I like my nylon hosiery sheer but not shiny." That's why Strutwear REVERSE KNIT Nylon Hosiery is her favorite... they're actually knit inside out for extra sheer beauty.

Strutwear... For the girl with a flair

EXCLUSIVE—the preferred dull look in nylons—featured only by Reverse Knits

EXCLUSIVE—Natural Curve Heel for finer fit. Will not creep or twist.

Reverse Knit Proportioned NYLON HOSIERY

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Write for name of your nearest dealer:—

STRUTWEAR, INC., Dept. MS-2, Minneapolis 4, Minn. · GOWNS · SLIPS · PANTIES · PAJAMAS · BED JACKETS · HOSIERY

Fall is closer than you think

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ Yes, we know it's still very much summer, as far as the weather goes. But as far as fashion goes, Fall is due the day after Labor Day. Promptly.

So, although the temperature is soaring to a point where you hardly feel like thinking about fur coats, we thought we'd slide you gently into an autumn mood with the smaller gimmicks. Accessories, to begin with—belts, bags, gloves, jewelry, page 70. For what is so drab as a wilted summer bag or belt on the first crisp day in September?

In undies, page 72, we've concentrated on nylon—quick-drying, non-ironing, and sweet as daydreams in the new pastel lemons, pale limes, heavenly blues.

As for shoes, there's news of a terrific new shoe material on page 74.

Point about all these early fashions is that you can shop for them comfortably now—so you can save the heavy search for your big suit or coat later. Also, the smartest accessories always have a way of appearing (and disappearing!) the earliest. Latch on to them now.

Marilyn Maxwell looks to fall in a turnabout sweater

■ Marilyn Maxwell, who wowed you in United Artists' Champion, wears something really new in sweaters.

Know how hard it is to decide between a slipover and a cardigan? Here is the "Turnabout," a sweater that is both! Opposite Marilyn is shown wearing the slipover front, but turn the page and you'll see Marilyn looking entirely different in the identical sweater as a cardigan.

And don't imagine this is one of those sweaters you simply wear backward; it is designed and knitted from the start for turnabout wear, and even the collar is notched front and back. All wool, in California Rose, blue, grey, kelly, copper.

By Featherknits. About $4.95.

At Stern's, New York. Other stores page 75.

Belt by Criterion; pin by Agnew; gloves by Kislav.

modern screen
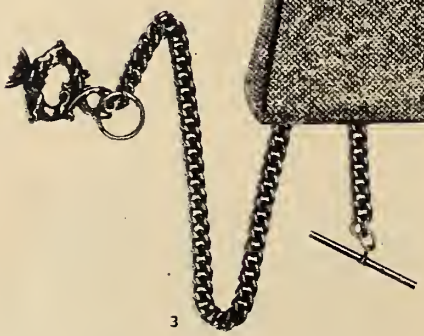
fashions

new accessories



fall is closer than you think.

1

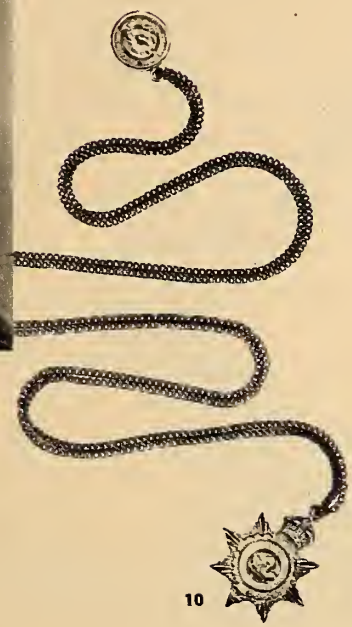
2

3

4

5

6



7

8

9

10

11

12

Early fall accessories are beginning to steal the show in your favorite shops. Even though you may consider it much too hot to try on wool suits or dresses, you can begin to collect the belts, bags and gloves you'll want the minute Labor Day is over. As, for instance, the super tweed bag and shoes we show. Or consider the latest in necklaces—open-at-both-ends chains to knot and let dangle. Or a scarf in autumn colors; or—but you take it from there. For where to buy, see page 75.

1. New tabbed white cotton shortie glove; many fall colors. By Hansen. $2. Available Sept. 1 at Stern's, N. Y.

2. Tweed's terrific for fall accessories. Brown tweed bag meant for suit you'll be buying. By Ingber. $7.95.

3. "Portrait of Jennie" seal on a watch-fob chain, to knot at throat. Gold finished. By Agnew. $6 plus tax.

4. 36″ silk square East Indian scarf—cravanetted to keep your hair dry in the rain. A B. & G. Creation. $3.

5. Marilyn Maxwell wearing the turnabout sweater on page 69 as a cardigan. By Featherknits, $4.95.

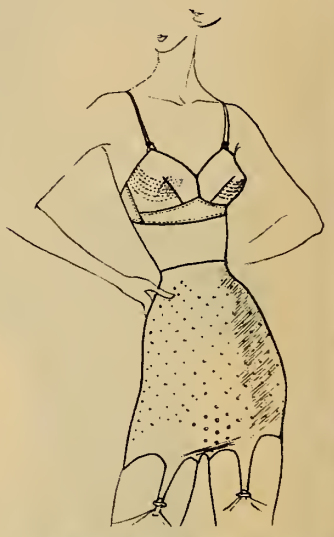
6. Dashing tweed pump to match tweed bag shown above. Low calf college heel. About $10. By John Flautt.

7. Slim tubular leather belt with tiny flat buckle to point up your little waist. All colors. By Criterion. $2.

8. Elizabeth Taylor, next in MGM's "Conspirator," wears pert fall hat. Elizabeth Taylor hat by Cinderella, $2.95.

9. Black cotton shortie gloves, etched with white stitching. Also white, brown, chamois, beige. By Hansen. $3.50.

10. Wonderful gold-finished chain with Middlesex medal on one end, Heron medal on other. By Agnew. $6 plus tax.



11. Black suede barrel with bright red lining, gold pin fastening. Pin is attached to suede ribbon. By Kadin. $7.95.

12. 36″ silk crepe square scarf in an adorable "house and tree" print. A B. & G. Creation. About $3.95.

new undies

1. Nylon bra with nylon embroidered net and rayon satin. By LOVABLE. $1.50. Figured nylon girdle. By YOUTHCRAFT. $5.95.

2. Firm but light nylon bra, with a divine uplift. By MAR-GRO. $1. Sculptured pantie girdle of pure latex. PLAYTEX LIVING GIRDLE. $3.95.

4. Nylon taffeta plunge bra, with elastic band. By PERMA-LIFT. $3. Nylon petticoat with wide lace flounce, beading. By JOSIE. $5.95.

5. Nylon multi-filament lace slip, sheer nylon embroidery at bodice and hem. White, green, larkspur blue. By STRUTWEAR. $6.95.

7. Photo at left: Strapless nylon deep-plunge, with sheer net half-cup. by GODDESS. $3.50. For where to buy all these undies, see page 75.

3. Nylon slip etched with nylon lace. Moulded bodice, gracefully swinging skirt. Pink, blue, nile, maize, orchid, white. By MISS SWANK. $4.98.

6. Nylon bra, adjustable front hooks to separate and support. By RENO, $3. Nylon halfslip with cocktail slit, lace, ribbon bow. By FANTASY. $3.95.

Artcarved

BELOVED BY BRIDES FOR A HUNDRED YEARS (1850-1950)

DEAUVILLE SET, with the exclusive Picture Frame engagement ring, $275. Bride's circlet, $175. Groom's ring, $24.50. Prices incl. Fed. tax

GOWN BY HATTIE CARNEGIE

When it's for always...

When the man you love says, "Darling, you will marry me, won't you?" it's the moment that means—for always.

Sometime, around that moment, someone is going to buy a diamond ring. But how can you be sure you are choosing wisely? By doing one thing. Look for the name ARTCARVED inside the ring you buy.

That name stands for America's oldest and largest ringmaker and diamond cutter. He brings you fine diamonds never before worn—performs and controls every step in the making of an ARTCARVED ring, from the rough diamond and molten gold to the finished product. This complete control by ARTCARVED craftsmen results in savings which are passed on to you in better values—better prices. Genuine ARTCARVED rings are registered and guaranteed.

ARTCARVED diamond ring prices start at $75—wedding rings at $8. Ask your jeweler to show you the name ARTCARVED* in the ring, on the tag.

FREE! "How to Select Your Diamond Ring," a new illustrated booklet. Write to J. R. Wood & Sons, Inc., Dept. S-7, 216 E. 45th Street, New York 17, N.Y.

Rings enlarged to show detail

*Trade Mark Reg.

Artcarved DIAMOND AND WEDDING RINGS • NEW YORK • LONDON • AMSTERDAM • ANTWER

fall is closer than you think...

1. For a big night—lush velvety brown platform
sandal in Norzon.
By Mary Lou. $4

2. Triple-strapped flat in velvety black Norzon
—for tailored clothes.
By Suzies. $4

new velvety shoes

What are good little shoes made of? These good little shoes are made of Norzon . . . and that's news. Norzon looks like velvet—feels like suede—and wears like anything. Walk in it, dance in it, date in it—Norzon fights off that beat-up look . . . resists scuffing and shining. The cute styles it comes in—stay cute! For where to buy, see page 75.

3. Open wedge sandal with square perforations.
Black, green, wine Norzon.
By Suzies. $4

4. Grecian ankle
strap sandal. Black, brown, green, red Norzon.
Darlin's by Rex. $2.95

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices on merchandise may vary throughout country)

Turnabout sweater worn by Marilyn Maxwell, color photo (page 69)
Los Angeles, Calif.—Foreman & Clark, 7th & Hill Sts.
New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 W. 42nd St., Fashion Basement
Philadelphia, Pa.—Lit Brothers, Market & 8th, Sportswear Dept., Subway Store

Accessories on pages 70-71

1. White tabbed glove
New York, N. Y.—Stern's (available Sept. 1)
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

2. Tweed Handbag
Write: Ingber Brothers, 347 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

3. Necklace with "Portrait of Jennie" seal
New York, N. Y.—All Peck & Peck shops

4. East Indian print scarf
New York, N. Y.—Gimbel Brothers

6. Tweed Shoe
Write: John Flautt Shoe Company, Lynn, Mass.

7. Slim tubular leather belt
New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 West 42nd St.

8. Pert felt hat worn by Elizabeth Taylor
Philadelphia, Pa.—Gimbels, Market & 9th

9. Black shortie glove
New York, N. Y.—Stern's (available Sept. 1)
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

10. Necklace with Middlesex and Heron medals
New York, N. Y.—All Peck & Peck shops

11. Black suede barrel handbag with red lining
New York, N. Y.—James McCreery & Co., 5th & 34th

12. House-and-tree print scarf
New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St.

Undies on pages 72-73

1. Embroidered nylon net bra
New York, N. Y.—Blackton, 398 Fifth Avenue and all other Blackton shops

Figured nylon girdle
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable, 5th Avenue & 40th St., Lingerie, 4th Floor

2. Nylon bra
Boston, Mass—Gilchrist's, 417 Washington Street, Corset Department, Basement

Playtex living pantie girdle
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Company, Washington Street, Notions Dept., St. Floor
New York, N. Y.—Macy's, Herald Square, Corset Department, 2nd Floor

3. Nylon slip with nylon lace
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co., 819 Canal St., Lingerie, 2nd Floor

4. Nylon plunge bra
Chicago, Illinois—Mandel Brothers, 3rd Floor

Nylon half-slip with beaded lace trim
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Gimbel's

5. Nylon slip with sheer embroidery trim
Minneapolis, Minnesota—The Dayton Co.
New York, N. Y.—Blackton's, 398 Fifth Ave.

6. Nylon bra with adjustable front closing
New York, N. Y.—Blackton's, 398 Fifth Ave.

Lace and ribbon trimmed nylon half-slip
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 33 West 34th St., Lingerie, Main Floor
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier, Market & 8th Streets, Lingerie, 4th Floor

7. Strapless nylon plunge bra
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 2nd Fl.

Norzon Shoes on page 74

1. High heeled platform sandal
Columbus, Ohio—Boston Store Co.
Toledo, Ohio—Kobacker Stores, 408 Summit Street

2. Triple strapped flat
Baltimore, Maryland—Wilmer Shoe Stores

3. Open wedge sandal with square perforations
Baltimore, Maryland—Wilmer Shoe Stores

4. Ankle strap Grecian sandal
Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania—Fowler, Dick & Walker, 17 S. Main St., Downstairs

Square Dance Dress (page 76)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th and Lexington, Economy Dresses, 2nd Floor
Portland, Oregon—Meier & Frank Company, 621 Southwest Fifth Avenue, All Day Dress Dept., Fourth Floor

How to Order Modern Screen Fashions

(1) Buy in person from stores listed.
(2) Order by mail from stores listed.
(3) Write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.—for store in your vicinity.

For the girl who doesn't like a "Made-up" look Greaseless Powder Base . . . gives a soft, natural finish! Protects!

Here's delicate new flattery for the skin that doesn't like a heavy foundation! A sheer, greaseless powder base that holds powder beautifully—never gives a coated, "made-up" look! Before powder, smooth on a satiny, protective film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. The snowy-white cream disappears instantly. No oily shine. No streaking or discoloring! Your make-up looks fresh and natural—clings longer!

1-Minute Mask . . . . your "before make-up beauty lift"

To look your loveliest, "re-style" your complexion with a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Just slip lavish fingerfuls of the fluffy, greaseless cream over your entire face, except your eyes. "Keratolytic" action of the cream loosens flakey skin and dirt particles. Dissolves them off! After one minute, tissue the mask off. Your face looks waked-up . . . clearer . . . even lighter! And much smoother for make-up.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

"Pond's 1-Minute Mask is the perfect complexion 'lift' before make-up. And Pond's Vanishing Cream for base makes powder go on smoothly, and stay fresh-looking."

fall is closer than you think...

whirling square dance dress

The square dance rage which swept the country this summer is slated to get even bigger and gayer this fall. Everybody's dipsy-doing it—so climb into this darling calico with the on-or-off shoulder—pick your partner, and hoe on down! In green or rose print. Sizes 10-18. By Kay Whitney. About $6.95. At Bloomingdale's, N. Y. Other stores page 75.

ONE-MAN MARSHALL PLAN

(Continued from page 53)

side. "Acute indigestion," he explained.

Two days later he lay flat on his back in a hospital, minus his appendix. Convalescence was pleasant, for Brenda'd finished her picture and danced attendance. Every once in a while she'd rub her right side. "I've got a pain here."

"Sympathetic reaction," Bill assured her. "How painful can sympathy be?"

In the end, she was X-rayed. "Your wife," the doctor told Bill, "has acute appendicitis."

"Quit playing games!" he roared. "We've been married two months, and I haven't seen this girl!"

They sent him home, changed the sheets and stuck Brenda into bed. Things had barely straightened out when Pearl Harbor Day dawned. Soon afterward they went to Washington for the President's Birthday Ball, and parted again—Brenda to New York for personal appearances, Bill back to Hollywood for another picture. He finished on April 15th. On the 17th —his birthday—he enlisted in the Army. Whatever wry humor the situation may have held now faded out. For eight months they didn't see one another.

With Bill making a private's salary, it seemed sensible for Brenda to work. And work would have helped fill the emptiness of his absence, except that they kept on handing her stinkeroos. Out of 14 parts, she hated 11. The golden future darkened to a dismal series of studio battles and suspensions against the ever-present background of personal heartache. At last she couldn't take any more, asked for her release, and flew East to Bill.

Returning to Hollywood, Brenda signed with 20th Century-Fox for Paris After Dark—and discovered a week later that she was pregnant. Everyone at 20th was having babies that year, so she didn't tell them until production was over. Peter Westfield—called Thumper before his birth because he kicked so hard, and Westinghouse later, because he rumbled like an icebox—made his appearance on November 17th. (At five-and-a-half, he's known as Wild West.)

from hunger . . .

Changing studios failed to change Brenda's luck. With the baby born, she reported back to 20th. They had news for her. "We'd like you to do a musical. Something for the boys."

"We-ell," said Brenda, "it's a lovely thought—only I can't sing or dance. I'm just an actress."

Another suspension, and out of a job again. Columbia offered her a contract, but she'd been twice bitten now and was contract-shy.

"If I don't take it, I'm a selfish pig," she wrote Bill. "We need the money."

"You do as you please," he wrote back. So she turned it down and when they were flat broke, made a quickie at a minor studio that she'd just as soon forget. . . .

Those were the war years. In October, 1945, Captain William Holden was discharged from the Army. In a way, the year that followed was the toughest yet. For 11 months Bill drew his salary at Paramount, and did no work. Being paid for nothing may sound like a sweet way to live. It isn't. To an actor, it's the sword of Damocles over your head. Bill's last picture had been released in 1942. The war was one thing. Sitting out your contract and watching fat parts go elsewhere was something else again. Dear Ruth was dear to Bill in more ways than one. It saved him from a case of desperation.

GENUINE REGISTERED
Keepsake
DIAMOND RINGS

"Darling - it's a Keepsake!"

How proud the girl who wears this ring that tells how dearly loved she is . . . a Keepsake, most treasured of all diamond rings.

To be sure your diamond is the very finest value, be guided not by size alone, but by Color, Cut and Clarity. These three qualities determine the true value of your diamond as well as its beauty and brilliance. By the name "Keepsake", these qualities are assured.

Remember, if it's a Keepsake, the name is in the ring . . . so, on the day you choose your diamond, let your Keepsake Jeweler be your trusted guide. Prices nationally established to $5000.

A. RODNEY Ring 100.00
Wedding Ring 50.00

B. COURTSHIP Ring 450.00
Wedding Ring 125.00

★ Man's Diamond Ring 125.00
Available at $75 to 250 to match all engagement rings

C. WILLOW Ring 250.00
Also $100 to 2475
Wedding Ring 12.50

For the nome of your neorest Keepsoke Jeweler, coll Western Union by number ond osk for Operotor 25.

All rings illustrated available in white as well as natural gold. Rings enlarged to show details. Prices include Federal Tax.

Amsterdom Antwerp Home Office — Syracuse, N. Y.

Keepsake Diamond Rings, A. H. Pond Co., Inc.
120 East Washington, Syracuse 2, New York

FREE . . . Please send the useful 20-page book, "The Etiquette of the Engagement ond Wedding," together with illustrotions and prices of Keepsake Rings, ond the name of my nearest Keepsoke Jeweler. Also send informotion obout the beoutiful new 48-page "Bride's Keepsake Book."

NAME.....

STREET AND NO.....

CITY..... MSC 9-49

Meantime, little Scotty had been born in May, and Brenda seemed quite content to stay at home. The separation, the fears, the loneliness had left their mark on the girl of a few years before, to whom a career had been so important. Now it was enough that she and Bill and the children were together. Producers would call, and Bill would hear her on the phone: "Interview? Thanks a lot, but I'm not interested."

This would please him mightily. Yet sometimes Bill would have qualms. Brenda'd been so crazy to act, he didn't want her frustrated. "Now that the pressure's off and I'm back on the job, why don't you get an agent and do a picture?"

"Maybe I will." And back she'd go to her housework and gardening. Bill in his wisdom had left the door wide open. She could always step out and back into her career.

That's how matters stood when the phone rang one morning. It was Bill Meiklejohn, Paramount's casting head. "Brenda," he said, "you haven't made a picture for six years. That's too long! Want to go back to work?"

"Doing what?"

"A Technicolor Western with Alan Ladd, called Whispering Smith."

Bill was making The Man from Colorado at Columbia, but she finally got him on the phone. "It's Technicolor, Bill. I think I look better in color than black-and-white. The role is a married woman in her thirties, and that's for me. Besides, with Alan Ladd, how can you lose?"

They'd been telling me the story together. Now Bill picked it up. "First thing I asked her was, 'How much money can you make?' She told me. It wasn't hay! And here's where I'd like to make one point very clear. We have three children. You've got to put money away for those kids. You also need adequate space for them. Our old house had two bedrooms. We were negotiating for a new house. In fact, we'd about decided to go ahead, but with tremors. The tremors grew less when I heard what Ardis could make." (You'll have to get used to this Ardis-Brenda routine. Her real name is Ardis, and Ardis she remains to Bill and their close friends.)

"And don't think," she cut in, "that I didn't play on those tremors. What's a new house with old furniture in it? We planned to buy nothing new till we could well afford it. Now, I told Bill, we could at least afford to start."

"So we started," Bill grinned. "You're sitting on a chair that wouldn't be here if Ardis hadn't worked in Whispering Smith."

The picture was a lovely interlude for Brenda. She and Bill would gulp their morning coffee together, and follow each other into town. If he finished first, she'd find him waiting in her dressing room. They'd follow each other home, jump into showers, have dinner on trays, then go upstairs and rehearse for the next day.

busy beaver . . .

Brenda revels in domesticity. Feels it's both her business and pleasure to keep the home fires burning. Bill's working his head off. It's a far cry from the days when he chewed his knuckles, waiting for a part to show. Now, if he sliced himself in two, there still wouldn't be enough Holdens to fill the demand. With actors crying, "No work!", Bill's made a round half-dozen pictures this year. Ordinarily, he thinks, that would be too many. But having been off the screen so long, he's catching up. More important is the mounting variety and stature of his roles. Twentieth Century-Fox borrowed him to do Apartment for Peggy. People say—and I mean people, not press agents—that if The Dark Past had been released in time, he'd have copped an Academy Award nomination. Now, having finished Miss Grant Takes Richmond for Columbia, he's slated for Brackett and Wilder's Sunset Boulevard on his home Paramount lot. And to play the lead in a Brackett and Wilder film is the gold ring on the merry-go-round.

They don't belong to the Mocambo crowd. Life revolves around home, family and profession. But it's not a narrow professionalism—"not just being an actor," says Bill, "following certain patterns set by the town. I love the whole business. I'm an officer of the Screen Actors' Guild, and Ardis is just as concerned with those problems as I. She's a very helpful girl. Pretty too. Always pretty, even first thing in the morning."

"You should see me in winter, when I'm wearing one of his T-shirts for warmth!"

"Then she's cute. Looks like she's entering a bob-sled race at Saranac."

They kid about this, but in earnest. Bill can't understand the curler-and-mudpack type, nor why a woman should let herself go, once she's got her man signed, sealed and delivered. Neither can Brenda. "Especially when he's working all day with the most attractive girls in the world."

Meantime she works with hoes and shears and Snarol, waxes and polishes.

"I wish I had their recipe—I can never get a pie to turn out light and fluffy."

"I'll be at the windows, with a bandanna round my head, looking like the devil. Along comes a sight-seeing bus. 'Here's where the William Holdens live,' yells the driver, and some tourist yells, 'Who's that there? She looks underpaid.'"

Come late afternoon, Brenda tracks the kids down, corrals them, bathes them, polishes their shoes for school next day. By the time Bill gets in, they've eaten and are busy with the television set. And a smartly-groomed wife, smelling of Chanel Number Five, is ready to enjoy a cocktail with her husband.

Except on Thursday, the help's day off. Give Brenda a house to clean, and she's in her glory. But give her an egg to boil, and she's through. Certain situations have to be faced. Some people are color-blind, and Mrs. Holden can't cook. She's tried her honest best, and she still can't cook. If the cook's left a Pyrex dish of stew that needs only to be heated, she eyes it balefully. "I know I'm going to burn it," she mutters—and she does.

For lunch, she feeds the kids canned soup and raw carrots. "Health food, that's what they need." Thursday's the only day she believes in health food. Thursday night they have hamburgers, cooked by Bill. His reaction to this arrangement is mixed.

"In a way, it fractures me. There I am at the studio, knowing our poor little children won't eat till Daddy gets home. In another way, it builds up my male ego."

One Thursday night he dashed home to find their radio man—come to do a job on the sound machine—bending over the broiler.

"This is terrific," said Bill. "How did you get roped in?"

"Mrs. Holden asked, did I know a good formula for hamburgers."

"A formula! What's it supposed to be—pablum?"

"So I said I'd fix 'em. Got kids of my own. They're crazy for hamburgers too. . . . These are well seared now. Only take another five minutes."

Brenda's voice floated down from above. "Surprise, darling! Mr. Kepler's cooking the hamburgers."

"I know! He gave me his formula."

no more hassle . . .

So she can't cook. But she sails through the dishes like a breeze. Bill settles for that.

You feel a serenity in Brenda, a sureness in Bill, a sense of love and stability between them. You feel that all problems (including hamburgers) have been settled and will continue to be.

On one essential point they're firmly agreed. Never again will Brenda be tied to a contract, which might separate them as it did before the war. "A contract," she says, "is Ulcer Alley. I've had my fill of it. Why go through that awful hassle when life's so wonderful this way?"

Bill feels no concern over any movie job she may take. "I know her too well. Through six lean years and two good ones she's proven time and again what comes first with her."

"I love acting and always will," said Brenda. "But for what you get, you've got to give something else up. How can you weigh a career, which lasts just so long against the enduring values of marriage and children? You can't."

In their still half-furnished living room hangs a lovely Paul Clemens portrait of Brenda and the children. It's the result of a vacation Bill didn't take, and is a kind of symbol of family solidarity.

Recently Bill caught a glimpse ahead of 10 days between pictures, and suddenly felt he had to get away from it all. Ten lovely lazy days at Acapulco—just he and Brenda and the sun and the sky. . . .

They started planning. Till Bill remembered the Clemens portrait they'd always wanted sometime when they could afford it. He did some fast calculating and came up with an offer. "If we skip the vacation, honey, we can have the portrait. Take your choice."

"But it's your vacation, Bill. You need the rest."

"I can rest in the backyard. I'd rather have the portrait now—before the children grow older."

The job was commissioned and done. Bill spent his holiday in the backyard, and went in every now and then to look at the painting. Count the minutes of joy he's already drawn from it, and they add up to a lot more than 10 days.

"Not to mention the years ahead," said Bill. "Ten years from now, what would Acapulco mean? Not a thing. On the other hand, Deedee'll be a young lady. Wes' voice'll be changing—even Scotty'll be in his teens. But I'll still be able to look at those cuties in the picture."

"Hey," cried Brenda, "you left one of us out! What'll Momma be doing?"

His eyes crinkled. "Waiting for Popp to come home and cook the hamburgers."

THE END

JUDY'S ALL RIGHT!

(Continued from page 37)

prescription: "Rest, rest, and more rest."

And you have my word for it that she was resting. A lot of rumors in the newspapers had her dashing down to New York for a weekend of play-going, or visiting friends at fashionable beach resorts on Cape Cod and Long Island. I can assure you that such was not the case.

"I am not rushing things," said the new Judy, who heretofore has rushed things all her life. "I remember too well what happened to me two years ago when I went to Maine for a rest, and came back too soon."

Hedda Hopper reported that tragic story in "Breakdown," in the November, 1947, MODERN SCREEN—Judy's divorce from David Rose, her marriage to director Vincente Minnelli, her gruelling work schedule that kept her going almost up to the moment of daughter Liza's birth, and her return to the grind before she had recovered her strength.

It's true that the trip to Maine did avert the dreaded breakdown—but, as events have shown, it was not enough. Soon Judy was working her legs off matching the polished perfection of Fred Astaire in Easter Parade. She plunged into radio, matching tunes with another perfectionist, Bing Crosby. She began work on the songs and dances of Annie Get Your Gun—a staggering job, as Ethel Merman of the stage version can tell you.

burning the candle . . .

That was when she began fanning the flames of her double-ended candle to make them burn brighter. Tense and high-strung, she would return from the studio unable to sleep. Sleeping pills helped at first, but after a while they took their toll on her work the next day. To counteract this, she began taking the tablets that were used by wartime air pilots who had to stay awake during long-range bombing missions. The result was that between trying to sleep and trying to stay awake, the time came when Judy could do neither at the right time.

Mr. Alsop, who was with us during the interview, added another point. Himself a veteran actor, director and producer, he could speak with authority. "The preparation for a singing, dancing and acting role such as Judy has always played," he said, "calls for three times as much work as a plain acting part. The physical energy burned in learning a dance number is unbelievable. Worse, dancing builds up a lot of muscles that interfere with singing, so these muscular tensions have to be overcome. And finally, you have the strain of sustaining the dramatic intensity of the role during the weeks it is before the cameras. . . . My wife doesn't see how she does it," he added frankly.

Since his wife is Sylvia Sidney, another widely-experienced hand at show business, the tribute to Judy's terrific vitality is of more than casual significance.

But enough analysis of water that's over the dam. Let's take a look at this new Judy.

With the full approval of Judy's doctor, the interview took place in a corner suite on the ninth floor of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Boston, overlooking the historical Common. Judy was wolfing her third meal of the day—codfish cakes, which are as much a part of the traditional Boston menu as baked beans. Her delightful three-year-old daughter, Liza, fresh up from her afternoon nap, sat on the floor immersed in the problem of opening a draw-string bag. Mr. Alsop was listening "Something Wonderful in New Woodbury Powder makes my Skin look Satin Smooth!"

says GLORIA DE HAVEN
co-starring in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's
"SCENE OF THE CRIME"

There is something wonderful in New Woodbury Powder—a new ingredient that gives your skin a smooth-as-Satin look.

And Woodbury shades are just a glow of Satiny color on your skin—richer, warmer, they give none of that obvious "powdered" look. New Woodbury Powder is finer-blended than was ever before possible. And the subtle, exciting fragrance clings as long as the powder.

See for yourself why women from Coast to Coast voted New Woodbury the four-to-one favorite over all leading face powders!

7 glow-of-color shades, 15¢, 30¢ and $1.00 plus tax.

BG Creations

authentic French reproductions

Nostalgic reproduction of an original* French creation. Pure silk, hand rolled, lush fall colors. Retail about $3. *Originals made to retail much higher. Other patterns available.

Write for free scarf stunt booklet (dept. M.S.) If you cannot obtain scarf from your dealer write directly to us. You will be promptly supplied by a store in your vicinity.

Ben Goodman & Son, INC.
Symbol of Scarf Superiority
9 EAST 38th STREET • NEW YORK 16

HI-LO WEDGIES...
AT A LOW PRICE
2.98

"PAM"
Black "man-made" suede.

"PENNY"
Black, Brown "man-made" suede.

vicki of Boston

"DEBBIE"
Black, Brown, Green "man-made" suede.

ORDER BY MAIL

VICKI OF BOSTON D-9-10
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Please send me_____Prs. Wedgies @ 2.98

STYLE	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
"PENNY"
"PAM"
"DEBBIE"

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State_____
Check ☐ Maney Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐
Send check or money order and we will poy postoge. Customer ogrees to poy postal chorges on C. O. D.'s.

Sizes 4 to 9, Mediums.

Send for FREE 1950 Catalog

to ticking noises in the telephone as his call to London went through.

The interview had to be quiet. Not for a long time would she be up to one of her slam-bang get-togethers with the press, with everyone firing a barrage of questions.

"They're wonderful to me out at the hospital," said Judy, tackling another cake. "I'm just another patient out there, you know. No special nurses, no special privileges. When I want my breakfast, I get it when they get to me."

I asked how she was progressing in learning how to sleep all over again.

She laughed. "They taught me, all right. They turned out the lights and told me to go to sleep. There was nothing else to do, no place to go, and so I went to sleep. It was just catnaps at first, but now I just close my eyes and I'm off for 10 and 12 hours at a stretch. No pills. It's wonderful. . . .

"This hospital really renews your faith in human nature," she went on. "I went with the nurse to the children's ward the other day. One little girl—the palest, most wistful mite you ever did see—had a chart at the foot of her bed, and upon it were the letters T. L. C. I asked what they meant, and my nurse said, 'Tender, loving care.' You see, love was as much a part of her cure as medicine, and every night the nurse cuddled the little child until she dropped off to sleep." Judy's big eyes were moist. "Imagine people caring so about others that they do all that."

part of the cure . . .

There was no doubt that Judy's time in the hospital had given her a new maturity. As a patient now instead of—as so often before—a benefit entertainer, she was seeing the hospital's whole complex function from the inside. This was no shallow stage setting, and the beds were not props filled with extras. This was life with its suffering and its healing, and Judy was absorbing it all.

"As soon as the doctors were convinced my recovery was the real thing," she continued happily, "they let me have Liza brought here from the Coast. Now I can play with her every day—and of course we have to catch her favorite shows on television. We're both great fans."

Judy's range of activity had been extended as her gratifying progress continued. Now, almost daily she was going for a drive with Mr. Alsop, often along the beach for the salt air, but more often to points of historical interest. She was coupling her pilgrimages to Plymouth Rock, Concord, and Lexington with an intensive reading program in American history, finding in this tradition-filled New England environment a feeling of strength and solidity she had missed before. Favorite spot of all was Harvard University at dusk, amongst the great elms and the ancient walls that hold a continuity of 300 years.

And what of Judy's future?

Right now she was returning to the hospital every evening, there to remain until noon the next day, sleeping, sleeping, sleeping. And some time around the first of August there would come the return to work—but never again at the old pace. Judy has been reflecting on the counsel of friends, and they've had some remarkable things to say.

"Judy Garland," says Katherine Hepburn, "has everything it takes to become a great dramatic actress. What she has done so far can't compare with what she will do in the right parts."

It was Miss Hepburn, incidentally, who so opportunely provided Judy with a house to rent when Judy separated from husband Vincente Minnelli. Strangely enough, the house was extremely close to the one she was leaving.

"They couldn't have separated at closer quarters," says Alsop enigmatically. Mr. Alsop happens to be also the manager and personal representative of husband Minnelli. Somehow, between the adjacency of Judy's and Vincente's dwellings and the coincidence of their sharing a most diplomatic manager, I gathered there was no reason to accept their separation too seriously.

Minnelli is another who has never sold Judy short, and his words of advice on the more serious phases of acting are now getting her close attention. The stage is beckoning. London wants her, either at the Palladium or in a revue. If they get her, it will not be for lack of some highly competitive bidding from the New York stage, but because Judy is anxious to see more of the world. Boston has stimulated her interest in history, and now she wants to follow through.

What kind of a role does Judy see for herself? Singing is so much a part of her, she cannot see herself working without music for a while. But how about Judy as the adult, sloe-eyed enchantress, Magnolia, in Show Boat? Or singing Mary Martin's role in South Pacific? I'm not saying Judy has her heart set on those roles. I'm pointing them out as the type of part she sees for herself in the future—parts calling for all the superb acting talent of which she is capable—and of which she shows flashes even in light roles such as she has in In the Good Old Summertime.

As I looked at her, so poised and relaxed and charming, it seemed incredible that this was the Judy who, nervous and more than a little irritable, had fled Hollywood a few scant weeks before, convinced that her career was in ruins. Now she knows that if she had not left when she did, she might really have ruined her career by exhausting that last slight reserve of nervous energy that is proving her salvation. Her outbursts of temperament—call them tantrums if you will—were the poppings of Nature's safety valve, and they sounded their warnings in time.

Now, refreshed by long hours of sleep that would be continued until her reservoir of energy was at flood, she had found herself again. More mature, yes, and more thoughtful—and to have gained those attributes out of her past troubles is to have redeemed far more than was lost.

There still remains the problem of the Great Suspension and the little matter of Annie Get Your Gun. Judy was not up to talking business, but there were some clues as to which way the wind was blowing. For instance, Metro was showing a right fatherly concern over Judy's rest, and the telephone calls she had been receiving from her bosses could hardly be called stern and disciplinary. In fact, they added up to something mighty like "Get well, Judy, and come home. All is forgiven."

And she will be coming home again—the old Judy, clear-eyed, and vital. Judy's all right!

THE END

MEET THE AUTHOR

George Scullin was born in St. Paul, Minnesota, grew up there and entered journalism in 1930. After working on a number of Middle Western newspapers and being a staff writer for several radio stations, he moved to New York in 1936. There his jobs on various well-known periodicals have included an associate editorship of Fortune and the editorship of True. His articles have appeared in an impressive list of national magazines. During the war, Scullin served as a navigator in the Air Transport Command, flying runs over the North and the South Atlantic and the Hump.

"I dress for the theater....at 8 o'clock in the morning!"

1. "For the business world—a chic black suit—its jacket sporting an unusual combination of brown on black—its skirt slim and straight. And, of course, I rely on gentler, more effective Odorono Cream. Because I know it protects me from perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!"

2. "For the Broadway whirl—I remove the jacket and add a gleaming satin waistcoat and feather. I'm confident of my charm all evening, too, thanks to new Odorono Cream. Because I find it gives me more effective protection than any deodorant I've ever known."

New Odorono Cream brings you an improved new formula. So creamy smooth too—even if you leave the cap off for weeks.

It never harms fine fabrics, and is so gentle you can use it right after shaving! You'll find it's the perfect deodorant.

New Odorono Cream safely stops perspiration and odor a full 24 hours!

(Now in new 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, plus tax)

beau plaid

Recipe for beau-catching:—Take crisp, swishy taffeta in a pretty plaid; add a black velvet bow and belt, a dash of slimness in the zipped bodice, a full, swirling skirt, and top it all off with a wide, wide collar. Then slip yourself into it and you'll look sweet enough to eat! Multicolor Plaid with Maroon or Green predominating, or Black-and-White. Sizes 9 to 15. $7.95

ZAN TAMAR FROCKS
225 West 34th Street, New York 1, N. Y.
Please send me through the nearest store
..... "Beau Plaids" @ $7.95.
Size..... Color..... 2nd Color .....
Name .....
Address .....
City ..... Zone..... State .....
Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐

I'M STILL WILD ABOUT HARRY

(Continued from page 47)

you at that hour of the night. But it wouldn't have seemed like a wedding at all. And I think even movie people have the right to be married quietly, if that's what they want, instead of signing autographs on the way in and out.

So the ceremony took place in one of the hotel rooms. Five minutes later I was phoning my mother, and all I could say was, "Mrs. Harry James talking, Mrs. Harry James talking, Mrs. Harry James talking"—like a stuck record.

* * *

And now we've just marked the sixth year of our wonderful marriage.

There was something very special about this anniversary: It was the first one we've spent together—every other time Harry's been on the road.

Being together was all the celebration we needed. We don't make a big production of anniversary gifts. Harry always loaded the house with red roses, but lots of times he has been playing some little town where he couldn't find any other kind of present. I'm not crazy about jewelry, which makes it hard for him. Not long ago he gave me a gold chain with a gold poodle on it, and I do love that. But aside from that, the only jewelry I usually wear is my wedding ring and my wrist watch. I do, however, really go for furs—and Harry came up with a blue mink this year!

He's worse than I am to buy presents for. He's got a bunch of watches, and doesn't use any. He's got six lighters and I don't know how many tie clips. I'll be beating my brains out for an idea, and all of a sudden he'll say, "I really need some new shirts." Fine, I think, the man needs some new shirts. Then, a week before his birthday, he'll go out and buy them. Or a week before Christmas, he'll stock up on Argyle socks. Makes me so mad! The ranch helps out though, as far as presents are concerned. From time to time, we'll give each other a horse.

so darn sweet . . .

Naturally, the high spots of our marriage have been Vicki and Jessica. Harry was here when Vicki was born. I was pretty uncomfortable, but I honestly think it was harder on Harry. He'd have done anything, only there was nothing he could do. Till an idea hit him. Suddenly he said: "Excuse me," and went out and came back with about 16 crossword puzzles.

I didn't know whether to laugh or cry. If he'd brought me just one! But no—a whole pack of them! I remember wondering, "How long does he think I'll be here?" But I never let on, because I could see just how his mind worked. Being desperate to get me something and knowing I loved crossword puzzles, he felt they'd please me more than flowers or perfume. It was so darn sweet that, feeble though I felt, I even tried to do one or two, to show him I appreciated the thought.

When Jessica came, he wasn't here. He'd arranged his tour to be back in time, but Jessica came about five weeks early. I'd promised him this one would be a ballplayer, and I must say I was disappointed at first. I'd been dying to tell him, "It's a boy!" But it was Mother who broke the news, anyway. She talked to him right after the baby was born, because I was in the operating room for nearly three hours. Then, as soon as I got down to my room, I talked to him. If it had been a boy, I'd have come right out with it, loud and clear and joyful. This way I said, "It's a girl, you know." Almost as if I were apologizing.

But he didn't care. "Why d'you think I had the name Jessica all picked out?" he cried.

That was Harry's choice entirely. He thought Jesse James was such a wonderful name, especially for a little girl. Well, I like Jesse with an e but not with an ie. So we call her Jess or Jessica. With no middle name. Vicki's is Elizabeth, after me and my grandmother. But Jessica James just sounded right, with nothing in the middle to break it up.

* * *

To me, loving someone makes you want to make him happy. I've always tried to fit myself into Harry's way of life, and it's been easy. Harry's a very easy person to live with. He's got a heavenly disposition. Any problems that come up, we straighten them out together. Our only problem that's ever amounted to a hill of beans is my being in the movies. Harry's never said, "Don't work"—but I know he'd be better pleased if I didn't. He's not the least bit impressed with being married to a movie star.

I can understand that. Harry's ideas about women are very old-fashioned. He doesn't care about seeing his wife in the limelight. But he's understanding, too. He knows I enjoy making pictures, so he won't ask me not to.

What really griped him at first was the Betty Grable thing. It shouldn't have, because his name is as big as mine, if not more so. But the fact remains that it made him uncomfortable. It made us both uncomfortable. I'd squirm when people would introduce me as Miss Grable in his presence. When they'd call up at home and ask for Miss Grable on the phone, I'd always tell the help to say, "Do you mean Mrs. James?"

Even at the studio, where I naturally expected to be called Grable, my chair is marked BETTY JAMES. And there's one director who always introduces me as Mrs. James. I never asked him to, he just sensed that I liked it better. Somebody'll come up and he'll say, "This is Mrs. James." It gives me a nice feeling. It's as it should be.

As Mrs. James, I've got a husband, two children and a house to look after. That's my job. The studio doesn't enter into our home life. Once that door closes behind me, my work's shut out as if it didn't exist. We not only don't discuss it, it's never mentioned. As I said before, Harry's not interested in my being a movie star, so why bore him with chit-chat about what happens on the set? It's not as if I helped to keep the wolf from the door. He pays the bills, like any business man who's married. I could retire right now and live very comfortably for the rest of my life. Which is just what I plan, when my dancing days are over. I have no ambition to be a dramatic actress.

No, we don't have any movie talk round the house. But music—that's another story. I love to have Harry bring his test records home, so I can hear them. He puts them on to see if they sound all right, or if he wants to make changes here and there. I guess I've got some old-fashioned notions myself. I feel very strongly that the man of the house has a right to bring his work home and talk it over with his wife, and expect her to sympathize and understand. If Harry were a broker and said, "I had a terrible day at the office, I sold 10 shares when I should have bought them," I'd make it my business to find out about shares. Even if I hated music—though who could hate music?—and wanted to go lock myself in a room, I'd never let him know it. I think it's up to me to be interested in Harry's career. I don't think it's up to him to be interested in mine. Maybe that's not modern, but that's how I feel.

And maybe this sounds corny, but—well, there's nothing in Harry I can find to criticize. To me, he has perfect taste—in clothes, in music, in people, in behavior. I trust his judgment more than my own. Which is why I get nervous when he comes over to the set. I'm afraid he may think that what I'm doing isn't good. Nobody makes me self-conscious at work but my husband. So I'm just as glad, when he does have time off, that he'd rather play golf or take in a ball game. Maybe twice while I'm on a picture we'll have lunch together, and that's it.

he's the tops . . .

Because I respect his taste so deeply, he's naturally influenced me in lots of ways—broadened my knowledge of music, changed my mind about people. If we argue about something, Harry can always explain to me why he feels as he does. I can't. Harry makes good sense, so generally I come round to his way of thinking. Which doesn't mean that the James boy can't change his mind, too.

Like the time I got a bright red car. "That's Hollywood," said Harry, who hates anything flashy. So do I, for that matter, but I hadn't thought of it that way. I just liked the color. Well, a couple of weeks later, he said, "Come on out, I've got something to show you." And there in the drive stood my husband's car, painted red.

"It's a pretty shade, isn't it?" I said.

He grinned—and we let it go at that.

About the children, we've never had any difference of opinion. I'm the one who's responsible for their day-by-day routine. Harry's the one who takes Vicki to the circus. We don't worry about when they'll start piano lessons and so forth. Vicki's five and Jessica's two. We enjoy their being five and two, and the future can wait until it gets here.

We give them all kinds of love and attention, but we don't spoil them. When I say, "Vicki, it's time to go to bed," she says goodnight and goes—even at Christmas, when people are over and she's having such fun playing with her new toys. Sometimes I'd like to say, "Oh, well, you can stay up a little longer." But I don't. I think that's indulging yourself and harming the child. If you stick to your word, then you don't get the tears and tantrums and the business of having to drag them upstairs. At least, that's how it is with us. Vicki's always been a happy child, and so is the baby. I've never really had to discipline or spank them. Though, if it were necessary, I'd be the one to do it, not Harry. He's gone so much, I'd hate to have them feel he came home just to spank them.

When he's away, I don't care about being with a lot of people. Once in a while some friends'll take me to dinner, or have dinner at home with me. But not because they think, "Poor Betty's going to be lonesome—let's whip up an evening for her." They know me better than that. Of course I'm lonesome, but I don't get frantic over it, or wonder, "Oh, what'll I do tonight?" Maybe I'm just lazy, but I'd rather eat dinner with Vicki, watch the television set, and climb into bed with a book at 9. When I'm working, I've got to be in bed by 9. Working or not, I prefer to be lonesome by myself instead of having people trying to entertain me and get my mind off Harry's being away.

I miss him terribly. I miss him every

At Duke University, they called lovely Dee Gentner the "Noxzema Queen." "I use Noxzema as a night cream to help keep my skin smooth and soft."

Charming Hazel Gradinger first used Noxzema for externally-caused blemishes. She adds, "It proved so effective that it's now my regular beauty cream."

American Airlines Stewardess Elizabeth Toomey has a delicate, sensitive skin. "So I never use heavy make-up" says Betty. "Just Noxzema and powder."

Lovely Rita Tennant says she's found nothing superior to Noxzema. "It's my regular night cream—helps heal those little externally-caused skin irritations we all get occasionally."

Are you having any trouble with your skin?

Read how these 4 women gained softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin

● Does your skin ever get dry and flaky? Do those ugly little blemishes from external causes sometimes embarrass you, spoil your fun?

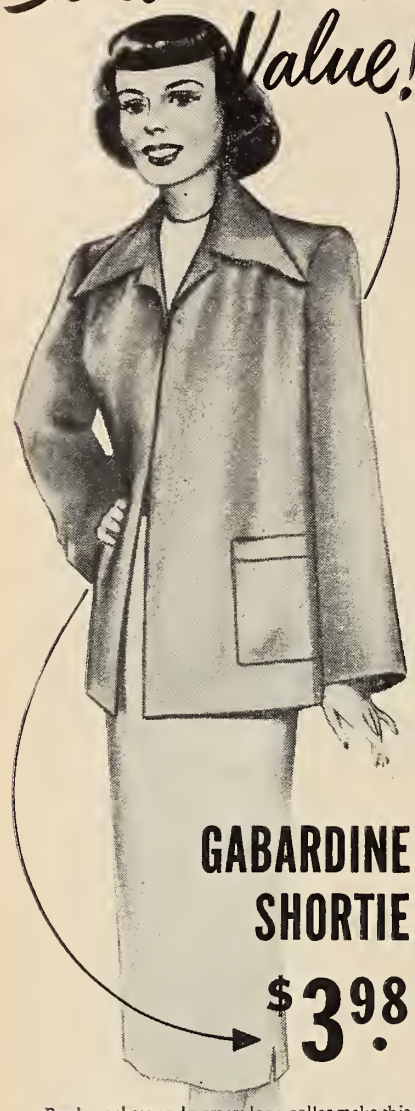
Cheer up! You CAN do something about it. These four women pictured above have found a real aid for their beauty problems—a simple home beauty routine developed by a doctor.

This new beauty routine has been clinically tested. 181 women took part in this test supervised by 3 skin specialists. Each woman had some little thing wrong with her skin. Each woman faithfully used Noxzema's New 4-Step Beauty Routine.

Astonishing Results

At 7-day intervals, their skin was examined through a magnifying lens. Here are the astonishing results: Of all these women, 4 out of 5 showed softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin in two weeks. Yes, 4 out of 5 showed amazing improvement.

New 4-Step Routine



Try this simple 4-step aid to a lovelier-looking complexion:

1. Morning—bathe face with warm water, apply Noxzema with a wet cloth and "cream-wash" your face.
2. Apply Noxzema as a powder base.
3. Evening—repeat morning "cream-wash" cleansing.
4. Massage Noxzema lightly into your face. Pat on extra Noxzema over any blemishes you may have.

So if you want an aid to a lovelier-looking skin, if you suffer from rough, dry skin, externally-caused blemishes, chapping or other similar skin troubles—start using Noxzema's New Beauty Routine now.

Try Noxzema! See if you aren't thrilled at the way it can help your skin . . . as it has helped so many thousands of other women. See for yourself why over 25,000,000 jars are sold every year! Available at all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax. Get your jar of Noxzema today.

Sensational Value!

GABARDINE SHORTIE

$3.98

Patch pockets and a smart long collar make this a shortie you will wear with everything from slacks to evening clothes. Wear it with skirt to match or with contrasting color skirt. At this very low price you should buy more than one and mix your colors for different outfits. Of fine crease-resistant Cohama rayon gabardine it's truly a sensational value.
Sizes 12 to 42...3.98 • Sizes 44 to 48...4.98

GABARDINE SKIRT

Crease-resistant Cohama rayon gabardine pencil slim skirt with side slits, at the amazing low price of only 2.98. 2.98
Sizes 12 to 42...2.98 • Sizes 44 to 48...3.98

GABARDINE SLACKS

Expertly tailored for fit and comfort. Wear them with your jacket or without. 2.98
Sizes 12-42...2.98 • Sizes 44-48...3.98

• • • SEND NO MONEY—WE MAKE IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT • • •
BONNIE GAYE, Inc. Dept. 17AG
1051 S. La Brea Ave., Las Angeles 35, Calif.

Rush the following. I'll pay postman the total amount due plus C.O.D. postage with the understanding I may return in 10 days for full refund if not satisfied. Colors: Winter White, Black, Kelly, Aqua, Grey, Beige.

How Many	Size	1st Color Choice	2nd Color Choice
			Shortie
			Skirt
			Slacks

Send money with order—we pay postage charges

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
Zone____ State_____

minute. But he has to go on the road a certain part of each year. I have to accept it, so I accept it. Gosh, I'm lucky! Look at the girls whose husbands were gone for years and years during the war. What have I got to complain about? Nothing—with a capital N!

I talk to him every night he's away. He calls me the minute he finishes work. With the difference in time, it's generally 9 or 9:30. But even if it's 2 in the morning, the phone's by my bed, and I can always go right back to sleep again. I tell him what the kids have been doing, and we find enough to talk about for half an hour.

The first time he went off on the road, since we were talking on the phone every night, I didn't bother to write. Then one night, towards the end of our conversation, he said, "Betty—I wish you'd write me a letter."

"But, honey—I've told you everything. There's nothing left to write."

"All the other fellows get letters from their wives. When I go to the desk, there's nothing for me."

"But the other fellows don't talk to their wives every day."

"Well, you could at least get a big piece of paper and write 'I love you' on it, and send it. Just so there's something for me at the desk."

Naturally I couldn't have poor Harry standing there, and the clerk shaking his head. So ever since, when he's away, I've been writing him about three times a week. And three times a week he calls early, so he can talk to Vicki.

When Harry's home, we live just as quietly. If he's working, he'll be on his feet for four solid hours. Right now I'm making Wabash Avenue, and my day runs from 6 to 6. With a schedule like that, you just want to relax at night. But even when we're free, we don't do much running around. I've never had a lot of girl friends, and Harry's never had a lot of buddies. In his business you work with people, and then you don't see them again for months. We have our own group of friends, and we're comfortable with them, and don't feel the need for making new ones. Harry's a shy person. So am I. I have a terrible complex about going to parties and walking into a room and meeting strangers. We'd rather spend our spare time with each other and the kids.

never a bored moment . . .

Of course, Santa Anita's a ritual. When the track's open, we get up in the morning, get dressed, and we're off to the races. At night we just sit around. Maybe Harry'll watch a ball game on television, and I'll read a book. Sometimes friends'll drop in for cards. But it's never this thing of, "Let's run here, let's go there, let's call the gang up and ask them over." When that happens to people, I think it's often out of sheer boredom. I've never been bored for a minute since my marriage. There's no restlessness. We love our life. There's nothing else we want to do. Maybe some day we'd like to travel. But we don't feel we just can't wait to scramble on a boat and go see Europe. We can wait very nicely till the kids are old enough to enjoy it with us.

I'm not saying we never go out nights. But only if there's a ball game we really want to see, or a band we really want to hear. And if the music's good, we'll dance. I've been asked how it feels, as a professional dancer, to get up on a public floor, with people watching. The answer is, I don't look around to see if they're watching or not. If they like the way we look, fine. If they don't, fine. I enjoy watching good dancers myself, but not to the point of fascination. That's why I think nobody's that way over me out there on the floor. If they were, it would embarrass me.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

When Marsha Hunt was making a personal appearance here in Canada I went to see her. After the performance I went to the stage door and waited for her. In a few minutes, Marsha came out and as she started to sign my autograph book, a middle-aged couple came around a corner of the building. "Are you that fancy movie star who's supposed to be in town?" the woman asked. Before Marsha could answer, the man spoke up, "Of course she's not, Ma. Look how pretty she is. You know how awful those movie stars look off the screen." "Oh, yes, of course, Pa," said the woman turning away, "Sorry I bothered you, Miss." And as they both scuttled away Marsha and I dissolved into helpless laughter.

Beverly Matlin
Winnipeg, Man.
Canada

Apart from each other and the kids, our big interest is the ranch. At first it was just a pleasure thing—a place to ride and cavort through the hills. Then Harry thought, why not get some brood mares and start raising? So now it's developed into a breeding farm, which my father manages. We go out there weekends, and every other chance we get.

It was quite a thrill when Sociable, our two-year-old, won at the Golden Gate his third time out. You know, if you own a mare, and the mare has a baby on your ranch, you get breeder's stakes in addition to your purse. We've had five baby horses this season. Of course, they won't get to the races for two years—but we love the whole idea, and not just for thrills. I always feel that, when I'm through in pictures, the ranch'll be right up my alley. I'm not the type that likes to lunch at Romanoff's and spend the afternoon playing bridge. To me, that's kind of a waste. I'd rather sink my teeth into something that shows results. And believe me, you can find yourself plenty of bother when you've got a lot of stock to take care of. Besides, I'm just plain crazy about horses, and so is Harry.

And we're going to live where our horses are. About six months ago we sold our house, which was too small after Jessica came, and rented this one, expecting to build on the ranch right away. But we found we needed more property first—flat ground where the mares and their babies can run, and where we can set up a half-mile training track. Once that deal goes through, we'll build us a rambling stone-and-frame house in a ranchy sort of style. Harry wants one huge room with a lot of stone inside and a big stone fireplace—the kind of room that'll hold a pool table and a shuffleboard and a television set. Anything Harry wants, I want. If I didn't, I'd say so. If I said, "Look, honey, I don't think that pool table looks so well in there," we could get together on it. But what's the way a room looks, compared to its comfort?

By January the place ought to be in shape, so we can move the whole shebang over there. That'll be the James home for good. That's where we hope to spend our golden anniversary. THE END

(Betty Grable is currently in The Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend.)

HOW PHONY CAN YOU GET!

(Continued from page 34)

Dick grinned. "I'm not!" he called back. "A heck of a guy you are," Bill Smith muttered to him. "What do you want to do—disillusion people?"

The boys in the publicity department still laugh over their first experience with the "cold, ruthless, conceited killer." During his first interview, Dick behaved like a mobster who'd been warned that he'd be bumped off if he talked to the D. A. When the ordeal was over, his hands trembled violently as he lit a cigarette. Perspiration glistened across his forehead.

"I don't think I can ever go through that again," he said. "Whew!"

"Scared, huh?"

"You can say that again," said Dick. "Thank heaven it's over."

"Over?" The publicists laughed. "Why, this is only the beginning. You're in Hollywood now."

But Dick Widmark has still not taken, to put it mildly, to being interviewed. Writers who've tried to manage vivid explorations into his private life have come away saying they'd rather tangle with such notoriously mum characters as Gary Cooper or John Wayne. And so, in trying to "get to him," writers have given up the effort of attempting to find something about his real life appropriate to the "killer" light in which the publicists first presented him. Instead, the writers have gone to the other extreme: They've portrayed Dick as a shy, mousey type who's content to sit back, take what comes along

CALLED ON ACCOUNT OF MUD

When Dick Widmark was in high school, he played drums for a time in a pick-up band at small local dances. He and his pals would take turns borrowing family cars for transportation. One night, Dick wheedled his dad's brand new sedan for a dance 20 miles away. It had been raining hard, which turned the road into a sea of mud in places—particularly in that place where an enterprising farmer had dug a special mudhole from which he pulled bogged victims out at $15 a head.

When Dick and his orchestra colleagues hit the hole, the new car promptly sank in up to its fenders. When the farmer "just happened by" with his team of horses, they couldn't raise the $15 among them, so they simply hooked a ride and left the car stranded.

By unusual coincidence, Carl Widmark chose that time to say to a friend of his, "Dick borrowed the car tonight to play a dance date. Why don't you get your car out, and we'll take our wives over and watch awhile."

The "old folks" too came to the mud hole.

"Whaddya know!" the elder Widmark declared. "There's a car just like mine. Brand, spankin' new and sunk up to its ears. Hate to be the guy who owns that." They got out to look. Widmark found out that he owned it.

"I'll never forget that night," Dick remembers. "We were playing our idea of a hot version of 'Penthouse Serenade' when I looked up and saw Dad crossing the floor. I never did finish the number. Father and son had a nice long talk—with no emphasis on the nice . . . From there on in, I haven't ever had to figure long when deciding whether my career or personal obligations came first."

Send Only $1

GRUEN
Veri-thin
WATCHES

T104 42.50
Gruen Veri-thin "Estelle." 15 Jewels. Yellow Gold filled case. Cord band. Send $1, pay 3.25 after examination, 3.85 a month.

O127 42.50
Gruen Veri-thin "Shipmate." 15 Jewels. Yellow Gold filled case. Leather strap. Send $1, pay 3.25 after examination, 3.85 a month.

T174 59.50
Gruen Veri-thin "Rosina." 17 Jewels. Yellow Gold filled case. Circlette bracelet. Send $1, pay 4.95 after examination, 5.35 a month.

O159 59.50
Gruen Veri-thin "Berkeley." 17 Jewels. Yellow Gold filled case. Expansion bracelet. Send $1, pay 4.95 after examination, 5.35 a month.

PRICES INCLUDE FEDERAL TAX

WE WILL SEND YOU ANY ITEM YOU CHOOSE FOR APPROVAL UNDER OUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Simply indicate your selection on the coupon below and forward it with $1 and a brief note giving your age, occupation, and a few other facts about yourself. We will open an account for you and send your selection to you subject to your examination. If completely satisfied, pay the Expressman the required Down Payment and the balance in easy monthly payments. Otherwise, return your selection and your $1 will be refunded.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG

A203/C98 $55
5 Diamond Engagement Ring, matching 5 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or white Gold. Send $1, pay 4.50 after examination, 4.95 a month.

A407/C204 $100
5 Diamond Engagement Ring, matching 5 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or 18K white Gold. Send $1, pay $9 after examination, $9 a month.

D403 $75
Man's Ring with 3 brilliant Diamonds. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay 6.50 after examination, 7.50 a month.

F172 17.50
1 carat genuine Zircon, 4 gleaming side Zircons. 14K yellow or white Gold. Send $1, pay $1 after examination, $2 a month.

SEND $1 WITH COUPON — PAY BALANCE OF DOWN PAYMENT AFTER EXAMINATION

L. W. Sweet, 25 West 14th St. (Dept. D6) New York 11, N. Y.
Enclosed find $1 deposit. Send me No._____
Price $_____. After examination, I agree to pay $_____ and required balance monthly thereafter until full price is paid, otherwise I'll return selection and you will refund my dollar.
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ STATE_____

New York's Largest Mail Order Jewelers Established 1878

L. W. Sweet

MAIL ORDER DIVISION FINLAY STRAUS, INC.
25 W. 14th St., NEW YORK 11, N. Y. Dept. D6

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

Have you met an angel with a slippery halo lately? Or come face to face with the fact that there is such a thing in love's pattern as hate at first sight? I have, but not through crashing keyholes. I heard "My True Story" the other day and had my eyes opened. For here in the midst of radio's contrived fiction and blushing examples of emotion-mad script writers is an intimate and revealing program based on the confessions of real people. (The program I happened to catch dealt with an unscrupulous woman in angel's disguise who thoroughly wrecked another woman's life because of a thwarted love). Another thing that impressed me was that "My True Story" is no cliff hanger that leaves you suspended in mid-marriage but a complete and often brutally frank dramatization of a life which might be yours or mine but for a quirk of fate. A whole galaxy of leading actors and actresses make these unreserved confessions of jealousy, remorse and warped lives as real as they really are, and it's a credit to Libby, McNeil and Libby and to Sterling Drug that they present such powerful and adult entertainment every day at 10:00 AM EDT over the ABC network.

★ ★ ★

There is a man I know who could sell a furnace to a Fiji Islander. His anecdotes, sage and salty, would fascinate even the most retiring spinster and you can make a date with him any day at 11:45 AM EDT over the American Broadcasting Company network. His name is Galen Drake and he can talk about anything . . . people or penguins, truths or trivia . . . all in a friendly, low-falutin' style that has endeared him to me for years. Stories are his forte, sometimes tall . . . sometimes short . . . but always entertaining. I often think that if Scheherazade were alive, she'd have to look to her laurels for Pillsbury's Galen Drake has entertained me for more than 1001 days.

★ ★ ★

Other Tips on ABC Daytime Dialing

"Bride and Groom" 2:30 PM edt
A wedding a day keeps the blues away.

"Breakfast Club" 9:00 AM edt
Morning merrymaking with Don McNeill.

Kay Kyser 4:00 PM edt
Dean of the Original College of Fun and Knowledge.

Joan Lansing

and, for real contentment, repair the family lawn mower.

And this is just as phony as the first notion.

A glimpse of the real Widmark came while a scene for Kiss of Death was being shot in New York's St. Nicholas Arena. His performance as the sadistic Tommy Udo had been so realistic that his fellow workers were beginning to feel slightly jittery in his presence. Even Director Hathaway must have felt this way, for at one point, when Hathaway thought Dick was doing some action too fast, he shouted:

NICE WHISKERS

Not long ago, Dick Widmark went East for a personal appearance tour. Coming into New York on the Century, he overslept, and jumped out of his berth only when Grand Central Station was announced. In his haste to get a fast shave, he dropped and broke his electric razor in his compartment.

As he hit the Pullman corridor, feeling tough and looking like a gangster on the lam, his path was blocked by a studio publicity man.

"Hold it, Dick!" he said. "Wait until the people get off. You'll be mobbed."

"Look," said Dick. "I've got to get somewhere and get shaved."

"What for?" the man cried indignantly. "This way, you look right in character. This way, you look just like Richard Widmark!"

"No, no, no! Good Lord, man, slow down that yackety-yak—you're driving me crazy!"

A hush fell over the arena, its lower seats jammed with 400 extras. Killer Udo would have giggled and proceeded to destroy Hathaway on the spot. Mouse Widmark would have curled up and begged everybody's pardon. But Richard Widmark—well, he said calmly; "Mr. Hathaway, you don't have to yell at me. If you've something to say about my performance, take me to one side and discuss it with me. But please don't shove me around. I don't need a job in pictures that bad."

Hathaway, the hard taskmaker but also an understanding veteran of many fine pictures, smiled. Then he apologized.

Dick Widmark, neither a conceited killer nor a mouse, has been that way since he was a little shaver. "When I was a kid," he recalls, "my family moved frequently from town to town because of Dad's business. Every time we hit a new place, my brother and I were a couple of pint-sized strangers. We practically had to fight our way in. You know how it is with kids, and how clannish they are."

So wherever the Widmark brothers went, it was "two against the mob." Finally Dick's father, Carl Widmark, grew weary of the battles his sons were constantly getting into. He bought a pit bulldog named Scrappy. Every morning the bulldog walked the kids to school. Every afternoon he was waiting at the schoolhouse to bring them home. Scrappy, with his fanatic loyalty, had them frequently in hot water with his eagerness to take the seat out of the pants of any kids who tried to muscle the young Widmarks around.

"It's a wonder," says Dick, "that somebody didn't slip Scrappy a poisoned dog biscuit. But he lived to a ripe old age. I've still got his collar around somewhere. I saved it because Scrappy never cared who was right or wrong. He was for us."

Let's take a closer look at the "conceited" part of the killer tag. Conceited? Of course Dick Widmark isn't—any more than he's got an inferiority complex. His head is today the same size it was when he landed in Hollywood. For those who may think that as time has gone by, he's been edging toward association with the top upper crust of Hollywood, it may be pointed out that Dick has more excuses for dodging social events than a woman has for buying a new hat. And as for money, Dick is not impressed. Even before he came to Hollywood, he was earning fat chunks of the stuff. Nowadays, what with the increasing bite taxes have taken out of his increasing paycheck, he figures he's doing only about as well as the day Hollywood beckoned.

People are forever being cynical about the effects of fame on their old acquaintances. Sometimes, though, it's not the actor but the old acquaintance who comes up with a stuffy attitude when they meet again—as Dick found out when he recently made a trip back to his old stamping grounds.

"I ran into a guy I used to know," Dick tells you, "who now is doing very well as the proprietor of a store. We'd never been very pally, but here I was, all ready to be nice and friendly. He wasn't.

"'Well, Dick,' he said, wearing his animosity in his voice. 'I guess you're too much of a big, tough, ruthless movie character to think much of Main Street now.'

"I told him it looked just as good to me as it ever did. Only maybe I didn't smile when I answered his remark—as he hadn't when he made it. So I'm positive he's been going around saying, 'Ba-ruther, did that Widmark get a swelled head in Hollywood. He says this town is terrible!"

It's probably going to take some time for people to get focused on the real Widmark. Right now, they've got firmly in their sights one or the other of the two phonies.

BE NONCHALANT

They were shooting a scene for Dick Widmark's Kiss of Death in the Tombs, that big, gloomy prison in New York. The cameras were trained for action when a huge, real-life murderer was led by. Without warning, the man wheeled around, a razor in his hand, slashing wildly.

Guards leaped to one side, reaching for their automatics. The movie crew ducked wildly. For a moment, pandemonium broke loose. One guard was seriously wounded, another slashed across the face, before the prisoner was finally subdued.

As the movie-makers came out from cover, an assistant director called, "Widmark—are you all right?"

"Certainly!" said Dick—who, while the melee raged, had remained calmly leaning against a nearby corner. "I guess I was the safest guy in the place."

Obviously he had been. Throughout the little riot, Dick had been locked behind bars in a cell.

The other day, Dick received a letter from an earnest lady who wrote: "I think it's a shame the way they make you play those rough, brutal characters when everybody knows that really you're just a sweet, shy, retiring, polite man."

On the other hand, the same mail brought him a letter from an inmate of a famous prison. "I been thinking," the inmate wrote, "that after being a dirty crook all my life and thinking I was a right guy, I am really as big a stinker as you are. Maybe I'd better go straight when I get out of here."

THE END

(Read the screen story of Richard Widmark's new film, Slattery's Hurricane, in the September SCREEN STORIES.)

PRIDE OF THE IRISH

(Continued from page 39)

But I have to go to work some mornings at five-thirty, and I do need my sleep. Wouldn't they be just as pretty if you had them stuffed?" Or: "Now that we're neighbors, Mr. Crosby, I wonder if you'd mind putting muzzles on those blankety-blank birds' beaks? After 11 o'clock, that is?"

But when she met Everett that morning the conversation, somehow, was a bit less eloquent. "Hello," said Mr. Crosby, waving cheerfully, as he headed his car into the road. "Hello," said Maureen. "Ah . . . hello." And she watched him disappear in the direction of Stone Canyon.

Well, nothing ever was said to Bing's brother about his peacocks. Now, two years later, they don't bother Maureen a bit. She just sleeps peacefully on through their squawks and screams.

Today all is fine with the family that lives in the house on the hill. Bronwyn's croup is a thing of the past, and she's shooting up faster than Will's prize camellia bushes. She's four-and-a-half now, and is as big as the average child of eight. But since her mother was five-feet-seven before she was 12, the Price family doesn't think Bronwyn's height is worthy of comment. Visitors do comment on her good looks, her bronzy hair and her violet-blue eyes. A bright kid, she can name every state in the Union and the products and industries of each one. Maureen taught her with the aid of a cut-out map, Bronwyn learning her geography by fitting the pieces together. She goes to pre-primary school at Marymount, and she utterly refuses to wear slacks, jeans or other male attire. "I'm a girl and I want to dress like one," she says firmly.

international house . . .

Will is a Southerner. Maureen (surprise!) is Irish. So it's to be expected that touches of Mississippi and Eire mingle in their home. They both like the slower tempo of living for which their birthplaces are renowned, and they've brought their heritages right into their house and garden in little, unexpected ways.

For instance, their wrought-iron stairway and balcony and their formal patio are strongly flavored with the South. Ireland is represented in the dining-room by an exquisite Georgian table which came from Slane Castle—Maureen got it at an auction on her recent trip to Eire. . . . Two additional pieces are still missing—small tables that will fit into the big one, or can be used as buffets. Every time she goes back to the old country, Maureen is determined to stalk through antique shops until she finds those missing parts. Then she'll start looking for matching chairs. . . . Over the dining-room fireplace is a huge gilt American eagle, silent symbol of the blending of their ways of life.

Maureen's spacious living room has twin coral-red couches drawn up on either side of the massive fireplace. A startling, effective painting hangs over the mantel, depicting a Negro legend. The black-and-gold of the picture becomes the focal point of interest in the room. Low tables hold vases of flowers grown by Will. Red camellias glow in sunny nooks. Large windows open onto the terrace, and beyond is the secluded patio with its high white wall.

Their terrace is their favorite spot in the whole scheme of house and garden. Here are low coffee-tables and polished bamboo furniture loaded with bright cushions. The place is just made for those special informal gatherings that occur most

How Smooth can you be?

Casual by Endicott Johnson Corp.
Dress Shoe by
Allen Shoe Co., Inc.
Retail about $3.95

wear shoes of

NORZON* fabric

and see!

For a smooth look at pin-money prices, nothing holds a candle to shoes of NORZON fabric! Styled for round-the-clock wear, shoes of NORZON fabric have a lush suede look, rich colors. Their durable, scuff-proof, rub-proof surface cleans with a whisk of a damp cloth.

Look for this tag — it identifies shoes of genuine NORZON fabric.

*NORZON is the registered trademark of Behr-Manning Corporation for its electro-coated pile fabrics. Distributed solely by Phillips-Premier Corporation, Boston, Mass.

BEHR-MANNING, TROY, N. Y.

Sunday evenings when friends come over for supper.

Early in the evening on such occasions, Will puts on his chef's apron and gets to work turning out a super-special delicacy. Sometimes it will be baked fish with blue cheese, accompanied by baked bananas. Sometimes it will be barbecued chicken, or French, Italian, or "Gumbo" food. Maureen will tell you that her Will is the best cook on both sides of the family—and that she's proud and happy to wash up the dishes and pots and pans which he stacks up after a cooking spree.

Guests who are particularly partial to neighbor Price's cooking are the John Hodiaks, the Bob Crosbys, the Stephen Ames, and Dr. Kalmus from next door. They all vote for Will's barbecued chicken as the most succulent they ever tasted. Served on a candle-lit table in a California garden, it has a way of recalling Far South memories to people who've never even been there!

just ask maureen . . .

Favorite after-dinner pastime of the Prices is playing charades, indications, 20 Questions or other acting games. They get into wonderful arguments about acting out slogans, the names of books, poems and movies. Will is considered tops in this activity, but he got good and stumped the other night when called upon to enact the single word "If"—the title of Rudyard Kipling's famous poem. Maureen doubled up with laughter as her husband grimaced and postured through a variety of acts until his time limit was up. Then she jumped to her feet and showed him how it could have been done by merely running through the alphabet in pantomine, and stopping at the right letters. Will bowed to her on that one. (But he had no trouble at all with Father Was a Fullback—the name of Maureen's new movie.)

When the nights are balmy, the Prices and their guests often use the patio for dancing. Candles and hurricane lamps cast shadows on the patterned bricks, and the olive trees sway their dark arms above them. The lady of the house looks like a Castilian princess in her gown of sea-green lace.

Maureen is a romantic at heart. She says she has no time for any sort of modernism. She wishes cars and airplanes had never been invented. She likes horses and sailing ships and long walks in the hills. Her bedroom, with its canopied four-poster, is done in soft shades of beige and rose. Her hand-crocheted spreads and pillow slips are cherished old-world symbols. Sentimental trophies fill Maureen's cabinets. The top of her wedding cake and a sprig from her wedding bouquet are side by side. Then there's a tiny carved elephant from a Woolworth store in Ireland. It was given to Maureen when she was 11 by her best girl friend.

Bronwyn is at an age when she copies everything that Maureen does. Sometimes her imitations have dire results. Using her mother's make-up, for instance. She knows she's not allowed to touch the things on Maureen's shelves, but she goes ahead anyway. Just the other day Maureen caught her lavishly decorating her mouth with a deep red lipstick.

"Bronwyn! Didn't I tell you that if you touched my make-up again, I'd give you a good spanking?" Maureen said sternly, laughing inside at the sight of the little clown-face.

"Yes. You told me." Bronwyn admitted. "But I thought it was worth it."

She got her spanking, for Maureen believes in discipline, but as she administered the smacks, her mind went back to her own childhood. Almost 20 years ago, Maureen swiped some Madeira cake from her mother's kitchen. She knew she'd be spanked for it, and she stole it anyway. She thought the whole thing out and decided the cake was worth a few bats with the back of a hairbrush. That's the way Bronwyn feels, too.

The enterprising nature of the Prices' little daughter is the talk of the neighborhood. When her woolly camel lost an eye, Bronwyn was all for hot-footing it next door for a consultation with Dr. Kalmus. "He's a doctor, isn't he?" demanded Bronwyn. "He can put back my camel's eye." Maureen explained that Dr. Kalmus' specialty was Technicolor film, not camels' eyes. In an emergency like this, Daddy would have to be the doctor.

Sunday is family day at the Will Price's. They get up early and take Bronwyn to church with them—they consider her too young for Sunday School. After church the Prices go picknicking or swimming in their pool. You can look over the pool and gardens from many rooms in the house, but perhaps the nicest view is from Will's study. Done in tones of yellow and brown, Will's den is his castle. Here he houses his fine collection of Southern literature, his movie scripts and gardening books, his Japanese flag from Iwo Jima—where he landed with the Marines—and his collection of rare etchings.

There's another den downstairs which Will has decorated himself from lengths of bottle-green plaid he got at an inexpensive shop. Fact is, everything about their home reflects the loving personal touches of Maureen and Will, from the curving white wall outside, which was Will's idea, to Maureen's fine antiques.

They have only one definite wish for their child's future. Says Maureen:

"We want her to grow up and marry a good man and raise a family. It's as simple as that. No career could ever make up for missing the kind of family life that we're lucky enough to have. And we're sure Bronwyn will settle for that, too. For we're a closely-knit clan, even though widely separated. Will's family's in the South, and my family's scattered over the earth. I have one sister in Texas, one in Montreal, and my father, mother, a brother and another sister in Ireland. One brother is in England. But Father and Mother keep our side of the family bound together. Mother shuttles from one home to another, spending a few weeks in each, and keeping us all posted on each other's doings. This year she's going to South Africa to catch up on back news with my father's sister.

"Mother and Father have taught me that family life is the best way of life there is. Bronwyn's going to find that out. We can promise her that."

THE END

HOW TIME FLIES!

Paulette Goddard is a new face (in Modern Times). She was discovered by Chaplin while playing minor parts in the Hal Roach studio. Because he believes the public prefers to make its own discoveries, Charlie has refused to have his protégée interviewed or given any publicity.—Modern Screen, May, 1936.

DON'T TELL MY GIRL

(Continued from page 51)

to throw out right after we were married!

Four wardrobe trunks filled with such priceless mementos as the first working script of her big Broadway success, At Home Abroad, the scripts and still photographs from all her movies, scrap books which tell of her success as an actress and dancer, wonderful congratulatory letters, and many other such irreplaceable evidences of her career.

She just looked them over one day and said calmly to herself, "I don't think we need these. I'm getting rid of them." With her usual efficiency, she immediately called a trucker to take them along with some other discards to the Assistance League. And off they started.

She doesn't know that when I heard about it in the nick of time, I chased the truck for blocks and arranged for the driver to stop off at Bekins Storage on his way to the Assistance League.

The day our son, Peter, starts asking about her career, he can read for himself what people thought of his mother as an entertainer. I think she's going to be darned glad, too.

I'm not too sure how she'll react to another surprise I have for her. This one is Peter's surprise, too.

to the manner born . . .

She's been going around bragging how Peter is a natural-born horseman ever since, not long ago, she took him to a pony track for the first time. She was amazed when he stepped right up and asked for the fastest pony.

"And do you know," Ellie tells everyone, "he sat the pony just as if he'd been born to the saddle. He galloped that pony around the track as though he'd ridden all his life. He certainly has inherited Glenn's riding ability."

I haven't disillusioned her, but actually it was training, not heredity, in this case. Peter has been riding ever since he first started walking. I've taken him countless times with me to the Columbia Studios Ranch where I keep my two horses. I wouldn't dare, of course, put Peter on a powerful stallion I have named Count. But one of my friends stables a small pony at the ranch. He offered to lend it to Peter—and Peter began to ride. Well, I didn't want to worry Ellie, so I told her nothing about it. And Peter made a game of building a surprise for her. In the excitement of having his mother take him to the pony track at last, I guess he just forgot to tell her what he and I had been doing.

Or maybe he's inherited my trait of not talking too much. In any event, Ellie keeps on bragging about his natural ability.

Then, one of these days, Ellie's going to be surprised to learn where my personal collection of books has come from. She reads a lot, too. But she leans more to the type recommended by the Book-of-the-Month Club. She gets excited about a book like William Vogt's "Road to Survival," which deals with the dangers of over-population. She feels I, too, should read this earnest type of book. And often I do. But my idea of enjoyable reading is a good mystery or a wild rip-roaring Western. I have over 200 such books on our shelves. Ellie is under the impression they've come from studios, producers, or agents who've thought there might be roles in them for me.

Well, I have acquired a dozen or so that way. But all the rest I've bought myself.

Ellie's never been one to eat much. In my opinion, she doesn't eat enough. Until Peter began eating instead of drinking, I'd tried in vain to talk her into eating more. My first success came when I pointed out that she couldn't expect Peter to eat well if she didn't at least put a reasonable amount of food on her own plate. With the "clean plate" policy for children, she has to finish all she has, too.

I'm pretty good at palming cards and other sleight of hand tricks. With that talent, it's really quite simple for me to slide extra pats of butter onto a piece of hot toast for her without being suspected. My record so far is nine pats of butter on one slice. That time Ellie said, "This is unusually good toast, isn't it? It must be a different brand of bread."

So far, I haven't been caught at it.

Nor does she realize that Peter's accident with a bottle of ink about three years ago gave me an inspiration. He spilled the ink all over the floor of her room. The rug was really a mess. I was just leaving for a trip East when that happened. On the train I suddenly remembered something. I wired her to check our insurance agent. Sure enough, we had protection for such accidents.

But when the company tried to remedy the damage, we discovered nothing would take the stains out. So, of course, we had to get a new rug. That led to the whole room having to be redecorated—a course of events which I thoroughly enjoyed.

If I had my way about it, our entire house would be redecorated every year. But Ellie's much more practical. She'll meet my decorating ideas with remarks like, "But Glenn, we really ought to put a new roof on the house. And we ought to get a new sink or do something about the plumbing. Agnes is getting tired of having to empty a pan of water dripped from the sink several times a day."

I remembered how Ellie hadn't made a single protest when we redecorated her room after Peter's accident. And by the strangest coincidence, I spilled a bottle of ink on her rug just as she was leaving for London for her appearance at the Palladium early this year. I did a good job of it. I even managed somehow to splash some of the ink on the ceiling! Then I discovered the fireplace had smoked up the walls of our den. After that, I spilled something on the bathroom walls of our wing.

It's quite amazing how much redecorating I had to do while she was away.

on the record . . .

Ellie thinks she's heard recordings of all the radio shows on which I've appeared. I never tell her ahead of time about any such shows I'm going to do. Sometimes they come on my regular Wednesday night out for poker. Sometimes I find some excuse such as having to attend a board meeting at the Screen Actors' Guild. I'm pretty good at figuring up logical excuses on such occasions. Then off I go and do the show and having a recording made of it. If I like my performance, I take the recording home and play it for her.

But there are quite a few that never went home with me.

Ellie has been amazed at the running account I can give her of her opening at the Palladium in London this spring. I'll explain to her how I do it one of these days. Here's how:

One night I had to cable her about something. I was astonished to discover the cable bill was over $25.00. Out of curiosity I called the long-distance operator of the telephone company. I discovered I could have said all I said in the cable and more, too, for $12 if I'd telephoned.

ONLY $6.95

Sizes:
9-11-13
15-12-14
16-18-20
Sizes:
38-40-42
44-46-48
$1 more

We again bring you our Hollywood original, fashioned to enhance all your charms. The plunging neckline is bold, yet discreet—with swirling sash droped divinely about your hipline. It's a bewitching dress, created with fine rayon crepe. Styled to attract admiring glances the year round. This miracle low price is possible because we have our manufacturer's exclusive output. No middleman's profit. This savings is passed on to you. Same high quality fabric and needlework. Always sold for much, much more.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Each dress guaranteed satisfaction

Wear this newest dress for 10 DAYS ON APPROVAL! If you're not thrilled and delighted, return for full refund. No questions asked. Mail coupon now. This is one time you should order by mail.

—SEND NO MONEY—WE SHIP IMMEDIATELY—

HOLLYWOOD MODELS, Inc., Dept. 407
7052 Laurel Canyon Blvd., No. Hollywood, California

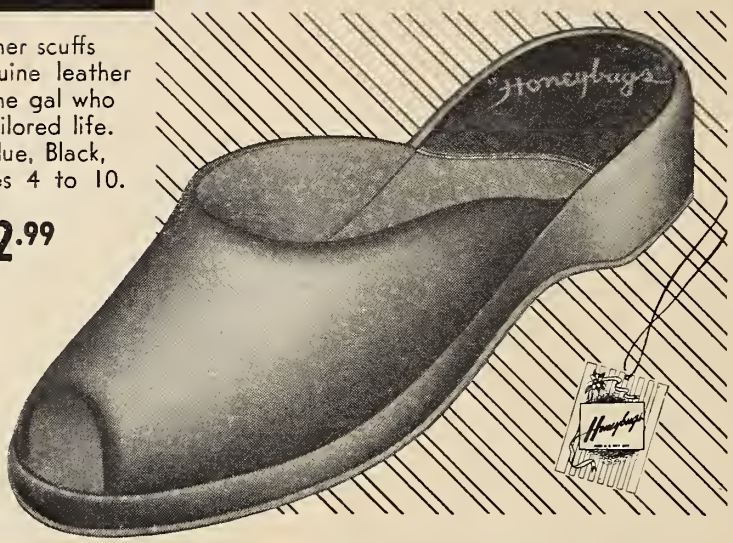
Rush "SIREN CREPE." I'll pay mailman amount due plus C.O.D. postage. I may return dress in 10 days for full refund if not satisfied. Colors: Black, Navy, Brown, Turquoise Blue, Beige, Gray.

How Many?	What Size?	1st Color Choice	2nd Color Choice

SEND MONEY WITH ORDER—WE PAY ALL POSTAGE

Name_____
Please Print Plainly
Address_____ Apt. No.____
City_____ Zone____ State____

BUY WITH CONFIDENCE



they're so nice to come home to

Honeybugs

Supple leather scuffs with genuine leather soles. For the gal who lives a tailored life. Red, Blue, Black, Green. Sizes 4 to 10.

$2.99

At your favorite store, or write to Honeybugs Inc.— 47 W. 34th St., New York 1, N. Y.

It's Quick... It's Easy It's fun to Use...

Nestle SPRAZE

Keeps waves and curls in place all day

No more straggly ends or unruly wisps when you use NESTLE SPRAZE. This delicate "mist" keeps every wave and curl under control all day long. It's non-sticky, fast-drying, absolutely harmless. Comes in a wonderfully handy "squeeze-spray" bottle. At all beauty counters. 98¢ Plus tax.

. . .

Made by NESTLE—originators of permanent waving and makers of the famous Nestle Colorinse—Meriden, Conn.

ROMANTIC • GAY COLORFUL

"Mardi-Gras" JACKET

IMPORTED FROM OLD MEXICO

Be the Glamour Girl of your set. Wear the genuine imported Mardi-Gras Jacket, designed with authentic all-over Mexican patterns of colorful hand-embroidered yarn. The Mardi-Gras Jacket is made of 100% wool, all fast colors, has two large pockets, hand stitched lapels and borders. The perfect auxiliary wrap for every occasion. Ideal for beach or sportswear. Be the first to wear a Mardi-Gras Jacket and set the pace in your crowd.

in Malibu Blue, Laguna Green, Mexicali Red and Caliente White, Sizes 32-40

Only $9.95 by mail

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED
SEND NO MONEY... WE SHIP C.O.D.
(or send cash or Money-Order, save postage & C.O.D.)

DON'T DELAY... MAIL IN COUPON TODAY

MEXI-CAL Importers, Box 29 Hollywood, Calif.
Gentlemen: Please send me_____ "Mardi-Gras" Jackets at $9.95 ea., in sizes_____
Color Choice: Blue ☐ Green ☐ Red ☐ White ☐
☐ C.O.D. (plus postage) ☐ Cash ☐ Money Order
Name_____
Address_____
City_____ Zone_____ State_____

So then I really splurged. No more so than if I'd been there and had taken her out for a big first-night celebration. But for $80, I was able to put a telephone call through to the stage phone at the Palladium and keep the line open for 20 minutes so I could listen to the opening of her show. What a surprise it'll be to her when she learns I'm not clairvoyant!

One time I set out to surprise Ellie and succeeded in amazing even myself.

Peter had refused to have anything to do with tomatoes. Ellie worried about that because she felt they were essential to his proper diet. I told her I'd take care of it.

I'd sold him on eating fish by bringing them home from the market on a string the way a good fisherman does. "Aren't you going to eat some of this fine fish Daddy caught?" I asked. It worked like a charm.

Of course, before long he was refusing to eat anything that Daddy hadn't personally snared. Why, I even had "killed a steer with an atomic bomb" for our steaks. So what seemed more logical than to provide tomatoes I'd raised myself. I went to the nursery and returned home with some of those tiny green tomato plants. (I guess right here is an appropriate point to say my new movie is Mr. Soft Touch.)

Sure enough, Peter was so pleased to see my tomatoes growing that he eagerly ate them as they ripened. But it wasn't long before Ellie was searching desperately for new recipes calling for tomatoes. We had everything from fried green tomatoes to dead ripe tomatoes, canned.

So, in fact, did everyone we knew. Every morning I arrived at the studio with so many tomatoes for everyone there I became known as the Tomato Man. We were all relieved when the vines died down and the ruddy fruit disappeared from our place.

But I'm afraid Ellie has a shock coming. Looking around the place, I have a suspicion we're going to have a bumper crop again this year. You see, the whole project got out of control last year. A lot of those tomatoes fell off the vines, went to seed, and turned into more plants than ever!

Well, not being a talking man, when I'd bought the original plants, I'd just answered the nurseryman's question about the size of the place we have by giving ground dimensions. I didn't tell him about the house, the garage, the greenhouse and the other items on the place.

So he did a little figuring on an envelope and sold me 500 plants! I set them out all the way from around the greenhouse to our window boxes. And they all flourished.

Yes, I've never been one to do too much talking. Ellie knows that. She says, "You're like a telegram while I'm like a detailed diary!"

But she doesn't have a gray hair yet.

THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Danny Kaye was making a personal appearance tour through our state and was half-way through a song at our local theater, when a little girl began wailing. He stopped singing and bent over to ask her what was wrong. "I've lost my mitten," the child howled. Danny then ordered the spotlight shone near her seat and asked the entire audience to look for the mitten. It was soon found and the child expressed her thanks by giving him a great big kiss.

Gail Wright
Grosse Point, Mich.

WIFE IN FAME ONLY

(Continued from page 65)

that stuff. Lots of curlicues, of course."

I acted shocked. "You're thinking of the old-fashioned marriage certificate that hangs on the wall. Announcements should be engraved—or at least in plain type."

"What do you know!" exclaimed Guy. "Even when I don't do something, I do it wrong."

But we shouldn't have laughed. Already the finger was pointing at us and an endless string of "How comes?" was being formed in the minds of our friends to be put forth the moment they saw us.

The beginning of it came hardly two hours later when I walked into my home. My father, who was sitting at the piano hitting some moody notes, shot to his feet. He did his pointing by pointing to my shorts like a district attorney pouncing on an untruthful witness.

"You didn't get married in those!" he accused.

"Of course not!" I replied. "I. . ." And then I was floundering as I tried to explain—because it was a kind of trick question. Before I could make sense my mother came in wanting to know why I hadn't told her I was not going to get married. She was mixed up too and I remember thinking that this was a scene no director would accept as representative of real life.

alone at the telephone . . .

Eventually we did a retake, and I got it straightened out with my folks. But not with the rest of the world! Things began to happen to my mail and phone calls—or rather, things which always had happened before, suddenly stopped. The usual invitations to parties and premières fell off to nil. I didn't know it at first, but I was already getting a taste of what it means to lose your old identity and status when you marry. The première invitations and party bids were still coming, but not to me; Guy, my "husband," was getting them. As for calls from men—slash! Cut off, just like that! Whew!

"Do you understand what's happened?" I demanded of Guy, after I told him about it days later.

"Yeah," he said. "That's too bad." But he didn't look it!

Then came our denials. Guy denied. I denied. We both denied. But it just didn't take with anyone, from the waiter at Lucey's who always insisted on saying, "Yes, your table is ready, Mrs. Madison," to my best friend, Diana Lynn, who put her finger right to my nose and wheedled, "Now stop kidding. Are you or aren't you married? After all, people think I know and what'll I tell them?"

It's different with men—but a girl in a spot like this finds her position almost hopeless. As you deny you feel that you're also expected to justify. If you aren't married, then, why not? But I hadn't a thing in the world to be apologetic about! Everything between Guy and myself was going according to plan, and yet I could sense a note of something like guilt creeping into my voice. A fine thing!

In self-defense, so as definitely to scotch this acceptance that we were married, Guy and I both started dating others. But it didn't work out so well—particularly for me.

In the first place, it brought on something that I didn't want from those of my friends who took this to mean Guy and I had broken up. It brought sympathy! There's a certain tone which characterizes a woman's voice when she's about to com-

"ME, JOHN? ME— UNRESPONSIVE—COLD?"

Frozen by unsureness, wives may lose love . . . through one intimate physical neglect 99 out of 100 marriages start in tender love and understanding. Yet an appalling number end in sad disaster.

All too often a wife neglects regular, effective feminine hygiene as provided by vaginal douches with a scientifically correct preparation such as "Lysol." Then, because she is unsure of her feminine daintiness, this wife becomes reluctant . . . seems cold and unresponsive. Don't risk this happening to you . . . depend on reliable "Lysol" to protect appealing daintiness!

Germs destroyed swiftly

"Lysol" has amazing, proved power to kill germ-life on contact . . . truly cleanses the vaginal canal even in the presence of mucous matter. Thus "Lysol" acts in a way that makeshifts like soap, salt or soda never can.

Appealing daintiness is assured, because the very source of objectionable odors is eliminated.

Use whenever needed!

Yet gentle, non-caustic "Lysol" will not harm delicate tissue. Simple directions give correct douching solution. Many doctors advise their patients to douche regularly with "Lysol" brand disinfectant, just to insure daintiness alone, and to use it as often as they need it. No greasy aftereffect.

For feminine hygiene, three times more women use "Lysol" than any other liquid preparation. No other is more reliable. You, too, can rely on "Lysol" to help protect your married happiness . . . keep you desirable!

For complete Feminine Hygiene rely on . . .

"Lysol" REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. Brand Disinfectant

A Concentrated Germ-Killer

Product of Lehn & Fink

NEW!...FEMININE HYGIENE FACTS!

FREE! New booklet of information by leading gynecological authority. Mail coupon to Lehn & Fink, 192 Bloomfield Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

D.M.-499

'MOC' TALK

THAT HAS THE WHOLE CAMPUS TALKIN'

3.98

"WESTERNER"
Brown, Red elk leather.

"DOUBLE-TALK"
Black, Brown, Red, Green elk leather. Also in regular heel.

vicki of Boston

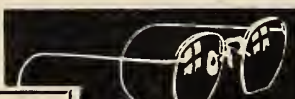
"CROSS-STRAP"
Brown, Red, Green elk leather.

Sizes 5½ to 9, Narrows; 4 to 9, Mediums.

Send for FREE 1950 Catalog

ORDER BY MAIL

VICKI OF BOSTON D-9-9
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS.



Please send me_____Prs. Moccasins @ 3.98

STYLE	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
"WESTERNER"
"DOUBLE-TALK"
"CROSS-STRAP"

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State_____
Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐
Send check or money order and we will pay postage. Customer agrees to pay postal charges on C. O. D.'s.

EYE GLASSES BY MAIL

BUY FROM THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED FIRM IN THE U.S. NOW OFFERING THIS KIND OF SERVICE

16 DAYS TRIAL

AS LOW AS $1.95

SEND NO MONEY

Fill out coupon for FREE catalogue, or penny post card will do.

Dept. DL23, Advance Spectacle Co.
537 S. Dearborn St., Chicago 5, Ill.
NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY..... STATE.....

ADVANCE SPECTACLE COMPANY
537 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

In Misery from

ATHLETE'S FOOT?

this "WET-DRY" ACTION brings relief! FIRST: Swab skin between toes with cattan saaked in Absorbine Jr. This "wetting" action removes dead skin, dissolves perspiration products. SECOND: Pour on Absorbine Jr. Its "drying" actian inhibits growth of all the infecting micro-organisms it can reach. Result... in 3 out of 4 cases of Athlete's Foot (tested clinically), Absarbine Jr. brought relief! $1.25 a battle at drugstores.

ABSORBINE JR.

NEW PLAN BRINGS YOU EXTRA MONEY

SELL FRIENDS UNUSUAL PLASTIC CHRISTMAS CARDS
Make up to 100% Profit without experience showing new line Christmas and Everyday Card assortments, Plastics, Gleam and Glo, Kiddies Cards, Wrappings, Stationery, Coasters, unusual and attractive gift items. Bonus, Special offers. Send today for FREE samples 30 different Personal Christmas Cards, 50 for $1, 25 for $1, and $1.95, Stationery, Coasters

FREE SAMPLES CHRISTMAS PERSONALS and STATIONERY

Thomas Terry Studios, 93 Union Ave., Westfield, Mass.

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M192, Hollywood 38, Cal.

miserate with you. All I had to do was hear the greeting, "Oh, Gail, you—" and I would break in sharply with, "Skip it!"

All my fan mail took up the marriage and three-quarters of the letters ended ". . . and I hope everything turns out all right."

So it isn't surprising that I began to wonder if I hadn't better start going around with a sort of wistful look in order not to disappoint people who expected it of me. And it did seem that when I joined a group, at either the studio or any affair, the laughs would die out and a hush would fall, with everyone acting like mourners at a wake—the corpse being me!

About this time I was ready to advertise my willingness to trade places with anyone—say, a soul tired of giving Tonis to man-eating lions, or someone about to cross Niagara Falls on a tight-rope. Just apply to me at Paramount Pictures, I was going to state. Ask for the sad-faced girl.

Then there was the new attitude of the other men I went out with.

"What's the matter?" I asked Jack Sasson one night when he took me dancing. "You're not yourself."

"Well . . ." he stalled. "I—I guess I've never taken out another man's bride before."

"I'm not a bride!" I retorted. "I told you that."

"I know," he said, looking miserable. "I heard you."

And he kept right on acting as if he felt that I was anyway!

As for Guy—well, while it is different with a man, he really wasn't having too happy a time either about it all. People weren't exactly rushing up to grab him by the shoulder and demand, "Say! Why don't you do right by our little Nell?" But he was getting questioning glances, some of them not too friendly, and every now and then the kind of press mentions that are sort of stabbed out on the typewriter, if you know what I mean.

All in all, our romance, through no fault of our own, was quite off key—something like Guy's whistling. He loves to whistle, but is so seldom on tune that when he hits a note right everybody applauds, including Guy.

with my bow and arrow . . .

The way things were going was one of the reasons why Guy and I went in for our little outdoor expeditions, instead of being seen around town. We were getting tired of everyone putting the same old $64 question to us. So Guy taught me how to shoot a bow and arrow, and stood bravely at my side—where my arrows were just as likely to go as anywhere else.

During these months, contrary to popular belief that Guy does all the instructing in our outdoor trips, I taught him how to fish. The main quality he lacked in the art was patience. One day, at Sherwood Lake, I made him sit in one spot until late in the afternoon even though he wasn't getting a nibble. Then he started catching fish and made me stay there until long after dinner!

And that's the way we've been conducting our lives to date—which brings us to the question asked by those who, perhaps, are now actually beginning to believe that we are not married. Are we going to be married? When?

My answers must match Guy's, because everything said so far we have both agreed upon.

"I go out with Gail Russell," Guy said in the March MODERN SCREEN. "The way I am, when I go with a girl I 'go steady.'"

There you are, Guy and I are going steady. One of the places we have gone to is a section of West Los Angeles. There's a piece of land there. We didn't buy it. We just looked at it and liked it. Another place we went to is a certain house in the hills that we both admire. We wondered how much it would cost to build such a house so we went and talked to the contractor. He told us. (Gulp!) You might be interested in the style of house we'd like, so I'll give you a rough idea. It's half-way between a Cape Cod house and a farmhouse. It's usually done in red and out here it's sometimes called Red Barn style. I don't know how it sounds to you, but it's really a honey! And, of course, Early American furniture would be just the thing for it.

Where else do we go while we are going "steady?" Well, last month we went up to Bakersfield and Guy introduced me to his mother and father. Incidentally, I got a new visualization of Guy there—a cute one.

I've always thought of him as the type who is very sure of himself, rarely embarrassed or ill-at-ease about anything. But that disappeared when his mother started talking about him—as fond mothers will.

"Robert [his real name] was always shy as a little boy," she said—and went on with more of the same, getting understandably sentimental about her own son. Guy wriggled in his seat at first. Then I noticed his complexion was getting a few shades to the pink. And finally he got on his feet and turned to his father.

"C'mon, Dad!" he sort of growled. "Let's take a walk."

And so I stayed and really found out about Mr. Guy Madison.

the lowdown . . .

But I knew a lot before I met his mother. I knew that he was a very loyal boy. If you speak against a friend of his you have to prove it three times. And then he'll walk right up to the friend and ask point-blank if it's true. More often than not, he says, the gossip won't be true.

He has a very active conscience and lives by its dictates. He has to feel that the thing he's doing is right before he can do it. When he accidentally was the cause of his friend, Howard Hill, getting hurt in a hunting accident, he was a most miserable boy. For weeks afterward, sometimes from places as far away as Florida, he'd telephone Howard daily to find out how he was coming along.

He is stubborn. (I might as well say right here that I, too, am stubborn.) But he can be reasoned with. It isn't generally successful, but at least there's a chance that you might get him to see the light. (He says there is no chance with me, and on the chance that he may be right, I'm trying my best to change!)

He is pleasant, he is generous, he is serious about his career, and he works so hard at it that I know he's going to get places. And—I definitely think he'd make a good husband. But. . . .

Maybe it won't happen—because no one of us, or no two, for that matter, can guarantee that their tomorrows will come up made to order. But if ours do . . . well, even so, we are not fooling ourselves. We've been considered married so long that when (and if) we take this important (to us) step, both of us know that it will probably be one of the finest examples of anti-climaxes in Hollywood's history. If ever an announcement is slated to receive a casual "uh-huh" reception, that one will get it. Our friends will yawn. Editors will toss the notice into their wastebaskets. Every columnist will write a short "Don't forget you read it here first" note and go on to other news . . . and we will be forgotten.

And that, I think, is something every newlywed couple is entitled to for a while!

THE END

You owe it to your daughter to tell her these Intimate Facts of Life!

Before she marries—make sure she has this modern, scientific information . . .

Isn't it a blessing that in this modern age of enlightenment, helpful truths can be outspoken? Today, vaginal douches 2 or 3 times weekly are so widely recommended and practiced for intimate feminine cleanliness that the all-important question has really become —WHAT to put in the douche!

So, mother, make sure your daughter realizes: no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide of all those tested for the douche is so powerful yet so safe to tissues as ZONITE. (If you have the slightest doubt, send for PROOF in free booklet below.)

Cautions Against Weak or Dangerous Products

If, through old-fashioned advice passed on down through the years, you are still using 'kitchen makeshifts' such as salt, soda or vinegar—let us warn you these are NOT germicides in the douche.

On the other hand, no wise woman would want to resort to dangerous products—overstrong solutions of which may burn, harden tissue and, in time, even impair functional activity of the mucous glands.

Truly, ZONITE is a modern miracle! ZONITE has a powerful germ-killing action yet is ABSOLUTELY SAFE to tissues. It's positively non-poisonous, and non-irritating. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as you wish—there's not the slightest risk of injury.

Zonite's Miracle-Action

ZONITE eliminates odor, removes waste substances and discharge. You feel so dainty and refreshed. Helps guard against infection. It kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE ZONITE DOES KILL every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-99, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Enjoy the EXTRAS of Gossar-DEB

Yes! The Gossar-DEB pantie has plenty of extras. Take it in your hands . . . feel how light, how soft, how pliable it is. Just 3 ounces of cool, comfortable tissuenet! Now, slip it on . . . instantly you'll feel its caressing action . . . its smooth, subtle control—molding your figure without boning. Plenty of freedom, too! Wear it with or without the garters.

Gossar-DEB gives you all the extra features of Gossard quality—why be without them? Try Gossar-DEB today!

At all good stores and shops

Gossar-DEB Girdles, Panties, $3.50 to $10.00, Brassieres $1.25 to $3.50. Gossard—the most complete line for all ages and figure types.

the Gossard line of beauty

94 The H. W. GOSSARD CO., 111 N. Canal St., Chicago 6

By CAROL CARTER, Beauty Editor

Point with pride

Joan Caulfield, who's starring in Paramount's Dear Wife.

■ Perhaps you've been leading the care-free life of a nature-girl this summer, taking a very happy-go-lucky attitude toward the finer points of your personal appearance. Now you're back in business or school-room, meeting and competing. Lots of pure genius is an asset, as no one can deny—but when you point with pride to the flawless letter you've typed, or explain at the classroom blackboard how you discovered the value of X, let your eloquent hands draw attention by their beautiful care and the flash of 10 bright, jewel-like fingernails.

You need a thorough manicure at least every 10 days; the more often you beautify your nails, the less time you need to spend per session.

When you remove chipped polish, hold a bit of remover-soaked cotton against the nail and then pull from the base toward the tip. This keeps dissolved polish from staining your cuticle. If you're just changing shades, however, to match a certain frock or lipstick, you can put coat over coat of nail enamel, building up a good, strong defense against chipping or nail injury.

File your nails before scrubbing your hands—water-softened nails are hard to file nicely and tend to have a frayed-looking edge. File from the corner of the nail toward the tip and leave enough of the nail corner to protect your surrounding skin from callouses.

Follow the natural curve of cuticle in shaping your nails. Long, pointed nails aren't being worn much now and anyway, they break easily and aren't practical. If your nails need an appearance of length, use a soft pink nail enamel and cover the entire nail from base to tip, except for a mere hairline down each side of the nail. Put an extra brushful of color down the middle of the too-square nail. If you want to give a too-fragile hand a more substantial look, leave moons and tips uncolored and use a rich red. The lucky girl with oval nails and smooth, white hands can use any shade or shape she prefers. Put the accent on beautifully-colored fingernails if you want people to remain unaware that your hands aren't completely perfect! Get into the hand-lotion habit, too, for soft-fair hands and carefully polished nails compliment each other—and you!

WHY STARS TURN TO PRAYER

(Continued from page 41)

the scene be finished—and at her insistence it was.

That night, the same doctor examined her again. This time, what he found amazed him. Barbara's injury was such that had she not gotten up and walked immediately she might have been invalided for years! What would probably have been a badly congested area in the region of her lower spine had cleared up greatly with the increased circulation of the blood brought on by her activity.

There is Doris Day. Alongside her bed is a scripture book. Not a day goes by without her reading it. The habit goes back to her 'teens when an ambition to become a dancer, not a singer, was cruelly ended by an auto accident in which both her legs were broken. She became so dispirited during convalescence that her whole will to live lessened. She suffered a mind block that made her morose. But, in time, she turned to prayer for comfort and came to the decision that "if this accident has happened, then there must be some good that will surely come out of it for me."

It was only then that she took up singing lessons. She had no thought of it as a career, had no idea of ever singing in public. Yet that was to be the means to the fame she thought had gone out of her life forever because she couldn't dance.

Father Peyton—or, as he is better known, Father Pat—tells of a Christmas Day when Bing Crosby was to sing "Adeste Fidelis" on the Father's special Rosary radio program, and awoke to find himself the victim of an attack of flu that included a throat raw with inflammation. Bing phoned immediately, but not to cancel. He wanted the chorus rehearsed so that it could break in at any point of the song if his voice should fail.

The program went on—and Bing sang through his song perfectly. When someone asked him how he'd done it, Bing was thoughtful.

"Someone must have said a prayer," he replied with simple sincerity.

Virginia Mayo is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood, where Dr. Louis Evans is the pastor. Her husband, Michael O'Shea, has just joined. He declares he has never required a demonstration of the power of prayer to believe in it, but nevertheless, he has seen one. It is something that occurred during a visit to Gallup, New Mexico—an incident which is engraved in his memory permanently.

He was on the Navajo reservation near Gallup when a dog belonging to an Indian boy was accidentally shot by a hunter. The dog was brought to the boy and laid at his feet. A Christian convert, the boy prayed for his pet. Then he announced that the dog was sure to get well, and set off for school, happily.

The boy's father immediately summoned a veterinarian, who reached a different verdict. There was no hope for the dog. He had best be put to death.

The father took up a rifle. He was an expert shot. Stepping up to within 10 paces of the dog, he took careful aim, fired—and missed! He was so overcome that he lowered his gun and refused to shoot again, despite the vet's repeated assertion that it was inhuman to let the animal suffer.

miraculous recovery . . .

Late that afternoon the boy came back to his dog and found him sleeping. By nightfall the dog was taking nourishment and by the next morning was well on the way to being himself again.

The only person not amazed by the miraculous recovery was the boy, whose simple faith had saved the pet he loved.

Religion is no more on the lips of those in Hollywood than it is of others anywhere else. But their lives are necessarily more in the public eye. Jane Russell doesn't particularly want it known that, when working on the set, she spends most of the time between scenes studying her Bible. But since she has to do it in the presence of some 40 or more fellow-workers, it's become known not only to them but to hundreds of others in the studio.

When John Payne's last attempt at reconciliation with Gloria de Haven failed a few months ago and he moved into the Beverly Hills Hotel, he did it quietly and without any fanfare. And perhaps only because a bellboy was curious and had to talk about it do we now know that outside of his clothes, the only other belongings John took with him from the home he had lived in with Gloria for years were two books—both Bibles.

John is not publicly identified with any special church, yet his spiritual faith is one of the strongest in Hollywood. He is quite sad about the delay in the production of The Robe, in which he has utterly no interest other than his feeling that the religious message in the picture is needed by the country. Something only his closest friends have known, until now, is that John volunteered to play any role in the picture offered to him, regardless whether it be a major or a minor part.

And the fact that Maureen O'Hara—like millions of other wartime wives—prayed every day for her husband, Will Price, when he was in the Fourth Marine Division during the bloody island invasions in the Pacific, was reported not by her but by a friend, a woman who had a husband in the same outfit, and who learned to overcome her own worry and gnawing fear in this manner.

When incidents of a dramatic nature happen in the lives of the stars outside their homes there is almost always someone present to take note of it. For instance, there was a reporter standing near Mrs. Beulah Williams on that day some years ago when her daughter, Esther, won the national 100-meter free-style swim-

I SAW IT HAPPEN

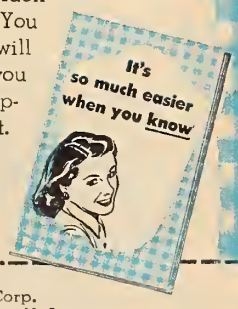
When I was 13, I attended my first formal dance, which was given at an Army post near my home. My girl friend and I were very excited but I guess she was rather shy and didn't do much dancing. Just as we were getting ready to leave, a tall blond officer approached and said to her, "It just doesn't seem right that such a pretty little girl as you aren't dancing"—and away they went. To my amazement, I realized that the handsome officer was Dan Dailey, then stationed at Ft. Riley, Kansas.

Frances Steinmetz
Junction City, Kansas

Unmarried girls can use tampons

RIGHT! Any normal woman can use tampons as soon as she is fully grown. And why not? Meds, the Modess tampons, were designed by a doctor, and are worn by thousands of nurses who are in a position to know.

No swimming on "those days."



WRONG! It's safe to swim, shower, bathe any day of the month if you wear Meds. Meds are worn internally . . . no need for pads, pins, belts.

Tampons are so comfortable you'll forget you are wearing them.

RIGHT! Meds put an end to chafing, odor . . . to bulging, uncomfortable external protection.

There's a book that tells more.

RIGHT! Send for your free copy of "It's so Much Easier When You Know." It will be mailed to you in a plain wrapper. Read it. Then . . .

Go Meds... Go Merrier

Personal Products Corp.
Dept. MS-9, Milltown, N. J.
Please send me a FREE copy of your new Meds booklet, "It's So Much Easier When You Know." (U.S.A. only)

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

Brighten your Hair a little...
Brighten your Life a lot!

Learn this secret from popular girls: Rinse lovely Marchand color into your hair after every shampoo and see your hair sparkle with rich, warm color.

Marchand's "Make-Up" Rinse fills your hair with enchanting highlights. Blends in that first bit of tell-tale gray and removes dulling soap film. Whether you're blonde, brunette or redhead, there's a Marchand Rinse shade for you. Perfectly safe, the color is only temporary . . . comes out in shampooing.

Marchand's

"MAKE-UP"
HAIR RINSE
2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢
plus tax
★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

Learn PHOTO COLORING
Thousands of women make good money coloring photographs full or part time. Interesting & easy to learn. Study at home. Write for "Opportunities in Photo Coloring."
Hollywood School of Photo Coloring
P.O. Box 504, West Branch, Hollywood 46

CASH For You— And Enjoyment, Too!

Make money — and have fun while you're doing it! Just take easy orders from friends, neighbors, merchants, others for beautiful Christmas Cards.
NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED to make wonderful earnings with these fast-sellers. Everybody buys two 21-Card FEATURE Christmas Assortments. They include novel folds, gleaming plastics, unusual cut-outs for just $1. It's a bargain that can't be beat. You make as much as 50c PROFIT on each box you sell! Many other easy-to-sell Christmas and Everyday Assortments low as 60c. Also Christmas Cards WITH NAME at 50 for $1 and up. Easy-money plan for churches, clubs, other organizations. Write for FREE Personal Christmas Card samples—and start earning—NOW!
WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC., Dept. S-77
749 MONROE AVENUE ROCHESTER 2, N. Y.

ming title that brought her wide attention and started her on her way to MGM as a star. The moment Esther pulled herself up out of the water she ran to her mother.

"I won, Mother!" she cried delightedly. "I won!"

"I know, dear," said Mrs. Williams. "But don't forget, you didn't do it yourself."

Esther's face sobered. "You're right, Mother," she replied. "I will thank Him for answering my prayers."

One of the greatest successes in Betty Hutton's career was the sensational hit she made at the Palladium Theater in London. Reams of copy were cabled to this country about it and printed in almost every newspaper and magazine in the country. But not one story mentioned a most important fact about her triumph.

Every morning before Betty and her mother left their hotel they would get down on their knees and pray that she could give of her best in her performance.

These were not the first prayers in the Hutton family, of course. Betty, and her sister Marion, feel today that not only have they achieved their ambitions through prayer, but that prayer alone enabled them to survive the privations of their early lives when they were desperately and, yes, often hungrily poor.

and the greatest is charity . . .

Father Pat thinks Loretta Young is the most compassionate woman he knows, and tells of a demonstration of this trait which he witnessed on a trip to New York. He was staying at the French Hospital, where the nuns are of the Holy Cross Order (the father was ordained a priest of the Congregation of Holy Cross at Notre Dame) when Loretta, who was at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, invited him to lunch there.

Her husband, Tom, was with her, and after the meal Father Pat told them about a woman patient at the hospital who, the nuns had said, had survived 30 operations. He asked if Loretta could visit her and bring a bit of cheer. She was very willing and they all left for the hospital.

Loretta spent a long time with the woman, and then wanted to visit through the charity wards as well. For the rest of the afternoon she went from patient to patient, finally finding herself near two beds on which lay elderly Negro women. She talked to them but noticed that only one answered.

"She can't speak," explained this Negress. "She doesn't know what's going on here. I think she's frightened about it all."

Loretta was touched. She bent down quickly, kissed the mute woman and gently held her head close to hers, transmitting the sympathy she could not make understood in words. And she prayed for her.

Not far away stood Father Pat and Tom, and the priest could not help but note that Tom had to lower his head to hide the tears in his eyes.

There are many, many stories attesting the fact that simple faith lives in Hollywood, as it does all over the rest of the world, and that spiritually, the stars are not any different from other people.

There were 24 hours in the early Hollywood career of Pat O'Brien when the world could not reach him. He was himself reaching elsewhere. Every second of those 24 hours, Pat was on his knees in a session of supplication which he recalls as the most fervent in his life. It happened 12 years ago when his daughter, Mavourneen, who is now 15, lay seriously ill of a mastoid complication.

Pat told his beads, kept on, though there was echoing through his mind the doctor's pronouncement that Mavourneen's condition was practically without hope.

He knows, he says, that her recovery was an answer to his prayers.

It isn't any wonder that he once wrote an article for a national magazine stating that America's secret weapon is prayer—or that he received thousands of letters agreeing with him.

There was a day in the life of J. Carroll Naish when he didn't value it at a lead dime. As a youth, he was returning from the Orient on a tramp steamer when the boat was caught in a gale off the California coast, with winds up to 75 miles an hour and rain blotting out all vision.

A wave which tore away the rudder also disabled the wireless apparatus and prevented any call for aid. Unable to head into the force of the blow, the vessel shipped water steadily and soon lay helpless with decks almost awash.

There were lifeboats, but all aboard knew it would be impossible for them to stay afloat 10 seconds in the furious sea. Huddled together, crew and passenger alike, they could do nothing but pray. And they were in the midst of prayer when the Chinese cook called out that he heard something—bells, he said, church bells.

The ship was miles from shore. Not even a ship's bells could be heard, let alone church bells. They thought he had gone crazy. And then, from out of the windswept mist, there appeared a Coast Guard cutter! Lines were cast, the steamer taken in tow and brought into port. And not until then did the rescued men learn from the captain of the cutter that he had not come on them accidentally, but was investigating the source of an unusual sound that had come to the ears of his crew and himself—the pealing of church bells.

It is a mystery which has not been explained to this day, but it may be significant that of the 200 and more stars who have given their services for Father Pat's regular prayer program, which is heard every Wednesday over the Mutual Broadcasting System, and for his special Rosary programs broadcast every Christmas, Easter and Mother's Day—of these stars, J. Carroll Naish has been just about the most frequent performer.

And anyone desiring a summation of Hollywood's spiritual faith might be interested in some words spoken about the stars by Father Pat, who knows them all personally.

"Never since the Christian religion has begun," declares Father Pat, "has any group of individuals, of various denominations, themselves, done more to bring to the minds of the millions of people, the riches and depths and beauty that are hidden in prayer."

THE END

MODERN SCREEN

LET'S NOT TALK ABOUT LOVE

(Continued from page 55)

And so it was that Betsy, while Cary was on his way home, had undertaken the biggest, most important job she'd ever tackled. By taking the lead in Dancing in the Dark, a Technicolor musical, she was going to show the world she could stand on her own two feet. . . .

As the ship was eased alongside the dock, Betsy felt that Cary would be proud of her. She could hardly wait to be with him to give him a play-by-play account of her Betsy-on-her-own project. Though aside from that, naturally, she could hardly wait to be with him, period.

Well, as reunions go, Cary's and Betsy's wasn't a romantic one. Even if these two had wanted it to be, how can you be romantic with a dozen reporters and photographers breathing down your neck? Betsy and the small group of friends who came down to meet Cary were almost lost in the shuffle. When they finally did get to him, they uttered the usual welcome-home phrases—and, of course, he did give Betsy a few kisses. But Cary didn't say, as one over-zealous newsman headlined, "I've already asked her," in reply to the inevitable question about when he was going to propose. At least, no one else heard him say it.

Everybody in Hollywood has been trying to get these two married ever since Betsy came from New York a little over a year ago and Cary got her a screen test and made her his leading lady before you could say, "Every - girl - should - be - married." Everybody says they're in love. Everyone except Cary and Betsy. Her answer to investigators of the subject is invariably, "We have never discussed marriage." And when Betsy fixes you with the serious gaze of those chameleon eyes—sometimes deep blue, sometimes vivid green, but always direct and honest—you believe her. To Betsy, at this point, something more vital than marriage to anyone—even Cary Grant—is having a chance to prove that her overnight stardom in Every Girl Should Be Married wasn't just a lucky combination of knowing an influential screen idol and stumbling into a role tailor-made for her particular talents and personality.

fits like a glove . . .

And that chance came quickly. When June Haver became ill, Betsy was asked to take her place in Dancing in the Dark. Reading the script, she loved it instantly—perhaps for sentimental reasons, because the story about a struggling young actress reads almost like her own biography.

But more significantly, it would be a tougher role than even Betsy could have dreamed up to establish her right to be called a screen success. In it, she'd have to sing and dance, as well as emote. And Betsy had never sung or danced in her life.

With characteristic honesty, she emphasized her shortcomings when producer George Jessel discussed the picture with her. "I want to do the part—more than you know," Betsy told him earnestly. "But I can't sing or dance."

He said he'd take a chance.

"I'll probably ruin your picture, if I'm in it," Betsy insisted.

He said he'd still take a chance.

In Hollywood, where self-appreciation is a popular and assiduously practiced art, Betsy Drake is a phenomenon. To say that she's modest would be the understatement of the decade. She honestly thinks she can do nothing well. One day on the Dancing in the Dark set, director Irving Reis tried to jolt her out of this complex. "Now Betsy," he said, "there must be times when you do something to your own satisfaction."

After a moment, Betsy replied thoughtfully: "Yes, once in a great while I read a line or do a scene that I really feel is right, but it's so rare that it's like a single sunny day in a long rainy spell. . . . I wish it would happen more often," she concluded wistfully.

Although Jessel hadn't been disturbed, dance director Seymour Felix was bowled over when Betsy said, "Mr. Felix, I think you ought to know something: I can't dance a step."

they all laughed . . .

"Oh, don't worry," said Felix bravely when he recovered. "You'll—you'll get along fine after we've worked on the routines. Just relax as though you were doing ordinary ballroom dancing."

"But that's just it," Betsy insisted. "I can't even dance on a dance floor. You see, I've always been a wall-flower. Even in high school, when anyone asked me to dance, I'd just—well, I'd just freeze up like a broom-handle."

By now Felix was beginning to feel faintly panicky. "Well, look. Ah . . . just walk back and forth. You'll relax."

"Mr. Felix," Betsy gulped in agitation, "I'm even awkward when I walk."

So Mr. Felix and Betsy first practiced walking—and from that they went into the simple "time" step.

"Once she got over her self-consciousness, she did beautifully," Felix reported to director Reis. "That girl works like a Trojan. She practiced seven hours a day for three weeks on one number."

"I know," said Reis. "She tackles everything like that. If there's any truth in that old saw about genius being half application and half perspiration, I suspect we have a genius on our hands." When the dance scene was shot, Director Reis congratulated his suspected girl-genius.

"Oh, thank you, Mr. Reis," she blushed gratefully, "but if I'm at all graceful, you can just say that Mr. Felix hypnotized me."

Not long ago, a woman's page editor visiting the Dancing in the Dark set asked Betsy for her beauty secrets to include in a story. "I'm so sorry," Betsy apologized. "I'm just not a beauty and I have no beauty secrets. I just like to be clean."

With no illusions about her beauty, her importance, or her talent, Betsy has everyone who works with her unconsciously pulling for her. "She's like a high-stepping thoroughbred at race-time," one grip observed sagely, "trembling and rearing at the starting gate—but once the bell rings, you don't have to worry about her. She'll make it if she has to run her heart out."

Mark Stevens, playing her fiancé in the picture, continually teased Betsy about Cary. The first time they rehearsed a love scene, she was supposed to throw her arms around his neck and kiss him. It turned out to be a surprisingly enthusiastic buss and, in mock dignity, Mark protested, "Please, Miss Drake! Just because Cary's coming home tomorrow, you don't have to practice on me!"

Days later, commenting on the 25 pounds Grant lost while he was ill, Mark said, "Say, Betsy, you don't like Cary that thin, do you?"

"I like Cary any way," Betsy flashed. "I'd like him with a walrus mustache!"

If the wiseacres of Hollywood expected to fill in their speculations with facts when 26 30 days hath September!

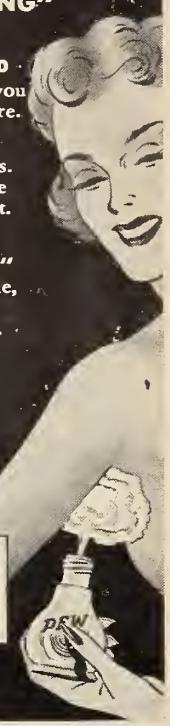
NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS
NO ODOR



How often do you really have 30 days in one month—days you can call your own, free and clear? Or do you spend 4 or 5 days each month being a slave to the old routine of pins, belts, tabs and external pads?.... Why not investigate the Tampax method of internal absorption? Then you can say goodbye to all such outside trappings and fittings!

When you discover Tampax you will find a modern, efficient, doctor-invented product only one-ninth the bulk of the older kind. Made of surgical cotton, very absorbent, Tampax is easily inserted by means of patented applicators. Unseen and unfelt, Tampax cannot cause odor or chafing or ridges under the clothing. Disposal of course is easy. And you need not remove the Tampax for a tub, a shower or a swim.

Next time you buy sanitary protection, insist on Tampax and have it ready. Full month's average supply slips into your purse. At drug and notion counters in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

AMAZING!! NEW!!
"DEW"
SPRAY DEODORANT
IN THE MAGICAL "SELF-ATOMIZING" BOTTLE
STOPS PERSPIRATION AND ODOR TROUBLES! Keeps you daintily pure, socially secure.
DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! "Dew" never touches hands. Not messy. Squeeze flexible bottle, spray on gentle mist.
ONLY DEODORANT CONTAINING "RETSELANE" to stop perspiration trouble, avoid perspiration stains on clothes. Removes odor.
WON'T ROT CLOTHES! Can't irritate normal skin.
SAVES MONEY! Full year's supply only 98¢ Plus tax Less than 2¢ a week
SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE! "DEW" ® SPRAYS ITSELF ON!
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

HOT WATER in 3 Minutes! only $7.98 Complete
NO FIRES TO BUILD
SAVES FUEL BILLS
SAVES TIME & WORK

All the hot water you want in a jiffy. New low priced Electric Water Heater works like a charm. Just drop in water and plug in. Amazing quantities of hot water to bathe, shave, wash, hundreds of other uses. Handy size and shape fits every basin, tub, sink, etc.
Send No Money! Clip This Ad! Mail ad on post card or letter. We'll ship C.O.D. for only $1.98 and postage on 10 day money back guarantee offer.
ILLINOIS MERCHANDISE MART Dept. 6724. 1227 Loyola Ave., Chicago 26, Illinois

Thrilling Work COLORING PHOTOS
EASY TO LEARN
Fascinating vocation learned at home by those with aptitude. Thrilling pastime. National method brings out life-like colors. Free booklet.
NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL 1315 S. Michigan, Dept. 2366, Chicago 5

EASY DOLLARS for YOU!..
Selling CHRISTMAS CARDS

FOR TOP EARNINGS, show the TOP line, and cash in on the easiest money-making plan. 100% PROFIT on name-imprinted DeLuxe personals. 50 FOR $1.00 Treasure Box. "21" FEATURE BOX, a Christmas Special like your 365-day money-maker, the JANES ART "21" Everyday Box and 24 other fast-selling items. FREE—Smart carrying carton for samples, the exclusive "Guide to Easy Selling," profit-making display mounts. Send for samples on approval AT OUR EXPENSE.
MATCHED GIFT Wrapping ENSEMBLES 20"x30" size sheets 15 DESIGNS Gift Folders, Tags, Seals that MATCH!
JANES ART STUDIOS, INC. BABYLON 7-B, N.Y.
Please rush samples on approval
NAME
ADDRESS

Cary returned from Europe, they were disappointed. He and Betsy haven't been seen around in the bright spots or at parties. When they have dates, it usually means a quiet dinner together at Betsy's or at Cary's house. Afterward, they play backgammon or gin rummy and Cary always wins. Lately Betsy has been teaching him chess—and was delighted at beating him, until the last few sessions. "Now he's able to beat me even at that," she wails.

Typical of Betsy's low-pressure salesmanship where her own accomplishments are concerned, is her claim to only one social asset: "I play a fair game of ping-pong," she admits. She's an avid reader, and when she hasn't a book in hand, she's most content when she's learning something. Her current project is a self-teaching piano course, which she pursues so determinedly that she painstakingly copies two or three bars on a scrap of paper to carry in her purse for memorizing whenever she has a spare moment away from home.

"Home" to Betsy in Hollywood is a tiny white house just outside the studio gate. She rented it when she started work at 20th Century-Fox. In its four small, sunny rooms, she and Suzy live in ladylike seclusion.

Most of her waking hours since she's been in Hollywood, Betsy's been working. That's one reason why she's made few friends in the picture colony. Another is that she's so shy that meeting strangers frightens her. In a crowd she closes up like a clam.

In conversation, her voice has a soft huskiness, pitched so low that any other sound in a room can drown her out. Betsy counts this as an odd blessing. Completely self-effacing, she would much rather listen than take part in a conversation.

Celebrating the almost simultaneous completion of Dancing in the Dark and I Was a Male War Bride, Betsy and Cary, with Howard Hawks and starlet Marion Marshall, made a foursome at the recent racing meet at Santa Anita. While experts Grant and Hawks carefully studied their form sheets for the scientific selection of a winner, Betsy quietly picked, at random, a lost cause named Bollingcall, slipped over to the betting window and cautiously placed a two-dollar wager on his hopeless nose. Bollingcall (why that name intrigued her she's never figured out) romped home first, dumping $127.50 in the lap of a very dazed Miss Drake. "The first thing I ever won in my life!" she gasped unbelievingly.

Betsy's prognostications aren't always as accurate as her horse selections. She employs a favorite childhood device for foreseeing the outcome of a problem or the possibility of obtaining a particular wish: If she wins two out of three games of solitaire, then she'll get her wish or her problem will be solved. Following her screen test, while she waited to hear Dore Schary's verdict, she almost wore the spots off the cards. Two out of three games and she'd get the role in Every Girl Should Be Married. Weeks went by—and never once did she make it.

Next day, when she was visiting at Cary's house, she was still running the cards while Cary studied a script. Again she'd just failed on another two-out-of-three when Dore Schary called long-distance from Chicago, where he'd just seen the test. Finishing the call, Cary returned to the living room, looking completely bereaved.

"Betsy," he began, tragically, "I've some bad news for you."

Her heart crash-dived to her toes and she said in a small, crushed voice, "I didn't get the part."

"I said, 'bad news'," he went on. "You did get it! Now you're stuck with me for a leading man."

Whether two out of three wins at solitaire would foretell marriage with Cary, Betsy has never tried to find out. Asked if they would wed eventually, Betsy parries "Eventually is a long time to talk about. We might. Or one or the other of us might decide against it."

If this is a romance, no one else is in position to say for sure. No one except Suzy, who is their constant chaperone. And Suzy isn't talking.

Shrewd observers, but very close-mouthed, these French poodles.

THE END

MY HEART DECEIVED ME

(Continued from page 24)

see her straightening up, becoming more of a somebody every second. When I got through and asked, "Well, do you still think you're not as attractive as I am?" her reply was best of all. It showed me that what I had said had impressed her, but hadn't turned her head so far that she went the other way.

"Yes, I do," she replied. "I know I'm not as attractive. But I feel now that being attractive is something you can work at. That if I develop my good points, maybe I can get to be something like you and the other stars I admire."

We said goodbye—but just as we parted she had one more thing to tell me. "You must be awfully happy, Miss Day, to want to make others happy, as you have me," she said.

Well! Long after she had gone, all that day, I thought of this. Yes, I was happy. But why? I felt I had to put into words, into so many exact words, just why I was happy . . . so there could be no doubt of it.

There were reasons why I shouldn't have been. Twice in my life I had thought I was settled with men I loved and twice in my life I became unsettled . . . via divorce. This is enough to make a girl a little unsure of herself, and without confidence, life can be quite saddening. Oh, yes, in my case there was a career to make up for it. Maybe that was washing out the shadows of the past that could plague me. And it's perfectly true that making good in Hollywood has its own satisfying kind of thrill to it.

Yes, a career can help and mine is helping me. But, deeply and honestly, there is something else. It's not on the picture lot, nor written on the face of the check that I pick up at the cashier's window. It's not in the radio studio standing beside talented and kind people whom I admire and who have helped me so much. It's not in the dresses I can buy now, nor at the parties I am asked to attend, nor in any of the Hollywood whirl, that surrounds a star. It's in me! It's a realization and a conviction. The realization is that one never falls into happiness (as I had always thought). One has to make it! The conviction is that this time I know how to make my happiness. And before you think I am talking just in generalities, let me explain that the happiness I want can come only when I find the right man. I'll find him.

He won't be anyone who just smites me off my feet the second I see him. I've been smitten. He'll be several things which I'll name, and in the exact order I give: 1. A

HOW TIME FLIES!

Jackie Cooper and Judy Garland are at the hand-holding-at-soda-fountain stage. Which accounts for the completely dejected look on the freckled countenance of Mickey Rooney. But Mickey pulled a fast one at the studio commissary the other day. Jackie and Judy were interrupted in their soulful gazes at each other over malted milks when Mickey passed the table and yelled "Hi, you kids." On his arm was Sophie Tucker.—Modern Screen, September, 1937 friend. 2. A companion. 3. A friend. 4. A friend. 5. A FRIEND. 6. A FRIEND!

You never hear the phrase "True friendship at first sight," do you? Everyone knows that real, enduring friendship is something that develops slowly. Well, that was a little mistake I made before; a natural mistake, perhaps, because I was so young. I let something else come between the natural development of friendship and companionship—something sometimes called a mad love.

A few months ago I was invited to a party. Later I was thrilled to learn that a certain star would be attending whom I had never met, but had always been crazy about when I saw him on the screen. "This is fabulous, sensational!" I told myself. My old girlish enthusiasm hit me (oh, it's still there, all right, but I've learned to keep a tight rein) and I went into a flurry of preparations for the affair.

We met. He was handsome. He had a commanding presence. He was certainly something to be seen with. And—he was nothing!

This man was exactly that. He was nothing. He could wear clothes. He could look at you. He could sit still beautifully, at any angle, and let you look at him. He could chatter—nothing about nothing, mostly—and then let you look at him again. (If I seem to be going around in aimless circles, that's the way it was when I was with him. No matter how things started, or where they might lead to ordinarily, with him you just ended up . . . looking at him.)

Well, I thought, would I want this sort of man for all my life? For my mornings and my noons and my evenings? For my good moments and my bad moments, for my tears and my laughter and my illnesses? Always this . . . and just this?

No, thank you. I went home early that night. I pleaded illness. He had bored me to it.

There is a wall that can come up between two people. If they cannot communicate with each other because they hold little in which they are commonly interested, if one is one kind of a person and the other just opposite, if viewpoints are so different that they cannot take in the other person's—that's a wall. I know. I've faced it.

To fall quickly in love with a man, madly in love, is to be in love on only one level. But there are lots of levels to everyday life. And if you can't meet each other on these other levels just as interestingly and warmly, almost, as you have on the first one—well, when that great, big beautiful love moves out, the wall moves in!

Al Jorden, my first husband and the father of my son, was a nice man. It is as much a reflection on me as it is on him that we are not married today. Neither one of us, I think, used our good sense. It still wasn't being overworked when my second husband, George Weidler, and I met. We were married in 1946, separated a year later, and were divorced June 1 of this year.

Not long ago I met my second husband and we had a long talk. He surprised me by revealing a new attitude to life, a sound, spiritual relationship to it that I had never thought possible in him. It made me gasp to listen to him at first. And then his ideas captured me, I wanted to know more and more. We were by this time too far apart for a reconciliation to become possible, but just the same, I not only felt a new respect growing in me for him—I took his new-found spiritual outlook for my very own. It is very like what I am writing about now. He, who used to live on the other side of that wall from me, was now my teacher! This is what time had done for him. It might have done it for both of us if we had taken time to get to know each other before we married instead of falling right into each other's arms and hoping that we'd learn about each other later.

For some people it does work out well that way. It must, I guess—because there certainly are cases of people who have fallen in love at first sight and have stayed in love. Were they so-o-o much in love, and is that the reason—or were they lucky that they happened to be right for each other?

Today if I meet a man it is enough for me if he is pleasant. I don't ask that he be knocked over by me, or give me a rush, or depart from his usual, pleasant self in any way. I have met a number of men like that. With a few, the acquaintanceship has grown to real friendship. I am more than happy about it. It may be that one of these friendships will develop to something closer. That will be wonderful. But if it doesn't, I'll still value the friendship.

i'm not afraid . . .

I have a nice home. I have a fine son. I know what it needs. So does he. The other day, when I had time off, I told him I was going to spend it all with him. He was delighted, was Terry, who is just seven, and getting to know his way around the neighborhood alone. Yet, 10 minutes later (which I know is like a half a day to him) he casually announced he was going off to visit a playmate.

"But I thought we were going to be together today," I said.

He looked at me. "Why, Mom?" he asked. "Are you lonesome?"

"Yes, I'm lonesome," I replied.

"Why don't you get married?" he asked.

He went on to say that if I were married we'd have a "real gang" in the family, and, "You know, Mom. It takes a whole gang to have fun."

Okay, Terry, I thought to myself, we'll have a "real gang." And I'm not afraid, as many women are who have been divorced, that it will turn out badly again this time. There will be safeguards. The man who is to be your new father and I will have many things in common before he even becomes your father—so many things that we won't need a love to be interested in each other! And then—if such a love comes—well, that won't be the only bind that ties! THE END

WIVES! GET THESE EXTRA ADVANTAGES

by using this modern higher type

INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Greaseless Suppository Assures Antiseptic Action for Hours Less Embarrassing to Use

Zonitors are one of the greatest advancements ever made for intimate feminine cleanliness—these greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories are not only far more convenient and daintier to use, but are one of the most effective methods ever discovered.

Absolutely Safe to Tissues

Zonitors are powerfully germicidal yet are harmless to the most delicate tissues. Non-poisonous. Non-irritating. These are not the type that quickly melt away. Instead, when inserted—they keep on releasing their great germicidal and deodorizing properties for hours. And they never leave any sticky residue.

Leave No Tell-Tale Odor

Zonitors actually destroy offensive odor and leave no tell-tale odor of their own. Zonitors immediately kill every germ they touch—help guard against infection. You know it's not always possible to contact every germ in the tract. But you can FEEL CONFIDENT Zonitors kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying.

FREE

Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-99, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

Protect jar labels

Cover jar labels with cellophane tape to prevent smearing and keep 'em on tight.

Save steps by keeping a roll of "Scotch" Cellophane Tape in every room for sealing, holding and mending jobs.

GET THE TAPE HABIT...it's thrifty!

For quality, insist on—

REG U.S PAT OFF

SCOTCH BRAND

Cellophane Tape

SEALS WITHOUT MOISTENING
TRANSPARENT AS GLASS

ANOTHER 3M PRODUCT

MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO.
ST. PAUL 6, MINN. © 1949 3M CO.

MAKE UP TO $460 CASH
BETWEEN NOW AND CHRISTMAS!

and get your own dresses without a penny of cost!

What a happy holiday you can have—with money worries off your mind! Starting right away, you can earn up to $23 a week in spare time, by showing Fashion Frocks to your friends and neighbors. Like some exceptional Fashion Frocks representatives, that would mean up to $460 in 20 weeks before Christmas to spend any way you want! And besides, take your pick of dozens of gorgeous Fall dresses—without a penny of cost. That's what we offer you for representing us in your spare time. Show our popular frocks to your friends, then send us their orders. Collect handsome cash commissions in advance. No canvassing or experience necessary. Pleasant, dignified business. Get free details of this unusual offer and Portfolio of new styles. Send no money. Everything furnished FREE. Lovely fabric samples included. Rush your name, address and dress size on a penny postcard. Mail in today! Fashion Frocks, Inc., Desk C3054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio.

Get the FREE Portfolio of LATEST FALL DRESSES

as low as $2.98

REPLACEMENT OR RETURN OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

AM I CHEATING MY CHILDREN?

(Continued from page 33)

is to marry and bear children. But it also seems to me that God wants us to live our lives fully and honestly and to His credit.

My boys and their father are the lodestars of my life. But there's something else that's tremendously important to me as an individual: My work. Many women have outside interests in club work, in doing part-time jobs in hospitals, in any one of a hundred occupations. In my case, the outside interest is a Hollywood career, and I don't think it hurts my being a good wife and mother one tiny bit. On the contrary, I'm positive it's a big help.

Four years ago when Tim and Greg were born, I realized, of course, that I'd been presented with a brand-new set of problems. But not being a swami, I couldn't look ahead to see exactly what the problems would be.

By the time the babies were four weeks old, I was getting ready for a new picture. I had to leave them in the care of a nurse—so I didn't have a chance to get used to them. Like a lot of mothers, I was afraid to touch my babies. They were so little—four pounds each—and I was actually afraid I'd break them! I guess I'd have become easy and relaxed with them if I'd been able to take complete charge. But I spent most of my free time tip-toeing around the nurse and being terrifically impressed with the capable way she handled them.

full time mother . . .

After I'd finished the picture, I was sitting in the nursery one afternoon watching the two darlings when it suddenly occurred to me I was missing an awful lot by not taking charge of them—taking constant charge. Maybe, I thought to my daydreaming self, I ought to give up my career and devote myself entirely to bringing up my children. . . .

As luck would have it, the next day I was informed by the studio that my three-month lay-off period would now begin. Here was a golden opportunity to see how being a full-time mother would work out. So, dispensing with any halfway measures, I told both the nurse and the housekeeper that they could start their vacations immediately.

Late that afternoon, domestically attired in a peasant dress and an apron, I met my husband at the front door.

"Greetings," I said blithely. "You see before you plain Susan Barker, housewife and mother."

"How do you do," said Jess.

"I've sent away the nurse and the housekeeper," I said triumphantly, "and for the next three months, I'm going to take care of everything."

After I'd helped him up off the floor, he said, "That's very nice, darling," and kissed me. Then he went upstairs to play with the babies.

The four Barkers made, I thought, a very appealing family circle. But after about 45 minutes, I noticed that Jess was getting a strange look on his face.

"What's the matter?" I inquired.

"Well," he said, "isn't—isn't dinner a little late tonight?"

"Dinner?" I said. "Oh . . . dinner. . . ."

"Yes," he said. "You know, the food that usually somehow appears on the table in this house about six-thirty? Remember?"

"Good heavens!" I said. I'd forgotten all about the necessity for fixing it!

This was the first in my series of surprises. During the next few days, I discovered that two babies need an incredible amount of diapers; that a housewife checks on the dry-cleaning, orders the groceries, sees that the house is tidy, and doesn't answer the front door—especially if she's in pictures—with cake batter all over her face.

Now, I know that there are millions and millions of women who run domestic establishments six times as complicated as mine and manage, somehow, to wind up apparently fresh and blithe and set for a frolic when the old man gets home. They have my deep-down, all-out admiration. But—darn it—I'm just not that way.

By the end of one month, what with cooking, shopping, cleaning, and taking care of the little ones, I was definitely beginning to fray about the edges. I was a weary housewife, and I showed it. When Jess would come home at night, where once he'd found the witty observation, the tinkling laugh, the endearing wiles, he now found the vacant stare, the wan smile—everything but the blow and the curse.

Finally, my long-suffering mate said, "Now, look!"—and told me that (1) he preferred to have an attractive-looking wife to the tousled creature I was becoming, (2) he'd rather have a wife who was nice, (3) my biscuits shouldn't happen to a dog, and (4) this was not the girl he thought he'd married. What in tarnation, he asked, was I trying to prove and whom, exactly, did I think I was fooling?

Then he gave me his handkerchief and fell in love with me all over again. Next morning I called back the nurse and the housekeeper. I'd faced the fact that I'd been trying to do too much and had been doing it pretty terribly. . . .

Ah, well! The experience had been a good one: I certainly had a better working knowledge of the home; I had a much closer insight into the problems of the people who worked for me; and—most important—I'd really gotten to know my children.

I still, of course, take on myself the general responsibilities of their daily lives whether I'm working or not. I direct their nurse and plan their menus. And, naturally, I supervise the running of the household. But as to that, I do not wring my hands if the cleaning woman can't come—which happens quite often. I'm afraid I'm not the kind of girl who gets upset if the house isn't spotless. Neither is MacKay, our housekeeper—who, by the way, is a grandmother. We both know that the house will be cleaned when we get around to it. And none of us is overly fussy about the children, either. We don't think they ought to be antiseptic. As long as they're fundamentally clean, a little dirt on top won't hurt 'em.

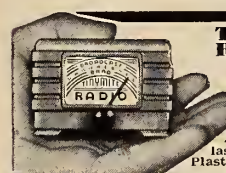
new world . . .

I know I'm a darned sight more interesting to them when I'm an active part of the outside world and can bring that world closer to them. The boys aren't shut out of our working lives—anything but! They're always asking to go to the studio, and we take them. It's a whole new enchanting world we're able to unfold before their insatiably curious eyes. They play with every gadget in the different departments. They work the camera boom, they put on the sound engineer's earphones. The propmen always have something fascinating to show or tell them. They meet all kinds of people, talk to them without shyness—and I watch with delight, remembering my own shyness as a child. . . .

It seems obvious to me that what children require is not necessarily the constant presence of their mother, but the constant knowledge that they're loved and cher-

CAT-TEX

by CAT'S PAW



SOLE OUT-WEARS LEATHER!

MONEY FOR YOU - SELL CHRISTMAS CARDS-UP TO 100% PROFIT

FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1 NAME PRINTED CARDS, NAPKINS AND STATIONERY

$50 profit selling 100 LEADER boxes. Complete line 50 fast selling Christmas, Everyday, Plastic Cards. Special Items. Big variety cards, napkins, stationery with name 50 for $1 up. No money needed to start. Gift offers. Cash Bonus. Write for samples.

EMPIRE CARD CO. 210 FOX ST. ELMIRA, N. Y.

TINY RADIO— REALLY WORKS!

FITS IN YOUR HAND! Works on new "PERMA-CRYSTAL" so it NEVER NEEDS TROUBLESOME TUBES, BATTERIES OR ELECTRIC "PLUG-INS"! Easy to use—Plays for nothing—Should last for years. Beautiful Red Plastic Case.

GUARANTEED TO WORK

on local programs by following instructions. G. B. of Ala. says "TINY RADIO IS JUST WONDERFUL"! SEND ONLY $1.00 (bill, ck., mo.) and pay postman $2.99 C.O.D. plus postage or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery. SENT COMPLETE READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. Has personal phone. WONDERFUL GIFTS FOR BOYS & GIRLS. Low priced. Order YOUR Tiny Radio Now!

THE MIDWAY CO. Dept. TMM-9 KEARNEY, NEBR.

High School Course at Home — Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, H614, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

MONEY We guarantee you $50.00 for selling 100 boxes 21 for $1 Xmas cards; also 50 and 25 for $1 with name on; also Napkins and Stationery. No experience needed. Costs nothing to try. Samples and Selling Plan on approval.

WELCOME

368 Plane St., Dept. C, Newark, N. J.

...Train At Home For This WELL PAID PROFESSION-

PRACTICAL NURSING

Help fill the urgent need for Trained Practical Nurses. If you are between 18 and 55, it's easy to train at home in your spare time to take your place in this respected calling. Many earn while learning. High school is not needed. Nurse's equipment included. Mail this ad today for FREE Facts.

Wayne School Of Practical Nursing, Inc., 2525 Sheffield Ave., Desk K-44, Chicago 14, Ill.

Please rush FREE FACTS and Sample Lesson Pages.

NAME _____ Age _____

Full Address _____

ished. Jess and I have impressed on our boys—less by word than by actions—that we all love one another and should do things together. Their problems are our problems, and our problems—at least the little ones that they're able to tackle—are theirs.

When I get home, I slam the front door—that's our "secret signal." The boys shout and get ready for a romp with me. But if Jess has gotten in ahead of me, there's a slight delay while he and I sit down together for a minute or two. Then we run upstairs and tussle with the kids.

For the past year, the boys have usually taken their dinner with us. Jess carves. I cut up their meat for the boys. We talk about their doings and ours. (Though our major grown-up affairs can wait until after the kids are in bed.) Greg keeps us in smiles—he's the boy with the jokes. ("Mommy, why should you keep away from a dog named Ginger?" "Why, darling?" "Because gingersnaps!") Tim is the one with the questions. ("Daddy, do angels have to drink milk?" "Uh. . . . Ask Mommy.") Both have pretty good table manners for their age and, if little accidents do occur, we don't raise a fuss. So somebody tilts soup onto the floor—so somebody wipes it up! Usually the boy who spilled it, which means he'll be more careful next time. But I don't go into a tizzy. We have no Persian rugs to be ruined.

the children's hour . . .

After dinner, we generally watch Judy Splinters and a cartoon on the television set. . . . Once my picture, from a cover of Televiews Magazine, was flashed on the screen. The twins jumped up and down with excitement. "Mommy's on television! Mommy's on television! We want to be on television too!"

"Wait'll you get to be cowboys," said Jess.

"On a horse?" said Tim.

"Sure," said Jess, "on a horse."

"You gonna get us a horse, Daddy?" said Tim.

"Now, you just keep on saving your pennies," said Daddy.

Though I'm dead on my feet, I always tuck them in and hear their prayers. Jess always lets me do it by myself. I sort of like to be the last one with them at night—I somehow feel that their mother should be the last person they see before they close their eyes. It's possessive of me, if you like. But I'm aware of that, and don't carry it any further.

Sometimes, though, even after they're asleep, we play games with them. Recently a friend stayed overnight, and Jess went upstairs to get an extra pillow. While there, he went into the boys' room and leaned over Greg's bed.

"Did you shave today?" he asked softly.

Greg, the jokester, chuckled in his sleep and mumbled, "Yes, I did."

The boys think it's terrific to go to bed one place and wake up in the morning somewhere else. And every so often we'll pick them up in their sleep and put them in the guest room. Once I woke to find that Jess had put Tim in with me. We'll hear them chortling about it as they drink their morning orange juice. ". . . the time I slept with Mommy . . ." ". . . the time we were both in the front room. . . ." It's the kind of thing that makes you smile when, in later life, you look back over your childhood, remembering. . . .

Well—am I cheating my children by being an actress?

I'm sure I'm not! They're having a full, happy, secure and cherished childhood. And I believe that the main reason they are is that, by being an actress, I'm being a better mother.

THE END

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

You're embraceable—always, when new, wonderful KARE keeps you bath-sweet. A lotion deodorant—satin-smooth, fragrant. So nice to use. So different from creams and liquids—not greasy or messy. Safe to use after shaving. KARE, an amazing new improvement in underarm deodorants, is the one that:

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration safely
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢ (plus tax), at drug and department stores.

The Grove Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

AMAZING OFFER - $40 IS YOURS For Selling Only 50 Boxes Christmas Cards — FREE SAMPLES

Also 50 and 25 for $1.00 with or without name. Free samples. Other boxes on approval, including entirely new, different deluxe assortment with feature television card. Cute plastic assortments. Write today. It costs nothing to try. Cheerful Card Co., Dept. S-23, White Plains, N. Y.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR? MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. W603, Chicago 25, Ill.

The loveliest girls have Lady Ellen curls!

• You, too, can have lovelier, longer-lasting curls with Lady Ellen Pin Curl Clips! The clip with the 'curl-hugging' feature that prevents breaking or crimping of hair. Soft, natural-looking curls and waves are yours when you use the pin curl clip of stars—Lady Ellen!

Available at drug, dept. or dime stores.

Lady Ellen HOLLYWOOD 8 for 25c PIN CURL CLIPS

CUTE AS A BUTTON

"Fan-Flair"

AND ONLY $3.99

You'll go places in this strictly new wedgie so dashingly different . . . the smooth elk leather is so soft and supple; smartly sewed moccasin vamps . . . and oh, so low in price!

COLORS— BLACK, BROWN, GREEN, WINE

SIZES: 6 to 9 AA width, 4 to 9 B width

ORDER BY MAIL—

PORAD'S 1712 Yale Ave., Seattle 1, Wash. Dept. DS

Send ____ prs. "Fan-Flair" at $3.99 pr.
Color—First choice ____ Second choice ____
Size ____ Width ____
Name ____
Address ____
City ____ Zone ____ State ____
Send check or money order and we pay postage. When sent C.O.D. customer to pay $3.99 plus charges. Check ☐ M.O. ☐ C.O.D. ☐
At retail in Seattle.

WESTWARD, WHOA!

(Continued from page 45)

meager punishment for a grown man. It's a piece of wood about a foot long that hangs on the den's wall. On one side there's a tiny doghouse, and on the other, five miniature leather dogs—one for each of the family—hang from five leather hooks. All you do is lift the right dog off the hook and put it in the house.

"Oh, never mind," we said ungraciously, "we can take a joke."

"Roy has a good sense of humor," Dale explained. "Why, on our last wedding anniversary he gave me a 22-gauge shotgun!"

"Some joke," we said.

"Of course," Dale added, "there was a pair of ruby earrings in the cartridge box."

We figured maybe he wasn't so bad at that and we allowed him to help Dale and us carry out the food. On the way to the corral we looked the place over. Pretty neat. Silos brimming with grain, colts frisking safely in the distance, a spinning windmill, fields of turnips. . . . What really impressed us were the chickens. They weren't much for looks, but they lived in specially heated coops of their own, and every time they'd lay an egg it would slide down a little wire trough in front of them.

"Remarkable," we said.

"Oh," laughed Dale. "Wait till they come out numbered. Roy's working on that."

For solid enjoyment, read the screen story of Roy Rogers' and Dale Evans' latest movie, Down Dakota Way, in the great September issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

Then we reached the corral. We took one look at those beautiful Palomino horses and felt like running away.

"Want to ride?" asked Roy.

"Us?" we said, dropping the food packages. "We?"

Dale, whose heart is bigger than Texas, calmed us.

"Simmer down, girls," she said. "Relax."

Relax? We were feeling so relaxed we almost fell to the ground right there.

"You know this song?" asked Roy as he started to sing a verse. It was about a couple of young dudes who got trampled to dust when they declared they were a-feared and started raising a fuss. "Remember old Leftie, Dale?" he asked suddenly. "He was a nice fella."

Dale snickered. About four seconds later we started laughing, too. It was pure hysteria.

Then Roy led Dale's horse, Pal, toward us. "Gentlest horse I've ever seen," he said, stroking Pal's mane affectionately. "Go ahead, talk to him."

"Hello, horse," we said. "Hello Pal, old boy, old horse."

"You know," said Roy, "even you could handle him."

"Oh, we doubt that," we said. "We very much doubt that."

"Sure you can," said Roy. That man must be a hypnotist—because the next thing we knew, sister Reba was in the saddle.

"He'll do anything you say," Roy shouted up from where he stood. "Tell him what you want him to do."

alimony by FAITH BALDWIN

Is it ever worthwhile to continue an empty marriage with a partner you have come to hate?

Don't Miss—

This absorbing novel about a man's struggle for happiness with the woman he loves.

Who would profit most by divorce—Stephen, Charlotte or Eve?

What problems did Stephen encounter in his second marriage?

Here is FAITH BALDWIN at her best.

For the best in Romance and Mystery READ . . .

dell books 25¢

"Giddap," Reba whispered. "Giddap." It could have been worse. Reba could have told him to do the Missouri waltz.

After this exhibition, Roy put Trigger through his paces. It was wonderful to watch. Trigger's getting on in years for a horse—he's 16—but he went through 25 tricks without an error: prancing, bowing, counting, kneeling to say his prayers. Trigger, Junior, who's being trained to take his pappy's place, will have to go some to outshine him.

Feeling a little more at ease, we helped Roy pack the food in the saddle bags and then ambled out of the corral. We came to the top of a hill and held our breath. The countryside lay huge and green and still beneath us. We picked out a site for our picnic. It was underneath an old oak tree in the center of a turnip patch.

Talk about living—you should have seen that food! Roast beef and baked-ham sandwiches, potato salad and whole, juicy tomatoes, apple cobbler and ice-cold lemonade. Heaven.

After lunch, Roy stretched out on the ground and slid his cowboy hat over his face. For a few moments nothing stirred.

"I'd say," whispered Dale, "Pa looks a mite too comfy."

We were inclined to agree. We plucked a sprig of green and swished it beneath his nose. Soothing as a horsefly, it was.

Roy didn't move. We swished, and swished. Suddenly he bolted upright. We bolted, too.

"Run for the hills, girls!" Dale shouted, as Roy reached for his lariat.

We bounded for the open field and stopped almost in mid-air as the lasso curled around us. "Help, police!" we cried as he hauled us in. "Enough!" we cried as he tied us up steer fashion. "Mercy!" we shrieked as he tickled us under the nose with turnip leaves. "Uncle!"

"Ornery critters!" laughed Roy. "Disturb the peace, will ya?"

"Fat chance we'd have," we muttered. Then we all shook hands.

To convince us we'd been forgiven, Roy offered to ride us back to the ranch on Trigger. We don't know much about the West, but when a cowboy lets you ride his horse, and especially when that horse is Trigger—it's an honor. So we got on, all three of us, and we joggled along with Dale on Pal beside us.

On the way back we passed the Rogers' prize-winning bulls and Trigger Junior's training ring and the pigpen. We wanted to stop by the pigs—little pigs are harmless—but Dale wouldn't let us.

"Hate pigs," she said. "Dates back to the time I was three and wanted to run away from home. Best place I could find was the pigpen. Took Dad two hours to find me and two more to coax the old sow to let me out."

"Why did you run away?" we asked.

"Had a new baby brother," Dale said. "I thought he was getting all the attention. Reckon that won't ever happen to my kids."

Before we knew it we'd reached the corral—and suddenly it dawned on us: The day was over. Time to hit the trail. Roy lifted us off Trigger and steadied us on the ground.

"Nice horse," we murmured, and even touched his mane.

We sat down gently on some bales of hay and tugged at each other's boots until they came off, one by one. Then we sat down gently again with a weak but happy smile on our lips.

"Have fun?" asked Roy and Dale.

"Podners," we said, "podners, there aren't words to describe . . ."

"Reckon you're plumb tuckered out," said Roy, smiling.

"Reckon so," we said, smiling back. "Reckon we've been ridin' a mite too hard. But shucks, podner, we'd love to do it again!"

THE END

ARE ODDS AGAINST TEEN-AGE BRIDES?

(Continued from page 57)

SHOULD HOLLYWOOD TEEN-AGERS MARRY?

(The following views on teen-age marriage are those of Mrs. Muriel E. Richter. Mrs. Richter is National Chairman of the Domestic Relations Clinic and a member of the National Association of Women Lawyers.)

Statistics show that teen-age marriages in general have a high mortality rate and in Hollywood, especially, teen-age marriages that endure are something of a wonder.

Older people often fight separation for reasons of their own security. Youngsters have less fear of the future and, hence, less incentive to fight off divorce. Then, too, Hollywood teen-agers tend to view marriage in a story-book light. Once wed, they expect to live happily ever after, but often give little thought to ways of securing happiness or to the responsibility they've undertaken.

Careers present additional problems to Hollywood youngsters who marry at the beginning of their professional lives. Continual adjustment of ego and personality is necessary as success comes or does not, as fame throws one partner into the limelight and ignores the other, as sudden, excessive wealth distorts true values. A great love and a high degree of understanding are required to withstand these threats to marriage. Most Hollywood teen-agers do sincerely want to stay married but many, stricken with career-itis, still have the antiquated notion that to get somewhere in Hollywood you have to be free.

Except for rare instances, then, I am not in favor of teen-age marriages. General immaturity, the inability to accept responsibility, and the inability or unwillingness to accept the yoke of matrimony stand in the way of lasting happiness.

became successively but not successfully Mrs. Willis Hunt, Mrs. Thomas Wallace and Mrs. Horace Schmidlapp. Then, last year, confused in mind and sick at heart over her romance with a man she could not marry, she killed herself.

"That," says the average teen-ager so confidently in love, "could never happen to me." Perhaps not—but there seems to be a strangely familiar pattern that is true of many girls who marry in their middle teens. Many of them become members of the "try, try again" school, marrying so many times that it would take a book to trace down all the effects of their marriages on the people involved.

Your OLD RUGS CLOTHING... Save You up to ½

IT'S ALL SO EASY! Free Catalog tells how to ship your materials at our expense to the Olson Factory, where we sterilize, shred, merge materials of all kinds—reclaim the valuable wool, etc., then bleach, card, spin, dye and weave into lovely, new, deep-textured, Reversible, Double Luxury Broadloom Rugs.

OLSON FACTORY TO YOU!

Hundreds of sizes to 16 ft. seamless, any length

Solid Colors 18th Century | Tweed Blends Floral, Leaf | Early American Oriental Designs

FREE RUG BOOK in Colors

Satisfaction guaranteed. Over 2 million customers. We do not have agents or sell thru stores. Our 75th Year. Chicago New York San Francisco

Mail Coupon or 1c postcard

OLSON RUG CO., K-20, Chicago 41

Mail Catalog of Rugs and Model Rooms Free to:

NAME.....

ADDRESS..... ©ORC

TOWN.....STATE.....

YOU ARE IN DEMAND IF YOU CAN Draw!

If you like to sketch, write for FREE TALENT TEST. Splendid opportunities for trained artists. Find out if you have talent worth developing.

Free

ART INSTRUCTION, INC.
Dept. 8699-1, Minneapolis 15, Minnesota

Send me your FREE Talent Test.

Name..... Age.....

Address.....

City..... Zone.....

County..... State.....

Occupation..... Phone.....

MAKE $100.00

FREE Imprint SAMPLES 50 for $1 up FREE! Bonus Boxes with orders

SELL XMAS CARDS Full or Part Time

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY!

Sell only 100 special Xmas card deals. Your cost only 75c each regardless of quantity ordered at one time! Your PROFIT $1 on each and every deal! Write today for details of complete line. Make More Money with Creative. Costs nothing to try! Feature boxes on approval.

CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc.
45 Warburton Ave., Dept. E-2, Yonkers 2, N. Y.

FOR THE EXPECTANT MOTHER

WRITE FOR FREE CATALOGUE

"Where Movie Mothers-to-be Shop"

Flattering California Styles

ANTICIPATION SHOPS realize you want smartness in maternity fashions — but inexpensiveness too — for you wear them such a short time.

ANTICIPATION SHOPS
343 N. Rodeo Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif., Dept. D-9

Be an ARTIST

LEARN AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME!
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 or more a week. By our practical method we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOOK—"Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training. Low cost—$5 monthly. STATE AGE.
Approved for Veterans
STUDIO 809R, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

Fast Way to MAKE MONEY!

Sell Christmas Cards

It's easy! Just show SIX big NAME-IMPRINT Lines to friends—low as 50 for $1. Make up to 50c on 21-card DeLuxe Box. Also show Secret Pal, Plastics, Eastern Star, Religious, Relative, Gift Wraps, Birthday, Stationery, KIDDY Cards, Books, and Records. Most COMPLETE Line in country. Extra Cash Bonus! WRITE NOW for FREE Imprint Samples and 2 Feature boxes on approval. MIDWEST CARD CO., 415 N. 8th St. Dept. 17-R, St. Louis 1, Mo.

50 for $1 With Name

GET FREE Samples

Relieve misery of ITCH

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

THERE'S MONEY FOR YOU in PLASTICS

No Experience Necessary!

Here's CASH for you . . . easy! Show friends, neighbors amazing laundry-saving tablecloths, aprons, rainwear, babies' needs, etc. Tremendous demand. Sell on sight. BIG PROFITS, full or part time. Write for FREE Outfit.
LORAINE PRODUCTS, Dept. M-180
411 So. Clinton Street Chicago 7, Illinois

Does GARLIC Relieve GAS?

ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the largest selling garlic tablet in the world. For sale at drug stores everywhere. —only 69¢

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

Take This Easy Step To BIG MONEY!

Sell* CHRISTMAS CARDS

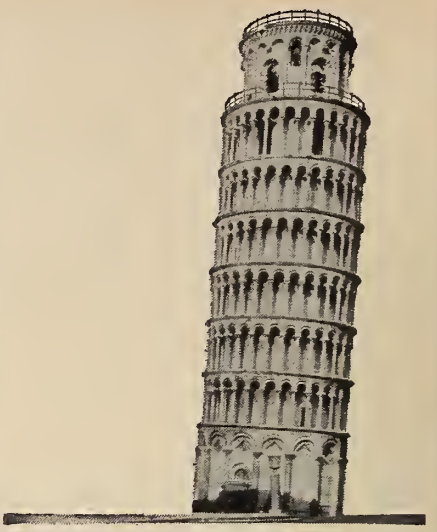
Plastic Cards for Christmas and Everyday. Also lovely EMBOSSED Christmas Cards WITH NAME. Sell themselves at 50 for $1.25, up. Amazing $1 "Southern Beauty" Assortment of 21 Christmas Cards pays you up to 50c! Complete line of fast-sellers. Write for Samples on approval. SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO., 216 South Pauline Street, Dept. C-8, MEMPHIS 4, TENN.

Bravely, but with little honest consolation for failure, many teen-agers say, "We'll try it, and if things don't work out, we can always get a divorce." But Judy Garland had no such attitude when, at 19, she married composer David Rose. They took their vows on July 28, 1941, at which time Judy declared confidently, "This is no ordinary Hollywood marriage. This is the real thing."

When she and Dave separated on February 22, 1943, she looked on things with the more considered judgment of a woman now past 21: "We were happy in the first few months. Then our careers began to conflict." This seemed rather a lame excuse at the time, but now Judy had substituted honesty for wishful dreaming. Now, too, there was a hunger inside she could not deny. She yearned for a husband, her own home life, and children, Two years later, she tried again—this time, she thought, more wisely—with a husband considerably older and more experienced than she.

An understanding, brilliant man, Vincente Minnelli devoted himself to Judy. They were blessed by the arrival of a wonderful daughter. Yet the inevitable parting came again. Meantime, what of Judy herself? Her friends have worried constantly about her. She has suffered several nervous collapses. She has been terribly unhappy, and as much as to any other cause, the reason can be traced to her first mistake in marrying before she had attained complete maturity.

At 18, Deanna Durbin was a year younger than Judy when she married Vaughan Paul. Theirs was a beautiful wedding, attended by hundreds of friends and co-workers, all of whom would have sworn that here was a down-to-earth young couple who could make a go of it. They had everything—money, youth, a mutual interest in movies. The years of happiness seemed to stretch ahead endlessly—but Deanna's marriage collapsed the same year Judy's did. One can speculate on whether or not both of these stars, had they waited until they were 21, might still be happy in their original marriages.



What wrecked Deanna's first marriage? The answer came simply, a few hours later when Deanna had a good cry and poured out her heart to Louella Parsons. There was no doubt about her real heartbreak when she said, "It wasn't Vaughan's fault or mine that we failed to make a go of our marriage. He, too, was spoiled. If I'd known more about romance, I might

HOW TIME FLIES!

From the coast comes word that despite all the hullaballoo about selections for Gone With The Wind, three top spots have been definitely cast. Margaret Sullavan is to play Scarlett O'Hara, Clark Gable, Rhett Butler and Walter Connelly has been chosen for the important part of Scarlett's father.

—Modern Screen November 1937

IT CAN BE DONE ...but don't try it!

Sometimes it's possible to break all the rules—and get away with it.

The famous Tower of Pisa, for instance, has successfully defied both sound engineering practice and the law of gravity for over 800 years.

But for the most of us, most of the time, the rules hold.

That is particularly true when it comes to saving money.

The first rule of successful saving is regularity . . . salting away part of every pay check, month after month.

Once in a blue moon, of course, you'll come across someone who can break that rule and get away with it. But the fact is that most of us cannot.

For most of us, the one and only way to accumulate a decent-size nest egg for the future and for emergencies is through automatic saving.

In all history there's never been an easier, surer, more profitable way to save regularly than the U. S. Savings Bond way.

Those of us on a payroll are eligible to use the wonderful Payroll Savings Plan. The rest of us can use the equally wonderful Bond-A-Month Plan through our local bank.

Use whichever is best for you. But —use one of them!

AUTOMATIC SAVING IS SURE SAVING— U. S. SAVINGS BONDS

Contributed by this magazine in co-operation with the Magazine Publishers of America as a public service.

sweet and hot

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

by leonard feather

FROM THE MOVIES

BEAUTIFUL BLONDE FROM BASHFUL BEND—"Every Time I Meet You" by Perry Como* (Victor); Dick Haymes (Decca); Buddy Clark (Columbia). Title Song by the Modernaires (Columbia); Tex Beneke (Victor).

THE CHAMPION—"Never Be It Said" by Herb Jeffries (Columbia).

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMERTIME—Album by Judy Garland* (MGM).
Four short but cute sides, best of which is the novel Play That Barber Shop Chord.

IT HAPPENS EVERY SPRING—title song by Art Lund* (MGM); Dick Haymes* (Decca).

MGM'S SILVER ANNIVERSARY—album of eight sides (MGM).
A mixed bag from seven different movies, including Lena Horne's Can't Help Loving That Man, the Allyson-Lawford French lesson from Good News, and Jimmy Durante looking for the lost chord.

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER—"My Heart Beats Faster" by Tony Martin* (Victor).

RED, HOT AND BLUE—"Where Are You Now That I Need You" by Jane Harvey* (MGM), Betty Hutton (Capitol). "I Wake Up In The Morning Feeling Fine" by Betty Hutton (Capitol).
Both songs are from Betty's picture, but our vote goes to the sympathetic vocal quality of the Harvey girl (an ex-Benny Goodman vocalist).

YES, SIR, THAT'S MY BABY—"Look At Me" by Buddy Clark* (Columbia); Art Lund (MGM).

JAZZ

ERROLL GARNER—"Love Walked In"* (Savoy); "Love For Sale"* (Dial).

BENNY GOODMAN—"Bedlam" (Capitol).
Everything is bop, except Benny's clarinet, on this wonderful sextet item. The band will be bopping it up in Europe by the time you read this.

WOODY HERMAN—"Early Autumn" (Capitol).
A beautiful piece of mood music by Ralph Burns.

ELLIOT LAWRENCE—"Elevation" *(Columbia).
Surprisingly successful stab at bop by the polite Pennsylvania pianist and his band.

CLASSICAL AND POP

BUDDY CLARK—Songs of Romance* (Columbia). Oscar Levant—Playing Chopin (Columbia).

JAMES MELTON—"Yours Is My Heart Alone"* (Victor).

JANE POWELL—A Date With Jane* (Columbia).
All the above show the great advantage of Columbia's 33-speed records over Victor's awkward 45-speed discs. The Clark, Powell and Levant items have up to 35 minutes of music on one disc; the Melton side is merely another three-minute opus solving nothing but your storage problems—which Columbia does anyway.

not have married the first man I was permitted to go out alone with. . . . That would have saved us unhappiness and a marriage that never should have taken place."

And now came the next inevitable urge that follows a teen-age marriage failure. Continuing the parallel between the lives of Deanna Durbin and Judy Garland, Deanna waited a couple of years and also married a much older man, Felix Jackson. Another highly-respected Hollywood producer, against whom there can be no criticism for what happened, Mr. Jackson seemed to bring to Deanna's life the stability she needed. However, like Judy, she reluctantly admitted another failure last year. Like Judy, she was famous and wealthy, but nervous, distraught and terribly unhappy.

Very few teen-agers are willing to face the facts after they have made their mistake. Not so with intelligent, frank and beautiful Barbara Lawrence. Several years younger than Judy and Deanna, she followed in their footsteps romantically—but she is determined not to make another mistake.

In a statement to MODERN SCREEN she says, "I eloped with John Fontaine without the consent of my mother. She was married in her teens and knew what in all probability would happen. I didn't listen—but now I can warn any girl that she is in grave danger of making a mistake she will regret for a long time if she marries before she's 21. When you reach that age you have a better chance of knowing what you really want. Before 21 you act on your hunches, rather than knowledge and experience. Of course, there are successful teen-age marriages, and there will be many more. Usually, though, you'll find them in communities in which values are constant—where there is not, as there is in Hollywood, so much emphasis on the importance of money and glamor."

foresight and hindsight . . .

That is a really sensible analysis for a girl of 19 to make. Isn't it too bad she couldn't have reached that conclusion before she married? If she had, perhaps she wouldn't have sought divorce less than a year later.

At this point, the average teen-ager may ask in protest, "Won't adults ever realize that every case is individual; that the chances for marital mistakes are equally as strong with adults? Look at all the marriage flops of people who marry in their middle twenties!"

True—but only half true. Anyone of adult stature is more able than a teen-ager to recover balance in case of a divorce, and when statistics are quoted to prove how many happy marriages there are in Hollywood, nine out of 10 of them concern couples who married only after considerable mature thought.

Today, Elizabeth Taylor is engaged to a fine young man, William Pawley, Jr. Will their marriage be a success? There is everything here to indicate a sound marriage—except Elizabeth's age.

Perhaps the breathtakingly-beautiful Liz could profitably examine the record of Janet Leigh, who works on the same movie lot. Janet came to Hollywood with her young husband, Stanley Reames, a Navy veteran who wanted to be an orchestra leader. They pawned everything they possessed to get started. Temporarily, his career was stopped short by the record ban and conditions of the times. Then Janet was accidentally discovered by Norma Shearer and was signed for movies.

At that time, Janet gave this reporter an inspiring story of her marriage to Reames. Even a mind trained to a dubious attitude toward all movie starlets who leather loafer luxury AT A bargain!

Your favorite moccasin — done just as you like it. Smart on your feet, easy on the eyes, the classic sewn loafer of rich mellow leather in hand-rubbed antique brown or red Sizes 5½ to 9 narrow (AA, A), 3½ to 10 medium (B, C). Send check or money order and we'll pay postage.

$3.49

ORDER BY MAIL

RALLE, DEPT. 9, HAVERHILL, MASS
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ZONE____STATE____
SIZE_____ COLOR_____ PRS.__
☐ Check or Money Order ☐ C.O.D.
Please send catalog ☐

Rallé © HAVERHILL, MASSACHUSETTS

FREE PERSONAL TRIAL
GLOVER'S 3-Way Medicinal Treatment for your scalp and hair

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

GUARD YOUR SCALP AS YOU GUARD YOUR COMPLEXION

You do something instantly if blemishes, clogged pores, or flaky crusts appear on your face. YOUR SCALP IS SKIN, too! Dandruff, flaky crusts, excessive falling hair can be your warning that you are neglecting your scalp. Neglected scalp invites skin trouble and loss-of hair. Yet, neglect is unnecessary! You have a time-tested MEDICINAL SCALP TREATMENT to help you.

SEND FOR FREE KIT CONTAINING—

Glover's Mange Medicine—the MEDICINAL compound for flaky, scaly dandruff and excessive falling hair.
Glo-Ver Shampoo—contains no hair-drying detergents—no free alkali—no alcohol. Imparts natural softness.
Glover's Imperial Hair Dress—non-alcoholic and ANTISEPTIC. Kills Dandruff Germs* on contact. *Pityrosporum ovale—recognized by many scientists as a cause of infectious dandruff. Conditions hair and scalp.
Free Booklet by eminent research authority on scalp health and hair beauty, sent you in plain wrapper.

MAIL COUPON NOW

GLOVER'S, 101 W. 31st St., Dept. 859, New York 1, N.Y.
Send "Complete Trial Application" in three hermetically-sealed bottles with informative booklet, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I enclose 10¢.
NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY..... STATE.....

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE!)
MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Use DERMOIL
Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.
Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 2909, Detroit 27, Michigan.
SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE
©1935 LAKE LAB

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW AND SENSATIONAL IN CHRISTMAS CARDS
MAKE Extra MONEY FAST
Gorgeous Satin Velour & Plastic Show Rich New Cards never before offered. Amazing Value! Gets Easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% Cash Profit. FREE SAMPLES of Gorgeous Christmas Cards With Name 50 for $1, Imprinted Stationery, Floral Charmettes, Napkins. 50 other assortments 60c to $1.25. Samples on approval. Write today for Samples and money-making facts.
50 FOR $1 With Name
PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 95-L, St. Louis 3, Mo.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER
TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH
ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS
SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET
NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU
MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-M, Providence 15, R.I.

CORNS also Calluses. Quick, easy, and economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢ and 50¢. Buy Mosco at your druggist.
REMOVED BY MOSCO
Your money refunded if not satisfied. The Moss Company, Rochester, N.Y.

Zircons
Alexandrites - Rubies - others.
Direct importation Guarantees- best quality - lowest prices.
3 Sparkling, diamond-like, polished Zircons, over 2 carats $4.00 Catalog 10¢
Dept. SMS Imhusex Box 232 White Plains, N.Y.

YOU'LL FIND BIG MONEY SELLING CHRISTMAS CARDS
It's like finding gold wheo you sell these smart Christmas Greetings! Just showing FREE Samples of Name-Imprinted Folders at $0 for $1 up, brings you sensational earnings! New PLASTIC CHRISTMAS ASSORTMENTS. Extra profits from Stationery and complete line. Easy plan for churches, clubs, individuals. Get Assortment on approval. FREE Imprints. COLONIAL STUDIOS, INC. 642 S. Summer Street. Dept. P-39, Holyoke, Mass.
50 for $1 WITH NAME

Never-Tel
LIQUID PERFUMED DEODORANT
Dancing, walking, working, playing . . . there's no better way to fresh, sweet underorm dointiness thon NEVER-TEL. It combines a really dependable deodorant and finely-scented, delicate perfume. Gives twa-way protection that lasts far longer—yet is harmless—does not stop perspiration or injure clothing or skin. At drug counters, or write for generous FREE SAMPLE bottle, to marry at 18, succumbed to Janet's charm and her earnest conviction that both she and her husband had their feet on the ground.
NEVER-TEL—Dept. 9A, Kansas City 6, Mo.

A few months later, on July 20, 1948, Janet took the stand in divorce court. She blamed their youth and made the usual pat references to his being "cruel and sullen."

What happened here?

To people in Hollywood it was an ancient tale. Janet was being catapulted into important pictures and big money. At first she wanted to have her husband with her on sets. Then it became the old story of the man feeling unimportant, relegated to the background. Arguments over late working hours and the easy, affectionate attitude that is typical of theatrical people working together, grew intolerable. Stanley was confidentially told that it would be better if he didn't visit his wife so often. His hurt and bitterness were understandable. So, too, was the attitude of his wife.

Will Elizabeth Taylor be able to survive similar experiences?

When Ava Gardner married Mickey Rooney at the age of 19, she was a starlet, but she had very little interest in her career. She was willing just to be the Mick's wife. They were together from January 10, 1942, to September 14, 1943, at which time she gave up. In place of the reconciliation statement of a few months before—"I couldn't get along without Mickey and he couldn't get along without me"—Ava said, "He just wasn't meant for marriage."

Now Ava is 26. People wonder why she doesn't marry Howard Duff, with whom she seems so obviously in love. She doesn't marry because one more attempt with Artie Shaw turned into failure, and she says that if she marries again it will be only after she has known the man a long time.

Just how iron-bound is the rule that if a girl marries in her teens and divorces she seems barred forever from finding true happiness with another man? There must be exceptions and there are. Sent to cover the divorce of Betty Grable from Jackie Coogan back in July of 1939, this reporter talked to a very confused and unhappy girl.

out of unhappiness . . .

"It's not the money," Betty said, referring to the court action which Jackie had filed against his mother and stepfather, claiming he was penniless. "I was just out of my teens when we married, and we've been fairly happy together. We've laughed over the fact that after all the millions he earned, all Jackie had left was an allowance of $6.25 a week and had to hock his car to pay our rent. No, it's all tied up with the fact that Jackie is almost out of pictures now. I'm not doing too well at Paramount and we figure we'd be better off if we split up."

Miraculously, out of Betty's tears soon came a rainbow. She went to 20th Century-Fox, soared to stardom, married bandleader Harry James, and today she has the happiest of homes and children.

So, too, do Lana Turner and Rita Hayworth seem to have come through their teen-age mistakes unscathed. Yet, if they escape the almost certain penalty of their teen-age misjudgments and live happily after with their current husbands, it will be considered by many little short of a miracle.

One thing can be said of today's army of young people under 20: They may be impetuous, but they're no fools. Give them the cold facts, such as just recorded here, then present an honest summation by one of their number who is obviously making good with her own marriage, and the rest may be left up to their common sense.

"Two, please!"

So, at this point, we turn the problem of teen-age marriage over to Wanda Hendrix, recently married to Audie Murphy. Says Wanda:

"I'm glad I waited until I was 20 before I married Audie. We first met while I was still 17. I had just turned 18 when he proposed, and of course I dreamed of eloping. We had been vacationing in the High Sierras with my parents along for chaperones when he asked me, one evening, to go for a walk. We strolled along a path through the high trees. He popped the question and I said yes. Then, many times in the following months, we seriously and frankly discussed the advisability of my marrying so young. I told him that from the experiences of others I'd feel so much more sure of myself if we waited until I was out of my teens.

"He agreed it would be sensible to wait. For there was also the matter of his career. I seemed reasonably sure of mine, but his was still quite indefinite. I think the important thing that most people forget, no matter what their business happens to be, is that a man has a great deal of pride. If he didn't, a girl wouldn't want him. If they marry before he's reasonably sure of the road he is to take, there's a great danger: If he doesn't do well enough to give the girl he loves the home he wants her to have, he'll soon encounter a sense of failure and a girl in her teens usually doesn't have the patience or understanding to buoy up his courage and lift him out of his temporary despair.

"Before long, he begins to blame her, feeling that if she had insisted that they wait until they were more secure they wouldn't be having their problems. He suspects that whether she says so or not she thinks she chose the wrong man, and becomes a little ashamed. Before long, the undercurrents of immature reasoning break into a torrent of discontent.

"On the other hand, it is true that some of us grow up sooner than others. Mona Freeman is a perfect example of a girl who could marry in her teens and be assured of happiness. She is both a wonderful actress and a perfect home girl, while her husband, Pat Nerney, is a successful business man. Their parents are friends, and the two of them survived Pat's absence in Navy service.

"Should a girl marry in her teens? My answer is—think about it a long time before you do, and if you think long enough you'll soon be 20. By that time you won't even have to ask the question." THE END

EARN CASH NOW Sell 50 CHRISTMAS CARDS With Name

Make big money same day you get our FREE Samples of NAME-IMPRINTED Christmas Cards, low as 50 for $1.00, and Deluxe. 6 big lines with name. 29 Box Assortments of Christmas and Everyday Cards, Gift Wraps, Notes, etc. You make up to 50c on $1 easy sale. No experience needed. Start by showing friends. Send for FREE samples now. Write today!

$1

Also 29 Fast Selling Box Assortments

WRITE FOR FREE SAMPLES

GENERAL CARD CO., Dept. 616, 1300 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 7, Ill.

FOR HOME PERMANENTS!

And all your cosmetic uses. Dispenses clean cotton as you need it — special top holds wave lotion. New, practical, inexpensive.

COTTON PICKER ®
Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton

A CURITY Product

BAUER & BLACK Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

SHORTHAND in 6 Weeks at Home

Famous Speedwriting system. No signs; no symbols; no machines; uses ABC's. Easy to learn; easy to write and transcribe. Low cost. 100,000 taught by mail. For business and Civil Service. Also typing. 26th year. Write for free booklet to:

Speedwriting
Dept. 809-9, 55 W. 42 St., New York 18 ®

Hedda Hopper

tells

why stars get mad

in the october

modern screen

on sale sept. 9

READ IT!

AMAZING NEWS! You Make BIG MONEY Showing New Christmas Cards by PHILLIPS

Just call on folks you know, show samples. Box of 21 Christmas Folders for only $1 sells on sight. You keep up to 50c on every box! Big line Religious, Gift Wraps, Birthday, many more Christmas and Year 'Round money-makers. Children's Book, Date Book, others. Also Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards, 50 for $1.25 and up. FREE Imprint Samples, 21 Card Box on approval. Write TODAY!

50 for $1.25 With Name

PHILLIPS CARD CO., 778 Hunt St., Newton, Mass.

BE A Nurse LEARN AT HOME

Practical nurses are needed in every community... doctors rely on them... patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 50th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 239, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____

HE'S THE BOSS

(Continued from page 63)

The constructive approach, you'll notice —and I fall for it every time. Off come the wedgies. I compromise by wearing flat heels around the house. My hats languish on their stands, because John thinks hair is prettier than the prettiest hat. As for make-up, it's become a running gag.

"You don't need it," he says.

"Just lipstick, then," I concede. But I add a little rouge

"Why?" asks my husband.

"Oh, John—a woman feels undressed without a bit of rouge." Five minutes later I'm toning it down. There'll be girls at the party, well and subtly made up, and John'll think they look fine. But that's different. They're not his wife. He didn't have to watch them putting it on. There's no law that says he's bound to watch me, either. He just does. .

It's not a question of imposing his ways on me. John's much too civilized and I'm much too spirited for that. But somehow when I'm defeated in one of our little domestic contests, I don't feel as though I've lost at all. . . Well, it' too deep for me. Maybe psychologist could explain it.

small but nice . .

The house Mr. Lund bosses is a small hillside job with two bedrooms and a one-car garage. One medium-sized car, that is. The doors wouldn't close on a big car.

It's not the house of all houses we'd have chosen if there'd been much choice. We just grabbed what we could.

It was our first house, which was reason enough for me to love it. John took a less emotional viewpoint. "It's adequate, and who are we to ask more?" The only more I've ever heard him ask for is elbow room. "Something with a little land around it. So I can sneeze without having the neighbors say Gesundheit."

I make soothing noises like, "Maybe . eventually. . . "

Still, a small house does have its advantages. Here I can revel in domesticity —which may pall one of these days, but so far it hasn't. I find it no chore to cook and keep house for two, with a cleaning woman and a part-time gardener to keep the dust inside and the weeds outside at bay. Only thing about the whole set-up that bothers me is that it bothers John.

"Why don't you get more help?" he'll ask. "Then you'd have more free time."

"For what? I'd rather cut a pattern or dream up a recipe any day than play bridge. With my system, full-time servants would be in the way. Besides, the house is too small."

"Then we'll get a bigger house."

And I sing the old refrain: "Well, maybe . . . eventually. "

I wasn't always so housewifely. It amounts, in fact, to a complete reversal of form. At school I failed to shine in domestic science, and at home I was discouraged from anything more ambitious than an occasional batch of chocolate walnut fudge. But I've turned into a pretty fair cook, if I do say so (and John says so!). As for sewing. . . .

Well, not too long ago I was leafing through a magazine when my eye was caught by a really stunning dress. It was love at first sight. I dashed out to find one like it. If you've ever dashed out on a similar errand, you know what happens. Mostly there's no such dress. If by some miracle there is, then the color's all wrong or they've got it in every size but yours. After two days of stalking the shops, I gave up. Temporarily. Because out of a clear blue sky an idea hit me. Maybe I could Give your hair that heavenly Golden Look!

• Why be just "blonde" when you can be a glorious "golden blonde" . . . simply by using Marchand's Golden Hair Wash!

So many lovely women trust Golden Hair Wash to make their hair radiantly, beautifully blonde and keep it that way!

Or if you're brunette or redhead, discover how wonderful Marchand's is for adding flattering golden highlights.

Whether you want to lighten your hair or add a golden gleam, Marchand's Golden Hair Wash gives the effect you want. Not a dye, not an expensive 'treatment'

P. S.

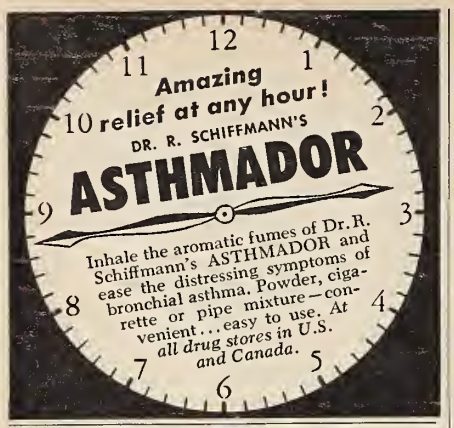
This Summer, use Golden Hair Wash to lighten unsightly arm and leg hair. You'll look more alluring in your play clothes!

In 60¢ and 90¢ sizes PLUS TAX

AMAZING We guarantee you $50.00 for selling 100 boxes 21 for $1 Xmas cards; also 50 and 25 for $1 with name on; also Napkins and Stationery. No experience needed. Costs nothing to try. Samples and Selling Plan on approval.

MERIT
370 Plane St. Dept. G Newark, N. J.

PAIN
of headache, neuritis and neuralgia



RELIEVED
incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend —

ANACIN ®

Here's why

Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients. Get Anacin Tablets today.

Foot Relief

Instant-Acting, Soothing, Cushioning Foot Plaster

To instantly relieve painful corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, tender spots, burning on bottom of feet—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex. You cut this soothing, cushioning, flesh color, superior moleskin to any size or shape. At Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ stores.

Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

MAKE $27.50 CASH . . .

Sell New PLASTIC Christmas Cards

Easiest money you ever made. Show gorgeous Christmas PLASTIC folders, Box Assortment of 15 for $1.25. Exciting fast sellers — you make up to 55c per box. Also Name Imprinted Christmas cards, 50 for $1 and up. Over 50 other Christmas and Everyday assortments in complete line. Get FREE Personal Samples. Assortments on approval.

CHAS. C. SCHWER CO., Dept. 610, Westfield, Mass.

Send for FREE Name Samples

Easy as A-B-C

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS QUICK MONEY-SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you may become an excellent musician. Mail coupon for our Illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1449 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y.10, N.Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1449 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have You Instrument?.....

Name..... (Please Print)

Address.....

make that dress myself. My mother had been a designer. There was just a chance I'd inherited some of her flair. . . .

So John came home to find me surrounded by patterns, material and all the paraphernalia of the seamstress. His face took on that "for heaven's sake, now what?" expression.

"Thought I'd make myself a dress," I explained.

"If you want a dress, why not buy one?"

I gave my reasons. He found them inadequate. Trying to compete with experts, said John, was silly. Waste of time and effort, and when you got through, what did you have?

"This," I said, opening the magazine. "Maybe."

He smiled tolerantly. "If it amuses you, go right ahead."

"Oh, thank you, Master," I replied.

After which, the sight of me plying my needle would prompt him to mutter things about killing your own meat and weaving your own wool. Once, with what I considered pretty feeble humor, he suggested that we buy a cow. "So much simpler than going all the way to the corner store for a pound of butter!"

I sewed on, regardless. When the finished product was unveiled, he stopped muttering. Offered no comment one way or the other, but he didn't have to. The man was plainly impressed, and that was good enough for me.

happy designing . . .

A week later I sat in my little knotty pine sewing room, wrestling with a knotty little problem. Across the hall John was reading, as usual. (I ought to explain that my husband has a mania for printers' ink. If there's nothing else available, he'll read the labels on the canned goods.) As I sat there pondering, he called out: "What's your trouble?"

I answered absently. "Can't decide what to do with this green satin I bought."

He dropped his book, sauntered over and examined the stuff with a judicial air. "Er—wouldn't it make a nice evening gown? You know—kind of a strapless. . . ." He waved his hands around, then made it perfectly clear by adding brightly, "You know—no straps."

I looked at him wide-eyed. The scoffer turned collaborator! I did make "kind of a strapless" and it turned out pretty well.

As of now, I make nearly all my own dresses, with my husband cheering me on from the sidelines. He'll even discourse learnedly about gores and peplums, though he wouldn't know one from the other if they both came over and sat in his lap.

I wish John would take half as much interest in his own clothes as he does in mine. Coat-hangers he regards as some kind of crazy fad that won't last the year out. Wherever he takes his things off, that's where they lie. At first I tried to reform him.

"John, it's just as easy to hang them up."

He was so pleasant about it. "Yes, dear, of course—as soon as I finish this chapter."

It's a mighty long chapter. He hasn't finished it yet. But it doesn't matter now. Because a vision revealed to me the perfect way of saving wear and tear on myself, on John and the clothes. I pick them up.

Only I don't touch his notes or his barbells. They're in the other bedroom, which he uses as a study. The notes are for an article he promised to write for a magazine three years ago. The magazine gave up hope long since. Not John. Those notes are sacred. Move them a millimeter and he knows it. The bar-bells have been around for only two years. To my certain knowledge, he's never lifted them an inch from the floor. Maybe just looking at them makes him feel strong. On me they have the opposite effect. I trip over them about seven times a week.

"John, old boy, why not put them in the garage?"

"But I'm going to start using them any day now!"

Meantime, it's become a kind of fascinating game. Whose neck gets broken before that day arrives?

People sometimes ask me, "How does John feel, now that he's a solidly established star?"

One thing I can tell them: He doesn't feel solidly established. He feels that a film career is built on sand. As I think I mentioned earlier, he a realist. And somewhere along the way he developed an ironical sense of humor that allows him to watch from the sidelines even while he's in the midst of the game itself.

To his way of thinking, the movies are such an up-and-down business that failure and success are part of the same pattern. If you hit, it's mostly luck, and who can say how long the luck will last?

"My luck," he'll tell you, "has been that Brackett and Wilder put me in A Foreign Affair—why, I don't know. Maybe as a challenge, maybe to see what they could do with a guy who hadn't fared so well in other films."

Stardom doesn't impress him much—as you may have gathered! When he played on Broadway, he got a taste of what he calls notoriety—enough of it, says John, to satisfy any reasonable man. There is, he'll admit, a certain commercial value attached to star billing. But as for the fuss and feathers that go with it—well, some of it's pleasant, some unpleasant, and all of it's unimportant.

Being human, he naturally prefers good luck to bad. But it doesn't make him exactly jump for joy. He's too conscious of what's on the other side of the medal. . . .

I was casting about for some way to bring this rambling essay to a close, and finally appealed to my husband.

"You used to write gags," I said. "Can't you think of something funny as a punchline?"

"We-ell, let's see," said John. "I know! Just repeat 'he's the boss.' That's the funniest gag I ever heard in my life."

All right. He's the boss.

(Some line, huh, John?)

THE END

critic's corner

WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

There was a time when Preston Sturges' name in a credit sheet meant wit and originality. There was a time when his films, written and directed and produced by one man, had a unique quality, a gay, good-humored and still a pointed sting. The Beautiful Blonde From Bashful Bend must be known as a Betty Grable picture rather than a Preston Sturges comedy. The sting is gone. So is the fun. So is the wit.

Eileen Creelman
N. Y. Sun

Though this goofey photoplay will win no awards, it's loaded with chuckles. The fine, big cast helps by getting into the silly spirit of things. If you want belly laughs and don't care how the entertainers stoop for them. The Beautiful Blonde is your prescription.

Lee Mortimer
N. Y. Daily Mirror

a new radio hit— modern romances on the air!

People are taking "MODERN ROMANCES" to their hearts . . . Right from its first week on the air, "MODERN ROMANCES" has been a favorite with critics and listeners everywhere. Like Modern Romances magazine, on which it is based, each story is about real people in situations you yourself may face. And each story is told with a frankness that may startle you. Treat yourself to this exciting new radio show—

Tune in "Modern Romances"
every weekday
Mon. thru Sat. on the
American Broadcasting Co.
ABC NETWORK
see your newspaper
for local time

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 19)

TAKE ONE FALSE STEP

Cast: William Powell, Shelley Winters, Marsha Hunt, James Gleason, Dorothy Hart, Jess Barker
Universal-International

Take One False Step is unusual. It's sort of a comedy, sort of a melodrama, sort of a mystery, and the dialogue is witty and intelligent. William Powell, a respectable college professor, comes to the big city to see some men about some plans for a new university. His wife, Dorothy Hart, stays home. William's living at a hotel when he meets Shelley Winters, a girl who had a crush on him back in the middle of the war. He explains to her gently that the war's over, but she still wants to play. She drinks too much, and she's married to Jess Barker, whom she doesn't like— "He's not a nice man," she says wistfully—and she longs for the old days. "I'm the only person in the world who's still in a state of emergency," she explains. Powell's sorry for her, but he thinks she's a little nuts, and he doesn't want to get mixed up with her. She takes his scarf when she says goodbye (she always liked the way his shaving lotion smelled) and next morning he reads that she's disappeared. The police are sure she's been murdered. Her assailant left a bloody scarf behind. What Shelley, herself, left behind is a diary in which William figures prominently, and William wants to get to it before the police do. He can see the end of his honorable career, his happy home life—his life, in fact—looming before him. There are a lot more characters in this picture; you meet a crook Shelley went around with, a couple of eccentric doctors, a barking, biting dog, several university professors, a couple of marvelously funny detectives (Jimmy Gleason's one of them), and Marsha Hunt. Marsha has an always-a-bridesmaid-never-a-bride part here. She's William's pal, and she sticks by him—and his wife—to the end.

Take One False Step: College professor Bill Powell meets up with his past, Shelley Winters. The result: Comedy, mystery, and melodrama.

Lovely NAILS in a FLASH... with NU-NAILS

ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS and QUICK-DRYING GLUE

Cover short, broken, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy with our amazing new quick-drying glue. Can be worn any length . . . polished any shade. Help overcome nail-biting habit. Set of ten ... only 25c. At all dime stores.

ONLY 25¢ SET OF TEN

NU-NAILS CO., Dept. 15-L
5251 W. Harrison, Chicago44

QUICK! EASY! CASH FOR YOU SELL Distinctive NEW CHRISTMAS CARDS INCLUDING NEWEST PLASTICS

Amazing variety! Profits to 100% Show novel Plastic, 3-dimension "Stage Set," Metallic Christmas Carol cards. Deluxe Gift Wraps, Animated Books, Napkins, Table settings. 8 special money-saving offers Bonus. Write for Feature samples on approval and FREE SAMPLES 4 different Name Imprinted Christmas Card lines Floral and Personal Stationery.

ELMIRA GREETING CARD CO., Dept. MB-141, Elmira, N.Y.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that one can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate. 25c and 50c at druggists. . . . If your druggist hasn't it, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.
© 1. P. Inc.
KLUTCH CO., Box 4987-I, ELMIRA, N. Y.

EASY EXTRA MONEY Sell New CHRISTMAS CARDS From Sunny California

Show friends, sensational 21-Card $1 Christmas Assortment with Patented Television Card. Sells like wild fire! Up to 100% profit. 7 Super Name-Imprinted lines, 50 for $1, up. New Plastic Christmas Cards, many other money-makers. Send for FREE SAMPLES.
IDEAL CARD CO., DEPT. 808, 165 N. Hill Ave., PASADENA 4, CALIF.
FREE SAMPLES—WRITE TODAY!

MAKE MONEY SELL DRESSES FROM NEW YORK

Specially Priced $5.95 to $19.95

5th Ave., N. Y. firm desires women to sell Dresses, Suits, Lingerie. As seen in "Vogue", "Mademoiselle". Featuring the New York Look. Good commissions. Write for sample Book.
MODERN MANNER, 260 Fifth Ave., Dept. D-9, New York

NEW CHRISTMAS CARD MONEY MAKERS

LOOK! 10 DAY "NO-RISK" FREE EXAMINATION OFFER

Fascinating new type Plastic, Metallic, 3-Dimensional Christmas Card Assortments, Gift Wrappings, Special Gift Items, Floral and Personal Stationery. Send at once for Free 48-page catalog, feature samples on approval for 10-day Free inspection and Free Name-Imprinted Christmas Card Sample Portfolios. Special offers Cash bonus. It's easy! It's fun!

PROFITS TO 100%

Free Samples 50 for $1.00 Name Imprinted Christmas Cards

NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS, North Abington 75, Mass.

AMAZING CREAM REMOVES UNSIGHTLY HAIR QUICKLY, SAFELY

Acts Below "Razor Line" Without Cutting or Scraping Legs

The modern way to remove ugly hair from your legs is with Neet® Cream Hair Remover. It works deeper than a razor, below the surface of the skin. Safer too from razor cuts and scratches. Neet leaves tender skin soft and smooth, free from razor stubble. Just apply Neet like any cream, then rinse off and hair disappears like magic.

THE GREAT GATSBY

Cast: Alan Ladd, Betty Field, Barry Sullivan, Macdonald Carey, Ruth Hussey, Howard Da Silva, Shelley Winters.
Paramount

Scott Fitzgerald's Jay Gatsby is brought to life by Paramount, with Alan Ladd starring. Gatsby, he was a simple man. He'd been a poor boy, he'd fallen in love with a society girl named Daisy (Betty Field), he'd wanted to be the sort of wealthy, cultured person he felt she deserved. He went to war, came out a major, discovered Daisy'd married, did some bootlegging, piled up a fortune. He bought an estate across the lake from Daisy's exclusive home, filled it with antiques, stocked his library with Shakespeare, imported his shirts from Bond Street. All for Daisy. Then he went after her. To Gatsby, it didn't matter that Daisy's child was four years old, that her husband was both rich and blue-blooded. Gatsby thought you could begin again. Daisy wasn't as simple as Gatsby. She was soft, she was sweet, and she was a coward. She never knew quite how to cope. Her husband wasn't faithful, and she used to say she hoped her child would grow up to be a beautiful little fool, because that was the best thing that could happen to a girl. And she loved Gatsby. "Tell me what to do," she says to Gatsby, finally. "Sometimes I'm frightfully clever, but I'm not very intelligent." For a while, it looks as though Gatsby will triumph, through sheer earnestness, but there's an accident. Daisy's driving Gatsby's car, and she kills a woman, and Gatsby takes the blame. The dead woman's husband shoots him. There's the ending, neat and pitiful. Gatsby's dedicated life leading to his inevitable death. Daisy's weakness leading to her inevitable life. She was a product of her time and her class. She could neither escape, nor, having escaped, be happy. The cast is good, but Betty Field turns in a great performance. She understands Daisy.

The Great Gatsby: Alan Ladd and Betty Field confront Betty's husband, played by Barry Sullivan. Ladd wants her to go away with him.

ONCE MORE, MY DARLING

Cast: Robert Montgomery, Ann Blyth, Jane Cowl, Taylor Holmes
Universal-International

Robert Montgomery's having a fling at being a movie actor, despite his lawyer-mother's objections. Mother (Jane Cowl) wants him to practice law, too. And as if he hasn't got enough trouble, the Army (he's a reserve officer) recalls him to duty. Army wants him to track down a crook. This crook stole valuable jewels from occupied Germany, but he fell in love with debutante Ann Blyth, and made her a gift of some of them. Army knows this because Ann posed for a perfume endorsement wearing one of the pendants. Montgomery's instructions are to romance Ann, get his and her picture in the papers, thus smoking the jealous crook out of hiding. (Crook's left town, and nobody's been able to pick up his trail.) Robert sets out to fascinate Ann, which isn't hard. She cares for him passionately the minute she lays eyes on him. He has trouble protecting himself, since she takes to running after him in her pajamas. He thinks she's very pretty, but she smells vile, because the people for whom she did the perfume ad gave her gallons of their product and she practically swims in it. (Other diners hold their noses when she enters a restaurant.) Montgomery explains that he doesn't want to appear priggish, but that if he gives in to her too easily, he may find himself giving in to some other young girl the same way, and she wouldn't like that, would she? Ann, however, has the most honorable intentions. She wants to marry him. He's in a fix, and not even his commanding officer will help him. "Fine," that cold-blooded official says. "Elope—that'll bring the crook out of his hole. He's not going to let you marry his girl. And by the way, have you got a gun?" That's how this movie goes. Farce and more farce, highly enjoyable.

also showing . . .

capsule criticism of films previously reviewed

THE BARKLEYS OF BROADWAY (MGM)—This reunion of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire is a happy event in all respects. Their dancing is as wonderful as ever, the songs and dialogue bright, the Technicolor production handsome. With Oscar Levant and Billie Burke.

THE BEAUTIFUL BLONDE FROM BASHFUL BEND (20th-Fox)—Betty Grable as a straight-shooting gal of the Wild West who accidentally becomes a schoolmarm. Some of the hilarity isn't very hilarious, but a number of laughs do develop in the course of this cock-eyed Preston Sturges epic. With Rudy Vallee, Cesar Romero and Olga San Juan.

EDWARD, MY SON (MGM)—Spencer Tracy, driven by ambition for his son, becomes one of the most powerful men in England by tossing ethics out the window. A solid, absorbing drama, excellently acted. With Deborah Kerr, Ian Hunter and Leueen MacGrath.

THE FORBIDDEN STREET (20th-Fox) — Maureen O'Hara, a respectable girl of the Victorian era, goes to live in the slums with the no-account artist she's married. She has a bad time until he dies and a poor but ambitious youth finds her. Dana Andrews takes both men's roles. Slow-paced, but intelligently performed.

THE FOUNTAINHEAD (Warners)—Gary Cooper as a great architect whose insistence on rugged individuality knows no bounds and Patricia Neal as a rich girl who thinks he's dandy, anyway. With Raymond Massey, Kent Smith, Robert Douglas and Henry Hull.

THE GIRL FROM JONES BEACH (Warners)—A very light but very pleasant comedy in which artist Ronald Reagan tried to get schoolteacher Virginia Mayo to be his model. With Eddie Bracken and Dona Drake.

THE GREAT DAN PATCH (U.A.)—Dan Patch, who flourished before the days of motor cars, was the greatest trotting horse who ever lived. Seems he was also involved in human romances, and that's stressed here. A right charming movie, with Gail Russell, Dennis O'Keefe, Henry Hull and John Hoyt—none of whom, incidentally, plays Dan Patch.

THE GREAT SINNER (MGM)—Another movie that shows you what happens when gambling gets in the blood. This one's a big, expensive-looking affair that takes place in a fashionable European resort in the 1860's. The big, expensive-looking cast includes Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Walter Huston, Melvyn Douglas. Ethel Barrymore and Frank Morgan. Swell entertainment.

HOME OF THE BRAVE (U.A.)—A potent study of racial discrimination, the case in point being the experiences of a young Negro soldier in a Pacific battle area of World War II. James Edwards, as the Negro, is splendid, and Douglas Dick, Steve Brodie, Frank Lovejoy, Lloyd Bridges and Jeff Corey also contribute solidly to this extraordinarily exciting and moving film.

ILLEGAL ENTRY (Univ.-Int.)—Howard Duff, an Immigration Service inspector, joins a gang of alien-smuggling mobsters to get the evidence. Lots of thrills here. With George Brent, Marta Toren, Paul Stewart and Gar Moore.

INTERFERENCE (RKO)—Victor Mature as a star pro football player and Lizabeth Scott as his interior-decorator wife whose selfishness almost ruins him. Lucille Ball is Vic's ever-loving secretary. A well-done drama, with Sonny Tufts and Lloyd Nolan.

IT HAPPENS EVERY SPRING (20th-Fox)—Chemistry professor Ray Milland happens on a mixture that causes baseballs to shy away from bats, and becomes a great baseball pitcher. Jean Peters is his girl and Paul Douglas his baseball buddy. A delightful comedy indeed.

THE LADY GAMBLES (Univ.-Int.)—Barbara Stanwyck winds up in the gutter on account of how she loves those games of chance. Barbara gives her role the dramatic works, but nonetheless the picture is never very convincing. With Robert Preston, Stephen McNally, Edith Barrett and John Hoyt.

LUST FOR GOLD (Columbia)—A fast, exciting, violent Western—something about a lost gold mine. With Glenn Ford, Ida Lupino, Gig Young and Will Geer.

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER (MGM)—Esther Williams, Red Skelton, Betty Garrett, Ricardo Montalban and Keenan Wynn in one of those large Technicolor musicals that Metro does so satisfactorily. That wonderful song, "Baby, It's Cold Outside," is in this.

SAND (20th-Fox)—Mark Stevens as the owner of a prize horse who escapes and goes wild. Coleen Gray helps him bring him back despite numerous violent complications. With Rory Calhoun and Charlie Grapewin. Entertaining.

SORROWFUL JONES (Para.)—Bob Hope as a Broadway bookie who becomes the guardian of five-year-old Mary Jane Saunders. A very successful remake of the famous Little Miss Marker. Hope is wonderful, little Saunders is awfully cute, the whole thing's something you'll love. With Lucille Ball, William Demarest and Bruce Cabot.

STAMPEDE (Allied Artists)—Cattlemen versus settlers in this Western. Yes, it's exciting and fast-moving and everything. With Rod Cameron, Gale Storm, Johnny Mack Brown.

Is your make-up fair to your EYES?

You use lipstick, of course—and for that very reason your eyes need added allure. Perhaps you've never realized (until just this moment) that neglected eyes appear pale and drab in contrast with made-up lips. Now see how easily Maybelline glorifies the eyes and restores color balance.

With a few simple brush strokes of Maybelline Mascara, lashes look naturally darker, longer and more luxuriant. The soft, smooth Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil accents brows gracefully, making them much more expressive.

What a thrilling difference! With completely flattering make-up, your entire face radiates charm! So never neglect to accent your eyes. Add Maybelline to your beauty routine and look your loveliest always.

MAYBELLINE CAKE MASCARA in beautiful gold-tone metal vanity, $1. Refills, 50c. Black, Brown, Blue. (Also in 25c and 10c sizes.)

MAYBELLINE CREAM MASCARA (applied without water) comes in handy leatherette case, $1 (Also in 25c and 10c sizes.) Shades: Black, Brown, Blue.

MAYBELLINE EYEBROW PENCIL, soft, smooth quality, fine point—so easy to use! Purse size, 10c. Professional size, 25c. Black, Dark Brown and Light Brown.

MAYBELLINE EYE SHADOW in subtle shades: Blue, Brown, Blue-gray, Green, Violet, Gray.

Maybelline

WORLD'S FAVORITE EYE MAKE-UP

"Chesterfields are completely satisfying They're Milder - much Milder It's MY cigarette"

Lucille Ball

Starring in "INTERFERENCE"
Her Latest R.K.O. Release

PROMINENT TOBACCO FARMERS SMOKE CHESTERFIELD

"Chesterfield always buys the highest quality mild, ripe tobacco. I find it's the best cigarette for me to smoke because I enjoy its taste and it's MILDER."

H. P. Rasberry
KINSTON, N. C.

Always Buy CHESTERFIELD

... the Best Cigarette for YOU to smoke

Copyright 1949, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

MY OWN STORY!" — Montgomery Clift

SEP -7 1949

modern screen

A DELL MAGAZINE
DELL
A DELL MAGAZINE

Oct. 15¢

PER.

...RY OF
...RESS
... RECORD
P 141949
2

You'll be lovelier with Solitair

SKIN-SAFE SOLITAIR! The only foundation-and-powder make-up with clinical evidence*—certified by leading skin specialists from coast to coast—that it DOES NOT CLOG PORES, cause skin texture change or inflammation of hair follicle or other gland opening. No other liquid, powder, cream or cake "foundation" make-up offers such positive proof of safety for your skin.

*biopsy-specimen

Gown by Cell Chapman

You'll find a lovelier you—the instant you start using Solitair cake make-up. Solitair is a special featherweight formula, unlike any make-up you have ever used. Solitair is a complete make-up. Combines powder and powder base. Hides little skin faults. Stays on longer. But never looks mask-like or "made-up." Contains Lanolin to help guard against dryness. Gives your skin petal-smooth appearance—flawless, natural, youthful-looking. No better quality. $1.00

Cake Make-Up Solitair Fashion-Point Lipstick

Seven new Fashion-right shades

Contains Lanolin

*Slanting cap with red enameled circle identifies Fashion-Point and color inside. U. S. Pat. No. 2162534.

New Beauty for Your Lips!

Yes—something excitingly new! Here is the one and only lipstick with point actually shaped to fit the curve of your lips! Helps you miraculously to apply color quicker, easier, more evenly. No blurred edges. See the new, exciting reds and "Dreamy Pink." So creamy smooth. Contains lanolin. Stays on so long! Exquisite case. $1

Now! Toni is twice as easy—twice as fast

Which Twin has the Toni, Lila or Ella Wigren of Chicago?

new SPIN curler cuts winding time in half—makes it double-easy!

New exclusive Toni SPIN Curler grips . . . spins . . . locks with a flick of the finger. No rubber bands! All plastic, patented! Nothing to tangle up in your hair! Tiny teeth firmly grip hair-tips so even the shortest ends become easy to manage! Easy-spin action—built right in—rolls each curl up in one quick motion! Snaps shut! Assures a better, longer-lasting curl. Winds more hair on each curler. Makes winding twice as easy—twice as fast! Now it's easier than ever before for any woman to wind perfect curls.

new FASTER process gives you the most natural-looking wave ever!

New Photo directions show how Toni waves hair in as little as 30 minutes! No other home permanent waves hair faster yet leaves it so soft and lustrous, so easy to set and style. For the Toni Waving Lotion is the same gentle lotion that has given more than 67 million permanents. Try this exciting Toni with new SPIN Curlers and see how quickly . . . how easily . . . you give yourself the most natural-looking wave you've ever had!

Which twin has the Toni? "Now we're both Toni Twins," says lovely Lila Wigren. "When I saw how easy it was for Ella to give herself a Toni with the new SPIN Curlers I decided on a Toni Home Permanent, too!"

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER

New Toni Refill Kit. Guaranteed to give the most natural-looking wave ever—or money back! Waves hair in as little as 30 minutes! $1.00

Complete Set of new Toni SPIN Curlers. No more rubber bands! Makes every wave from now on twice as easy! Reg. Value $2.00

Included in this offer—Toni Creme Rinse to make your Toni wave even lovelier!

BOTH FOR $2.29

NOW! PROOF that brushing teeth right after eating is the safe, effective way to

HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY with Colgate Dental Cream

NOW dental science offers proof that always using Colgate Dental Cream right after eating helps stop tooth decay before it starts!

Continuous research—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most important news in dental history!

Eminent dental authorities supervised 2 groups of college men and women for over a year. One group always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating. The other group followed their usual dental care.

The average of the group using Colgate's as directed was a startling reduction in number of cavities—far less tooth decay! The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF THESE RESULTS

Colgate's has been proved to contain all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No claim is made that using Colgate's can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating is the proved way to help stop tooth decay with Colgate Dental Cream. The Colgate Dental Cream now at your dealer's is the same formula that was used in the tests.

Always Use Colgate's* to Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth —and HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY!

*Right after eating

NO CHANGE IN FLAVOR, FOAM, OR CLEANSING ACTION!

OCTOBER, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

. . . SO SHE MARRIED THE BOSS (Jennifer Jones) ..... by Cynthia Miller 24
THE STORY BEHIND THE GABLE LEGEND (Clark Gable) ..... by Jack Wade 28
GET OFF THAT HIGH HORSE! (Bergman, Wilde, Davis, etc.) ..... by Hedda Hopper 30
MARRIAGE ON HER MIND (Lizabeth Scott) ..... by Florence Sloan 32
HOW PERFECT IS "PERFECT?" (Joan Fontaine) ..... by Viola Moore 34
RETURN FROM TRAGEDY (Robert Walker) ..... by Arthur L. Charles 37
THIS LOVE OF OURS ..... by Lucille Ball 38
NO HELP WANTED (John Agar) ..... by Ida Zeitlin 40
HOUSE SWARMING (Bob Arthur) ..... by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 42
THE TRUTH ABOUT RITA'S HONEYMOON (Rita Hayworth) ..... by K. Roby Eunson 46
HAS LANA TURNER CHANGED? ..... by George Benjamin 48
MY OWN STORY ..... by Montgomery Clift 50
STOP LYING ABOUT CROSBY! (Bing Crosby) ..... by Frances Clark 54
HOLLYWOOD'S DIZZIEST MARRY-GO-ROUND (Flynn, Eddington, Haymes, Dru) ..... by John Howley 56
MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED ..... by Jane Powell 59

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: The Rule That Most Forget (Jane Wyman) 27
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: Under Capricorn 52

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 16
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed) 23
YOUR LETTERS 25
FASHION 64
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 84
THE FANS ..... by Gloria Lampert 97

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Shirley Temple by Bert Six of Warners
Other picture credits, page 102

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
FLORENCE EPSTEIN, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor
CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
VIOLA MOORE, associate editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 39, No. 5, October, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

©CIB 208276

IT SPEAKS OF LOVE! IT SINGS IN COLOR BY Technicolor!

Worlds apart... yet their hearts are as close together as the hands of a clock at midnight!

M-G-M... producer of the screen's finest Technicolor musicals... presents another wonderful entertainment!

That Midnight Kiss

STARRING

KATHRYN GRAYSON

JOSE ITURBI

WITH

ETHEL BARRYMORE

KEENAN WYNN

J. CARROL NAISH • JULES MUNSHIN

THOMAS GOMEZ • MARJORIE REYNOLDS

and introducing

MARIO LANZA

Screen Play by Bruce Manning and Tamara Hovey

Directed by NORMAN TAUROG

Produced by JOE PASTERNAK

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

MEET A NEW STAR! He's the rugged, romantic type and the singing discovery of a lifetime!

NOTE! Something to watch for! The greatest picture since sound is M-G-M's "BATTLEGROUND"!

Your Loveliness is Doubly Safe

because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

So effective . . . Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle . . . Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

WE'VE ALWAYS HAD uncanny luck at racetracks. Every time we put two dollars on a horse—he throws his rider. It's reached the point where we can't even pass through Jamaica without rearing. Our good friend, K. Roby Eunson, tells us we're behaving abnormally. But K. Roby isn't exactly herself these days, either. We can picture her right now poring over a green sheet in some Parisian garret. It all comes of K.'s trailing Rita Hayworth on her honeymoon. Naturally, K. did it for us (her story, "The Truth About Rita's Honeymoon," is on page 46), but we'd no idea it would lead to this. If only Rita had stayed put; if only she'd rented a houseboat on the Nile and given her horses the run of the deck, K. Roby would never have been sending us collect wires like: "Saxon took the field at Longchamps. Yippee. Stop." or, "Will Skylarking be scratched at Ascot?" All we can say is, "We don't know, K. Roby, we just don't know. And please, why don't you trot on home—now that the honeymoon is over?" . . . Follow-up from K. Roby: Seems Rita Hayworth has switched from horses to storks. It's rumored she's gone into seclusion in Deauville, France, to await the birth of a baby . . . Well, now, that's coming around to our way of thinking . . .

LAST WINTER WE took a course at Arthur Murray's—and for what? So our wife would stop making odious comparisons between us and Clark Gable. We should have realized that Clark Gable does the two-step and everything else to perfection. That man has been a thorn in our side ever since he came out to Hollywood 20 years ago. About 10 years back, though, we started to relax. He's not getting any younger, we said smugly to ourself, time will tell. It certainly did. A toupee and a box of bicarb is now part of our equipment. As for Gable—a couple of grey hairs made their appearance above his famous ears—and now he's completely irresistible to the ladies. As a last resort, we decided to expose Gable in Modern Screen. What a blunder that was! Just turn to page 28 and be thrilled by "The Story Behind the Gable Legend" . . .

MONTGOMERY CLIFT IS another threat to our manhood, but we're a little too tired to fight back. In fact, we're throwing in the towel. We're letting Clift tell his own life story. You'll find it on page 50 . . .

WORDS CAN NEVER explain the way we feel about Lana Turner. We refer you to Shakespeare and to all the love poetry of India. Yes, we're mad about her, we might as well confess. Anyway, to get back to our editorial duties—several million people have been wondering whether being Mrs. Topping has changed Lana. We could tell you right now. But see the story on page 48 . . .

AT LAST, WE can talk about ourself. The thought of next month's Modern Screen makes us glow. Ava Gardner's in it, for one thing. We can stop right there—except that we're going to have stories about Liz Taylor and Glenn Ford, too. We'll have an inspiring piece about Gregory Peck's wife who's just become an American citizen, and a daffy tale by the Churchill sisters who are going to a bicycle party. By the way, Dell Publishing Co. (that's us) has just finished a whole magazine devoted to Betty Grable. On line, please, on line . . .

THE STORY BEHIND THE BIGGEST PICK-UP IN ENTERTAINMENT HISTORY!

"With 50,000,000 Frenchmen, she has to pick me!"

"She took me for a hayride in Heidelberg!"

"I was the best thing in a skirt in Bremerhaven!"

JUST MARRIED

CARY GRANT

ANN SHERIDAN

IN

HOWARD HAWKS'

I Was a Male War Bride

with

Marion Marshall · Randy Stuart · William Neff

Directed by

HOWARD HAWKS · SOL C. SIEGEL

Produced by

Screen Play by Charles Lederer, Leonard Spigelgass and Hagar Wilde · From a Story by Henri Rochard

20th CENTURY-FOX

HAVE YOU SEEN FLORENCE?

THE MOST HILARIOUS HIT IN MANY A HONEYMOON!

Jack Sassen stands by in Ciro's as Gail Russell chats long-distance with Guy. On his return from summer theater work, Madison and Russell were married. Date: July 31. Place: Santa Barbara.

Bob Mitchum presents Gertrude Niesen with a L.A. Gas & Electric manhole cover. Occasion wos on opening night party for Gertrude after her performance in Annie Get Your Gun at the Greek Theater.

Joan Crawford sits beside her protegée, Marion Morgan, who made her singing debut at Ciro's. Not only did Joan sponsor Marion, but she personally arranged her hair-do just before showtime.

Gary Cooper shyly backs away from George Fischer's microphone at the première of The Fountainhead in Warner's Hollywood Theoter. But "Rocky," Cooper's wife, firmly stands her ground.

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

Immediately after this picture was token, Greer Garson and Buddy Fogelson, Texas oil millionoire, left on their honeymoon. They were morried on July 15 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher A. Cotron of Santo Fe, New Mexico.

Hollywood's newest rugged sensotion, Paul Douglos, dines at Romanoff's with Mary Jane Barnes. It's been rumored thot they'll morry. Meanwhile, Douglas has a busy working schedule—he'll fly to Berlin soon for Two Corridors East.

■ Let me tell you some highlights on Greer Garson's wedding to Buddy Fogelson I'm sure you have not heard:

The nervous groom-to-be didn't know the size of Greer's finger, so he bought three diamond circlets. One fitted perfectly—and he gave Greer the other two to wear on her charm bracelet.

Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher A. Catron, at whose 100-year-old Mexican ranch home the wedding took place, were able to engage only a Mexican orchestra with a very limited repertory. So the Catrons hired a full orchestra in Dallas to record the Wedding March and a dozen lovely melodies to play during the reception.

Instead of tossing her large wedding bouquet of orchids, Greer gave them to Mrs. Catron just before she and Buddy started on their motoring honeymoon, saying, "Put these on ice for me, please. I'd like them to stay fresh as long as possible."

When they returned to their own Fork Lightning Ranch in New Mexico after a few days, Greer found that Buddy had had interior decorators at work completely redoing her boudoir in the soft, pink tints she loves so much.

Oh, he's a nice man, this Texan that Greer has married! I have said all along—even when they took time out during a misunderstanding and the gossips said the romance was over—that Greer and Buddy would eventually marry. They are so right for each other.

For the first time in her life, Greer has a man who will be the boss—a man who is proud of her career, but not overly impressed by her importance as a star. Methinks the lady is going to love it.

Colonel E. E. Fogelson, as Buddy is officially known, has enough money to buy Greer a studio if she should ever need one, and he is just as important in Texas and New York financial circles as she is in Hollywood.

(Continued on page 10)

Here's how WARNER BROS. head y

THE ALL-HAPPINESS MUSICAL!

DENNIS MORGAN
DORIS DAY
JACK CARSON

It's a Great Feeling

COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR

And a Studioful of Guest Stars!

GARY COOPER
JOAN CRAWFORD
ERROL FLYNN
SYDNEY GREENSTREET
PATRICIA NEAL
ELEANOR PARKER
RONALD REAGAN
EDW. G. ROBINSON
JANE WYMAN

7 NEW SONG HITS!
'It's a Great Feeling'
'Give Me a Song with a Beautiful Melody'
'Fiddle Dee Dee'
'At the Cafe Rendezvous'
'That Was a Big Fat Lie'
'There's Nothing Rougher than Love'
'Blame My Absent Minded Heart'

DIRECTED BY DAVID BUTLER PRODUCED BY ALEX GOTTLIEB

Screen Play by JACK ROSE and MEL SHAVELSON
From A Story by I. A. L. Diamond · Music by JULE STYNE Lyrics by SAMMY CAHN · Musical Direction by Ray Heindorf

NEW HIT! NEW HEIGHTS!

JAMES CAGNEY

IS RED HOT IN

WHITE HEAT

CO-STARRING VIRGINIA MAYO
with EDMOND O'BRIEN

FRED CLARK • Screen Play by IVAN GOFF and BEN ROBERTS
Suggested by a Story by Virginia Kellogg • Music by Max Steiner

DIRECTED BY RAOUL WALSH · PRODUCED BY LOUIS F. EDELMAN

ur theatre's parade of New Fall Hits!

THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD WILL HAIL ITS GREATNESS!

GARY COOPER

TASK FORCE

with
JANE WYATT · WAYNE MORRIS · WALTER BRENNAN

WRITTEN & DIRECTED BY DELMER DAVES PRODUCED BY JERRY WALD
ORIGINAL MUSIC BY FRANZ WAXMAN

Strange things keep happening to

INGRID BERGMAN
JOSEPH COTTEN
MICHAEL WILDING

ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S

Under Capricorn

COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR

Screen Play by JAMES BRIDIE • Adaptation by Hume Cronyn • Based on the play by John Colton and Margaret Linden • From the novel by Helen Simpson

Directed by ALFRED HITCHCOCK

A TRANSATLANTIC PICTURE

Why take it with you?

New tooth paste with Lusterfoam attacks tobacco stain and off-color breath.

Don't kid yourself about "tobacco mouth"—it's as real as the stain on a chain smoker's fingers!

But your tongue can tell! (You can "taste" an odor.) And your dentist knows when he cleans your teeth. And your friends might notice . . . you know.

But they won't point the finger at you (after you've left the room of course) if you're a regular user of Listerine Tooth Paste. Here's why—

It contains Lusterfoam—a special ingredient that actually foams cleaning and polishing agents over your teeth . . . into the crevices—removes fresh stain before it gets a chance to "set" . . . whisks away that odor-making tobacco debris!

See for yourself how Listerine Tooth Paste with Lusterfoam freshens your mouth and your breath! Get a tube and make sure that wherever you go—you won't take "tobacco mouth" with you!

TOBACCO MOUTH ...give it the "brush-off" with

"Feel that Lusterfoam work!"

Ann Sheridan shares a rousing laugh with Cesar Romero and Zachary Scott at Romanoff's.

(Continued from page 7) Why wasn't Greer's mother at the wedding? Well, I can tell you it was no family tiff, in spite of some cruel printed insinuations. Nina, herself, told me: "I had my train ticket and was all ready to go to my daughter's wedding. Then an attack of neuritis I had suffered became so painful my doctor forbade my traveling on the air-conditioned train.

"Of course, I hated to miss it. You know how close Greer and I are and I am devoted to my new son-in-law. I think Greer is a very lucky girl.

"Every day I talk with them at the ranch. But I doubt if I will be with them again until we all meet in London. Our plans now are for me to go over there sometime after Greer starts the sequel to Mrs. Miniver in England."

I hope that settles that.

* * *

When Esther Williams heard that the eight-month-old daughter of the James Masons' was already swimming like a fish—she called up, introduced herself to Portland's Ma and Pa and asked if she could come over and see the baby do her stuff!

Esther, who was expecting her own baby at the time, was promptly invited over. Later she said she couldn't believe her eyes. Portland, who has as yet shown no inclination to walk, actually gurgles with glee when she sees the swimming pool.

"I started swimming young," Esther told James and Pamela, "but not that early!"

Esther said, before she left, "I'm a swimmer—so my baby will probably be an actor. You people are actors—and you have a champ swimmer!"

* * *

Betty Hutton's separation from Ted Briskin didn't even take time to develop into a nine-day wonder. It lasted only five days.

"Wha' hopponed? Well, I think a number of things brought on the temporary rift.

I have watched Betty and Ted together at parties. When the music would start up, it was natural for bouncing Betty to want to get up and sing and dance and have a time for herself. But a stern glance from Ted would put her right back in hor chair.

Betty's taste runs to zippy clothes a little on the conspicuous side. Ted likes her looking like a young matron from his home town, Chicago.

Also, Ted is a business man with little or no knowledge of Betty's show world. But, in spite of this, he has always had a lot to say about Betty's scripts and casting her pictures to her Paramount bosses. At one time, about two years ago, he interfered so much that Betty was constantly in tears. Finally, the head men at the studio made it plain they planned to produce Hutton movies without benefit of his advice.

Now that they have made up, they must have talked over these things and ironed them out. Ted was so eager to make up, I think he would have agreed to anything.

* * *

The Van Johnsons and Peter Lawford, who used to be the best of friends, stopped speaking about six months ago. Now they are back to nodding to each other when they meet at parties and cafés. But it ain't overly cordial.

* * *

Farley Granger is downright distressed over the terrific crush a very young actress has developed on him. He is very fond of the kid, but as far as being romantically interested, that's out.

She calls him all the time, pretending to be asking for advice about her own career. But before the conversation is over, she's trying to pin him down to a date.

Privately, Farley is wishing Dean Stockwell would grow up and meet her—or something.

* * *

Cobina Wright, Senior, gives very gay parties in her hilltop home next door to Pickfair, and her dinner-dance on the terrace in honor of the Louis Wolfsons of Florida was one of her best.

The good old moon was hanging out in the sky like a spotlight, illuminating such well-known faces as Joan Crawford, Joan Fontaine, Kathryn Grayson, Elizabeth Taylor, Sonja Henie (her diamond necklace shed more lustre than the moon), Anne Baxter, John Hodiak, the Zachary Scotts, Cesar

Are you in the know?

How to outsmart the "home date" type?

- ☐ Padlock the ice-box
- ☐ Plant junior in the parlor
- ☐ Use the hot-and-glaves approoch

'Tisn't that he hasn't the moola—or that you're glitter-minded. So, if every date's a "home" deal, better change his pinch-penny ways. To say "come y'aout"—greet him dressed for gallivanting: if only to the local Cokery. Or suggest bowling; or the skating rink . . . and if it's calendar time, no matter. You'll be comfortable with the new Kotex, for this new softness holds its shape. After all, isn't Kotex made to stay soft while you wear it?

Which suit should the lofty lassie wear?

- ☐ The one on the right
- ☐ The one on the left
- ☐ The one in the center

Ever feel as though you're built on stilts? Be wiser than the tall teen pictured here and shy away from vertical stripes. Likewise from an outfit that's all one tone. The suit on the right breaks height . . . you'll discover a contrasting jacket brings you down a peg! There's a difference in different girls' needs; on problem days, as well. For which Kotex gives you a choice of 3 absorbencies. Try Regular, Junior, Super. There's one exactly right for you.

To be the picture of poise, try—

- ☐ A blosé ottitude
- ☐ That "cosual" slump
- ☐ Sitting pretty

You may be a walking posture lesson, but how do you fare with a chair? Plop down? Recline on the tip of your spine? Lady, be seated gracefully, with your weight on the foot nearest the chair. "Sit tall"; keeping soles of feet on floor. Correct posture's a poise-magnet. Also helps avoid "that day" discomfort—and you'll feel so at ease when you've chosen Kotex. For extra protection, there's an exclusive safety center. (Boo coo welcome feature—n'est-ce pas?)

If he spilled a soda on your best dress, would you—

☐ Grieve and leave ☐ Grin and forget ☐ Call the manager

You know the fizzician didn't drench you on purpose. Why brow-beat the poor guy? Grin . . . say the dress can be easily cleaned, then forget it. That's good sportsmanship. And it jet-propels your rating. Your confidence, too, hits the stratosphere—when you hurdle "certain" handicaps with Kotex. Because those special, flat pressed ends prevent revealing outlines, you can forget you were ever self-conscious.

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

NEW!

A belt made with DUPONT NYLON ELASTIC

—wan't twist—won't curl —won't cut!

It's sensational! This new, nylon elastic Kotex Wonderform Belt gives 118% stretch—yet it's strong, smooth-feeling, light weight, quick drying. Stays flat, dainty-looking, even after many tubbings! This Kotex Belt won't bind—and you'll find the new firm-grip fastener easier, quicker to use! For utmost comfort—buy the new, nylon elastic Kotex Wonderform Belt.

2 TYPES:
Pin style and with new safety fastener

Kotex Wonderform Belt

Buy twa—far a change

Fall's more Fun!

WITH A

GREYHOUND

AMAZING AMERICA TOUR

Combine the zest of cool, bright Fall weather, with the best of vacation travel treats. Plan a Greyhound Expense-Paid tour this Autumn —to a glamorous big city, or to your favorite play-spot in the U.S.A., Canada, or Mexico. Everything's arranged as you wish, by Greyhound—hotel reservations, sightseeing, entertainment. And low tour prices mean you've extra funds for extra fun. Choose your Autumn vacation below, or write for information about any other trip you may desire.

8-day MEXICO CITY TOUR $68.60
Hotel in Mexico City and Taxco. Visit Shrine of Guadalupe, Pyramid of Cholula, Puebla, Cuernavaca. ☐

7-day NEW ENGLAND CIRCLE TOUR $46.55
New York City, White and Green Mountains, cruise on Casco Bay, historic Boston, Concord and Lexington. ☐

6-day COLONIAL VIRGINIA $40.45
See Washington, D. C., Lexington, Natural Bridge, Richmond, restored Williamsburg. Five nights in hotels. ☐

3-day CHICAGO TOUR $11.95
Tour includes two nights at famous hotel. Grand Tour of Loop. North and South Lake Shore Drive. Tour of Chinatown by night. ☐

4-day Boston, $24.00 ☐. 11-day Florida Circle, $72.10 ☐. 4-day Washington, D. C., $19.75 ☐. 3-day Detroit, $12.10 ☐. 4-day Havana, Cuba, $60.60 ☐. 5-day Montreal-Quebec, $35.05 ☐. 7-day New York City, $46.55 ☐. 3-day Niagara Falls, $11.75 ☐. 3-day Salt Lake City, $8.50 ☐. 5-day Tampa, Florida, $23.70 ☐. 2-day Williamsburg, Va., $10.88 ☐. 3-day Yosemite, $34.50 ☐. 3-day Atlantic City, $17.00 ☐. 7-day Eureka Springs, Ark., $57.00 ☐. 3-day Kentucky Caves, $21.10 ☐. 4-day Los Angeles, $14.00 ☐. 3-day Denver, $13.00 ☐.

(Add round-trip fare from your city)

Prices are far double room accammadotions, and subject to change without natice.

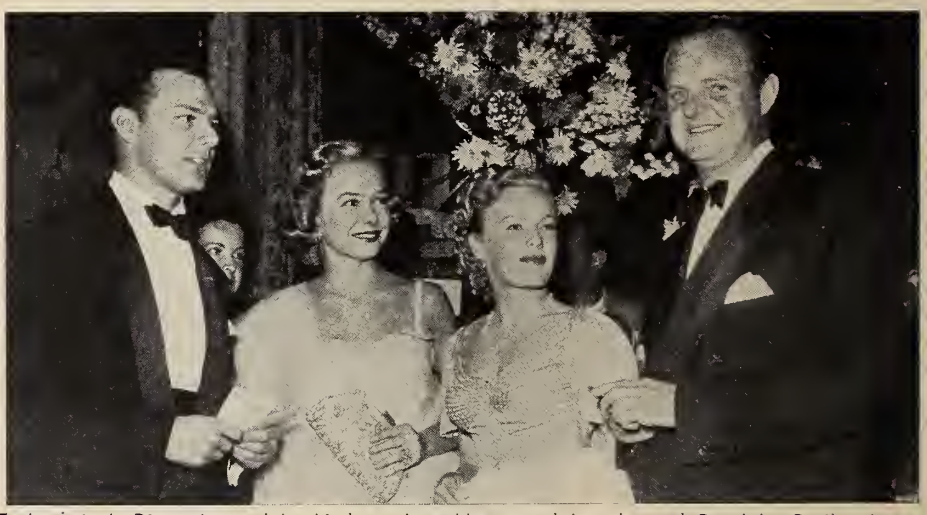
MAIL THIS COUPON FOR TOUR FOLDER

Fill in this caupan and mail ta Greyhaund Highway Taurs, Dept. DM109, 105 West Madisan, Chicaga 2, Ill. Be sure ta put check-mark appasite taur which interests yau.

Name_____

Address_____

City & State_____ DM109



LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Dan Dailey and Shari Robinson greet Anne Baxter as she arrives at Grauman's Theater for the You're My Everything première.

Jeanne Crain waltzes dreamily in Paul Brinkman's orms at the première party. She'd spent a hectic day taking care of her small sons.

Early arrivals Diana Lynn, John Lindsay, June Haver and her devoted Dr. John Duzik, whose marriage plans are still indefinite, pause in the lobby for a gabfest before the show begins.

Romero, and Lana Turner and Bob Topping.

Joan Crawford was in a cotton gown with hoop skirts, and Elizabeth Taylor was in blue crinoline, cut very low, with a full skirt—both girls and gowns looking like something out of Gone With The Wind.

While I was talking with Joan Crawford, she pulled out a letter she had just received from her daughter, Christina, who is away at summer camp. She said, "Want a good laugh, Louella?" and handed me Missy Chris' note.

"Dear Mother," it read. "Everything is fine here and very healthy. I am no trouble to anybody and I miss you." Then she added with alarming honesty, "This is my Duty Letter for the week so that I can get the Special Privileges!"

Aren't these kids wonderful?

I think Elizabeth Taylor was very lonesome for her fiancé, William Pawley, Jr. Elizabeth came alone and looked a little lost. I didn't see her dancing at all, and when Johnny Johnston and Kathryn Grayson started singing in the living room, beautiful Lizzie spent most of the evening in there listening to them—and to a very clever entertainer, Dolores Anderson.

It was a very hot night, almost too hot for the black satin gown Lana Turner was wearing, but the slinky lines certainly set off her new stream-lined figure to advantage —which may be one reason she wore it. Both Lana and Bob have dropped pounds and pounds since their wedding. (For further information about Lana's weight, see page 48. —Ed.) Lana and Joan Fontaine had their heads together almost all evening, laughing like crazy about something.

Everybody was telling Anne Baxter how excited they were about her Clara Bow stuff in You're My Everything—and well they might. She's terrif'.

Marion Davies, so beautiful in a black chiffon, came in later in the evening and, as usual, had an admiring circle around her in no time. Marion is always so gay and sparkling. Elizabeth Taylor asked to be introduced to Marion. "I've always admired her so much," Elizabeth said.

* * *

I just can't believe that Shirley Temple really wants to play the part of the unmarried girl who is murdered by her sweetheart when she discovers she is going to have a baby in An American Tragedy. Shirley in such a role would really be an American tragedy.

To be kissed ... tonight ... as you've never been kissed before ... Tangee

Lips aching to be kissed
... in a heart-stirring love scene
starring

ANN DORAN
AND MILBURN STONE
APPEARING IN

"CALAMITY JANE AND SAM BASS"

COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR
A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURE

Tangee KISSABLE TEXTURE

1. Keeps lips soft ... invitingly moist.
2. Feels just right ... gives you confidence.
3. Does not smear or run at the edges.
4. Goes on so easily ... so smoothly ... so quickly.
5. And it lasts—and LASTS—and L-A-S-T-S!

Tangee KISS COLORS

TANGEE PINK QUEEN—A bright new pink ... to make him think ... of kissing.

TANGEE RED-RED—Makes your lips redder than red ... and ready to love. For brunettes especially.

TANGEE THEATRICAL RED—America's most dramatic shade—transforms your lips into a "feature attraction."

TANGEE GAY-RED—Cold men turn into bold men—when a blonde wears this daring shade.

De Long

Bob Pins set the smartest
hair-do's

stronger grip—
won't slip out

Short in front—short in back...like this new "Directoire Style" that's so flattering to your face...that's the way your hair goes this season. And the smartest hair-do's are going up with De Long Bob Pins! Smoothly rounded at the ends, De Long Bob Pins slide in easily, stay in indefinitely. For easier setting—for lovelier hair—reach for De Long Bob Pins on the famous blue cards.

how to set this
"directoire style"
created by Robert King, famous New York and Hollywood hair stylist and make-up artist. Make 6 large pin curls for the bang. Wave a ridge over each ear and make two rows of curls from high on both sides all the way around back. Always turn curls toward face. Brush out hair away from face and let fall softly.

You're always "set" with De Long Hair Pins • Curl Setting Pins • Safety Pins • Hooks and Eyes • Snaps • Pins • Hook and Eye Tapes • Sanitary Belts

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

John Wayne romps with his frisky dogs, Feorless ond Dountless—who could compete with ony oct when they're put through their poces.

In a way, I know how it is. These young actresses just "burn" to go dramatic and "get their teeth into something important." Also, Montgomery Clift is the star of the picture and all the girls want to work with him.

But, oh, Shirley—not this particular picture, please!

* * *

Linda Christian is spending $2,400 on 10 maternity dresses—so the London newspapers report.

"I don't think that is extravagant," said Mrs. Tyrone Power. "Ty and I are planning to have a big family and the clothes will do for all the babies. Besides, I want to look as well as possible before having my baby."

Well, I'd say she should do all right. Norman Hartnell, personal designer to Queen Elizabeth, is whipping up Linda's maternity wardrobe!

The order includes three evening dresses, two daytime dresses, cocktail dresses and several "sports" things (which strikes me as strange!). The evening gowns will run around $400 apiece.

"Mr. Hartnell is creating very unusual collars for all my things," quoth Linda—adding naively, "to divert attention from elsewhere."

* * *

Looks as if Roy Rogers is going to be Mr. Millionaire of Hollywood in 1950. He has just signed a contract with Republic which will earn him $1,000,000 in the next two years. Considering that Roy retains all his "outside" income from cowboy hats, boots, records, etc. —he should average about a million per year.

This is five times what Spencer Tracy makes, four times above Clark Gable, and 'steen times what the average Hollywood star makes. Who says there ain't gold in them there Westerns?

* * *

Robert Mitchum is making sure his wife and children will never again be in jeopardy through an act of his.

Bob is broke. His trial cost him plenty and he was off salary for months. He owes a lot which he is paying back as fast as he can.

But—Bob went to his RKO boss, Howard Hughes, and asked for a big salary advance. "I want to buy a home and put it in my wife's name," Mitchum told him. "Nothing means more to me than their security."

Do you think he got it? You bet your life he did!

* * *

Romancing Around: Joan Caulfield and Frank Ross (Jean Arthur's ex-husband) are ablaze, but Joan had just as soon you'd forget it. She is really in love, but she is superstitious. Says everytime people start rumoring wedding bells for her, something happens to the romance. . . . Clark Gable and Paulette Goddard were going 'round and 'round before Paulette took off for Mexico City. But don't put too much stock in Gable and Goddard being a real combination. She has a very politically important boy friend in Mexico. . . . Peter Lawford gave zee big rush to Mary Jane Landbergh, when she came out from New York for the races. Mary Jane is richer than rich and Pete seems to prefer the socialite debs for his dates. . . . I hear that little Janie Powell would marry Geary Steffen right away, but he wants to get started in a business way before they take to the middle aisle. And I think he is a wise boy.

* * *

I get it from all sides that Shelley Winters has been exploding with temperament, and fighting with everybody on the set of East of Java. Yet, everytime I print anything like this about her, Shelley calls up sobbing and denying she's being hard to handle.

"I'm just nervous," she's always explaining.

Well, baby, don't get so nervous that people around the studio hate to be assigned to your pictures. You've got a big future ahead. Don't ruin everything this early in the game.

(Continued on page 102)

The Most SURPRISED Bride in all England!

She Wed Lord Johnnie the Rogue on His Way to the Gallows—and Planned to Forget Him! But No Mere Hangman Could Cheat Johnnie of His Delightful Prize!

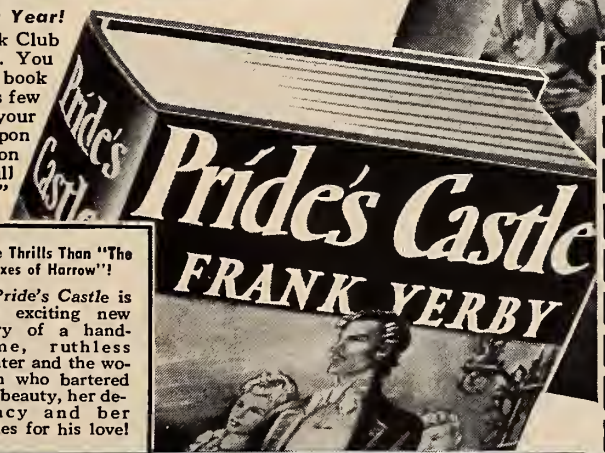
WHAT mad purpose drove the ravishing young Lady Leanna to Newgate prison one night to marry a man she had never seen? To marry indeed, a notorious outlaw condemned to hang in the morning?

Anyway, Leanna did not suspect how her beauty could fire a man. For in less than twenty-four hours, while hangman and police were searching every corner of London for him, handsome Lord Johnnie was inside her door, breathless but arrogant, to claim at least one night with this woman who had expected him to die.

What happened on Lord Johnnie's wedding night, and the strange pact that was to take him halfway across the world on a mission of pirateering and vengeance, make this one of the most exciting novels of the year. And here's our amazing offer: BOTH Lord Johnnie and Frank Yerby's new best-seller, Pride's Castle, are yours for just a 3-cent stamp if you join the Dollar Book Club now!

BOTH HITS YOURS FOR 3¢!

if you join the DOLLAR BOOK CLUB now!



THE Dollar Book Club offers to send you both "Lord Johnnie" and "Pride's Castle" for just a 3-cent stamp—as a generous sample to new members of the wonderful reading entertainment and equally wonderful savings that nearly a million families enjoy through the Club.

The Dollar Book Club is the only club that brings you popular current novels for only $1.00 each. Yes, the very same titles sold in the publisher's retail editions for $2.75 to $3.00 come to members for only $1.00 each—an incredibly big saving of almost two-thirds!

Such values are possible because of the great economies effected in printing huge editions for so large a membership. And the Club's own new book plant is equipped for money-saving production on a scale never before possible. These big savings are passed on to you!

Take as Few as Six Books a Year!
Membership in the Dollar Book Club requires no dues of any kind. You do not even have to take a book every month; the purchase of as few as six books a year fulfills your membership requirement. Upon receipt of the attached coupon with just a 3-cent stamp, you will be sent BOTH "Lord Johnnie" and "Pride's Castle." You will also receive the current selection for only $1.00. Thereafter, every month, you will receive the Club's Bulletin, which describes the forthcoming Club selections, also other popular books offered at only $1.00 each. Buy only the books you want!

More Thrills Than "The Foxes of Harrow"!

Pride's Castle is the exciting new story of a handsome, ruthless fighter and the woman who bartered her beauty, her decency and her riches for his love!

MAIL THIS COUPON WITH JUST A 3-CENT STAMP!

Send No Money—Start Enjoying Membership Now!

When you see the wonderful package of reading you will get immediately and realize these books are typical of values you will continue to get from the club for only $1.00 each, you will be delighted to have become a member! Mail coupon now.

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB, GARDEN CITY, NEW YORK

2 Books for 3c with this offer

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB
Dept. 10-DG, Garden City, New York

Please enroll me as a Dollar Book Club member and send me at once Lord Johnnie and Pride's Castle—BOTH for the enclosed 3c stamp. Also send me the current club selection and bill me for $1 plus shipping cost.

With these books will come my first issue of the free descriptive folder called "The Bulletin" telling about the two new forthcoming one-dollar bargain book selections and additional bargains offered at $1.00* each to members only.

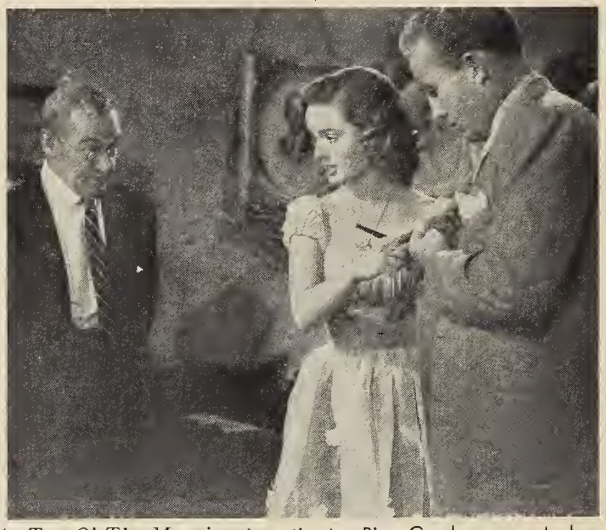
I have the privilege of notifying you in advance if I do not wish either of the following months' selections and whether or not I wish to purchase any of the other bargains at the Special Club price of $1.00 each. I do not have to accept a book every month—only six during each year that I remain a member. I pay nothing except $1 for each selection received plus a few cents shipping cost.

Mr. Mrs. Miss .....
Please Print

Address .....

City, Zone & State .....

Occupation ..... If under 21, age, please .....



*Same Price in Canada: 105 Bond St., Toronto 2

The pretty young thing to the left is Christopher Kane. So many readers have been under the so wrong impression that she is a he, that we've decided to set things straight by using her photo regularly.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

In Top O' The Morning, investigator Bing Crosby comes to Ireland from America to help find out who stole the Blarney Stone. Ann Blyth, daughter of policeman Barry Fitzgerold, is amazed.

She's amazed—and delighted—because Bing seems to fit oll the local prophecies made obout the man she'll marry. Barry is also delighted when developments finally make him (Barry) a hero.

TOP O' THE MORNING

Cast: Bing Crosby, Ann Blyth, Barry Fitzgerald, Hume Cronyn.
Paramount

Bing Crosby is the boy the insurance company sends from America to find out who stole the Blarney Stone. (It's disappeared from its moorings, and the Irish citizenry is standing fearfully by, because an old legend states that one day the stone will be stolen, and unhappy consequences will result.) In Ireland, Bing meets a raft of people, including a simple old police sergeant (Barry Fitzgerald) who likes to play detective (he couldn't find your eyes behind your eyeglasses) and his constable (Hume Cronyn). To say nothing of Barry's daughter (Ann Blyth) who appears to be taken with a fit when she first lays eyes on our hero. (Bing fits a prediction made by an old lady named Biddy O'Devlin about the man Ann will marry, and these people live by predictions.) The dialogue in Top O' The Morning is fresh and delightful. Example: Ann Blyth has released Fitzgerald's pet pigeons, and he's grieving. "Why didn't you call me?" he cries. "Why? What could you have done?" she says. "I could have ate them," he says bitterly. At another point, Hume Cronyn, discussing a much disliked villager says, "Ah, but he's an ugly man. You wouldn't lend him a shoe if he had to walk around the world." But there's more than good dialogue in this picture. The music is lilting, the romance is tender and charming, the tracking down of a pitifully crazed thief and killer is filled with suspense (Biddy O'Devlin has predicted that a man will sing in the Wood of Callee, and will die, and you know Bing's right out there singing, alongside a murderer). The actors' performances are uniformly enjoyable (some of the kids' brogues slipped occasionally, but everybody else sounded Irish as Saint Patrick). I thought Bing Crosby's recent Connecticut Yankee was a bore. I think Bing Crosby's current Top O' The Morning is a pip.

DALLAS! "My doctor suggested Noxzema for my dry skin," says attractive Mrs. Marjory Ryan! "Now Noxzema is the only beauty cream I ever use—I couldn't do without it. I always use it as a powder base to help keep my skin soft and supple."

KANSAS CITY! "I used to have occasional blemishes," says popular Judy Hadas, "but since using Noxzema as my regular night cream, my skin is soft and smooth. Now it seems as though I'm always getting compliments on my complexion."

WHO ELSE WANTS A LOVELIER-LOOKING COMPLEXION?

NEW YORK! Charming Arlene Anderson first used Noxzema for an annoying skin rash. "It helped improve my skin so much," she says, "it's now my regular morning powder base and night cream as well. I'm never without Noxzema."

Doctor's new home beauty treatment helps 4 out of 5 women in clinical tests

● Pictured here are six women who solved one important skin problem almost every woman occasionally faces. At one time each was bothered with minor skin troubles like blemishes from external causes, rough dry skin or similar skin disorders. But they found a way to softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin.

New Beauty Routine

For now a noted skin specialist has developed a home beauty routine for just such skin problems. It really gets results. You need only one cream—medicated Noxzema. There are only 4 simple steps. Here's all you do:

1. Morning—bathe face with warm water, apply Noxzema with a wet cloth and "cream-wash" your face.
2. Apply Noxzema as a powder base.
3. Evening—repeat morning cleansing with Noxzema.
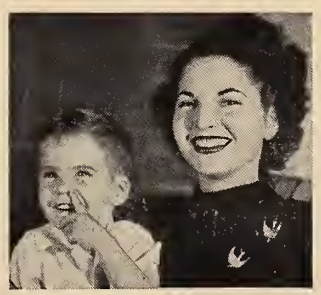
4. Massage cream lightly into face. Pat on extra Noxzema over any blemishes.

Follow this routine faithfully for only two weeks. See the results! Note how refreshed your face feels—how Noxzema's medicated formula helps heal blemishes that come from dust and dirt. And if your skin gets rough and dry, smooth on Noxzema and watch for amazingly quick improvement.

You'll enjoy using Noxzema, too. This snow-white greaseless cream doesn't stain bed linen . . . never looks messy. Use it every night before retiring . . . every morning as a base for make-up. See if your complexion doesn't look softer, smoother, lovelier.

Helped 4 out of 5 Women Tested



Noxzema's new 4-Step Beauty Routine has been thoroughly tested under careful supervision of skin specialists. Scores of women tried it—and 4 out of 5 showed softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin in only two weeks. Try it yourself—see if you aren't amazed at the difference in your skin. At all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax.

CHICAGO! Vivacious Marion McEvoy had a dry skin condition. "Then I started using Noxzema every night," she says. "I soon noticed my complexion was smoother . . . and I've used it ever since."

BALTIMORE! "A skin irritation almost ruined a Company party," says Mrs. Erma Boone. "But I used Noxzema in time . . . and the party was a complete success. Now it's my night cream and powder base, too."

BOSTON! Mrs. Suzanne Lipsett likes to hunt and fish with her husband. "Noxzema keeps my skin soft and smooth in spite of long exposure. I also use it on the children for minor skin irritations."

New!
THE Beauty Discovery
you've waited for . . .

Nestle
COLORINSE
with LURIUM

GIVES YOUR HAIR
MORE COLOR

- Absolutely harmless
- Washes out easily

Now, from the famous Nestle Hair Laboratories comes LURIUM—an amazing new ingredient added to Nestle Colorinse to give your hair more glorious COLOR-BEAUTY, sparkling highlights and silken lustre than ever before.

And — Nestle Colorinse with Lurium eliminates tangles — makes hair easier to comb, easier to manage—comes in 10 flattering shades.

FREE! Full size package of Nestle Colorinse. Just write the color of your hair on a postcard and mail it to The Nestle Co., 25 Baker Ave., South Meriden, Conn.

So Economical to Use!
2 rinses 10¢
6 rinses 25¢

NESTLE – originators of permanent waving — Meriden, Conn.

Roseanna McCoy: Farley Granger and newcomer Joan Evans portray principal characters in the famed and exciting Hatfield-McCoy feud.

It's A Great Feeling: Taking playful digs at Hollywood, Jack Carson, Dennis Morgan, and Doris Day get entangled in studio troubles.

ROSEANNA McCOY

Cast: Farley Granger, Joan Evans. Charles Bickford, Raymond Massey, Richard Basehart.
Goldwyn

Roseanna McCoy has an unreal quality about it. Its characters seem enchanted. From the moment Johnse Hatfield (Farley Granger) sees—and wants—Roseanna McCoy, at a county fair, you know there will be death and pain and blood, for Johnse's family and Roseanna's family are mortal enemies. Johnse sucks the blood from a hornet's sting in Roseanna's arm, and he tells her that she belongs to him, that he'll be along some night to take her away. Roseanna, who's young, and afraid, wanders close to a campfire where old mountain women sit telling stories, and they speak of the spells a man can lay on a girl, and Roseanna knows that she is lost. Johnse comes for her one dark night, and she goes with him to the Hatfield cabin, but there's no peace for her there. One of the Hatfields (Richard Baseheart) tries to kill her, hate moves all around her. She begs Johnse to let her go home and tell her father the truth about their love. Perhaps she can end the cruel feud which has wasted so many lives. But before Roseanna and Johnse come together again, before love vanquishes hate, there is more bloodshed, more killing. The picture generates an almost unbearable excitement; it has passion, and violence, and a strange kind of dark-of-the-moon feeling which combine to leave you gasping. It's folklore, well-told, and there are more good actors in it than you can shake a stick at. Granger has a wonderful vitality, while Joan Evans, who plays Roseanna, is warm and lovely and touching.

IT'S A GREAT FEELING

Cast: Dennis Morgan, Doris Day, Jack Carson, Bill Goodwin.
Warners

This is a gag picture. Warner Brothers let its directors and stars and musicians and producers romp through it, ribbing Hollywood, and they came up with a very gay show. Premise is that Warners is scheduled to make a movie starring Jack Carson and Dennis Morgan. A serious movie. No director will touch the project. They think Carson would wreck their efforts. Finally Carson says he'll direct himself. Morgan can't see that. He's about to walk out on the deal, when Carson hires a little waitress to pretend she's Mrs. Carson, in a delicate condition. Morgan's heart melts. He signs the contract. Little waitress (Doris Day) expects a part in the picture (that's what Carson promised her) but Carson tries to pay her off with five dollars. She's disillusioned, decides to go home to Wisconsin and marry a man named Jeffrey Bushfinkle. Now Morgan and Carson are in trouble. Morgan's been tricked into doing the picture, but no lady star wants to play opposite him. "A serious picture with Carson?" they all screech. Morgan and Carson go haul Doris back from the railroad station. "We'll make you a star," they announce grandly. They want their producer (Bill Goodwin) to discover Doris, so they stick her behind soda fountains, they make her drive a taxicab, they have her appear like Mary's lamb, everywhere that Goodwin goes. Instead of discavering her, Goodwin thinks he's losing his mind. "Every place I turn, I see a blonde with a sickening smile," he moans. And so it goes, right up to the surprise ending. Doris can make any song she breathes on sound like a hit, and Irving Bacon, as a railroad station information clerk, has the funniest bit in the movie.

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN

Cast: Larry Parks, Barbara Hale, William Demarest, Ludwig Donath.
Columbia

Here's the sequel to The Jolson Story, and it takes up right where that movie left off. It's probably no truer to the actual facts of Jolson's life than are most movie biographies of great entertainers, but on every other score it leaves those biographies far behind. There's nothing pretentious about Jolson Sings Again. It's gay and sad, nostalgic and believable. When Ludwig Donath and Tamara Shayne (once again playing Jolson's father and mother) are around, the picture has real quality, and there's nothing wrong with the other actors either. Story is that after Jolson's wife Julie leaves him (because she thinks he loves singing more than he loves her) he goes back into show business. For a while, it's fine. Then suddenly the thrill is gone. He quits, goes for an endless vacation. The war begins, and progresses. Jolson's off on yachts, he's buying horses, he's buying prize fighters. Rome is burning, but he's not young any more. Then his manager of many years (William Demarest) convinces him he ought to go overseas and entertain. There are more ways of fighting than with guns. Jolson thinks the kids of today won't even remember him, but he goes anyway, and he gets a warm welcome. He contracts a fever, is sent home, insists on going right out again to tour hospitals. The next time he collapses, it's more serious. He loses a part of one lung. He's fallen in love with a nurse (Barbara Hale) and they marry, and go to live in California. It's a happy marriage, but Jolson broods. He feels he's all washed up. First, nobody remembers him. Second, he hasn't even got both lungs. Couldn't sing if producers were clamoring for him. Which they're not. But there's one producer who remembers, and who clamors, and there's his wife believing in him, and his manager, and his father, and before he knows what's happened, he's embarked on a brand-new career. He's going to sing the numbers for a film about his life. Film's to be called The Jolson Story. Etc. Etc. Barbara Hale is wonderful as Jolson's young wife (she plays the part with a Southern accent, but never overdoes it). If I had a beef, it would be that Larry Parks didn't look old enough. But you can't have everything, and in Jolsan Sings Again, you get most everything, at that.

Jolson Sings Again: Lorry Parks again plays Al Jalsan and Barbara Hale is seen as his present wife in this fine Jolson Story sequel.

COME TO THE STABLE

Cast: Loretta Young, Celeste Holm, Hugh Marlowe, Elsa Lanchester, Thomas Gomez, Dorothy Patrick.
20th Century-Fox

Two nuns, Sister Margaret and Sister Scolastica (Loretta Young and Celeste Holm) come from France to the village of Bethlehem, in New England. (During the war, they'd

She spent the evening with that "Left-Out Feeling"!

What fun is a party—for the girl other guests ignore? If only she didn't risk offending. If someone could whisper: "Never trust your charm to anything but dependable Mum." Mum gives safe, long-lasting protection against underarm odor. Its unique modern formula contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Be a safety-first girl. Get Mum cream deodorant today!

Mum-Safer for Charm ... Mum checks perspiration odor all day or evening. Protects against risk of future underarm odor after your bath washes away past perspiration.

Mum-Safer for Skin .... Smooth, creamy Mum contains no harsh or irritating ingredients. Doesn't dry out in the jar to form scratchy crystals. Gentle Mum is harmless to skin.

Mum-Safer for Clothes .... No damaging ingredients to rot or discolor fabrics. Quick, pleasant to use. Economical—no shrinkage, no waste.

For sanitary napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, sure ... dependable for this important use, too.

MUM
BRISTOL-MYERS CO. NEW YORK, N.Y.
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Product of Bristol-Myers

keeps you nice to be near

HELENA CARTER
Soon to be seen in
"TOMAHAWK", a Universal-International release.
Color by Technicolor.

Helena Carter brought love into my life!

I thought "dates" were something to eat!

Love was a dream I saw in the movies ... until these words of Helena Carter tipped me off: "Romance and rough, red hands don't go together. I keep my hands perfectly smooth, soft and feminine with Jergens Lotion."

It was Jergens Lotion for me, pronto!

I noticed the difference right away... my hands looked silky soft. Then the men around the office noticed too! Now "dates" mean dancing and dining...and Paul thinks hands like mine need a diamond!

No other hand care keeps your hands so smooth, so lovely. Being a liquid, Jergens Lotion furnishes the softening moisture thirsty skin needs. Never oily or sticky. Still 10¢ to $1.00 plus tax, for today's finer Jergens Lotion.

Hollywood Stars Use Jergens Lotion 7 to 1 Over Any Other Hand Care.

Used by more Women than any other Hand Care in the World!

Come To The Stable: Loretto Young and Celeste Holm are nuns who are trying to establish a children's hospital. Hugh Marlowe helps them.

vowed that if God would spare a certain hospital in a certain French town, they—the Sisters—would some day visit the United States and establish a new children's hospital.) Once in Bethlehem, they move in on the stable-home of an eccentric painter of religious subjects, a Miss Amelia Potts (Elsa Lanchester). After they've quite taken her breath away, they go to petition the Bishop of their church. He's astounded by their plan. They have no money, no land, nothing but faith. He says he'll give them one month to see what they can accomplish. The Sisters discover a hill they like, call on the owner (Thomas Gomez), one of the biggest racketeers in the city, and come away with the deed to the property. (Gomez' son was killed near where the Sisters served, in France, and all he asks is that their hospital have a memorial window for his boy.) The Sisters put a deposit on an old factory building (for temporary use) and take an option to pay $5,000 more in three months. (There's also a mortgage of $25,000 outstanding, but they don't know or care about that.) The Bishop, who's a more practical soul, doesn't think they can even raise the $5,000 in three months, and he wishes they'd go back to France. He's about to pack them off, when 17 more nuns from their order arrive, fresh off the boat. They all settle in Miss Potts' stable, and start making ceramics, pastries, lace, etc.—which they plan to sell to raise the needed money. There's another story running through the nuns' story, and this second drama has to do with a young composer (Hugh Marlowe) and his girl, and his career, and his objection to the new hospital right under his nose. He sees the light in the nick of time, though. Celeste Holm plays Sister Scolastica with what sounds to these ears like a flawless French accent. She's a very versatile girl. She supplies a large share of the charming moments in this pleasant film.

THE SECRET GARDEN

Cast: Margaret O'Brien, Herbert Marshall, Dean Stockwell, Gladys Cooper, Elsa Lanchester, Brian Roper.
MGM

A quality of magic pervades The Secret Garden. For a little while, you're transported into a world of children and small animals,

The Secret Garden: Margaret O'Brien befriends Dean Stockwell and Brian Raper and they wark ta recreate the farmer beouty af the garden.

where everything is green and growing, and there is no place for death or decay. The Secret Garden begins with Mary Lennox (Margaret O'Brien) coming from India, where her parents have died, to England, where her uncle, Archibald Craven (Herbert Marshall) has an estate. Craven tells May he doesn't spend much time at the estate (he stays in London mostly) but that she's welcome there. He's a bitter man—hunch-backed—and he's had no interest in living since the tragic death of his beautiful wife. Mary, who's both lonely and curious, makes friends with a neighboring farm boy named Dickon (Brian Roper) and together, they ferret out the Craven mysteries. First, there's a secret boy. He's Colin Craven (Dean Stockwell), believed to have inherited a tendency to a crooked back from his father. He's kept in bed with braces on his legs, and he has tantrums. Second, there's a secret garden. Out in the middle of the big formal gardens, there's a walled-off section, overgrown with vines. Dickon and Mary find the gate in the vines, they dig up the key that fits the gate, and they push their way into the hidden place. It's desolate. Over-run with weeds. (Craven's wife had been killed here, by a limb falling from a tree, as she'd sat drinking tea with him on an afternoon ten years before. In his grief, he'd had the area sealed up, buried the key. Mary and Dickon proceed to bring the garden to life by sneaking in and working there every day. (The garden, incidentally, is in Technicolor, everything else in black and white. A good idea.) They also bring Colin to life, by sharing their secret with him, by wheeling him out of his room, into the sun and air. (The father's guilty certainty that he's passed his own infirmity on to his son is what's been making the child a bed-ridden neurotic.) As the garden blooms, so does Colin, and the picture has an ending which thrills and touches you. Margaret's wonderful, Dean Stockwell's only excellent (he's in fast company, and everything's relative) and Dickon—or rather, Brian Roper—is unbelievably fine. He has a lovely soft Welsh accent, his manner and his voice are gentle, his understanding of his part, absolute. Don't miss The Secret Garden. It will give you a couple of shining hours.

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

✓ Not a soap; not a cream— cannot leave dulling film!

✓ Quickly, effectively removes dandruff from both hair and scalp!

✓ Gives fragrant, soft-water lather even in hardest water!

✓ Leaves hair lustrously soft, easy to manage—with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or cream shampoos hides its natural lustre with dulling soap film

✓ Halo—not a soap, not a cream—contains no sticky oils, nothing to hide your hair's natural lustre with dulling film. Made with a new patented ingredient, Halo brings out glossy, shimmering highlights the very first time you use it! Its delightfully fragrant lather rinses away quickly, completely in any kind of water—needs no lemon or vinegar rinse. For hair that's naturally colorful, lustrously soft, easy to manage—use Halo Shampoo! At any drug or cosmetic counter.

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

Down on Radio Row there are tall tales about a certain master of unceremony. Everyone I've talked to says he's a hazard to women's inhibitions. His name is Art Linkletter. This master of mirth runs a small daily riot called "House Party" on the American Broadcasting Company network but it's like no house party I ever attended. For Pillsbury's mid-day host is a genius at verbally creeping up on an unwary participant. His interviews are famous for revealing repartee. As a matter of fact, someone once said that Linkletter could find something gay and funny in a quilting bee at an old maid's home. If "House Party" is any indication of this talent, I agree completely. Linkletter perpetually skates on the censor's thin ice. The personal questions he asks the Mrs.'s at the mike are unbelieveably funny. But that's not all of "House Party", there are stunts that could be conceived only by a master . . . games, quizzes and contests of the "est" variety—biggest feet, oldest old maid, longest married and so on. But the crowning glory of this noontime madness is Linkletter, the man who flies through his ad libs with the greatest of ease and makes "House Party" the best reason for staying out of the noon day sun ever invented.

P.S. In case you don't know it's at 12:00 noon EST every weekday.

★ ★ ★

Anyone can put her foot into it, but you should hear the contestants on Peter Donald's show talk their way out of it! This is just about the most hilarious example of the ticklish situation I ever heard. For here is the proof that silence is NOT golden. Peter Donald sows his wild oats (Quaker, of course) by donning fantastic guises to go with each situation — "Scarface Stilletto" was my favorite with "unwashed Donald" a close second — and then the trapped participants talk their way out of it to the tune of cash prizes. Naturally Peter Donald's masterful dialects are the creme de la creme which makes me sorry "Talk Your Way Out Of It" — a mad melee of wit and nitwiticism — is only aired Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 3:00 PM EST on the ABC network.

★ ★ ★

Other Tips on Daytime Dialing

Modern Romances 11:00 AM EST
Thrilling dramatizations of twentieth century love.

Galen Drake 4:00 PM EST
Interesting facts and fiction told by a master entertainer.

Betty Crocker 10:25 AM EST
Instructive household hints you'd never find elsewhere.

Joan Lansing

ROPE OF SAND

Cast: Burt Lancaster, Paul Henreid, Claude Rains, Corrine Calvet, Peter Lorre.
Paramount

There's a diamond area in South Africa belonging to a certain Colonial Diamond Company. The area's in the middle of a vast stretch of desert, it's surrounded by barbed wire, it's constantly patrolled, and its commandant is a beast named Vogel (Paul Henreid). There's nothing inviting about the place. But guide Burt Lancaster is out with a crazy hunter, and they camp near the prohibited area to sleep, and when Burt wakes up in the morning, the hunter's gone. Sneaked into the area. Burt follows his tracks, finds the man dying in the middle of a pile of uncut diamonds. He's stumbled on a fortune. Burt buries the stones, starts to carry the hunter back out of the area, but is picked up by one of Vogel's patrols. Vogel beats Burt for a couple of days, trying to make him tell where the diamonds are but Burt's naturally resentful and won't talk. He leaves South Africa—for his health. Two years later, he's back. Vogel's set to go to work on him again, but Burt claims he has business with Claude Rains, Vogel's superior. (Rains owns stock in the diamond company.) Burt plans to grab those diamonds (he feels he's already paid for them in blood) and everybody knows it. Rains wants to discover where the cache is just as much as Vogel does, but he's more subtle. He sics a French trollop (that's what they call her) onto Burt. Trollop (Corrine Calvet) falls in love with Burt, doesn't want to pump him. This distresses Rains. "Does money have no meaning anymore?" he demands in disbelief. As for Vogel, he loves the trollop till he discovers she loves Burt, and there are tricks, counter-tricks, and a couple of really spectacular fights. Vogel fights dirty—kicks, punches, grinds Burt's head in the sand—but Burt's a gentleman. It's a wonder he ever wins, the dopey way he acts. He'll get up off the ground, eyes full of grit, mouth missing teeth. Vogel'll be trying to run over him with a tractor, but if Burt sees Vogel's unarmed, he'll throw away his gun. Since gallantry like that doesn't go unrewarded in Hollywood, the picture has a happy ending. It also has Peter Lorre being very amusing, and Rains' performance is slick.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

We've got our own ideas about "first come, first served." To the first 500 readers who return this questionnoire to us, we're offering a free three-month subscription to Modern Screen. We're anxious to know which stories you liked best in this issue and the stars you'd like to read about in the future. Don't forget, if you hurry, you can be one of the lucky winners of our November, December, and January issues. Free to the first 500!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our September issue? Write the NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd and 3rd choices.

- . . . So She Married the Boss (Jennifer Jones) ☐
- The Story Behind the Gable Legend (Clark Gable) ☐
- Get Off That High Horse! (Bergman, Wilde, Davis, etc.) . . . by Hedda Hopper ☐
- Marriage On Her Mind (Lizabeth Scott) ☐
- How Perfect Is "Perfect?" (Joan Fontaine) ☐
- Return From Tragedy (Robert Walker) ☐
- This Love Of Ours (Lucille Ball) ☐
- No Help Wanted (John Agar) ☐
- House Swarming (Bob Arthur) ☐
- The Truth About Rita's Honeymoon (Rita Hayworth) ☐
- Has Lana Turner Changed? ☐
- My Own Story. . . . by Montgomery Clift ☐
- Stop Lying About Crosby! (Bing Crosby) ☐
- Hollywood's Dizziest Marry-Go-Round (Flynn, Haymes, Eddington, Dru) ☐
- My Prayer Was Answered . . . by Jane Powell ☐
- Picture of the Month (Under Capricorn) ☐
- Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old.

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

also showing . . .

capsule criticism of films previously reviewed

ANY NUMBER CAN PLAY (MGM)—Clark Gable, as the proprietor of a legal gambling dive, is beset by difficulties stemming from his rugged profession, but things work out beautifully after the joint is held up. A tailor-made role for Gable in a continuously interesting drama. With Alexis Smith, Wendell Corey, Audrey Totter and Darryl Hickman.

THE BEAUTIFUL BLONDE FROM BASHFUL BEND (20th-Fox)—A wild comedy in which Betty Grable, a straight-shooting gal of the Wild West, happens to become a schoolmarm. At times the laughs attempted just ain't there, but often they are. With Rudy Vallee, Cesar Romero and Olga San Juan.

THE BIG STEAL (RKO)—Robert Mitchum, as an Army lieutenant falsely accused of stealing a payroll, chases the real culprit all over Mexico while the authorities chase Mitchum. Lots of excitement against beautiful scenery. With Jane Greer, William Bendix and Patric Knowles.

THE GIRL FROM JONES BEACH (Warners)—A light and delightful comedy concerning Ronald Reagan's complex attempts to get schoolteacher Virginia Mayo for his model. With Eddie Bracken and Donna Drake.

THE GREAT GATSBY (Para.)—Alan Ladd as the man who amasses a shady fortune in a futile effort to win a girl who'd made other arrangements. This version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's famous novel of Prohibition days lacks the insight and scope of that moving work, but it's still a fascinating film. With Betty Field, Barry Sullivan, Macdonald Carey, Ruth Hussey, Howard Da Silva and Shelley Winters.

HOUSE OF STRANGERS (20th-Fox)—A passionate, exciting drama of a thriving Italian-American family in a slum neighborhood. Edward G. Robinson, as a well-meaning but illegal banker, is magnificent, and strong performances are given by Susan Hayward, Richard Conte and Luther Adler.

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMERTIME (MGM)—Judy Garland and Van Johnson as feuding but ever-loving clerks in a Gay Nineties music store. It's all quite enchanting—especially, of course, Judy. With S. Z. Sakall and Spring Byington.

INTERFERENCE (RKO)—Victor Mature as a professional football star who has less trouble with opposing teams than with his self-centered wife, Lizabeth Scott. Lucille Ball is his adoring secretary. Good, medium-weight drama. With Sonny Tufts and Lloyd Nolan.

ONCE MORE, MY DARLING (Univ.-Int.)—Robert Montgomery, tracking down a jewel thief, attempts to fascinate Ann Blyth, a girl the crook loves, and succeeds much too well for comfort. A bightly enjoyable farce.

RED, HOT AND BLUE (Para.)—Betty Hutton as a would-be actress whose simple-minded ambitions, and her hungry press agent, get her involved in intricate hilarities. Victor Mature is her long-suffering fella. Hutton reaches new heights in this, one of the brightest musical comedies in ages. With William Demarest, June Havoc, Raymond Walburn and Frank Loesser (who also wrote the very clever words and music).

SORROWFUL JONES (Para.)—Bob Hope as Damon Runyon's bookie who finds himself the guardian of a five-year-old girl. Hope, in a less farcical role than usual, is fine and Mary Jane Saunders, as the tot, is cute indeed. An eminently satisfactory comedy. With Lucille Ball, William Demarest and Bruce Cabot.

TAKE ONE FALSE STEP (Univ.-Int.) — William Powell, a respectable college professor, sets out to solve the disappearance of Shelley Winters before the police find her diary, in which he figures prominently. An intelligent comedy-melodrama-mystery. With Marsha Hunt, James Gleason and Jess Barker.

THE WINDOW (RKO)—Youngster Bobby Driscoll tells so many imaginative fantasies that nobody will believe him when he describes a real murder he's witnessed—nobody, that is, except two people who know he must be silenced. A film of almost unbearable suspense, brilliantly done. With Paul Stewart, Ruth Roman and Arthur Kennedy.

How to make a million women laugh!

A lot of women who use Fels-Naptha Soap would think we were kidding, if they saw this announcement. And they would laugh right in our faces.

They use Fels-Naptha because it already contains a wonderful ingredient—in addition to good golden soap. A proven ingredient, known for years for its active, dirt-removing ability . . . NAPTHA.

So . . . we don't make any laughable announcements about adding 'miracle' ingredients to Fels-Naptha Soap. We're content to make a laundry soap so good that women just smile—with pleasure—when they see the results it gives them on washday.

If you want better washday results—better in every way—we suggest you try the mild, safe soap with no 'miracle' ingredient—Fels-NAPTHA Soap.

MADE IN PHILA BY FELS & CO.

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

For a while her heart clung to the past. Then Jennifer Jones chose the future.

...so she married the boss

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

Jennifer and David Selznick arrive in London after their honeymoon.

Robert Walker and Jennifer Jones, then his wife, with David Selznick and Shirley Temple soon after the Walkers' initial Hollywood success.

■ Jennifer Jones has a habit, even in the midst of conversation, of falling into a silence while she thinks through a problem that has come up. Finally, after a spell of brooding, she will announce her decision. Jennifer followed this pattern in reaching her decision to marry David Selznick—the man who was caught so deeply by her dark beauty himself while bringing her to the attention of the world.

For more than a year before their recent marriage aboard a yacht off the Italian Riviera, there were recurrent reports of stress in their relationship. Only a few weeks ago, their conferences at various European resorts were being described as tempestuous and inconclusive. It was known that Jennifer was having the utmost difficulty in making up her mind.

Only by examining what led up to the tangled love affair can anyone get as much as a partial understanding of what these two were up against. Jennifer and David were caught in deep problems of the heart and soul that individuals do not ordinarily solve easily. . . . (Continued on page 89)

Like Jennifer, Bob Walker also begins a new life. For his story see page 37.

Your letters . . .

THE CASE OF MONTGOMERY CLIFT

Dear Editor: As president of a Montgomery Clift fan club I want to thank you for that fine open letter you wrote to him in the August issue of Modern Screen. Mr. Clift's indifference to his fan clubs has long been a discouraging factor in our organization. We realize that he is a very busy man, but after all, what's the point of his spending all his time choosing future movie scripts if his fans are so disappointed with him that they refuse to see his movies? Two journals were issued by our club without one bit of help or acknowledgement from Mr. Clift. He acted as if we didn't exist even though we kept him posted on the various activities and developments of the club. Maybe now he will come to realize just what a grave mistake he is making in ignoring his fan clubs. If he does—we have you to thank.

ELEANOR PAUL, MT. VERNON, N. Y.

Dear Editor: I was so surprised at some of the things you said in your open letter to Montgomery Clift that I had to write and tell you. I am secretary of his fan club in Madisonville, Texas, and I've never had any trouble in getting replies to letters I've sent him. In fact, Mr. Clift and his secretary were very cooperative in answering any question I asked about organizing and running a fan club. I even received a Valentine from Montgomery Clift, himself!

MARGIE WORCESTER, MADISONVILLE, TEXAS

Dear Editor: We can't understand why Montgomery Clift is a constant source of criticism. To begin with, why should he have to obey the wish of every fan club in the world? A person of his importance is likely to be flooded with thousands of fan letters and it isn't his fault if he can't answer them all. As long as he continues his outstanding acting he'll get along without any fan club telling him how. The way he leads his personal life is no one's business but his own—so please let's have no more of what we've just read in your August issue, because in our opinion, Montgomery Clift is tops!

NORMA ALLMAN
MACITA DEACY
LORA ALLMAN, BUCKLEY, WASHINGTON

Dear Editor: Your open letter to Montgomery Clift amazed and shocked me. I'm writing this to all the ungrateful fans who once claimed they were loyal to him. I don't think that these fans could find a nicer person to admire. When he was in New York he was mobbed by fans but he stopped to talk to as many as he could. He's a pretty busy man and he's been working hard these past few months. How could he find time to answer all his fan mail? He hasn't even received all his fan mail, because he's been traveling so much. I know for a fact that he has a new secretary trying to file all the letters he's been getting. I also know that he's going to hold an interview this fall and that any club president who asks for an invitation may attend. Monty isn't at all the conceited man you picture him. I do wish you'd print a nice article showing his discontened fans what a really fine person he is.

BARBARA COLLINS, NEW YORK CITY

Beauty is my business—

JENI FREELAND
a SweetHeart Cover Girl

AND SWEETHEART IS MY BEAUTY SOAP
say 9 out of 10 Cover Girls!

• We questioned the gorgeous girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year. You see them on newsstands right now. "What beauty soap do you use?" we asked. And 9 out of 10 gave the same answer..."SweetHeart Soap."

"I owe so much to SweetHeart Care!"

says JENI FREELAND, Stunning Cover Girl

"To earn top modeling fees, a cover girl must have a peaches-and-cream complexion. And I've found nothing else that compares to SweetHeart Care. It makes my skin look creamy-smooth, radiantly fresh and young."

• You may be letting happiness slip through your fingers until you discover the true beauty of your complexion. For that dewy-fresh, young look is wonderfully appealing! So profit from the experience of glamorous cover girls.

Use only pure, mild SweetHeart Soap for daily complexion care. SweetHeart's velvety lather feels heavenly gentle on your skin. For its Floating Lift is an amazing beauty action. You'll quickly see its beauty benefits! One week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer, smoother, younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

• Nadine Koehne, 10 months old, has started her modeling career. Chances are she'll grow up to be a lovely cover girl! For her mother guards the delicate beauty of Nadine's skin with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap.

• Today get gentle SweetHeart in the new, large bath size.

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

Keep COOL! Feel SMOOTH! Stay DAINTY!

Got those "high thermometer" blues? Then it's flower-fragrant Cashmere Bouquet Talc for you!—to help keep you cool and dainty all over! Try Cashmere Bouquet today and . . .

KEEP COOL Start with a tub or shower, follow with Cashmere Bouquet—all over! Absorbs any lingering moisture left after towelling . . . gives your skin a cool, fragrant freshness!

FEEL SMOOTH Before you dress . . . those little trouble spots, where chafing might occur, call for extra Cashmere Bouquet Talc. So smooth it on gently, feel how it protects with a silky-smooth sheath!

STAY DAINTY—

For perfect confidence in your 'round-the-clock daintiness, use Cashmere Bouquet Talc at least twice daily. Keep cool, feel smooth, be alluring . . . with its entrancing "fragrance men love"!

Cashmere Bouquet Talcum Powder

WITH THE FRAGRANCE MEN LOVE

25¢ and 39¢

Yes—

There's a Cashmere Bouquet Cosmetic for Almost Every Beauty Need!

LIPSTICK
Creamy, clinging . . . in 8 fashionable shades!

FACE POWDER
Smooth, velvety texture! 6 "Flower-Fresh" shades!

ALL-PURPOSE CREAM
For radiant, "date-time" loveliness—a bedtime beauty must!

HAND LOTION
Caressable hands in just seconds!

the rule that most forget an open letter to Jane Wyman

Dear Miss Wyman:

We hear that while in London making Stage Fright, you have found a brilliant 18-year-old actress named Pamela Stimson and have signed her to a personal contract. We understand that you're planning to bring Miss Stimson back to Hollywood with you to present her to Warner Brothers as a wonderful possibility for future stardom.

Time was when such an operation would have been practically unthinkable for an established star. It's still pretty darned unusual. True, we can think of some other stars who have given a helping hand to youngsters who someday might well be competition for top roles and public favor. There's Humphrey Bogart, for one, who has given John Derek a powerful boost, and for another there's Joan Crawford, who has for many years been helping young performers up the ladder. But such examples of unselfishness have been a notably distinct rarity.

For Hollywood, unfortunately, appears by and large to be a place in which the prevailing law is the law of the jungle, with people on all sides briskly stabbing backs and stepping on faces in a savage battle to get to the top or to stay there

Yet here you are, Miss Wyman, giving what must be a tremendously promising newcomer an opportunity to become a major figure on the same lot where you currently reign. You're widely considered to be one of the nicest people in the movies. This generous thing you're doing certainly gives added basis for that reputation.

You are indeed demonstrating an allegiance to something to which Hollywood—like the greater part of the world today—seems to find small use for. It's something that's been around for quite a spell, now, and nobody's been able to improve on it yet: The golden rule.

William B Hartley

EDITOR

BY JACK WADE

the story behind

the GABLE LEGEND

■ A few days before he checked back in at MGM to make Key to the City, Clark Gable fished the big-game waters off Guaymas, Mexico, seeking the king of the seas, black marlin. One bright blue afternoon, using light tackle, he tied into a 250-pounder. For the next two hours Clark had his big hands full, in a one-man battle against the fightingest fish that swims.

Twelve times the swordfish broke water, tail-dancing, whipping every steel muscle in his body to free himself from the straining line that Clark's aching muscles held in the boat. Nine times Clark had him up close to the boat only to be forced to play the line out again and watch his catch zip away in a charging rush for life.

Halfway through the churning scrap, Clark started talking to his opponent. "Nice going kid . . . What a fighter! . . . Boy, can you take it! . . . Beautiful . . . Beautiful . . ." When he reeled him in at last, played out and conquered, Clark's eyes were sweat-blinded, his bulging arms trembled, cigarettes had burned blisters on his lips, his bare shoulders were roasted red. But he had his prize.

"Say, Skipper," said Gable, "suppose you can unhook him in the water?"

The Mexican boatman almost dropped his gaff. Was this Yanqui sportsman loco? Some people, they spent lives chasing a marlin and never got a strike. And here this man had caught this beautiful big one, this rare one, and wished to let him go!

"I theenk so, Señor—but . . ."

"Okay," said Clark. "Let him go. A fighting guy like that deserves his freedom."

Clark Gable's sporting sympathy with the swordfish he'd hooked is understandable. For a long time his own position has been somewhat similar. Not for two hours but for almost 20 (Continued on page 60)

Movie idols come and go, but for twenty years Clark Gable has reigned supreme in Hollywood. Despite the onrush of time and of mixed fortune, his public remains vast and loyal. What's the secret? What's the magic of his personality? Few people really know. Even his close friends seem baffled by his perpetual popularity. Here, in a penetrating story, Modern Screen presents an analysis of Gable the man— and why he is King.

GET OFF THAT HIGH

Prima donnas have their place, but not in Hollywood, warns Hedda—

BY HEDDA HOPPER

■ The other morning I ripped open a letter on my desk and shook my head as I read it. I shook it from sorrow and also from shock.

"I'd like to get my hands on that little girl and shake her until her teeth rattle," it read. "She ought to be spanked, breaking up her mother's chance for happiness like that. I doubt if I'll ever go to see her again in a picture."

That was one of a hundred letters like it—and I thought how different my mail about this girl used to be. Only a few months ago, the letters read, "How I wish she were my daughter. . . . She's a lovable darling. . . . I never miss her pictures. . . . She's Hollywood at its best. . . ."

But now the fans were writing me about Margaret O'Brien's temperamental young tricks in messing up her mother's marriage. All over the world, the public was angrily shaking fingers at the little idol they used to pet.

Only a few weeks ago, Louis B. Mayer, MGM's boss, called one of his studio's greatest stars to his office. He had a sad but necessary decision to hand her. "We can't stand these hold-ups any longer," he told her. "The industry and the state of business can't take it." He pointed out the promises she'd made to snap out of her nerves, and her failures. He cited what the failures had cost—$900,000 extra due to continual hold-ups on one picture alone. Then he told her she was out of the picture she wanted to do more than any she'd ever made; another star had been hired. "You need a long rest," he counselled kindly.

That's what Judy Garland's having—in a hospital in Boston, as I write, on long suspension from the studio where she rose from a kid to fame and love in the hearts of millions, and a salary of $7,500 a week.

Last fall I talked to a star on her return from making a picture in England. Before that, in Hollywood, she had dipped from a divine career to two serious flops. Their failure was mainly attributable to her own willfulness and bad judgment. But that seemed no great disgrace. I asked her then what she'd be doing next.

"I don't know," she answered. "I haven't had an offer. I guess nobody wants me," she laughed.

Not so funny, really. Not at all, the way it turned out. Because, unknown to me, she'd already written a fascinating foreigner that she'd come to him whenever he wanted her. And he did, all right. Do you think the once-adoring public will ever worship Ingrid Bergman again after Signor Rossellini and that Isle of Caprice, Stromboli? I certainly don't. Under Capricorn, the movie she made in England for Alfred Hitchcock, may be a box-office hit—but, in the long run, I'm afraid Ingrid has harmed herself irreparably.

What's happening to Hollywood's golden (Continued on page 85)

Ingrid Bergman reached the heights while following experienced guides, but when she insisted on running things herself, two weak pictures and scandal followed.

Teresa Wright bowed out of making personal appearances to help sell Enchantment. This was the last temperamental straw for her boss, Sam Goldwyn.

HORSE!

who's seen too many stars cool off before their tempers did...

Laraine Day was widely considered to be one of the sweetest and friendliest young actresses who ever came to Hollywood—but her sudden attack of lofty temperament on the set didn't serve to further that reputation.

Cornel Wilde is still coasting along on his fame from A Song To Remember. Instead of cooperating with his studio in propping up his talents, he fought against it, no longer gets the big Fox roles.

Bette Davis used to laugh at prima donnas, but she's well on the way to becoming one herself. Ever since Winter Meeting, she's been ducking the press she used to love, and wearing a chip on her talented shoulder.

Paulette Goddard tossed the first tantrum of her career during Bride of Vengeance. When she and her regular beautician disagreed, Paulette got another to give her the unwise make-up she wanted.

Marriage on her Mind

Gossips say she's a hermit; they say she hates men. But Liz Scott knows what she wants—he just hasn't come along.

BY FLORENCE SLOAN

■ Last year, after the Notre Dame-Southern California football game, Lizabeth Scott threw a party over at her place for the visiting Irish from South Bend.

During the course of the festivities, a big hulk of a fullback came up behind Liz and ever so gently tugged at a few locks of her blonde hair. Liz turned around.

"Do you mind if I ask you one question?" the fullback said. "It's been on my mind all evening."

Liz gave the mountain of muscle a small smile. "Ask away," she said.

"How come," the football player said, "that a beautiful blonde like you isn't married?"

Liz looked thoughtful for a moment. Then— "I just haven't had the time," she answered playfully.

That was last year. This year, despite the fact that she's already finished three pictures, the last of which was Hal Wallis' Bitter Victory, Liz has plenty of time to get married—and wants to very much. "The only thing that's holding me back," she says frankly, "is that I haven't got a fellow."

What Liz actually means is that she hasn't found "the" fellow.

Movie-goers find that difficult to believe, because for the past three years, the gossip columnists have been announcing prospective husbands for her with both amazing and amusing regularity.

First, the columnists had Liz (Continued on page 100)

Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas have different opinions on Lizabeth Scott. Burt thinks she always seems lonely. Kirk admires her for her sociability.

Liz entertains Notre Dame football players Ziggy Czarboski, Creighton Miller and Johnny Lujack at a party for the team when they played U.S.C. last year.

how perfect is "PERFECT?"

Out of three things dearly cherished, Joan Fontaine filled her home with grace and joy and dreamlike beauty— yet tragedy walked in.

BY VIOLA MOORE

■ This is the story of a house that once knew love and happiness. In this house, beautiful Joan Fontaine and her producer husband William Dozier lived contentedly with their 11-months-old baby daughter Deborah. All Hollywood pointed to the Doziers as the perfect married couple—the perfect marriage in a perfect house.

Now that picture has changed. The perfect marriage has broken up, and happiness has departed from Joan's dream house. Joan left her husband to fly to New York. "We tried to make a go of it, but one couldn't go on pretending. We apparently just weren't suited," Joan has said sadly to her friends.

From New York, Joan left for Italy where she planned to stay four weeks while making her next film, September. Little Debbie, according to plans made by her parents at the time of their separation, was to stay with her father until her mother's return, at which time Bill Dozier would move out of Hollywood's one-time happiest home and Joan would remain there alone with her daughter.

This is the tragic story that all Hollywood has taken as a personal blow. It is also the story that everyone hopes will change—that Joan and Bill will reconcile their differences and return to the house that they gave such loving care.

And what about that house?

Somebody once gave Joan Fontaine a green ceramic bowl, a Spanish painting and half-a-dozen lovely sea shells. Joan is a girl with a poetic imagination. In these objects she saw a bowl, she saw a painting, she saw sea shells—but also much more. She saw them as the keynotes of a beautiful symphony that she would create—a symphony in the form of a hilltop house that she would completely redesign and redecorate herself. . . .

The house is a chocolate-brown redwood structure trimmed with white, standing in three acres of wooded ground. It affords entrancing views of the surrounding land, from the UCLA campus in distant Westwood to the sea at Santa Monica. It was owned formerly by the president of the Paddock Pool Company, and it was he who put in the unique swimming pool. Joan says she and Bill Dozier bought the place mainly because of this delicately-curved lagoon. And it was the first item on Joan's re-doing schedule—

Young Debbie Dozier has inherited her parents' skill at horseback riding, but she's still restricted to the nursery floor. Leading from the nursery there's a balcony with her special sunning crib.

Joan used the warm tones of her famous Utrillo painting (on the far wall) in designing her formal living-room. The larger living-room—known as "The Glass Room"—is pictured on the opposite page.

Bill Dozier's book-lined den was the kind of room where you could really relax and put your feet up. In addition to Joan's ceramics, the den contained an extensive collection of model sailing ships.

The view from the Dozier dining-room made it a charming place for lunching. But for dinner parties, they used the larger "Glass Room."

Joan gets a little suntan by the swimming pool. The rock garden was one of her best ideas, and she takes care of the shrubs herself.

The master bedroom, done in shades of hazy blue, is dominated by the seven-foot bed. The painting on the right, over the bed, is of Joan.

Joan's exquisite sea-shell pink dressing room is a wonder of uncluttered efficiency. The mirrored doors lead to her both and clothes room.

HOW PERFECT IS "PERFECT?"

which was triumphantly completed about a year ago, just before daughter Deborah was born.

Shady oaks and olive trees and twining tropical plants were set along the sides of the pool, and at one end Joan had made a towering rock garden planted with flowering shrubs. Then she began on the house.

She took her ceramic bowl, shaped like a jade-green cabbage, and from it designed her living-room color scheme. Dark-green paneled cornices border the ceiling and walls, and are filled with sprays of growing ivy. The leather seats for the bar are green, and so are the wrought-iron glass-topped tables and chairs. Intermediate shades of chartreuse blend into the clear lemon tones of the draperies.

Joan calls her living room "The Glass Room." It is well named. Its windows are solid sheets of glass, and give a three-sided view. Large French doors present vistas of the garden and pool. Sunlight and shadow filter constantly across the floor in ever-changing patterns, as the living green of the lawn and trees seems to come right inside through the glistening walls of glass.

The Doziers could have 20 people for dinner in this room, by grouping the smaller tables together. They could cope with a hundred for cocktails. But their favorite form of fun was musical evenings. And happily enough, among their special friends were Dinah Shore, Gordon MacRae, Jeanette MacDonald and Artur Rubenstein—which brings up the matter of Joan's miniature piano.

When the "Glass Room" was completed, Joan went shopping for her piano. She wanted one that, when not in use, could be kept out of the way in a closet. She went to an exclusive piano showroom, took out a tape measure, measured off a length and held it up.

"I want a piano this big," she said to the wing-collared salesman.

"You wish a toy piano?" said the salesman with a touch of hauteur. "I'm afraid, Madam, you have come to the wrong—"

"No, no!" said Joan. "I want a real piano. But a small one."

"Ah!" said the salesman. "For a child."

"No," said Joan. "For an adult, one I can keep in a closet."

The salesman raised his eyebrows. "You plan, Madam, to keep an adult in a closet?"

"Look," said Joan. "I . . ." Then she gave up. "Certainly," she said with a bright smile. "It's my eccentric uncle, who's coming to visit. He's lived in a closet for years—he thinks he's a vacuum cleaner—and I thought he'd like a piano for company. But I guess I'll just get him a piccolo. . . . Goodbye! It's been charming."

So she went across the street and bought a small piano.

Joan keyed the color scheme of her smaller, more formal living-room to her treasured Utrillo oil painting. This is the first room you see when you come into the house. It's a lovely, restful spot. Ancient Chinese tea-canisters serve as lamp-bases on either side of the couch. Above the large fireplace, two Chelsea China dogs guard the mantel. Chairs upholstered in paisley prints stand (Continued on page 96)

Back at work, Bob Walker takes time out for coffee and a re-reading of the script for his latest movie, Please Believe Me.

RETURN from TRAGEDY

With his own hands he wanted to bring her the world. This was Bob Walker's dream—leading him ever closer to despair . . .

BY ARTHUR L. CHARLES

■ In a small, sparsely-furnished room in a sanitarium in Topeka, Kansas, a thin, harried man of 30 sits silently on a cot and stares at the floor. The door opens and a professional-appearing man in a loose white coat enters.

The man on the bed doesn't look at him.

The doctor says, "Do you want to have a talk with me today, Bob?"

The patient grits his teeth and shakes his head, never looking up. The doctor leaves, but he'll be back again tomorrow.

Don't get this wrong. The man on the bed is a patient, yes. But he's not insane. He's Robert Walker, movie star. The Menninger Clinic, with its clean, attractive buildings designed and decorated in the best possible taste, is no "snake pit." It is a mental hospital, but here there is no restraint. It costs a lot of money to stay at Menninger's, and if you can't stand the tariff or you really want to go home, you don't have to make it over the wall in the dead of night to get out. You check (Continued on page 81)

For the story of Jennifer Jones' new-found happiness, see page 24.

THIS LOVE OF OURS

by Lucille Ball

fourth in a series

Life with Desi is crazy and exciting, but our love is deep and changeless.

■ He came whipping around the corner and knocked me off my feet. He picked me up and said, "Hey! You're Lucille Ball, aren't you?"

"And you're Desi Arnaz," I gasped.

There must have been more conversation than that, but I just can't remember what it was. I only know that when we left the movie set to go home that night, I had promised this Desi fellow I'd go dancing with him. He'd said something about wanting to teach me a new rhumba number for our movie, Too Many Girls.

Desi is a born romanticist. That night he didn't suggest any of the usual Hollywood night spots. Instead, we went to a tiny Mexican café in downtown Los Angeles. The place was a perfect romantic setting; a half-dozen candle-lit tables, homey checkered tablecloths. And a jovial proprietor complete with handsome black mustachios. For every woman who has been in love, one special date in her life stands out in her memory, to be lived over and over again. This would be mine.

Desi ordered a Mexican dinner, and we talked before, after and between each mouthful of food. We were like old acquaintances, and we didn't have time for a single dance. At the end of the evening I knew that Desi's home was in Cuba and that his father was mayor of the town of Santiago. He told me about his folks, I told him about mine. In a word—the evening was a complete success.

As you may have guessed by now, Desi turned out to be my favorite husband. We were married in a civil ceremony, November 30, 1940.

When Desi and I decided to get married, we chose a county courthouse in Greenwich, Connecticut. I was a little disappointed. The place was so public, and not at all romantic. On the specified day, we picked up our license from the clerk, and hurried over to the Judge's office. He was waiting for us. Instead of reading the brief civil rites there in his chamber, he winked, hustled into his overcoat, and smilingly pushed us out the door.

Desi and Judge O'Brien had found a better place for us to be married—the Byram River Beagle Club. The place was deserted. We stood before a great fire crackling in the huge stone fireplace of the club's lounge. The scent of burning pine-cones was as fragrant as incense, and outside, the first winter snow flurries banked the frosty window panes. Believe me, no movie set could have surpassed that rustic New England charm.

It would have been a wonderful place for a honeymoon, but we had to dash back to New York, since Desi and his band were appearing at the Roxy theater. Shortly afterward, we left for Hollywood.

My one great fear of our trip out to the coast were those three days Desi would have to spend in my company. (Continued on page 98)

"Isn't this romantic?" asked Desi when the above photo was shot soon after their wedding. It's from Lucille's personal album.

NO HELP WANTED

They never call him Mr. Temple, and they never will. Because the only hand she ever gave him— was in marriage.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

Next to Linda Susan, Lannie, the Agars' callie, is the most important junior member of the household. When Jack's on location, Lannie stays up all night, growling away at every sound.

On evenings at home, Jack and Shirley often get out their memory book. Among their favorite pictures is one taken right after their marriage—showing them dancing cheek-to-cheek.

In I Married A Communist, Jack plays the first really dramatic role of his career. Above, a scene with Janis Carter and Tom Gomez.

■ The day Jack went off to make his contract test, there wasn't a great to-do in the Agar household. Shirley said good luck at the door, and kissed him. Sometimes when a person's tied up in knots inside, it's better if you and he are matter-of-fact on the outside. Besides, you can say an awful lot in a kiss. . . .

Since then, Jack's made four pictures. His first two landed him 'way out front among the popular newcomers. His next two, if the grapevine's telling the truth, will really send him zooming. Last May, the University Theater of the Air, which can pretty well take its pick of actors, starred him in Stephen Crane's The Red Badge of Courage. He'd never done a broadcast before. Knees knocking together, he socked across a subtle, adult, and compelling job.

Jack's doing all right. At least, that's how it looks from where we stand. His own view is more sober. "All I know is, it's murder to watch myself on the screen. All I want to do is crawl down under the seat. All I think is, brother, have I got things to learn!" Beyond that he won't commit himself. "So far I've got by. (Continued on page 78)

When Jack comes home after a hard day's work, Shirley pushes him into a chair and makes it easy for him to relax.

by reba and bonnie churchill

House Swarming!

The walls rocked, the floors jumped and Bob Arthur almost hit the ceiling. There was a hot time at his house— when his gang came to warm it.

All the food at the surprise house-warming thrown for Bob Arthur

■ Robert Arthur opened his front door. For a second he looked wildly at the 18 people jamming his porch. Then, "Yipes!" he cried. "It's an invasion!"

"Surprise! Surprise!" we yelled, and pushed our way in.

We were Tom Drake and Terry Moore, bearing a pan of taffy and a bowl of tomato aspic; Colleen Townsend, Darryl Hickman, Margie Alston, Michael and Nora Kirby, loaded down with bread sticks and a roasting pan filled to the brim with spaghetti; Jerome Courtland escorting Sally Forrest, Lois Butler with Gene Reynolds; guitar-totin' Richard Foote with Barbara Fuller; Roddy McDowall with his sister, Virginia. Bringing up the rear were us Churchills, hustling between us a gallon container of peppery spaghetti sauce.

Soon as we'd all entered and the babble had somewhat subsided, the bewildered Bob was let in on just what had brought about this mass descent on his diggings.

It was like this: The gang had decided that Bob was becoming a Hollywood hermit. When not working in 20th Century-Fox's Twelve O'Clock High, he could always be found with his buddy, Frank (Continued on page 44)

Kind of sticky but most fun of all, an old-fashioned taffy pull climaxes the hectic evening. Terry Moore gives Tom Drake a few pointers on how to pull without getting stuck.

thur wos brought by the guests, who formed a chowline at once. Here, outhors Rebo and Bonnie Churchill and Colleen Townsend serve the spoghetti.

In what will eventually be Bob's ultra-modern kitchen, the tatty-pullers pause briefly to replenish supplies. The house is 'woy up in the hills ond still has no heat, but Bob hos great plons—for o helicopter londing field!

After putting o whirlwind polka on the phonograph, Sally Forrest, who used to feoch dancing, shows Terry how it should be done. Jerry Courtland (left) seems stumped—but he soon joined in vigorously.

(Continued from page 42) Long, building his new house. Although the place will not be completed for several months, the boys had already moved in.

The only time any of his pals were getting a glimpse of Bob was when he'd come around to "borrow a bath" (the new place was still minus hot water) or come seeking candles (it was also temporarily lacking in electricity).

Something had to be done. So we put our heads together and decided to surprise Bob and help him "break in" the house. With the wonderful aid of Frank Long and Bob's girl, Natalie Garrotto, we managed to keep the whole thing a dark secret from Bob.

Another major contribution from Frank was arranging lights. The neighbors down the hill (Bob lives high on a mountain in a spot that would take an ambitious bloodhound hours to locate) let Frank run an extension cable to the house. Then Frank and Natalie had the soldierly task of keeping Bob occupied in the house while we assembled the gang —who'd brought along a complete dinner— at the bottom of the hill. We'd decided that one mammoth onslaught was the best policy.

Jerry Courtland and Sally Forrest, early arrivals, (Continued on page 93)

Colleen Townsend takes charge of the second-helping division at Bob Arthur's party while Barbara Fuller and Reba lend her a hand.

Frank Long, Bab's roommate, and Barbara Fuller—Claudia in radia's One Man's Family—wonder haw much Dick Foote can hald.

Sitting aut a dance, Colleen and Darryl Hickman (he's in Any Number Can Play) seem happy with a less strenuous activity.

After doing everything but jumping rope with the taffy, Sally Forrest and Jerry Caurtland decided ta taste some—and it's gaod.

Roddy McDawall (left) brings his polka with Barbara to a frisky finale. Tam Drake pretends Terry Moore is too heavy for him.

Lois Butler, at the piano, and Dick Foate start the bunch singing the gaåd ald sangs. Dick was the singer in Streets of Laredo.

People pair off and wander away at the end ot any party. At this one, Lois and Gene Reynalds were attracted by the cool veranda.

the truth about rita's honeymoon

Surrounded by admirers at the Longchamps Race Track in Paris, Rita suddenly feels faint. She and Aly Khan spent 20 days in their first month of marriage at the races.

They might have rented the Persian Gulf and drifted off in a boat of gold. But they didn't—Rita and Aly's honeymoon was even more amazing!

By K. ROBY EUNSON

Rita and Aly Khan flew from France to the races at Epsom Downs.

Raas Prince Monolulu, well-known tipster, greets Rita warmly at the Longchamps track. Shortly after, Rita had the thrill of seeing her husband's horse win the Prix de Courteuil.

Rita congratulates Skylarking in the paddock after the horse won its maiden race at Le Tremblay, near Paris. The two-year-old filly was one of the four that Aly Khan gave Rita for a wedding present.

All the world watched Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan in their tempestuous, far-flung courtship, heard with excitement the sensational announcement of their "engagement", marveled at their spectacular wedding. Now MODERN SCREEN brings its readers further authoritative coverage of this fabulous romance. In the following extraordinary story, our Paris correspondent presents an intimate picture of the famous couple on their honeymoon.
—THE EDITORS.

PARIS.—After all the hullabaloo of their super-lavish wedding, one might have imagined that Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan would then have embarked on a honeymoon of history-making magnificence and revelry. But not so! True, the honeymoon has scarcely been like a jaunt to Niagara Falls. Yet Rita and Aly have spent it comparatively quietly and constructively. Their main public activity has been one in which hundreds of thousands of quite ordinary citizens engage every day: Going to the races.

Aly started right off making Rita's honeymoon a happy one by presenting her, immediately after the wedding, with a number of the pleasant things the wife of an Indian potentate should properly have. Among the gifts were a resplendent Alpha-Romeo automobile, four racehorses, a huge cash dowry and, of course, a few dozen diamonds and rubies.

While all the other presents were very nice indeed, the four racehorses have probably given Rita the most fun so far. A week after the marriage, she won her first race when her filly Skylarking, a beautiful two-year-old, came romping home ahead of the pack in its initial race at Le Tremblay, near Paris. Then Skylarking was shipped to England. There it didn't do so brilliantly—it ran fifth in a seven-horse race at Ascot.

Rita's other horses are Saxon, a three-year-old bay stallion that, like Skylarking, was bred in Aly's stud in Normandy; Sultan Blanc (White Sultan), a superb white stallion; and Princess Kernin, a fine chestnut filly. Saxon won a race for his new owner two weeks after the wedding. As he came thundering down the stretch at Longchamps, Rita almost climbed right over the rail, so thrilled was she at the sight of her racing silks out in front.

At the wedding reception, while the guests were working away on the gallons of champagne and Aly was effervescing from one group to another, Rita, suddenly feeling tired, went over and sat on a sofa with the Aga Khan, and he and she had a nice long talk. That's when the red cap, red shirt and green sleeves of Rita's racing silks were decided upon. The colors, if not in that exact combination, are the Aga's—and he asked Rita to keep them in the family.

"Rita loves horses and is not merely a racehorse-owner who goes to the races only when she has entries running," says Richard Carter, Skylarking's trainer. In the first month of her honeymoon, Rita spent almost 20 days at various tracks. She raced horses in both France and England, often got up just after daybreak in order to see her stable trained. (Continued on page 62)

Now she's returned to Hollywood, her first love—but she brings a new love with her, a new life—and people wonder . . .

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

has Lana Turner changed?

More than a year ago, Lana Turner became the wife of millionaire Bob Topping and left Hollywood. Now, with Bob, she has returned to resume her screen career. The public has been asking how her marriage has affected Lana. The following story gives the answer.—THE EDITORS.

■ The tremendous four-engine airliner hurtled through the sky at 290 miles an hour. At 18,000 feet, the passengers could look up at the bright, hot morning sun and down at the billowing fog which hid the Los Angeles airport below.

FASTEN SAFETY BELTS. The warning sign glowed red. Travelers obeyed as though on cue from a director. On the arm-rests of her seat, Lana Turner's knuckles turned white.

Her husband, Bob Topping, noticed. "Hey," he said, grinning, "what's this?"

Lana managed a weak smile.

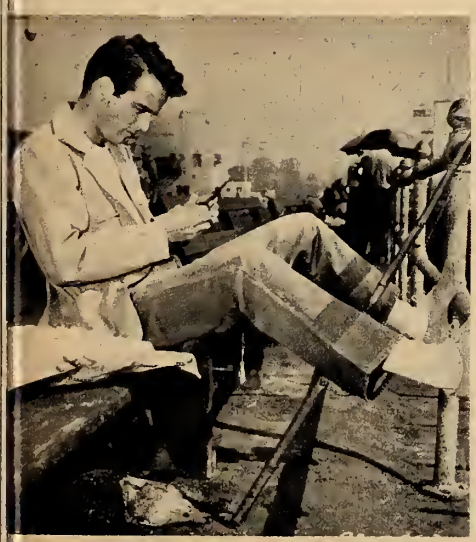
Now the plane began its glide into the blanket of nothingness below. Wisps of fog swirled by. Then the sun was gone and the engines set up a determined growl, biting into the lower air—down, down, down.

"See? Nothing to it." Bob was reassuring.

Lana closed her eyes tightly. Then the ship roared suddenly into a burst of speed. She felt the safety belt strain against her. Beside her, Bob smothered an exclamation of surprise—but abruptly they were in a bright corridor of sunshine which pointed down at the field (Continued on page 63)

Lana gains weight rapidly while relaxing, takes it off easily before working. Here, she poses with friends beside a 450-pound tuna she caught in the Bahamas.

At a special screening of The Heiress, these college fashion editors compare the real Montgomery Clift with his celluloid version. More formally



As one of "the most painful brats in theatrical history," Clift (with the aid of Andrea King) made life horrible for Thomas Mitchell when the three appeared in Broadway's Fly Away Home.

Although he had never been in the Army, Clift's performance as a G.I. in The Search was acclaimed for its solid reality. Clift, however, disagrees with the critics, stating, "The feeling of being a soldier among soldiers can't be faked."

ttired than usual, Clift relaxes under their scrutiny.

Despite quick fame and publicity build-ups, Clift's taste for the simple life remains. His burning desire is just to be a better actor.

modern screen proudly presents

MY OWN STORY

by montgomery clift

as told to george scullin

This is what everyone has been waiting for! Here, for the first time, Montgomery Clift tells his own story. It is the remarkable story of a stage-struck kid from Nebraska who wouldn't go home, of an actor who hit Hollywood like dynamite

■ Just a few years ago I was engaged in writing my life story for a small, dubious, but extremely important group of people in mid-town Manhattan. It was a brief story, about six lines, but upon their acceptance of it depended such little incidentals of personal interest as whether or not I continued to eat. They agreed that I was probably born on October 17, 1920, as stated in the script. It was obvious that I was six feet tall, weighed about 155, and had dark hair and blue-green eyes. My hungry look could support the statement that I was unemployed, but the doubt crept in about my profession. "An actor, he says," said my script-reader.

They went into a huddle, looking me over from time to time. I was wearing my best suit to make a good impression, and apparently I did. The huddle broke up and my script-reader returned with my life story. "All right, Clift," he said. "We've decided in your favor. You will start getting your unemployment insurance checks next week."

Circumstances are a little less strained at this writing, but my friends suggest that I keep my contacts with that unemployment office. It won't be necessary. I have a standing offer to return to Napa Valley, California, where I made good in a big way as a digger of irrigation ditches.

This fabulous business going on today—"Montgomery Clift, the brightest comet ever to burst into the firmament of Hollywood stars" —has me dazed, but not confused. I still know who I am. Now all I have to do is find out who the Montgomery (Continued on page 73)

In Warners' Under Capricorn, Ingrid Bergman, married to an ex-convict, Joseph Cotten, eventually becomes a dypsomaniac.

UNDER CAPRICORN

■ Under Capricorn is a big, flamboyant and satisfying drama, packed with explosive tensions. It takes place in Sydney, Australia, in 1831—when the colony's manpower cames mainly from British convicts sent out for terms of hard labor. One such is Sampson Flusky (Joseph Cotten), a low-born Irishman who, after serving seven years for murder, has rapidly become wealthy in the new land. His aristocratic wife (Ingrid Bergman)—for the killing of whose brother he was convicted—has followed him out, lived in poverty while he was in prison and now, broken in spirit by the years of hardship and loneliness for her own kind, has taken to drink. On the scene comes a young Irish gentleman (Michael Wilding) who turns out to be an old acquaintance of hers. With Flusky's blessing, he tries to rehabilitate her. This good work is luridly complicated by matters you'll find highlighted in the pictures to your right. . . . Alfred Hitchcock, working with a tense script, top-flight performers and a brilliant Technicolor production, has directed another bang-up entertainment.

Picture of the Month

Ingrid Bergman's latest role is in a taut, flamboyant drama of 19th Century Australia.

1. Wealthy ex-convict Sampson Flusky (Joseph Cotten) is happy at the initial success of elegant Charles Adare (Michael Wilding) in helping his wife Henrietta (Ingrid Bergman) conquer alcoholism.

2. Adare knew her in Ireland before she came here to Australia where Flusky was imprisoned for killing her brother. Housekeeper Milly (Margaret Leighton) suspects there's more than friendship.

3. Henrietta improves until she loses her grip again after Milly shames her before the servants. Adare goes to her bedroom to reason with her. Milly, vainly denouncing the pair to Flusky, leaves.

4. Henrietta now recovers. Adare takes her to the governor's ball—her first. Flusky is pleased until Milly returns, arouses his jealousy. He rushes off to the ball, makes his wife leave.

5. Adare follows her home, begs her to go off with him. But she says she loves Flusky—she killed her brother, Flusky took the blame. Flusky enters, in a struggle, accidentally shoots Adare.

6. If Adare dies, Flusky will hang. If not, Flusky will go back to jail—unless he confirms his wife's murder confession. Then Milly gets really mean and—but to learn the end, go see the film.

BY FRANCES CLARK

STOP LYING ABOUT

they whisper:

HE HAS CANCER.
HE GOES ON BENDERS.
HE AND DIXIE ARE SEPARATING.
HE'S LOSING HIS VOICE.
HE CAN'T READ MUSIC.
HE'S CARELESS ABOUT SINGING.
HE'S LAZY.
HE'S UNCOOPERATIVE.
HE'S RUDE.
HE'S UNFRIENDLY.

Few celebrities have ever been the subject of more lying rumors than has Bing Crosby. In the following story, a seasoned Hollywood reporter goes into some of the wilder Crosby yarns that the bzzz-bzzz group has circulated—and the effect on their victim.—THE EDITORS.

■ Back in the days when Bing Crosby had just abandoned Gonzaga U. textbooks to play the drums at high-school and college dances around Spokane with the Musicaladers, he stepped down from the bandstand one night and confronted a large senior.

"You been makin' cracks at me all evening," said Bing. "You don't like my drummin'. That's okay. You don't like

CROSBY!

Crosby leads a surprisingly rugged life for a man who's supposed to be dying of cancer. Here, he receives the winner's trophy at the Totem Pole Golf Tournament in Jasper National Park.

Friends and co-workers scoff at the idea that Bing is unfriendly. A sports enthusiast, and a good loser, Bing steps aside as Bill Morrow proudly exhibits the catch he made on Lake Pend Oreille.

Rhonda Fleming, Crosby's lead in Connecticut Yankee, was amazed by the scenes Bing threw her way. "How can they say he's uncooperative or rude?" she asks. "He couldn't have been nicer."

the way I sing. That's okay. But when you say I quit school because I was too puny for football—well, let's step outside."

Outside, Bing knocked the guy flat.

Back then, Bing was just a youngster who thought he had to prove something. Today, he's one of the most amazing successes in history. He no longer has to prove a thing—and he seems indifferent to the strange lies that, for quite some time now, have been told about him. But is it true that they no longer hurt Bing?

Take the latest rumor. How'd you like to have people spreading an utterly false report that you have cancer? Well, that's what they've been (Continued on page 76)

In a reshuffling of marital mates only Errol Flynn's unanswered for—although Princess Ghica says her intentions are strictly honorable!

hollywood's dizziest

By JOHN HOWLEY

Princess Irene Ghica and Errol Flynn sun themselves on the Riviera while all of Hollywood wonders about the outcome of this new romance.

marry-go-round

■ When Errol Flynn, actor, adventurer, and bon vivant, flew into Hollywood from Paris some weeks ago he was waylaid by a small army of female gossip columnists whose interest in the Flynn love-life is more than academic.

"Tell us," squealed one, "what have you done with the Princess Ghaki?"

"Is it true," demanded another, "that you and the Princess Ghekki are going to get married?"

"I hear tell," cooed a third, "that you've hidden the Princess somewhere in Hollywood."

Now, Flynn, who is nothing if he is not a gentleman, told these chroniclers of Cupid the truth.

"The Princess Ghica," he said, pronouncing the girl's name correctly, "is in Paris. I think she's a very charming woman. Beyond that, I have nothing to say about her. I'm here to do some re-takes on The Forsyte Saga. After that, I shall return to Europe."

These were simple, straightforward statements of fact. And yet, not very long after they were made, a well-known columnist announced that Errol had brought the Princess Irene Ghica to the movie colony, and that she was being hidden somewhere within its environs.

Another journalist went even further. She not only substantiated her colleague's report, but in addition, she told her radio audience that the Princess Ghica had flown in on the same plane with Flynn. "What's more," she confided to intimates, "I've seen the Princess' passport and the check made out by MGM for her passage. As you probably know, Errol refused to fly back unless Metro paid all the expenses for both of them."

Flynn, who has written fiction himself, can of course recognize it instantly—even over the radio. What is more, he has a delightfully pixyish sense of humor. For example, en route to Los Angeles from Paris, his plane had to put down in London; Flynn had to fill out various health and immigration credentials. On one of the blanks where he was asked to list his occupation, he wrote the simple word, "sex." Where he was asked to list his sex, he wrote the simple word, "occupation."

Flynn thought this very amusing. Some of the British officials didn't.

By the same standards of humor, the thought came to him after the columnists kept insisting that he was hiding the Princess Ghica in Hollywood, that it would be a shame to belie these guardians of journalism.

Flynn thereupon called Central Casting and got the name and

. . . and then we called the princess . . .

While columnists were reporting the presence of Princess Ghica in Hollywood, MODERN SCREEN telephoned Paris, France—and had a highly interesting conversation. The following, slightly condensed, is an actual transcript of the call:

M.S.: Is this the Princess Irene Ghica?
SHE: It is.
M.S.: Princess Ghica, I'd like to ask you a few questions about Errol Flynn.
SHE: I have a feeling that you are Mr. Errol Flynn or that this is one of his practical tricks.
M.S.: I can assure you, Princess, that I am not Errol Flynn.
SHE: If Mr. Flynn is near-by, I should like to talk to him.
M.S.: I am very sorry, but at the moment he's on the MGM lot doing some re-takes with Greer Garson.
SHE: I am sure he is doing a very good job.
M.S.: He always does. . . . Is it true that you plan to star in his next picture, The Buccaneer?
SHE: Well, I don't know. I would like to read the script again.
M.S.: Can you say just how you feel about Mr. Flynn?
SHE: Well, I am very fond of him. He is a very nice guy, don't you think?
M.S.: Oh, yes, very nice. . . . One of the other reasons I called is that the rumor has been going around Hollywood that Mr. Flynn had brought you with him to Hollywood and was hiding you out somewhere.
SHE: That, as you know, is ridiculous. I am speaking to you from Paris. It is now about midnight. I am going out dancing and the weather is just wonderful.
M.S.: Princess Ghica, are you in love with Mr. Flynn?
SHE: That is a very personal question. After all, I don't know Mr. Flynn a very long time. What does he say about such things?
M.S.: He never leads his private life in public. . . . Have you ever been married, Princess?
SHE: Yes, I have been married, and as a matter of fact, in eight days I will have my divorce.
M.S.: How did you meet Errol Flynn?
SHE: Through mutual friends.
M.S.: What did you think of him when you first met him?
SHE: I thought he was very charming, very handsome, very witty.
M.S.: You sound, Princess, like a woman in love.
SHE: You are just trying to get me to say things, and I will not, unless Mr. Flynn says them first.
M.S.: Do you have any children, Princess?
SHE: Yes, I have 16.
M.S.: Please, Princess.
SHE: I not only have 16 children, but I also am 89 years old.
M.S.: Well, princess, judging from your pictures you're very well preserved. . . . But are you engaged to Errol Flynn or have you an intention of marrying him?
SHE: As for my intentions toward Mr. Flynn, you may say that they are strictly honorable.
M.S.: Thank you, Princess—and goodnight!

NORA EDDINGTON AND DICK HAYMES were married on July 17 in the garden of the groom's Beverly Hills home. The ceremony was performed by brilliant Superior Judge Edward Brand who stated, "I am not going to indulge in oratory. Marriage is a simple thing and only what you make it." Moments later, the couple exchanged rings. The bride's was a wide platinum band with the names Nora and Dick spelled out in diamonds. Haymes' ring was a relatively plain platinum band bearing the legend, "To Dick with love," and the date. Although he was not among the 100 guests attending, Errol Flynn made his presence felt by a telegram which read: "I wish you all the happiness two hearts can hold," and was signed, "The Baron." Nora Eddington had won her divorce from Flynn on July 7—and now was closing her chapter on a spectacular bit of Hollywood history.

JOANNE DRU AND JOHN IRELAND were noticeably absent from the Dick Haymes-Nora Eddington nuptials. Joanne, Haymes' former wife, had only recently been granted a final divorce decree on the grounds of extreme mental cruelty. Although she had previously denied any romantic intentions, Joanne, now obviously and openly in love, has stated that she and John Ireland will be married not later than September. For a time, it even appeared that they might "scoop" the Haymes wedding by rushing off to Laguna Beach to stage a surprise ceremony with Gregory Peck as best man. However, at a later party for friends, Joanne announced her present plans. Very soon after their wedding, the Irelands will find a home far removed from the place and the memories of Joanne's previous marriage—whose only happy result for her is the custody of her three children.

address of a girl he knew who had played many bit parts as a Balkan.

"Look," he explained to her. "Everyone believes that the Princess Ghica is in town. She isn't. She's in Paris. But in order to have a little fun, and to keep up morale, I want you to play the Princess Ghica.

"Here's what we'll do. I'll take you on the Metro lot tomorrow. I'll have the word spread around that the Princess Ghica is coming. Then I'll introduce you to Bobby Bennett—he's our director—and to Greer Garson, and several others.

"When you meet Bennett, run your hand across his face and tell him he's 'verry prittie.' When you meet Miss Garson, I'll leave you two alone, and you just engage in women's talk with her—you know, ask her what sort of husband she thinks I would make. That sort of routine."

The following day, Flynn picked up his phony Princess and on their way to Metro he gathered a handful of tired old yellow gladioli which someone had thrown into a vacant lot.

"This," he said, handing the dead flowers to her, "is your bouquet." The girl howled. "I'll slip one of these," she said, "into Bennett's buttonhole."

As soon as Flynn and his Princess hit the set, the rumor flew from person to person that at long last Errol had taken his royal sweetheart out of hiding. Playing their parts perfectly, Flynn and the girl walked up to Compton "Bobby" Bennett, a shy Englishman if ever there was one.

"Darling," said Errol, turning to his Princess, "may I present Mr. Compton Bennett, our director?"

Bennett bowed at the waist. "An honor, Princess. An honor. How do you do?"

The Princess from Central Casting placed her long thin fingers on Bennett's forehead. "But you are so prittie," she gushed, "so verry, verry prittie." Bennett reddened. "I should like you for to wear this flower from me." And with that, she inserted a faded, broken gladiola in his buttonhole. "Your skin, it iss like ledder," the Princess continued, pinching the director's cheeks ever so lightly. "And this building, this edifice you work in, it hass no ceiling, does it?"

Flynn, who could barely keep a straight face, then escorted his charge to the portable dressing room of Miss Greer Garson, one of the wittiest, most understanding, and charming actresses he has ever worked with.

"Greer," he said, "I know you've heard a lot about the Princess Irene Ghica. Now, I should like you to meet her."

Greer was flattered. Nothing would do but the Princess must stay a while. So the Princess stayed, and Errol disappeared on some innocuous pretense.

Greer, aware of the fact that the Princess spoke English with a decided Balkan accent, was not too sure how well she understood the language. She made it a point to (Continued on page 91)

MY PRAYER was ANSWERED

by Jane Powell

Jane Powell, who now has a host of friends in Hollywood, gives a few autographs. Her next film will be MGM's Nancy Goes To Rio.

At home, she'd always known the warmth and laughter of friends. But in Hollywood, Jane Powell cried bitter tears of loneliness. And then she prayed . . .

■ I should have been the happiest girl in the world. Here I was, only 15, and a star. Yet I was extremely unhappy: I had been terribly lonely for over a year. "I wish I'd never come to Hollywood," I thought resentfully—and tearfully.

I came from a town where I knew everybody. Life had been wonderful in Portland, Oregon. I had grown up there among a crowd of kids my own age. We had gone to parties, shows and school affairs together. In Portland I had never known a lonely moment.

It was in Hollywood that I discovered how horrible loneliness can be when you are 15.

In most towns, young people go to public school and meet friends there. I went to the studio school. Sometimes I was the only student; at other times there were just a few others besides myself, none of (Continued on page 95)

THE STORY BEHIND THE GABLE LEGEND

(Continued from page 29)

years, Clark's been fastened to Hollywood by a taut, spinning string of great box-office pictures, great popularity, great fame. He's the undisputed king of the movie seas, a big-game guy, peerless, the champ.

He's made spectacular leaps, likewise a flop or two, but they've never bothered his box-office. He's still tops, he's terrific, he's sought after, respected. Like his swordfish, too, Clark Gable prizes his freedom above everything else he has. But there's one very striking difference. Nobody's thinking of letting Clark Gable go.

Since he made A Free Soul, which sent Clark off to the races, he's stayed annually in the top box-office 10, excepting one year during the war when his pictures ran out. He not only starred in the greatest money-maker in film history, Gone With the Wind, but in bonanzas like Test Pilot, It Happened One Night, Boom Town, San Francisco, Red Dust and Hell Divers. Adventure, which the critics panned, made five million dollars. So did Homecoming, which got the same review ribbings. No recent Gable movie has been a critical rave—The Hucksters, Command Performance, or Any Number Can Play. But they've all been good Gable—so enough said. They've all made big money. It Happened One Night, which won Clark his Oscar, has been re-issued nine separate times.

He's launched a double-dozen young actresses to fame through being his leading lady. He's been a man's hero, too. No clothes-horse ever, when he wore turtle-necked sweaters, everybody started wearing them. When he sported a Tyrolean hat, the same. He boosted along the popularity of skeet-shooting by taking it up. He's helped boom hunting and fishing. He's the original hot-rod kid. He aided mightily in glamorizing the Air Corps. During the war, Hitler dangled prizes before his luftwaffe for the Nazi pilot who could bring him down.

Come December 4, 1950, which is only a year away, Clark will have been on MGM's payroll 20 years. (He signed up first for two.) Yet he's just getting his second wind as Mr. Hollywood. Why and how come? What's the Gable magic? Why is his popularity perpetual, his world-wide audience unlimited, untired, unsatisfied, unrelentingly loyal, militantly devoted—in spite of time and times, good and bad, and Gable pictures the same? How does the guy do it?

Even some of Gable's close friends seem baffled when they try to put a finger on just what the magic is. But long ago, the late Irving Thalberg, MGM's great producing genius, summed up his then-new star pretty pithily: "Gable is manhood, personified," he appraised. "He's what every man admires, every woman loves, every boy would like to grow up to be." You could say the same thing today. Since then Clark Gable and the Gable charm both have been analyzed curiously from every angle because there's never been anyone remotely like him. In fact, the oft-tried Hollywood beginner's ballyhoo, "He's another Gable," has always boomeranged as an absurd and blighting career kiss-of-death. There's no such animal, never will be, and every candidate posing as such has been rudely laughed off the screen.

Clark himself has consistently snorted his perennial, "I'm lucky," explanation and gone on being himself, on the screen and off. Still, there's more to the Gable power than a rabbit's foot—more, too, than Thalberg's triple-threat theory of virility, sex-appeal and hero stature.

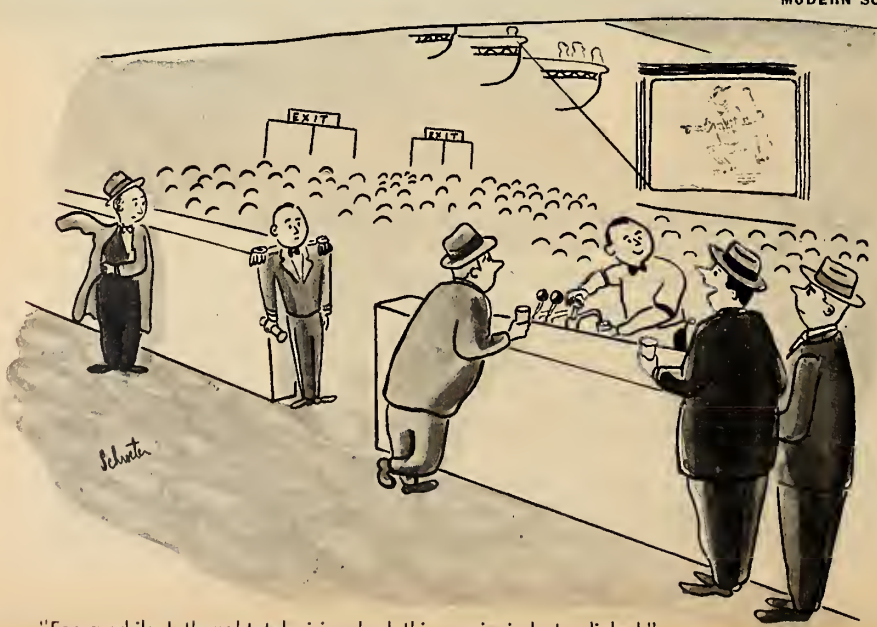
For one thing, Clark Gable knows his business from the ground up—which is where he started, as an extra. Maybe he ought to, after all these years. But there are plenty of other star veterans who still don't, who haven't had the enthusiasm, the curiosity and the conscientious competence that Gable owns as much today as when he began.

Though he won an Oscar for It Happened One Night (and gave it away to a boy admirer), he's not a great actor, if you believe either the critics or most directors. But Mervyn LeRoy, one of his long-time boosters and part discoverer, disagrees. "Don't ever kid yourself," he told me. "Gable's as good as they come on the screen. He can handle any scene in a way that pulls every eye right to him, and that, like nothing else, is movie greatness."

Clark knows everything about making movies—in every department. He's never in his trailer dressing-room between takes unless absolutely necessary, and then the door's never closed—he might miss something. He's out in the center of things with the people who are putting him on film. When a camera breaks down, he's got his head poked inside and his fingers fiddling until the bug's licked. "Shug" Keeler, a hunting pal of his, who's worked on dozens of Gable films, told me: "Clark could take out a card in darned near any studio union today. He could handle almost any job—electrician, carpenter, prop, grip, camera crew. He's learned by being curious as a cat."

common clay . . .

"Clark Gable's stayed great because he has the common touch," one of his best pals, the late director Victor Fleming told me once. "He likes people as much as they like him. I've never seen him bored or blasé in any setting." Victor Fleming directed Gable in Gone with the Wind and Test Pilot. Fleming was a rugged man like Clark, and the pair used to roar over the California countryside on motorcycles playing a sort of follow-the-leader on the highway. Often Gable disappeared and Vic would find him back somewhere chummed up with other Sunday motor-bike clubs made up of factory workers, mechanics and store clerks.



"People see and admire in Clark whatever they want to," thinks Howard Strickling, MGM official and Gable's close friend and ranch neighbor in the San Fernando Valley. Howard's travelled a lot with Clark. "They feel they know him. After all, they've either grown up or grown older with Clark. They've watched him fight, make love, eat, drink, sleep, shave, dress, get in jams and out of them, laugh, play, and get smacked around by life, just as they do—only on the screen. They've formed their ideas long ago about what he's like and he doesn't let them down. When he meets them, he's the same guy they think they know."

Gable loves to meet the people—whether they're Long Island society smoothies or Texas ranch hands. He has the happy gift of being equally at ease with both. By all odds the most glamorous man in the world, he doesn't carry the gloss with him in person. Nothing sets him apart as an out-of-this-world demigod. Hollywood seems to roll off him the minute he rolls out of Hollywood. He's easily recognized wherever he goes, enjoys the recognition and sops up the friendly admiration even when it inconveniences him.

Gable's a demon tourist and sightseer wherever he goes—and he goes just about everywhere. He keeps his viewpoint fresh and his perspective straight that way. This last stretch after Any Number Can Play, for instance, he drove to Oregon to his Rogue River shack; flew to New York to catch the new Broadway shows; drove to Phoenix, Arizona, to see Betty Chisholm, a girl he likes, and to take more lessons from a golf pro he also likes at the Arizona Biltmore. From there he bumped over the chuck-holed roads of Lower California to Guaymas and his marlin. Wherever he went, he saw all there was to see and what he could cram in to do—whether it was a whirl at the Stork Club with his Long Island friends, or a rodeo in a desert cow-town.

He rolls into a new town, maybe only pop. 2,500, rubbernecking all around, strolls

MODERN SCREEN

"For a while I thought television had this movie industry licked."

into a highway café and kids the waitress. "What's cookin', Sweetheart?" Clark drawls with his elbows on the counter. "What do you do for excitement in this town?" And she tells him, or the local cop does, or a garage grease-monkey does. Before he's through with them he knows all about their burg, and he's told them practically nothing about Hollywood or himself. If there's a carnival in town, a turkey-shoot or an election with free lemonade and fireworks, Clark's there and having a terrific time. Going East, he never misses taking in the zoos in New York and Chicago. Last year he spent all afternoon at a model coal-mine in Chicago. He's toured all the national parks, even Yellowstone, gaping at the geysers, including the one that could have been named after himself, Old Faithful.

Oddly enough, although Clark's popularity has long since surpassed the fabulous Valentino's, he almost never gets mobbed or swarmed, heckled or embarrassed in public. "There's some kind of native dignity and respect that guy packs that keeps them from it," says an MGM chaperone who's travelled a lot with Clark to benefits and openings. "They treat him like a human being instead of a Hollywood god."

knows his own strength . . .

Clark has an alert nose for trouble and has always ducked with rare good sense instead of playing the hero out in public without drawing a salary for it. One reason is that he's powerful—a rough, slugging hitter from his oil fields days—and he doesn't trust himself to get lured into a spot where he might hurt, possibly kill, someone. He's laughed his way good-naturedly out of many a café commotion in both New York and Hollywood in his time; many an emboldened drunk has peeled off at him with, "So you're the great Gable. Let's see if you're so tough!" Clark's either moved on or kidded him out of his folly.

In all the years Gable's been in Hollywood, no scandal of any sort has stuck to his name.

Clark went through the divorces from his first two wives, Josephine Dillon and Rhea Langham, without any dirt-dishing, recriminations, or sordid facts and figures. He's still friends with them both, although they're long ago out of his life.

Physically, Clark has bowed to time amazingly little. He's still ramrod straight, weighs 195—he tipped 175 at the start. He hasn't lost a hair of his thick black mop, though it's streaked with silver here and there. His muscles still bulge like a boilermaker's. And they're hard. His waistline's well under control. The Gable grin and the gray-blue Dutch eyes pack the same candlepower as always.

But his Ponce De Leon secret's not all a matter of Gable in the flesh. That curiosity and boyish interest in life has helped plenty. Clark reads and listens and looks, and as Mickey Rooney used to say, "The King's hep." Gable hates that tag, "King," by the way—and only a few friends can get by using it without a black scowl. He prefers just "Clark" or sometimes "Moose," hasn't heard "Billy" since his dad died and left him without one surviving close relative.

Clark has always ridden some rejuvenating hobby hard and still does. He's taken all-out turns with horses, dogs, shooting, hunting, fishing, ranching, stock-raising—even cooking and flower-growing. Lately, he's gone back to golf seriously, and again shoots in the 70's. He still nurses the fast motor craze he'll have until he dies. His hobbies have been the absorbing preventatives for any worry warts about his Hollywood fate or fortune. Clark himself expressed his philosophy on that a long time ago. "If they want me, they can still have me," he laughed to me once. "I'm available until they kick me out. And if they ever do—I'm still a darned good mechanic."

Clark will probably never have to fret financially. His colossal paycheck, like most jumbo Hollywood salaries, goes mostly to Uncle Sam, but he's been drawing one almost that big for years and he has plenty salted away by now. He's never been a big spender. His frugal Dutch blood forbids that. For a star of his magnitude and income, he lives in near-Spartan simplicity. He's still wearing the suits he had tailored before the war, which hung, moth-proofed, in his closets while he sported Air Force cords and pinks. He buys the best clothes and wears them forever. He doesn't tip lavishly or toss his money around. Yet he's a notoriously soft touch when he hears of any studio worker in distress. In this he's direct and man-to-man, usually with a $100 bill, or whatever he thinks the situation calls for, jammed quietly into the hand of the guy with a curt, "Forget it."

He's gone overboard on deluxe shooting irons, with an arsenal at his ranch that represents thousands of dollars. Incidentally, that's the only room at Encino he'll let be photographed. Clark explains, "It's the only thing that's really all mine." Rest of the place he still regards sentimentally as part his, part Carole's—and her touches have never been altered or disturbed.

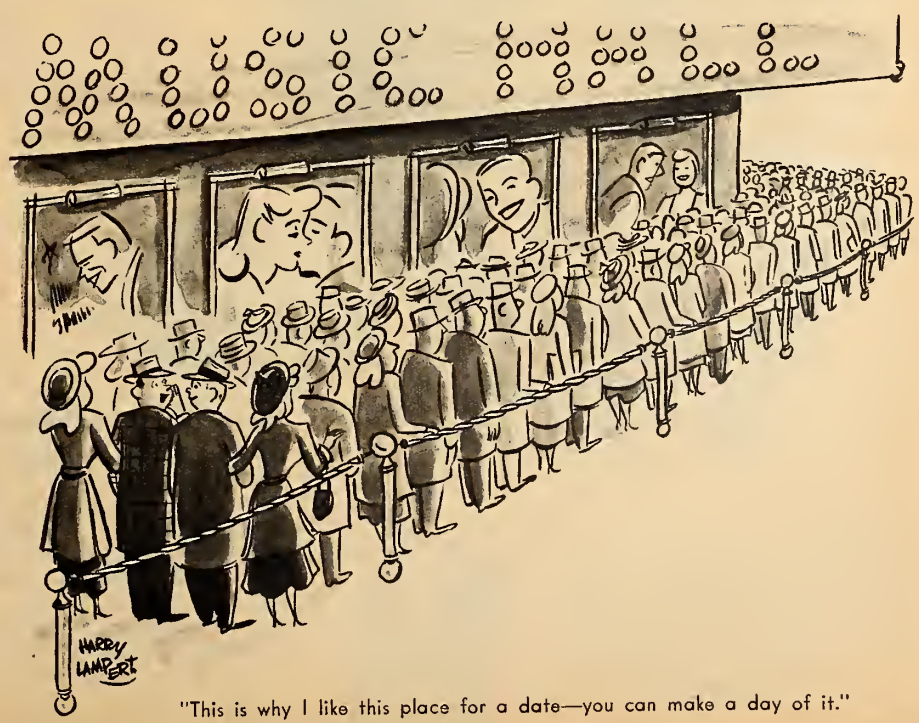
Autos are a weakness like the guns. Gable has probably owned more cars than any star in Hollywood. He tries one out then trades it in, as motor dealer Al Menasco says, "before it needs a wash job." One year Clark traded in eight cars for different models. He's owned almost every make manufactured. Right now he's crazy about the inexpensive Plymouth that he drove on his Mexican fishing trip. His pet is a foreign Jaguar, but mostly for tune-up and tinker purposes. He runs it more in his garage than on the road. His television set is the first machine Clark has let alone. It's so complicated, he's afraid to touch it.

Clark's living set-up at Encino has changed practically none in the past seven years. He has the same two servants and a secretary, Jean Gorceau, to handle his affairs and still-flooding fan mail. Since "Pop" Gable died a couple of years ago, Clark seems more anxious to get away evenings. He's had more dates for Ciro's and Mocambo and when he sees his old friends it's usually at their houses, not his. They're still the same old Gable standbys—Chet Lauck and Tuffy Goff, Al Menasco, "Fieldsie" and Howard Lang, Howard Strickling, Bill Powell, Spencer Tracy, Howard Hawks, Jack Conway, Johnny Mahin. He lost one of the best last year when Victor Fleming died. Clark seldom adds a new friend, never drops an old one.

The recurrently recharged enthusiasm for life and the particular labors it has tossed into lucky Clark's lap probably explains as much as anything the secret of Old Indestructible and how he still works his Mighty Medicine.

He was all steamed-up about playing Key to the City, a comedy with all the stops out. On the set, the first day, Clark was describing to co-star Loretta Young his idea of their job.

"Let's do it strictly for fun all the way," he plugged. "Something like It Happened One Night. Do you remember it—or was it before your time?



Clark and Loretta starred together 12 years ago in Call of the Wild, he was sure of that—but It Happened One Night was 17 semesters past and sometimes Clark gets the idea no one's as ancient around Hollywood as he is. He got his big ears pinned back fast.

Loretta nodded. "I seem to," she replied. "And I remember being so pleased to see such a promising young man get a break."

"Promising young man?" Clark sputtered. "Why, I was an old-timer then. I'd been around for years! Say—how long have you been in pictures?" he challenged.

"Since I was four," answered Loretta, "which was 10 years before you started—Junior."

Considering his ageless career and the fact—believe it or not—that Clark even wears a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit in Key to the City—maybe Loretta had something. Maybe "Junior's" a better nickname for Clark Gable than "King." THE END

"This is why I like this place for a date—you can make a day of it."

THE TRUTH ABOUT RITA'S HONEYMOON

(Continued from page 47)

While the woods were still glistening with dew, Rita's powerful Alpha-Romeo would glide along a narrow road and stop near the track at Chantilly, on the outskirts of Paris. Rita, in a neat tweed suit, and Mme. Germaine Vuiller, a new and close friend—who is in charge of Aly's stud farm at Marly la Ville—would leave the car and go down by the rail. There Rita and Mme. Vuiller would lean on the fence and, through their binoculars, watch the thoroughbreds go by.

Rita was on hand the morning that Skylarking had its final speed trial before winning its first race. "She's in shape," said Rita judiciously to trainer Carter. "She'll win."

"It takes a woman with horse sense," said Carter later, "to know when a horse looks fit enough to win."

And Rita has been demonstrating horse sense in other ways on her honeymoon. Instead of resting on the laurels of her new position as "Princess Aly," she's been making earnest efforts to fit herself for the social duties that go with it. For instance, she's been getting fluent in French. Mlle. Huchon, Rita's French teacher, says that Rita has seldom missed devoting part of a day to working at the language. Rita knows she'll spend much of her new life in places where French is the universal language, so she's gone about learning it in a business-like way.

"The lessons are at variable times," says Mlle. Huchon, "but she never quits before studying at least an hour. She speaks rapidly, now, with very little accent. She's been a truly remarkable pupil."

Aly must be proud of his bride—for this and many other things. Yet the sullen attitude he started exhibiting shortly after the wedding led to rumors that he and Rita were spatting. But Aly's bad temper wasn't directed at Rita. It was directed at the press—whose nose for news, Aly felt, was getting a bit too nosey. Photographers are his pet hate. His threatening to cane a news-service photographer made the front pages.

A few days after the wedding, Aly and Rita went to Le Bourget airport and climbed aboard one of Aly's private planes—a two-engine job. They ducked photographers and sent word ahead to the Deauville airport, where they were putting down for lunch before crossing the Channel to England, that photographers weren't to be allowed on the field.

"Since when," said one photographer indignantly to the Deauville airport manager, "do French government employees take orders from an Indian prince?"

"Since right now," replied the manager.

One big question in everyone's mind is how Rita has been getting along with people of another race and a completely different background from anything she's ever known. Since the day of her wedding, when the Indians were the most prominent guests present, they've been extremely important in her life. Well, Rita seems to be getting along with them beautifully. The most important of them, the charming and urbane Aga Khan, appears very fond of Rita, and she of him.

The Eastern guests were the first to arrive, back there in Vallauris. They filed in quietly and seated themselves in the second row of wooden seats in the dingy little town hall. About them hung an aura of mystery and mysticism, strange beauty and vast riches. The women's saris were of the finest silk, embroidered with gold and silver threads. The long-draped dresses were of exquisite shades of coral, green, blue, pink and yellow. Three of them wore diamonds set in the left sides of their noses. Every woman was literally weighed down with diamonds and pearls.

Standing there, I couldn't help wondering, "Someday, will Rita, too, be thus?"

But Rita didn't dress in any Eastern attire when, at the Moslem ceremony which followed the civil ceremony, she was married again the next day by the Imman from the Mosque in Paris. She wore a simple white blouse and a calf-length blue skirt. Aly wore a light suit.

There was a day when, under Moslem law, Aly was married to both Rita and Joan Yarde Buller, British heir to the Guiness brewing fortune. The papers of Aly's Moslem divorce weren't registered at the Mosque in Paris until the day after his Moslem marriage to Rita.

"It really didn't matter," explains Si Kaddeur Ben Ghabrit, head of the Mosque, "because under Moslem law, the Prince is entitled to have four wives at the same time, if he wants them."

At this writing, Aly is apparently quite contented on his honeymoon with one.

THE END

Try Palmolive's Famous "Beauty Lather" For Something Thrillingly New!

New Fragrance! New Charm! New Allure!

And Doctors Prove You, Too, May Win a Lovelier Complexion Using Nothing But Palmolive Soap!

Millions of women will prefer "Beauty Lather" Palmolive . . . the minute they try it! For Palmolive Soap's new flower-fresh fragrance means new allure, new charm.

And proper cleansing with Palmolive is so effective that all types of skin—young, old, oily—respond to it quickly. Dull, drab skin looks fresher and brighter—coarse-looking skin finer!

So just do as 36 doctors advised 1285 women, many with complexion problems. Wash your face with Palmolive Soap, massaging for one minute with Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather." Rinse! Do this 3 times a day for 14 days. It's that simple.

Yes, doctors proved it could bring 2 out of 3 women lovelier complexions. Get Palmolive Soap and start today!

Get Bath Size Palmolive, too!

Use it in tub or shower. The alluring new fragrance of Palmolive's "Beauty Lather" leaves you even lovelier all over!

HAS LANA TURNER CHANGED?

(Continued from page 49)

below like a spotlight in Radio City Music Hall.

"Oh, that's it," Bob declared. "The pilot found a clear spot and dived for it. . . . You still scared?"

"Not any more," Lana laughed. "Besides," she said as the lumbering bird slid neatly along the runway, "I wasn't frightened about the landing. It was something else—a little quirk of fear that hits me every time I come back to Hollywood."

What bothered Lana that morning at 6:09 a.m. on her return to Hollywood—as on all previous returnings—was the sudden memory of the first time she'd come to this town and the tragedy from which she and her mother narrowly escaped.

That was 14 years ago. Lana was 15 and driving with her mother and friends from San Francisco to Hollywood in a small sedan. It was raining and as the little car emerged from the mountains near Pasa Robles, a gust of wind smothered the highway with unexpected fog. The woman who was driving missed the turn. The car skidded violently, turned over twice, and settled into the ditch.

Somehow, Lana managed to open a door. Clothes torn, gasping for breath against the pressure of two broken ribs, she helped her mother out. The others emerged, bruised, but not seriously hurt, while Mrs. Turner, unaware that she had suffered a severe concussion, wandered around amid the pitiful mess of broken suitcases.

"I wanted to cry," Lana recalls today, "but what was the sense? I scrambled up to the highway and thumbed down a truck. That's the way I first arrived in Hollywood—and whenever I come back, I can't help wondering if I'll really make it alive."

This time, more than ever, the girl named Lana Turner had something to live for in the town that has made her famous. After 14 months away from Hollywood, 14 months spent alternately in Europe, Connecticut, Florida and on the high seas—Lana Turner was home.

When she and Bob entered the front door of her mother's home, Lana didn't bother to shed her coat. She rushed upstairs to the bedroom where little Cheryl, her six-year-old daughter, was still asleep.

i love you so . . .

Lana stood there a moment, staring. Cheryl's soft chestnut hair was mussed up around the little face. She was a picture of all the little innocents in the world. Here was the primary reason for Lana's homecoming. All those months, Cheryl had been writing Lana letters. At first, all the letters had been laboriously printed out—but her last letter was written in firm, round words. "I wish I were flying to you," Cheryl wrote, "because I love you so."

Lana whipped off her coat and put her arms around Cheryl. "Baby," she said, softly, "wake up." Cheryl stirred restlessly. A tiny hand rubbed at her eyes.

"It's Mummy, darling!" murmured Lana. "I'm home again!"

The words penetrated—and in an instant Cheryl was sitting up, her arms around Lana.

"I had to cry a little," Lana admits.

Which recalls another time that Lana wept—though then, it was scarcely from emotion. Lana had just finished the Warners picture in which she was "discovered." A reporter and two photographers went to her tiny house in Laurel Canyon, and set about proving that this kid named Lana Turner deserved a future.

"You may turn out to be a great dramatic actress—better than Bette Davis, even," they said to her. "Now, let's have a shot of you crying."

Lana blinked.

"Go on," they said encouragingly. "Cry."

Lana tried. But—no tears.

Then the boys brought out an onion. They cut it up and waved it under her nose. Lana remained dry-eyed.

Finally, one of them found a bottle of eyewash in the bathroom medicine cabinet. Lana held her head back and they put in big drops—teardrops.

"When that picture came out in a magazine with a caption saying that I could cry at the drop of a mean remark," Lana tells you with a smile, "people became convinced that here was perhaps the most sensitive gal who ever came to Hollywood."

Before long, they were almost right. Events took Lana over the bumps. The story of Lana's emotionally-troubled years is too familiar to recount. But she has now emerged into what is obviously the happiest period of her life—as Mrs. Henry J. "Bob" Topping, Lana has achieved a peace of mind she never knew before.

that siren of the south—
ava gardner
on our november cover on sale
october 7

There have, of course, been reports ever since the wedding that this marriage was about to fail. Lana, long-familiar with the press, realizes that no Hollywood celebrity can escape such rumors, and takes them in her stride. But she is a bit weary of doing so. "Something's radically wrong with the press," she says, "when reporting so often completely distorts the facts."

As an instance, Lana can cite the time she and Bob had dinner in Paris in a night club called Bal Tabarin. It was getting late, and Lana suggested to Bob that they'd better go back to the hotel since they had to leave for Germany the next day—where Lana was scheduled to entertain the troops. [EDITOR'S NOTE: Lana Turner is the only actress we know of who ever willingly gave up part of her honeymoon to entertain the U. S. Army overseas.] Bob agreed that they should leave and said something like, "Okay, dear. The floor show will be over in a couple of minutes, and then we'll leave."

Two days later, Lana read in some paper that they'd engaged in a terrific night-club argument. When she showed the clipping to Bob, he read it and burst out laughing. "According to this," he said, "you're married to my brother Dan, and our name is Stopping."

And, speaking of getting things about Lana straight, there's one matter in particular she'd like to have straightened out—the matter of her weight.

"There's a picture of me taken not too long ago before I came back to Hollywood," Lana says. "When they saw it, my friends yelled, 'What were you thinking of to allow a picture like that to be taken! Why, you were positively fat—and now—why it's impossible to believe.'

"The solemn, down-to-earth truth is that when I'm on a vacation, I relax completely. I eat everything in sight and worry about nothing. All of a sudden I'm plump. I've never weighed more than 127 pounds, but to hear people talk you'd think I'd turned into a baby blimp.

easy come, easy go . . .

"Then I come back for picture work. I've slimmed down. Everyone thinks it's a miracle. It isn't. When I know I'm going to start working, well, I just more or less go into training again. I don't starve myself or take fancy frills. I simply stick to two meals a day, religiously. I have coffee and fruit juice first thing in the morning. That's all. Never a business of 'Oh, well, a breakfast roll won't hurt.' Sometime between 11 and noon I have lunch. It may be cottage cheese and pineapple or a salad without a fattening dressing. For dinner I have a lean steak, a chop or a roast. I never have dessert—but after dinner, Bob and I always indulge in cheese and coffee.

"By the time I'm halfway through a picture the wardrobe department is taking in my costumes and the camera crew is screaming at me to take it easy—I'm getting so thin the shots won't match up if I'm not careful. . . . Right now, I weigh 118—just what I weighed as a starlet."

Some people just can't believe that Lana's not still the charming scatterbrain she appeared to be in the old days. But she's far from that.

"When I first came into movies," Lana admits, "I signed a contract for $50 a week. I didn't even look at the papers when I put my name down. Now it's different. They say that in Hollywood, actors and actresses never read the fine print in contracts. Well, I've been reading fine print for the last five days until my eyes are about to bug out. . . . Not, you understand, that I think Metro is going to try to pull a fast one on me!" she adds hastily. "They've been marvelous to me. But I just think it wise to follow a business-like principle."

At this writing, three possibilities are being considered for Lana's next film—The Reformer and the Redhead, The Running of the Tide and A Life of Her Own.

"A Life of Her Own," Lana muses. "I like that title. It's what I have now. . . . Of course, there are problems ahead. We want our own home. But we'll have it soon. Bob and I have beautiful plans all drawn up for our house in Bel-Air. From the outside, it's just a long, low semi-modern place—but inside, it's like nothing this world has seen!

"You know how it is about closets. No genius has yet figured out how to put in enough of them. But our architect has come close to solving the problem: He started with six dozen closets and simply built a house around 'em!"

In a way, Lana's done the same thing with herself. Out of lessons painfully learned, she has taken fundamental values of life and around them has constructed a new life—a solid life, harmonious, sunny, and deeply fulfilling. THE END

New... a special make-up remover!

Faster! Thorough! for cleansing tinted make-up!

Woodbury Cleansing Cream with Penaten

Do you use cream, cake or liquid make-ups?

If you do, you probably love them because they cling for hours.

But the fact that they do cling means that they're harder to remove. And that's why Woodbury Liquefying Cleansing Cream is a boon and a blessing to so many women.

Here is a cream designed especially for women who use tinted make-ups. And because it contains PENATEN, it seeps deep into the pores, floating away clinging grime and pigments that threaten coarse pores and blemishes.

P. S.: Even if you use only ordinary powder and lipstick, you'll love it for the way it leaves your skin so spanking fresh and clean.

Jars 20c, 39c, 69c. Plus tax.

the million dollar look

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ When your favorite man lets loose with an appreciative whistle and says: "You look like a million dollars!"—that's what you dress for, isn't it?

But how to earn that whistle? As we're never tired of pointing out, looking like a million is no trick at all if you have a million to spend. But, if you count your $$, as most of us do, it takes some smart shopping.

On the next two pages we show you a hand-picked collection bound to make you look like a fashion model. If you need a new dress coat, there's a handsome black wool, page 66, that will make every date a standout. If what you need is a day-in, day-out coat, there's a beautiful fleece job, page 67, with a look of ready money.

For your dress up moments, consider, on page 66, the satin striped shirred taffeta with velvet touches (remember last month we told you velvet is the big trimming news of the fall). As for the sports get-up, you couldn't possibly look more station-wagon-set than in the jersey blouse and tweed skirt (page 67).

And in order to make buying these fashions as easy, inexpensive and pleasant as possible, we've arranged for you to be able to buy all four costumes under one convenient roof, in stores throughout the country—list on page 69. And, as always, you can order them by mail, too.

Virginia Mayo looks like a million in the rain

■ Virginia Mayo, currently starring in Warner Brothers' White Heat, makes rain seem worthwhile in a gleaming dark blue raincoat, sparked with red.

The raincoat has quilted-effect stitched collar, cuffs, pocket flaps and belt; the removable helmet-hood fastens close to show the shape of your pretty head. You can wear it belted tight; or swinging free.

It's in Celanese Dovcelle, and comes also in blue, red, wine, aqua, toast, brown or black. Sizes 8-18. By Sherbrooke . . . $22.95. At Oppenheim Collins, Brooklyn, New York City, and Philadelphia. Other stores page 69.

Umbrella from Uncle Sam's Umbrella Shop.

Red gloves by American Knit.

Naughty-but-nice checked rain gaiters by S. Rauh.

modern screen fashions

the MILLION dollar look ...

■ For the million dollar look, pick your date dress in one of the glamorous new crinkled fabrics—shirred taffeta striped with satin, trimmed with velvet collar, cuffs and belt. Close-buttoned bodice, flared skirt. Brown, green or wine with black stripes. 10-18. By Henry Rosenfeld, $17.95. Stores, page 69.

■ For the million dollar look, make your dress coat a dress-maker coat—elegant in jut of pocket, sweep of collar, flare of cuff; cut and carved in superb wool broadcloth. Top with Madcaps hat. Coat in black, taupe, blue, wine, green. 10-18. By Croydon, $39.95. Stores, page 69. Dofan bag. Coro pearls.

...for MINIMUM dollar price

■ For the million dollar look, make your daytime coat a big beautiful fleece with superbly cut shoulders, huge pockets, flared sunburst back. All wool Velva Glamour fleece. Nude, camel, wine, green, grey. 10-18. By Eddington, $39.95, at stores on page 69. Madcaps hat, Kislav gloves, Valentines shoes.

■ For the million dollar look, make your daytime costume a batwing-sleeved wool worsted jersey blouse, with a rakishly cut tweed skirt. Skirt comes with tweed belt; for fun, vary with Criterion's watch belt. Blouse by Harmet Classics, $4.98. Wool skirt by Schwartz, $5.98. Both at stores on page 69.

the CHAMPAGNE look

■ COPPER AND BLACK crinkled plisse taffeta—to make you look like an heiress, at least. The collar falls into flattering tunnel folds; the skirt sweeps wide. Copper, royal, green or amethyst with black stripes. Sizes 9-15. By Cheryl Fashions, $12.99. At Miller stores on page 71.

■ SHINING BRONZE satin—to make you look like an international beauty. Rounded jacket fastens with tiny gilt hooks; skirt has deep waistband; wide pleats. Bronzique, slate, green, blonde, grey. 9-15. By Lydella, $10.99. Arden satin pouch bag, $1.99. At Miller Stores, page 71.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

Gleaming green raincoat worn by Virginia Mayo in the full color photograph (page 65) at the following Allied Stores:

Butler, Pa.—Troutman's, 200 S. Main St.
Cincinnati, Ohio—Rollman's, 5th & Vine Sts.
Columbus, Ohio—The Fashion, 116 High St.
Connellsville, Pa.—Troutman's, W. Crawford Ave.
DuBois, Pa.—Troutman's
Greensburg, Pa.—Troutman's, 202 S. Main St.
Kansas City, Mo.—Peck's, Main & 11th Sts.
Muskegon, Mich.—Hardy-Herpolsheimer's, 313 W. Western Ave.
New York City, N. Y.—Gertz-Jamaica, 162-10 Jamaica Ave.
Reading, Pa.—Pomeroy's, 6th & Penn Sts.
St. Paul, Minn.—The Golden Rule, 95 E. 7th St.
Savannah, Ga.—Levy's, Broughton & Abercorn Sts.
Spokane, Wash.—The Bon Marche
Warren, Pa.—Metzger-Wright
or: Write, Department M, Allied Stores Corp., 1440 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

MILLION DOLLAR LOOK fashions (pages 66 and 67)·
Sprinkled taffeta date dress (page 66)
Wool broadcloth dress coat (page 66)
Fleece daytime coat (page 67)
Jersey and tweed daytime costume (p. 67)
all available at the following Allied Stores:

Baltimore, Md.—O'Neill's, 114 N. Charles St.
Butler, Pa.—Troutman's, 200 S. Main St.
Cincinnati, Ohio—Rollman's, 5th & Vine Sts.
Columbus, Ohio—The Fashion, 116 High St.
Connellsville, Pa.—Troutman's, W. Crawford Ave.
DuBois, Pa.—Troutman's
Greensburg, Pa.—Troutman's, 202 S. Main St.
Kansas City, Mo.—Peck's, Main & 11th Sts.
Latrobe, Pa.—Reed's, 911 Ligonier St.
Lynchburg, Va.—Guggenheimer's, 700 Main St.
Minneapolis, Minn.—Donaldson's 601 Nicollet Ave.
Muskegon, Mich.—Hardy-Herpolsheimer's, 313 W. Western Ave.
New York, N. Y.—Gertz-Jamaica, 162-10 Jamaica Ave.
Paterson, N. J.—Quackenbush's, 192 Main St.
Pontiac, Mich.—Waite's, 70 N. Saginaw St.
Pottsville, Pa.—Pomeroy's, 100 S. Centre St.
Reading, Pa.—Pomeroy's, 6th & Penn Sts.
St. Paul, Minn.—The Golden Rule, 95 E. 7th St.
Savannah, Ga.—Levy's, Broughton & Abercorn Sts.
Spokane, Wash.—The Bon Marche
Syracuse, N. Y.—Dey's, 401 S. Salina St.
Tampa, Fla.—Maas Brothers, 619 Franklin St.
Warren, Pa.—Metzger-Wright
Waterloo, Ia.—Black's, 201 E. 4th St.
Yakima, Wash.—Barnes-Woodin
or: Write, Department M, Allied Stores Corp., 1440 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

(Store list continued on page 71)

Choose partners ... in
Dan River's "go-together" cottons

Shine on, shine on at the next square dance. Swing to the close harmony of harvest moon tones in new woven plaids and checks. They're in Dan River's washable gingham—fast color, pre-shrunk, permanently crisp. Dan River Mills, Inc., Danville, Va.*

Square Dancing Dress by Vicky Vaughn Juniors. Rose and green; blue and brown. Sizes 9 to 15. $5.95.
Higbee Co., Cleveland; Younker Bros., Des Moines; Famous-Barr, St. Louis; Black & White Stores, Memphis; Jones Store, Kansas City; Joske's, San Antonio.

*Fabric shrinkage no more than 3%

IT'S A DAN RIVER FABRIC

GABARDINE

dressed up, and ready to go—

Or, how self-confident can you look? Port red spiked with winter pink—to go to any man's head. One-piece rayon gabardine.
Also dark blue with light blue;
terracotta with rose. 9-15.
By Carole King . . . about $8.95.
For where to buy, see page 71.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY (Cont.)

Champage Look dresses (page 68) at the following Miller Stores:

Chicago, Ill.—Millers
Duluth, Minn.—Millers
Milwaukee, Wis.—Millers
Minneapolis, Minn.—Millers
and at other Miller Stores or: Write, Department 10,
R. H. Miller Co.,
505 8th Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

Satin pouch bag shown with Champagne Look dresses (page 68) also at the following Miller Stores:

Champaign, Ill.—Millers
Evansville, Ind.—Millers
Minneapolis, Minn.—Millers
Norfolk, Va.—Millers or: Write, Department 10, R. H. Miller Co., 505 8th Ave., New York, N. Y.

Striped gabardine dress (page 70)

Birmingham, Ala.—Parisian, Inc., 1924 Second Ave.
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co., Ltd., 819 Canal St.
Richmond, Va.—Miller & Rhoads, Broad & 7th Sts.

or write: Carole King Jrs.
Att.: Miss Helen Ford
Customers Service Dept.
Forest City Mfg. Co.
1641 Washington Ave.,
St. Louis, Missouri

Buttoned crepe dress (page 72)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 485 Fulton St.
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins, 33 W. 34th St.

or write: Doris Dodson Jrs.
Att.: Miss Betty Green
Customers Service Dept.
Forest City Mfg. Co.
1120 Washington Ave.,
St. Louis, Missouri

how to buy

modern screen fashions

in person

Go to the store in your city listed in the Where to Buy Directory.

To save time, take along the Modern Screen photo of the fashion you wont. If you haven't the poge from the magazine, be sure to tell the sales girl you saw it in Modern Screen.

Don't forget you can order Modern Screen Fashions

by mail

Order by Check from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Order by Money Order from any store listed, whether in your city or not.

Or write any of the addresses listed above.

It's the "Cable Cardigan". It's YOUR FAVORITE . . . ELIZABETH TAYLOR'S FAVORITE and FALL'S FAVORITE sweater fashion. Boxy style, of warm, 100% wool. In lilac, pink, red, blue, grey, green and gold. About $4.

See it at all the leading stores . . . or write us.

Watch each month for the sweater you can't do without,
FEATHERKNIT'S SWEATER HIT OF THE MONTH
Send for Featherknit Glamour Booklet M-O

Featherknits 1372 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18 • BROOKLYN KNITWEAR CO., INC.

LISTEN FOR "LOOK SWEETER IN A SWEATER" ON YOUR FAVORITE STORE'S RADIO HOUR

Special offer to our readers

The 1948-49 edition of MODERN SCREEN's exclusive "Super-Star Information Chart" is something no real fan should be without. It's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of over 500 of your favorite stars—complete with birthdates, hobbies, real names, recent pictures and inside facts. To obtain your copy, send 10¢ in coin, plus a large self-addressed, stamped (3¢), envelope to Service Department, MODERN SCREEN, P. O. Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y. Send soon!

BUTTONS

from the Paris Boulevards

The more buttons, the more ooh-la-la as far as the Paris collections are concerned—so here's an American adaptation that speaks perfect French. Black buttons near the shoulder line; tiny fabric buttons in the half-concealed center front—and a graceful fall of pleats. Rayon crepe. Red, midnight blue, green or black. Sizes 9-15. By Doris Dodson. About $12.95. For where to buy, see page 71.

MY OWN STORY

(Continued from page 51)

Clift is that they are all talking about. Must be quite a fellow. Bobby-soxers' idol, the middle-aged matrons' Romeo, the man's man, and the actor's actor. Also something of a heel, I've heard tell. Well, he must get around, to be all of that.

Just to keep you from getting me and that celluloid Montgomery Clift confused, I'll tell you who I am straight. You will get his story from other sources, so let him struggle with his own publicity.

As was stated on my application for unemployment insurance, I was born in Omaha, Nebraska, back in 1920, which makes me 28, as of this writing. Hardly a kid anymore—as my twin sister, mother of two children, is apt to remind me when I stop off for a visit in Dallas, Texas.

Omaha felt no particular sense of loss when the Clift family, consisting of my father and mother—Mr. and Mrs. William Brooks Clift—my brother, William, and my sister and me, moved away when my sister and I were six months old. It seems now that we were always moving away, which was all to my liking, though somewhat disturbing to my brother and sister, who liked school. I solved the school problem by not going at all. Being a twin had its advantages. My sister covered for me, and it never occurred to the truant officer that there might be another one the same age in the Clift family.

As you can gather from this, we had a sort of casual and nomadic family life. It was altogether wonderful.

no silver spoons . . .

I have seen stories covering this period of my life in which we splashed merrily in the family's gold-plated swimming pool while imported tutors dished out our education on silver spoons. This, to say the least, is slightly exaggerated. I did swim in a pool—at the YMCA while we lived in Ohio. I suppose you could say I had a tutor, if you want to give that name to my long-suffering piano teacher who used to come in, without hope, to see how I was making out with my first lesson. After a few months of progress, he came in with more hope to see how I was doing with my second lesson. Later, after kicking myself all over for not learning the piano while I had the chance, I had to work 10 times as hard to learn to play one-tenth as well.

The stories of our family wealth are based on the fact that my father, who now has an office in Wall Street, along with hundreds of other non-millionaires, is a financial manager who handles money for other people. Somehow, writers have been confused between the sums my father handled for other people, and the sums my mother handled paying our grocery bill. It's true that for a period following 1929, there wasn't too much money around for my father to manage—but our youth, thank Heaven, was perfectly healthy, and perfectly normal.

Every time my father finished a management job, which might take a few months or a couple of years, we moved on to the next. My twin sister brought home her lessons from school, my mother pounded them into my head, and so I progressed. A perfect educational program, to my way of thinking—though looking back at it now I don't see where my mother found the time. She should have batted me on the head, sent me back to school, and taken a few hours of well-deserved rest.

I never hammed it up around the house. Now and then, as all youngsters do, I lined up a bunch of kids, or was lined up, in our

DESIGNED FOR ELIZABETH TAYLOR . . . AND YOU!

M-G-M ☆ STAR

Elizabeth Taylor

HATS

Designed for a star and made for you to star in. An eye-catching collection of fine wool and fur felts.

$2.98 to $5.

At leading stores everywhere

Identified by this label

M-G-M ☆ Elizabeth Taylor ORIGINAL

ELIZABETH TAYLOR HATS • 29 West 36th Street, New York 18, N. Y.

CHERYL

STYLE WITH SPICE AT A MODEST PRICE

YVONNE

to retail about

$3 – $4 – $5

at leading stores everywhere

No Mail Orders please, write, we'll tell you where.

PARKHILL SHOES
Fitchburg, Mass.

Sherbrooke
rainwear
Such a lovely way to be caught in the rain!

Sherbrooke's Rain-Belle!

Wonderfully flattering with stitched collar, cuffs, pockets and belt. Of Dovcelle*, a Celanese rayon fabric, Cravenetted*. Green, red, navy, brown, black. Sizes 8 to 18. $22.95.

Oppenheim, Collins & Co., New York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Philadelphia.

L. S. Ayres & Co., Inc., Indianapolis, Ind.

Mail to store nearest you or to Sherman Bros., 205 West 39th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Please send me the Sherbrooke raincoat(s) as advertised in September Modern Screen at $22.95 ea. Enclosed is check ☐ money order ☐

Sherbrooke Raincoat	Size	1st color choice	2nd color choice	Quan.

Name.....
Address.....
City.....Zone.....State.....
Include amount for city and/or state tax if you live in taxable area.

* REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

parents' old clothes, and we put on a play in the garage or in somebody else's barn, for the usual admission fee of a few pins. We even turned professional once, and put on a show for pennies instead of pins. As I recall it, I didn't star.

I suppose the turning point came in the fall of 1933, when a new management job took my father, and perforce us, to Sarasota, Florida. This not only put me in touch with the ocean, which I love, but also put me in touch with all the excitement and glamor of show business. And I don't mean the theater, which may or may not be glamorous, depending on which way you look at it. I refer to the circus. Now there is a show!

Sarasota is the winter home of Ringling Brothers' great circus, and every day I could watch for free the various acts being put together for the spring show. Aerialists had their trapezes swung outdoors, and all a 13-year-old kid like myself had to do was stand there and watch with his mouth hanging open. Then there were the elephants being trained, and the horses put through their paces.

The kids my age, already in the circus, could dive 60 feet into a fisherman's landing net, ride a galloping horse standing on one hand, and juggle a full set of bowling pins while standing on a flagpone. They were out of my league. I couldn't even climb a rope.

And so I went on the stage, which is hardly the same thing as becoming an actor. I've had 10 years of stage experience.

The theater which gave me my first taste of grease paint was the Winter Theater in Sarasota, where I had a small part in As Husbands Go. The production was part of the Little Theater movement that was beginning to flourish at that time, and there are times when I fear that the public response was more enthusiastic about the general idea than about the particular production involved.

My folks have assured me that they did not let me go on the stage to get rid of me. My father was a friend of Theron Bamberger, the producer, and Mr. Bamberger was putting on a play that needed four youngsters. My father confessed that he had a son who sported a streak of ham. Mr. Bamberger sympathized with him, and told him to send me around. The result was a part in Fly Away Home, starring that wonderful actor and guy, Thomas Mitchell.

We opened in the summer theater in Stockbridge, Mass., and went on to Broadway in the fall. Child actors are seldom loved for their sweet qualities on Broadway, but I think that before we had finished dropping ice cubes down the leading lady's evening gown and putting bananas from the fruit bowl on Thomas Mitchell's seat during the on-stage dinner, we were the most hated of the lot.

Andrea King, who was at that time using the stage name of Georgette McKee, was with me on some of this refined humor. Mitchell bided his time. He smouldered, but what we were waiting for with dreadful anticipation was the night he would burst into flame. At last it came. We had spotted the leading lady's gown while throwing grapes, we had put water in Mitchell's hat, and worse, we had been trying to act smart by slipping in horrible ad libs—a crime in any theater. He called us over.

He stood us in front of him without saying a word. He waited while we began to squirm. He let us squirm, and I know my ears were hot enough to scorch my hair.

Then he said, "You kids might have enough stuff to be real stage people—if you could cut out the monkey business."

That was all. He walked away. There was no more monkey business.

More parts meant more experience, but more experience did not mean better acting. I am supposed to be difficult to deal with now because I want a contract that allows me to approve my scripts and have the rest of the time to return to the stage, or just wander off by myself. That, to my mind, is not being difficult.

For three years, I performed in a variety of routine things, and then. . . .

I was out of a job.

The run on Montgomery Clifts was over.

My brother was in Harvard. My sister was preparing for Bryn Mawr College. My folks said, "school"—and by this time I was just smart enough to admit I was dumb. I went to school.

The year that I spent at a preparatory school fell short of leaving me an intellectual light. I graduated, and I passed my college entrance examinations by the proverbial margin Thornton Wilder had in mind when he wrote The Skin of Our Teeth. But if that year failed to sell me on the academic life, it did serve to consolidate all the loose ideas that had been rattling around in my brain. I decided then and there that I was going to become an actor, that acting opportunity and not professional security was what counted.

I'm not saying those were cast-iron resolutions. All I'm saying is that my year in school gave me time to develop those ideas, and that when I went back to the stage, I wasn't the juvenile jerk I had been.

(Critic's note: The intensity with which young Clift projects himself into his role is almost enough to save any play, no matter how bad. He seems to be trying to lift it out of mediocrity with his own bootstraps, and nearly succeeding.)

I plunged into four flops in a row and ended up the season applying for unemployment insurance. One play, after weeks of rehearsal, ran six nights. The next ran two weeks, the next five, and the last one almost staggered out of the red by lasting six weeks. In deciding against entering college, I had committed myself to my own career.

That was the low ebb. And though I hadn't made any money, those four flops had made me richer in acting experience than my previous four years.

I worked with Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, who wander between the stage and Hollywood at will.

critic's corner

WHICH PAPER DO YOU READ?

Dan Duryea in Manhandled is unquestionably the nastiest villain of the week, the month, and possibly the year. His cunning is matched only by his hypocrisy, his viciousness only by an utterly cold heart. I don't know what pleasure Dan Duryea's movie character gives people. One would hate to think that he expresses submerged desires most human beings could not even admit to themselves.

Archer Winsten
N. Y. Post

Dan Duryea, on the other hand supplies what little excitement there is to be found in this offering. For most of the time, he is merely unctously evil as he makes love to the girl, but he brings a bit of genuine terror to the ending. His acting is one of the few bright spots in a conventional and contrived murder mystery.

Howard Barnes
N. Y. World-Telegram

I worked with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, who made the movie, The Guardsman, and turning down all movie offers, have remained on the stage ever since. I worked with Dudley Digges, Tallulah Bankhead, Edmund Gwenn and Martha Scott, who take the roles to which they can bring the most, be it stage or screen. Even the playwrights in whose plays I found roles worked where they pleased on the ideas they wanted most to develop. People like Thornton Wilder, Lillian Hellman, and Tennessee Williams. Working with people like that, watching the way they carefully preserved their right to progress along their own paths to their own objectives—can you wonder that a would-be actor like myself would fight shy of a seven-year contract that would cost me the rights to the very things which they had taught me were the most valuable?

But to go back, I used my periods between plays to roam around the country. As you have probably heard, I am not a well-dressed man, nor am I fussy about where I eat and sleep. Getting around and talking to people was the easiest and most enjoyable thing in the world.

When the war came along, I just plain wasn't drafted.

But in The Search I had to play the part of a GI in Europe who befriends a wild little Czech lad whom the war has separated from his mother. While we were filming the picture, I did everything I could to absorb the feeling of the man in service.

But I am getting ahead of my story. I went back to Broadway in Lillian Hellman's hit play The Searching Wind. Quite naturally, with a playwright the caliber of Lillian Hellman, we weren't neglected by the Hollywood scouts. Just about everybody was getting offers, including myself.

This fine play was a natural for Hollywood, as subsequent events proved.

So there was Hollywood, an offered seven-year contract and all. It promised new experiences, new excitement—and dough. I could use all three.

But there was I, over 20 and just learning how to act. Seven years in Hollywood and what would I be, another face or another actor? Seven years on Broadway, and either I'd be on my way to becoming an actor or I'd be out of business. I would not be just another face.

I turned down the offers. I returned to the stage.

No longer was I just a youngster eager to grab anything that came along. I wanted parts that not only interested me, but which would be a challenge to my acting ability. Only in that way, I figured, could I progress toward my objective of a real career as an actor.

I rented a small flat uptown to keep my expenses down, and plunged into my work. I read an enormous number of scripts, not with the thought in mind that they had to be solid hits, but that they represented solid theater with plenty of room for acting. Thornton Wilder's Our Town is an example. It was played on a stage with no scenery and just a few props, and I took a part because if looked like a great chance to experiment. That Our Town subsequently became a great hit was, in my case at least, purely incidental.

The record will show that I accepted parts in as many successful flops as I did in hits. The ones that flopped did so loudly, and the ones that hit, like Our Town and Skin of Our Teeth, proved immensely popular.

To meet the people, and later interpret them on the stage, I wandered all over town at all hours of the day and night, talking to strangers in some of the best places as well as some of the worst. One summer I dug irrigation ditches in California and helped lay some building foundations on a friend's ranch. Thus, by meeting and working with people in all walks of life, in all sections of the country, I was adding to the fund of experience that all actors must have if they want to be more than empty shells.

Then Howard Hawks sent me the script for Red River. I read it and was enthusiastic, but the part called for me to ride a horse like a veteran cowpoke, and also to beat up John Wayne in a brutal fight. I thought I could learn to ride a horse—but to beat up Wayne? I admitted my doubt to Hawks, who suggested that I come out and look over the difficulties at closer range.

That sounded fair enough to me. There were no commitments, I had some free time, and if I didn't want the part I could always come home. I went west.

A short while later I was in front of the cameras.

All day we worked on location, and between takes the actors, all expert horsemen and veterans of many a Western, taught me how to ride and act like a cowboy. Unfortunately, some of the sequences where I was to do my best riding came early in the picture, and most of the scenes taken after I really learned how to sit a horse ended up on the cutting room floor.

But I found I liked working for the cameras. On the stage many of the finer subtleties of acting are lost to the audience in the back of the theater, but on the screen, thanks to close-ups, an actor has no such handicaps. At first I was guilty of overacting, still trying to get my character interpretation across to the audience in the back row. The camera caught all these exaggerations, blew them up to enormous size, and then hurled them back in my face as I sat in the projection room. I squirmed like a worm on a hook, but those rushes offered a challenge I was glad to accept. In a matter of weeks, with the assistance of Hawks, Wayne and the other actors, I was able to forget the exaggerations, and get down to the business of putting a live cowboy upon the screen.

I've already told you about my next picture, The Search, and the challenge it presented. The critics, I'm glad to say, had a goodly numbers of pleasant things to say about The Search.

My next job was The Heiress, the movie version of Henry James' novel Washington Square. The story concerns a prominent New York physician who lived a century ago on fashionable Washington Square. He dominates the life of his shy, plain daughter (played by Olivia de Havilland), and can't understand why she doesn't possess the social graces and beauty of his deceased wife. I play the part of Morris Townsend, a penniless man-about-town with whom the daughter falls in love. When the daughter agrees to marry me, defying her father and endangering her inheritance, I back out and—well, I suppose it isn't fair to give the story away. So all I'll say is that it moves up to a singularly dramatic conclusion.

After finishing The Heiress, I left Hollywood for New York where I stayed either in my little apartment or visited friends on Long Island. Until late in July, I enjoyed myself around New York, caught up on my reading and found time to take a good long look at the future.

It's a pretty exciting future. Around the first of August, I flew to Berlin, Germany, to make Two Corridors East. When this story goes to press, I'll still be in Berlin; and right now I'm not certain when I will be returning to Hollywood.

I guess that's about all I can say about Montgomery Clift, of stage and screen.

Two-piece, two-toned and terrific . . . 100% Wool Jersey. The long torso blouse has a turtle neck and side zipper . . . the skirt is accordion-pleated from the hips. The top is light, the skirt is dark . . . each blends beautifully with other skirts or blouses. Designed by Melanie Modes in pearl grey and steel grey—beige and copper brown, black and black—light blue and slate blue. Sizes 9 to 15.

At Miller stores throughout the country or ORDER BY MAIL.

Millers Dept. 609, 505 - 8th Avenue, New York 18, N. Y.
(Mail orders only accepted at home office)
Please send me "Campus Captivator" at $6.99, plus 21c for postage and handling. Total $7.20.
Size..... Color..... 2nd Choice.....
Please send me Free Fashion Catalog on Half and Large Sizes ☐ on Misses and Junior Sizes. ☐
NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
CITY..... ZONE..... STATE.....
In New York City add 2% Sales Tax.
☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D.
"SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED"

ATTENTION: – SEND FOR 2 IMPORTANT FALL FASHION CATALOGS FREE—For you—who wear large sizes and ½ sizes —and for you—who wear Misses and Junior Sizes.

STOP LYING ABOUT CROSBY

(Continued from page 55)

doing to Bing, incredible though it may be.

When columnists heard this cancer report, they started telephoning Larry Crosby, the brother who talks to the press for Bing. Larry wasn't as startled by this as he was a few years ago, when he was an advertising man in Seattle, and the organ player in a local theater phoned him to say: "I got it straight that Bing's got the d.t.'s so bad they had to put him away in a straitjacket!"

"Of course I knew the story was insane," says Larry. "But I checked to see how it had got started. Seems Bing had stopped off and had a glass of beer in San Francisco. That was all. Somehow, by the time that news got up to Seattle, it had become a lurid saga of alcoholism.

"As for the cancer report making the rounds—well, Bing and his family are up on their Nevada ranch for their summer vacation right now. That's a working ranch and Bing's right in there pitching. Pretty rugged for a man they say is dying of cancer, isn't it? . . . And if the old rumor that he and Dixie are separating starts up again, you can laugh that one off too. But Dixie came down today for a few days to see about some redecorating they're having done in the Holmby Hills house—and that's all it takes for rumors to start. So you'll probably hear that oldie again any day now." getting better all the time . . .

When Bing changed from "live" radio shows to transcribed ones, it was because he felt that better programs would result when they could be assembled and produced with the care and control that transcribing allows—you can't change a song or a comedy line once it's gone on the airways, but you can always "edit" a transcription. Besides, having to show up for rehearsals and broadcasts at set times every week was working a hardship on the very busy Bing. Transcribing, he could do his shows at his convenience.

But the rumor-hounds bayed, "He can't trust his voice any more! Not hitting the high notes these days! And he's getting awfully husky, haven't you noticed?"

Says Troy Sanders, Paramount music director, who has worked with some of the biggest voices in the country: "As Bing has gotten older, his range has moved down a whole third. We feel he has developed a much richer tone. As for high notes, Bing can still produce wonderful high notes with perfect vocal technique whenever they're needed, and hold them as long as he wants. I know his range is much greater than he ever uses.

Asked if it were true that Bing can't read music, Sanders laughed. "That's ridiculous. He reads like a flash. But I used to believe that rumor myself. Years ago I asked him, 'Why do you always want to see the music before the lyrics if you can't read music?' 'Well,' said Bing, 'I just like to see the notes go up and down.'

"I wish I could read them as well myself! In a few moments he has the music down cold—then he concentrates on the lyrics. His interpretation of songs is by no means something he accomplishes casually—even if the result seems so simple that everybody and his brother think they could sing a song as he does. He's developed a technique in popular songs as great in its way as that of any operatic star. Bing milks a song dry of every meaning it has."

"But isn't he awfully lazy?" I asked.

"Absolutely not! The thing is—he's a quick study. Give him two-and-a-half pages of fresh script and he'll disappear for 15 minutes. When he comes back, he has it letter-perfect. You can pick out a song you know he hasn't sung in 20 years and he can sing it with all the words right. . . . Recently we were sitting around the set of A Connecticut Yankee when Sir Cedric Hardwicke tossed off a line of Hamlet. Bing picked it up and spoke the rest of the lines not only perfectly, but movingly. After a moment's silence, Sir Cedric cleared his throat and said, 'When did you have time to learn all that?' Bing laughed and answered, 'Oh, back in my school days I was quite a thespian.'

"A fellow with a fabulous memory like that has a lot of time he can use as he wants," Sanders concluded.

Barney Dean, the writer, a close personal friend of Bing, admits, "I used to think he was lazy. He sure looks lazy. But then it dawned on me how wrong I was. A lazy man is usually late or even never shows at all for appointments. Yet Bing will make a date to meet you somewhere, say at three o'clock a month hence, and doesn't even write it down. He doesn't have a secretary make a note of it. But you'd better be there right on the dot—because he'll be. If you suggest meeting to make a recording at nine o'clock, he'll say, 'Oh, let's make it eight.' Does that sound like a lazy man? And did you ever hear of a lazy man who comes all prepared so he can go through his work quickly and efficiently? Bing does. He works a full honest day, but he doesn't make a fuss about it. And he's most cooperative."

Hey, wait a minute! Most co*operative*? They say he's uncooperative and even rude to his fellow workers.

Rhonda Fleming, who played his lady love in A Connecticut Yankee, chimes in enthusiastically to tell a typical tale.

"From the tests to the end of the picture, he couldn't have been more cooperative or nicer. How can they say he's uncooperative and rude?" she exclaims, her lovely green eyes flashing.

"I was scared when I made the test for the role. It was the biggest chance I'd had yet. He made the tests with me. At first I was awfully tense. He joked and kidded, trying to help me relax. The cameraman ran out of film and said, 'Oh well, I guess we've got enough.' Bing said, 'No, sir. You have almost nothing at all. Let's take more. Give her a real chance.'

"Then, all through the picture, I was constantly amazed by the scenes he'd throw my way. For instance when I was standing against the wall singing 'Once and For Always,' the cameraman interrupted the action by saying, 'For heaven's sake, Bing, turn your face around. We're just getting your profile.' Bing answered, 'They've seen enough of me. Let 'em see Fleming.' So the camera focused fully on me except for a couple of quick flashes at Bing's face.

"When I thanked him, he just said, 'Can't look good myself unless everyone else looks good.'

"It's such a pleasure to work with him. He's a laughing, joking person, never serious. I don't see how he does it. He has no time to himself. People are always following him around. I don't know when he gets time to eat or sleep!"

And Troy Sanders adds: "I suppose that rumor about rudeness gets around, because when Bing has a lot on his mind he may pass even his best friends without speaking. He's done that to me dozens of times, but I think nothing of it. Apt to do the same myself on occasions.

"Then, too, when Bing takes up a problem, he goes right to the root of the matter and gives his solution in the fewest possible words. So few that less alert people are disconcerted. They may feel he's been blunt and rude when he's just been efficient."

Well, that's all very nice. But still, the Hollywood Women's Press Club did name him the most uncooperative actor of the year not long ago.

spike that rumor . . .

Lyle Rooks, former Paramount publicist, tells about the morning that selection was announced. She was working on The Road to Morocco with Bing and Bob Hope and she wanted to get either Bob or Bing to pose for a pair of gag photographs someone had thought up. Since Bob is notoriously cooperative, she asked him. For one shot he was to place a straw hat on each hump of a two humped camel, then pose for another, doubled up with laughter, beside the camel. "The straw that broke the camel's back sort of idea," Miss Rooks told him.

"Oh, no!" Hope moaned, turned and ran.

So now she'd have to ask Crosby. Knowing his reputation for disliking to pose for stills, she foresaw having to use a powerful sales talk—especially for these stills, after Hope's reaction. She felt discouraged about the whole thing.

Into Miss Rooks' gloom came a small voice saying, "Would you like me to do it?"

"I darned near fainted," Lyle tells today. "Bing had overheard, and had volunteered to pose! We shot the pictures. They cracked practically every publication possible. When I thanked him that morning, he grinned and said, 'Be sure to tell the ladies.'"

Feeling this was only an impulsive reaction to the morning news, she approached him with some trepidation a few days later to check the rumor that his pretty wife, Dixie, was to have another child.

She asked the intimate question apologetically. He answered her immediately, "Sheer fantasy, my girl, sheer fantasy! And don't be so apologetic. I'm used to that query by this time. People are always asking me."

"He never takes anything seriously. He

"I could have slept through it again."

just lets it roll off his back. If you take yourself too seriously," Lyle warns, "you'll come a cropper with him."

H. Allen Smith, author of such books as "Life in a Putty-Knife Factory," was commissioned to do a two-part article entitled "King of the Groaners," for the Saturday Evening Post. After making the trip to Hollywood, he met Bing, and Bing said, "Yeh, the boys told me you were coming. I'll see you later over at Paramount."

Smith sat around the Hollywood Knickerbocker for days and nothing happened. He never did meet Bing again. But he gathered enough material to produce his article nonetheless.

A writer for one of the country's biggest slick publications reports, "He's casual to the point of being discourteous. Our photographer considered himself lucky to get a couple of pictures. You just can't pin Crosby down."

Yet, if you suggest to the San Francisco newspapermen that Bing Crosby is uncooperative, they'll spit in your eye. They met him recently when the studio threw a press party in honor of director Frank Capra at the St. Francis Hotel while on location for Bing's Riding High, which will follow Top o' the Morning.

Publicist Floyd Simonton says, "I didn't expect Bing to come. Matter of fact, I almost didn't bother even to tell him about it. But I did say, 'We're having a press party for Frank Capra this afternoon. If you care to come, we'd be glad to have you.'

"At 10 minutes of five, I heard the door open and looked up. There was Bing Crosby! The first to arrive! After the rest of the guests had poured in, I expected Bing to duck out. But he circulated among the guests and talked a lot. He was the last to leave!"

Yet one fan magazine gave Bing its highest award and a banquet in his honor. He didn't show up! Why? Simply because he was to be the center of attraction. At the cocktail party, Frank Capra was the honor guest.

They tell how Bing balked at going to the Academy Awards when it seemed likely he'd get an Academy Award for Going My Way. Finally Buddy DaSilva, Paramount executive, persuaded him by saying, "If you don't go you'll give Hollywood a black eye, because these awards bring the best constructive publicity Hollywood gets. How's it going to look if you won't bother to pick yours up?"

Bing appeared.

He even stood still once for a big Welcome Home demonstration in Spokane. He took all the hullabaloo in stride. But that riot raised $20,000 for the scholarship fund at his alma mater, Gonzaga University.

He continues to seem relaxed, easy, and friendly. He knows exactly what he's doing. He doesn't make a fuss about it ever. He lives as he sings—with the most deceptive air of effortlessness.

Yet always about him, rumors are flying. And rumors are trying—the constant pressure they exert must be darned unpleasant for this really wonderfully pleasant guy. Why can't the rumor hounds lay off Crosby? THE END

The screen story of Bing Crosby's latest movie, Top O' The Morning, is to be found in the October issue of that richly entertaining Dell magazine, SCREEN STORIES.

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use...Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the free jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Write to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for your free jar.

NO HELP WANTED

(Continued from page 40)

They gave me another picture, and that's the important thing."

He's a modest, level-headed young man with a large bump of determination, a gift for hard work and a fierce independence. These latter qualities had nothing to do with his breaking into pictures. They've had a great deal to do with his sticking.

Four years ago, on September 19th, Shirley and John were married. Though the war was just over, John was still in the Army and expecting to stay in quite a while—with the occupation forces in Japan. That's why they married when they did, instead of waiting for Shirley's 18th birthday.

If Jack's father hadn't died, if his mother hadn't moved to California, if he and Shirley hadn't met and fallen in love, the chances are he'd have gone into the Agar Packing and Provision Company, starting at the bottom like his father and grandfather before him. In Chicago, four generations of Agars had been meat-packers. "Looks like I'm the black sheep," grins John.

When you're in the service, headed for indefinite duty overseas, you don't think too far ahead. But John knew he wouldn't go back to Chicago. Realizing what pictures meant to Shirley, he'd said, "I'll never ask you to give them up." For himself, he still planned a business career. Once the Army was through with him, he'd go back to school for training in business administration. Then he'd see. If it wasn't meat-packing, it would be something else.

David Selznick changed all that. At the wedding reception, his eyes thoughtfully followed the tall young groom. A week later, he threw a party for Shirley and Jack. Among the guests were several directors. If Jack was being given the once-over, he didn't know it. He was pretty oblivious of everything but his bride, and the fact that in two days he'd leave her for Camp Kearns, the overseas replacement depot outside Salt Lake City.

It was to Salt Lake that the wire came. "WE WOULD LIKE TO SIGN YOU TO A TEST CONTRACT WHEN YOU LEAVE THE SERVICE. . . ." Jack's first reaction was total and stunned amazement. Then a resistance set up. "Where do I get off, trying to be an actor, just because I married a movie star?"

But Jack's is a healthy and an honest mind. Sure, he was bothered by that aspect of the situation. Sure, the whole thing left him doubtful and a little confused. But you couldn't just brush it off. So, like a sensible guy, he sought expert advice. Shirley and her mother were staying at the Hotel Utah, on their way home from a war-bond rally. Married men, with wives in town, were permitted to leave the post at night. That night Jack showed the wire to Shirley and her mom.

Privately, Shirley was enchanted. She felt that her handsome husband would be extremely photogenic, and whoever didn't sign him would be passing up a good bet. This opinion she was smart enough to keep to herself. In a spirit of calm objectivity, she and her mother pointed out both the advantages and the pitfalls of a film career. If anything, they stressed the pitfalls. Jack came clean with his own doubts and reservations.

"The last thing I want is to capitalize on being your husband," he said earnestly to Shirley.

"Look, Jack," said Shirley. "We all get our breaks one way or another. They spotted Guy Madison at a radio broadcast. They spotted you at our wedding. No matter how you get in, you still have to make good on your own . . . And let me tell you something, Jack: Your being my husband's going to make it just a little rougher on you. They're going to watch you just a little more closely."

Jack took the problem back to camp with him and thought it through. He liked the idea of a common professional interest with his wife. He liked the prospect of coming back to a job. If it didn't work out, he'd still be young enough to do something else. And anyhow, what the heck! They'd probably give him a test—and the old heave-ho! . . .

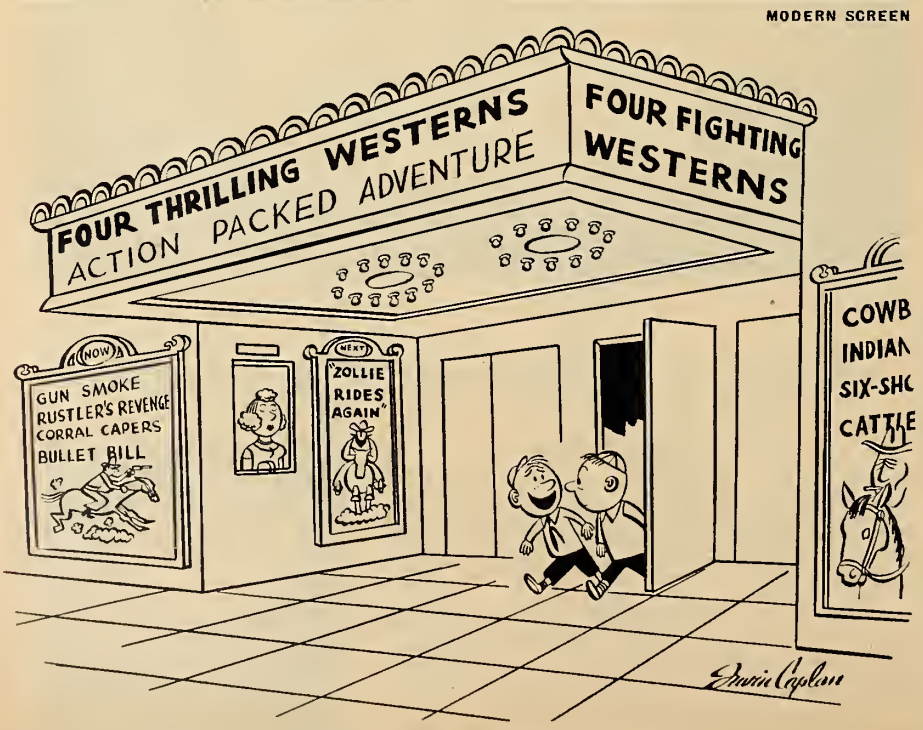
He sent a wire of acceptance. Then crowding events washed the whole business out of their thoughts. One night he told Shirley gently, "Tomorrow's the last. We're being shipped out to a point of embarkation."

Next evening she waited for a Jack who never came. Being a movie star has its obvious blessings and its less obvious handicaps. An officer had heard that some Hollywood star was in town, who happened to be the wife of one of his sergeants. Maybe said officer had indigestion. Maybe he was against stars marrying sergeants. Maybe he just liked the feel of authority. Anyway, he'd show them. Though every other man in his group was released, Sergeant John Agar was kept at camp that night, twiddling his thumbs. His buddies showed up at the hotel. "Where's Jack?" they asked. "We want to have a last drink to our overseas duty."

homecoming . . .

When the awful truth dawned on Shirley, all she had time for was a quick phone call—through which she sobbed steadily, while Jack could hardly get the words past his throat. He left the following morning. She left that night. On the way home, she kept the radio tuned in till she heard a commentator report that John Agar was en route to Okinawa. Then she turned it off, and sat quiet through the rest of the trip. Her mother will never forget the sight of a small figure, mounting the stairs to her bedroom, Jack's coat over her arm, his shoes in her hand. There were no more tears. Shirley doesn't weep easily, and by now she was cried out. As her eyes met her mother's, she even attempted a smile of sorts. "Well," she said. "So this is all I've got left of my husband. . . ."

And then, with practically one foot on the boat, Jack got the news that the Army point system had been revised, making him eligible for discharge. On January 29th, he came home for good.



Then came the big event—Jack's test.

They hadn't talked much about the test. Without making a point of it, both felt that, in case he failed to make the grade, the less said the better. Nor did Shirley give out with advice. After all, she'd never been a man. Whatever she told him might prove misleading. Moreover, direction ought to be left to directors. As for Jack, from childhood on, his instinct had been to do things by himself. In this case, the feeling was just a little bit more intense. "She encouraged me," he says, "just by being my wife."

Also she checked him on cues. And one night she put pancake make-up on him. "Just to get you used to the feel. It's not too comfortable."

"Doesn't bother me at all," said her unsuspecting husband. Then, half-an-hour later, it tightened up, and Shirley heard a yelp. "Hey! My mouth is all stiff!"

Luckily, they used only grease on the set. It didn't make much difference. That day will live in Jack's memory as a day of torment. He played Joseph Cotten's part in a scene from The Farmer's Daughter. He was jittery, self-conscious, and sweating like a stoker. He still doesn't know how he came out of it alive. Straight from the wringer, he tottered home to Shirley, who was whipping up one of her special dinners for him. "How did it go?" she asked him, trying to sound very casual.

"Boy, that was swell! But I think I'm developing saddle sores."

In no uncertain terms, he told her. She wasn't too upset. "Don't forget, this is mostly a photography test, Jack. They don't expect you to pull an Olivier acting job out of the hat. . . . C'mon, let's eat. You can't really tell till you see it on the screen."

Next day, the test was run for Jack and the director. Had Jack been the director, he'd have said to himself, "So long. Nice knowing you." This man was saying kind things, but who was he kidding? People are tactful. People don't like to say to your face, "You're terrible." A few days later Shirley and her mother saw the test.

"All I noticed wrong was you didn't seem to want to turn your face to the camera," Shirley told him. "All beginners don't. But you photographed swell, Jack. I met Mr. O'Shea. He liked it."

Jack thought Shirley was an angel, and Mr. O'Shea a prince. But you couldn't tell Jack he hadn't looked like a goon. When the okay came through a few days later, Jack was one happy but thoroughly flabbergasted guy. . . .

* * *

For the next year-and-a-half he studied like mad, taking lessons in diction, doing scenes from plays. After a while he grew restive. No one knew better than Jack that he needed all the training he could get. "If they'd let me go any sooner," he says now, "I'd have been really pathetic." But his spirit was that of a thoroughbred at the starting post, wild to be off and away. Inaction killed him. When would they put him to work? In anything. Just a walk-on. Just a chance to waggle his ears at the camera.

"Relax," Shirley told him. "Your time'll come."

discovery . . .

To Jack, John Ford's name is surrounded by radiance. "John Ford, God love him," is the way he generally puts it. One day Jack and Shirley went down to meet the boat that was bringing Jack's mother and sister home from Honolulu. Mr. Ford was also on the boat. His daughter, Barbara, had swam with Joyce Agar off the beach at Waikiki. Jack met Barbara's father. He didn't know that Mr. Ford was preparing a picture called Fort Apache. He didn't know that, practically straight from the boat, Mr. Ford went to Selznick's studio, and asked them to run John Agar's test for him. Good thing Jack didn't know. For his money, that test should have met with an accident, preferably fatal. Apparently Mr. Ford felt otherwise. All of a sudden Jack found himself in Ford's office. "How tall are you? How much do you weigh? Face the window, please. Face the door, please." A week later came the news that he was to play the young Army officer in Fort Apache.

"I told Shirley about it that night," says Jack. "She was pretty pleased. So was I. It was—well, it was sort of exciting, you know."

Such understatement is also characteristic of John. Though his eyes may blaze, his speech remains unfevered. At home it's different. "At home," reports Shirley, "he can sound off for two hours on the same subject, but with different wordage. He'd be wonderful in Congress for a filibuster." But with outsiders, his natural reserve takes over. No phase of his job is easy. "Manual labor—and I've done that, too, in my time—never left me exhausted like a day at the studio," he says. "But the hardest part is talking about yourself."

Well, Jack was signed, sealed and delivered for Fort Apache before anyone thought of teaming him with his wife. When Ford told Daniel O'Shea of Vanguard Pictures that he needed a Shirley

The Lovable Girl-of-the-Month loves her

Lovable® Bra

ALL NYLON

$1.50

Yes—all nylon—every inch, every stitch! Washes beautifully and dries in a flash. And it fits like a dream; gives the high, rounded look that's so popular!

#929—White or pink nylon. (#960—Satin; #961—Cotton.) A-cup, Sizes 32-36; B-cup, 32-38.

Pictured on another Lovable model

You'll be lovely, too, in a Lovable BRA

LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO., Dept. E10, 358 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C.1

GOSSARD'S
Hi-Top®
slims your waist...
slims your hips, TOO!

Now,
you can have complete, comfortable control from midriff to thigh . . . in the new HI-TOP girdle. It's another Gossard original.

It's new! It's different! A 3-inch elastic band at back smooths and slims your waist . . . twin elastic panels trim and taper your hips. Gossard's HI-TOP girdle has all the exclusive features of Gossard quality.

Ask for No. 1023, in satin fabric, satin elastic, and airy leno—your best buy at $10.00. White or nude. Two lengths. Talon. Similar all-elastic pantie and girdle, slightly more.

• • •

You'll rave about the ALL NYLON bra...sheer taffeta and embroidered marquisette...even the thread is Nylon. It's No. 2410—$3.50. Three cup sizes. White.

• • •

Featured by more stores and shops

the Gossard line of beauty®

The H. W. GOSSARD CO., 111 N. Canal St., Chicago 6, Illinois

Temple-type girl, he no more dreamed of getting Shirley than the moon. O'Shea said: "We happen to have a Miss Temple under contract. You want somebody like her? We can give you the genuine article." Certainly Ford grabbed her. Who in his right mind wouldn't have?

As for Adventure in Baltimore, Barbara Bel Geddes was supposed to do it first, then somebody else. Shirley read the script from Jack's viewpoint, and went mad over the girl's part. This she kept to herself. They'd agreed that it might not be wise to work together too much, especially at the outset of Jack's career. So, while Shirley was delighted with Selznick's last-minute wire, notifying her of the loan-out, she also wondered how Jack was going to take it. And how she should break the news. In the end, she decided just to break it—brief, blithe and business-like. "Read this, kid. Read it and weep."

He read it and laughed—very happily.

Fort Apache will always mean something special to them. It was Jack's first picture. Shirley was playing his sweetheart. Susan was on the way. Everything combined to make it a sentimental landmark for them. For Jack, it was something else, too. A chance to prove his gratitude. A chance to begin to find out whether or not he had a place in this business. For Ford, for the picture, for himself, he was going to do a good job or bust.

He did a good, competent job.

her severest critic . . .

He's in the business now with all his heart and energy. Actors who holler about being worked too hard leave him baffled. He'd work every day if they'd let him, and his once-beloved golf clubs could go fly a kite. His deep will to success has fired Shirley's. That may sound like a strange thing to say, but not the way she explained it: "After all these years of work, I feel a great need to study. Jack's done that to me—not by criticizing, just by the way he works himself. It's made me more critical. I know now that I'm very happy in comedy parts and in unmarried parts—as in The Story of Seabiscuit and A Kiss for Corliss. But with dramatic love scenes and things, I'm as out-of-place as I can be. Not that I haven't lived and suffered." A dimple pops out. "But not the right kind of suffering, I guess."

It's perfectly true that, in certain special ways, the going's been made rougher because they're married. Publicity's used their marriage. This was inevitable. But there are limits set by taste and fairness, which were overstepped. I remember one ad when Fort Apache was released: SEE SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S NEW HUSBAND! As though she'd had six! I remember the magazines, harping on a single string. How John got his break. No interest in his performance. No recognition of the fact that he'd sweated through months of work to put over a job that stood up with those of seasoned fellow-actors. How he got his break was an accident. How he used it wasn't. There lay the vital distinction that people couldn't be bothered to make. It had no wallop.

All this rubbed them both the wrong way. Having grown up in the atmosphere of Hollywood publicity, Shirley understood it better than Jack. It was more difficult for him to accept at first. Why couldn't they take or leave him on the strength of his work, and forget the rest? Shirley respected his stand, and went right along with him. There was one thing they could do about it—keep all publicity out of the house. "I'm not going to capitalize on being your husband." He'd meant it then, he means it now. Whatever press coverage he got, he'd get by virtue of his own value to the press. If he didn't get any, fine. He'd know that much sooner just where he stood. He got plenty. But for a year and a half they stuck to their guns. Then something happened. MODERN SCREEN proposed to put out an anniversary issue in honor of Shirley's 21st birthday, devoting 18 pages to the fabulous tale of her past and present.

"It's such a wonderful thing they're doing," said Shirley. "Only—they want to take pictures at home. What do you think?"

"Let the bars down, of course," said Jack promptly.

Which shows the measure by which these months had changed him. For one thing, he had two more pictures under his belt. That makes a difference. For another, he was getting hep to Hollywood. He'd learned that the press will be the press, and there's not much you can do about it. Most of its members try to play fair. A few will sell their souls for a piece of hot copy and, if there is none, make it up. This is to goad the victim into a counter-statement, which produces another piece of hot copy. Deep, hey? But ignore such operators, and they're left holding the bag. Jack's learned to ignore them.

As for Shirley, she's like an old salt who can sniff dirty weather way ahead. Jack was going on location for Yellow Ribbon. She was going on location for Belvedere. And where was she going? To Reno, of all places. Shirley heaved a sigh, picked up the phone and called a columnist—a good scout who deals them straight from the top.

"Thus-and-so are the facts," she told him. "It's our first separation, and I don't even like the sound of the word. But it's strictly business."

Understanding exactly what she meant, he used the story just as she gave it to him. Did that stop the diehards? Don't be silly. They knew the whole Belvedere company was headed for Reno. Shirley was their pigeon. "We hear there are clouds over the Agar household." Sure, there are clouds over the Agar household. Over the whole of West Los Angeles, in fact. The sun sinks behind them at night into the Pacific, and they look real pretty. Susan adores them.

who's nervous? . . .

Even in minor matters, Shirley and Jack don't always enjoy the same freedom as other movie couples. It was Jack's first day on I Married A Communist. This was his first dramatic role, and they were starting with his most dramatic scene. Trouble was, they didn't start. There he sat in his dressing room, kneading his hands and sweating, when Shirley dropped in. She'd brought him a key-chain with a little horseshoe, for luck. Never had he been gladder to see her. Some of the strain of waiting was released in talk. They had lunch together. Then his scene was called, and Shirley went off to Wardrobe to make some photographs. On her return, he was in the midst of work.

"Don't let him see you," they said. You'll make him nervous."

"But he likes to see me," Shirley objected.

She sat down where she could watch without being in the way. A line of people quietly formed in front of her and shut off her view. Any other actress would have been welcomed or ignored. But Shirley's a legend. A legend's bound to disturb her husband. When the director said, "Cut," Jack craned his neck for a sight of her. No sign of Shirley.

That night Jack asked, "Where did you disappear to?"

"They said I made you nervous, so I left."

"Nervous, my foot! Does me good to see you around."

Passing his chair, she planted a kiss on his ear and let it go at that. You can say an awful lot with a kiss. . . . THE END out—as you would do at a hotel.

RETURN FROM TRAGEDY

(Continued from page 37)

Robert Walker wasn't insane. His refusal to talk to the doctor was, in a sense, the same attitude you show when you won't talk things over with a friend after a quarrel. He was no menace. No menace, that is, to anyone but himself. Then why was he there? Why was this curly-haired, soft-eyed young man confined to an institution dedicated to the treatment of the sick mind?

Freud said, and so do most practicing psychiatrists, that what you are today is a result of what you have been at some earlier time in your life. And a good psychiatrist can take apart your character now and read your biography. They pry into your dreams and memories—not, as some people think, to brew a mysterious mental medicine, but to get at the facts—at the truth you think you dare not tell.

young perfectionist . . .

Bob Walker was born in Salt Lake City, Utah. His father was a huge, lusty man, city editor of a newspaper and later a talented advertising executive. His mother was a feminine woman who had given her life over to feminine pursuits—being a man's wife, and raising her sons. Bob was no different from other kids, actually, but he thought he was. He was very thin, gangly, afflicted more than he should be, he thought, with acne. He was strong, but never robust. His eyes were weak. That's all right, you say—it sounds like the kid in the next block. Well, maybe the kid in the next block will do okay. Maybe he doesn't have the spark that makes great men. Maybe he'll be satisfied to be ordinary. Bob Walker wasn't.

The desire to be a better man than anyone else was born in Bob. He couldn't have helped any of the things he did if he had wanted to. A course had to be run. A crisis met and passed.

Certainly he was no tough guy. But there wasn't a kid in the state of Utah who could look crooked at him. He fought many a battle, and he seldom won one. But he never gave up. He'd try again—on a bigger kid.

The major portion of Bob's education was acquired at the San Diego Army and Navy Academy which, like most military schools, depends for its existence on the premise that some boys need a sterner hand than Mother can supply. At school, Bob was a good scholar. He had as much stamina as the next lad. But he was still gangly and thin and no adolescent Adonis. The first thing he established was that he could be whipped, but that it took a good man to do it. Then, flaunting his imagined deficiencies in the face of the odds-makers, he decided to become an actor, to make his living as the darling of the matinee set, to have girls fawning for his favors.

So Bob went off to New York to become an actor—and he also went off to New York to be on his own. He wanted to be better than the greatest stars in the business and take their places, and show the kid in the next bunk at San Diego that he could do it.

He wanted to have somebody ask him, "Who paid your rent last week, kid?"

And he wanted to answer, "I did!"

Those two words are probably the key to Robert Walker's life. I did! Look at me. I'm kind of skinny, and if I take my glasses off I can hardly see you—but I can still knock your block off!

Well, there was a hitch. Bob had an aunt whom he admired very much. She was one of the most noted self-made

For the skin that doesn't like a heavy make-up a sheerer powder base, greaseless

Powder clings and clings to a sheer satiny foundation of Pond's Vanishing Cream! This fluffy, greaseless cream gives your skin a smooth finish that takes powder perfectly. No streaking or discoloring . . . no coated, "made-up" look. And no shade problem because the Cream is transparent on your skin! If you dislike a heavy foundation, here is your ideal powder base—feather-light and natural!

1-Minute Mask . . . gives new glow to your make-up!

Give your complexion special glamour for your special evenings! Before make-up, smooth a lavish white Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream over your entire face—except eyes. "Keratolytic" action of the Cream dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles. Tissue off the Mask after one minute. Your skin looks lighter, clearer, sparkling—exquisitely smoothed for soft, lasting make-up.

Marion Cleveland granddaughter of President Cleveland, says . . .

"I can always count on the 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream to brighten my complexion—make my skin so smooth that make-up goes on like a charm!"

Your face is your fortune...but your figure's fortuna

Nylon power net panty girdle with exclusive contour-fitted crotch...

Fortunette

by FORTUNA

Super-strong, extra-flexible with rayon satin lastex panel. Cantaur-fitted cratch of exclusive Elasta-q cloth won't ride up, cut, or bind. Detachable garters. Or regular girdle. Nude, white, blue, black. Small, medium, large. $5.95 at leading stores everywhere.

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

WOLFE & LANG, Inc., 35 West 32 Street, New York 1, N. Y.

MAN-MADE ALLIGATOR MATCHABLES

$3.98

SANDRA

PRISCILLA

Both styles, Cuban and High Heels, Brown, Red, Green. Sizes 3½ to 9, mediums only.

vicki of Boston

ORDER BY MAIL

VICKI OF BOSTON D-10
89 BEACH ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Please send me_____Prs. @ $3.98

STYLE	HEEL	SIZE	COLOR	2nd CHOICE
PRISCILLA
SANDRA

HANDBAG 1.99 plus tax. Total 2.39. Color_____

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

Check ☐ Money Order ☐ C.O.D. ☐

Send check or money order and we will pay postage. Customer agrees to pay postal charges on C. O. D.'s.

MATCHING HANDBAG

$1.99

PLUS TAX

TOTAL $2.39

In Brown, Red, Green man-made alligator

Send for FREE 1950 Catalog

women in America. Her name was Hortense Odlum. She was the wife of Floyd Odlum, the industrial empire builder. Bob loved her and admired her more than anyone else in his family. He went to live with her and started the rounds of the casting offices. You may not think there is hardship in walking out of a lavish suite in a fashionable hotel to pound the cold, cold pavement looking for a chance to play Hamlet. But if you want to play Hamlet more than anything in the world, it can mark you for life! You may not go along with the premise that free room and board in a swank home is cruelty. But if you want to pay your own rent more than you want to live, it can stain your soul! Yes, Aunt Hortense was a hitch.

It was only a never-say-die spirit that kept Bob Walker going. He borrowed the money to enroll in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts from his aunt (because now he had learned that he had to study his trade) and moved to a small room in Greenwich Village.

Now comes love. Sure, you've read about it. Shy boy meets shy girl in a dramatic school and they ride out on a cloud. Bob Walker met Phylis Isley. She was beautiful. She was retiring. She was a stranger in New York. No, she wasn't particularly poor. Her family owned theaters in Texas, and there's money in theaters in Texas. At any rate, they met on a common ground, and probably the words they said to one another sounded exactly like the words boys and girls falling in love have always said to one another.

Bob didn't know it at the time, but this is actually what he was saying to Phylis:

He: Let me take you away from all this.

She: You mean away from my work? The theater?

He: No. From the money. From your family. From everybody you need.

She: But what will we live on?

He: The best! The very best! We'll dine on pheasant, and drink wine, and you'll wear furs, and diamonds.

She: Are you that rich?

He: Gosh, no. But I can get those things for you. I can get you anything you want! Please let me get them for you!

Phylis said she'd let him get them for her, and Bob married her and went after them. And at this point in his life, Robert Walker found his first true happiness. He was better than any man he'd ever known. He was showing the kid in the next bunk in San Diego.

He got a flat in Greenwich Village. He bought a canary. He played in the Cherry Lane Theatre for 50 cents a night, and he

I SAW IT HAPPEN

My friend and I skipped school on the day that Down to the Sea in Ships was premiered at New Bedford. We were walking down the street, talking and worrying, when we heard a pleasant voice behind us. "You'd better get back to school kids. I used to be a school teacher myself, and a pretty stiff one at that." Yes, it was the star of the new movie, Richard Widmark.

Margery York
Fairhaven, Mass.

took home the jewels and the furs and the wine and the pheasant. One night the jewels would be a stick of bologna, and the wine a bottle of milk. For furs, he brought a bargain silk housecoat and a shiny, wool-lined rain cape. And they were divinely happy.

Children came. Two of them. Bob became probably the most sought-after actor in radio. He moved his family to Long Island. The jewels became filets mignon and maybe once in a while a real jewel—a brooch or a pair of earrings. The furs became furs. But it didn't really matter. The happiness came from getting things by himself. The Robert Walkers became substantial folk.

The hardest thing in the world to do is to stand still. Phylis Walker was an actress. She told her friends that she wasn't serious about it any more. A husband, two kids, happiness—who wanted more? But suddenly she was asked to come to Hollywood to test for pictures. She did—and she was just as happy that things didn't go so well. Then, David Selznick wanted to get a look at her and she came out again and tested for The Song of Bernadette. She not only got the job, she got an Academy Award for doing it.

And what about Robert Walker? Something was missing now in his life. Call it responsibility if you want to. Call it the haven he had built to bring his troubles to.

Then, MGM was testing actors for a picture called Bataan. The producer was Dore Schary. He had New York send him the tests and when he saw the thin, anxious-looking young man flashed on the screen, he tossed the rest of the tests in the bucket and sent for Robert Walker.

In all fairness to Bob, it must be told that he really didn't want to come. He was doing all right in New York. He came because his wife was in California, and because he took an instant liking to Dore Schary. He was a big success in the picture. But he couldn't take that back to lay at the feet of his wife. She was a bigger success.

love walked out . . .

Let's pass over a few years. A divorce was as certain as a flame when you strike a match. What ever happened to love? Nothing! It was still there. That was the terrible part of it. It was still there, but it wouldn't work anymore. It was like a beautiful clock with a broken spring. Love was magnificent, but it ought to be taken out to be fixed.

Let's get analytical for a moment and scan the signs of the degeneration of a character. A man has too much to drink. He pokes a bigger man in the nose. He gets his name in the paper. Why? Because he's famous. A man can't stand the loneliness anymore. He gets into his car and drives 500 miles. It causes a national sensation. Why? The man's famous. A man gets drunk and gets arrested. He offers to fight or foot race the cops, and he tells them he'll always be drunk. It makes some of the most colorful photos ever printed in a newspaper. Why? The man is famous. What's the name of the devil? Fame! What's the curse of a man's life? Fame!

Robert Walker called MGM and told them he wanted to quit. They thought he was crazy. You've got everything, they said. What do you want? If he had told them he wanted a small room in Greenwich Village, a place to bring home a stick of bologna or a bargain raincoat, they wouldn't have understood. So he didn't tell them. He told it to himself, and he had to drink to make himself understand—it was so long ago and so far away that he had to fog the present to get the perspective for memory.

And what about Phylis, now Jennifer

LITTLE LULU

Quit showing off—*Kleenex pops-up too!

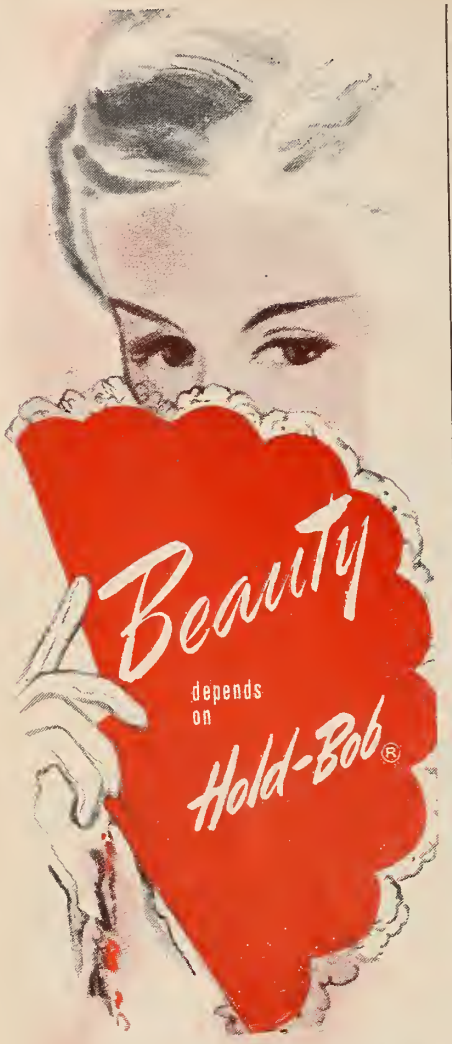
Little Lulu says: FOR A WHALE OF A GOOD BUY IN TISSUES — BUY KLEENEX TISSUES. ONLY KLEENEX LETS YOU PULL JUST ONE DOUBLE TISSUE AT A TIME (NOT A HANDFUL) — AND UP POPS ANOTHER.

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. ★T.M.REG.U.S PAT.OFF.

Just the thing to ADD fresh COLOR and LUSTRE to your hair after a shampoo or home permanent



For you who do your hair at home, Lovalon is a must. It rinses gorgeous fresh color into your hair. Gives hair sparkling highlights, leaving it attractive, soft and manageable. Blends in yellow, grey streaks. Lovalon comes in 12 flattering shades . . . has none of the disadvantages of a dye . . . washes out with each shampoo. 10¢ and 25¢ at toilet goods counters everywhere. Try Lovalon—today.

LOVALON

—the Hair Beauty Rinse

...because HOLD-BOB bobby pins really hold. The perfection of this beauty is assured because those perfect curls are formed and held in place gently, yet so very securely, by this truly superior bobby pin. There is nothing finer.

More women use HOLD-BOB than all other bobby pins combined

...a GAYLA® hair beauty aid

GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED

Jones? Didn't she still love him? Sure she did. If she hadn't, he could have found someone else. But you can't steal back a dream and give it to someone else when part-owner of the dream—in this case Jennifer Jones—hasn't given it up.

There never had been a time when Robert Walker was in trouble that Jennifer Jones hadn't come to take care of him. You've read reams of copy on the great romance between Jennifer Jones and David Selznick. Their recent marriage proves that there was foundation to these stories. It was confusing to you, and I'll tell you why. The love between Robert Walker and Jennifer Jones lasted five years longer than you thought it did! It smoldered, burst into flame, very nearly died at times. It was a secret love, shared by four people: Bob, Jennifer, Robert and Michael Walker. They didn't live together. But they were a family. They shared the last days of their love jealously. Until Bob married another woman, his children didn't know their parents were divorced!

If Dore Schary hadn't gone back to MGM, this story would probably have never been written. Bob Walker was on his last legs when Dore Schary called him into the studio for a talk. He put his cards face-side up on the table. He told Bob he could leave pictures, go make another life for himself, drink himself to death or do anything he wanted to. He called in Bob's father and they all talked. Dore Schary didn't give Robert Walker another chance, as they say. He asked Bob to give the world, and the movies, another chance. What for? For Bob, for his sons, for his father, his mother, the millions of kind people who adored him. Bob said yes—but he meant no.

At any rate, he agreed to go to the Menninger clinic in Topeka, Kansas, to see if they could help him.

There he sat on the edge of a bed for months and wouldn't talk to anyone.

"Want to talk with me today, Bob?"

Bob Walker didn't look up. He just shook his head.

help came . . .

Then one day, another man came into the room with the doctor. It was Bob's father. He ruffled his son's hair and told him to get his clothes together. "It's no use," he said to Bob. "They can't do anything for you unless you help them. . . . I'm sorry, son. Very sorry."

Nobody except Bob, his dad, and the Menninger doctors know what happened then. Maybe the spirit of love and kindness that had always been at Bob's elbow got through to him. Maybe the little boy who had felt inadequate suddenly grew up and knew that life was more than a single battle. Bob asked to be allowed to stay, and promised to help.

In the talks he had with the doctors in the weeks that followed, Bob Walker found out about himself. He learned that a selfish design for living is a false one. That a goal a man reaches is only a step to another goal. That a man can have many shrines, each with an equal dignity. He found out that man's greatest enemies are his frustrations. He learned what his frustrations were and whipped them.

Now he's back in Hollywood. Healthy in mind and body. The first to laugh at a joke, and the first to feel sympathy for another man's sorrow. He's even discovered he likes the reporters he once scorned. He lives a quiet life in a home he bought with money he earned himself.

Bob's got that old desire again. He's determined to be the biggest and the best movie star in Hollywood. And he has somebody to bring his prizes home to—two small boys, Robert and Michael Walker.

THE END

sweet and hot

Highly recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

by leonard feather

FROM THE MOVIES

COME TO THE STABLE—"Through a Long and Sleepless Night" by Bill Farrell (MGM). Promising MGM disc debut by the 20-yeor-old Clevelonder (né Fiorelli) who's now in his second yeor on the Bob Hope show. Bill, who ploys everything from harmonica to bass fiddle, led an instrumental quartet, didn't start singing until '47. This is o good tune with nice background work by Eorle Hagen's ork.

IT'S A GREAT FEELING—title song by Pearl Bailey* (Harmony); Doris Doy* (Columbia); Sommy Kaye (Victor) ."Fiddle Dee Dee" by Jimmy Dorsey* (Columbia); Johnny Desmond (MGM); Sammy Kaye (Victor). "At The Cafe Rendezvous" by Peggy Lee (Capitol); Doris Day (Columbia). "Blame My Absent-Minded Heart" by Doris Day (Columbia); Mindy Carson (Victor). "Give Me a Song With a Beautiful Melody" by Jack Carson and the Crew Chiefs* (Capitol); Lorry Green (Victor); Helen Forrest (MGM). "That Was a Big Fot Lie" by Jack Carson* (Capitol).
Pearl Bailey's helped out by Hot Lips Page on Harmony, which is Columbia's new 49-cent label and a good bargain. Jock Carson and Doris Day (they're in the picture) do the best jobs.

MADAME BOVARY—album from the sound track by Miklos Rosza and MGM Studio Orchestra* (MGM).

MONTANA—"Reckon I'm In Love" by Larry Parks ond Betty Garrett* (MGM); Paul Weston (Capitol).

MY FRIEND IRMA—"My One, My Only, My All" by Dean Martin* (Capitol); Kay Kyser (Columbia); Art Lund (MGM). "Just For Fun" by Dean Martin (Capitol); Kay Kyser (Columbia).

RED HOT AND BLUE—"Where Are You Now Thot I Need You?" by Doris Day* (Columbia); Fran Warren (Victor). "That's Loyalty" and "Hamlet" both by Betty Hutton (Capitol).

ROSEANNA McCOY—"Roseanna" by Freddy Martin (Victor).

THAT MIDNIGHT KISS—"They Didn't Believe Me" by Kathryn Grayson* (MGM); Georgie Auld* (Discovery).
It'd be hard to imagine two more wildly contrasted versions of the some tune. Just for laughs, you ought to get 'em both.

POPULAR

SAMMY DAVIS, JR.—"Can't You See I've Got The Blues" (Capitol).
More amazing impersonations by the man with a million voices, who now adds Mel Torme and Al Hibbler to his list of victims.

BOPULAR

MILES DAVIS—"Israel"* (Capitol).

DIZZY GILLESPIE—"Jump Did Le Ba" (Victor).

BENNY GOODMAN SEXTET—"Blue Lou"* (Capitol).

WOODY HERMAN—"More Moon" (Capitol).

GET OFF THAT HIGH HORSE

(Continued from page 30)

boys and girls, anyway? On all sides, idols crumble their feet of clay and Bright Promises peter unpleasantly out. Toasts of yesterday are crumbs today. New faces are in new places and the star scene is shifting like a Notre Dame backfield.

There've been some changes made in Hollywood—and there will be a lot more, too, for some very good reasons.

Hollywood is still making plenty of profit, but to do so in 1949, it has to make every production-dollar count. Costly temperament is out of style. Cut-ups are no longer cute. A crack-up earns a crack-down. Every Hollywood personality, old or new, has an account payable to deliver—and in jig-time too—or else the screen sheriff tacks up the bankruptcy notice where the ballyhoo was. Yep, there've been some changes made.

Let's detail the case histories of a few declines and falls:

Ingrid Bergman was mighty lucky—whether she knew it or not—as long as experienced Hollywood hands were steering her career. Ingrid wasn't so lucky when, thinking she knew all the answers, she took over the helm herself. I'll cut the misery short: Arch of Triumph, which she picked for herself, was so gosh-awful that even Charles Boyer couldn't make it good. They couldn't give it away to the customers. Then came Ingrid's life-dream, which she was determined to make come true—playing Joan of Arc. It was a one-girl show and an expense-no-objection project. Joan cost Heaven knows how many millions, to rival Gone With the Wind—yet the man who directed that all-time Hollywood hit, the late Victor Fleming, wasn't good enough for Ingrid to trust. She rowed with him, with the high-priced writers she hired, with the costume men, the set designers. It had to be perfect; it was sacred to Ingrid. She was a saint—it said here. It was a holy Hollywood crusade, that picture. And it was also, as one critic described it, "a big, beautiful, bloody bore."

"I'd do anything for a change," sighed Ingrid, after her flops. So off she went to Stromboli. It's sad to think that a lady who had had the world by the heart could handle it with such painful roughness.

no time for comedy . . .

As for Judy Garland's breakdown, there were good excuses—too much work for a frail kid, too much dishing out of nervous energy, a drained emotional reserve. An unhappy home, the pace of Hollywood, work, work, work. But still—excuses don't go these days. I'm sorry Judy Garland cracked up and I hope it's true that when she's got herself under control again she'll make Show Boat next year. Judy's hasn't much money saved from the thousands and thousands she's earned. MGM is advancing the expenses of her rest cure.

Bette Davis has worked up a touchy temperament that she never used to own—that, in fact, she used to laugh at—since she came back to the screen so unhappily in Winter Meeting. As Bette finds herself no longer the dramatic queen of Warners, she's acting up. She's ducking the press, where she used to be their darling, and she's wearing a chip on her shoulder. She's demanding things she knows from long Hollywood experience are impossible.

Bette wanted to close down Winter Meeting four days after the picture started, the minute she realized it was headed for a flop. Bette should have known that's mighty costly and, hence practically im-

...dream girl, dream girl... beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl

...hair that gleams and glistens...from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!..Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP!
NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S
RICH LATHERING
CREAM SHAMPOO
WITH LANOLIN

for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; 10-oz. economy size $2. Smaller jars and tubes 49¢ and 25¢.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight, if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today!

Only Lustre-Creme has Kay Daumit's magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin. This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

"BLUE" DAYS
CAN BE BRIGHT DAYS

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL
PERIODIC PAIN
CRAMPS-HEADACHE-"BLUES"

MIDOL
RELIEVES CRAMPS
EASES HEADACHE
CHASES "BLUES"

possible. From then on, she's been a battling headache to her studio and to herself. I hope her mixed-up picture of herself clears up soon and the old Bette Davis emerges. She's making mountains out of molehills right now and bringing her private troubles to her work. She's uncertain, unhappy and, I'm afraid, headed for a crisis if she doesn't settle down—a crisis brought on by Bette, herself, and her high-tension temperament.

Laraine Day certainly surprised the trustful souls who tagged her one of the sweetest, nicest girls this side of Salt Lake City. It's been some time now since Laraine cut up with Leo Durocher on her premature nuptial scandal that made faces burn all around Hollywood, except Laraine's. But the fire in that girl is still smoldering in many ways. She can still get steamed up and toss a temperamental tizzy. When Laraine made My Dear Secretary, a big typewriter company supplied a new-fangled super-dooper machine for her to use in the picture. Laraine wanted one, free, to present to her agent. "Sorry," the manufacturers replied, "that's impossible. This machine isn't on the market yet and if one were released, it would damage the whole presentation." There was quite a hassle worked up over that, during which Laraine temporarily walked off the set and all that silly business. The picture was finished on schedule—but Laraine's reputation had definitely suffered. Like her tempestuous husband, she'd better be on her good behavior from here on in.

No studio in Hollywood is ticking along more prosperously than 20th Century-Fox. Recently at a convention, their salesmen cried, "Give us more of Dan Dailey, Richard Widmark, Ty Power, Paul Douglas!" No mention of Cornel Wilde or Mark Stevens. Ty was the only old-timer the public still craved.

About that time Mark Stevens, who'd supposedly turned over a new leaf, punched a Fox official in the nose right on the lot in a fit of trigger-temper. Mark's been a studio headache ever since his big click in Objective Burma in 1945. He's had word battles by the dozen with people he should have gotten along with if he'd had good judgment. He's courted the sorriest personal publicity—among other things leaving his sweet wife, Annelle, and their darling baby for a whirl with Hedy LaMarr. The fine-looking, talented but moody redhead overrated his importance and he overplayed his hand. So what's happened? The top star parts Zanuck had in mind for him aren't there any more.

Cornel Wilde had the biggest free ride to fame of any young man I can think of.

HOW TIME FLIES!

Irene Hervey has just broken her engagement to Robert Taylor. Bob, according to reports, had to listen to the dictates of his fan mail, most of which insisted he remain single. After all, a guy has to please the customers.—Modern Screen, March, 1936.

Blondes!

Add a GOLDEN GLEAM... Be a DATE-DREAM!

• Telephone calls, dates, romance! Of course she's popular, the girl with the glamorous golden hair!

You can lighten your hair—give it golden highlights, too, with Marchand's Golden Hair Wash. Even if your hair is faded or streaked, the improved Marchand's can make it beautifully blonde again.

Whether you are blonde, brunette or redhead, Golden Hair Wash will lighten your hair. It gives you the degree of lightness you want.

Not a dye, not an expensive "treatment," Marchand's Golden Hair Wash is perfected by hair care experts. And it's so easy to use at home! Try it, too, for lightening unsightly arm and leg hair.

60¢ and 90¢ PLUS TAX

SELL NYLONS GUARANTEED AGAINST RUNS!

Amazing guarantee gives FREE nylons if hose runs or snags within guarantee peroid to 3 months! All weights, sizes etc. including sheerest 15 denier. Not sold in stores. Nationally advertised in Life, Ladies Home Journal, Saturday Evening Post, McCalls, Women's Home Companion. Awarded Seal of Approval by Good Housekeeping. Also complete line of men's fine hosiery guaranteed ONE FULL YEAR or replaced FREE! No money or experience needed to earn big, steady income writing orders spare or full time. We deliver and collect. Advance cash plus huge bonus. Complete money-making sales outfits FREE and prepaid. No obligation. Rush name to: KENDEX COMPANY. BABYLON, 129, N. Y.

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your favorite photo

NEW SILK FINISH • GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a FREE 5x7 enlargement of any picture or negative and mount it in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes, and clothing for information on having this enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil.

SEND NO MONEY. Send your most cherished photo or negative now, accept your beautifully framed enlargement when it arrives, and pay postman only 19c for frame plus small handling and mailing charge. If you are not completely satisfied, return the enlargement within 10 days and your money will be refunded. But you may keep the handsome frame as a gift for promptness. Limit 2 to a customer. Originals returned.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M-195, Hollywood 38, Cal.

The musical score was the real star of A Song To Remember, and back of that a chap named Chopin. That picture was made—Heavens!—five years ago, yet Cornel is still coasting on it. He hasn't done anything really worth looking at since, except The Walls of Jericho. Yet all along his Hollywood trail, instead of thanking his lucky stars he was still walking there, Cornel asked for more—and more.

He wanted to play Lord Byron, instead of the things they had for him. He wanted to write. He argued with his studio instead of helping it prop up his talents with all the cooperation he could muster. He fussed with his ambitious wife, Pat Wilde, and broke up a time or two with resultant bad publicity. And he went off on trips for his frayed nerves—which wouldn't have been so if he had worked more for his bosses and worried them less. Inevitably, he's losing out. When he returned from his extensive, expensive tour of Europe, Cornel didn't have a Hollywood job waiting for his pleasure. He was in Hollywood a little over a month before he sailed back to Switzerland to make a film. He'll be back. He still has his contract for one picture a year—but he's not the hottest hero of the Fox lot any more. Cornel, unfortunately, seems to have wrangled himself right out of that.

strange hobby . . .

I don't think I can remember a more baldly rude and offensive gent to people who wanted to tell his story than George Sanders. George used to be in so many pictures, you couldn't get away from him on the screen. That's no problem anymore. Studios found his sarcasm and his sardonic snubs too insulting to take. George made a hobby of being insulting. He loved to shock. People interviewing him would get elaborately absurd answers. Lots of times he'd feign sleep while they talked and snore in their faces. I don't think George knew himself what he was going to do most of the time—except that he was going to be plenty unpleasant. When he lost his long-suffering wife, whom he treated indifferently and kept hidden from press and public, George went to a psychoanalyst to find out himself what made him that way. Now he's married to the Hungarian charmer, ZsaZsa Gabor Hilton, and maybe she can reform the man. But George Sanders is having few studio emissaries pounding on his doors for snubs these days, begging him to sign for juicy picture roles.

Someone once told George at Fox, where he was yelling to high Heaven about his dinky dressing room, "George, maybe if you'd stop calling Darryl Zanuck a so-and-so every time you turn around, you'd get your dressing room."

"I wouldn't dream of depriving myself of that privilege," said George loftily. A guy like that doesn't last very long in the big leagues these days.

With aspirin bottles working overtime, Hollywood studios are hunting no extra headaches from hard-to-please heroes and pouty prima donnas. Sam Goldwyn cut Teresa Wright off his payroll, snip, like that, when she wouldn't help him sell Enchantment with a personal appearance in New York. It's very doubtful if Teresa will get that huge salary again. And when young Cathy O'Donnell listened to her husband, Bob Wyler, and flounced away from Roseanna McCoy because she'd been told it wasn't important enough—Sam came right back with a cancelled contract and the advice, "Go find yourself something important." What Sam found for himself was the terrific 15-year-old Joan Evans—who not only walked right in when Cathy walked out, but is

FASHION DISCOVERY FROM THE STARS!

NEW Flame-Glo LONGFELLA

It's easy to make your lips more glamourous, more kissable with the new Flame-Glo LONGFELLA. Here's a lipstick with all the advantages of the pencil-type, yet you get twice as many applications . . . it's longer, stronger and better balanced! Flame-Glo lasts hours longer . . . won't smear, smudge or blur easily, thanks to its water-repellent beauty film. Here's luxury at a mere 39¢. Also in 49¢ and 25¢ sizes, in newest fashion shades.

NEW 39¢ LONGFELLA IN STREAM-LINED GOLD FINISH CASE

now with FASTENOL for longer-lasting color brilliance

KEEP KISSABLE WITH

POPULAR 49¢ SIZE IN GOLD FINISH SWIVEL CASE

Flame-Glo® LIPSTICK

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE FLAME-GLO AT ALL POPULAR-PRICE COSMETIC COUNTERS

making that "unimportant" part open eyes all over town and launching herself a Cinderella career with it.

At the start of Bride of Vengeance, Paulette Goddard tossed the first temperament tantrum of her career. She went to her make-up man, who'd done very well indeed for her for eight years, and told him, "I want a complete new face. I want butterfly eyebrows, non-theatrical makeup. I must look completely different."

The make-up man said, "It's not your style, but I can give you butterfly eyebrows—though I'll have to pull half of them out. I can lay off all make-up—easy—though you'll look sick. But I can't make you look completely different without a new face—and for that you'd have to get born over again. Anyway, what's wrong with the one you've been using? Everybody loves it."

Paulette then took on another beauty expert—who gave her the new face she wanted. She got her way, all right—and I'm wondering how much damage she's done herself with that absurd, unbecoming face? If she's as smart as I think she really is, she'll never use it again.

The heart of Hollywood has not turned to stone, or anything like that, nor is the quality of mercy strained when honest human weaknesses prove the stars are only human. On the contrary. Little Maggie O'Brien's carryings-on about her mother's marriage drew more bad publicity than did Robert Walker's sorry slide. Robert Mitchum came through his marijuana mess with sympathy. Both Bobs' bosses stood behind them, helped them rehabilitate, both Bobs took their medicine and today are not only sincerely repentant, but proving that those trusts were not misplaced.

Nobody expects stars to live on a diet of milk toast, and the meek are not necessarily blessed around Hollywood forevermore. No studio boss, or anyone else for that matter, is sacred, and if a fight is right it gets a big hand and wins respect all around. Heaven help us if that "yes-man" craze ever hits Hollywood again! That would be the knockout blow for good pictures, sure enough.

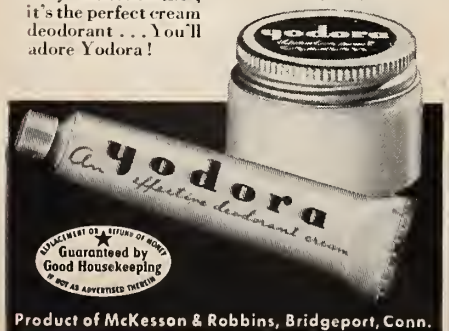
But for the trouble-makers, the teasers, the boys and girls who show that temperament is only a long word for temper—the posers and preeners and pouty pumpkin heads—the sign is up: "Exit—this way out!"

Like the $10,000 mink coats you don't see flashed around so freely any more, the custom-built Cadillacs with liveried chauffeurs, the super yachts and the parties with individual floor shows for every guest—star temperament and high horses are boom-time luxuries Hollywood can no longer afford. THE END

YODORA
the deodorant that works
2 WAYS

1 stops
perspiration odor

Wonderful Yodora does not merely mask, but stops perspiration odor. Effective for full 24-hour protection.



2 softens
and beautifies underarm skin

Made with a face cream base, Yodora keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders.

Kind to skin, chemically safe for clothes, it's the perfect cream deodorant . . . You'll adore Yodora!

Tubes or jars
10¢, 30¢, 60¢

Product of McKesson & Robbins, Bridgeport, Conn.

that's hollywood!

Orson Welles has a touch of Barrymore, a touch of Byron and the elegance and poise of a successful headwaiter.
Anne Shirley

Nobody ever called me a genius—but everyone keeps denying that I am.
Orson Welles

Quoted from Irving Hoffman
Hollywood Reporter

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting . . . hair-free longer . . . with no ugly razor stubble! No irritation to normal skin. Get Nair today!

Cosmetic lotion to remove hair safely

FOR LEGS THAT DELIGHT USE NAIR TONIGHT 79¢ plus tax

To Tampon Users...

Fibs* is the Tampon with Rounded Ends the only Tampon "Quilted" for Comfort "Quilted" for Safety Next time try Fibs (internal sanitary protection)

*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

. . . SO SHE MARRIED THE BOSS

(Continued from page 24)

It was no half-hearted Jennifer who fought at Bob Walker's side when they invaded Hollywood and, together, achieved outstanding stardom. That's a story hard to forget—especially if you were one of the partners. Bob Walker has shown that it isn't easy to forget, as far as he is concerned. Was the air of dilemma that hung over Jennifer in her relations with Selznick an indication that she, too, could not forget and go on to other things?

Many who have wondered about Jennifer, and have studied her, feel that she would deny she was so affected. Yet the heart has reasons which the mind doesn't know. Jennifer had been fiercely loyal to Bob and an undoubtedly devoted wife. Did that Jennifer refuse, for a long time, to be submerged?

There are other aspects of that Jennifer which may have counted importantly in her struggle while deciding to seek a new life with David. When she met Bob Walker, she was a Catholic and had been convent-reared in her formative years at Monte Cassini Junior College in Tulsa. Bob was a Protestant. When love came to them it overcame this difference, but not completely. Jennifer could think of marriage only within her church. Bob agreed to the usual arrangement in such cases—he signed a promise that their children would be brought up as Catholics. The ceremony took place at Christ The King Church in Tulsa and, as far as Jennifer was concerned, it was a marriage in accordance with the teaching given her by the Benedictine Sisters of Monte Cassini—that there could not be a dissolution of the marriage except for one of four stated reasons.

None of these four was given by Jennifer when she divorced Bob seven years later in Los Angeles. She charged cruelty and, as a matter of fact, had some difficulty proving it.

The Jennifer of today, in wishing to marry again, faced a situation that, certainly, the Jennifer of then could not have overcome. She could not again be married in the church. In the eyes of the church, as she well knows, her first marriage is still valid.

their hearts were young and gay . . .

Jennifer and Bob Walker came to Hollywood soon after their marriage. Robert, Junior, had been born on April 14, 1940, Michael on March 17, 1941. Jennifer was signed by David Selznick for Song of Bernadette. Bob was seen by an MGM talent scout and given an important part in Bataan. In a few weeks the Walkers were established in a little white house in the Hollywood hills. Their future looked bright, their hearts seemed gay—and yet, it was the beginning of the end for them as a family. You'll find the fundamental reasons for this presented, for the first time, in the story on page 37 of this issue of MODERN SCREEN. In the end, Bob left the little white house to live alone.

While Song of Bernadette was being shown to the public, David Selznick was producing Since You Went Away, with Jennifer and Bob as the sweethearts. It had barely gone before the cameras when Jennifer made the formal announcement that she and Bob were separating. Worried about its effect on the picture, Selznick sent for her.

Hollywood knew there was already a strong bond of sympathy between them. For some time, Jennifer had been referring to him familiarly in her interviews Mother! Here's why Swift's Strained Meats are so important in baby's diet!

Just see how much tempting, baby-building nourishment there is in every spoonful of Swift's Strained Meats!

Complete, high-quality proteins—baby needs for sound, sturdy growth.

Natural B vitamins—to help guard baby's health and keep his appetite keen.

Food iron—needed to build good red blood and avoid infant anemia.

Soft, smooth Swift's Strained Meats offer a wide variety: beef, lamb, pork, veal, liver, heart—to help baby form sound eating habits. All six, 100% meat! Swift's Strained Meats are ready to serve—just heat. And they cost much less than home-prepared meats!

YOUR DOCTOR is best qualified to say how early your baby should start Swift's Meats.

ACCEPTED COUNCIL ON FOODS AND NUTRITION AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

All nutritional statements made in this advertisement are accepted by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

P.S. (PICK SWIFT'S) DICED MEATS for—

TODDLERS (just starting to chew)

TEETHERS (to aid teething)

BUSY MAMAS (6 kinds—ready to serve)

Tempting—Thrifty—Time-saving

SWIFT ...foremost name in meats

...first with 100% Meats for Babies

SWIFT & COMPANY, CHICAGO, 9, ILLINOIS

Love just "happens" to the girl who Kares

You're embraceable—always, when new, wonderful KARE keeps you bath-sweet. A lotion deodorant—satin-smooth, fragrant. So nice to use. So different from creams and liquids—not greasy or messy. Safe to use after shaving. KARE, an amazing new improvement in underarm deodorants, is the one that:

Soothes tender underarm skin
Stops odor . . . Dries instantly
Stops perspiration safely
Will not harm even fine fabrics

Economical! A few drops are effective. 35¢ & 60¢ (plus tax), at drug and department stores.

The Grove Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis. Mo.

HE MAY TURN TO ANOTHER . . . IF YOU DO NOTHING ABOUT "DIFFICULT DAYS"!

Pity the woman who fails to realize those Monthly Blues can make her so nervous and irritable she actually drives love away! Take heed—and take Chi-Ches-Ters Pills, to help relieve cramps, headache and nervous irritability of functional menstrual pain. Ask your druggist today; take as directed a day or two in advance. 3 convenient size packages.

The Improved

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Co., Dept. 10-E, Philadelphia 46, Pa.

and discussions on pictures generally. "David says this," or "David says that," was a phrase she had been uttering often. Professionally, he was her complete mentor. Now she had an opportunity to do something for him.

"This thing between Bob and myself won't make any difference in our acting," she told Selznick. "Our personal affairs have nothing to do with our work." She and Bob played their love scenes perfectly.

For Jennifer and David Selznick, a basis for a stronger interest in each other than just their association as producer and star may have been formed at this time. Jennifer did more than act in the film. She made numerous trips around the country to assure successful openings. But as important as her appearances were to Selznick, and as intensely as he is known to drive himself and all who work with him at such times, his solicitude for her was such that he would instantly cancel any appearance if there were a chance that it would be unduly tiring for her. This became quite noticeable, and was commented on.

David Selznick is unlike a great many Hollywood producers in that he is almost completely creative in film art; he creates not only the picture, but very often the stars who are in it and quite often the screenplay that is to be told. His last few years of production work have been probably the most intensely busy in his career. A good portion of the time was devoted to starring Jennifer in Duel in the Sun.

It was after the completion of this film that David and Irene Mayer Selznick, daughter of Louis B. Mayer, ended their 18-year-old marriage. Part of her testimony at the divorce trial was that he had time only for his work, neglecting her and his home almost completely. The decree was granted in January, 1948—and from that time on, everyone fully expected he would marry Jennifer. Yet, until it was broken by the recent, sudden wedding, there had been only silence from Jennifer on the subject.

Last March, following her completion of Madame Bovary, Jennifer flew to Europe. Dodging reporters through the simple device of going under her old married name of Phylis Walker, she bicycled in Switzerland, loafed through Venice, Capri and Pompeii, and then in April was joined on the French Riviera by David.

accidental discovery . . .

It was in Cannes, after David's arrival, that Jennifer's identity was discovered. This came about when her trail crossed the press-dogged tracks of Rita Hayworth. A hundred or more American reporters and photographers had descended on Cannes to cover Rita's wedding. One of them spotted Jennifer walking through the lobby of the swank Carlton Hotel.

That did it. Jennifer soon found herself cornered in her room, with the din outside the door more resembling that of a gang of vigilantes than inquiring reporters.

That night, without having made a statement, she and David beat a hasty retreat across the Italian border to San Remo. When reporters learned of this, Jennifer left town in such a hurry that one of the maids at her hotel suggested that she and David had had a spat.

Soon David joined her in Zurich, Switzerland. For three weeks, they had comparative peace and quiet. Some evenings, they would have dinner by candlelight on the balcony of Jennifer's suite, overlooking Lake Zurich. Hotel attendants said that Jennifer seemed very calm and composed. Her French dresses, many of them in yellow, her favorite color, made her seem more slender and beautiful than ever. That's how David saw her as they looked out over the clear, beautiful waters of

Use Mary T. Goldman's

COLOR-CONTROL METHOD

Natural-Looking, Safe

Mary T. Goldman's scientific color-control method cannot harm your permanent. It does not change the smooth, soft texture of your hair. That's why thousands use it for recoloring at home. Just comb clear, liquid Mary T. Goldman's through your hair. It's sure—the color-control method assures exactly the shade you prefer. It's simple—no professional skill needed. It's safe—no skin test required. It's economical—fewer applications, saves beauty shop dollars. Look young and vital again. Win new admiration when Mary T. Goldman's gives your hair real loveliness. Will not wash out—shampooing enhances luster.

Famous Mary T. Goldman's must please or your money back. Accept no substitute. If your dealer is out, send $2.00 to Mary T. Goldman Co., 101 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul 2, Minn. Mention black, dark brown, medium brown, light brown, blond or auburn. 6-application bottle will reach you in plain wrapper; taxes and postage prepaid.

MARY T. GOLDMAN'S for gray hair

AMAZING OFFER - $40 IS YOURS
For Selling Only 50 Boxes Christmas Cards
FREE SAMPLES
Also 50 and 25 for $1.00 with or without name. Free samples. Other boxes on approval, including entirely new, different deluxe assortment with feature television card. Cute plastic assortments. Write today. It costs nothing to try. Cheerful Card Co., Dept. S-24, White Plains, N.Y.

SHORTHAND in 6 Weeks at Home

Famous Speedwriting system. No signs; no symbols; no machines; uses ABC's. Easy to learn; easy to write and transcribe. Low cost. 100,000 taught by mail. For business and Civil Service. Also typing. 26th year. Write for free booklet to:

Speedwriting®
Dept. 810-9, 55 W. 42 St., New York 18

LEARN MILLINERY FROM A-TO-Z!

SENSATIONAL NEW instruction methods using PHOTOGRAPHIC SLIDES and VIEWER (furnished with course) teach professional millinery AT HOME! Learn how to make all types of frames, block felts in French manner, drape and design on the head or on wood block, CREATE OWN IDEAS or copy others. Make hats as HOBBY or as PROFESSIONAL CAREER—at a fraction of retail cost! ALL the materials and ALL the trimmings for 4 COMPLETE HATS (furnished with course) MORE than cover cost of instruction.

Write for more information today!

ELSIE WALTERS SCHOOL OF CUSTOM MILLINERY
1719 N. Highland Ave. Hollywood 28, Calif.

the lake, shimmering with moonlight. Perhaps it was in this setting that Jennifer at last gave consent to David.

Then they came to Paris, where Jennifer received the French equivalent of an Academy Award as best foreign actress of 1948. The presentation was made by the Minister of Commerce and Industry. Jennifer was lovely in gray organdy. It was her first public appearance since coming to Europe. "I'm as thrilled as can be about this," she said, "but all these reporters frighten me. I hate being interviewed. I never know what to say."

When pressed for information about her impending marriage, all she would say was, "I'd rather not talk about that. I'm too busy thinking about my next picture." (This will be Gone to Earth, which Selznick is now producing in England.)

David also refused to go on record one way or the other. "It's up to Jennifer to say," he declared. I do think the announcement should come from her."

As it turned out, no announcement was made at all. With no preliminary fanfare, Jennifer and David were married at 8:30 the morning of July 13, aboard a rented yacht off Portofino, Genoa. The witnesses were stage producer Leland Hayward and his wife and Louis Jourdan and his wife, Arabella Le Maitre—whom he calls "Quique." The vows were said before the British skipper. That afternoon, when a question arose as to his authority to perform a marriage in Italian waters, the ceremony was repeated at the city hall in Genoa, before an Italian civil official.

Thus Jennifer Jones, after so many months of tears and doubt, turned her back on the heartbreak and burning memories of the past. THE END

HOLLYWOOD'S DIZZIEST MARRY-GO-ROUND

(Continued from page 58)

enunciate her every word most carefully.

"Tell me, pliz," said the Princess after she and Greer had gotten through the introduction preliminaries, "you know Errol prittie well. You think maybe he make a good husband?"

Greer smiled politely. "I think so," she said, "but you know, Your Highness, he's had two wives already."

"This I know," the phony member of Rumanian royalty agreed, "but I understand he has a lot of money. Iss true?"

"Well, now," said Greer, "I'm not particularly acquainted with Errol's financial worth, but he does make a pretty good living. And I'm inclined to believe that he has nothing to worry about along those lines for a few years. . . . By the way, Your Highness—"

"Plizz, Miss Garson. I like you. You call me Irene. I calls you Greer."

"Thank you, your . . . thank you, Irene. . . . I was just wondering where you might be staying. I should very much like to give a little party for you and Errol."

The Princess thought for a moment. "I am a guest of Errol's."

Garson gave the Princess a Mrs. Miniver smile. "Just because people might talk," she offered, "I think it might be best if you moved out of Errol's place and stayed with Mother and me."

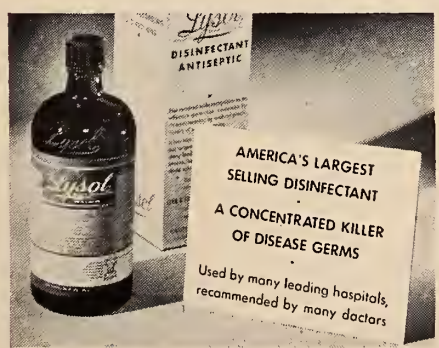
At this point, Flynn returned. He thanked Greer for looking after the Princess and then bustled her off the lot.

Ten hours later, it was in all the papers that the Princess Irene Ghica was definitely, unalterably and irrefutably in Hollywood. She had been seen on the MGM lot by at least 50 people.

THIS MONTH

FALL CLEANING
Must Fight Germ Threat

MRS. FRANCIS BARR and son Gregory in their attractive Dallas, Texas home. Mr. Barr, executive for a theater chain, is active in the Dallas Junior Chamber of Commerce.



Alert Mother Uses Potent Anti-Germ Weapon

"TO GUARD AGAINST GERMS in house dust, I use 'Lysol' brand disinfectant when cleaning our bathroom and kitchen, the children's room, and all our floors." That's smart Mrs. Barr's daily rule for fighting infection and thus guarding her family's health.

"AND RIGHT NOW fall cleaning calls for extra vigilance, with germicidal 'Lysol' on every cleaning job all through our house. That includes all cracks and corners where disease germs may have gathered, along with dust. I just add 2½ tablespoons of 'Lysol' to each gallon of water."

"QUICK, EFFECTIVE, potent 'Lysol' always goes in the cleaning water . . . for hygienic cleanliness . . . when I wash our woodwork, walls, closets, cabinets and shelves!"

GUARDING MILLIONS against disease germs in healthy, happy homes, easy-to-use "Lysol" is highly concentrated. Quick, powerful in action, wonderfully economical!

GUARD YOUR HOME, as you clean house this fall, against germ infection found in house dust! Like Mrs. Barr, use powerful "Lysol" in your daily fight against disease germs!

More Color IN YOUR HAIR...
More Romance IN YOUR LIFE!

When your hair glows with bewitching Marchand color, he'll see the difference and love it! Follow your next shampoo with Marchand's "Make-Up" rinse. See the extra loveliness, rich color, shimmering highlights, new lustre...in your hair.

Marchand's Rinse removes dulling soap film, blends in tell-tale gray hairs, makes your hair easier to manage. Flattering shades for blondes, brownettes, brunettes and redheads. Safe, easy to use, washes out in shampooing.

Marchand's
"MAKE-UP"
HAIR RINSE
2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢
plus tax
★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

BIG EXTRA INCOME!
Sell Friends Nylon Hosiery . . . Lingerie
Christmas Cards—Cash Profits For You
Values supreme! Blouses, sportswear. FREE Sample Displays. Fast-selling Christmas, Everyday greeting cards, gift wraps. Christmas samples on approval. FREE Stationery samples. Spectacular offers. Write today.
FREE SAMPLE DISPLAYS BRING FAST SALES
Wear Wright Co., 1709 Arch St., Dept. C, Philadelphia, Pa.

BUST Development
THROUGH EXERCISE
In the privacy of your own home
• The natural, logical method of developing a beautiful bust. Simple. Concise. Nothing else to buy. All orders handled confidentially. Mailed in plain sealed envelope. Your bust measurement appreciably increased or your money refunded. Send Cash, Check or Money Order.
Complete COURSE
3.00 ☆
special offer: The Complete Women's Body Beautifying Course for only.....$2.00
if ordered with Paulette Bust Development Course.
92 PAULETTE • 6430 Riverton Ave., No. Hollywood 21, Calif.

The next day, when he learned that Greer Garson had been on the phone inviting friends to meet his Princess, Flynn revealed that the entire act had been a gag.

Bennett, who'd been wearing the dried-up gladiola all day, was fit to be tied—but finally accepted the gag in good grace. So, too, did Greer Garson.

Flynn paid the girl, who had played her part so beautifully, more than the $50 required by the Screen Actors Guild.

Everyone who heard about the joke thought it was simply wonderful and typically Flynn; everyone, that is, except the columnists who'd gone out on a limb.

When I asked Flynn what was really cooking between him and the Princess, he said very politely and honestly, "Nothing is cooking at this point. To coin a new phrase—we're just good friends. We were introduced by mutual friends in Paris some weeks ago. I'm very fond of the girl. In fact, I've offered her a part in my picture, The Buccaneer, which I hope to make at sea. And that's just about all.

"For some strange reason, everyone wants to know, 'Are you going to marry the Princess?' That's really a silly question. It's the kind of question you put only to a woman, since she's the one who decides whether or not she'll marry you.

"I don't know her well enough to even think about marriage, and frankly, old boy, I'd rather not discuss it."

you never can tell . . .

He may very well be in love with her—which is what a reporter on the Paris Tribune wired me after he'd occupied a table next to theirs at a Parisian restaurant called the Tour d'Argent. But this is purely conjecture.

Louella Parsons, who saw Errol in Paris when he first began to court the Princess, is sure that Errol is in love with the small, intelligent Princess who left Bucharest five years ago. She says in fact that the Princess "bosses Errol around as I have never seen him bossed by any woman, not even Nora, or before her, Lili Damita."

Freddie McEvoy, an old friend of Flynn's, currently residing abroad, is also convinced that Errol is more than inordinately fond of the Princess. "But you know Errol," he says. "You never can tell what he's going to do the next minute."

Errol himself, however, seemed to know when I talked to him.

"I've had the Zaca sailed to Cannes," he said, "and it should be there by the time I arrive." (The Zaca is Flynn's 118-foot, two-masted schooner, which he keeps docked at Port Antonio, Jamaica. Zaca is a Polynesian word, meaning peace.) "I'm going to pick it up there, and then with a bunch of friends tour the waters around Eastern Spain—on the lookout for some good locations for my picture."

"Will the Princess Ghica accompany you and be among your friends?"

"Well," said Flynn, grinning noncommittally, "first I'm going to do a little work on the script."

There has been a lot of talk to the effect that Flynn has been heartbroken ever since Nora divorced him to marry Dick Haymes. If he was at one time—and no man likes to see his home broken up—he is no longer.

He is, in fact, the same personable guy he was 15 years ago when he first came to Hollywood. To look at him, to talk to him, one would never think that here is a man who has gone through the vicissitudes of two hectic marriages. He looks very much like a man who, after philosophizing with himself of an evening, pours himself a glass of champagne, raises his glass in toast, and says: "Here's to woman—oh, that I could fall into her arms without falling into her hands." THE END

HEADACHE NEURALGIA NEURITIS Pain
RELIEVED incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—
ANACIN ®

Here's why
Anocin is like o doctor's prescription. That is, it contoins not one but o combinotion of medically proved ingredients. Get Anocin Tablets todoy.

FREE PHOTO DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD
LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15¢ for handling.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309, Dept. O-109, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"
Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

"YOUR HOLLYWOOD SCREEN GUIDE"
Want a Career in the Movies, Radio, Theatre, Television?
Here are the answers to all your questions. Complete authoritative instructions by PLAYERS COUNSELLOR of Hollywood. Home study procedure. Self-analysis for suitable types and parts. Step-by-step progress in acting profession. Knowledge gained at small cost may lead to success, even stardom! Complete $2.00! Money-back guarantee. Order direct or get free details.
Players Counsellor, 6711-C Sunset, Hollywood 28, Calif.

EXTRA MONEY Plan!
Sell CHRISTMAS CARDS
Get FREE SAMPLES
Earn extra cash fast showing two sensational Assortments of 21 luxurious Christmas Folders. Friends, others buy fast! You make up to 50c on each $1 box. Money-making line includes many more big value Assortments: Gift Wraps, Religious, Humorous, Plastic Christmas and Everyday Cards. Christmas Cards With Name low as 50 for $1. Start earning with Free Samples. Special plan for clubs, churches. Write! WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC., Dept. F-77
749 Monroe Avenue, Rochester 2, N. Y.

BE A Nurse
MAKE $35-$45 A WEEK
Practical nurses are needed in every community... doctors rely on them... patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 50th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2310, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____

HOUSE SWARMING

(Continued from page 44)

helped us tack direction signs along the canyon road. Soon all the others had arrived and parked their cars at the meeting spot. Then we pussyfooted up Bob's private road.

This road is quite an engineering feat. It cost Bob $1,000 to have it hacked out of the mountainside. Around every turn you're greeted by sky and space. It was no place for some of us who get dizzy after leaning out a second-story window. But we proceeded, reached the house, crept onto the porch, knocked gently on the door and—"Surprise! Surprise!"

We'd all been so intent on being cautious and quiet as we approached that we hadn't paid too much attention to the house. However, Bob, as soon as he'd settled down to being the perfect host at his unexpected party, filled us in with the details. When it's finished, it will be a super-modern house complete with pool and helicopter landing field. Bob's had the idea for this dream house for several years. When he got discharged from the Navy, instead of yearning for the traditional type of house, Bob wanted a modern-futuristic place. Something as up-to-date as the headlines, and with all those time-saving push buttons he'd read about in world-of-the-future magazine articles.

The place is built on three levels—but at present only one level is completed. It has to serve as combined living room, dining room, bedroom and kitchen. The boys hadn't as yet got around to wall-paneling, so behind the few pictures they'd hung we could see rough lumber studding, tar paper and wires. The place does look well-built indeed.

While Bob was showing the gang sketches and blueprints, Colleen Townsend, Barbara Fuller and ourselves decided to get things going in the kitchen. The spaghetti had to be heated, coffee made, and paper plates and forks unpacked. It got to be a wee bit confusing—not because of the four chefs. It was the two refrigerators, and two stoves, that gave the kitchen a slightly double-visioned effect. We later learned that Bob had sold his other canyon house, which had a small furnished apartment and was left with the extras.

After a huddle with Bob on how to get his "temperamental" glass coffee-maker to work, everything was ready. Maybe it was the clear mountain air or the high altitude, but everyone stashed away the food like starved bears.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

When I was in a New York little theater play a few years ago, a member of the cast asked to be replaced for the evening. A Broadway producer had arranged for her to see a hit in which she might immediately take over a part. Our director was annoyed. "You're supposed to stick with us through this run. You'll never get anywhere being so will-of-the-wisp," he stormed. He was wrong. Pat Neal started on her zooming career practically the next day.

Jen Heslie
New York

ARE OLD WIVES' TALES Wrecking your Married Life?

If only every woman would learn these INTIMATE PHYSICAL FACTS before she marries...

Too many married women still don't have proper, scientific knowledge they can trust about intimate feminine hygiene.

They follow ignorant misinformation passed on down through the years. And all too often this is the cause of marital unhappiness.

If only women would realize how important vaginal douching two or three times weekly often is to intimate cleanliness, health, married happiness, and to combat unpardonable vaginal odor. And certainly once they learn the truth about ZONITE, they'll always want to use it in the douche.

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

Scientists tested every known germicide they could find on sale for the douche. And NO OTHER type proved SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues as ZONITE.

So why be old-fashioned and continue to use weak or dangerous products?

ZONITE is POSITIVELY non-poisonous, non-irritating. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as desired without the slightest risk of injury to the most delicate tissues.

ZONITE'S Miracle-Action

ZONITE eliminates odor, removes waste substances and discharge. You feel so dainty and refreshed after your ZONITE douche. Helps guard against infection. It kills every germ it touches. It's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, but you CAN BE SURE ZONITE DOES KILL every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Buy ZONITE at any drug counter.

Zonite FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-109, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Pleasant
TO TAKE

Pleasant
IN ACTION

Pleasant
FOR CHILDREN
& GROWN-UPS

When Nature 'forgets' remember
EX-LAX
THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE
10¢

EXTRA MONEY QUICK
SELL BIG VALUE
CHRISTMAS CARDS
UP TO 100% PROFIT FOR YOU
Fascinating new type Plastic, Metallic, 3-Dimensional, Religious Christmas card assortments, Gift Wrappings, Special Gift Items, Floral and Personal Stationery. Send at once for Free 48-page catalog, feature samples on approval and Free Name Imprinted Christmas card sample portfolios. Special offers. Cash bonus. It's easy! It's fun! It's profitable!
FREE SAMPLES
50 for $1.00
NAME IMPRINTED CHRISTMAS CAROS
NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS. North Abington 181. Mass.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?
MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!
Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.
MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR
WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.
SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed
Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!
JUELEN CO., 4727 N. Damen. Dept. A-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

Tom Drake and Terry Moore had a real excuse. They hadn't even had lunch. They'd spent their lunch hour posing for stills so they wouldn't be delayed tonight. They're co-starring in George Pal's production, Rupert.

The spaghetti, being spaghetti, was long and wiggly, but Dick Foote managed to wind it up expertly on his bread stick. The tomato aspic was topped off with gobs of Thousand Island dressing. Delectable frosted cupcakes completed the meal. After acquiring that so round, so firm, so fully-packed look, Sally Forrest decided a little exercise—in the form of a rollicking polka—was needed. Sally went over to the phonograph and put on "The Beer Barrel Polka." She next planted her hands on Jerry Courtland's shoulders and gave out with a little instructing on just how a polka is done. Sally should know. Before she was signed by Ida Lupino to star in Not Wanted, she taught dancing in San Diego. (Most of her pupils were slightly plump WACS and WAVES who wanted to reduce.)

Even in our somewhat glassy-eyed, stuffed state, the music got us. The rug was rolled up and furniture pushed back. Soon the room was alive with spinning couples who'd heel-toe and then prance about. As the polka grew faster, the girls clung for dear life while the fellas twirled them about the room.

Colleen Townsend and Darryl Hickman were temporarily "grounded" when they collided with Gene Reynolds and Lois Butler. Then, while everyone was taking a breather, Sally fished out another dinger of a polka disk. It's called "Hot Pretzels," with a tempo to match the title.

survival of the fittest . . .

When Roddy heard the swift strains, he begged off. He and Rand Brooks had been doing a fight scene all day for the Lindsay Parsons' film, Black Midnight. "It got a little rough, and I accidentally loosened Rand's tooth and he scraped my shoulder with his spur," Roddy explained. But, according to Roddy, it had been a breeze compared to the polka.

Gene Reynolds and Lois Butler, however, wouldn't be downed. When they got fouled-up on the steps they just slipped into an improvised Charleston and kept right on going.

Michael Kirby, who's a Canadian skating champ, and his equally talented wife, Nora, claimed they could out-polka anyone if they just had a cake of ice and their skates.

When the music finally stopped, the girls' hair looked more like spaghetti, and the boys' faces resembled perspiring beets. Fortunately, Dick Foote, who sang "Streets of Laredo" in the film, had brought along his guitar. So while the gang relaxed on Bob's three couches or sat Indian-fashion on the floor, Dick soothed us with some easygoing cowboy songs. As a grand finale, Barbara Fuller got into the act and joined him in a duet.

Barbara, when she isn't on the radio playing Claudia in "One Man's Family," is film-making at Republic Studios. She and Dick live in the same apartment building and practice singing—they lean out their windows and warble across the court to each other. Desi Arnaz's mother also lives in the building—and had briefed them on the finer points of Latin tunes. Barbara and Dick now gave out with these. On the familiar ones, everyone joined in.

Lois played one of the pianos (Bob's got two of these, too!) Gene manned the accordion and Natalie Garrotto (besides being Bob's girl, she's the singing lead with the Santa Monica Civic Opera Company) directed the singing. She used a bread

FREE CATALOG
SAVE ON COTTONS!
BEAT HIGH PRICES. Write today for South Carolina Mills' new, FREE catalog of cotton values. Down-to-earth prices on shirts, underwear, dresses, children's wear, prints, towels, sheets—scores of cottons for the family and the home. Every item is backed up by a MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. It's easy to order, too. Don't delay! Mail a postcard or a letter for your FREE copy of this valuable "Cottons" Catalog today.
SOUTH CAROLINA MILLS
Dept. 709 SPARTANBURG, S. C.

AMAZING We guarantee you $50.00 for selling 100 boxes 21 for $1 Xmas cards; also 50 and 25 for $1 with name on; also Napkins and Stationery. No experience needed. Costs nothing to try. Samples and Selling Plan on approval.
MERIT
370 Plane St. Dept. G Newark, N. J.

BIRTHMONTH WATCH

Only 7.95
You'll feel like a Glamorous movie star when wearing your very own Gorgeous Birthmouth Watch! Very elaborate and Expensive looking. Exquisite dial and Dainty case. Bracelet contains two Large, Breath-taking Birthmonth Sparklers surrounded by over 50 Fiery Brite Brilliants. A Dependable, Glamorous time-piece you'll treasure! SEND NO MONEY! Just name, address and Birth Date. Pay postman C.O.D. $7.95 plus 10% tax on delivery. Order now!
WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO., Dept. B-997
2451 S. MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO 16, ILLINOIS

YOU CAN LEARN TO BE AN ARTIST
START DRAWING AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME—
Trained Artists are capable of earning $65, $80 and more a week! Our practical home study training makes it fun to learn COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. No previous Art experience necessary. Write for details in FREE BOOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit," STATE AGE. Low cost—only $5 monthly. VETERANS! Course G.I. approved.
WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
Studio 8010-R, 1115 15th St., N.W.
Washington 5, D. C.

FREE PHOTO
LARGE GLOSSY PICTURE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
INTRODUCTORY OFFER
direct from HOLLYWOOD, home of the STARS. Send name of your FAVORITE STAR with fifteen cents, to cover handling and mailing and receive also our beautiful catalog with names and pictures of hundreds of STARS.
★ Hollywood Stars ★
4633 HOLLYWOOD BLVD., BOX 9865
Montgomery Clift Dept. 04, HOLLYWOOD 27, CALIFORNIA

NO MORE MONEY WORRIES!
INCREASE YOUR INCOME with CHRISTMAS CARDS!
Sure cure for your money problems! Sell exquisite new Christmas Cards. Friends, others buy quickly at 50 for $1.25 with Name Imprinted. You make fine profits showing FREE Samples! Also show big-value 21-card $1 Christmas assortments. Up to 100% profit. Date, Address, Finance Books, Religious, Humorous, Gift Wraps, Everyday, many more Boxes. Get FREE Samples Personal Cards, 21 Card Box on approval. Write!
PHILLIPS CARD CO. 815 HUNT ST., NEWTON, MASS.

LEARN NURSING AT HOME
Prepare for PROFITABLE interesting profession. Shortage acute—OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED. High school unnecessary. Ages 18 to 55. Write today for FREE sample lesson page and complete information.
Post Graduate School of Nursing, Inc.
Dept. D-1, 10 E. Erie St., Chicago, Ill.

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ Golden Boy rates raves on several counts. First and foremost credit is deserved by Bill Holden who here makes his screen debut. His acting has strength and sincerity, and the versatility shown in his characterization of the boy who is torn between a love of music and the desire for fame and fortune, should mark Bill Holden as the "find" of the year. A truly beautiful performance is that of Lee J. Cobb as the boy's father. Rarely indeed, does a movie audience have the opportunity to see such fine acting as Mr. Cobb's.—November, 1939, Modern Screen stick for a baton.

We won't say that we were a little loud and ragged, but we will confess we noticed Bob's two cats, Mezzo and Forte, running for the hills. Tom Drake said that if he'd known in advance about this musical concert, he'd have brought along his tuba. He's a tuba player in his current picture. "I can't exactly play it," he said, "but would anybody notice that here?"

Colleen, who's co-starring with Dan Dailey in Front and Center, decided it was time for more food. She and Margie Alston, who've been friends since the eighth grade, brought out their contribution to the party—popcorn (unpopped) and syrup.

"If only there were a fireplace, we could pop the corn over it," sighed Terry Moore. "Guess we'll have to use the stove."

"What d'you mean, no fireplace?" said Bob indignantly. And sure enough, there was a slight depression in the floor. "Someday that's going to be a flagstone fireplace with a chimney clear to the ceiling."

But not being able to wait around until that happy day, we improvised with a skillet and the stove. As the corn popped into white fluffiness, it was put into a big bowl. The bowl must have had an invisible hole in it, since it vanished as soon as we put in each fresh batch. Then Margie stood guard over a batch while Terry poured syrup over it and fashioned popcorn balls.

The highlight of the party was the taffy. It was bright pink and green. While Bob and Natalie struggled to get it out of the pan, everyone dusted his and her fingers with flour and got ready to pull.

Tom Drake and Dick Foote artistically moulded their candy into lariats, horseshoes and handlebar moustaches. Darryl Hickman, stretching his taffy above his head with an agonized expression, gave a dramatic imitation of a circus strong-man.

After the pulling and chewing had gone on for a spell, somebody looked at his watch and said, "Gee, we're keeping Robert up past his bedtime—and ours!"

"Well, good people," said Bob, "how can I ever thank you enough? It's been terrific. I don't know when—"

He suddenly stopped. He had to. Colleen Townsend had popped a large wad of taffy in his mouth.

"The pleasure has been ours, Mr. Arthur," she said. "Right?"

"Right!" said we all—that is, those of us who could. Most of us could only nod and mumble through our taffy. THE END

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

(Continued from page 59)

them in the same class.

When I met other actresses, they were usually much more sophisticated than I and talked glibly of night clubs. I'd never been inside one, nor was I anxious to go.

I liked bicycling and swimming—but where, oh, where were there kids my own age to do these things with me?

Instead of waking up happy, mornings, as I had in Portland, I'd wake up glum, wondering how I'd get through the day. When I was working it didn't matter so much. Then I could go to the studio early and by night I'd be too tired to care. But when I wasn't working—then it was bad.

When I said, "Whom can I go bicycling with? With whom can I go to the beach?" —Mother would say gently, "I'll go with you, dear."

And sure enough, down the street she'd pedal on her bicycle, side by side with me. Mother has always been a good companion to me—but I yearned for pals my own age.

Often I prayed, "Please help me make friends."

There seemed to be no answer to my prayer that first year.

Letters came from my friends in Portland. They told of gay times my old gang was having. I cried myself to sleep the night one such letter came. Perhaps it was good for me to cry so bitterly that night. The next morning I woke up feeling almost light-hearted. And suddenly I said to myself, "You've prayed for friends and nothing has happened. If you want to make friends, you'll have to do something about it."

What to do? I decided that I'd join a club of some kind. But there aren't many clubs for 15-year-old girls. Then I thought of the church. Surely there must be church groups for young folks to join.

That Sunday I went to the Episcopalian Church in Beverly Hills. I learned that there was a young folks' gathering every Sunday night. I went that night. I was shy and scared, and thought maybe no one would speak to me. But for the first time since I'd been in Hollywood, I found myself one of a group.

Every Sunday after that I went back. Soon the other young people in the group and I became friends. We went to parties at each other's houses; we went to the beach; we went bicycle riding together. We went on hay rides.

When they found out I was a singer, they often wanted me to get up and sing. I didn't like that so much, because I don't usually like to sing alone—it seems conceited. And I didn't want to be singled out as a motion-picture actress, different from the others. I wanted to be one of the gang, accepted by them as just another 15-year-old.

But to oblige them, I did sing at a few gatherings. Then, when they knew me well enough to understand, I stopped singing, except when the whole crowd sang. I was proud and happy when they remained my friends.

So my prayer was answered. And I learned an important rule from my experience: If you want something, pray as hard as you can—then work as hard as you can to help make your prayer come true.

THE END

"go right out and buy Tampax"

Don't hesitate any longer about Tampax or hold back from using it. You are sure to go modern some day in your choice of monthly sanitary protection — so why not do it now?...Tampax will save you much worry and self-consciousness on those "you-know days" — no belts or pins to adjust, no external pads to twist or chafe, no ridges to show through your dress.

NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS
NO ODOR

Most important of all (on those days), Tampax causes no odor because it was designed by a physician to be worn internally. Made of pure absorbent cotton contained in one-time-use applicators, Tampax is very tiny and you need not remove it when tubbing or showering. Naturally, it solves the disposal problem also.

Women by the thousands are flocking to the use of Tampax — college girls, office girls, housewives, travelers, dancers, athletes, everyone who wants to do a better job or have an easier life at that time-of-month....Buy Tampax at drug or notion counters in 3 absorbency-sizes: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

AMAZING!! NEW!!
"DEW"
SPRAY DEODORANT
IN THE MAGICAL "SELF-ATOMIZING" BOTTLE
STOPS PERSPIRATION AND ODOR TROUBLES! Keeps you daintily pure, socially secure.
DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! "Dew" never touches hands. Not messy. Squeeze flexible bottle, spray on gentle mist.
ONLY DEODORANT CONTAINING "RETSELANE" to stop perspiration trouble, avoid perspiration stains on clothes. Removes odor.
WON'T ROT CLOTHES! Can't irritate normal skin.
SAVES MONEY! Full year's supply only 98¢ Plus tax
Less than 2¢ a week
SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE!
"DEW" ®
SPRAYS ITSELF ON!
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

"Pony Express"
by PORAD
A genuine hand laced moc ...with real pony fur vamp...in excellent leathers. A hard-to-believe value!
$3.99
Suede in black or brown.
Elk leather in green or wine.
SIZES: 4 to 9 medium.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED
BE THRIFTY—ORDER BY MAIL
PORAD'S
*Vogue-Craft SHOES, 1712 Yole Ave. Seattle 1, Wash., Dept. D10
Send ____ prs. "Pony Express" at 3.99 pr.
SIZE. ____
COLOR—First choice | COLOR—Second choice
Name ____
Address ____
City ____ Zone ____ State ____
( ) Check ( ) Money Order ( ) C.O.D. At retail in Seattle
Send check or money order and we pay postage. When sent C. O. D. customer to pay $3.99 plus charges. *Reg U S. Pat. Off.
WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

HOW PERFECT IS "PERFECT"?

(Continued from page 36)

invitingly about.

The small dining-room whose glass wall looks out over the hills, features dark wood and deep pink. Bill and Joan seldom used this room for dinner parties but they usually had breakfast here. Sometimes they carried their trays out onto the verandah which leads off the bedroom, and shared their breakfast hour with their tiny daughter.

In the warmer months, the Doziers entertained by their pool—where the lighting is indirect and the air is softly filled with music coming over a low-tuned loudspeaker hooked up to the record player within.

The Doziers' white-and-maroon kitchen, with its roomy closets and revolving spice-shelves, exerted a magnetic fascination over both of them. When they had days off from picture-making, producer Bill and actress Joan vied for the privilege of relieving the cook of preparing the evening meal. In happier times, Joan and Bill had one point of disagreement about their cooking. She said it was more of an instinct, once you'd learned the fundamentals. (She learned them at the famous Cordon Bleu cooking school in New York.) Bill said all you needed to be a good cook, was the ability to read a cook book. To prove this he volunteered to make a pineapple upside-down cake one afternoon. Strictly from the book. Said he'd never even seen an upside-down cake before. Joan said okay, go ahead. She'd eat her words, and the cake too, if it turned out right. Then she went back to smocking a dress for baby Deborah, and Bill locked himself in the kitchen.

Well, the cake turned out fine, and Joan ate two helpings as it came out golden and puffy from the oven.

Joan loves to make soufflés and delicately seasoned French dishes. Bill mostly goes in for corn bread, muffins and pies. Their cook backs out of the kitchen when her bosses feel an urge towards pots and pans. She goes out on the steps and admires the view till they tell her to come back in and sample their latest efforts. As a result, Cook is getting too fat for her uniforms.

deb came first . . .

Other hobbies that Bill and Joan shared were horseback riding and gardening. But the hub of their existence was their tiny daughter, now 11 months of bouncing babyhood. She has a peak of blonde hair like a kewpie doll, eyes like cornflowers, and a relentless determination towards locomotion. Seems she always wants to go places and see things—even the bottom of the swimming pool. Joan had a fright the other morning when she was sitting by the pool with the baby. Little Deb wiggled over to the edge and plopped in, face first. Says Joan:

"I let her get her face full of water before I fished her out. Maybe that lesson will keep her away from it—at least until I can get the pool fenced in. We'll start her swimming lessons soon, but until then, believe me, we're never going to let her out of our sight for an instant!"

Deborah's nursery, connected to the main bedroom by the wide, flower-boxed verandah, is done in blue, yellow and white. She exercises her small bare toes on the blue rag rugs and, guided by Joan or Ann, her nurse, rides her tiny white rocking-horse. Her crib is white with a lacy canopy, and two cherubic pink angels with silky wings are strapped to the bed-

Yes! It's Possible!
LONGER HAIR
At Last! You can try new improved RONOLA with amazing LUCENE — the amazing help for dry brittle breaking-off hair. When scalp and hair conditions are normal and dry breaking-off hair can be retarded, your hair has a chance to get LONGER and LOVELIER— RONOLA'S not a hair restorative. SEND NO MONEY. We'll rush RONOLA to you C.O.D. $1.00 plus government charges. Your money back if not delighted in 7 days. Write.
MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!
RONALD CO., Dept. 1600
6609 Cottage Grove, Chicago 37, Ill.

BIG PAY
IN 12 WEEKS AT HOME LEARN THE FASCINATING DUTIES OF A PRACTICAL NURSE
No high school needed to Graduate with Diploma. Profession pays up to $300 a month. Steady, pleasant work in good times or bad. Ages 16-60. Doctor's endorsement of this lowest-fee course. Average lesson only $1.48.

FREE booklet gives all facts. Send name on penny postcard today!
LINCOLN SCHOOL of PRACTICAL NURSING
4737 BROADWAY, Dept. 810, CHICAGO 40, ILL.

Take This Easy Step To
BIG MONEY!
Sell CHRISTMAS CARDS
Plastic Cards for Christmas and Everyday. Also lovely EMBOSSED Christmas Cards WITH NAME. Sell themselves at 50 for $1.25, up. Amazing $1 "Southern Beauty" Assortment of 21 Christmas Cards pays you up to 50c! Complete line of fast-sellers. Write for Samples on approval. SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO., 216 South Pauline Street, Dept. C-8. MEMPHIS 4, TENN.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER
TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH
ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS
NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU
SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET
MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-N, Providence 15, R.I.

"How to Make Money with Simple Cartoons"
A book everyone who likes to draw should have. It is free; no obligation. Simply address
FREE BOOK
CARTOONISTS' EXCHANGE
Dept. 4310 Pleasant Hill, Ohio

MATERNITY CLOTHES
WRITE for FREE CATALOG
"Where Movie Mothers-to-be Shop"
from California...
...that don't look maternity. Gay, young and concealing, priced surprisingly low because we know "you wear them such a short time!"
ANTICIPATION SHOPS
343 NO. RODEO DRIVE, BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF., DEPT. D-10

THERE'S MONEY FOR YOU in PLASTICS
No Experience Necessary!
Here's CASH for you . . . easy! Show friends, neighbors amazing laundry-saving tablecloths, aprons, rainwear, babies' needs, etc. Tremendous demand. Sell on sight. BIG PROFITS, full or part time. Write for FREE Outfit.
LORAINE PRODUCTS, Dept. DM-207
411 So. Clinton Street Chicago 7, Illinois

EASY EXTRA MONEY
Sell New CHRISTMAS CARDS From Sunny California
Show friends, sensational 21-Card $1 Christmas Assortment with Patented Television Card. Sells like wild fire! Up to 100% profit. 7 Super Name-Imprinted lines, 50 for $1, up. New Plastic Christmas Cards, many other money-makers. Send for FREE SAMPLES.
IDEAL CARD CO., 165 N. Hill Ave., DEPT. 908 PASADENA 4, CALIF.
FREE SAMPLES—WRITE TODAY!

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

Advisory Board Findings: Our Advisory Board has been working overtime to help solve one of our most pressing problems, and we'd like to thank the members for their promptness in suggesting solutions. The matter concerns the awarding of trophy cups and how many should be awarded to one club. With the aid of the prexies comprising the Advisory Board, we've come up with the decision to limit the number of cups. After a club has won two cups, it will receive credit for having the most points in a contest if it is the winner, but the trophy will go to the runner-up. When a club has accumulated a certain number of these credits as a winner (this number will be announced next month), it will receive very special recognition from the MSFCA! We'll be interested to know how you like the idea!

Prizes: To the best correspondents this month go REVLON'S KING'S RANSOM lipstick sets—seven of Revlon's most popular shades with a gold holder—beautifully packaged in a black velvet case. For that we'd start writing letters to ourselves, except for the fact that the sets are reserved for our correspondents! We know club editors will love the little foto stamps we're offering. THE AMERICAN FOTO STAMP COMPANY will make them for our best editors and the stamps will be awarded in blocks of 500. They're so very nice for stationery and journals—and we have pictures of any star you'd like. ENGER-KRESS billfolds have the hearty approval of all the This Is My Best winners to whom they've been awarded. The wallets are in lovely rainbow colors, hold snaps, folding money and change. And their artist of the month won't have to take a trip to appreciate the TANGEE TRIP KIT. The kit is packed with cosmetics. It's easy to carry and once you've owned one, you'll never see how you ever got along without it!

10th Semi-annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
2nd Lap

This Is My Best: (100 points) "Golden Comet Day," Martha Farrington, Jeanette MacDonald Journal. "Train Song," Catherine Kusczynski, Club Friendship Journal. "We, the Movie Fans," Henryetta Lewis, Philip Reed Journal. "February 4th," Shirley Maxwell, James Melton Journal. "Are Fan Clubs Foolish?" Mary Kelly, Montgomery Clift Journal (Paul). "Just Reminiscing, Thanks," Margie Keith, Eddy Arnold Journal. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. Nelson Eddy Journal (Nicholin). League 2. New Stars Journal. League 3. (tied) Humphrey Bogart Journal. Jack Smith Journal. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. Margaret Sedlar, John Garfield Journal. League 2. Loretta Zitek, Harlean Matthias, Dick Contino Journal. League 3. Judy Baird, Gordon MacRae Journal. Best Artist: (150 points) Marilyn Brock, Perry Como Journal (Travnicek). Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. Jane Wyman Journal. League 2. Bob Crosby Journal. League 3. (tied) Audrey Totter Journal. Radio Stars Journal. Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. None qualified. League 2. Betty Petrie, Charles Korvin Club. League 3. Eleanor Paul, Montgomery Clift Club. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. Farley Granger Club (overseas boxes). League 2. (tied) Jim Brown Club (donation to Father Flanagan Fund; stamps to veterans' hospital). Rise Stevens Club (donation of radio to veterans' hospital). League 3. Stuart Foster Club (Levitt) (contribution to Cancer Fund). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Bing Crosby Club (Ness). League 2. Betty Grable-Harry James Club (Adams). League 3. Bill Lawrence Club (Lawson). Candid Camera Contest: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others) Jamie Bellinger, Penny Edwards Club. Geraldine Schultz, Gene Autry Club. Beverly Bush, Frank Sinatra Club. Betty Cornwell, Perry Como Club. Patricia Danks, Patrice Munsel Club. John McNamara, Terry Moore Club.

posts. The angels were a gift from a fan in New York. Maureen O'Sullivan, Deb's godmother, gave her the hand-painted prayer stool which stands by her bed awaiting her first prayers. Her play-pen is out on the verandah.

The master bedroom is a happy compromise of masculine and feminine tastes. Joan took her theme for the decoration from her sea shells. She let their pearly tones sink deep into her imagination . . . then she set to work and dreamed up this enchanting suite of rooms—surely the most beautiful in Hollywood.

Basically, the scheme is blue-gray with touches of pink. Her seven-foot bed is covered with a rough-weave linen spread in the same blue-gray shade as the modern painted tables and desk. Bedside lamps have glass bases filled with an array of shells and coral. From the bedroom a shell-pink passage leads to individual dressing-room suites. Joan's is on the left. All in pink, the ceiling, walls and built-in furniture are set off with mirrored doors and heavy crystal doorknobs. This exquisite setting fits the "actress" side of Joan's life to perfection. Here she can be quite alone to study her script, set her hair, or answer her mail. Off the main room of her suite are several smaller rooms—in one a hair-dryer and telephone, in another a bathtub, in another her clothes, with spacious racks holding her 200 pairs of shoes. Joan wears negligees and housecoats in the same misty pinks and blues as the rooms.

A guest suite on the lower floor was always ready for 18-year-old Bob Dozier, Bill's son by a former marriage, whenever he was home from Brown University. Bob has his father's sturdy build and quizzical expression. He and Joan got along beautifully—except in those rare, teasing moments when he called her "Mother." Then she was ready to push him into the pool.

her face was familiar . . .

Joan will never forget their first meeting, when she went up to his school, and he paraded her round the campus pointing out the sights while five fellow students badgered the life out of him with inquiries about the "blonde babe" he had with him.

And then there was that incident in the train club-car, when Joan was coming home from her visit to Bob's school. A neat little brunette seated herself next to Joan and inquired in tinkling tones, "Don't I know you? I mean—your face—I've seen it *some*where!"

"I'm Joan Dozier," replied Joan, fondly twisting her new wedding band.

The girl sat up as though she'd been stuck with a pin.

"No! You're not related to young Bob Dozier?"

Joan nodded. "He's my husband's son."

"That gorgeous man! I met him at the prom last night. Now I'm on my way back to school. Gosh, just imagine being related to him!" The girl was breathless with the wonder of it all. Talked about Bob for an hour. Never once recognized Joan Fontaine, the Oscar-winner from Hollywood.

Joan used to laugh over that incident. But Joan isn't laughing now. Neither is Bill Dozier. Both have told their friends that they are miserable. And there is no doubt that much of the misery they suffer must come from the memories they have of one of the most beautiful houses in Hollywood—theirs—that held so much love.

Will they ever return to it—together? It is the hope of everyone in the film capital that they will. But at this point, Joan's home in Brentwood is the symbol of a perfect love in a perfect house—that wasn't perfect enough. THE END

WIVES TELL EXTRA ADVANTAGES in using this suppository for
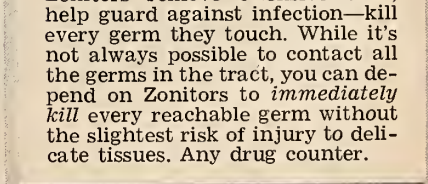
INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Assures Hours of Continuous Action!



Zonitors have made a sweeping change in the whole idea of intimate feminine cleanliness—made it simpler, less embarrassing and more convenient, yet Zonitors are one of the most effective methods —so powerfully germicidal yet so absolutely safe to tissues.

What Zonitors Are . . .

Zonitors are greaseless, dainty, snow-white vaginal suppositories. When inserted, they release powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties for hours. Yet Zonitors are positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. All you need is this dainty suppository — no extra equipment.

Easy to Carry if Away From Home

Zonitors remove offensive odor, help guard against infection—kill every germ they touch. While it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, you can depend on Zonitors to immediately kill every reachable germ without the slightest risk of injury to delicate tissues. Any drug counter.

FREE

Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-109, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

CORN PAIN?

Amazing New Super-Soft

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

WITH PINKED EDGE

GIVE INSTANT RELIEF!

Wonderfully soothing, cushioning, protective, Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads instantly stop painful shoe friction, lift pressure on corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions. You'll marvel, too, how quickly they remove corns and callouses when used with the separate Medications included.

Speciol size for Corns, Sore Toes

Heort shope for Collouses, poin ot bottom of foot

No Other Pads Are Like Dr. Scholl's!

The only pads with patented creep-proof Pinked Edge. Molds pad to toe or foot with form-fit smoothness. Stays on in bath. Flesh color. FREE sample (any size) and Foot Book. Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Dept. 819, 213 W. Schiller St., Chicago 10.

Speciol size for Bunions, Enlorged Joints

Learn PHOTO COLORING

Thousands of women make good money coloring photographs full or part time. Interesting & easy to learn. Study at home. Write for "Opportunities in Photo Coloring."

Hollywood School of Photo Coloring
P.O. Box 504, West Branch, Hollywood 46

TEETHING PAINS RELIEVED QUICKLY

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

Buy it from your druggist today

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION

Just rub it on the gums

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 39)

Would he be bored? Would he grow restless? I suppose it's the worry of every new wife—but there it was.

"Let's fly," I kept suggesting as train time approached.

"Fly?" Desi would say. "But Lucy, just think, three days on the train. Three peaceful, relaxing days. After New York, it will be heaven."

Not much like heaven, I thought, if those three days should seem more like three years!

Desi had less and less to say as the trip progressed. We traveled for miles without exchanging a word. I was a bundle of nerves. In the diner or the club car, he would stare off into space. Back in our compartment, he strummed his guitar. This went on through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kansas, New Mexico and right into Pasadena, California. As the train pulled into the station I was almost in tears, and ready to pronounce myself the year's outstanding bridal failure.

Suddenly I was tossed back on my fluffy pink Cloud No. 17. "Lucy," he said, "I've just completed our song. I've been working on it since we left New York. It's called, My New World With You."

He played it for me that day on the train—and on every anniversary since then!

doctor, lawyer, indian-chief . . .

Sometimes I wish Desi was a mailman. Or a lawyer, or a dentist. Anything but a bandleader. Of course I never wish he was a traveling salesman, or an airlines pilot. I prefer the stay-put career, say an architect or the fifth vice-president of a bank.

This isn't just a selfish desire. Desi loves having a home and being in it. He is in his glory master-minding any new project at Desilu, our San Fernando Valley ranch. He will tackle anything from one nail for picture-hanging to the complete construction of a bath-house and a barbecue patio for summer entertaining. He also transformed a garage attached to the house into a step-saving utility room to accommodate our household equipment, such as the washing machine, electric ironer, deep freeze and mammoth storage cupboards.

Next to his hammer-and-saw projects, Desi likes to cook. Willie Mae, our full-time kitchen jewel, keeps on hand for him a high chef's cap and gigantic apron, appropriately embroidered, GENIUS AT WORK. In this impressive regalia, and with the proper ingredients, "Chef" Arnaz can fashion some downright professional Cuban delicacies. His specialty is arroz con pollo—chicken and rice.

He makes exquisite spaghetti, too, but we've sort of lost interest in that particular dish since "The Wreck of the Living Room Rug"—or, as Sam Spade would call it, "The Flying Casserole Caper." It happened not long ago when we were having a crowd of about 20 in for Sunday night supper. The menu on such occasions comes under Desi's supervision, and he is head chef.

That evening I was experiencing the satisfied glow of the hostess who feels that everything is going well. The guests were enjoying themselves and the house was looking its very best. Our big, comfortable living room, with its cheery dining area at the far end, seemed especially inviting and friendly.

Soon Desi appeared in the doorway, proudly bearing the huge, steaming casserole containing the pièce de résistance, spaghetti and meat balls. As he crossed the room—just about dead center—the casserole broke, the bottom falling out neatly

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 3009, Detroit 27, Michigan.

"RING UP" EASY MONEY FOR YOU!

NEW and DIFFERENT Christmas Cards FREE SAMPLES

Extra cash is yours! Take fast orders from friends for 0oosual Christmas Card Assortments. Big, new line offers novel Plastic Cards, Picture View Christmas Assortment, 21-Card Feature Christmas Box, many other money-makers. Yoo make up to 50c on the $1. Personal Christmas Cards WITH NAME, low as 50 for $1.25. Speedy service. No experience needed. Our friendly policy helps yoo sell. FREE Imprint Samples, Assortment on approval. WRITE!

BOULEVARD ART, 75 W. Van Buren St. Dept. 50-D Chicago 5, Illinois

High School Course at Home — Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school edocation is very importaot for advancemeot in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training oow. Free Bulletio oo reqoest. No obligation.

American School, H-714, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

WANT TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE? EASY TO TRAIN AT HOME

ACT NOW—HELP FILL THE NEED

Now you can prepare for practical experience as a Trained Practical Nurse in spare time. Many earn while learning. Ages 18 to 55. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Write for free information and sample lesson pages.

WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, INC.
2301 N. Wayne Ave., Desk K-45, CHICAGO 14, ILL.

CORNS

also Calluses. Quick, easy, and economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢, 50¢. At your druggist. Money refunded if not satisfied. Moss Co., Rochester, N. Y.

removed by MOSCO

FREE PHOTO

LARGE SIZE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
Direct from Hollywood
INTRODUCTORY OFFER

Also FREE list decorated with all the latest stars and poses. Send name o: YOUR FAVORITE and enclose 10c to cover handling and mailing.

Peter Lawford

Hollywood Screen Exchange
BOX 1150—DEPT. D-10
HOLLYWOOD 28, CALIF., U. S. A.

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW AND SENSATIONAL IN CHRISTMAS CARDS

MAKE Extra MONEY FAST

Gorgeous Satin Velour & Plastic

50 FOR $1 With Name

Show Rich New Cards never before offered. Amazing Value! Gets Easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% Cash Profit. FREE SAMPLES of Gorgeous Christmas Cards With Name 50 for $1, Imprinted Stationery, Floral Charmettes, Napkins, 50 other assortments 60c to $1.25. Samples on approval. Write today for Samples and money-making facts.

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 95-M, St. Louis 3, Mo.

Get on "UNCLE SAM'S" Payroll

START AS HIGH AS $3,351 YEAR

MEN-WOMEN
Thousands appointments being made.
40 Page Book FREE
Mail Coupon Today, SURE.

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. W108, Rochester 4, N. Y.
Not Government Controlled
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 40-page book with list of U.S. Government Jobs; (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name.....
Address.....Vet?.....

and completely, scattering spaghetti and meat balls over our new rug, splattering curtains, walls and guests, and leaving a flabbergasted Desi holding two handles. If you think that wasn't a lot of spaghetti, I can give you the exact figure—17 pounds. That night, getting ready for bed, I found two weary strands of it in my shoe.

A less stout-hearted cook would have abandoned the enterprise at the drop of the casserole, and retreated with his guests to the nearest restaurant. But not my Desi. Once the debris was cleared way, he disappeared into the kitchen again, and in a matter of minutes had replaced the errant spaghetti with a superb soufflé. . . .

Desi and I share a hundred and one interests. We like many things. We like our quiet, easy country life, raising oranges, chickens, and an occasional pig—none of which we ever have the heart to eat. Except the oranges.

We like being hosts at Friday night square dances. We like lazy week-ends on our small cruiser, even when we don't leave the harbor at Balboa.

We like family gatherings on holidays, when the house is filled with the aroma of good food cooking and the walls bulge with cousins, aunts, brothers, sisters, small nieces and nephews, the three cockers and Hi Ball, our black and tan terrier.

We like parlor games when we have a gang at the house; games like charades. With Desi, "the game," as it's called in Hollywood, is especially intriguing because his interpretation of the King's English is often startling. There was the night he baffled us with a character whom he portrayed by going through repeated gestures of eating. He acted out a complete meal and when we gave up, disgustedly exploded, "Why you don't get it? Look, I am eating. Eet ees Meal-dred . . . Mealdred Pierce!"

When we all howled with laughter, Desi was indignant and swore never to be inveigled into playing "the game" again.

Our tempers, quick to rise and equally quick to subside, are another common ground for my husband and me. We have spats, lots of them. Most happily married couples do, but we never carry on a feud. Whatever the issue, the defendant and plaintiff thrash it out, leave it for dead, and go on to something more interesting.

Temperamental, sentimental, often impractical, but never dull, Desi is easily the most charming guy I've ever known. Probably the most revealing insight into a husband's character are the gifts he selects. I remember our first anniversary and the velvet jeweler's box I found at Lucille and Desi Arnaz, wed nine years ago, leave the church after their recent remarriage.

Your Hair Can Be MUCH MORE Colorful and Glamorous

Millions of beauty-wise women now use

Noreen
SUPER COLOR RINSE

If your hair is gray, graying, drab, lusterless, or discolored, try NOREEN Super Color Rinse. The rinse that really blends in gray, beautifies and glorifies all shades of hair with abundant temporary COLOR . . . Color that looks so natural.

We sincerely believe NOREEN will really do what you have always wanted a color rinse to do. So . . . try NOREEN today. You'll find at least one of NOREEN'S 14 shades perfect for your hair. Packed in dainty capsules for convenient use at home . . . 25c and 50c sizes. At leading cosmetic counters . . . Everywhere.

Apply NOREEN in 3 minutes with the NEW NOREEN APPLICATOR

The Color Applicatar gives a much mare even and more colorful result than yau have ever before achieved, and with sa little trouble! Until the Applicotor is available in every stare, we will accammodate by direct mail. Send 60¢ ta Nareen Distributors, 448 Lincaln St., Denver 9, Cala. Satisfactian guaranteed.

Try Noreen's Perfect Companion Product
NOREEN SUPER SATIN CREME SHAMPOO

A New, Different, Better Creme Shampoo that gives your hair longer lasting lustre . . . Especially designed to prepare the hair for ideal results with NOREEN Super Color Rinse. You'll agree your hair was never lovelier. Price only 50c a jar.

Lovely DRESS GIVEN TO YOU!

Imagine! You can take your pick of dozens of gorgeous Fall dresses—without a penny of cost. And you earn up to $23 weekly in cash besides! That's what we offer you for representing us in your spare time. Show our popular frocks to your friends, then send us their orders. Collect handsome cash commissions in advance. No canvassing or experience necessary. Pleasant, dignified business. Get free details and Portfolio of new styles. Send no money. Everything furnished FREE. Rush name, address and dress size on penny postcard. Fashion Frocks, Desk C4054 Cincinnati 25, Ohio.

EARN UP TO $23 WEEKLY!

Draw Me!

COPY THIS GIRL AND TRY FOR

Free $240 Art Course!

5 PRIZES—5 Complete Art Courses, Including Drawing Outfits! Each Course Valued at $240

Whether you win or not, the contest judges will write you, if they feel you can develop your talent profitably. Our famous home-study course makes your own room an extension of one of the world's largest art schools. 34 years experience in turning out successful, money-making graduates.

Trained illustrators and artists now making big money. Find out now if YOU have profitable art talent. You've nothing to lose—everything to gain. Start your drawing now. Mail it today, with this coupon.

ART INSTRUCTION, INC. • Dept. 9699-2
500 S. Fourth St., Minneapolis 15, Minn.

Please enter my attached drawing in your FREE $240 ART COURSE CONTEST. Please Print

*Name*_____
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *Zone*____ *County*_____
*State*_____ *Phone*_____
*Occupation*_____ *Age*_____

EASY RULES!

You must be amateur. Our students not eligible. Make copy of girl 5 ins. high. Pencil or pen only. Omit lettering. All drawings must be received by Oct. 31, 1949. None returned. Winners notified. If desired, send stamped, self-addressed envelope for list of winners.

so soft!

SITROUX TISSUES
strong... absorbent
NOW FINER THAN EVER
. . . say
SIT-TRUE

FREE PERSONAL TRIAL
GLOVER'S
3-Way
Medicinal Treatment for your scalp and hair

GUARD YOUR SCALP AS YOU GUARD YOUR COMPLEXION

You do something instantly if blemishes, clogged pores, or flaky crusts appear on your face. YOUR SCALP IS SKIN, too! Dandruff, flaky crusts, excessive falling hair can be your warning that you are neglecting your scalp Neglected scalp invites skin trouble and loss-of hair. Yet, neglect is unnecessary! You have a time-tested MEDICINAL SCALP TREATMENT to help you.

SEND FOR FREE KIT CONTAINING—

Glover's Mange Medicine—the MEDICINAL compound for flaky, scaly dandruff and excessive falling hair.

Glo-Ver Shampoo—contains no hair-drying detergents—no free alkali—no alcohol. Imparts natural softness.

Glover's Imperial Hair Dress—non-alcoholic and ANTISEPTIC. Kills Dandruff Germs* on contact. *Pityrosporum ovale—recognized by many scientists as a cause of infectious dandruff. Conditions hair and scalp.

Free Booklet by eminent research authority on scalp health and hair beauty, sent you in plain wrapper.

MAIL COUPON NOW

GLOVER'S, 101 W. 31st St., Dept. 8510, New York 1, N.Y.
Send "Complete Trial Application" in three hermetically-sealed bottles with informative booklet, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I enclose 10¢.
NAME .....
ADDRESS .....
CITY ..... STATE .....

my plate that night. It was a magnificent gold bracelet, intricately designed of flexible leaves, each engraved with a word of the legend, LUCY, I LOVE YOU MORE THAN EVER, YOUR DESI.

For my birthday soon after, there was a companion bracelet of tiny gold replicas of every one of his records, each engraved with its title. Who but Desi would think of a gold taxi whistle, or the beautiful costume pin, in the shape of a large key and studded with rubies and opals, which he gave me last anniversary? Engraved on the back are the words, NURSERY KEY.

Desi and I were remarried on Sunday, June 19th, at the Our Lady of the Valley Church in Canoga Park. When Desi proposed to me again, after nine years, his second proposal seemed sweeter than the first. Knowing that he feels this way made our church wedding doubly wonderful. And I do know that for laughing . . . for loving . . . for keeps . . . he'll forever remain My Favorite Husband. THE END taking up with Burt Lancaster, with whom she worked on his first screen test. "That was a fine romance," Liz says. "Everything between Burt and me happened in print."

MARRIAGE ON HER MIND

(Continued from page 33)

However, when the columnists learned that Burt was already happily married and a father, they neatly switched Scott's love allegiance from Burt to a handsome hunk of man named Rory Calhoun. But what does this Calhoun fellow do? He ups and marries an actress named Isabelita.

Undaunted, the columnists tried again. For 1949, they paired Liz with A. C. Lyles, a publicist who does Hollywood with great charm, and with Fefe Ferry, a Rumanian who kisses actresses on their wrists and accepts 10% of their incomes as an agent. But then a famous radio commentator tossed these two gentlemen out of the running with the announcement that Lizabeth Scott was at last in love—but really, crazily, tempestuously in love—with the heir to a newspaper fortune.

This heir, it turned out, was Mort Schiff, whose mother, Mrs. Dorothy Schiff Thackrey, owns the New York Post. But Liz said sweetly, as so many other girls in the same situation have said before, "Mort is a wonderful guy. But we're just friends."

In short, all the attempts to pair Liz Scott seriously with any man have been complete failures ever since she arrived in Hollywood four years ago.

The public will no longer believe the romances conjured up for her by newspaper columnists. And yet to many people —like the Notre Dame football player—it is rather baffling that a girl as beautiful, talented, honest and intelligent as Liz, is at 26, without fiancé or husband.

Ava Gardner had two husbands by the time she was 24; Doris Day had two by the time she was 25; Loretta Young was first married when she was 16½, Shirley Temple when she was 18. How come Lizabeth Scott has never even been engaged?

This question has given rise to some pretty strange and also funny stories. There are some who say that Liz will never get married because she'll always be in love with the memory of a man who died a hero's death in the war. There are others to whom Liz is the classic example of a girl who has shut everything out of life but career. You can even hear that she actually is married—very secretly—to a heavily-bearded, shadowy figure of behind-the-scenes international finance whose lightest word can shake every chancellory in Europe.

a new radio hit— modern romances on the air!

People are taking "MODERN ROMANCES" to their hearts . . . Right from its first week on the air, "MODERN ROMANCES" has been a favorite with critics and listeners everywhere. Like Modern Romances magazine, on which it is based, each story is about real people in situations you yourself may face. And each story is told with a frankness that may startle you. Treat yourself to this exciting new radio show—

Tune in "Modern Romances" every weekday Mon. thru Sat. on the American Broadcasting Co. ABC NETWORK see your newspaper for local time

All of this just isn't so, says Liz. (Not even the theory about the guy with the beard.) "I want to get married," she says, "and I will. Only up till now, the combination of circumstances has never been exactly right. I've been infatuated with men who haven't been infatuated with me; or it's just been a temporary infatuation on both sides and not a lasting love; or I've been too busy working.

"There are many girls my age throughout the country who haven't been married. That's no great tragedy, even in Hollywood. For some strange reason, though, the fact that I'm single makes people think I'm a recluse or that there's something mysterious or unusual about me. How ridiculous!"

Still, Lizabeth Scott is unusual. Her deep, throaty voice; her lovely, sharply-angled face; her hyper-active, expressive hands—all this is most definitely unusual.

"She is," as one actor at Paramount who has known her for a long while so aptly puts it, "a sort of lone wolf, a beautiful, intelligent girl who picks her male friends very carefully. She'd rather be alone with a good book than in a crowd with a bunch of handsome jerks."

Burt Lancaster subscribes to this school of thought on Liz. "She always seems lonely to me," he's written. "Lots of families have that one kid who walks alone. Liz is that one in her family."

generous to a fault . . .

Another actor, Kirk Douglas, who played with her in The Strange Loves of Martha Ivers, says that Liz is the most warm-hearted, generous, garrulous actress in Hollywood.

And when Liz starts to talk, you'd better watch out. No shy, repressed recluse, this girl. Instead, she's a dynamic, electric, highly articulate female who seems to vibrate as she talks. Her whole body seems to quiver with her words. "When she starts talking," says Kirk Douglas, "I stop."

Charley Feldman, her agent, once described her to a producer in this manner: "Liz has one of the best brains in town and also one of the best bodies. She's smart and she's sexy, a combination impossible to beat. When Lizabeth Scott says something, she means it; unlike a lot of other actresses, she never talks for effect.

When Liz had her option renewed this June, she was extremely happy—not only because it brought her salary beyond the $1,000-per-week mark, but because it proved to her that she had made the grade, that she was in Hollywood to stay. Best yet, it proved to the doubting Thomases that Hal Wallis, the producer, knew what he was saying when he stuck his neck out in 1944 and told several executives at Warner Brothers, "This girl is a whole lot better than her test indicates."

At that time, Liz had taken her first screen test and Warner Brothers had turned her down. But not Wallis; he was leaving that studio, and he told Liz, "As soon as I make a deal somewhere else, I'll sign you."

Wallis set up his independent producing organization at Paramount, and true to his word, he signed Liz to a contract, making her the first player on his talent roster.

All these years, Liz has worked and studied, to prove that Wallis' faith in her ability and her own faith, was not misplaced. She has neglected her social life, her love life, perhaps even her interest in men, to become a top-flight actress.

But now that she's reached the heights, Liz, like nine out of 10 other girls, is ready to make the big decision.

"Just let the right man come along," she says, "and you'll be seeing me leading three of my own kids in play rather than playing three leads in pictures. I want to get married."

THE END

FIT to be seen in...

... with its delightfully delicate handling of val lace and sheer nylon pintucking Miss Swank's exclusive straight-plus-bias design molds to your figure—assures better fit, more comfort, smoother lines. Won't twist, ride or bunch 3.00 and up

STYLE SHOWN IN SOFT BUR-MIL RAYON CREPE ABOUT 4.00 AT YOUR FAVORITE STORE

Miss Swank*

MISS SWANK, INC., 112 Madison Ave., New York 16, N.Y.

*T M REG U.S PAT OFF — COPYRIGHT 1949

feminine daintiness

. . . how to make sure of it!

Intimate feminine daintiness is vital to your charm. To be sure . . . syringe regularly. Faultless Feminine Syringes are designed specifically for this hygienic care, their gentle flushing action cleansing thoroughly, quickly. Modern, convenient, no accessories to handle, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

send for this free personal booklet

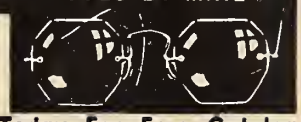
"Facts You Should Know About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-109
The Faultless Rubber Co., Ashland, Ohio

Faultless feminine syringes

MAKE $100.00

FREE Imprint SAMPLES 50 for $1 up
FREE! Bonus Boxes with orders



SELL XMAS CARDS Full or Part Time
NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY!

Sell only 100 special Xmas card deals. Your cost only 75c each regardless of quantity ordered at one time! Your PROFIT $1 on each and every deal! Write today for details of complete line. Make More Money with Creative. Costs nothing to try! Feature boxes on approval.

CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc.
45 Warburton Ave., Dept. E-3, Yonkers 2, N. Y.

BUY FROM THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED FIRM IN THE UNITED STATES SELLING EYE GLASSES BY MAIL

As Low As $1.95 For Satisfaction

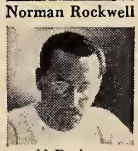
Write Today For Free Catalog
Send No Money
ADVANCE SPECTACLE COMPANY
537 S. Dearborn St., Dept. M-10 Chicago, Ill.

Learn FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

Floristry and Floriculture. Big demand for arrangers and lecturers. Study at home. Learn to make professional sprays, wreaths, corsages, etc. Send for folder "Opportunities in Floristry."

NATIONAL LANDSCAPE INSTITUTE
Dept. D-10, 310 S. Robertson Blvd., Los Angeles 36

MATERNITY DRESSES WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG



FALL STYLES

Smart, youthful styles for morning, street, afternoon, sports, or formal wear. Also maternity corsets and Lingerie.

Crawford's, Dept. MS61, 729 Baltimore Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Norman Rockwell

Al Parker

Jon Whitcomb

and Ben Stahl
Stevan Dohanos
Robert Fawcett
Peter Helck
Gilbert Bundy
Austin Briggs
Harold von Schmidt
John Atherton
Fred Ludekens
Albert Dorne

Famous Artists Course

PREPARES YOU AT HOME FOR A MONEY-MAKING ART CAREER!

Now, for the first time, 13 famous Artists give you the professional training you must have to be an illustrator, advertising and fashion artist, or cartoonist.
You learn rapidly, in your spare time!
24 carefully supervised lessons!
Over 4,000 drawings and sketches!
Prepare now for a big-income career in Art!

Free!

The life stories of 13 famous illustrators.

Fill out coupon immediately and get atarted on your great new career!

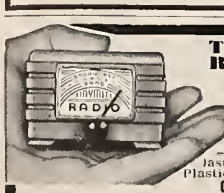
Institute of Commercial Art Inc.
Dept.X-34, Westport, Conn.
Please send book about Famous Artists Course.
Name _____
Street _____
City, Zone, State _____

GET Coets
FOR APPLYING
MAKE-UP FOUNDATION

HANDY COTTON SQUARES
DOZENS OF COSMETIC USES
LARGE PACKAGE 29¢

MAKE EXTRA MONEY
Samples on Approval
SELL NEW SENSATIONAL
CHRISTMAS CARDS
It's easy! Make up to 50% commission. Sell them to your friends, neighbors or fellow workers. 21 card assortments that sell on sight. Most beautiful cards ever designed.
50 for $1
25 for $1
With name imprinted FREE SAMPLES
LIBERTY BELL STUDIOS
Dept. H-1—1013 Filbert St., Phila. 7, Pa.

Alan Ladd



FREE PHOTO
LARGE SIZE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
direct from HOLLYWOOD
Write now for photo of your favorite STAR. Immed. serv. Illus. catalog & Special SURPRISE offer. Send 15c for handling & mailing.
HOLLYWOOD PHOTO PRODUCTS, Dept. M 10
P.O. Box 1446, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Zircons
Alexandrites - Rubies - others.
Direct importation Guarantees best quality — lowest prices.
3 Sparkling, diamond-like, polished Zircons, over 2 carats $4.00
Catalog 10¢
Dept. SMS
Imbusex
Box 232
White Plains, N.Y.

Thrilling Work COLORING PHOTOS
EASY TO LEARN
Fascinating vocation learned at home by those with aptitude. Thrilling pastime. National method brings out life-like colors. Free booklet.
NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL
1315 S. Michigan, Dept. 2367, Chicago 5

MONEY We guarantee you $50.00 for selling 100 boxes 21 for $1 Xmas cards; also 50 and 25 for $1 with name on; also Napkins and Stationery. No experience needed. Costs nothing to try. Samples and Selling Plan on approval.
WELCOME
368 Plane St., Dept. C, Newark, N. J.

TINY RADIO—REALLY WORKS!
FITS IN YOUR HAND!
Works on new "PERMA-CRYSTAL" set it NEVER NEEDS TROUBLESOME TUBES, BATTERIES OR ELECTRIC "PLUG-INS" Easy to use—Plays for nothing—Should last for years. Beautiful Red Plastic Case.
GUARANTEED TO WORK
on local programs by following instructions. G. B. of Ala. says "TINY RADIO IS JUST WONDERFUL"!
SEND ONLY $1.00 (bill, ck., mo.) and pay postman $2.99 C.O.D. plus postage or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery. SENT COMPLETE READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. Has personal phone. WONDERFUL GIFTS FOR BOYS & GIRLS. Low priced. Order YOUR Tiny Radio Now!
THE MIDWAY CO. Dept. TMM-10 KEARNEY, NEBR.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 14)

Kirk Douglas examines Jonet Woldo's make-up kit during a reheorsal of CBS' Family of Stars.

Jottings Around Town: Kirk Douglas, walking into a popular night spot alone three nights in a row, only winked when I asked him where all his pretty "dates" were. I hear Kirk has been "advised" against showing up with a different lovely every night.

Ann Sheridan's Paris clothes are dreamy. Saw her dancing around Ciro's in a black taffeta, cocktail-length and very decolleté with three flounces of pale pink petticoats. Every woman in the room was eying that little number with envy.

Ginger Rogers cries and cries on the set of Perfect Strangers, yet she denies that she and Jackie Briggs are having trouble after all these years, though she admits they had an argument. But if everything is patched up again, why does she continue to be so depressed?

John Hodiak removing strawberry shortcake dessert from in front of Anne Baxter at dinner at La Rue. Pretty cute. He likes her thin!

Ava Gardner and Howard Duff lunching in a booth at the Brown Derby. Into the next booth come Mickey Rooney and his bride, Martha Vickers. The Mick and Ava, who were once married, no speakee. Incidentally, Mickey and Martha are "expecting."

* * *

Questions and Answers Department: Are Wanda Hendrix and Audie Murphy expecting a baby? Wanda says, "Not yet"—but she does say she is hoping the rumors will be true any time.

Is Alan Ladd getting temperamental at the studio? Not a bit of it. He is one of the most cooperative actors in this business. When he didn't like certain things in the script of his Postal Inspector story, he went in and had a talk about them. Result—the bosses said he was right and ordered changes.

Is Judy Garland well enough to come back to work? Not yet. Judy is coming along very well and has put on nine pounds. But it will be a big mistake if she doesn't rest for several months yet.

Which actress is in the lead (so far) for next year's Academy Award? Deborah Kerr—hands down—for her wonderful work in Edward, My Son.

Has Kirk Douglas been suffering from a swollen head? If he was—he's over it.

* * *

Well, I guess this is all for this month. In my mail, I notice that Ricardo Montalban is beginning to attract considerable fan interest. Also, John Derek. I'm going to have a talk with both of these boys soon and I'll be having more to say about them. Elizabeth Taylor is still "Miss Big" among the girls with my correspondents. Thanks, as always, for your letters and keep 'em coming!

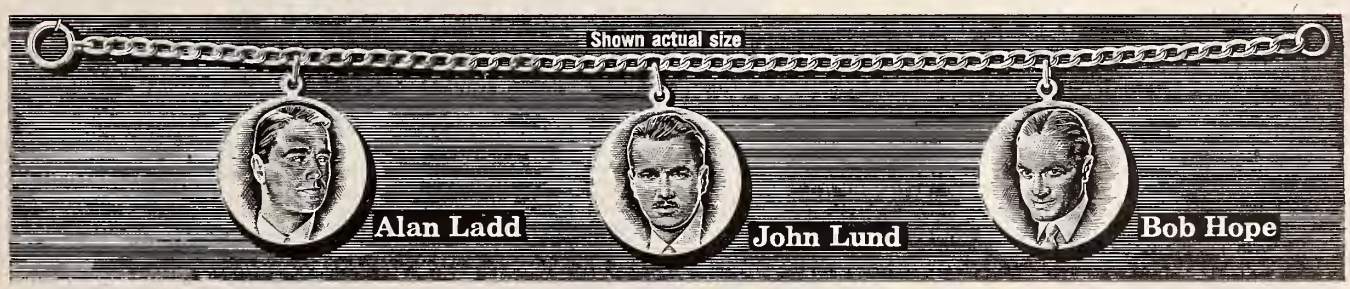
PHOTO CREDITS

Below you will find credited page by page the photographs which appear in this issue.

6 Bert Parry Exc. T. Lt., Bob Beerman—7 T., Virgil Apger, Bot., Bob Beerman—10-12 Bob Beerman—14 Bert Parry—24 T., Associated Press, Bot., Wide World—27 Warners—28 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—30 T., CBS, Bot., Wide World—31 T. Lt., Gus Gale, T. Rt., 20th Century-Fox, Bot. Lt., Morgan of Warners, Bot. Rt., A. L. Whitey Schafer of Paramount—32 Shostal—33 Bot., M. S. staff—34-36 Bert Parry—37-39 M. S. staff—40 Bob Beerman Exc. Lt., RKO—42-45 Bob Beerman—46 T., Associated Press, Bot., Wide World—47 Lt., Wide World, Rt., Acme—50 T., Paramount, Bot. Lt., White Studios, N. Y., Bot. Rt., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—51 Paramount—54 Paramount—55 Paramount Exc. T., Harry Rowed—56 Jerome Zerbe—58 Bert Parry—59 Bob Beerman—65-72 Jacques Simpson of Pagano Studios—99 Wide World—102 CBS.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Exc., Except; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

Your favorite stars on Sterling Silver Charms!



"Send for this sensational sterling silver bracelet today!"

says John Lund
co-starring in "MY FRIEND IRMA"
a Hal Wallis-Paramount Production

Hurry! You can have this exclusive, new Star-Kist jewelry sensation now!

You've never seen anything like it before: Sterling Silver Charms of John Lund, Bob Hope and Alan Ladd—complete and already attached to a matching sterling silver link bracelet—for only $1.00 and a Star-Kist Tuna label! Start today! Collect all your favorite movie stars on these handsome Add-a-Star* charms. The back of each charm bears the star's autograph.

STAR-KIST, "THE TUNA OF THE STARS"

Great stars like John Lund, Bob Hope and Alan Ladd prefer Star-Kist Tuna because they know there is a difference in tuna! Only the tender, smaller tuna are selected and packed under the Star-Kist quality brand. Because these smaller tuna are naturally milder, finer-textured, they're known as "the best-tasting tuna in all the world!" Always use Star-Kist Tuna for naturally better-tasting salads, sandwiches and hot dishes.

Bracelet with 3 Charms-$1.00

(plus one Star-Kist Tuna Label)

This Add-a-Star* Sterling Silver charm bracelet with your favorite film stars on exclusive Star-Kist autographed charms is not sold in any store. Available only under the terms stated in this advertisement. Subject to change without notice.

*Trade Mark Reg.

Buy Solid Pack or Chunk Style, Star-Kist Quality is the Same!

CLIP AND MAIL THIS ORDER TODAY!

Star-Kist Tuna, Dept. 12
Box 52, Hollywood 28, Calif.

(Allow 3 weeks for delivery)

Please send me the "Add-a-Star" sterling silver bracelet including exclusive autographed Star-Kist charms of John Lund, Bob Hope and Alan Ladd—complete. I am enclosing one dollar ($1.00) and a Star-Kist Tuna label.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ Zone _____ State _____

©1949 French Sardine Co., Terminal Island, Calif. (This offer void wherever taxed or restricted. Expires Nov. 30 1949)

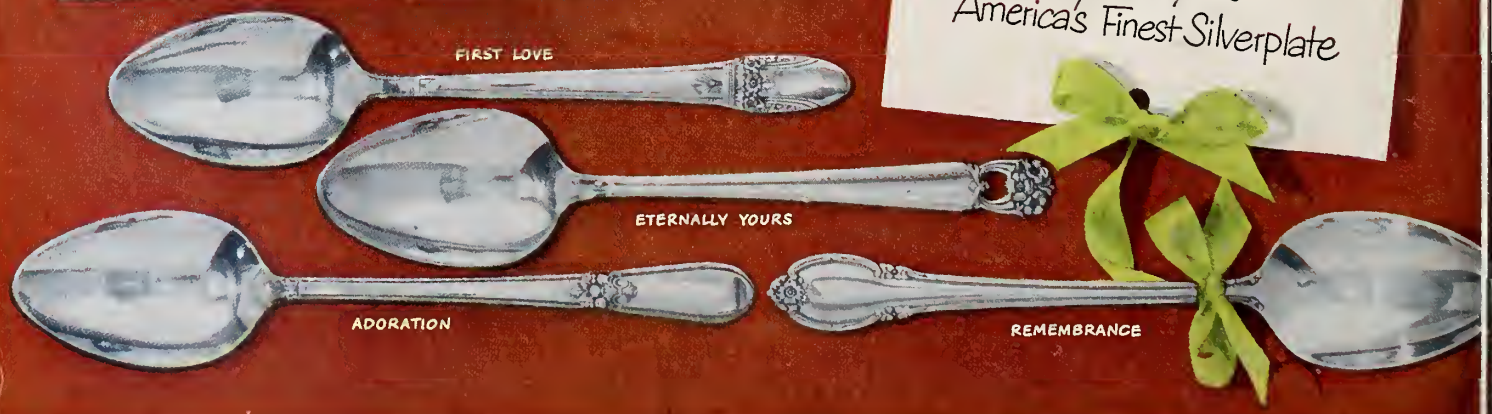
It's still the thing to do...

Brides still delight, as they did in 1847, in wearing something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue. Grandmother's "new" veil has become granddaughter's "something old", but the sentimental tradition is unchanging. And there's another tradition, too, which brides have cherished for over 100 years...

It's still the thing to own...

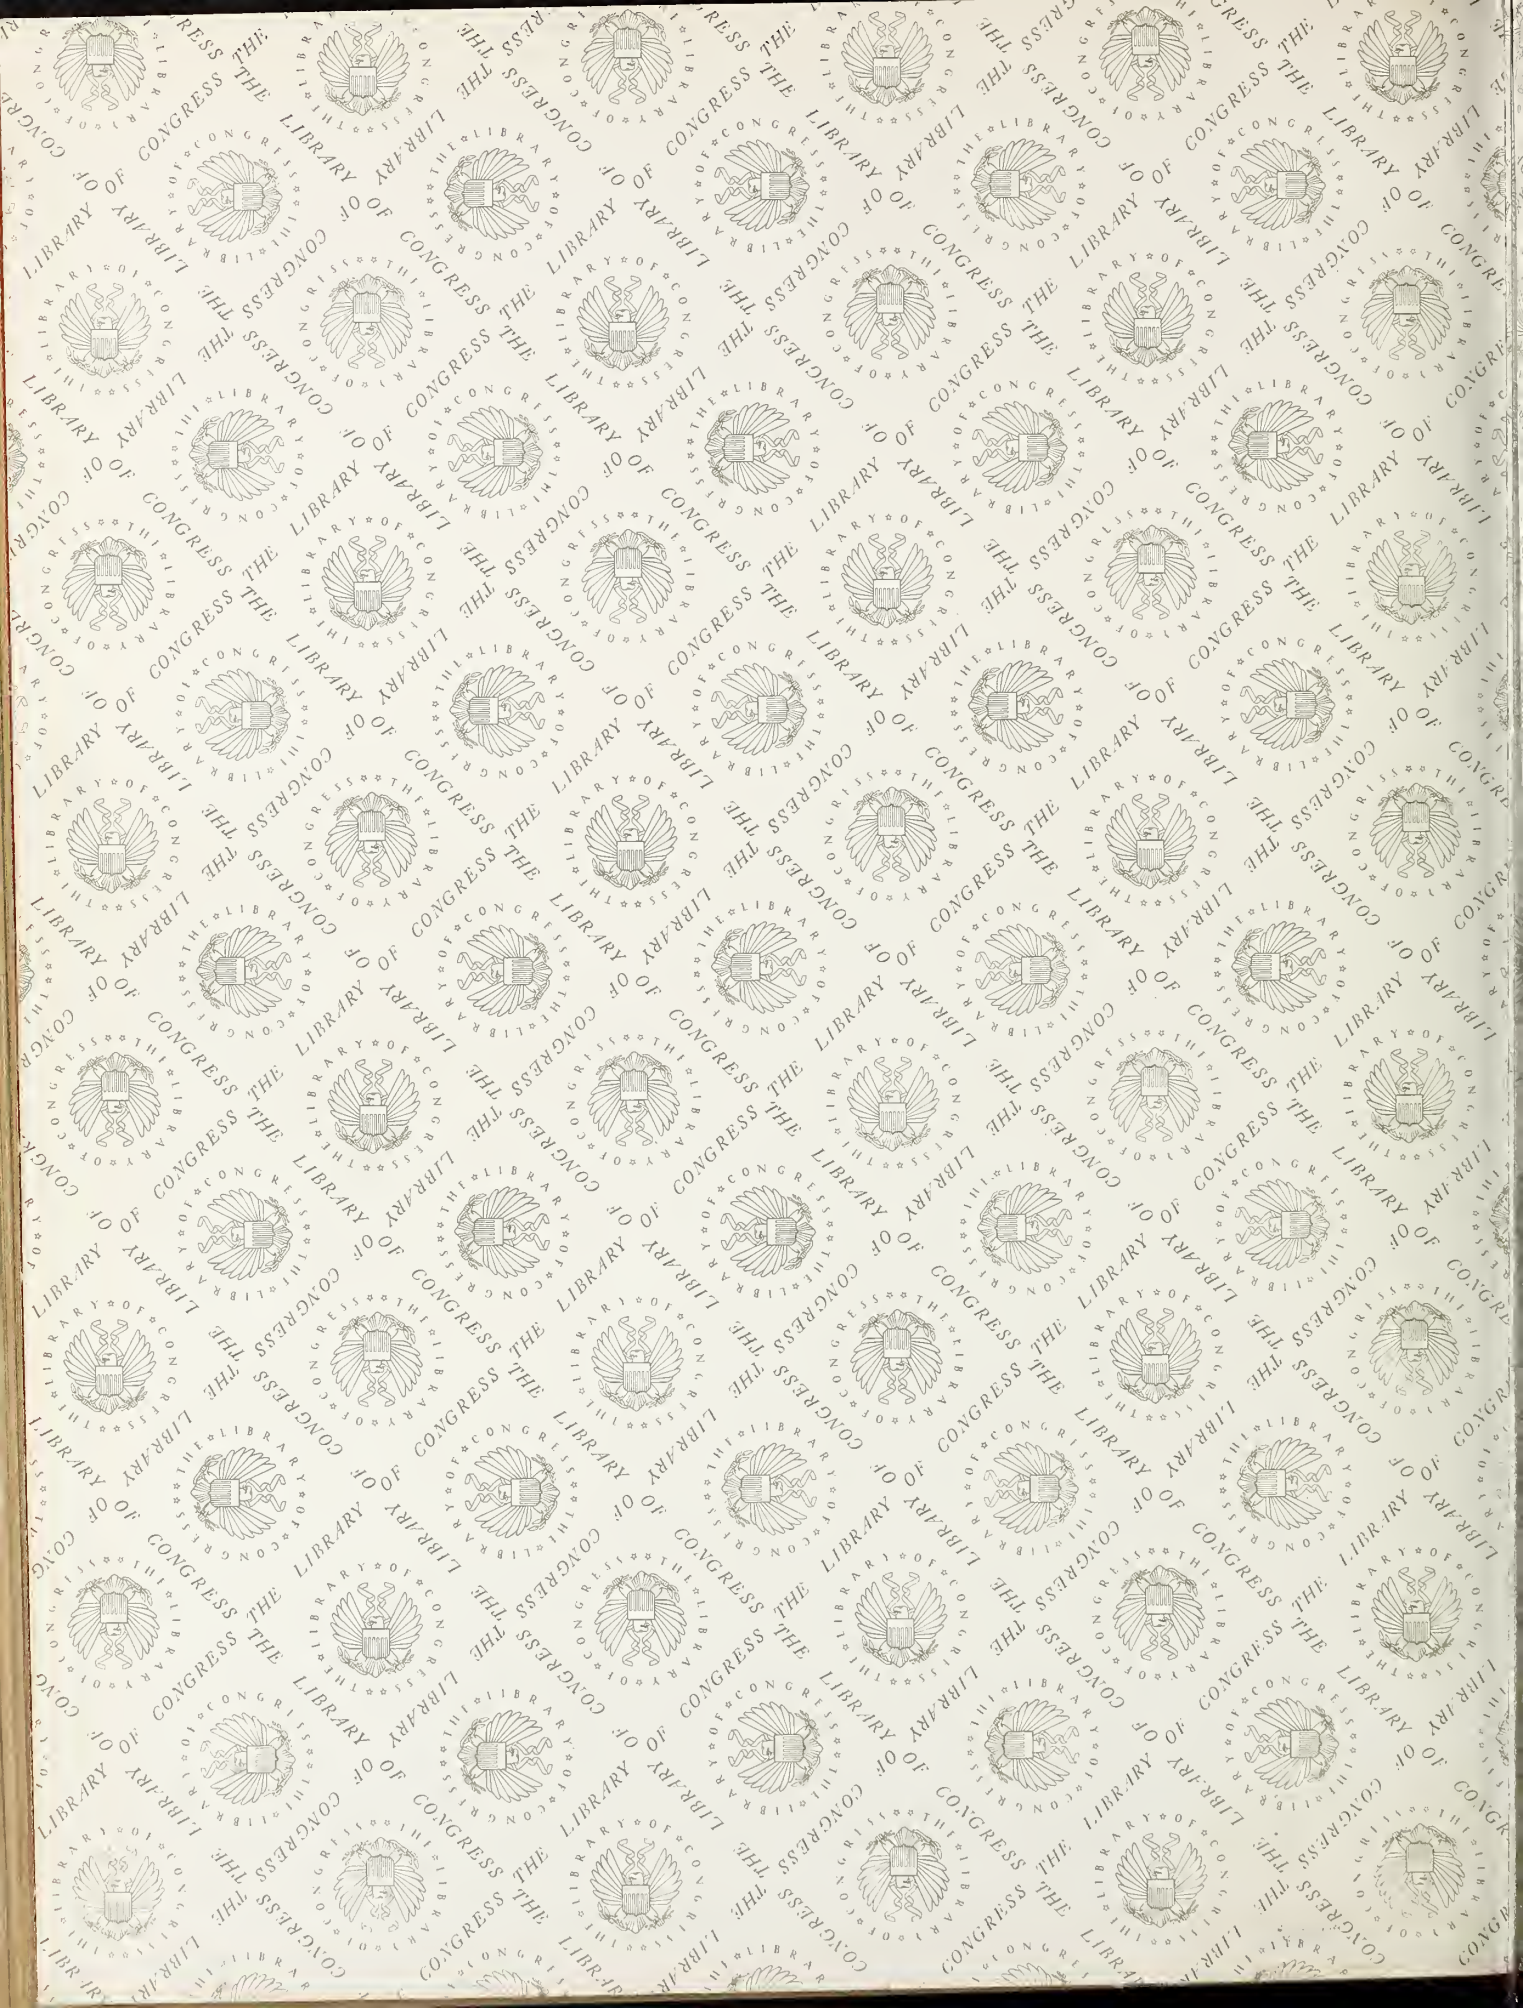
Yes, for over 100 years, more brides have chosen and cherished beautiful 1847 Rogers Bros. than any other silverplate.

Today you will find "1847" a modern silverplate with an extra height and depth of ornament, a perfection of detail and finish, usually found in solid silver alone!



52-piece service for eight, $64.75, with chest. No Federal Tax. Same price as in 1945!

201



Copyright 1949, The International Silver Company, Meriden, Conn.

1847 ROGERS BROS.

for 102 years
America's Finest Silverplate

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS THE

THE BOUND TO PLEASE
Heckman Bindery INC.
APR 68
N. MANCHESTER, INDIANA

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
0 005 869 341 8